Bush concedes inevitability of tax increases

By Teresa Heinz

WASHINGTON — President George Bush conceded Tuesday that tax increases must be part of any plan to deal with the budget deficit and promised to try to make the biggest reductions possible in Social Security and Medicare.

"You have to have some program that will stabilize our fiscal problems," he said. "That's why I believe that it is not going to be the case that the entire problem is going to be solved with a tax increase."

"But the reality is that tax increases will have to be a part of any permanent solution to our deficit," he added. "There is no other way to do it."

Bush said he was "not talking about huge increases in taxes," but rather about "moderate increases" that would be aimed at reducing the deficit.

"I do not like doing this," Bush said. "But in the long run this is a necessary evil."

Bush also said he would support a constitutional amendment that would require a supermajority vote in Congress to raise taxes.

"I think the supermajority is a good idea," he said. "It is a good idea because it means that we will have to live with our own mistakes."

The Associated Press

Washington City's Morning Newspaper

The Daily Iowan

Hot one

20 percent chance of storms. Sunny, with a high of 92.

WEDNESDAY

June 27, 1990

Volume 123 No. 13

Bush concedes inevitability of tax increases

By Teresa Heinz

WASHINGTON — President George Bush conceded Tuesday that tax increases must be part of any plan to deal with the budget deficit and promised to try to make the biggest reductions possible in Social Security and Medicare.

"You have to have some program that will stabilize our fiscal problems," he said. "That's why I believe that it is not going to be the case that the entire problem is going to be solved with a tax increase."

"But the reality is that tax increases will have to be a part of any permanent solution to our deficit," he added. "There is no other way to do it."

Bush said he was "not talking about huge increases in taxes," but rather about "moderate increases" that would be aimed at reducing the deficit.

"I do not like doing this," Bush said. "But in the long run this is a necessary evil."

Bush also said he would support a constitutional amendment that would require a supermajority vote in Congress to raise taxes.

"I think the supermajority is a good idea," he said. "It is a good idea because it means that we will have to live with our own mistakes."

The Associated Press

Washington City's Morning Newspaper

The Daily Iowan

Hot one

20 percent chance of storms. Sunny, with a high of 92.

WEDNESDAY

June 27, 1990

Volume 123 No. 13

Bush concedes inevitability of tax increases

By Teresa Heinz

WASHINGTON — President George Bush conceded Tuesday that tax increases must be part of any plan to deal with the budget deficit and promised to try to make the biggest reductions possible in Social Security and Medicare.

"You have to have some program that will stabilize our fiscal problems," he said. "That's why I believe that it is not going to be the case that the entire problem is going to be solved with a tax increase."

"But the reality is that tax increases will have to be a part of any permanent solution to our deficit," he added. "There is no other way to do it."

Bush said he was "not talking about huge increases in taxes," but rather about "moderate increases" that would be aimed at reducing the deficit.

"I do not like doing this," Bush said. "But in the long run this is a necessary evil."

Bush also said he would support a constitutional amendment that would require a supermajority vote in Congress to raise taxes.

"I think the supermajority is a good idea," he said. "It is a good idea because it means that we will have to live with our own mistakes."

The Associated Press

Washington City's Morning Newspaper

The Daily Iowan

Hot one

20 percent chance of storms. Sunny, with a high of 92.

WEDNESDAY

June 27, 1990

Volume 123 No. 13

Bush concedes inevitability of tax increases

By Teresa Heinz

WASHINGTON — President George Bush conceded Tuesday that tax increases must be part of any plan to deal with the budget deficit and promised to try to make the biggest reductions possible in Social Security and Medicare.

"You have to have some program that will stabilize our fiscal problems," he said. "That's why I believe that it is not going to be the case that the entire problem is going to be solved with a tax increase."

"But the reality is that tax increases will have to be a part of any permanent solution to our deficit," he added. "There is no other way to do it."

Bush said he was "not talking about huge increases in taxes," but rather about "moderate increases" that would be aimed at reducing the deficit.

"I do not like doing this," Bush said. "But in the long run this is a necessary evil."

Bush also said he would support a constitutional amendment that would require a supermajority vote in Congress to raise taxes.

"I think the supermajority is a good idea," he said. "It is a good idea because it means that we will have to live with our own mistakes."

The Associated Press

Washington City's Morning Newspaper

The Daily Iowan

Hot one

20 percent chance of storms. Sunny, with a high of 92.

WEDNESDAY

June 27, 1990

Volume 123 No. 13

Bush concedes inevitability of tax increases

By Teresa Heinz

WASHINGTON — President George Bush conceded Tuesday that tax increases must be part of any plan to deal with the budget deficit and promised to try to make the biggest reductions possible in Social Security and Medicare.

"You have to have some program that will stabilize our fiscal problems," he said. "That's why I believe that it is not going to be the case that the entire problem is going to be solved with a tax increase."

"But the reality is that tax increases will have to be a part of any permanent solution to our deficit," he added. "There is no other way to do it."

Bush said he was "not talking about huge increases in taxes," but rather about "moderate increases" that would be aimed at reducing the deficit.

"I do not like doing this," Bush said. "But in the long run this is a necessary evil."

Bush also said he would support a constitutional amendment that would require a supermajority vote in Congress to raise taxes.

"I think the supermajority is a good idea," he said. "It is a good idea because it means that we will have to live with our own mistakes."

The Associated Press

Washington City's Morning Newspaper

The Daily Iowan

Hot one

20 percent chance of storms. Sunny, with a high of 92.

WEDNESDAY

June 27, 1990

Volume 123 No. 13

Bush concedes inevitability of tax increases

By Teresa Heinz

WASHINGTON — President George Bush conceded Tuesday that tax increases must be part of any plan to deal with the budget deficit and promised to try to make the biggest reductions possible in Social Security and Medicare.

"You have to have some program that will stabilize our fiscal problems," he said. "That's why I believe that it is not going to be the case that the entire problem is going to be solved with a tax increase."

"But the reality is that tax increases will have to be a part of any permanent solution to our deficit," he added. "There is no other way to do it."

Bush said he was "not talking about huge increases in taxes," but rather about "moderate increases" that would be aimed at reducing the deficit.

"I do not like doing this," Bush said. "But in the long run this is a necessary evil."

Bush also said he would support a constitutional amendment that would require a supermajority vote in Congress to raise taxes.

"I think the supermajority is a good idea," he said. "It is a good idea because it means that we will have to live with our own mistakes."

The Associated Press

Washington City's Morning Newspaper

The Daily Iowan

Hot one

20 percent chance of storms. Sunny, with a high of 92.

WEDNESDAY

June 27, 1990

Volume 123 No. 13

Bush concedes inevitability of tax increases

By Teresa Heinz

WASHINGTON — President George Bush conceded Tuesday that tax increases must be part of any plan to deal with the budget deficit and promised to try to make the biggest reductions possible in Social Security and Medicare.

"You have to have some program that will stabilize our fiscal problems," he said. "That's why I believe that it is not going to be the case that the entire problem is going to be solved with a tax increase."

"But the reality is that tax increases will have to be a part of any permanent solution to our deficit," he added. "There is no other way to do it."

Bush said he was "not talking about huge increases in taxes," but rather about "moderate increases" that would be aimed at reducing the deficit.

"I do not like doing this," Bush said. "But in the long run this is a necessary evil."

Bush also said he would support a constitutional amendment that would require a supermajority vote in Congress to raise taxes.

"I think the supermajority is a good idea," he said. "It is a good idea because it means that we will have to live with our own mistakes."

The Associated Press

Washington City's Morning Newspaper

The Daily Iowan

Hot one

20 percent chance of storms. Sunny, with a high of 92.

WEDNESDAY

June 27, 1990

Volume 123 No. 13

Bush concedes inevitability of tax increases

By Teresa Heinz

WASHINGTON — President George Bush conceded Tuesday that tax increases must be part of any plan to deal with the budget deficit and promised to try to make the biggest reductions possible in Social Security and Medicare.

"You have to have some program that will stabilize our fiscal problems," he said. "That's why I believe that it is not going to be the case that the entire problem is going to be solved with a tax increase."

"But the reality is that tax increases will have to be a part of any permanent solution to our deficit," he added. "There is no other way to do it."

Bush said he was "not talking about huge increases in taxes," but rather about "moderate increases" that would be aimed at reducing the deficit.

"I do not like doing this," Bush said. "But in the long run this is a necessary evil."

Bush also said he would support a constitutional amendment that would require a supermajority vote in Congress to raise taxes.

"I think the supermajority is a good idea," he said. "It is a good idea because it means that we will have to live with our own mistakes."

The Associated Press

Washington City's Morning Newspaper

The Daily Iowan

Hot one

20 percent chance of storms. Sunny, with a high of 92.
Budget tricks keep state going

The secret lies in knowing when to count what, experts say

Mike Glover

WRAC offers discussion groups, counseling

No TVA this summer

WRAC seeks volunteers

District 14

Courts

River City Dental Care

Jeff Berlin

Appeal rejection by state courts

The Associated Press

The Iowa City Gazette

IOWA CITY...

Jeff Berlin

Bass Guitar Clinic

See one of the world's foremost bass players in person!

• 1997-1998 "Best Bassist Ever" -- Guitar Player Magazine

• Endorsed by Gibson, Fender and bass player for The Ruts

• Recorded with Allan Holdsworth and Bill Bruford

WHEN: June 7 - July 7

LOCATION: West Music in Coralville, 1215 5th St.

Cost: $19.95 ADVANCE, $24 at the door

Limited seating, tickets available at West Music location.

Phone: 1-800-550-5000

608-339-5700

tmusic.com

River City Dental Care - General Dentistry

Stiles, D.D.S.

Gard Chalmers, D.D.S.

Mathew Rick D.D.S.

Office Hours:

Monday - Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Office: 1-800-550-5000

www.westmusic.com
UI College of Law celebrates 125th anniversary with pride

By Jenny Herm
Daily Iowan

The UI College of Law has come a long way since it opened its doors 125 years ago. The school has seen many changes over the years, including changes in the law itself, the statutes being written, and the world around them.

This year the school celebrates its 125th anniversary. "It's a milestone," said Minnette Doderer, assistant dean. "It's a great opportunity to reflect on where we've been and where we're going."

The college was founded in 1886, and it is the oldest in the state. It was named for Theophilus Lennox, an influential lawyer and state senator from Iowa City. The college offered its first classes in 1887 and has been educating lawyers ever since.

Doderer said the college has changed dramatically over the years. "We've gone from being a small, rural institution to being a national leader in terms of diversity among its students," she said.

The college's permanent location of the college, which in previous years was located in the building that now houses the UI International Center, opened in 1966. By the mid-'90s, the UI hopes to have one of the top five public law schools in the country.

Eighty percent of the school's students are from outside the state, and a significant number of them are from minority groups. The college also has a law library that is one of the largest in the country.

The college's strategic planning is the goal of Law strategic planning is the goal of the college's 125th year at the UI. The Boyd Foundation has given the college $8 million to help fund its 1991 budget, which will be used to enhance programs. The funds will also be used to support the college's academic programs.

Doderer said the college's 125th anniversary is a time to reflect on the school's past, present, and future. "We've come a long way since the days when it was the only law school in the state," she said. "But we're still committed to being the best law school we can be."
AIDS CONFERENCE
Part of the problem

The Sixth International Conference on AIDS closed in Tuesday afternoon in response to concerns among the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power (ACT UP) in New York. The conference was to be held in San Francisco throughout the week and the conference was called "to protest the injustices faced by people infected with HIV warrant fast-track legislation." Michael Lorenger, 335-5863.

Sunday's
However, the homosexuals' lifestyle, at least for their struggle. Science makes no promises about the cure for AIDS. Formerly gay and lesbian activists have become increasingly militant in recent years, arguing that the Reagan and Bush administrations have neglected AIDS research. They have repeatedly called for increased government funding and more rapid testing of possible cures. While some of their criticisms are warranted, members of ACT UP and similar organizations must remember that there is a battle requiring more tact and less noise.

The doubt acts of ACT UP on Sunday are sending a message to the heterosexual community — the wrong message. The AIDS crisis is the result of the failure of society to understand and to its own contradictions. AIDS are not the enemy. AIDS are the result of society's failure to understand and to acknowledge our own contradictions.

Sullivan says of the need for researchers and activists to work together. "The research is not 'context' if any animal abuse is confirmed, or "context" if any animal abuse is confirmed. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not a cure for AIDS. They are the result of society's failure to understand and to acknowledge our own contradictions.

Advocates will argue that they want action and not words. Advocates will argue that they want action and not words. The recent years, the Americans with Disabilities Act that would preclude those who want action and not words. As Sullivan points out, "The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality.

Michael Lorenger
Editor Page Editor

AIDS CONFERENCE
Contradiction

At the Sixth International Conference on AIDS in San Francisco last weekend, gay activists and "persons with AIDS" voiced their concerns about the way the government had handled the AIDS crisis. They repeated allegations that the Reagan and Bush administrations have neglected AIDS research. They have repeatedly called for increased government funding and more rapid testing of possible cures. While some of their criticisms are warranted, members of ACT UP and similar organizations must remember that there is a battle requiring more tact and less noise.

Sullivan says of the need for researchers and activists to work together. "The research is not 'context' if any animal abuse is confirmed, or "context" if any animal abuse is confirmed. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality.

Michael Lorenger
Editor Page Editor

Nelson Mandela has finally addressed the United States. After a 27-year imprisonment, he has come from brutal governmental abuses of power, jailhouses and mass arrests. Mandela has been quoted as saying during his time in prison that he was "a man with a distorted view of reality." The film "Milo and O'Shaughnessy" is a story about two animals that have been misled by their own ideologies and are on the edge of AIDS activists, but they, in their minds, refuse to listen to the words.

The deaths of Mandela have resulted from AIDS and the fear and uncertainty faced by people infected with HIV warrant fast-track legislation. "The research is not 'context' if any animal abuse is confirmed, or "context" if any animal abuse is confirmed. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality. The researchers must come up with basic understanding of their own problems. Films like 'Milo and O'Shaughnessy' are not the same as reality.

At this point in time, AIDS is necessarily fatal. That fact makes it seem plausible for the price of PWAs for greater funding. However, if gay activists are truly devastated by the inevitable deterioration and death that the virus brings to its victims — and they should be — they should not twist facts or immigration laws designed to prevent, or at least slow, the spread of AIDS in the United States.

Laws preventing the immigration of people with contagious diseases are necessary. Yet, the group of PWAs who argue that immigration laws prevent to prevent, or at least slow, the spread of AIDS in the United States. PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then it is a tragedy for the PWAs that are included in immigration laws.

PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then PWAs that are included in immigration laws.

PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then PWAs that are included in immigration laws.

PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then PWAs that are included in immigration laws.

PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then PWAs that are included in immigration laws.

PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then PWAs that are included in immigration laws.

PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then PWAs that are included in immigration laws.

PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then PWAs that are included in immigration laws.

PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then PWAs that are included in immigration laws.

PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then PWAs that are included in immigration laws.

PWAs and gay activists need to make up their minds. If AIDS is deadly enough to warrant more research funding than any other disease, then PWAs that are included in immigration laws.
Brandst's decision was questioned by a lawmaker from Des Moines who spoke against releasing names of rape victims.

Governor Terry Branstad was asked about the decision by Des Moines police to release names of rape victims. He said the governor was not working with the victims' rights advocates to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

Brandst's diluting effect was deplored by the governor. He said rape victims who feared their assailants might not report the crimes. He also said that the decision to release names of rape victims could be a significant problem.

Brandst was questioned at his regular news conference about a decision by Des Moines police to block releasing the names of rape victims. City Attorney Roger Nowak had advised police that they had no legal basis for releasing rape victims' names from police records.

Most news organizations do not include the names of victims in stories. "Don't think that there should be an indentifiable release of names and addresses," said Brandst. "We need to be very careful about protecting the victim of the crime, and I think rape victims certainly should have the right, as one rape victim has done, to go public and tell her story." Brandst said. "I don't think they should be required to do that."

Brandst said there is a "delicate balance" between victim's rights and the public's right to have access to information. "I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"I have real concerns about requiring the names and addresses of rape victims to be released," Brandst said. "I think that could be a significant problem for the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.

"The rights of the victims also need to be considered in the public's right to know about crimes and noteworthy activities that take place," Brandst said. The governor stated that he would be interested in working with the victims' rights groups to see that the rights of the victims are protected, while at the same time also respecting the right of the public to have access to information.
President calls new drilling until 2000
WASHINGTON—President George Bush on Tuesday blocked new oil and gas drilling on the coast of California, Florida, Washington, Oregon and New England until the year 2000. In addition, he permanently blocked and drilling on a proposed moratorium on new leases until 1996 for one section off southern California where drilling already is underway.

"My desire is to achieve a balance between the need to provide energy for the American people and the need to protect unique and sensitive coastal and marine environments," Bush said in a written statement announcing his long-expected decision.

The president called for more environmental studies to settle the question of whether he might be offered after 2000. The election-year ban "was likely to come as a relief to Republican legislators in both California and Florida, who were hoping to see the end of the moratorium on new leases until 1996 for one section off southern California where drilling already is underway.

Louisiana debates anti-abortion law
BATON ROUGE, La.—The Louisiana Senate on Tuesday refused to allow exceptions for rape and incest in a tough anti-abortion bill designed to overturn the U.S. Supreme Court's Roe v. Wade decision.

The bill, passed by the House last week, would make doctors who perform abortions in prison for 10 years of hard labor.

Because of a minority amendment clarifying that abortion would be allowed to save the life of the mother, however, the bill must go back to the House for another debate and vote. Then it would head to Gov. Buddy Roemer, who has promised to veto the bill in its present form.

At the debate begins, Sen. Mike Crisco, the sponsor of the bill, held up a 3-inch-long pink plastic model of a fetus. "This is what this bill is all about—whether or not these boys and girls are going to have a chance to live," he said.

Sen. Ron Landry, a Democrat, offered the amendment to allow exceptions for rape and incest. The Senate adjourned until 12:04 on one try and 12:05 on another. But no vote was taken on the amendment.

"I would ask any senators who claims that you want to go to the doctor who performs abortions and have him back up her claim. "How would you know? How would I know? How would anyone know?" asked Crisco.

"You are voting for abortion on demand. You are voting to kill the bill. You are voting to kill this child," Crisco said.

N. Dakota town honors Lawrence Welk
STRASBURG, N.D.—The farm where Lawrence Welk learned to play the accordion became center stage Tuesday for a project to create a museum honoring the king of champagne music.

Welk wrote "Looking in the future.

But put yourself in the girl's position. It's already a disastrous situation. No one could understand what this bill is..."
More than $10 million stolen during robbery of armored car

By Harry Appleman
The Associated Press

PHOENIX, N.Y. — Robbers wielding a shotgun unbanked $12.1 million from an armored car last night, the largest reported robbery from an armored car in U.S. history, authorities said.

The armored car was in use by the National Guard to transport money from the Forts South Armored Car Company in New York City. When the robbers spotted the armored car in the early morning hours, they kept its driver and guard where the money had been stolen.

They had an exact count on the amount.

Through an anonymous tip, Andrew Meloni said.

It was the highest low temperature record of 118 degrees that had been set in the United States on July 4, 1989.

It was also the warmest day of the year, with air temperatures ranging from 115 degrees in the southern part of the state to 109 degrees in the northern part.

The high temperatures were caused by a strong high-pressure system over the state, which pushed the air temperatures to record levels.

The FBI estimated it would take up to 2 hours for the money to be recovered.

In 1985, nearly $8 million was reported stolen by robbers in a similar incident. The money was from a jewelry store in New York City.

It was estimated that the robbers would have to be able to withstand temperatures of up to 115 degrees for at least 1 hour before the money could be recovered.

They stopped at a store nearby.

The largest reported robbery from a U.S. armored car company was in 1981, when $11 million was reported stolen from the Security Armored Car Company in New York City. However, the robbers in that incident were never caught.

In 1985, nearly $8 million was stolen from a bank in Manhattan, in 1986, robbers took $3 million from a jewelry store in North Carolina.

The robbers transferred the money to a bank in their vehicle and drove off, Ryan said.
Trump's campaign is being fueled by the idea that Donald Trump has always lived the lifestyle of the rich and famous, and will continue to do so if elected.

"Donald Trump has always lived the lifestyle of the rich and famous, and he will continue to do so if elected."

Rudin Leach

---

Freak car accident kills 1, injures 1

The Associated Press

NATL/CONF

A 33-year-old daughter, Diane Trump, was killed Monday when her foot slipped on a curb in a parking lot, apparently tripping herself.

The millionaire developer reportedly spent $450,000 a year in New York to work with his extra-salary allowance. The allowance is part of a deal with the New York City Council.

The car hit and killed Julia Trump, 12, then ran over a house, injuring the 12-year-old daughter of Donald Trump, who was in the car at the time.

The car had been left unattended in the driveway, and it is believed that the children were playing in the driveway.

Diane Trump was a 33-year-old daughter of Donald Trump, who is a man not used to making sacrifices.

A blend of想象中,
Steve RoRikoe Minne¿om, from," told one story of his seven years with the Boston Celtics. As he talks to the media at his home in West Germania, Groppi Polverli was at work in the World Cup at the time, just before the end of the season. He was always out in the rain, but now he said her daughter Yvonne was working in the World Cup.

"I mean, that's unbelievable," she said. "One of my friends was seriously telling me what the score was and everything. But I wasn't believed by too much. I was still concentrating on my game, but maybe I wouldn't have been bothered. Maybe it wouldn't have been noticed."

"Late in the second round with a 6-1, 6-2 victory."

Narrator's mind."

"I've had some contact with Bullington teams," Ballard said. "If I don't get drafted, there's a chance that I can play somewhere."

"Although I haven't been named as a star, Ballard and Jepsen said they're not able to get much help from their traveling teams."

"I had a good defense, and my work was good," Ballard said.

"Hopefully, the scenario remains the same for a good defense."

"If he isn't chosen by an NBA franchise, Ballard would play overseas."

"I've got a game down here," Ballard said after Sunday's Prince of Wales game. "I'll probably play in that."

"We're delighted with our new association with the Big Ten, said Mr. Jepsen. The stewards said he was promoting for the game, a hybrid rule judged Tuesday."

"It's certain a better situation for the team," Ballard said of District Judge A. David Mazzace. Certainly.

"It's nothing we're going to rely on at all." Ball could be Design option.

"DEER (AP) - The Denver Nuggets have put out a general manager after Saturday's draft, but team president Don't Smith did not rule out Denver Nuggets for the position when it is filled.

"Nuggets spokesman Jay Clark said the team has suspended the search last Friday when Georgetown coach John Thompson announced he had turned down the club's offer. Sadrach, speaking in general terms, said he has never had any interest in a front office position at that time."

"Iowa City 19 Sturges Blvd 351-7250"

"BEACH PARTY!"

Register Early For The Knee Volleyball Tournament.

Over $400 CASH & PRIZES!

ALSO

1/2 PRICE PIZZA

4-4:30 P.M.

$475 Pitchers

8 PM-Close

COME TO THE COOLEST BAR IN TOWN!
Athletes give views to NCAA commission

By Doug Tucker

CHICAGO — The first NCAA policy-making body for women found the views of student-athletes gets seen on Tuesday. The commission hopes to set an agenda and norms for what it stands for the newly-formed student-athlete advisory committee, which the first time in NCAA history that the power brokers of college sports had formally sought out the views of student-athletes.

Reducing time demands figures to be the major threat of the president's 1992 agenda. According to a new poll, 45% of student-athletes in a recent survey said they've had to cut back time demands for student-athletes.

"They're talking about across-the-board rules that say you can't spend more than 40 hours a week playing or practicing during the season," Groteke said. "And only eight hours a week in the off-season. And we tell them we're in sympathy with the kids. But it's just not realistic, it's something we think we have to impact," said Groteke.

"We're talking about the reality of what student-athletes are getting money for, because we want to give them more money but we understand what needs to be done.

We're starting to see that a lot of kids are already signing deals with the NCAA, but we have to do it in a way that's fair and reasonable," Groteke said.

"What if you try to do what you can do? They're not going to beat everything but they're still going to practice many more hours," Groteke said. "But they're doing it with supervision, and there will be more injuries.

"And we told them if they got kids who can only play one sport, they're going to lose a lot of value in the market." Groteke said.

"And we took them to where they're going to get money because they're already doing it. And they're going to get money from the sponsor of the sport."

The presidents were told that punishment is inadequate.

"We told them if you got money over, you should get kicked out forever. No second chance.," Groteke said. "Everybody knows it's bad. Everybody knows it's wrong. The president's reaction to her pleas, Groteke said. "They really struggle. Even if it was just a personal thing, it's a big deal.

"What do you think little kids think when they see their parents getting all the money? We're going to do it, but it's not fair," Groteke said.

"I think we have to think about how we treat every sport the same," said Leslie Staggers, a former Texas Tech coach who has been rightly or wrongly cited as saying he did not believe it.

The NCAA has not formally sought out the views of athletes.

"We've been making history this year," Staggers also said he did not believe it.

"The NCAA is going to have to try to treat every sport the same."

"The Varsity teams are not going to get cut the same as the underclassmen," Staggers said. "But they're going to be treated just the same as university teams, and there will be more money for them.

"It's going to be tough for junior college players saying they had to speak at the NCAA convention."

The Varsity teams' reaction of a Prince Rupert prince said he told the NCAA he would have to speak at the NCAA convention, and Groteke hopes to continue the discussion.

By Barry Wilner

Rome — It was a goal that none of us could imagine. As English and Belgian players approached a penalty kick, the tension was palpable. The ball was only inches from the goal, and the fate of the match hung in the balance.

Then midfielder Paul Gascoigne made the final move, the penalty was awarded, and he scored. His Tea scoring kick was followed by another, this time byieve Platt, a substitute who hadn't made a significant impact in the match until then.

"I made a sudden impact on the match and scored two goals," Platt said. "I don't know how many goals I scored before this, but I was just happy to be on the pitch."

"Obviously, there is great delight for us, this was a tremendous thing to do," Platt said. "Platt has been a part-timer for English and it was his first goal for the national team. He got into action partly because of captain Bryan Robson's return from a foot injury."

"I told the boys it would take something extraordinary," Coach Barry Bales said. "I said they would have to do something for Bryan and this boy... his performance, scored the goal.""
Jepsen, Bullard wait for NBA call

By Brian Goud

The Daily News

Former Hawkeyes Leif Jepsen and Matt Bullard are both looking forward to tonight's National Basketball Association Draft, which will begin at 6 p.m. in New York.

Jepsen, a 6-6 center from Iowa State, has a nearly sure bid to be taken in the first round and is expected to go very early, possibly to the New York Knicks, who signed a five-year, $19.6 million deal with him.

Bullard, on the other hand, can only pray for a chance.

"It will be a big day to find out what I really am worth," he said. "I hope I can show them I was drafted pretty good." Bullard, who will look for a spot in the second round to play center, said.

The two-round draft, which will be televised by Turner Network Tele­vision from New York, has a bright future for two former Iowa players.

"Jepsen and Bullard have spent the last several months talking with prospective teams and trying to determine what their status will be," said Tom Davis, a former Iowa player.

The duo played in front of NBA scouts this spring, as part of the National Basketball Association All-America Team. Davis, a former Iowa player, said both men have also been in Chicago and Cleveland, and that they could be picked.

"They're both very talented and they can do this at the point. Everything they do is more than enough to make them stand out," said Davis. "But they have trouble with some of the things that teams look for in a center." Bullard, who has averaged 13 points in his three seasons and shot 42.3 percent from the field, became interested in basketball only after losing his left leg, and wants to use his energy.

"I realized the importance of the game and that I had to work hard to keep him out of the office," he said. "It's not much separated the two play­ers, but I really wasn't the best, and I'm a lot more power and quickness, McEn­roe said."

The contract by far will make him the highest-paid baseball player. It is the biggest contract ever.

Cano said last Friday that he had reached an agreement with the Aliens on the dollar amount and other essential details of the deal needed to be worked out.

When asked if the deal would make him the highest-paid player in the game, Canseco said, "That should be the unanimous view." The deal is considered a milestone for baseball operations, confrrmed the A's general manager, Mike Scioscia, one that the player's agent said on June 12.

"They've really done all they can for baseball," Scioscia said. "It's a moment that they can really show the world." Bullard, who has averaged 15.5 points per game, was considered the best player in the world. He was the third player taken in the 1987 draft and led the Nets to the playoffs that year.

"I think we set the pace," Bullard said. "I take a pick up half of the game, and I'm having fun."

The deal gives the Nets two good players in the starting five and adds to the team's future. The Nets then could add a third player, play off the bench, and still have a good team, according to Basketball Digest.

"That's a moment that you really can't get over," Scioscia said. "It's a moment that you really can't get over." Bullard, who has averaged 13 points in his three seasons and shot 42.3 percent from the field, became interested in basketball only after losing his left leg, and wants to use his energy.