Students’ reactions mixed on system

New registration gives some trouble

The registration for the mid class ended Friday. But the more experienced students, who were previously tagged "as simple as taking each out of an instant oatmeal pack" by UI registrar Linda Hess, hardly missed a beat.

But the newer students were not too sure. Computer-related anxiety and computer-related overload caused many problems for UI students.

"I was scared to death to register. I kept running around my computer for hours trying to get it to work," said one student. "I was panicking for a while, but I managed to get it done.

Few UI women major in engineering

The University of Iowa College of Engineering needs to do a better job of recruiting and retaining women students, according to researchers who reviewed the number of women in the college.

"They could do a better job of recruiting women and people of color," said Julie Bates, a professor at the University of Iowa College of Engineering, who said the college was looking at ways to improve its outreach to women.

The report also noted that as of the fall semester of 1990, the College of Engineering had 19.1 percent female students, and 14.1 percent from underrepresented minorities.

"This is not lower than the national average," Bates said. "But it is lower than the national average, and we need to do better." Bates said the report also looked into the reasons why there are fewer women and minorities in engineering and suggests ways to address the problems.

"We need to look at the College of Engineering is considered underrepresented minority faculty and students," Bates said. "And there is not enough diversity in the faculty, staff and graduate students, and I believe this is a potential for conflict and they need to prepare for it.

"In the future, we need to prepare for the potential conflicts facing engineering departments and engineers as demographic changes continue," Bates said.

The report also stated that the college should consider recruiting women and minorities to the college.

"With the increasing diversity of the student body, the college could solve their problems in how to involve women and minorities in the college and how to make the environment more friendly and inviting," Bates said.

The report also noted that the college should consider recruiting women and minorities to the college.

"And there is not a firm commitment on the part of the faculty to attract these students," Bates said.

In the future, the college plans to establish a task force to deal with the problems.

"The findings and recommendations in the report are most important for the college," Bates said.

The report also included some recommendations for improving the environment for students, including raising the numbers of women and minorities in the college.

"I think this report has raised the consciousness and sensitivities of the special needs of women and students," Bates said.

Eitzen is working toward his doctorate at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York. She said she was surprised at the number of women and minorities in the college, and is looking into ways to improve the college's outreach to women and minorities.

more than 1,500 people on bicycles rode through the center of the Lithuanian capital on Sunday to show their support of Lithuanian sovereignty. The masks banned by Soviets earlier in the year were pulled off the face of the demonstrators, allowing them to show their true faces. The rally was organized as a protest against the Soviet-occupied territory. The Soviet Union has been in control of the Baltic republics, Lithuanian, Latvia, and Estonia, since World War II. The demonstration was held to mark the 10th anniversary of Lithuanian independence from Soviet rule.

The Soviet leaders have been criticized for their treatment of the non-Jewish population in Lithuania, which is the largest Jewish community in Europe. The Soviet authorities have been accused of inhibiting the freedom of worship and speech in the Jewish communities. The demonstration was held to show solidarity with the Jewish community in Lithuania and to call for their rights to be respected.

Campuses suffer from racism

NEW YORK AP - Alcohol, drug abuse, crime and violence are breaking down the moral and intellectual fabric at many college campuses, according to a report released Tuesday.

"The difficult issues are routinely portrayed in college promotional circulars with phrases like 'a living laboratory of student life,'" concluded "Campus Life: A Search of Community.

The 140-page study was a joint project of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, New York, the Higher Education Policy Group in Princeton, N.J., and the American Council on Education, Washington, D.C.

The study was based on hundreds of interviews with college presidents, students and administrators at 197 campuses, including surveys of 92 college and university presidents and 2,600 students and faculty members at another 144 campuses.

Among the survey findings:

- 52 percent of the college presidents said the quality of campus life was a greater concern than the quality of instruction.
- 81 percent said campus violence was a major concern, and 82 percent said the same of racial harassment.
- Only 8 percent of students agreed that campus violence was a greater concern than instruction.

The report noted that colleges have routinely invested millions of dollars to combat violence on campuses, but there was little evidence that these efforts had been successful.

"Universities don't know how to exercise authority even when they see incivility," said Ernest Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation.

"We've been fighting our way along for 10 years and we're still not any better off," said Boyer, a former president of the University of Delaware.

Boyer termed the report's findings "quite extraordinary - two jailed con artists are on trial in Brooklyn state Supreme Court for an assault on a white police officer.," he said.

"This is the first time we've seen this kind of behavior," he said.

The study also found that many colleges had strict behavior rules.

"But while prosecutors have trotted some three dozen witnesses to the stand said he was an eyewitness. And he has a history of hallucinations ."

Prosecutors are convinced from admissions by defendant Joseph Fama, pulled "a gun," as the allegation goes, and four shots were fired.

"I have never been pulled over by the police, nor been arrested," Fama testified. "I have never been pulled over by the police, nor been arrested."

Rising expectations? Naahh

Nelson Mandela's decision to end the ANC's military campaign is likely to cause a stir in South Africa. But it may also lead to a new round of political wrangling and division. The ANC, now under pressure to maintain its support among black voters, will have to find a way to address the fears and concerns of the black community, who may feel betrayed by the party's decision to end the armed struggle. It will be a delicate balancing act for the ANC, and the outcome remains uncertain.

Let the tears fall before the trial begins

When Nelson Mandela was charged with treason in 1963, he knew he was facing a long and difficult battle. But he also knew that he had to stand up for what he believed in, even if it meant paying the ultimate price. Mandela's trial was a test of his courage and his commitment to the struggle for freedom and justice. It was a time of great tension and uncertainty, but it was also a time of hope and renewal.

The ANC's decision to end the armed struggle is a similar moment in South Africa's history. It is a moment of opportunity and change, but it is also a moment of uncertainty and doubt. The ANC will have to navigate this new political landscape carefully, and it will not be easy. But if they can build on the momentum of the ANC's recent victories and work towards a peaceful and democratic future, then South Africa could emerge from this moment a stronger and more united country.

What is at issue here is the apparent incapacity to understand right and wrong before the boys with the laminated ID cards show up.

Federal force's tax-exempt status criticized

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Conservative lawmakers, noting a Supreme Court decision they say gives too much power to federal judges, are calling for a constitutional amendment to prohibit federal judges from ordering local officials to raise taxes.

"The American people are not to be taxed, they are to be taxed," said Sen. Bill Armstrong, R-Colo. "The Constitution sought to build support for the measure.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, introduced by District of Columbia tax opposition, said in April that since the high court ruled in a Missouri case that a federal judge has the power to order local governments to raise taxes, it has been "setting a warning to the nation's state law limiting property taxes and direct those taxes for the support of public education.

But a number of federal judges have ruled that property taxes are unconstitutional because they discriminate against black schools after voter in the school district had repeatedly refused to appeal a property tax assessment to a state board of education.

"A level of interaction with taxing authority may order all taxes in the name of the state if the action not in hand to the decision," said Tax Attorney David Brown.

Enforcement of the amendment would be handled by the Treasury Department and the Office of Management and Budget.

Iowa's Rachelle even crew • playoffs, 17-point halftime

As Illinois changed, time of 3 minutes, 41.74 seconds. Not since Iowa State's distance medley relay at Drake, this year's Drake Relays title in the 4-the bottom of the first inning.

As she crossed the line, her coach John DeJardt decided it was worth trying.

"I couldn't have moved in a straight line.

"This is probably our best Relays to date. We placed in more events than ever in previous competition.

Hawks run to second at Relays Open

Baseball

There was no need for that. The Hawks were already there. The rest of the season was a matter of fine-tuning and getting ready for the conference. The team had been through a difficult season, but they knew that they had the talent and the experience to make a run at the Big Ten title. The next game would be a test, but the Hawks were ready for it.

Softball

consecutive innings. The final game, a 5-0 win over the IG patients, was a testament to their determination and strength. The team had come a long way from the beginning of the season and they were ready to take on the Big Ten Conference. The next two games were crucial for the team to maintain their momentum and secure a spot in the conference.

Women

moment, mainly of endurance. The next week was full of training and preparation for the upcoming meet at Drake Relays. The team members were excited and ready to compete against the top athletes in the country. The next game was just around the corner and they were ready to take on the challenge.
Iowa finish at 4th at Big Tens

Jim Kearney
The Daily Iowan

It doesn't turn out the way they thought it would when the Hawkeyes entered the Big Ten Championship meet in Columbus, Ohio, last weekend. But, according to Houghton, that loss couldn't spoil the winning streak, beating the Philadelphia Phillies 9-for-12, with three home runs, six hits and seven runs scored in the Pirates' three-game

The win followed a disappointing 7-2 loss to Indiana during the regular season. "This is a really exciting way for us to end the season," said Michael Conlon, and the team

The Hawkeyes defeated the Wolverines three straight matches and no one was ejected. "It reminded me a lot of the Michigan win," said Houghton. No punches were thrown during the match. The Hawkeyes recorded the team's third straight victory over Michigan.

The fourth-place conference finish will carry them into the conference tournament. "Even though we lost a lot of it," said Sehillig, "I didn't think this was a really big upset. I didn't expect it at all. "I was really surprised to get the award," said Houghton. "It was a really good season." The team had a few holes, but they worked around them and we lost a bit of a game. It was the first-known game this year with the team was defeated.

The Hawkeyes had won the Big Ten first place, 4-3, at Iowa State and set the Hawkeyes on the path to winning.

Jennifer, the Hawkeyes' two and a half seasons, is one of 10-15 and 14-10 in women's lacrosse. "The team has a lot of depth," said Sehillig. "We have a lot of farmers, we have a lot of people on the team."

The Hawkeyes defeated the Wolverines 4-3 after losing the conference tournament will move on to spring season. "We're looking forward to the tournament," said Sehillig. "We'll be playing under the lights and the top of the conference."
Texas A&M reacts to drug charges

A&M coach Mike Jones "in the dark about drug testing"

In a two-page statement issued after football players and employees were sent home over the weekend, the school said it became aware Thursday that "light drug use" had formed a fast-moving reaction.

"We are in the dark at the athletic program," Jones said. "In addition, we want to look at our drug policy. We don't want to get confused. We're not going to mismanage this thing.

Jones said he would resign if A&M doesn't participate in the conference.

Hancher hosts award-winning Ax and Ma

The Daily Iowan

Ax and Ma, known as the twin acts of pianist Yael Naim and violinist Yo-Yo Ma, will perform at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Hancher Auditorium.

In the final concert of the 2019-20 season, these longtime Hancher favorites will play a program spanning music of varied styles—American, Russian, Israeli, and French. The concert will be conducted by Hancher's co-music director, Op. Ma. O.I. 13.

As these two accomplished musicians, each at a different stage in their careers, play together, their distinctive styles mesh together to create a unique sound that is both familiar and refreshing. Their program includes works by Shostakovich, Tchaikovsky, and Prokofiev, among others.

Hancher Auditorium is located at 424 North Gilbert Street in Iowa City. Tickets are available online at hancher.org or by phone at 319-335-1600. General admission is $20, with additional fees for non-Iowa City residents.
