"Most scientists care deeply and are employing all of their energy and resources to help us to achieve the goals as the activists are trying to accomplish," he said.

During the five-day meeting, the activists group AIDS 2000 held two demonstrations outside the Museum of American History yesterday. midnight's Occupation of Gay Liberation and the Freedom Day. The event was expected to attract thousands of demonstrators. Activists have persuaded federal regulations to allow people infected with HIV to take experimental AIDS drugs and even before they are formally approved for use in their treatment.

However, he noted that many activists are extremely well-informed about the technical details of AIDS experiments, and scientists do not dismiss them as simple people. Activists are often interpreted as the enemy in the way that we design our scientific approaches, he said. "We must join together to make sure that AIDS do not care about science."

Development/public health job first of its kind in Guinea

By Susan Stapleton

The Daily Iowan

Adam Brough is about to take on the "longest job he'll ever love." In September, he begins his first-year assignment in Guinea, West Africa, with the Peace Corps, working on community development and public health projects. In doing so, he will be the first American to serve in Guinea, the 22-year-old Iowa City resident is determined to make the program work in a part of the world that has been the site of all of the other challenges in the Peace Corps.

"The best way I can think of is to learn to live in the country where there's no running water or plumbing," Brough said, "and we'll be working along with the neighbors."

Road to Peace Corps often paved with misconceptions

By Susan Stapleton

Special to the Daily Iowan

Joining the Peace Corps is no easy feat for many people. Brough, however, is just one of the luckier ones who was chosen to represent Iowa in a Peace Corps program.

"It's a very long process. Usually it takes between six to nine months," he said. "I think you need a lot of patience."

Brough's summer in the Peace Corps didn't involve any teaching. He spent his summer in Bangkok, Thailand. Later he returned to finish his dissertation in Thailand and to plan his return with his family this August.

Brough's first stop on his way to Guinea is Senegal. There he will take part in a two-week intensive language training program necessary for the country.

"Guinea is a French-speaking country, so I've been taking an intensive course in French," Brough said. "I think the two weeks will help me to understand the tribal language."

McNabb feels that the Peace Corps only has a good job training volunteers before they enter their assigned countries. He said he spent six weeks in Tunisia together with the Peace Corps before he went on to the countries.

"I think they've made great progress. I feel well prepared," Brough said. "I went to the reversed situation when I returned. I realized the wealth of the country."

Brough added. Also, he knew more about the country before he went there.

Brough learned English as a second language at Blough began his college career at University of Iowa and had a full scholarship to attend college.

"I have to say that I've done more than I could have ever imagined," Brough said. "I have a desire to learn about new cultures and new ways of living."

"I don't have a desire to learn about new cultures and new ways of living," Spevak said. "I have a desire to learn about new cultures and new ways of living."

Employment opportunities, offers plummet nationwide for graduating college seniors

By Julie Crawford

The Daily Iowan

Forget the papers. Forget the form. If you thought that was the difficult part of finding a job, you were wrong.

The hard part is finding a job after graduation.

Offers of employment for graduates are down. 13.3 percent nationwide, according to an annual study conducted at Michigan State University.

The study found that 36 percent of the seniors had found employment by May, with 38 percent of the class reporting an "uncertain" status, while 6 percent had opted for graduate school.

Last year's pre-graduation survey showed that 45 percent of the class had found employment.

Nancy Yanney, director of Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office, said her office would be holding "follow-ups" to see how many graduates found work.

"We know better in September than we do in January," she said.

"But we do know that the offers for jobs are slower coming in, and there are not as many multiple offers as there have been in the past," she added.

Yanney said that the number of companies interviewing on campus had decreased by 10-20 percent.

"Many of the big companies that used to hire a lot of people now are conservative in their hiring," she said.

But some large companies—such as Maytag—are not cutting back in their college recruiting efforts and are looking ahead to a drop of college graduates in the mid-90s.

"They believe that many graduates across the country are not going to accept any job offers," she said. "This year, they are making sure that their students are recruited by major employers in their field that will be successful in the job market."

PGA faa pas

The Professional Golfers' Association is under fire this week for scheduling the PGA tournament at Shoal Creek Country Club. The players are striking the club in exchange for membership. This exposure is most unwelcome to the PGA, but it appears to offer a possibility for the association to establish itself as an agent for social change. Unfortunately, nothing is happening in this regard.

The controversy began when Birmingham city council members took exception to the provision of advertising money to the players and commenced a campaign against the tournament. City hall prohibited the dissemination of funds to directory advertisers and directed favorable editorial coverage in the PGA, but when council members determined that Shoal Creek would not be included.

Sady, the PGA is waiting on the court system to further define discrimination rather than prudently pulling its weight about.

Equal protection is guaranteed under the U.S. Constitution. The Civil Rights Act provides further protection against discrimination in public accommodations. It is patently clear that the PGA has been and is being charged with discrimination in "public accommodations," where goods and services are offered to the public at large. Certain businesses, which are not affected by these restrictions, are exempted from those restrictions. Blanket discrimination is not an option.

So Shoal Creek is exercising a legal right in denying membership.

But in the same vein, so is the PGA within its rights in choosing the venue, which it has the absolute right to do. Obviously, it exercises this right. Patrick Reed of the PGA said the bylaws of Shoal Creek were examined for discrimination and were determined to be sound. But the club has 3 black members. Club spokesman Hall Thompson said, "That's just like the idea of discrimination.

Sady, the PGA is waiting on the court system to further define discrimination rather than prudently pulling its weight about. Pressure on Shoal Creek would surely increase if the state of $5 million boost to the 1990 schedule.

The PGA must take every measure to ensure equal opportunity in the tournaments. This can include a careful selection of tournament sites. And golf fans should avoid supporting the PGA tournament at Shoal Creek.

I must object to the way you edited my letter to the Viewpoints page. "Perfomers review," describes some people, not others.

You printed, for example, that "Professor Green was praised frequently, but he was praised all his own time ..." Assuming "performs" means frequently, that would mean that "Professor Green was praised all his own time..." Assuming "performs" means frequently, that would mean that his performing was frequently praised.

This is an inaccurate and unfair portrayal of Professor Green's work. Professor Green is a wonderful teacher and gives us very thoughtful and challenging lectures. The editors of the Viewpoints page should be careful with their words.

Misinformed letter

The Daily Iowan

I was very disappointed in the letter "Made in China: a new foreign policy" that appeared in the Viewpoints page. The writer did not do his research before writing the letter.

The letter states that China is not a threat to the United States. This is not the case. China is rapidly becoming a military and economic powerhouse.

China is also accused of human rights violations and mistreatment of its minorities. It is not appropriate to support such a country as a "new foreign policy." China must change its policies before we can consider it as a "new foreign policy."

Kim Painter

In the wake of the recent election, it is clear that the American people are demanding change. The election results indicate a desire for policies that address the mounting economic and social problems facing the country.

One such policy that has gained attention is the proposed immigration reform bill. This bill seeks to provide a path to legal status for millions of undocumented immigrants, who contribute significantly to the economy and society.

However, recent studies have shown that the bill would have a negative impact on the economy and the budget. In addition, it would provide a moral and ethical dilemma for law enforcement agencies.

It is important to consider the potential consequences of this policy before deciding to support it. The American people should demand policies that are in the best interest of the country and address the root causes of the issues at hand.

Pleasing all the people all the time

Jack Germond

The task of pleasing all the people all the time is a formidable one. It requires a careful balance of interests and perspectives. The goal is to find common ground and build consensus around policies and initiatives.

However, it is important to recognize that pleasing all the people all the time may not always be possible. Some policies may have unintended consequences or may be controversial. The key is to engage in an open and honest dialogue with all stakeholders and work towards finding solutions that are fair and just for all.

Casualty estimate expands in Iran

In a three-day span, at least 500 bodies were found in and around the Caspian Sea coast. Iran's official news agency, IRNA, said Monday, triggered by a sudden farther look for bodies that had been left in that part of the town, 2,400 bodies were found.

The death toll has risen to 4,000, but authorities are unable to provide a figure for the total number of people who were killed. The government has not announced any plans to release a new estimate.

Irvin follows his U.S. Open win with Buick victory

By Bob Green

The Associated Press

HARRISON, N.Y.--The former U.S. Open leader was all but two strokes behind his eventual champion when he turned in a five-under-par 30 on his way to a dominating win over Ken Green, who at 338-1543 was second.

Irvin, who had come from behind with a 6-foot birdie putt on the 15th hole, led Barber by a stroke to his second major win at the U.S. Open Championship.

He was on top of his game, hitting driver and fairway woods perfectly and making all his putts for a score of 66 and was third at 272. He was 12-under par with 13th hole and a bogey on the 14th.

Irvin was in the lead to just over 11 seconds after 27 strokes. Sullivan, meanwhile, was passed by the hard-charging Mario Andretti at the end of the main straightaway at the start of the 26th lap.

Michael probably would have won an ever greater margin had it not been for a caution flag that shortened the field. Andretti led pole-sitter Lance's Buick-powered Lola away out in the corner and at the end of the straightaway.

Irvin was unable to take advantage of the yellow, with Michael pulling off two or three laps before the win.

Hull, meanwhile, spent the last 10 minutes of the race in the lead and out in the corner and was led by a lap and once pulled hard enough to lead.

Andretti kept his pace to move into the third.
