Bush ends 2-year dialogue with PLO leaders

By Rita Beamish
The Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — President George Bush broke off America's dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organization Wednesday, saying a guerrilla raid on Israel's coast "is sticking in our throat" and must be denounced by Yasir Arafat for the relationship to resume.

"We've given the PLO ample time to deal with this issue," Bush said at a news conference at the Marshall Space Flight Center in the midst of a day of campaigning for Republicans in Alabama and North Carolina.

Bush said Israeli civilians were clearly the target of the May 30 raid, for which the Palestine Liberation Front has taken responsibility. The PLF is headed by Abul Abbas, an Arafat associate and a member of the PLO executive committee.

The attack was thwarted when Israeli defenders intercepted five speedboats when they landed. Four guerrillas were killed and 12 captured. The boats, carrying 16 guerrillas armed with rockets and machine guns, reportedly were dropped off a Libyan ship 120 miles at sea.

"This terroristic act is sticking in our throat," Bush said, declaring he was acting even though his decision could incite new violence in the Mideast.

Bush said he was willing to reopen the talks — which enhanced Arafat's standing in the Arab world — if the PLO condemns the raid, disassociates itself from the action and moves to discipline Abbas, whom Bush called "the perpetrator."

The PLO last week said: "The PLO position remains unchanged. We are against any military action that targets civilians, whatever form it may take." Bush's decision disrupts a relationship with the PLO started by then-President Ronald Reagan in December 1988 after Arafat met two U.S. conditions: he disavowed terrorism and recognized Israel's right to exist. The decision comes at a time when U.S. efforts to induce Israel to revive the Middle East peace process have run out of energy.

Protest mourns lost Panamanian lives

By Jessica Davidson
The Daily Iowan

A symbolic graveyard of one hundred red crosses stood on the Pentacrest lawn Wednesday afternoon, the six-month anniversary of the U.S. invasion of Panama, commemorating the Panamanians who were killed.

"We hold George Bush responsible for the blood on those crosses," UI senior Liz Seim said.

Seim and other members of the Central America Solidarity Committee and New Wave protested the Dec. 20 invasion that ousted Manuel Noriega, then president of Panama. Seim and UI graduate Blake Wood spoke to a small audience, denouncing the invasion as a violation of international law and an example of the U.S. government's imperialist and racist policies.

Although the U.S. Army claims only 500 civilians died, Seim said the actual number, according to independent sources, was between 2,000 and 4,000.

Seim said the U.S. government is "fighting a war against blacks, Latinos and poorer countries around the world" and that this also goes on in the U.S.

"The government uses the drug war as an excuse to go into neighborhoods and establish police states," Seim said.

Both Seim and Wood said media coverage of the invasion was minimal and biased. Wood said the media serves the interests of the government and that it has been "cheerleading" the invasion.

Both speakers said the media focused attention on the American casualties, with few references to the many Panamanian dead and homeless and to the billions of dollars' worth of damage caused by the U.S. invasion.

According to Wood, a major problem with the U.S. media is that it covers a story in another country at a certain point in time and then leaves, neglecting to observe final results and further developments. He referred to Grenada, Haiti and the Philippines as examples of media-popularized U.S. invasions that did not benefit the people of those nations.

Wood said the U.S. government should have supported local groups and international action against Noriega instead of invading. He said the problems of Panama have only been compounded by the invasion, with its human casualties, material damage and the numbers of Panamanians left homeless in its wake.

"You can't say, 'what can we do?' in 1990. There's been a whole litany of mistakes," he said.

Each of the 100 crosses represented between 40 and 70 Panamanian civilians killed during the invasion. Two smaller crosses represented Panamanian soldiers killed, and a small blue cross represented the 23 American soldiers killed.

Thousands greet Mandela on first visit to United States

By Judie Glave
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Nelson Mandela was treated to a hero's welcome Wednesday by dignitaries and ordinary citizens alike as huge crowds turned out to help the South African freedom fighter kick off his first visit to the United States.

The African National Congress leader, in his first speech on U.S. soil, called for a continuation of economic sanctions against his homeland — a theme he has echoed throughout his worldwide tour.

"We appeal to you in all humility and in all sincerity that you must join us in the internal actions that you are taking to force the government to abandon apartheid," Mandela said.

"You must join us, and the only way in which we can walk together on this difficult road is for you to ensure that sanctions are applied."

Hundreds of thousands of people watched a ticker-tape parade up Broadway's "Canyon of Heroes." The ANC leader was in a specially designed "Mandelamobile," a flatbed truck outfitted with a bulletproof glass shed.

The crowd cheered wildly as Mandela passed by, many wearing

16 crewmen injured, 2 are missing after explosion, fire aboard Midway

By Tom Minehart
The Associated Press

YOKOSUKA, Japan — A fire on Wednesday raged for hours aboard the U.S. aircraft carrier Midway, injuring 16 crewmen, at least nine seriously, and blocking attempts to find two missing sailors, the Navy said.

The accident prompted demonstrations in the ship's home port of Yokosuka, where city officials demanded the Midway be barred from returning until its safety had been confirmed and the cause of the fire clarified. Japanese news reports said there was concern because the Midway was capable of carrying nuclear weapons.

It was the second serious Navy accident since a series of incidents last fall that caused 14 deaths and resulted in a two-day suspension of operations in November for a safety check.

Smoke was detected aboard the Midway shortly before noon during flight exercises at sea off Japan, said Lt. Jeff Gradeck of the Public Affairs Office at the U.S. Navy base at Yokosuka, near Tokyo.

An explosion occurred on the ship about a half-hour later, and a second blast followed shortly after, Gradeck said. The fire still burned more than 10 hours later but was confined to an emergency equipment storeroom four decks below the flight deck.

Asked if the injury toll meant the explosions had been large, he said, "Not necessarily. The fire hasn't been put out yet and we just don't know. . . . The fire has been contained in a certain area and until the UI medical student Kevin McGlothlen displays more than 50 packs of various brand-name cigarettes that were purchased illegally by local teen-agers.

Group offers plan to limit teen-age cigarette buying

By Susan Stapleton
The Daily Iowan

UI medical students are up in smoke because they say Iowa City teen-agers can purchase a pack of cigarettes almost as easily as they can buy gum or soda pop.

So they want to stop them. Doctors Ought To Care, a group of UI medical students organized around anti-smoking, is currently trying to prevent children under the age of 18 from purchasing cigarettes through legislation, public awareness and education.

Monday night they will take a proposal to the Iowa City Council meeting that they hope will limit teen-age cigarette purchases.

"This is a public health issue regarding our youth. The sooner they become addicted, the harder it is for them to quit later on," said Kevin McGlothlen, president of D.O.C.

He says three million teen-agers nationwide smoke an estimated 947 million packs of cigarettes yearly, and 3,000 more start smoking every day.

"We've done a lot of work on the demand side of the issue by educating the youth about the effects of nicotine, but there has been no change on the supply side," added McGlothlen. "Cigarettes are available to minors over-the-counter and openly at public-access vending machines."

The group recently completed a survey where 96 percent of 17-year-olds and 83 percent of 15-year-olds successfully purchased cigarettes from area stores.

D.O.C.'s proposed ordinance to curb such sales calls for a required affidavit signed by employees at businesses that sell tobacco, restricted locations of vending machines that dispense cigarettes and a posted warning at businesses that states the minimum age of tobacco purchasers.

Joe Merchant, another member of D.O.C., said that the signed affidavit would educate employees about the city and state regulations concerning the sale of cigarettes to

UI makes way for pedestrians

Plans to convert N. Capitol St. await university, city approval

By Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

A tree-lined brick walkway may replace North Capitol Street if the UI and the city approve a preliminary plan developed to improve the safety and appearance of the UI campus.

Last fall UI President Hunter Rawlings presented a series of ideas for improving the UI campus, including the creation of the North Capitol pedestrian mall and several other pathways.

In response, a pathways committee was created to study his suggestions and form priorities for campus improvement.

The walkway proposal offers better handicapped accessibility in the area, improved lighting and an aesthetically appealing environment, according to architect Rich Gardner of Crose-Gardner Associates in Des Moines.

"The quality of life would be enhanced with the addition of benches, study areas, and places to sit and converse," Gardner said. "The primary change is that the space will become more of a campus setting than the vehicular corridor which it is now."

Committee member Richard Gibson, UI director of facilities planning, coordinated a three-day planning session, ending Wednesday, between the architectural firm assigned to the project, the pathways committee and other members of the UI community.

The purpose of the planning session was to seek suggestions and concerns from those affected by the project, Gardner said.

If approved, the changes on North Capitol Street will be developed in conjunction with the construction of the new academic business building scheduled to begin next spring, Gibson said.

The concept of the North Capitol pedestrian mall will be presented to the central UI administration and the city after a final meeting of the pathways committee and the architect in mid-July, according to T. Anne Cleary, acting associate vice president of academic affairs and co-chairwoman of the committee.

No cost estimate will be made until a final proposal has been developed, Gibson said, adding that if the UI and city approve the concept, it will eventually go before the Board of Regents.

The project may be funded in phases, and the priority will be to develop the area surrounding the new business building during its construction, Cleary said.

Cleary said the preliminary plan combines immediate changes with long-term ideas for campus improvements.

"I believe the attractiveness of the environment contributes to one's well-being," she said. Gardner said the plan is designed for the pedestrian over the vehicle.

He said, "We're taking the dominance of the car away from this area and returning it to students and pedestrians."

Freshman orientation runs on schedule

By David Sims
The Daily Iowan

Despite the destruction of orientation materials by flood waters and the last-minute resignation of the program's coordinator, today's freshman orientation will go on as scheduled.

Emil Rinderspacher, associate director of pre-enrollment services, said Tuesday's resignation of Celine Moore, coordinator of orientation services, is "not a problem."

"It's a well-established program; most of the work's been done," Rinderspacher said. "We have a dynamite staff."

He added that the UI Printing Department did a "great job" of picking up the pieces from last weekend's flood, which wreaked havoc on supplies of orientation materials.

"We've been racing around trying to figure out what got ruined and what can be replaced. But all of the things that did get damaged and are necessary are being redone."

Janet Ashman

Janet Ashman, assistant director of admission publications and administrative services, said there will be no shortage of orientation material for entering freshman.

"We've been racing around trying to figure out what got ruined and what can be replaced," Ashman said. "But all of the things that did get damaged and are necessary are being redone."

Ashman said many of the damaged materials were being redone outside of the university by private companies and that the UI was "lucky" the damage wasn't worse.

"I think we're going to get through this situation without too many problems," she said. "We're lucky it wasn't worse."

"Everyone has been doing a great job of teamwork on staff," she added.

Rinderspacher, who was previously orientation coordinator for 10 years, now resumes the position to direct the first of eight two-day orientation sessions to be held this summer for incoming freshmen and their parents.

As of last week, 2,700 students and 2,800 parents were signed up to visit the UI campus during this summer's orientation programs. The numbers, which are lower than last year's, reflect the decrease in total admissions.

Rinderspacher said he is actually looking forward to the orientation sessions.

"It's fun. It's a new beginning for the students, and they're full of questions, hopes, fears and anxieties," he said. "There's a lot of energy."

I.C. groups gear up for RAGBRAI 18

By Roberta Branca
The Daily Iowan

Creating a favorable impression about Iowa City and the state of Iowa is the goal when the 18th Des Moines Register's Annual Great Bike Ride Across Iowa wheels through Iowa City July 27.

At an informational meeting Wednesday night, the RAGBRAI Steering Committee asked local businesses and private citizens to help Iowa City stand out in the minds of RAGBRAI riders and camp followers.

Non-profit organizations will have the opportunity to raise funds by setting up food booths on private property. Bicyclists will receive a pamphlet directing them to booths and local businesses.

The route will take the riders into town on Prairie du Chien Road and then down Kimball Road and Dodge Street to downtown. The riders will follow Market, Clinton and Gilbert Streets.

Court says police may use hidden recording devices

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Police are free to use hidden microphones, tape recorders and other devices to lure confessions from suspects not in custody, the Iowa Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The court said police can secretly record conversations almost until formal charges are filed. The high court rejected complaints that using hidden recorders violates constitutional guarantees of privacy and against self-incrimination and rights to have legal counsel.

The ruling came in a Page County murder case. Police were investigating the slaying of Dene Beal, who was shot and killed along a country road.

"Investigating state agents came to believe the victim's daughter, Lisa Beal; Lisa's friend Sharon Brinkley; and their mutual friend, Brent O'Dell, had conspired to kill Dene Beal," the court said.

But officers needed evidence that would stand up in court, the justices said.

"The state doubtless felt the case could and should be made a good deal stronger because prior to the recorded conversation, the state could offer only testimony of accomplices to the crime."

Iowa Supreme Court decision

Brinkley was allowed to plead guilty to a conspiracy charge in exchange for agreeing to wear a hidden microphone to record a conversation with O'Dell.

"In this conversation, Brinkley would attempt to elicit inculpatory statements from O'Dell," the court said.

All of the conversation between Brinkley and O'Dell was recorded by police. Officers then filed murder charges against O'Dell, believing he was the one who actually pulled the trigger.

O'Dell said the tape recording should not be used as evidence because it violated his constitutional rights. A lower court agreed and wouldn't allow the evidence. O'Dell's trial was stopped while prosecutors appealed that decision.

Without dissent, the Supreme Court overturned the lower court decision. Justices said constitutional rights against self-incrimination and allowing legal representation do not become a factor until a suspect is actually in custody.

"An accused is entitled to counsel prior to but pending the formal filing of planned charges when questioned while in custody or subject to restraint," the court said.

An Iowa City man was charged Wednesday with two counts of indecent exposure, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The defendant, William D. Hoffman, 19, 102 Apache Trail, allegedly exposed his genitals to a woman near Bloomington and Linn Streets, court records state.

Minutes later, Hoffman reportedly exposed himself to another woman at the corner of Bloomington and Gilbert Streets, records state.

Iowa City Detective Vicki Lalla, responding to the complaints, approached a man that matched the victim's description in the parking lot of Quik Trip, 301 E. Market St., court records state.

Hoffman was later identified by both victims.

A preliminary hearing in the matter is set for June 29.

An Iowa City man was charged Wednesday with assault without intent to injure and third-degree criminal mischief, according to court records.

The defendant, Todd M. Baggott, 23, 426 Ridgeview Ave., allegedly hit a woman in the head with his fist in an attempt to cause her to lose control of her car while driving, records stated.

Baggott reportedly said, "You want to see violence, I'll show you some," while kicking the windshield of the woman's vehicle out, records state.

A preliminary hearing in the matter is set for June 29.

An Iowa City man was charged Wednesday with five counts of second-degree burglary in connection with breaking into vehicles, according to court records.

The defendant, James A. Conway, 19, was reportedly found hiding in a red Chrysler at 308 S. Gilbert St. by Iowa City Police responding to a call involving a person breaking into a vehicle, records stated.

Conway told police that the car belonged to a friend. Further investigation revealed that Conway's information was misleading, according to court records.

An item that was reported stolen from a previous vehicle theft was found on the seat of the red Chrysler, records stated.

The stolen item was later identified by its owner.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for July 10.

Dick Barkema of rural Jewell, Iowa, gestures with his cane as he directs clean-up operations at his farm. An Iowa State University meteorologist thinks El Niño, a warming trend in the Pacific Ocean near the equator, may have been responsible for last weekend's heavy thunderstorms.

Iowa's 1990 torrential rains tied to Pacific warming trend

By Marilyn Hauk Essex
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — An Iowa State University meteorologist is looking to the Pacific Ocean for an explanation to the volatile weather that has brought torrential rain to Iowa.

"We're not using it as a forecasting tool," said Michael McCorcle, a meteorologist in the agronomy department at ISU. "We're saying, 'we're getting rain now — what's causing it?'"

McCorcle said parts of the Pacific Ocean along the equator are undergoing a warming trend known as El Niño, which he said historically is associated with wetter years in the Midwest.

McCorcle said weather officials are calling the latest situation a "weak warm episode" and said it is just one of many factors being examined in studying this year's weather patterns.

"Not every El Niño brings heavy rains to the Midwest," McCorcle said. "But a number of wet years have been during the El Niño years, and a number of dry years have been during La Niña years."

La Niña is the term used for a cooling of waters in the equatorial Pacific, he said. McCorcle said El Niño occurs about every four to seven years, with the last recorded in 1983.

El Niño means "the boy" in Spanish. La Niña translates to "the girl." Perry Baker of the National Weather Service said weather trackers have observed a weak El Niño effect this year. "We haven't had any indications that our weather is being affected by the El Niño," he said.

State Climatologist Harry Hillaker said, "El Niño gets implicated a lot whenever something goes haywire with the weather."

"There are some very tenuous correlations," Hillaker said. "But there is somewhat of a tendency when an El Niño event is going on for Iowa to have a normal rainfall."

Hillaker said there is a stronger correlation between the La Niña effect and drier years in Iowa. La Niña occurred in 1988 and 1989, two of the driest years on record in Iowa.

McCorcle said the wet year Iowans are seeing after two years of drought is typical of a pattern since 1977.

From the 1940s through the mid-1970s, the temperature and the amount of precipitation didn't vary much, he said.

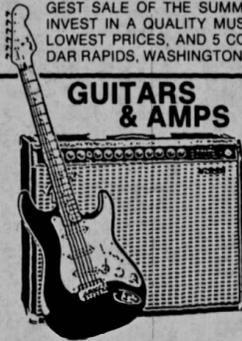

"As a result, agriculture was in a boom period," he said. "You could count on precipitation and temperature to be just about ideal."

The pattern since the mid-1970s is similar to that from 1900 to the 1940s, when precipitation and temperature patterns showed great variance from year to year, he said.

Summer Rep opens Friday

Series features Christopher Durang

By Jacqueline Comito
The Daily Iowan

The work of Christopher Durang — one of the funniest and most controversial playwrights in contemporary American theater — will be the focus of an upcoming month-long series of performances at the UI.

The Christopher Durang Festival, presented by the Iowa Summer Rep, runs from June 22 through July 21 and features performances and readings of six Durang plays.

The Festival opens this Friday with a performance of the Obie Award-winning comedy "The Marriage of Bette and Boo" at 8 p.m. in Mabie Theatre. Based on Durang's memories of his family's absurd relationships, "The Marriage of Bette and Boo" uses broad strokes to sketch three decades in a middle-class marriage that starts with great promise but disintegrates into frustration and failure.

The Rep production of "The Marriage of Bette and Boo" is directed by Cosmo Catalano, chairman of the UI Department of Theatre Arts, and features design by Dan Nemteanu, costume design by Kaoime Malloy, lighting design by Pip Gordon and sound design by Mark Bruckner.

According to Catalano, the piece is a prime example of the playwright's satiric talents. "Durang's comic sensibility is wonderful. He combines Chekhov's sympathy and Mark Twain's skillful observance of people with a theatricality similar to Neil Simon. Durang looks at a troubled society with a loving understanding. It's a pleasure to work on his plays."

Other plays in the Durang Festival include "Baby with the Bathwa-ter," "Beyond Therapy" and a cabaret production of "Laughing Wild." In addition, staged readings will be presented of two plays: "The Nature and Purpose of the Universe" and Durang's most famous work, the controversial (and occasionally banned) "Sister Mary Ignatius Explains It All For You."

An improbable confrontation between a woman hoping to buy a can of tuna and a man blocking the supermarket aisle while reading can labels is the central event of "Laughing Wild." Opening June

The Iowa Summer Rep

26 at 8 p.m. in Theatre A, the production is directed by Judith Lyons, a UI graduate and director of a theater program at a private high school in California.

Lyons says the cabaret setting of "Laughing Wild" will provide a special challenge for the actors. "I am lucky to have such good actors — Jennifer Rives and Mark Hallen — to play the very demanding roles in this piece," she says. "I can't wait to see this play with an audience."

The Durang Festival continues in Mabie Theatre on June 29 at 8 p.m. with "Baby With the Bathwater." The Off-Broadway comic hit is a satire about Yuppie parenting, told from the viewpoint of the victim — the baby. The shallow, self-absorbed parents, who view the new family member as their latest consumer acquisition, don't have a clue about nurturing a healthy human life.

"The Marriage of Bette and Boo" (left) features Daria Max and Todd Ballantyne as the respective title characters, with Bruce Barrett as the officiating priest. "Laughing Wild" (right) features Mark Hallen and Jennifer E. Rives as two odd characters who come to blows in a supermarket. Both plays are being presented by the Iowa Summer Rep as part of its Christopher Durang Festival.

While "Baby With the Bathwater" delivers the biting satire and stinging wit for which Durang is famous, director Eric Forsythe, also artistic director for the festival, notes that the outcome of the play is happy and optimistic.

"It is riotously funny, with charm, constant surprises and verbal wit, and it is also a very warm play and sweet," Forsythe says. "There are moments of harsh sarcasm, but they are tempered because we are talking about a baby from the baby's point of view. It's very touching that after all the calamities of this poor baby's life, he is able to find another person to be close to, and to get married and have a new baby — and this time do it right. For Durang, I think this is a real sign of his maturing as a playwright."

"Beyond Therapy," the third play in Mabie Theatre, was one of Durang's first big hits and later was made into a film. The play is the story of two gun-shy, but fairly sane, single people who meet through a personal ad in a newspaper, each with the knowledge of his or her respective psychotherapists. Opening July 6, "Beyond Therapy" is directed by Forsythe.

The Iowa Summer Rep is a professional rotating repertory theater presented each summer by University Theatres. This is the seventh season the Rep has explored the work of a single playwright; previous festivals have focused on Tennessee Williams, David Mamet and Joe Orton, among others.

As in past seasons, each performance will be preceded by Picnics on the Plaza, a menu of grilled entrees and accompaniments prepared by the Iowa Memorial Union food service. Picnics on the Plaza is available to all audience members, and no advance reservation is required. Desserts and beverages, also available after each performance, will be on the Theatre Building Plaza, overlooking the Iowa River.

The Iowa Summer Rep's Christopher Durang Festival runs from June 22 to July 21. For individual playing dates, ticket orders or more information call the Hancher Box Office at 335-1160.

MTV series aims at diverse audience

By Jay Sharbutt
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Ah, yes, MTV. Rock videos. Quick-cut, posturing mini-musicals for those who love synthesizers, rock stars who mouth the words of their hits and the robo-rhythms of electronic drum machines.

But there is weirdness afoot. It might have startled you to see a show with flash-rock king Elton John, just him and his piano, Sunday night, surrounded by about 100 fans in a small New York studio.

It's part of a relatively new weekly MTV series, "Unplugged," featuring major and minor stars of rock doing their thing in an intimate setting — not the usual 50,000-seat stadium full of fugitives from homes for the strange.

The show is odd in other ways. The musicians generally play what younger tads, raised on microchip rock, call "acoustic." That means real guitars, real drums and, in one Don Henley show, even real violins and cellos.

The video is no frills — four cameras taping a complete performance.

"('Unplugged') was part of MTV's goal of doing original, unexpected things. We wanted to say, 'There's another way to do music.'"

Judy McGrath
MTV senior vice president

And the singers actually sing, which was slyly noted in Sunday's one-hour show as John welcomed viewers to "the program that lip-synchers dare not come on." The audience cheered.

"Ooh, nasty, nasty," he said, mock-chiding himself. "Right — since that cuts out about 75 percent of the Top 100, it's only the old ones like me that can do it."

Then, clad in a pink baseball cap and pink and black jogging togs, he briskly proceeded to do seven classics, among them a boogie-woogie version of one of his most golden oldies, "Bennie and the Jets."

Billed as MTV's "First Acoustic Music Series," "Unplugged" began in January. The first show featured the British rockers Squeeze.

Thirteen more shows have been taped and aired, starring such artists as Sinead O'Connor and 10,000 Maniacs. Future shows will feature Aerosmith and Eric Clapton.

The series has gotten a good reaction from all ages of MTV fans, said MTV senior vice president Judy McGrath.

But it wasn't started, she said, as a reaction to what some rock analysts see as an increasing turn by the public away from lip-synching rock stars and technorock in which the synthesizer is the star.

"No, it really isn't a reaction against anything," she said. "Rather, it was part of MTV's goal of doing original, unexpected things. We wanted to say, 'There's another way to do music.' "Unplugged" might seem new to many MTV viewers who think "thirtysomething" is a show about old folks. But it's more a back-to-the-future effort resembling public television's "Soundstage" of the '70s. That was a music series that also put pop stars of the day in a quiet, no-frills studio setting.

"When I look at 'Unplugged,' I get a sense of déjà vu," said Ken Ehrlich, who was executive producer of "Soundstage" and now produces other music shows, including cable's "Showtime Coast to Coast" specials.

"I think that perhaps the most telling thing is that kids are going to be able to see once again what the music is and what the performers are like, instead of having to follow 400 cuts in a video." MTV's McGrath said "Unplugged" was aimed at a broad audience, not just the fast-growing, aging baby boom collection of citizens.

Ehrlich said he didn't think baby boomers even watched MTV. "I think what's happening is that there are probably a lot of kids watching 'Unplugged' and saying, 'Gee, we've discovered a new way of looking at music.'"

Film 'Sweetie' explores family roles

By Henry Olson
The Daily Iowan

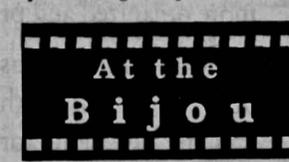

Daughters, so the saying goes, are the apples of their fathers' eyes. Unfortunately, some have bruises on their skin and worms at their cores. In her film "Sweetie," Australian director Jane Campion weaves a dark tale of the consequences of blind devotion to a less-than-perfect child.

The movie tells the story of two adult sisters, Kay and Dawn, and the effect that the uninhibited Dawn has on the lives of both Kay and her parents.

As the film opens, Kay's life is in a bit of a rut. Her relationship with her boyfriend deteriorates steadily, until they eventually stop having sex. In fact, they stop sleeping in the same room — until one day when Dawn (played by Genevieve Lemon) arrives and brings along her sleazy producer/boyfriend as a bonus.

Dawn, who has been given the nickname "Sweetie" by her father, adds a little spice to Kay's life. Soon after her arrival, Sweetie and her lover go to the beach with Kay's boyfriend; while Sweetie's man lies half-buried beneath the sand, Sweetie teaches her sister's mate the joys of licking (so to speak). Meanwhile, the hapless oaf remains stranded with a somewhat conspicuous twig on top of him.

Later, Sweetie and Kay's father arrives, having been left recently by his wife. His presence helps to explain Sweetie's personality. As a child, like most children, Sweetie had been "exceptional." However, her father took normal pride to extremes: Building for her both a throne and a tree-house palace, he created a prima donna who really had no creative reason to exist.

Campion implies that the relationship between Sweetie and her father is incestuous. For example, at one point Sweetie — a woman in her twenties — gives her father a bath. This scene, which shows a selfish woman helping her aging father in a basically demeaning task, at first pulls at the heartstrings — until the "little princess" starts playing "find the soap in the bathtub."

Genevieve Lemon, as Sweetie, does a fine job of portraying a woman who has been encouraged all her life to remain a child. Her fits are just as nerve-wracking and pathetic as the tantrums of a two-year-old. Once, to avenge herself, she crunches her sister's collection of porcelain horses between her teeth.

"Sweetie" seems to be a warning against instilling false pride in children: Too much praise does not necessarily build self-esteem — but it could create an emotionally arrested woman/child. Try not to keep children from growing up, Campion's film warns; encourage them instead, and tell them to hurry.

"Sweetie" will be shown at the Bijou on Friday at 6:30 p.m., Saturday at 6:30 and 10:30 p.m., and Sunday at 5:30 and 9:30 p.m.

Opera Theater presents arias Friday night

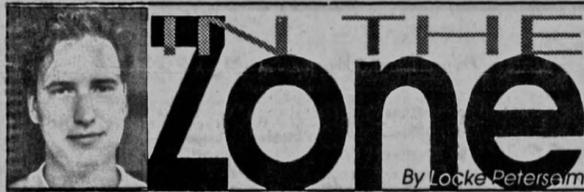

The Daily Iowan

Nine students from the UI Opera Theater will present "A Summer Evening of Arias" at 8 p.m. Friday, June 22, in Macbride Hall Auditorium.

Each of the singers, who are graduate and undergraduate students in the UI School of Music, will sing two operatic arias. Beaumont Glass, director of the UI Opera Theater, will accompany the students at the piano and provide commentary, explaining the dramatic situation of each aria.

The student singers for "A Summer Evening of Arias" will be sopranos Kerri Rosenberg, Nancy Hagen and Heidi Best; mezzo-sopranos Barbara Buddin and Jani Degnan; tenors Joseph Spann and Christopher Goeke; baritone Kirk Greiner; and bass Jeffrey Fields.

The program will include arias from Bizet's "Carmen," Mozart's "Don Giovanni" and "The Magic Flute," Puccini's "Manon Lescaut," and Rossini's "Barber of Seville," among others.

“Welcome to Mars. It's open all hours...” (“Waiting for Mary.” Pere Ubu)

What are we doing here? I wish I had the answer. More than that, I wish there were a point to this first column. But summers are notoriously devoid of substance.

I oughta know, but my memory is going...

Age has not been kind to Hunter S. Thompson. Whatever demons HST bartered with in the early '70s for his then-ferocious talent have long since taken their due. By the mid-'80s the Good Doctor was in a dead-stick dive, sporadically writing obtuse columns and dutifully performing in outlaw persona for any reporter who braved the peacocks and gunfire up at Owl Farm.

Talent is a protector, and for years Thompson could get away with just about anything up in Woody Creek. But sooner or later the once-strong mastiff goes weak in body and mind, gets mean, and society steps in. And so this spring Hunter found himself caught in a bad karma crossfire of female porn producers, greed-headed land developers and Bush-league drug warriors. Thompson squirmed free of the felony drug and dynamite charges on lack of evidence. But in the dark hour of judgment, Hunter, rightfully afraid of the screwheads, straightened up and denied the Mad Doctor persona.

"They've confused the artist with the art," he told a reporter from his old stomping ground, Rolling Stone. "To a large extent, if I'd done half of what I wrote, I'd be dead." Well, deep down we all knew that, but the fun of reading Thompson was pretending every word was true. He was supposed to be out there living the life we all wanted, but we were afraid of ruining our livers, kidneys and insurance ratings. Now that HST's pulled the plug on the legends he worked so hard to build, who will impressionable young readers turn to for their illicit role model? P.J. O'Rourke's given up driving fast on drugs and getting his wing-wang squeezed without spilling his drink to become a Bush apologist. That leaves George Will. It's sad but entirely possible that tomorrow's generation will forego the simple pleasures of shooting human adrenaline, drinking Wild Turkey by the case and wielding firearms and high explosives for a day at the ballpark discussing bi-partisan politics between pitches.

"Oh, you're never alone in the Twilight Zone..."

Though Thompson's latest book won't be out for a while; what summer Trash-Cellar list would be complete without a new book-cum-doorstop from Stephen King? But this year, rather than churn out a new 900 pages of lumbering horror prose, Big Steve has decided to re-release his 1978 End-Of-The-World-As-We-Know-It tale, "The Stand." It seems that back then the still-striving, if no longer struggling, writer actually had editors who dared make him narrow 1100-page tree-killers down to a more readable — and deftable — length. (It's been an unspoken rule in the publishing world that when an author's hardback book weighs more than the after-death weight of his brain, he's probably writing over his head.)

But now that he's big, rich and completely out of ideas, King is re-releasing "The Stand" in its "uncensored," "uncut" form, sticking back in the 500 pages someone once made him trim. If this clown really wants to do his legion of readers a favor, he'd go back and chop a couple hundred pages off every book since "Carrie." That, his first, was a mere 250 pages; these days King would be hard-pressed to write an introduction in that space.

"Bad as it seems, maybe we're dreaming..."

Meanwhile King's Queen of Literary Crime, Danielle Steel, has released her 25th novel, "Message From Nam." Complete with a shimmering olive and gold cover (more suited for Park Avenue wallpaper than jungle camouflage), it's the story of a female reporter covering all the action — and the men — half a world away from Bloomingdale's.

Just what we needed — a Poor Little Rich Girl's impressions of a war that's already been driven to a cross commercial death. Maybe if we're lucky, "Message From Nam" will be made into a sexy TV miniseries. Romantic late-night helicopter flights! Dinner by tracerlight! Silky camouflage lingerie! Quick! Somebody round up Oliver Stone, Julia Roberts and a couple spare Sheen-Estevéz boys! It makes you wonder why we ever pulled out.

Avenson leads call for block of medical waste autoclave

The Associated Press

ELDON, Iowa — Democratic gubernatorial nominee Don Avenson and legislative leaders Wednesday called on Gov. Terry Branstad to block a proposed medical waste disposal unit they said skirts legislative restrictions.

Avenson said the proposal was aimed at avoiding "the intent and spirit" of a ban on incinerators. He urged Branstad to intervene.

The Legislature this year approved a one-year ban on medical waste incinerators to give state officials time to draft regulations to protect workers and the environment.

Since that time, there have been proposals for a medical waste "autoclave," which steams waste instead of incinerates it.

"Because the moratorium prevents them from building the incinerator they proposed, they are now seeking to exploit a possible loophole in the law and build an autoclave instead to steam rather than burn waste," Avenson said at a news conference. "This is not the kind of corporate neighbor that Iowa needs or wants."

Branstad aides said the concern is misplaced.

"The governor's position is that the moratorium covers an autoclave," spokesman Richard Vohs said.

Vohs said there are currently no permit applications pending for an autoclave. He said the governor would block approval of any should they be filed.

Tauke will disclose list of contributors, challenges Sen. Harkin to do the same

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Republican Senate hopeful Tom Tauke said Wednesday he will make public the entire list of those who contribute to his campaign, and he challenged incumbent Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin to do the same.

Harkin aides said they have issued a similar list in the past and plan to do so again this year.

"We're glad he's following our lead," said Harkin campaign manager Tim Raftis.

Federal law does not require

Senate candidates to list individual contributors who give less than $200. Tauke said he would make available a list of all contributors.

"Campaign finances have become an issue today," said Tauke.

"Under those circumstances, all candidates for public office have an obligation to maintain trust in government through complete disclosure."

He said Harkin has raised more than $608,000 in individual contributions for which he did not list contributors. Raftis said Harkin discloses those lists each year.

minors. "Most businesses that don't sell cigarettes to minors I.D. and refuse their business," he added.

A University of Minnesota study showed that 25 percent of all surveyed tenth-graders had purchased cigarettes at least once from a vending machine.

"Vending machines have to go," said McGlothlen. "At any age, there is unlimited access to vending machines." The proposal would allow vending machines in restricted areas such as factories, businesses and taverns where minor access is limited.

"Our proposal wouldn't be impinging on adult smokers. Vending machines are disproportionately important to teen-age smokers," said Merchant.

Current Iowa State law states that a person may not furnish minors under the age of 18 with tobacco.

McGlothlen said, "We realize this is not a high priority law and will remain a difficult law to enforce. The law isn't even addressed."

Mandela

Mandela buttons and waving posters with his picture.

"I just feel proud," Denise Brutus, an American Airlines employee, said. "I'm so happy. I couldn't stay home and watch it. I had to be in his presence."

The avenue was ankle-deep in ticker tape and other paper. Trees and traffic lights throughout the area were dripping with streams of computer paper.

Judith Bateman, a senior citizens program director from Irvington, N.J., showed up early to secure a front row seat.

"I pray for him every night," said Bateman, who was outfitted in a red T-shirt with a map of Africa and wore a Mandela button. "He is a dream to the human people."

Bateman's traveling companion, Shirley Coxson, said she wished she could have given Mandela this simple message: "We love you. God bless you."

Along with those who showed up to cheer Mandela were thousands of city police and federal and state agents — part of a security detail dubbed "Operation Topaz."

Mandela was greeted at Kennedy International Airport by dignitaries including Gov. Mario Cuomo, who said Mandela's visit was "not a victory lap but a long distance journey to remind us that until South Africa is completely free, the march toward freedom has not reached its final destination."

Mayor David Dinkins, the city's first black mayor, gave the man he has called his hero a giant bear hug upon meeting him.

Despite a two-hour delay, Mandela insisted on stopping at a Brooklyn high school where thousands of students and residents from the predominantly black Bedford-Stuyvesant neighborhood greeted him with cheers of "Man-del-a!" and "Keep the pressure on."

"I sincerely feel very strong and encouraged because if in our struggle we receive the support of the youth of the world, then our cause can never fail, can never be lost," Mandela told the crowd.

fire is put out they can't go into that area."

The room contained wood, gas masks, firefighting gear and other emergency equipment, but no explosive material, he said. Gradeck added that the fire was unrelated to the flight exercises and said its cause, still undetermined, was being investigated.

Nine of the injured were flown to hospitals in Japan, and seven others were treated aboard the ship, the Navy said. Of the nine, one was in critical condition, four suffered very serious burns, two were in serious condition, one was in guarded condition and one was stable.

In Washington, Navy spokesman Lt. Bruce Williams at the Pentagon said Wednesday afternoon there were two men missing in the accident, one more than originally thought. He offered no details.

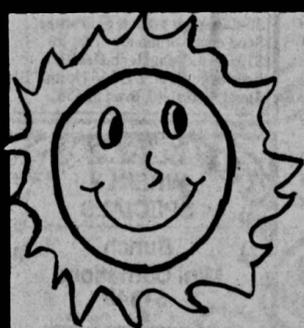

Gradeck said the Navy was notifying families of the victims, some of whom live in Yokosuka and some in the United States.

About 4,500 crew members, including fliers and aviation crews, were aboard the Midway, the Navy's oldest carrier in active service, at the time of the accident, the Navy said.

The 1,000-foot-long ship was commissioned in 1945 but has been extensively modernized.

The public Japan Broadcasting Corp. photographed the Midway from a helicopter and said there was no visible damage.

Give another chance. Give blood.

Baker travels to East Berlin for monthly '2 plus 4' talks

By Barry Schweld
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State James Baker will sound out U.S. allies and the Soviets on a proposed Western aid package designed to overcome Kremlin resistance to NATO membership for a unified Germany, U.S. officials said Wednesday.

Several months ago, the West German government offered to help Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev cope with his economic woes. The Bush administration approved the overture as part of a nine-point package Baker discussed two weeks ago with Soviet Minister Eduard Shevardnadze at a human rights conference in Copenhagen, Denmark.

"One of the goals of the discussions is to see how we can assist the Soviet economy through some sort of economic package," a U.S. official said before Baker left for East Berlin. "It's likely they will discuss it in Berlin."

French President Francois Mitterrand said Tuesday he would ask the United States and five other major industrial democracies to consider extending financial and technical aid to the Soviets at an economic summit meeting in Houston next month.

Baker, officials said, also was weighing other assurances to pacify Moscow's concerns.

Officials said those assurances included issuance of declarations by NATO and the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact designed to reflect the lowering of East-West tension and the prospective withdrawal of tens of thousands of U.S. and Soviet troops from Europe.

The monthly "2 plus 4" talks bring together the four victors of World War II — the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France — and the two Germanys, who are set to merge their currencies July 2 and may hold all-German elections in December.

Baker also will meet separately with Shevardnadze on Friday and on Thursday with Markus Meckel of East Germany and Hans-Dietrich Genscher of West Germany.

Gorbachev's economic problems are apt to be compounded when East Germany is absorbed by West Germany. There are an estimated 380,000 Soviet troops in East Germany. Some would stay for a transitional period under a U.S. proposal Baker discussed with Shevardnadze in Copenhagen.

But the Soviets would be limited to no more than 195,000 soldiers in all of Central Europe, including what is now East Germany, under a treaty being negotiated in Vienna, Austria, by NATO and the Warsaw Pact.

The return of the troops would strain the Soviet budget both in terms of housing them and helping them to find jobs.

A U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the proposed aid package could include the possibility of having the West Germans pay for housing the withdrawn soldiers in the Soviet Union.

Baker also is likely to discuss with Shevardnadze a renewed Soviet threat to suspend emigration of Soviet Jews if Israel keeps settling some of them on the West Bank and in Gaza.

The Bush administration also opposes allowing Jews to live on land Israel seized from Jordan and Egypt during the 1967 Mideast war and that the Arabs hope to recover. But the threat to suspend emigration, which Gorbachev voiced June 3 at the end of his Washington summit meeting with President George Bush, is stiffly opposed by the administration.

Gorbachev's leadership contested within party

By Bryan Brumley
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev came under fire from hard-line Communists on Wednesday and said he could lose his party post at a national congress in less than two weeks.

Critics at a party meeting criticized the national leadership. They did not mention Gorbachev by name, but said they did not think one person should be Soviet president and general secretary of the Communist Party. Gorbachev holds both positions.

"It is impossible to run the party — this guiding force — without devoting full time to it," prominent Soviet hard-liner Yegor Ligachev said.

Ligachev called for the founding of a new Communist party of the Russian Federation, which is the largest of the 15 Soviet republics.

Another Communist leader said he expected Gorbachev to be nominated for the national party's top job at a party congress starting July 2, but that he expects other candidates to surface as well.

In recent months, Gorbachev has transferred some of the Communist Party's powers to elected legislative bodies in order to protect him from personal political damage that could result if he lost the party leadership.

He also was elected in March to a five-year term in the new post of president and has wielded considerable power in that office.

The 28th Congress of the Soviet Communist Party will consider structural changes and elect a leader when it convenes July 2.

The 2,700 delegates to the current Russian conference will also attend the national congress where they will form a majority of the 4,700 votes.

The mood of the Russian congress was decidedly conservative and critical of Gorbachev.

"Really important miscalculations and serious mistakes were made in the tactics, methods and approaches to the transformations" under way in the Soviet Union, Ligachev said. "The Socialist community has disintegrated while the positions of imperialism have been dramatically consolidated." His remarks were reported by the state news agency Tass.

Gorbachev has acknowledged making mistakes, but he said in a speech to delegates Wednesday that his accusers were poorly informed and disrespectful.

"The comrades seem to suspect the general secretary of the Communist Party of some vacillation, hesitation and so forth," Gorbachev said. "Some of the comrades are being too casual with the general secretary, with the president of the country."

"It is not a question of me, personally. Tomorrow, or after 10 days or 12 days, there may be another general secretary or chairman of the party. Before expressing opinions, and especially accusations, you have to know a whole lot and understand it, and not just speak off the cuff."

"The socialist community has disintegrated while the positions of imperialism have been dramatically consolidated."

Yegor Ligachev
Gorbachev critic

"Otherwise, if that is going to be the attitude toward the people that we nominate at such turning points in history, then we will not get anywhere except to chaos."

Ivan Polozkov, a leading conservative, said the falling credibility of the party stemmed from more than "mistakes made during the period of stagnation" before Gorbachev came to power in 1985.

"There have also been mistakes made in the period of perestroika," he said, using the Russian word for Gorbachev's reforms.

He also criticized Alexander Yakovlev, a close Gorbachev ally on the Politburo.

"The crisis is not just in the Communist Party, but above all in its leading bodies," Polozkov said.

Foreign reporters were not allowed to attend Wednesday's session, but portions of it were shown on closed-circuit television at the foreign ministry press center.

The party chief for the city of Moscow, Yuri Prokofiev, told reporters that Gorbachev likely would be one of several candidates for the job once again of national party leader. He said he hoped Gorbachev's comments did not mean he would refuse to run for the post.

The delegates also overwhelmingly condemned a proposal before the Russian parliament to liquidate party cells in the Armed Forces, the KGB security police and the regular police force.

Nikolai Boiko, head of the political department of Soviet anti-aircraft forces, warned that such a step would "weaken its defense potential."

By a 2,008-398 vote, the congress passed a resolution, calling the proposed liquidation of party cells in security organs "a step toward the further disintegration of the party."

More groups at risk of contracting AIDS

By Paul Raeburn
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — The spread of AIDS is slowing among some gay men, but soaring among teenagers, women, crack smokers and heavy drinkers, researchers reported Wednesday on the opening day of the international AIDS conference.

"In particular, the emergence of crack cocaine use as a risk factor for the transmission of HIV is a new and disturbing development in the epidemiology of AIDS," said Don Des Jarlais of the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City. HIV is the virus that causes AIDS.

Younger gay men are putting themselves at risk by practicing unsafe sex at twice the rate of older gay men, said Thomas Coates of the University of California, San Francisco. Older gay men are more likely to use condoms, a safer sexual practice that cuts the risk of "The disease is moving out of the large urban centers."

Don Des Jarlais
Mount Sinai School of Medicine

Des Jarlais is one of the authors of "AIDS: The Second Decade," an attempt to summarize all existing information on the likely future course of the epidemic. It was prepared by experts assembled by the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences.

The report was released in San Francisco as 12,000 delegates and 1,800 reporters gathered for the Sixth International Conference on AIDS, a forum for the presentation of new research and a target for protests and demonstrations by AIDS activists.

"We believe the picture of AIDS and HIV infection in the foreseeable future is one of a continuing toll of sickness and death for a steadily broadening profile of individuals," Des Jarlais told reporters.

Populations not previously thought to be at special risk for AIDS infection are suddenly becoming infected, he said.

"The disease is moving out of the large urban centers," he said.

Women are being more seriously affected. The proportion of AIDS cases in women has grown from 6 percent in 1982 to 10 percent in 1989, Des Jarlais and his colleagues found.

HIV being spread.

"New people are entering this pool and they consider themselves invulnerable," Coates said.

In New York City, 1 percent of black and Hispanic teen-age mothers are infected with HIV, Des Jarlais said.

Alcohol, too, is associated with the spread of AIDS because, like crack, it often leads to unsafe sexual behavior, the researchers said.

The Rev. Cecil Williams of the Glide United Methodist Church in San Francisco's drug-plagued Tenderloin district, has worked with crack users and said the panel's findings confirmed his observations.

"Women are the prime recipients of crack cocaine," said Williams, who was not connected with the report. "It heightens sexual intensity. It gives sick people a feeling of being completely free."

The blood supply is safer than ever, said Cladd Stevens of the New York Blood Center. She said infections from AIDS-contaminated blood are occurring at the rate of one for every 50,000 to 250,000 units of blood transfused.

Some 4 million Americans get blood transfusions each year.

Amendment proponents push to delay flag vote

By Steve Komarow
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A House Republican accused Speaker Thomas Foley on Wednesday of "kowtowing to ilk like the Communist Youth Brigade" by refusing to delay until next week Thursday's showdown vote on a constitutional amendment to prohibit flag-burning.

Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., later apologized for the remark and it was struck from the record. But the exchange reflected the general bitterness and tension over the issue on the eve of the vote. Both opponents and proponents of the amendment said the proposal likely would not muster the necessary two-thirds margin.

Supporters of the amendment, who since last year had been pushing Foley to allow the vote, sought a delay to give veterans' groups more time to organize a mass mail campaign in the amendment's favor. They also wanted the showdown to come closer to the Fourth of July.

Republicans meanwhile pressed the White House to get President George Bush to do more private, one-on-one lobbying on behalf of the measure, which he has repeatedly endorsed publicly.

The Supreme Court a year ago ruled that flag-burning was protected by the constitutional guarantee of free speech. It reaffirmed that decision last week in rejecting a congressional attempt to overrule the earlier ruling without resorting to changing the Constitution.

"We fail to see why it is so necessary to rush this legislation to a vote on Thursday," complained Walter Hogan, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Foley, D-Wash., an outspoken opponent of the amendment, said "This bill has been before the Congress for over a year. It has been debated and discussed as much as any other legislative proposal in this Congress. I don't understand why that is a problem."

Foley also cited a comment by Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., the House Minority Whip, who said for a Republican campaigner the best outcome might be to lose by one vote. That would keep the flag issue alive and more relevant in individual races.

"All this talk about being concerned about the flag — they are concerned, apparently, about the political issue and the political opportunities," Foley said. "I don't think the American people are going to respond favorably to that."

But Solomon, in a speech on the House floor, said Foley and the Democratic leadership were "deliberately gagging 10 million veterans through this nation" at the same time they were "kowtowing to ilk like the Communist Youth Brigade to allow them to trample and desecrate the American Flag."

5 men rob grave, use body to enhance fantasy game

The Associated Press

LAKE CITY, Fla. — Five men have been charged with robbing a grave and using the body of a suicide victim as the centerpiece for a black-robed ceremony in a fantasy game of Dungeons and Dragons.

The men were arrested Monday and Tuesday and charged with stealing the body of 20-year-old Steven Glen Morgan, Columbia County Sheriff Tom Tramel said. Morgan's body, missing one leg, was found last month in a wooded area in adjacent Union County.

Morgan's mother later found the leg propped against a tree in the same woods, authorities said.

Tramel said investigators do not think the leg was intentionally separated from the body.

Tramel said the five gathered frequently to play Dungeons and Dragons, a fantasy game in which players pretend to be characters with great strength or magical powers.

"We believe that the motive was due to their involvement with Dungeons and Dragons, which they have been involved in for quite some time and that became very serious," Tramel said.

Dungeons and Dragons was developed as a board game in 1973 and became popular in the early 1980s. Detractors say the way the game is sometimes played is dangerous because it can blur distinctions between fantasy and reality.

Morgan's mother, Dorothy Morgan, said Tuesday that one of those arrested had called her to say her son's body had been taken to a house near Lake City where about 30 to 40 people dressed in black robes held a ceremony. She did not identify the caller.

"At one point, he called me and told me to keep my mouth shut because Glen belonged to them now," she said.

"God will see that they will pay," she said.

Iliescu pledges freedom for Romanians

By George Jahn
The Associated Press

BUCHAREST, Romania—Former Communist Ion Iliescu pledged Wednesday to be a democratic president of reconciliation, but the United States boycotted his inauguration to protest his role in violent attacks on opposition figures.

The capital was generally quiet following a tumultuous week of anti-government riots, mob rule by loyalist miners and a crackdown on dissent.

"This is the happiest day of my life," Iliescu told reporters before swearing "faithfulness to the Romanian people and to their ideals of freedom and prosperity."

He pledged "to defend democracy (and) ... fundamental human rights and freedoms."

"I shall firmly militate for the safeguarding of civic liberties ... on our way to a genuinely free and democratic society," Iliescu said, pledging to be a "president ... of reconciliation."

Pro-Iliescu supporters cheered him when he emerged from the downtown fin-de-siecle Athenaeum music hall after his inauguration.

Iliescu's inauguration came one week to the day after riot police brutally dispersed a 53-day rally of his opponents demanding that he and other former Communists be banned from politics for 10 years.

Rioters subsequently assaulted and fire bombed government buildings, and thousands of club-wielding miners from Transylvania descended on the capital in response to an appeal by Iliescu, attacking opposition politicians and anyone deemed a government critic.

Numerous countries and international human rights groups condemned the violence and its links to the National Salvation Front-dominated government. Some governments have suspended non-humanitarian aid.

Petre Roman, who was formally appointed prime minister by Iliescu after serving as interim premier since December, tried to ease foreign concerns.

He told state radio, "We want to prove to the international community that our way to a true democracy is irreversible."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said human rights violations in Romania are continuing. He said Romania has arrested 45 opposition figures in the past two days, and said the administration believes the purpose is to intimidate Romanians from exercising their rights.

Missing German artwork believed to be in Texas

By Deborah Seward
The Associated Press

QUEDLINBURG, East Germany—The Rev. Friedemann Gossiau said his heart soared when he heard that medieval artworks belonging to his church are believed to be in a Texas bank.

He has complete faith that the priceless objects, which disappeared in 1945 at the end of World War II, will be found and restored to his 500-member parish and Quedlinburg's 12th-century cathedral.

"We must defend the interests of the church. When the pieces are here again, we will show them, but this time we'll need help with security," Gossiau said with a smile.

The treasures, among Germany's most famous artworks, are the subject of an international struggle. The Lutheran church in Quedlinburg has filed suit in Texas to try to recover a collection that includes a silver, ivory and gold reliquary from the 9th or 10th century, a 10th-century Byzantine rock-crystal flask with sides shaped like birds, and an ivory comb inlaid with precious stones.

It is believed the works were taken to Whitewright, Texas, by the late Joe Meador, a former Army lieutenant who served in Quedlinburg in 1945.

During the war, the objects were removed from the Romanesque cathedral to a mine shaft to keep them safe from Allied bombing. They disappeared in 1945.

Gossiau came to Quedlinburg 25 years ago and learned about the missing works by studying cathedral archives.

"I thought maybe we'd find traces and then convince the people to give the pieces back peacefully. I dreamed of it, but I never counted on it," Gossiau said in an interview in his home.

The Lutheran minister said it was always thought the missing pieces could have been taken by ordinary Germans during the chaotic end of the Third Reich, by Nazi SS forces who seized the cathedral at the start of the war or by the American soldiers who occupied the town.

Then in May there was news that a private West German foundation that searches for stolen artworks had recovered a 9th-century illuminated manuscript of the Four Gospels.

"We had no idea where it was. It's fantastic news and I'm sure it comes from the church because it is described in the inventory," Gossiau said.

A second illuminated manuscript also noted in church archives was recovered in June. Full details of how those works were recovered have not been made public, and they have not been returned to the church.

A federal judge Tuesday ordered the First National Bank of White-wright to open its vault for inventory by the cathedral.

"We were proud of what we have, and about what we didn't have anymore," Gossiau said. "The cathedral treasure is small, but it is exquisite."

He would like any pieces found in Texas to join the rest of the treasure that is kept in glass cases in the cool stone vault constructed in the Middle Ages to hold the priceless objects.

The part of the collection still in Quedlinburg is a dazzling display that includes a Syrian vase brought back by crusaders, a 4th-century translation of the Bible and a 13th-century gem-encrusted illuminated manuscript.

In the Middle Ages, the vault guard was a nun trained to watch over the works, which were used in services that the royal family attended.

Tourists taking the cathedral's guided tour are allowed to look at the treasure vault, a small room with tiny windows at the top of a staircase on the edge of the nave.

During a tour this week, the guide did not mention the lost treasures. Nor were they mentioned in the small guidebook to the church.

The town had no chance to seek recovery of the lost valuables once it became part of East Germany in 1949.

Kentucky firm keeps Miami in compliance with NCAA

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP)—The University of Miami, seeking to minimize the risk of NCAA violations, pays a Kansas City law firm about $50,000 a year to monitor and investigate its athletic program.

The practice is not unique but, because of the cost, it is unusual. The NCAA and certain conferences offer similar services for free, but Miami prefers to pay for a more comprehensive, personalized study of its program, Athletic Director Sam Jankovich said.

Led by former NCAA investigators Mike Slive and Mike Glazier, both considered experts in compliance, members of the law firm of Linde Thomson Langworthy Kohn and Van Dyke make unannounced visits to Miami every year. They spend 200 to 300 hours investigating normally private financial records and interviewing players, coaches and administrators, The Miami Herald reported.

Slive said. "Cooperation is full and complete. We talk to whoever we want to and we look at anything we want to."

For the supplement to its in-house compliance program, the university has paid the law firm about $200,000 over the past four years.

"You are just better off with it," Jankovich said. "You have to take every step possible to ensure that you are making every effort to abide by the rules."

It is unknown how many NCAA Division I schools use outside monitoring firms. NCAA officials and athletic directors estimate as few as five or as many as 20.

Most athletic programs cited for major rules violations in the 1980s did not have such a system in place when they were busted. That includes Kentucky, Clemson, North Carolina State, Southern Methodist, Maryland, Illinois and Oklahoma State.

SMU and Oklahoma State did not even hire a full-time director of compliance until after they were under NCAA investigation. North Carolina State still has ticket manager John Shafer handling compliance duties until a full-time person is hired, and Illinois has only a part-time director.

"Miami is probably far more advanced than most other schools," Notre Dame compliance director Missy Conboy said. "Miami is at the point where they can determine just about everything that is happening in their program. They've made an incredible commitment to making sure they are free of violation."

Notre Dame will have Linde Thomson give seminars on campus next year, but will not be fully audited because of the expense.

Slive and Miami officials declined to say whether the Hurricanes have been guilty of minor or inadvertent violations. But Slive said Miami has every reason to be pleased with its athletic program in terms of the compliance audits.

U.S. soccer players content despite 0-3 World Cup record

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

TIRRENIA, Italy — By 9 o'clock Wednesday morning, 15 of the 22 players on the United States World Cup team had left camp.

Their views of what happened and why varied. The U.S. did as most people expected, losing three straight in America's first World Cup appearance since 1950. The Americans were outscored 8-2 and never came close to taking a lead. Still, they felt they did their best.

"Unfortunately we didn't win," goalkeeper Tony Meola said. "But I think we proved to ourselves and we proved to a lot of people that we belonged here."

Meola was one of the players who stayed to relax a day. By afternoon he was on the beach by the Ligurian Sea, drinking beers with teammates, playing paddleball with the Italian girls and soaking up some sun.

For the first time in a while, players could relax. Even with few expectations from the American public, they had felt pressure.

"We are going to have to take a long, hard look at what it's going to take to get to the next level," said Bruce Murray, who scored the U.S. goal in Tuesday night's 2-1 loss to Austria.

Murray, like most players, had wanted more. "The first game for us was a very embarrassing game," he said of the 5-1 loss to Czechoslovakia. "We felt we gave it our all but we got hammered, and it was difficult to deal with."

Back at the training camp a few miles down the road, Coach Bob Gansler sat back on his bed, looking a bit drained. It was too soon for him to evaluate things. So much had happened so quickly.

"You don't want to say it's inevitable, but in a way it was," the coach said. He thought back 10 days, to the game against the Czechoslovaks. The Americans held on for 20 minutes and then everything went wrong.

"The confidence was lacking," Gansler said. "There was too much doubt that entered into our minds and, consequently, into our game. The first game was a hard lesson, but it was something we had to go through."

The high point was a 1-0 loss to Italy in Olympic Stadium. The Americans played their best and came close.

The final two games were one-goal losses, but the Americans did very little other than counterattack. The team, despite many months of practice, could not attack all-out when it needed to. It did not have the talent.

"You have to find ways to win," Gansler said. "I'm very cognizant of the fact that everyone likes attractive soccer. But you also need success and you have to give players the feeling they can succeed."

NATHAN'S
NOTEBOOKBy Dan
NathanBaseball in Chicago — not what it used to be

The winds of baseball change are blowing mightily in Chicago.

A year ago the north side Cubs enjoyed the top spot in the National League East, and the south side White Sox occupied the cellar of the American League West.

This season, however, no matter how improbable it may seem, the White Sox — with the second-best record in the AL, just four games behind Oakland — are Chicago's winning team, while the ever-popular Cubs are mired in last place in the NL East.

The Cubs' demise is surprising when you compare their 1990 offensive performance to that of last season. At this point last year, the Cubs were hitting .251, the 4th best average in the NL, and were averaging nearly four runs per game.

Surprisingly this year, despite their disappointing record, the Cubs' offense has improved — hitting .273 (3rd in the NL) and averaging nearly 4.5 runs per game.

Moreover, the Cubs field much the same defensive squad as last year's division-winning team. In fact, the north siders field the strongest team in the NL up the middle with second baseman Ryne Sandberg, shortstop Shawon Dunston and center fielder Jerome Walton.

The reason, in large part, the Cubs have floundered is pitching — or lack thereof. Last year the Cubs' ERA was a respectable 3.27, 6th best in the NL, while north side pitchers gave up an average of less than eight hits a game. They not only had solid starting pitching, but their relief pitching was consistent and often brilliant.

To put it bluntly, this season Cub pitching has stunk up the Friendly Confines. So far this year, the Cubs' ERA is an abysmal 4.79 (2nd worst in the NL), while Cub pitchers are giving up an average of over nine hits a game.

Furthermore, walks are up while strikeouts and saves are down. To paraphrase Bob Dylan, undoubtedly a closet baseball fan, the reason, my friends, the Cubs are in last place is being safely lined through the wind.

Injuries are largely responsible for the Cubs' pitching woes, as both Rick Sutcliffe and Mike Harkey have spent substantial time on the disabled list. But Mitch Williams' ineffectiveness has also been particularly harmful.

Pitching is also the principle reason for the White Sox's surprising ascension. For instance, last season at this time the White Sox, at 5.02, had the worst ERA in the AL and gave up an average of over nine hits per game.

This season, however, the White Sox miraculously have the AL's second-best ERA (3.01) and are giving up an average of slightly less than seven hits a game. In direct contrast to the Cubs, the White Sox pitching staff has increased its strikeouts and saves and decreased its walks.

The largely unheralded members of the White Sox pitching staff who have sparked this transformation are closer Bobby Thigpen (1.71 ERA, 21 saves), middle reliever Barry Jones (7-1, 1.80 ERA) and rookie Scott Radinsky (5-0, 2.49 ERA).

In fact, the White Sox so effectively share the pitching chores that they lead the AL in pitching appearances with 155.

Yet much of the White Sox's early success must also be attributed to their improved defense. Like last year's surprising Baltimore Orioles, this season's White Sox have improved team speed and have markedly decreased their errors.

Led by shortstop Ozzie Guillen, who is having an MVP-caliber year, and catcher Carlton Fisk, a 21-year veteran, the White Sox are solid throughout the infield. The outfield, too, is tough defensively, led by right fielder Sammy Sosa and center fielder Lamar Johnson.

Riley to host NBA on NBC

By Rick Warner
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Life of Riley is returning to television next season. No, not the old series starring William Bendix. This time, the star will be Pat Riley and the subject will be pro basketball.

NBC announced Wednesday that the former Los Angeles Lakers coach will host the network's first year of NBA coverage next season. The announcement wasn't a surprise, but the role was.

Riley, who resigned last week after leading the Lakers to four NBA titles, was expected to join NBC as a commentator. Instead, he will anchor the network's pregame, halftime and postgame shows during the regular season and playoffs.

"Coaching the Lakers for nine years was a great challenge. Now I'm ready for a new challenge at NBC," Riley said at a news conference attended by NBC Sports executives and NBA commissioner David Stern.

"This season, I was coach of the year in the NBA. Next season, I hope to be rookie of the year for NBC."

Terms of Riley's multi-year contract weren't disclosed, but sources said he will be paid about $400,000 per year.

Bob Costas and Marv Albert will share play-by-play duties, but NBC has yet to name its NBA commentators.

NBC wants to hire Detroit Pistons coach Chuck Daly, but he hasn't decided whether to leave coaching for television.

"We hope to have an answer by next week," said Dick Ebersol, president of NBC Sports.

Last November, NBC took the NBA away from CBS with a four-year, $600 million deal. On Wednesday, the network grabbed Riley away from a life of leisure in southern California.

During his "Showtime" years with the Lakers, Riley was known as much for his classy wardrobe as for his classy teams.

"Do you know the most intimidating thing in sports today?" NBC executive producer Terry O'Neil joked. "It's dressing for a press conference with Pat Riley."

But O'Neil said Riley's looks weren't the main attraction.

"He has two very important traits — likeability and honesty," O'Neil said. "He has no formal training in journalism, but he has a reverence for the truth."

Riley, who was a Lakers' broadcaster for two years before becoming an assistant coach, is confident he can make the transition from the bench to the studio.

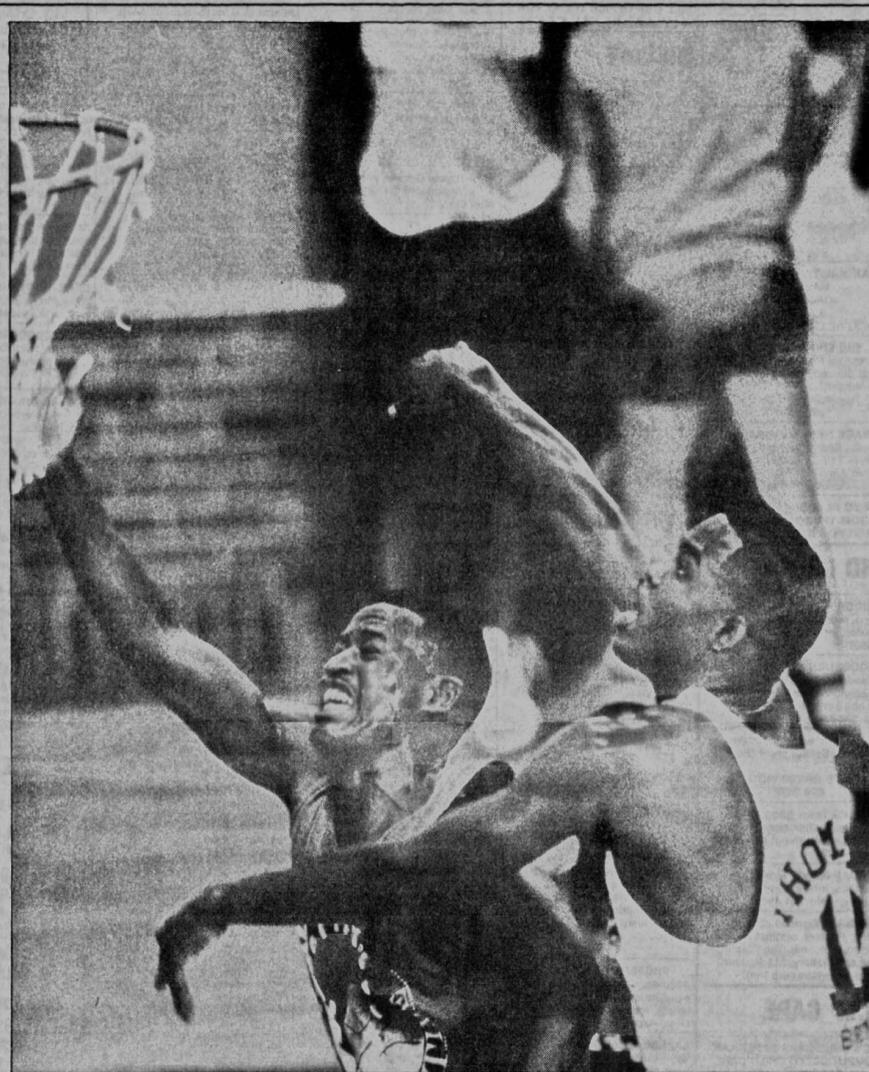

"When you coach in LA, you get used to being on television," he said. "I feel very comfortable in a studio setting."

Despite his friendships in the NBA, Riley said he won't shy away from tough issues.

"I've been around the league a long time, and I have a pretty good idea of what goes on there," he said. "If there's a story worth telling, we're going to tell it."

SWC heads discuss league expansionBy Jack Keever
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — In a key meeting Wednesday, Southwest Conference officials discussed expanding the league and revising sports schedules so that every member might not play each other in all sports.

The discussion came in the wake of Arkansas athletic director Frank Broyles' comments that the Razorbacks are considering severing their 76-year association with the SWC to join the Southeastern Conference.

SWC president James Vick emphasized that the 3½-hour discussion by the SWC executive committee was much broader than whether the league could survive without the Razorbacks.

"I think everyone is concerned about what the conference will look like in five or 10 years, so we're not just talking right now about whether Arkansas is going to change conferences," Vick said.

There is speculation that conference powers Texas and Texas A&M might also be lured away by the SEC. And then there's Texas Christian, a private school that joined the SWC in 1923, which wants Texas and Texas A&M to declare its intentions so it can plot its own future.

A Texas Tech official said the Red Raiders are considering options such as moving to the Big Eight or Western Athletic Conference, if Arkansas should leave.

There's more.

Some reports said that Big Eight power Oklahoma, a charter SWC member which left in 1920, might be a logical choice to replace Arkansas. Another suggestion that surfaced at the College Football Association meeting in Dallas earlier this month was the formation of a Big Southwest Conference — combining the SWC and Big Eight — according to Vick, faculty representative at Texas.

"Part of the problem is to make sure that we keep the whole conference strong and not just increase one team's share or one school's share" of television or gate receipts, Vick told a news conference.

"I wouldn't rule out the possibility of expanding the conference, because I think that's the sense of what's going on around the country."

But he added, "It's not clear that adding one team, adding three teams, combining conferences — it's not clear that any one of those options really benefits the conference."

Asked if SWC member schools were "ticked off" at Arkansas for thinking of pulling out, Vick said, "I don't think anybody really blames Arkansas for looking at the options. I think they may question whether it would be a wise decision for Arkansas to change conferences."

"Everyone is concerned about what Arkansas might do, so I would say everyone wants to try to keep Arkansas in the league. But I don't really sense panic or over-reaction to what has been in the press," Vick said.

Vick declined to discuss possible additions to the SWC, such as Oklahoma, but he said: "You can assume that we talked about possible additions to the conference whether Arkansas stays or Arkansas decides to leave, and that's an issue that we will want to explore."

As for Texas and Texas A&M leaving, Vick said prior to the meeting, "There's always conversation going on. There are rumors. There haven't been any formal contacts."

Finals MVP 'hurt' by gambling rumors

By Bert Rosenthal
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Isiah Thomas, the most valuable player in the NBA championship series, said Wednesday he was deeply disturbed by reports that he was involved in an FBI gambling probe.

"It hurt," he said at a ceremony in a midtown hotel, where he was presented with the MVP trophy and a new car. "I can't say it didn't affect me at all."

Thomas' name became involved in the investigation when Mark Aguirre, his Detroit Pistons' teammate, met with a former FBI agent to express concern about his long-time friend's association with gamblers, according to sources at a Detroit television station and Detroit area newspapers.

"I asked Mark about it," Thomas said. "He said he didn't have anything to do with it. When I talked with the FBI, they said they hadn't talked with Mark and they said Mark hadn't talked with them."

"As long as the government said I wasn't the focus, I don't think there are any more questions to be answered."

Reports last week — just two days after Thomas and the Pistons had beaten the Portland Trail Blazers in the NBA Finals — said a grand jury had subpoenaed checks totaling at least $100,000 that Thomas cashed at a grocery store owned by a friend, Imad Denha.

The sources said authorities had linked Denha to Henry Allen Hill, the central figure in the gambling investigation. Federal authorities consider Hill to be Michigan's largest bookmaker, and Denha is a suspected money launderer.

The reports also said Thomas ran high-stakes dice games at his home.

Sox down Angels 2-1 on Sosa homer

CHICAGO (AP) — Sammy Sosa's fifth-inning home run enabled the Chicago White Sox to beat the California Angels and Mark Langston 2-1 Wednesday night and break a five-game losing streak.

Winner Barry Jones (8-1) relieved Greg Hibbard in the fifth and escaped a bases-loaded jam. He blanked the Angels over the next two innings and Bobby Thigpen pitched the final two innings for his 22nd save, striking out four.

Langston (4-7) lost for the fourth time in his last five decisions despite striking out 10.

Mets 6, Cardinals 3
NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets used their winning formula — good pitching and home runs — to beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-3 Wednesday for their 10th victory in 12 games.

Kevin McReynolds' three-run homer keyed a four-run first inning as the Mets moved within four games of first-place Pittsburgh in the National League East.

Padres 4, Giants 3
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pinch-hitter Shawn Abner doubled home Mike Pagliarulo in the 11th inning as San Diego beat San Francisco for the second straight day.

Pagliarulo led off the inning with a triple off Steve Bedrosian (3-4). Abner then doubled off the glove of right fielder Rick Parker to score Pagliarulo.

Phillies 7, Pirates 2
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Len Dykstra, the major leagues' leading batter, raised his average to .384 with two hits, and scored three times as Philadelphia beat Pittsburgh.

Dykstra was 2-for-3, with two walks and two stolen bases, as the Phillies handed the National League East Division-leading Pirates their third straight loss.

Athletics 12, Tigers 7
DETROIT (AP) — Oakland's Bob Welch won his eighth consecutive game and Terry Steinbach had six RBIs with a grand slam and a single Wednesday as the Athletics beat the Detroit Tigers 12-7 to avoid their first sweep of the season.

The loss cost the Tigers a chance to reach .500 for the first time since the end of the 1988 season. Detroit hasn't swept a three-game series from Oakland since 1984.

Yankees 5, Brewers 4

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Roberto Kelly homered off reliever Chuck Crim (2-3) with two outs in the ninth inning for New York, which handed Milwaukee its 20th loss in 28 games.

Lee Guetterman (4-2) entered the game in the eighth for the Yankees, who trailed 4-2 after seven against Dennis Powell. He had limited New York to six singles through seven innings while trying to win his first game in more than a year.

Expos 3, Cubs 2
MONTREAL (AP) — Pinch-hitter Wallace Johnson's RBI single keyed a seventh-inning rally as the Montreal Expos scored three unearned runs against Greg Maddux to beat the Chicago Cubs 3-2 on Wednesday night.

The Expos were held to three hits by Maddux (4-8) over the first 6½ innings. Larry Walker then struck out for what would have been the final out of the inning, but the ball got past catcher Joe Girardi, allowing Walker to go all the way to second on the passed ball.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — The Alabama country club playing host to the 1990 PGA Championship excludes blacks from membership and should not receive any municipal money, a city councilman said.

Citing an anti-discrimination resolution adopted 10 years ago, Councilman William Bell said

Tuesday that the city should pull its advertising dollars from the golf tournament, which will be held in August at Shoal Creek Country Club.

Mayor Richard Arrington, the city's first black mayor, authorized the purchase of an advertisement in the PGA's tournament program jointly with Jefferson County, the Metropolitan Development Board and the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce.

Each are contributing about $1,500 for the advertisement, but Bell said a decade-old council resolution advises that city funds should not be used for any clubs that refuse membership to blacks.

Arrington said he drew a distinction between the PGA and Shoal Creek when he authorized the advertisements.
