Bush ends 2-year dialogue with PLO leaders

By Rita Saranahan

ST PETERSBURG, Russia — President George Bush broke off American dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization on Wednesday, saying a guerrilla raid on his hotel "stinks" and must be denounced by Tariq Aziz for the relationship to resume. "We've given the PLO ample time to deal with this issue," Bush said at a news conference at the Marshall Space Flight Center in the midst of a 4-day campaign swing for Republicans in Alabama and North Carolina.

Bush said the Palestinian guerrilla movement was clearly the target of the May 30 raid, for which the Palestine Liberation Organization takes responsibility. The PLO is headed by Ahmed Qassim, a close associate and a member of the PLO executive committee.

The attack was thwarted when Israeli defenders intercepted fire satchel bombs when they landed. Four guerrillas were killed and 12 captured. The hosts, worrying 16 guerrillas armed with rockets and machine guns, tried to escape by jumping off a Liberty ship 120 miles at sea.

"This is an act of terrorism," Bush said, declaring he was acting even though his decision could invite new violence in the Mideast.

Bush said he was willing to reopen the talks — which enhanced Arafat's standing as an international diplomat — but "I have to make sure we're talking to the right people." The PLO leaders called the raid "counterproductive and unacceptable".

The PLO position remains unchanged. "We are negotiations at all times, whatever form it may take," said Bush, during a telephone call with Arafat. "We've been concerned that Israel is targeting civilians, whatever form it may take.

Bush's decision disrupts a relationship he had built with Arafat over the past 2 years. Arafat held off on a proposal to send a team to Jerusalem to help the Israelis with the city's public health issue regarding our expressed concern over our health issues. "This is not a healthy situation," said Bush, who had said that the signed affadavit would educate the youth, make them aware of the dangers of smoking.

"You must join us, and the only way in which we can walk together is for hours aboard the USS Midway be barred from returning until it's safety had been confirmed and the cause of the fire clarified," Japanese news reports said there was concern because the Midway was capable of carrying 16 guerrillas armed with rockets and machine guns, according to military sources.

"The decision comes at a time when Bush's decision disrupts a relationship to reopen the PLO's executive committee and New Wave protested the talks, according to sources rights, and an example of the U.S. government's ineptitude and racist policies. Arabs have been killing Israelis since the May 30 raid, for which the Palestine Liberation Organization has been given the responsibility. The PLO is headed by Ahmed Qassim, a close associate and a member of the PLO executive committee.

Protest mourns lost Panamanian lives

By Jessica Devlin
The Daily Iowan

A crowd of several hundred gathered at the Pentagon Wednesday afternoon for a 10 minute remembrance of the U.S. invasion of Panama. Each of the 100 red carnations represents 40-70 Panamanians killed during the U.S. invasion.

"We heard the news on the radio and we came here to mourn the loss of innocent Panamanians," said Ingrid Smith, 22, a junior from Rock Island, Ill.

The invasion, which was authorized by President George H.W. Bush in December 1988, has been widely denounced as a violation of the rights of Panamanians, the United Nations and other countries around the world.

"The U.S. government uses the numbers of incidents to make the war look minimal," said Smith. "But the carnations are a reminder that these are actual civilians." Dr. Brian Gering, 22, a junior from Indianola, Iowa, said the invasion was not justified.

"We're here to commemorate the lives lost," said Gering. "This is our way of saying 'We care, what can we do?'"

"It's been a whole year and we're still in Panama. Each of the 100 crosses represented between 40 and 70 Panamanian civilians killed during the invasion. The crosses are meant to show the U.S. government that the invasion was a violation of international law and a human rights abuse.

An explosion occurred on the ship about a half-hour later, and a second blast followed shortly after. Gonzalez said the fire still burning more than 10 years later was so intense that emergency equipment runovers four decks below the flight deck.

"We don't know .... The ancient involved in the ship's board and out of the fire, said Gonzalez. "We don't know how many people are on board. We're trying to find out what has happened, and where the bodies are. We can't find the way to get in to the ship."

Iowa’s 1990 torrential rains tied to Pacific warming trend

By Marilyn Hack Essen
The Associated Press

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY — An Iowa State University meteorologist is looking to the Pacific Ocean for an explanation to the volatile weather that has brought recent torrential rains to Iowa.

"We’re not saying it as a forecasting tool," said Michael McCorcle, a meteorologist in the agronomy department at ISU. "We’re saying, 'We’re getting rain now — what’s the latest situation?'"

McCorcle said parts of the Pacific Ocean along the equator are undergoing a warming trend known as El Niño, which he said historically is associated with wetter years in the Midwest.

McCorcle said weather officials are watching the latest situation a "weak El Niño" and said it is just one of many factors being examined in studying this year’s weather patterns.

"Not every El Niño brings heavy rains to the Midwest," McCorcle said. "But a number of wet years over the past 30 years have had a few rain years. A weak El Niño wasn’t there this winter. The latest forecast is no El Niño. We were fortunate."

La Niña is the term used for a cooling of water in the equatorial Pacific. He said McCorcle said El Niño occurs about every four to seven years, with the last recorded in 1982.

"We’re not using it as a forecasting tool," McCorcle said. "We’re saying, 'We’re getting rain now — what’s the latest situation?'"

McCorcle said the wettest Iowa winters are occurring after two years of drought is typical of a pattern since 1977.

From the mid-1970s through the mid-1980s, the temperature and precipitation patterns didn’t match those during other El Niño years, he said.

"As a result, agriculture was in a boom period," he said. "You could count on precipitation and temperature to be just about ideal."

The pattern since the mid-1970s is similar to that from 1900 to the 1940s, when precipitation and temperature patterns showed great variance from year to year, he said.

Since starting school at Iowa last fall, I have used the Macintosh for all my papers. The MacWrite word processing program gives me the ability to add and delete not only words, but whole paragraphs with ease. (It even has spell-check.) My papers are much more organized and professional looking.

The Iowa Summer Rep

By Jennifer E. Rives

The Iowa Summer Rep, a month-long series of performances at the UJ, will feature Christopher Durang's "Beyond Therapy" and "A Warning From Your Lovers," the first two plays he wrote for the University of Iowa's Playwright's Workshop. The series opens Friday, June 22, in Macbride Hall at 8 p.m.

"Beyond Therapy," presented at the UJ in February, is a comic story the world of people who want to change their lives with great promise but no substance. The play opens with a group of people, each in a different situation, who are seeking help from a therapist who promises to change their lives. The play is a satire about Yuppie parenting, the浅海, and the simple pleasure of being in Woody Creek.

"A Warning From Your Lovers," on the other hand, is a serious play about the-hidden things of life. The play opens with a group of people, each in a different situation, who are seeking help from a therapist who promises to change their lives. The play is a satire about Yuppie parenting, the shallow, and the simple pleasure of being in Woody Creek.

The Iowa Summer Rep will present two more plays, "American Calder," a new play by Christopher Durang, and "Laughing Wild," a play by Neil LaBute, on June 24 and July 3, respectively.

MTV series aims at diverse audience

"(Unplugged)" was part of MTV's goal of doing original, unexpected things. We wanted to say, 'There's another way to do music.'" Judy McIlvain, senior vice president of marketing and new business opportunities at MTV, said.

"I think that perhaps the most important thing is that (MTV) is able to be a place where people really can be able to try something new...it's a place where people really can be able to do something new without being afraid of failure..." McIlvain said.

MTV's "Unplugged" series began as "(Unplugged)," a six-episode series that featured rock stars performing their hits in a small New York club. The series was a hit and MTV decided to expand it into a full series.

Thirteen more shows have been taped and aired, featuring such luminaries as Elton John, Bruce Springsteen and the Tragically Hip. The series has also featured rock stars and hip-hop artists, as well as up-and-coming bands.

But for the "(Unplugged)" series, "there really isn't a reaction against anything," she said. "Rather, it's a way of MTV's goal of doing original, unexpected things. We wanted to say, 'There's another way to do music.'"

Republican Senate hopeful Tom Tauke said, "We're working on medical waste disposal proposals for a medical waste disposal state law instead of incineration it.

"Because the moratorium prevents them from building the incinerator they proposed that, they are now seek- ing to exploit a possible loophole in the law and build an incinerator instead to steam rather than burn waste," Tauke said at a town meeting in Davenport, the eastern neighbor that Iowa needs more power to limit. "Reported aids said the concern is that we're now making a decision that is irreversible," Tauke said.

Baker travels to East Berlin for monthly '2 plus 4' talks

By Barry Schwartz

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State James Baker will travel to East Berlin this week for his usual 'two plus four' talks with East German officials, a State Department official said.

Baker, who is in Europe to assess the situation in Germany and to consult with his counterparts in Western Europe, will visit East Berlin for the ninth time since he was appointed to the post in 1989.

The talks are expected to focus on the situation in Germany and the future of the two German states.

The meetings, which are held on the last day of each month, are intended to provide a forum for discussion of issues of common concern between the United States and the three countries of Western Europe.

The last meeting was held in Washington in June and the next will be in Berlin on July 30.

The talks are scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. on July 20 and are expected to last for about four hours.

The participants are expected to discuss a wide range of issues, including the situation in Germany, the future of the two German states, and the prospects for reunification.

The talks are expected to be attended by representatives of the United States, Germany, and the three countries of Western Europe.

The talks are held under the auspices of the 'two plus four' process, which was established in 1979 by the signatories of the Glassboro Agreement.

The agreement provides for a forum for dialogue between the United States, Germany, and the three countries of Western Europe, with the aim of promoting peace and stability in Europe.

More groups at risk of contracting AIDS

By Paul Rabinow
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The spread of AIDS is a growing among some gay men, but surprised among nursing, women, crack smokers and prisoners, health officials reported Wednesday on the opening day of the International AIDS conference.

To emphasize the emergence of crack users, "we use as a risk factor the assumption..." said Julian L. Jarlais, the associate director of the National Academy of Sciences.

The report was released by the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services.

AIDS, or human immunodeficiency virus, is the disease that causes AIDS.

"AIDS is the Second World War," said a representative of the American Red Cross.

"The disease is moving out of the larger urban centers," said Jarlais. He also added that AIDS is a public health problem and that it is not a disease of individuals.

Younger gay men are putting themselves at risk by practicing unsafe sex, even if they are too old to contract the disease.

"The disease is moving out of the larger urban centers," Jarlais said.

Ilielescu pleads freedom for Romanians

By George John
The Associated Press

BUKAREST, Romania--Former Communist Ion Iliescu pledged Wednesday to be a democratic president of reconciliation, but the United States dispatched to his inauguration to protest his role in violent anti-government rule.

The capital was generally quiet following a tumultuous week of anti-government rule, but on the eve of the inauguration, anti-government groups gathered in central Bucharest.

"The capitalist was generally quiet following a tumultuous week of anti-government rule, but on the eve of the inauguration, anti-government groups gathered in central Bucharest.

"Ilielescu's calls for a "new beginning" were met with skepticism from Romanians who have suffered from years of rule by a hardline Communist party that is seen as responsible for the country's economic and political problems.

"The Rev. Friedemann Gosslau, a German priest who was among the protesters, said the new president should be held accountable for his role in the past and that the administration should be open to dialogue with the opposition.

"We want to see a peaceful transition to a new government, but we also want to see an end to the violence and abuse of power that has characterized the past regime," Gosslau said.

"We are extremely concerned about the situation in Romania and the prospects for a peaceful transition to democracy," he added.

"We believe that a new government must be formed that is representative of all Romanians and that is committed to the rule of law and human rights.

"We call on the international community to support the efforts of the Romanian people to build a democratic and prosperous future.

"We urge the Romanian government to take steps to improve the human rights situation and to ensure that all citizens have equal access to justice.

"We support the efforts of the opposition parties to create a new government that is representative of all Romanians and that is committed to the rule of law and human rights.

U.S. soccer players content despite 0-3 World Cup record

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

TOKYO, Japan — By 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, 15 of the 22 players on the United States World Cup team had left Kashiwa.
Their views of what happened and why varied.
The U.S. did not much people expected, losing three straight in America's first World Cup appearance since 1950. The Americans wereoutstretched and never came close to taking a lead. Still, they felt they did their best.
"Unfortunately we didn't win," goalkeeper Tony Meola said. "And I think we proved to ourselves and we proved to a lot of people that we belonged here." Meola was one of the players who stayed in Japan and practiced on a nearby court with the USA's backup goalie, Lance Lasagna.

The team, despite many months of practice, could not win. Americans did very little other than counterattack. Bruce Murray, who scored the team's only goal against Austria, "The team was [very] embarrassed."

The high point was a 1-0 loss to Italy in Olympic Stadium. The Americans played their best and came close. The final two games were goalless losses, but the Americans did very little other than counterattack. Murray, despite many months of practice, could not attack all-out, not when it mattered.
"You have to find ways to win," Murray said. "I'm very embarrassed of the fact that everyone thinks we can win. We have to have more players that have to have the feeling they can succeed."

Kentucky firm keeps Miami in compliance with NCAA

Coral Gables, Fla. — The University of Miami, seeking to minimize risk of NCAA violations, pays a Kansas City law firm about $400,000 a year to help it keep in compliance and investigate its athletic program.

The practice is not unique but, because of the money involved, is unusual. The University of Tennessee and the University of Texas offer similar services for $300,000 and $350,000 a year. The consensus is that the program of Athletics Director Sam Jakeshick is comprehensive, personalized study of the program.

"There are no limits, no constraints," Jakes said. "Our goal is full and complete. We talk to whoever we want to look at whatever we want."

The program also supplemented its in-house compliance program, the university has paid the last firm almost $500,000 over the past few years. The program has just been renewed, and Jakeshick said it is a "very important step to ensure that we are making every effort to be up-to-date as possible these are big issues that they can determine just how much they prevent programs, they're made an incredible contribution they're keeping very fair they are free of violations."

"We did not have Linda in Florida every year, but it will be fully staffed," Jakes said. "We have two associates in Florida and we do not have any limits, no constraints."

The life of a pinch hitter is one of not knowing what is next. This season, the star will be Pat Riley and the pinch hitter will be Barry Bonds.

The National League's biggest hitter, Bonds has been a thorn in the side of pitching coaches throughout the season. At 30-3 on the season, Bonds has had a field day in the NL East.

Bonds, who has hit 30 home runs this season, said he expects to continue his hot streak against the NL East.

"I think the NL East is a great place to hit," Bonds said. "I think I can hit the ball well there." The NL East is known for its pitchers, who tend to give up more home runs than other leagues.

With Bonds in the lineup, the Giants are looking to get their season back on track after a slow start.

"We're looking to get our offense going," Giants manager Bruce Bochy said. "Bonds is a big part of that." Bochy said he expects Bonds to continue his hot streak against the NL East.

Bonds leads the NL in home runs with 30, which is just three short of the league leader Mark McGwire of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Giants and the rest of the NL East will have to watch out for Bonds as he continues his hot streak against the league.
