Fires rage out of control

But hot winds may be dying down

By Wendy E. Lane
The Associated Press

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Wildfires ignited by arson and accident crackled across Southern California on Thursday after ravaging 350 homes in the Santa Barbara area and at least 75 elsewhere in the region.

A U.S. Forest Service firefighting helicopter crashed in San Marcos Pass northwest of Santa Barbara. The pilot sustained a broken leg and was taken to a hospital, said Santa Barbara County spokesman Bill Douros.

The National Weather Service said a return of gusts that fanned flames Wednesday was unlikely. Hot, dry winds had fanned the flames, which scorched 14,000 acres of brush in a four-county area north, east and south of Los Angeles.

Fires also burned in Arizona, Colorado, Montana and Utah.

A destructive blaze in Glendale, a Los Angeles suburb, was contained after destroying or damaging 55 hillside homes Wednesday.

No deaths were immediately reported. One person was severely burned in Santa Barbara and two firefighters were seriously injured in Riverside County, authorities said.

"The fire is incredible. It came down from the mountains. It spread everywhere. It burned everything in its path."

Santa Barbara County, where rugged brush-covered hills rise sharply from the coastline, was hit hardest. A 3,500-acre arson fire that broke out late Wednesday near Santa Barbara and the nearby town of Goleta was one of the worst on record there. It continued to burn Thursday afternoon, and firefighters would offer no estimate of when it might be contained.

"The fire is incredible. It came down from the mountains. It spread everywhere. It burned everything in its path."

spread everywhere. It burned everything in its path," said county sheriff's department spokesman Tim Grasey.

The fire destroyed some entire neighborhoods while in other cases it leaped over houses and left them standing improbably amid ruins.

Desert winds up to 60 mph pushed the fire through the hills Wednesday night, giving some residents little time to flee.

"You're just lucky to have your life," said Kay O'Brien, who fled her home with her husband carrying only family pictures and a retirement watch. The home and all their possessions were lost.

"We woke up this morning and wanted to brush our teeth, but we didn't even have a toothbrush," she said.

The toll in the Santa Barbara area was put at about 350 homes, many of them worth $700,000 or more.

Firefighters controlled blazes in Utah and at Yellowstone National Park in Montana, but other fires raged unchecked in Arizona and Colorado. In Arizona, where six firefighters died Tuesday, a lightning fire in the Tonto National Forest destroyed a cabin built in the 1920s by Western novelist Zane Grey.

Flames rage through a Glendale, Calif., home, one of more than 400 in Southern California destroyed by brush fires. Record-high temperatures and high winds are fanning the flames.

Two units of specially trained Wyoming Air National Guard firefighters have been ordered to California to help fight the wildfires raging out of control near Santa Barbara, said John Cornelison of the Wyoming Adjutant General's office.

The soldiers will travel to the West Coast in two C-130 aircraft equipped with firefighting systems capable of dumping 3,000 gallons of fire retardant in less than eight seconds, Cornelison said.

California Gov. George Deukmejian toured Santa Barbara and declared a state of emergency to release additional state money and

Tape stirs interest in Barry drug trial

The mayor: 'I've been set up'

By Richard Keil
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Jurors in Marion Barry's drug and perjury trial watched a riveting videotape Thursday showing the mayor smoking crack cocaine and then being arrested by FBI agents during a hotel-room sting operation.

The fuzzy tape shows Barry twice inhaling from a pipe, and a few moments later, agents bursting into the room where he had come at the invitation of a longtime friend cooperating with the FBI.

"I didn't do anything," Barry said at first. Then, realizing his situation, he muttered, "I've been set up" and uttered a string of expletives at the friend, ex-model Rasheeda Moore.

As the videotape was played, Barry studied a transcript in the courtroom. His wife, Effi, stared, expressionless, at a television monitor. Moore, seated on the witness stand, viewed the tape on a small television set nearby.

Asked during a break in the proceedings how he felt about the tape, Barry smiled slightly but did not speak.

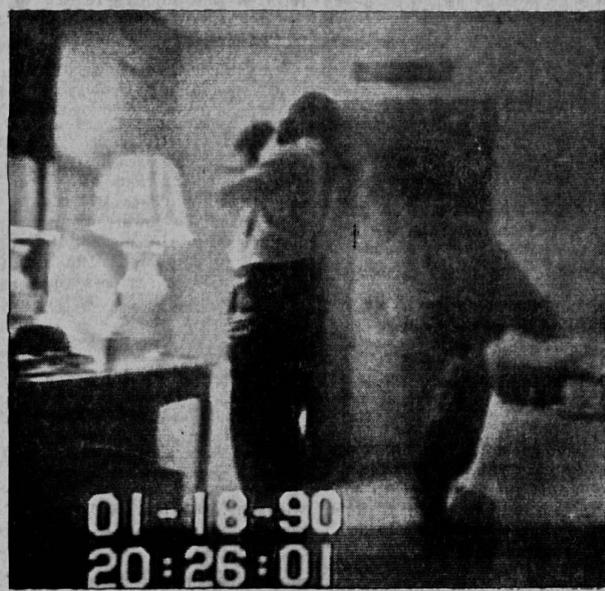

Barry attorney R. Kenneth Mundy began cross-examination shortly before the trial adjourned for the day, quickly asserting, "I think she brought up the subject" of drugs.

Mundy contended Moore had cooperated with the government because she needed money.

The tape was the talk of the city where Barry retains substantial popularity. It was played and replayed on local television stations, interrupted only by newscasters' and Washington residents' comments.

The crowd around a bank of television sets at one department store included Joe Perry, who sighed and said, "He didn't want to go up to that hotel room in the first place but he was so arrogant that he thought he was bulletproof."

Three FBI cameras hidden in a downtown hotel room recorded Barry's visit to Moore's room on An FBI videotape shows Washington Mayor Marion Barry allegedly lighting a crack cocaine pipe in a Washington hotel room in January.

Jan. 18 and his purchase of an amount of the drug from an undercover agent posing as a friend of Moore's.

The tape shows Barry initially expressed reluctance to smoke the cocaine unless Moore did so, too.

She declined his repeated requests, saying, "It makes me too hyper, I get really hyper."

Barry acknowledged a month ago that he smoked crack that night, and said federal prosecutors were trying to kill him by providing a potentially lethal dose of the drug.

Scientists scurrying to save $1.5 billion Hubble telescope

By Paul Rezer
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The National Aeronautics and Space Administration started a formal investigation into why the Hubble Space Telescope was launched with a fuzzy focus as scientists searched on Thursday for ways to salvage some research from the flawed $1.5 billion observatory.

NASA officials said an investigation team, led by Jet Propulsion Laboratory Director Lew Allen, was being organized.

At the same time, engineers at a Connecticut company that made the telescope's mirrors under a $450 million contract were trying to find out what went wrong during a yearlong process of grinding and polishing.

Jack Rehnberg, chief of the space science office of the Hughes Danbury Optical Co., said his company was prepared to cooperate fully with the NASA investigation, but it appears that "something inhe-

Local man files suit over YAF meeting

By Terrence Watts
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man is suing the UI, a Campus Security officer and representatives of a UI student group for $2,000 in connection with alleged violations that occurred at a Young Americans for Freedom meeting last November, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Frank Simon, 923 N. Dodge St., has filed suit against the UI, an unknown campus security guard, and YAF members Eric Klein, Phillip Neuhoff and others for violating his civil liberties, according to court records.

Another suit stemming from the same incident was filed recently by Iowa City resident Carol deProse. Klein, Neuhoff, the UI and an unnamed Campus Security officer are also named as defendants in this suit.

Simon, who could not be reached for comment, stated in the suit that he and others displayed

North Campus Ramp a multi-purpose frame

By Kristin Schultz
The Daily Iowan

A red-breasted pigeon perched atop the large hydraulic water pipe Thursday at the UI's newest parking ramp, checking out its new surroundings. A red sedan came to a stop below the pipe and handed a cashier $2.

The gate lifted, and the car pulled out onto Madison Street. The pigeon, still getting used to his new home, seemed unfazed by the exchange.

The elevators at the recently opened North Campus Ramp may not be working yet, but the birds have already set up house-keeping.

The much-awaited ramp, under construction since early this year, opened its gates June 19.

The ramp also houses a 100,000 gallon water storage tank, a chilled-water plant, an electrical sub-station and even basketball courts on top of the ramp.

"We wanted this to be a multi-purpose facility," said Linda Gritsch, manager of Parking Services. "It also has a unique stairway system and an elevator access from Madison Street to Capitol Street so you don't have to walk up the hill."

The decision to build the ramp was made after work began on the Laser Research Facility north of the Union. This area was previously used for faculty and staff permit parking as well as metered parking for students

Iowa in-home detention set

By Lindsay Alan Park
The Daily Iowan

An in-home detention amendment to the Iowa Code is "the most significant change in Iowa jail corrections law in years," Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said Thursday.

According to the amendment, passed by the Iowa Legislature in April, courts now have the option to sentence prisoners to detention in their own homes in each county where the sheriff has developed such a program in the jail.

Addressing a formal session of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Thursday, White commended the board for initiating the process that resulted in the law.

"It wouldn't have happened if the supervisors hadn't said, 'Let's try it,'" White said.

While seeking solutions to overcrowding in the Johnson County Jail, the board asked White in March to pursue in-home detention with the Iowa legislature.

White said he submitted a three-sentence draft of an amendment to the Jails Code to the office of Senator Richard Varn, D-Solon, April 6. The amendment was added to a comprehensive crime bill that expands crime victims' rights and taxes controlled substances. The bill passed in the final hours of this year's state legislative session on April 8.

Board members said they were pleased about the amendment but stressed that use of the new option should be limited.

"In-home detention is not for everybody," board chairman Dick Myers said.

Johnson County Sheriff Robert Carpenter said that he will work with judges, defense lawyers and the county attorney to determine which prisoners would be appropriate candidates for in-home detention.

"It will be similar to work release," he said.

Carpenter said he would carefully examine different surveillance systems in September and that he expected to have a program operating from the county jail sometime in the fall.

Most methods of in-home detention use electronic surveillance, according to Department of Corrections Support Bureau Chief Eugene Gardner.

Gardner said the department received grant money from the Governor's Alliance on Substance Abuse to investigate surveillance methods for possible use with criminals who have histories of drug abuse or drug offenses.

He described a "tight" and elaborate system called the House Arrest Program, in which a computer tracks prisoners wearing wrist bracelets that trigger electronic warning pages to the jail if they move 150 to 200 feet away from their homes.

In other approaches, which Gardner described as passive, a computer would make occasional random phone calls to detainees, whose identities would be confirmed either through electronic voice matching or by a specific tone generated through a wrist band.

Illegal use of fireworks on upswing

By Terrence Watts
The Daily Iowan

As the Fourth of July approaches, the use of illegal fireworks in Iowa City has skyrocketed.

Last week, three people were charged with unlawful use of fireworks just days after the Iowa City Police and Fire departments issued a press release reminding people that fireworks are illegal in Iowa with the exception of caps, snakes and sparklers.

According to the National Fire Protection Association, three of every five firework injuries during last year's Fourth of July celebration involved people under 20 years of age. Twenty-five percent of the people injured were children under 10.

The Iowa City Police and Fire departments urge parents to protect their children by keeping fireworks out of their hands.

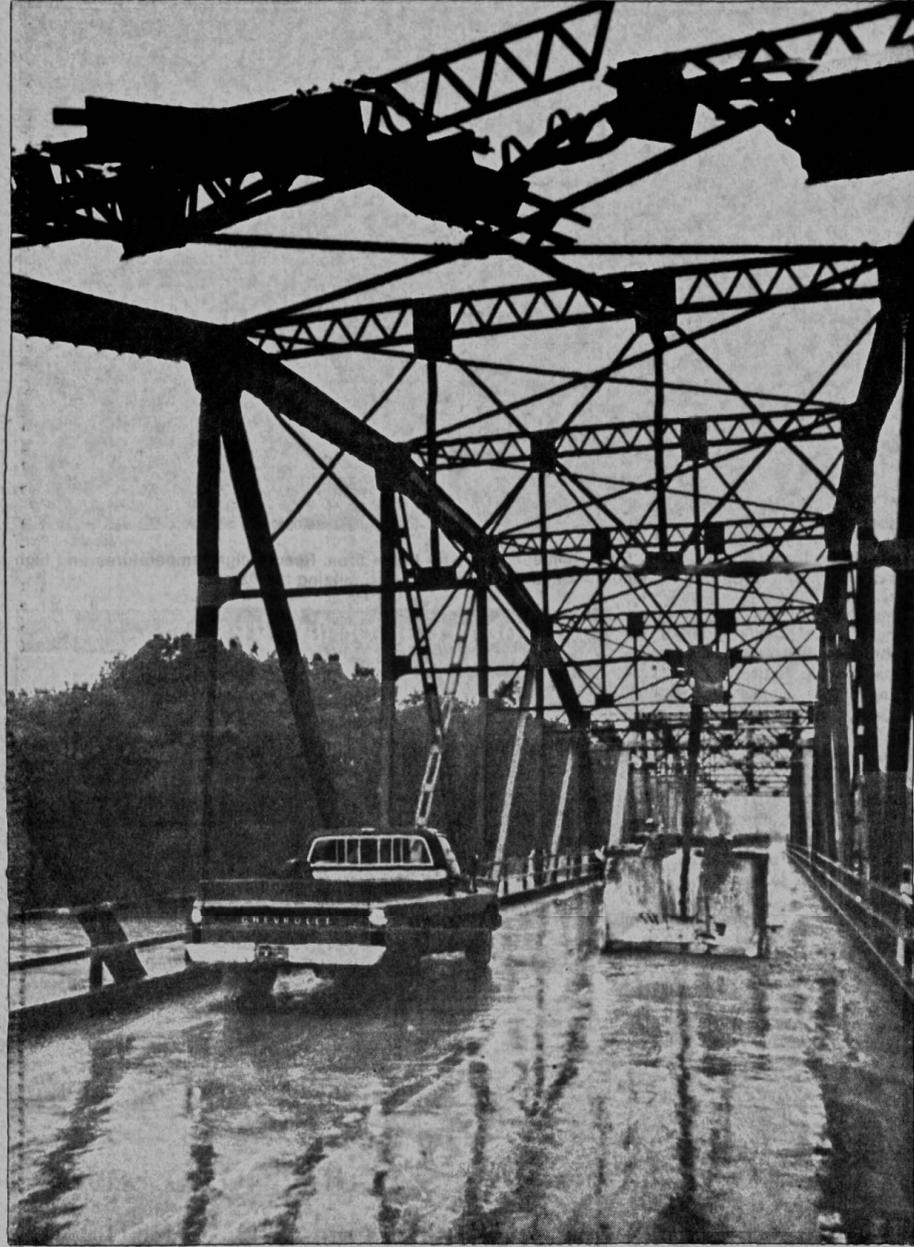

According to the NFPA, 10,400 firework injuries are treated in emergency rooms each year, based on a five-year average. Sixty percent of the injuries involved burns, 17 percent involved cuts and 2 percent involved amputations. The remaining 21 percent were unspecified injuries.

In an effort to combat injuries resulting from the use of illegal fireworks, Iowa City Police and Fire departments will confiscate all illegal fireworks.

State Fire Marshal Roy Marshall reported that injuries related to fireworks have been on an upward trend in Iowa.

Marshall linked the upward trend to the availability of illegal fireworks to children and young adults by mail-order sellers.

Selling or the possession of illegal fireworks is a serious misdemeanor, according to Patrick Harney, a captain in the Iowa City Police Department. Harney said the maximum punishment for fireworks distribution or possession is one year in jail, a $1,000 fine or both.

UI receives grant for health care study

By John Kenyon
The Daily Iowan

A new study by the UI College of Nursing, which will focus on ethical issues faced by health care workers in intensive care units, recently received a $99,000 grant.

The grant, from the National Center for Nursing Research/National Institutes of Health, will fund the study of ethical decision making in ICUs. The study, which will run through June 1992, will be conducted by Martha Carpenter, UI assistant professor of nursing.

Carpenter will be assisted by Toni Tripp Reimer and Kathleen Buckwalter, both UI professors of nursing.

"We want to find out how nurses act in certain situations and why," Carpenter said.

The study will analyze the decision making processes of staff members in seven units in four different hospitals. The responses will be compared and contrasted according to different types of units and levels of personnel.

Each person questioned will be asked to relate an event that occurred in his or her unit where ethics was an issue. Respondents are asked what they did in each situation and why. They are then asked what they wanted to do in the situations and why.

"The area between what happened and what they wanted to do should show us what got in the way," Carpenter said.

Ethics is a popular topic in academic circles, and Carpenter said this helped her chances of receiving the grant.

"I feel fortunate that there is such interest in my chosen area of study," she said.

Other studies of ethics have used hypothetical situations, but dealing with applied ethics is new, Carpenter said.

"We are all good at making decisions when we are not accountable," Carpenter said.

The goal of the study is to discover better methods of teaching by using real-life problems.

Carpenter said, "We must enhance education to facilitate teamwork and communication in health care."

Learning made fun with project BLAST

By Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

Twenty-two high-school students are finding out learning can be fun while they attain skills to help them succeed in the classroom and beyond.

The students, ninth- and tenth-graders from Davenport Community School District, are participants in Project BLAST, a program designed to help "at-risk" and disadvantaged students achieve their full potential in school.

The federally funded Project BLAST, (Believe, Listen, Ask, Smile and Think) is a joint program between the Davenport Community Schools and the UI, developed by the Connie Belin National Center for Gifted Education.

The three-week residential program, which began June 10, is the first of its kind to be created through the UI, said Phyllis Alexander, project leader. Another similar program is designed for junior-high students, she said.

"It's a program for at-risk students who have a great deal of potential but are not achieving to their ability," Alexander said.

Paula Christensen, the resident director of Project BLAST and a Belin Center staff member, said the program shows students learning is more than just what goes on in the classroom.

One example is the science segment of the program, in which the students learn about physics by designing and building their own rockets, Christensen said.

The finale of this segment was Thursday afternoon — when the students actually launched the rockets they built.

The participating students attend classes — including math and science taught by two UI professors — in the morning and attend study skills programs or computer or counseling sessions in the afternoon, Alexander said.

Participants for Project BLAST are chosen from a list of students who are eligible and fit the criteria of the federal grant, Alexander said.

The summer session kicked off the program, which will continue into the 1990-91 academic year. Mentors and tutors for the students are provided for the participants upon their return to school, and Saturday seminars twice a month enable project coordinators to keep track of the students' progress.

"We're hoping to keep these kids in school — to increase their attendance and enrollment in more advanced classes," Alexander said. "We hope that not only will they go on to college but that they will be ready for college."

The final banquet for the program will be held today, and parents and families of the students are invited to attend. The closing ceremonies are scheduled for Saturday.

Christensen said although the students seemed unsure of why they were here at first, once they got into the program they really enjoyed it.

Many of the students agreed that the program was worthwhile.

Lloyd Hasselhan, a student in the program, said he now thinks college may be fun.

"I enjoyed it," he said. "I like putting what I learn to practical use rather than just writing it on paper."

Students from Project BLAST launch a rocket as a physics experiment Thursday afternoon at West High School. Project BLAST encourages disadvantaged students to learn outside of the classroom.

WIC funds decreasing nationally

By David Sims
The Daily Iowan
and The Associated Press

Sharp increases in food prices have forced the Johnson County WIC program to eliminate some of its 1,100 participants.

"We're removing (from the program) women who aren't breastfeeding," a spokeswoman for the program said. She said the cuts were needed to maintain nutritional allotments to pregnant women, mothers who are breastfeeding, infants and children up to five years old.

The Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children, known as WIC, is a federally funded program that provides vouchers redeemable at grocery stores for food — including milk, cheese, baby formula, juices and cereals.

The program also offers education on ways to develop healthier eating habits. Eligibility for the program is determined by income and nutritional risk.

But cutbacks in the WIC program are happening nationwide.

Sue Anthony, director of nutrition and health promotion at the state WIC program in Des Moines, said the program will reduce its cases from 49,000 to 45,000. As in Johnson County, the statewide cuts will be made among postpartum non-feeding mothers.

Iowa's difficulties are a reflection of the situation nationwide, where rising food costs threaten to eliminate nearly a quarter of a million participants from the program. More than 4.5 million women, infants and children participate in WIC nationwide.

However, the local spokeswoman said participants who have been cut may be reinstated when a new budget takes effect in September.

Since May 1989, the Consumer Price Index shows that milk prices have risen 10.7 percent.

Kidnapping trial will be in Nebraska

The Associated Press

ADEL, Iowa — A 26-year-old man waived extradition proceedings Thursday and will be brought to Nebraska to face a kidnapping charge in the disappearance of a Norfolk, Neb., girl nearly three years ago.

David Phelps, a longtime suspect in the case, had no comment after the brief procedure in which he agreed not to contest Nebraska's request that he stand trial there.

A Madison County grand jury handed up an indictment last week against Phelps in connection with the disappearance of Jill Cutshall.

Joyce Cutshall, mother of the missing girl, said Thursday she is happy Phelps waived extradition.

Nebraska officials will transfer Phelps to Norfolk on Friday, an attorney for Phelps said.

IRAN QUAKE

Insult to injury

It is tragic that last week's earthquake in northern Iran has left more than 40,000 dead, 60,000 wounded and 500,000 homeless. The real tragedy, however, is that despite widespread human suffering, Iran has left its political barriers intact, refusing aid from certain sources and perpetuating the hate-oriented politics often associated with Iran in the West.

An editorial last week in Tehran's anti-American newspaper Jomhuri Islami essentially blamed the United States for the magnitude of the devastation from the earthquake. It said that the United States has "halted the renovation of" Iran by "plundering Iran's oil and other resources." The paper claimed that Iranian people, "even under the rubble, chant 'Death to America' and pray to God to cut off the hands of the United States . . . even those hands stretched out to help." It urged Iranians to reject aid from the United States and other countries whose collective hands "are stained with the blood of the Iranian people."

Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ali Khomeini, extended his thanks Wednesday for the millions of dollars in foreign aid — presumably including that from the United States — that Iran has received since the earthquake. Among that aid is a reported $8,650 donation from Salman Rushdie, author of the allegedly blasphemous "The Satanic Verses." According to Iranian Parliament member Ayatollah Saddegh Khalkhali, however, Rushdie's donation will have no effect on the death sentence set against him last year.

Granted, the Jomhuri Islami editorial represents the views of a militant conservative faction of Iranian politics, and strongly ingrained religious feelings keep the anti-Rushdie feelings alive. But even these isolated displays of unmitigated national pride have put a damper on the worldly outpouring of aid. Iran has already announced it would refuse aid from Israel and South Africa.

With the absence of diplomatic relations between the United States and Iran, President George Bush was forced to send Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani his condolences and the promise of humanitarian assistance via an unnamed country. Understandably, Americans are hesitant to make donations for the good of Iran in the wake of Iran's continuing antagonism.

Natural disaster ought to transcend political ideology. Human beings should abandon mutual animosity in the face of adversity. By allowing such a gross misrepresentation of public opinion to overshadow the real tragedy, Iranian leaders are adding insult to injury and ultimately hurting their country — and the world.

NEA REQUIREMENTS

Not censorship

The conflict that has lived forever between artists and their patrons is in the news again. The National Endowment of the Arts recently sent a letter to its grant recipients requiring signatures to promise that they will not depict the following: "sodomasochism, homoeroticism, the sexual exploitation of children or individuals engaged in sex acts and which, when taken as a whole have no serious literary, artistic, political or scientific merit." Several artists and editors, including the University of Iowa Press, have refused to sign the contracts on principle, thus forfeiting their grants for the protection of artistic freedom. The real threat posed by the NEA, however, is not to artistic, but to financial freedom.

Because the market at large tends to support mostly mainstream commercial art, many artists historically have sought various forms of financial support from patrons. Sometimes that support meant free room and board or a studio to work in. Other times patrons were far more generous.

But it was a rare patron who, in exchange for that support, did not impose any restrictions on the artist. If William Shakespeare had been writing "Richard III" for King Richard instead of Queen Victoria, it would have been a very different play. Few people are willing to shell out money for something they don't like. And while that system might sound oppressive, keep in mind that centuries of masterpieces were produced within its framework.

Today artists argue that the United States has the opportunity to end that systematic tyranny and to grant its meritorious artists true freedom. But despite such noble intentions, there is no escaping the fact that the NEA is still a patron. More accurately, it is 200 million patrons, each with a right to his own money and tastes.

In this country, artists can create whatever they choose. What they cannot do is demand that someone else subsidize or display it for them. A clothing designer would be laughed off Michigan Avenue if she insisted that Marshall Fields had to carry her clothing line, or that Chicago taxpayers must help her to survive in her chosen profession. The buyer's right to selective purchase is not a spoke in the wheel of censorship — it is a fundamental principle of capitalism.

Any artist who does not care for the generous boundaries of the NEA contract can seek private patronage or other means of support. The very existence of those boundaries is not an infringement on the right to artistic freedom. It is a meager protection of the rights of 200 million patrons to choose and spend as they please.

Another needed amendment

Like President George Bush, Sen. Robert Dole and other vote-hustling patriots, I would like to see the Constitution amended to make illegal a practice that is revolting, offensive and harmful to the public good.

A lawyer would have to put my proposal into amendment language, but it would say something like: "Congress and the states shall have the authority to enact laws making lying by a politician a crime, punished by public paddling of their bare bottoms."

I'm sure that there are do-gooders and civil libertarians who would protest that such an amendment would deprive a politician of his right to free speech.

And traditionalists would say that lying is an essential part of the political process. If candidates can't lie about their opponents and themselves, campaigns would be so dull that nobody except the candidates, their wives and their children would vote. This would of course be unfair because it would discriminate against childless candidates.

But I reject these arguments. While it is true that, in general, lying is part of our First Amendment to speak freely, there are exceptions.

If you are caught lying on your tax forms, you can be fined or even jailed. If you lie to a grand jury or while testifying in a trial, you can be punished. If you lie while applying for a bank loan, you can be prosecuted. (That's unlikely, however, as the massive S&L scandal has shown.)

There are laws making it illegal for a manufacturer to lie about some product and for certain salespeople to lie about the price.

Why, if you lie to your wife about working late when you weren't, that isn't a crime. But she can take you to court and a judge may award her everything but your bowling ball, leaving you a broken, pathetic wretch, wallowing in a gutter with only a wine bottle to console you.

So while almost all lies — about your golf handicap, sexual exploits, military heroics and how you told off your boss — are protected by the Constitution, some aren't.

That's because some lies obstruct justice or do harm to individuals or society and defraud others. (Once again, I exclude the S&L industry, since by unofficial decree of the White House, Congress and the federal bureaucracy, lies by the S&L swindlers are not only A-OK, but real groovy.)

There are those, I'm sure, who would consider me an extremist for wanting to amend the Constitution to punish politicians who lie.

But let us put this into perspective.

President Bush and most Republican congressmen and aspiring congressmen are yammering for an amendment that would prohibit the burning of flags.

Our leaders consider this a pressing issue, although 99.99 percent of all Americans don't burn flags. About the only time a flag is burned is when some nitwit publicity seeker persuades an equally witless TV assignment editor to send out a crew and put it on the tube.

If 99.99 percent of all Americans are not burning flags, will never burn a flag and have never seen anyone burn a flag, is it really worth the bother of amending the Constitution?

Of course it isn't. But it makes for one big, effective political lie.

At the same time nobody is burning flags, Washington is overflowing with lies. They lie to themselves, about each other and to us. If lies were locusts, there wouldn't be a leaf left in that town.

Even while politically addressing each other during a debate, they lie. They always say, "Will the honorable Senator . . ." when they know very well that the guy has no more honor than a crack dealer.

And it's becoming worse than at any other time in our history.

There was a time when a politician had to get up on a stage in the town square or stand on the back of a railroad car and look the voters right in their eyes while telling lies. This gave people a chance to yell "hee-haw" and even throw vegetables.

But now, in the electronic age, the politicians hire professional lie firms, lie consultants and lie advisers who create their 30-second TV lie commercials and coach them on 10-second lie bites.

Just the other day, a professional lie consultant chortled about how devastating a 30-second commercial would be when aimed at any member of Congress who, out of genuine concern for freedom of speech and expression, failed to support the flag-burning amendment. They now openly brag about how effectively they lie to us. Which is about the only time they tell the truth.

So if we're going to mess with the Constitution, let's not waste energy on the little old flag-burner who isn't there.

Hey, President Bush, remember the fuss you made about Willie Horton, the convict who did harm while on furlough? And how it helped get you elected?

Remember how someone pointed out that the federal prison system also paroled thousands of criminals, including convicted killers, drug dealers and other felons? And it was doing so while you were vice president?

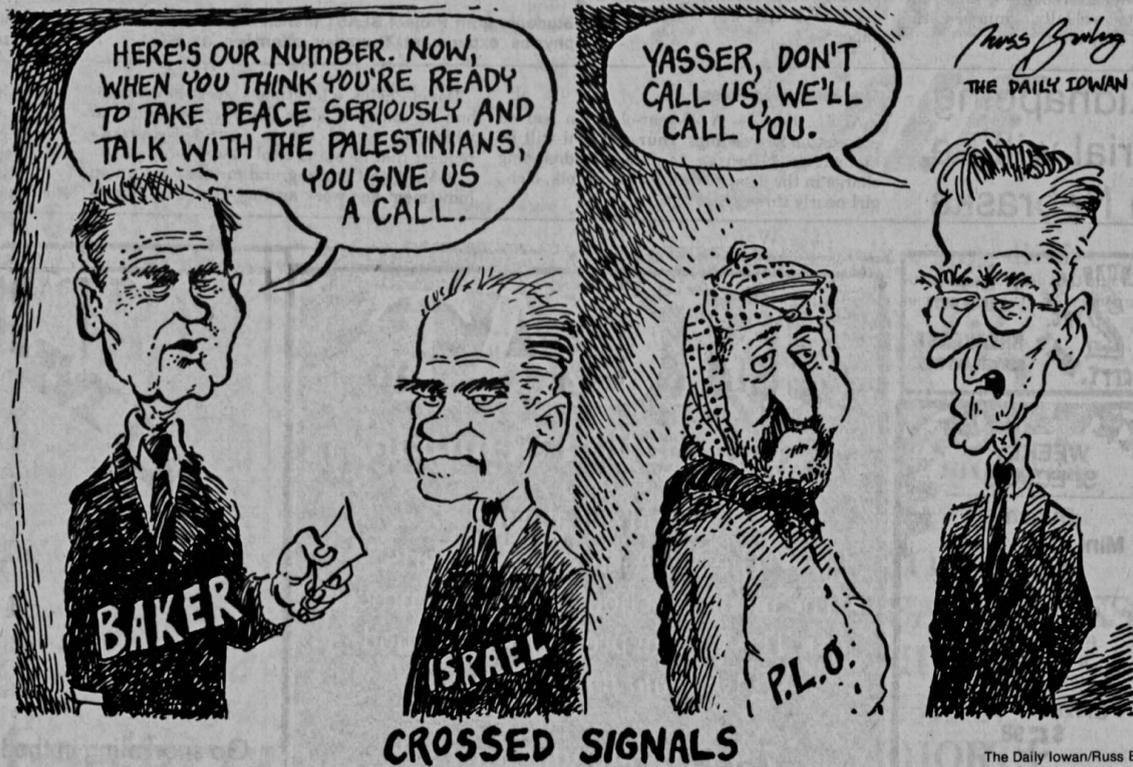

And remember how you said that, if you were elected president, you would review the federal prison system's furlough program?

They are still furloughing felons, Mr. President. Convicted killers, dope peddlers and other baddies.

Mr. President, were you pulling our chains? Tsk, tsk. And you have such an honest face.

The Constitution needs amending. Let the paddlings begin.

Israeli hypocrites forget own history

President George Bush, in an effort to find a peaceful solution to the Palestinian-Israeli conflict, ended America's dialogue with the Palestinian Liberation Organization — talks that began during the Reagan administration with an agreement that the PLO would discontinue its terrorist operations. Bush cited the attempted attack by a branch of the PLO on a beach in Tel Aviv as justification for his decision.

Zionism is the belief that the Jewish people have a right to a political state. As a Zionist — and one who endorses self-determination for my own people — I find it unfair and hypocritical not to recognize the nationalism of other peoples, including the people of Palestine. What legitimacy is there to Zionism — and the state of Israel — if it fails to recognize the national aspirations of other people and the institutions representing those aspirations, namely the Palestinians and the PLO?

Guest Opinion

Statistics indicate as many as 93 percent of the Palestinians living on the West Bank and the Gaza strip see the PLO as their only representative organization. Thus, for Arab-Israeli negotiations to have any credibility among Palestinians, the PLO must take an active part in them.

Many in the Arab and Israeli governments wish to avoid negotiations involving the PLO because they see the PLO as nothing more than a "terrorist organization." Zionists and supporters of Israel, however, need to remember that less than 50 years ago, the Irgun — an organization battling for a Jewish state — was using terrorist methods to further the Zionist cause. And the PLO has suffered both proportionately and absolutely more than the Irgun ever has. The right-wing politics of the Likud party, which has dominated Israel since the Begin era, have made an effort — perhaps to emphasize the efficacy of militarism — to glorify the struggle of the Irgun in the establishment of the Jewish state. The Likud party seems to have a very strong distaste for terrorism, unless it is terrorism motivated by Jewish nationalism.

Aside from marginalizing the PLO's role in U.S.-sponsored peace negotiations, and thereby removing from the table the only authorized Palestinian representative, Bush's decision also implicitly acknowledges an Israeli willingness for peace — a willingness that, judging from recent Israeli policy, does not exist. Just as the attempted terrorist attack on Tel Aviv beach sends a destructive message to most Israelis, Israel's continuously increasing settlement of the occupied territories sends a destructive message to most Palestinians. How committed to peace is the Israeli government if everyday it attempts to expand its sovereignty to a land inhabited by another people eager for nationhood?

Bush's decision comes at a time when the PLO is probably the most moderate in its 26-year history. It has recognized the existence of Israel and has expressed a willingness to negotiate with a government under whose occupation it has endured for more than two decades. By rejecting the PLO, Bush will inevitably make the position of the more radical elements of the Palestinian national movement, which reject negotiations and the legitimacy of the state of Israel in any form, more attractive to moderate Palestinians.

In contrast, Israel's new coalition government is the most conservative it has ever been. For most of its history, Israel has been dominated by the left-of-center Labor party, which has been committed to the economic growth of Israel and the prospects of peace with the Arab world. But since the 1970s, the center of Israel's political continuum has shifted to the right. The political influence of ultra-Orthodox religious parties is greater today than at any other time in Israeli history. Despite 23 years of Israeli occupation, Palestinians on the West Bank are regularly tried in military courts, and it is not uncommon for political activists to be imprisoned for many months without a trial. After having suffered centuries of abuse and persecution, one would assume that humanitarianism would be the essence of Israeli political policy. But such violation indicates that it clearly is not.

The most dangerous aspect of this historical irony then becomes: How are Jews to critically view years of discrimination from European and Arab states when they find that Jewish statehood ultimately has led to the repression of non-Jews? Did not Europeans justify the repression of Jews for "political reasons"? The irony of all this is that Israel's policy could function to put years of Jewish suffering into an entirely new perspective.

Israel is a country faced with circumstances like no other, which makes criticizing its policies a complex endeavor, especially for a Zionist. It is most urgent, however, for American Jews to help guide Israel's destiny. This has previously meant financial assistance and support of favorable legislation. But support in the future may mean active criticism, which will eventually help Israel become the progressive state it once was.

Questions on local pesticide restriction draw opinion

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Local governments cannot enact their own tough restrictions on the use of pesticides because state and federal officials already control those chemicals, a legal opinion issued Thursday said.

The opinion, issued by Attorney General Tom Miller, pointed to a "rather comprehensive regulatory scheme" governing pesticides and said it wouldn't be fair for cities and counties to go beyond that set of restrictions.

"To the extent that a political subdivision in Iowa banned the application of pesticides by a commercial applicator... it would prohibit activity which state law permits," said the opinion, written by Assistant Attorney General Timothy Benton.

Benton conceded that there has been a string of court cases yielding results on both sides of the issue. An examination of the legislative history of pesticide regulations, however, shows that efforts to include specific provisions for local regulations were rejected.

The opinion was sought by Rep. Donald Shoultz, a Waterloo Democrat who has authored much of the environmental legislation that the Legislature has approved. Shoultz said there has been discussion by local officials — particularly city councils — of putting in place pesticide regulation, but officials were uncertain of their authority. One city in Iowa — Sully — has adopted a ban on commercial pesticide applications.

Thursday's opinion does not carry the weight of law, and the courts would eventually have to settle the issue. It is, however, a strong signal to local officials that enforcing any local regulations would be difficult, and they are unlikely to survive a court test.

Environmental advocates have argued that a major source of pollution is chemical application in cities as homeowners hire lawn services to spruce up their yards.

Many of the chemicals applied to yards are herbicides and nitrogen-based fertilizers very similar to what farmers use, yet critics argue there's no control or monitoring of those chemicals. Particularly in a wet period like this year, they argue, those chemicals can wash off lawns and into rivers and streams.

Benton noted there's extensive regulation of pesticide application in state law already.

"Local governments in Iowa may not adopt an ordinance which makes the application of pesticides by a commercial applicator within the boundaries of that local government unlawful," said Benton.

"There is a clear, albeit implied, intent to preclude local governments from pesticide regulation," he said.

"If forced to decide the validity of an ordinance as described in your letter solely under the Iowa law dealing with pesticides, it is doubtful that we could find the ordinance would survive," he wrote in his reply to Shoultz.

The ramp, built on a former faculty and staff permit lot, contains 387 spaces. Monthly permits are available for $24, or patrons can pay 50 cents per hour or $5 per day.

In August, the monthly permit rate will be raised to $25.50, an increase of 6.3 percent.

"Right now, I don't think a lot of people know we're here," Gritsch said. "It hasn't been too busy unless the IMU Ramp sends orientation students and their families down when it fills up."

Gritsch said she expects the ramp to be full once classes start in the fall.

"We already have a waiting list for faculty-staff permits for the ramp in the fall," she said. "We might have to limit the ramp to faculty and staff use if the proposed academic building is constructed on Lot 4."

Lot 4 is the 210-space parking area north of Gilmore Hall. If this lot is closed, Gritsch said, parking services will have to give permit holders from this lot priority over students and visitors in the North Campus Ramp, limiting public parking in the ramp until the building is finished.

Plans for the new academic building include an underground parking lot, so public parking will only be limited during its construction.

The parking aspect of the ramp was financed through parking reserve funds and through bonds, Gritsch said.

"The Parking and Transportation Department is self-supporting," she said. "Each space in the north ramp costs $9,000. At $24 per month, that's a long time before the ramp pays for itself."

Gritsch said that despite its institutional appearance, the ramp was

The flaw, officials said, cannot be repaired from the ground and the space observatory never will be able to capture all of the spectacular views of the universe that had been expected, although a repair mission scheduled for 1993 may restore one camera.

NASA Hubble scientist Ed Weiler said at a news conference Thursday that a minute error in the curve of one of the mirrors causes the reflected light to miss a precise point of focus by only 4 percent of the diameter of a human hair.

That is just enough to spoil the extremely sharp photos that astronomers expected from the telescope.

"The Hubble is comparable to a very good ground telescope on a very good night, but it's not better than the best," he said.

Weiler said the mirrors were tested individually before launch, but never physically together as a unit because "that would have cost several hundred million dollars."

Instead, NASA tested the two mirrors together through computer analysis, he said, "but somewhere along the way something failed."

Despite Hubble's blurry view of the universe, officials at the Space Telescope Institute in Baltimore hope to learn how to make the telescope produce usable views of the universe.

Ray Villard of the Space Telescope Institute at Johns Hopkins University said scientists are recovering from the initial disappointment over the permanent focusing flaw and now are trying to find ways to compensate for it.

Simon alleges that the unknown security guard forcibly removed him from the room by grabbing his arm — causing pain and bruises — and then dragged him from the room and down the hall, according to a court report.

The suit stated that the security guard questioned Simon about his political beliefs while holding him against his will.

After being released by the security guard, Simon was allegedly told he could return to the meeting under the conditions that he wouldn't display his signs, according to the suit.

Upon returning to the meeting place, Simon and others continued to display their signs. As a result, Simon claims, the widely publicized YAF meeting was moved to another room where he and others were denied access.

Simon alleges that the incident caused him physical injury, pain and suffering, emotional distress, and humiliation.

Santa Barbara ignited; flames ransack homes

By John Horn
The Associated Press

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Neighbors along Via Las Padres consoled one another and surveyed the embers and ash that remained of their homes Thursday after fire swept down from the mountains and burned everything in its path.

"It was a beautiful neighborhood," Eric Lim said, as the remains of his house steamed behind him. "It was a great place to grow up."

The 3,500-acre brushfire that started Wednesday night cut a vicious swath through the suburban foothills of this coastal city, leveling entire neighborhoods.

Few areas were harder hit than Park Highlands — a tightly knit enclave of $750,000 homes about 5 miles northwest of the city — all with dramatic views of the coast below. Eighteen of 19 homes on one block of Via Las Padres were wholly consumed by flames.

Lawns burned as though made of straw, and shrubbery and trees, parched from a 4-year drought, ignited like matches. The intense heat left a pool slide in one yard melted on its frame like a giant marshmallow.

About 350 homes were destroyed in Santa Barbara and 75 elsewhere in the region.

"I started reading the paper after I came home from work and then my 12-year-old said, 'Daddy, the backyard is on fire,'" said Bryan Gaggas, whose home was untouched while those of two of his nearest neighbors were gutted.

The Lims lost their home of 14 years, salvaging only a few personal effects and their cats. Across the street the Harveys stirred the ashes of what was once their dream home filled with antiques and personal mementos.

"I started reading the paper after I came home from work and then my 12-year-old said, 'Daddy, the backyard is on fire.'"

Bryan Gaggas

"I can't find anything, there's nothing," Nancy Harvey said as she picked through what was once her kitchen. "I'm hoping to find my address book."

Her daughter, Tiffany, poked around the spot in the living room where the family's television set had stood. "I'm looking for my necklace," she told her mother. "I left it here last night."

Don Anderson, who lives next to the Lims, said he stayed on his roof with a hose in hand until the heat and smoke became intolerable.

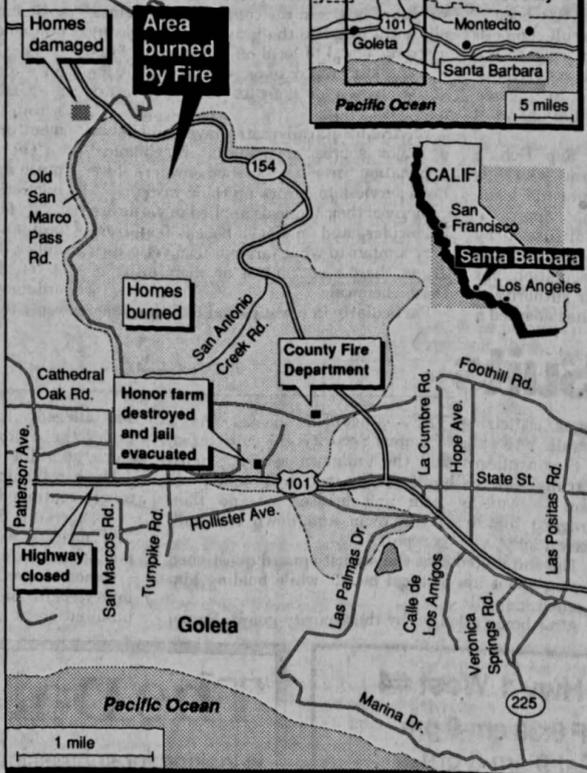

"I stood up there and for a while I thought we were going to be OK, that we would be at the bottom of the fire and that it would miss us," he said.

"And then it suddenly got very smoky and I yelled back to the Lims 'Can you see the flames?' When he said 'Yes' I knew it was time to go."

Anderson's home was leveled.

"I think the water shortage definitely contributed to this fire," said Dale Hanst, whose house survived.

While some families wept hopelessly over their losses, others kept their sense of humor.

Nancy Harvey said she was confident that valuables in the family safe were unharmed. "But I had the combination for it written in the bottom of my desk drawer," she said with a laugh.

California fires ominously foreseen by fire officials

By Steve Geissinger
The Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The four-year drought has parched the countryside that's home to nearly a third of Californians into a tinderbox the likes of which has not been seen this century, fire officials say.

Worse, there have never been so many homes in the fast-growing rural areas, where few residents take enough safety measures to protect their property or themselves.

Fire officials delivered a prophetic assessment of the state's fire risk on Tuesday, the day before wildfires ignited by arsonists began destroying hundreds of homes in Southern California.

"Our experience tells us that this year the stage is set for possibly having fires of disastrous proportions," said Dave Mack of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection.

On Thursday, fire agencies from throughout the state shifted their forces to the south, leaving fire-prone Northern California with fewer forces to respond to blazes there.

The Southern California fires, the worst of which was in Santa Barbara County, conformed ominously to the forecast issued Tuesday by an unprecedented task force of statewide fire agencies.

The task force announced new strategies for the summer, including hitting wildfires faster with larger forces than during the past three drought years.

Pat Kidder of the U.S. Bureau of Land Management said that "all the indicators show we could have the potential for the worst fire season on record" this century.

One indicator during this fourth and driest year of the drought, the Palmer Index, shows that "it's drier than any time this century on a statewide average," said state spokeswoman Karen Terrill.

The Palmer Index — which employs mathematical formulas to examine rainfall, soil moisture, humidity and other conditions — indicates that conditions are drier than those in 1924, when more than a million acres burned, and in 1987, when more than 800,000 acres were charred.

Fire experts said other longtime indicators of fire danger — such as those that measure moisture in live and dead vegetation, appear to support those conclusions.

They also said the drought is killing forests and brush.

There are an estimated 1 billion board feet of dead timber standing on public and private lands, with another 1 billion board feet expected to die by the end of the year, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Matt Mathes. A board foot is a piece of wood that is 1 foot square and 1 inch thick.

In certain areas, some scientists believe, one out of every three trees is dead or dying, victims of the drought or the resulting disease and beetle infestation.

At the same time, up to 50 tons per acre of dead branches in the same areas litter the countryside, sheared from trees by a particularly heavy winter storm. Together, the dead trees and branches could fuel especially hot, swift fires.

In addition, above-normal temperatures are forecast throughout much of the summer.

Fires

pave the way for federal assistance. He also headed to Glendale to make a similar declaration.

Deukmejian also authorized a $50,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the arsonist.

Fire danger loomed high throughout Southern California where the brush is parched by four years of drought. A heat wave entered its third day after setting record highs over 100 degrees in many areas.

In Glendale, residents of the hilly neighborhood struck by an arsonist sorted through the ashes — all that was left of many expensive homes.

"I guess we'll just tighten our belts and get on with life," said Dennie Gill, a produce wholesaler whose home was destroyed. "It was a nice house."

Witnesses said they saw one of two young men in a car toss a butane lighter into the brush off Verdugo Road — where the fire started — said Chris Gray, a battalion chief in the Glendale Fire Department.

In Riverside County, a controlled burn that got out of hand when winds unexpectedly changed bore down on the city of Corona after destroying 12 homes.

"Some of the smoldering areas came right up to the back yards of houses," said Bourgault. "There's lots of smoke and hot spots. Some of the hot spots whipped up into pretty good fires."

An arson blaze in the Carbon Canyon area of San Bernardino County blackened 6,640 acres and destroyed at least eight homes, with hundreds more threatened.

Mandela supporters, right, clash with anti-Castro Cuban exiles outside the Miami Beach Convention Center Thursday morning while Nelson Mandela addressed the AFSCME International Convention.

Cuban-Americans challenge Mandela's backing of Castro

By Alan L. Adler
The Associated Press

DETROIT — Nelson Mandela arrived in friendlier territory Thursday after flying from Florida, where Cuban-American mayors had snubbed the African National Congress leader because of his support for Fidel Castro.

As he stepped off the plane, Mandela shook hands with Gov. James Blanchard, Mayor Coleman Young and United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber.

Auto workers at a suburban Ford Motor Co. plant eagerly awaited Mandela at his first scheduled stop on his Detroit itinerary.

"I'm supposed to be working now, but I'm too excited. They can dock me if they want," said assembly plant worker Mike Hill, 39, of Detroit.

Detroit is the sixth stop of Mandela's U.S. tour. After visiting the plant, he was scheduled to attend fund-raisers and speak to a rally at Tiger Stadium.

Before he left Florida, Mandela appealed for help from U.S. labor unions. Outside the Miami Beach Convention center, black supporters faced off with Cuban-Americans who denounced the South African activist's defense of Castro.

Mandela, deputy president of the African National Congress, told the convention delegates that more money and support were needed to force a change in South Africa's apartheid policy of racial separation.

"Sanctions must stay in place until fundamental and irreversible changes have taken place in South Africa," Mandela told the delegates at the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees convention.

The 1.25-million member union has contributed some $250,000 to the anti-apartheid movement. Gerald McEntee, president of the union, said a new fund-raising drive has been started to help the ANC and South African trade unions.

"Continue to say no to apartheid!" he urged the crowd, which repeatedly broke into chants.

He said the union's backing helped him win freedom after 27 years in prison.

The cheering warmth of the estimated 5,000 people inside the convention center followed an icy reception from Miami-area officials.

$49 billion trade deficit with Japan forces U.S. to increase tax revenues

By Elaine Kurtenbach
The Associated Press

TOKYO — U.S. and Japanese trade negotiators agreed Thursday to drastic economic changes to help cut the $49 billion U.S. trade deficit with Japan. Officials said the unprecedented pact would improve the quality of life in both countries.

In the wide-ranging accord, the United States agreed to raise its tax revenues. Japan said it would spend $1 trillion more on public works in the next decade. The two measures are aimed at helping close the trade gap and easing trade friction.

"I welcome and endorse this joint report," President George Bush said in Washington as the talks ended at the Foreign Ministry in Tokyo.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said that carrying out the reforms would be painful. "However, these measures are intended to achieve a major reform of the Japanese economy in the consumers' best interests," he said.

Philippines violence forces removal of Peace Corps

By Eileen Guerrero
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Soldiers wearing masks and civilian clothes fired on mourners carrying the coffin of a slain Communist rebel Thursday as President Corason Aquino bade farewell to hundreds of American Peace Corps volunteers.

The soldiers killed two people and arrested 21 others. They later forced cemetery workers to bury the rebel, whose coffin was dropped as pall bearers and other mourners fled the shooting.

The attack illustrates the pattern of violence that prompted the decision to suspend Peace Corps operations, forcing the U.S. Embassy to warn Americans to take extra safety precautions.

Aquino addressed Peace Corps members one day after U.S. officials ordered all 261 volunteers to leave the Philippines because intelligence reports indicated the New People's Army planned to kill or kidnap them.

"The decision of your government ... caught us by surprise," Aquino told a farewell reception at the presidential palace. "I close with the hope and prayer that your government will reassess the situation." U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt said the United States planned to return volunteers as soon as possible "to continue their efforts in development, in education programs side-by-side with their Filipino colleagues and friends."

Volunteers said they were summoned to Manila on short notice last weekend. Some said they did not have time to say goodbye to friends or pack their belongings.

Volunteers will begin leaving Friday on commercial flights to Hawaii, officials said. During the farewell ceremony, Kim Rylander of Denison, Texas, told Aquino that she regretted leaving the Philippines.

"I will return here when peace is already at hand because I left my heart here," said Rylander, her voice breaking with emotion as she spoke in Tagalog, the main language of the Philippines.

"I am sad to go," said volunteer Tracey Frye, 26, of San Diego. "We love many people here. It's too bad politics got in the way."

U.S. officials said the Peace Corps office in Manila would remain open as a sign that the withdrawal was temporary. Office Director Jim Lehman said there was no timetable for resuming operations and that 78 volunteers scheduled to arrive on July 8 would not be coming.

"In all my experience with the Peace Corps, nothing has been as sad as the last few days," Lehman said. The Peace Corps has operated in the Philippines for 29 years.

'Fail-safe' alarm no hindrance to van Gogh theft

By Jerome Socolovsky
The Associated Press

DEN BOSCH, Netherlands — Thieves smashed a museum window Thursday and made off with three van Gogh paintings after the museum's alarm system, described as fail-safe, did not go off.

The Noordbrabant Museum lost the prize paintings of its collection to thieves who jumped several fences and broke the ground-floor window of the gallery where the paintings were hanging, officials said.

Stolen were "The Sitting Farmer's Wife," "The Digging Farmer's Wife" and "Wheels of the Water Mill in Gennep." The museum's deputy director, Peter Veenland, said their total value was $2.7 million to $5.4 million.

He said the paintings were insured but refused to say for how much.

Vincent van Gogh painted them while living in what is now the town of Nuenen, 18 miles from the museum.

It was the third time in two years that paintings by the Dutch impressionist had been stolen from museums in the Netherlands.

The Noordbrabant Museum has what Veenland called a "state-of-the-art updated alarm system." It has two elements designed to detect intruders — seismic sensors measure movement and infrared sensors to measure body heat.

The security system was turned on and was being monitored by a security firm, but both sets of sensors in the van Gogh gallery were found to be inoperative, Veenland said.

Santa Clara presents a Giant problem
 SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — If the San Francisco Giants want to change their location, they will have to change their name as well.

The Santa Clara City Council approved a proposal to develop a financial package which would bring the Giants to their city — but there are some strings attached.

One of the stickiest of the 16 provisions was that the team become the Santa Clara Giants.

"I want it understood that the name will be changed," said Councilwoman Sue Lasher. "If they moved to Denver, they would change their name; if they move to Santa Clara they should do the same."

The plans include a new outdoor stadium for the team, and supporters in the audience Tuesday night felt strongly about the name change.

"Prime Time" demoted
 NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Deion Sanders, locked in a month-long slump, was demoted by the New York Yankees Thursday for the second time this season.

After scoring the winning run as a pinch runner in a 3-2 victory over Milwaukee, Sanders and his .126 batting average were sent to Columbus of the International League. He had one home run and five RBIs in 40 games.

Baseball

Biggio singled with one out off Mark Grant (1-1) and Anthony pulled a doubled into the right-field corner. Biggio easily beat the throw home by Tony Gwynn.

Larry Andersen (4-1) pitched two innings and gave up one hit. He struck out three.

Cubs 3, Expos 2
 CHICAGO (AP) — Pinch-hitter Marvell Wynne's bloop single scored the winning run with one out in the ninth inning, lifting the Chicago Cubs over the Montreal Expos.

Luis Savarez, who homered earlier, led off with a single against Bill Sampen (6-1) and pitcher Les Lancaster, sent up to sacrifice, walked on five pitches.

Shawon Dunston hit a long fly to center that moved pinch runner Gary Varsho to third base and Wynne, batting for Domingo Ramos, singled over Montreal's drawn-in infield.

Lancaster (6-4) escaped a jam in the ninth, getting Junior Noboa to ground out with two runners on base.

"Deion needs to go out, play and get his stroke back," Yankees general manager Harding Peterson said. "This is no knock at Sanders. We like him very much and still feel he'll make a fine major-league player."

Sanders, a defensive back at Florida State, was a first round draft choice of the NFL Atlanta Falcons a year ago. In September, he hit a home run for the Yankees and then returned a touchdown in the Falcons' opener, becoming the first athlete to manage those two feats in the same week.

Sanders has 72 hours to report to Columbus. Axelrod said he did not think the trip to the minors would affect Sanders' desire to play for the Yankees, who begin training camp next month.

Rice ordered to 75 hours of service
 CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina point guard King Rice was ordered by a judge Thursday to perform 75 hours of community service stemming from an incident where he was charged with resisting arrest.

In addition to the hours of community service, Rice must pay court costs and restitution of about $30 to the town for damaging a jail wall he reportedly punched after his arrest.

The charge will be dropped if the senior from Binghamton, N.Y., performs his community service and pays the fines, under a ruling by Judge Patricia Hunt.

Two other charges stemming from the May 8 incident involving Rice and his girlfriend were dismissed by the judge.

eight inning and the Seattle Mariners overcame two home runs by Bo Jackson to beat the Kansas City Royals.

Bradley, who entered the game as a pinch hitter in the seventh, homered off Jeff Montgomery with two outs. Pete O'Brien was hit by a pitch and Edgar Martinez drew a walk from Mark Davis (1-5) before Bradley hit his first home run of the season.

Mike Schooler, the fourth Seattle pitcher, pitched the ninth for his 19th save. Keith Comstock (3-2) got three outs in the eighth.

Jackson has hit six home runs in his last 11 games. He had his sixth career two-homer game and first since July 4, 1989. Jackson hit three homers in the three-game series at the Kingdome.

Indians 7, Orioles 4
 BALTIMORE (AP) — Al Nipper got his first victory since 1988 and Carlos Baerga and Cory Snyder homered as the Cleveland Indians beat the Baltimore Orioles.

Snyder got three of Cleveland's 14 hits. The Indians have won four of five and Baltimore has lost 12 of 15.

Cup shutouts easy for Zenga, Italians

By Barry Wilner
The Associated Press

ROME — Walter Zenga has not had to work very hard in this World Cup. He wouldn't mind a few more easy outings, which just might mean a world soccer championship for Italy.

The Italian goalie has a 360-minute scoreless streak going. It isn't a record — England's Peter Shilton at 500 minutes, from 1982-86, is — but it is impressive.

Except that even Zenga admits he hasn't done much to earn four shutouts.

He barely touched the ball in wins over Austria and Uruguay, and he was called on for only a handful of saves in victories over the United States and Czechoslovakia.

"Maybe it's not important that a goaltender make 20 saves, but the two or three that keep his team in the game," Zenga said. "I'd be happy to keep it intact, but I'd be just as happy if we win by a score of 2-1 or 3-2 than if I record a shutout. The important thing is to win the tournament."

The Italians have been considered a solid choice to do just that. They've yet to show any weaknesses.

"They are a very formidable team with a solid defense," said Ireland coach Jack Charlton, whose squad meets Italy at Olympic Stadium on Saturday night in the quarterfinals. "Technically, the Italians are a better side. They move quickly and have a lot of skillful players, but I think we will be able to give them a game."

"We'll try to pressurize them and not concentrate purely on defense, although we won't overexpose ourselves. That would be suicidal."

Somehow, they must figure a way to beat the defense, anchored by Franco Baresi and Giuseppe Bergomi. Then comes Zenga, the starting goalie for Inter of Milan for eight years who joined the Italian team in 1986 as a third-stringer.

He became the national goalie in Italy's next international and has been entrenched ever since.

Zenga admits, though, that he's not in the class of Italy's greatest keeper, Dino Zoff, who holds the record for scoreless minutes in all international matches — 1,042.

"I think Zoff's record is safe, as I don't think I'll ever play as well as him," Zenga said. "In the meantime, it's an honor just to be compared to him."

The Irish will be playing the most important game in their history — this is their first World Cup. On Thursday, Irish officials obtained 10,000 additional tickets for the game.

"We have had excellent cooperation from a number of other football associations, particularly England. They have given us their allocation," Sports Minister Frank Fahey said. "Consequently, we were able to obtain 8,500 tickets and another 1,500 have been promised tomorrow."

Some 5,000 Irish fans have received tickets through package deals with travel companies. Thousands more have made the trip to Italy without tickets. Many of them had sleeping bags and were prepared for an all-night vigil to get tickets.

The other quarterfinal games are Argentina vs. Yugoslavia at Florence on Saturday, West Germany-Czechoslovakia at Milan and England-Cameroon at Naples on Sunday.

Soccer's rulemaking board has decided to loosen the offside rule, allowing players to be even with the next-to-the-last defender when receiving a pass from a teammate.

Under the current offside rule, an attacker must have one defender between himself and the goalie when receiving a pass.

Looking for a really, truly good deal on pizza?

AL'S PIZZA
Coupon Philosophy:

Do you ever wonder how discount pizza places can always have those great, special coupon deals? How special can they be if they have them all the time? Maybe their pizza is overpriced so they can give discounts. Did you ever show up without a coupon and feel like a fool paying regular price? And look at what you get for your money! Twelve-inch, one topping doesn't tell the whole story.

Forget cutting coupons! Come to where you get generous toppings and fair prices everyday. Come to Al's Pizza where you get fresh, healthy food that tastes so good you'll forget about saving with a token coupon. Save your health! Save your environment! Save your taste buds! Choose organic - Choose Al's Pizza! You won't believe how much cheese we put on your pizza (other stuff too!) Veggies are always half price. We don't charge for delivery or for checks and we always give you FREE POP if you come for pick-up or eat-in pizza.

At Al's Pizza we operate on a philosophy which seems almost out of style these days: "Give the customers their Money's Worth Everyday."

Navratilova eyeing No. 9; Lendl eating up the grass

By Steve Wilstein
The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Ivan Lendl, a stickler for precision in tennis and language, insists the proper word for his great passion to win Wimbledon is not "obsession," as many have claimed, but rather, "zazrany."

Never heard of zazrany (pronounced, "za-zhra'-nee")? According to a Czechoslovakian dictionary, the word is based on the verb "zrat," which means to gulp, devour or eat noisily like an animal. Metaphorically, zazrany means an ingrained yearning or, in Lendl's definition, a stubborn desire.

OK. So Lendl played like an animal Thursday in devouring his second-round opponent, Czechoslovakian-born Jakob Hlasek, and is not obsessed, in a psychologically compulsive sense, with capturing the only Grand Slam title to escape his clutches.

Lendl chewed up Hlasek, 6-1, 6-3, 6-0, in 78 minutes of near-perfect tennis, opening with an ace and closing with another ace and two service winners. In between, Lendl attacked the net as never before at Wimbledon, rapping volley winners forehand and backhand, left and right, against a bedazzled Hlasek.

"He made me look bad because he played so good," Hlasek, a solid player who beat Lendl at the 1988 Masters and took him to five sets with four tie-breakers at the '89 WCT finals, said. "He has really improved on grass. The whole game — the volley, the serve the confidence. Everything."

Lendl, who failed to win Wimbledon in 10 previous attempts, has repeatedly said that capturing the title is his final mission in tennis. But he rebuffed a suggestion that he is the sentimental favorite this year.

"It's nice to be the favorite, but it's for the wrong reason," he said. "I would rather be the villain with five titles under my belt."

So involved was Lendl in his one-sided match that he was oblivious to the commotion away from Centre Court. Officials suspended play on three courts while the police bomb-squad investigated a leather case found near the main gate. It turned out the case contained only a camera, but worried officials weren't taking chances after a bomb exploded in a London club on Wimbledon's opening day.

Martina Navratilova, another former Czechoslovakian, also showed terrific zazrany in beating Anne Smith 6-2, 6-3 in a second-round to pursue her quest for a record ninth Wimbledon title.

Sporting a bandage on her sore left knee but playing aggressively, Navratilova won the first four games before Smith finally held service. In the second set, Smith opened by holding service, but Navratilova breezed through the next five games for a 5-1 lead.

The only nervous moment for Navratilova came when she was serving for the set at 5-2 and stopped short as if she'd hurt her leg as she chased a passing shot by Smith. The point put Navratilova behind 0-30, and she played the next two points tentatively to lose the game at love and cut her lead to 5-3.

Navratilova didn't have to move much in the next game to end the match, relying instead on errors by Smith to beat her for the 20th time in 21 career meetings over 12 years.

"I was glad to get off the court as quickly as I did," Navratilova said. "I wasn't happy about losing my serve the way I did, but she played some good points."

Chris Evert watched the match from the Royal Box and got a kick out of Navratilova, her longtime friend and rival, curt-sying to her.

"I knew she was going to be there, so I was looking for her, but you can only hold that pose for so long, especially with my left knee," Navratilova said. "That's the one I have to go down with, so I didn't go very long."

Navratilova, seeded No. 2 behind two-time defending champion Steffi Graf, was pleased to play on Centre Court early this year, even if she was a little distracted by the excitement. Last year, Centre Court was dominated in the early rounds by Graf, and Navratilova didn't get there until late in the tournament.

"My mind kept wandering nicely out there," Navratilova said. "Seeing (Evert) up there and Kitty Godfree (formerly Kathleen McKane), I was thinking, 'OK, what year did she win this? She won it twice, right? '24 and '26.'"

"So it was hard to keep your concentration on the Centre. And you look farther to the right and there were all the club members and past champions, and it was fun."

Gabriela Sabatini, the women's fourth seed, didn't have quite as much fun in taking a tough match against 15-year-old Anke Huber, 6-2, 7-6 (8-6).

On the men's side, No. 3 Stefan Edberg kept pace with Lendl in reaching the third round, along with No. 9 Jim Courier and No. 13 Michael Chang. Alex Antonitsch beat 15th seed Henri Leconte to bring to eight the number of men's seeds out after two rounds. Leconte had been seeded to meet Lendl in the fourth round.

Edberg had little trouble in taming the "Cat," as Miloslav Mecir is called, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2. Mecir won a tuneup exhibition on grass last week but has been bothered by a chronic back ailment.

"He's not as quick as he can be because obviously he hasn't played as much and had a lot of problems with his back," Edberg said. "He sort of had a little bit of problems reaching for very difficult balls."

Martina Navratilova celebrates during her second round match with Anna Smith of the United States Thursday at Wimbledon. Martina went on to win 6-2, 6-3.

NCAA investigation finished; Drake officials await results

DES MOINES (AP) — The National Collegiate Athletic Association has completed its probe of the Drake basketball program but has not informed the school of its conclusions.

Drake President Michael Ferrari said he does not think the NCAA investigators found any violations other than those discovered by the school in March. Among other violations, the school discovered that an assistant coach had written term papers for two members of the team.

The assistant coach was fired. Former coach Tom this month have signed national letters of intent to play at Iowa, coach Duane Banks has announced.

Tim Goodwin, a 6-foot-3 outfielder from Burlington, was a draft choice of the Detroit Tigers, while 6-foot-5 pitcher Chad MacKendrick from Grand Junction, Colo., was chosen by the Minnesota Twins.

Goodwin was first-team all-state as a junior and earned honorable mention status as a freshman and sophomore. The three-time all-conference selection was also the 1988 Area Player of the Year.

MacKendrick, his school's co-MVP, was 3-1 as a senior, including a 14-strikeout performance in the league championship game. The right-hander also posted a 5-1 mark as a junior.

Anderson gets post-graduate award

Iowa swimmer Becky Anderson has been awarded a $4,000 NCAA post-graduate scholarship, university officials have announced.

Anderson is among 15 NCAA Division I female student-athletes to be awarded the scholarship and is one of only two Division I swimmers to receive the award. Iowa City native Ann Colloton, who attends the University of Michigan, was the other swimmer.

A native of Laramie, Wyo., Anderson has been named to the Iowa Dean's List eight consecutive semesters, while receiving President's List honors twice. An electrical engineering major, she boasts a 3.96 grade point average.

Entries due for Fast Pitch softball

The Women's Major Fast Pitch and Women's Class A Fast Pitch State Tournaments will be held July 14-15 in Des Moines.

The top three finishers will advance to their respective regional tournament which will be held July 27-29 in Kansas City.

An entry form and entry fee of $75 will be due in the See Briefs, Page 9

Abetamarco was relieved of his duties and later left the school.

Ferrari said Drake will probably receive notification from the NCAA that violations were found. School officials hope the NCAA will be lenient since the school reported the infractions and conducted its own investigation.

Signees star in coaches classic

Iowa basketball recruit Paul Lusk poured in 31 points and was named Most Valuable Player of the Illinois Basketball Coaches Association All-Star game held last weekend at the Peoria Civic Center.

The 6-foot-4 guard, who also won the slam-dunk contest, broke the 15-year-old scoring record which was previously held by Sean Connors, who went on to play at Notre Dame, and DePaul star David Booth. The record had stood at 29.

James Winters, another Iowa signee, had 10 points and 11 rebounds in the contest.

Daugherty leads Rangers over Twins

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jack Daugherty tripled and hit two of Texas' team record-tying seven doubles Thursday, leading the Rangers over the Minnesota Twins 8-6.

Daugherty got four of the Rangers' 15 hits. Texas split the four-game series and beat Minnesota for the seventh time in 10 games.

Bobby Witt (4-8) gave up one run on eight hits in seven innings. He lasted only 3½ innings against Seattle in his last start, his shortest outing of the season.

Texas chased David West (3-6) with five runs on six hits in the second inning. West went only 1½ innings in his previous start against the Rangers, a 7-1 loss.

John Russell and Mike Stanley doubled in the second and Cecil Espy singled for his first RBI since last Sept. 25. Daugherty doubled for the second time in two innings and Julio Franco and Ruben Sierra added RBI singles for a 5-0 lead.

Red Sox 4, Blue Jays 3
BOSTON (AP) — Boston's Roger Clemens posted his 12th victory despite a pair of homers by Toronto's Fred McGriff and the Red Sox completed a four-game sweep of the Blue Jays 4-3 Thursday night.

Clemens (12-3) gave up eight hits but struck out nine and walked just one as the Red Sox improved their lead over Toronto in the American League East to 3½ games. Clemens tied Oakland's Bob Welch for the most victories in the majors.

Jeff Reardon pitched a hitless ninth for his 13th save. The Red Sox broke a 1-1 tie with Toronto in the fifth inning off Todd Stottlemyre (8-7) and equaled their season high with a seventh consecutive victory.

It was the Red Sox' first sweep over Toronto in Fenway Park since 1985. The Blue Jays began the series with a 15-game winning streak in Boston, beginning in 1987.

Yankees 3, Brewers 2
NEW YORK (AP) — Tim Lary's luck has been so bad this year, he no longer expects to win. He's just happy not to lose.

Lary, despite allowing only four hits and one run in seven innings Thursday, ended up with a no-decision in the New York Yankees' 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. Bob Geren won it with a two-out single in the ninth.

"I'm just happy we won the game," said Lary, who still has a 3-10 record and six-game losing streak. "Wins are overrated. It's nice to get a win, but it's just one stat. I did my job."

Lary, supported by two runs or less in nine of his 15 starts this season, left the game with a 2-1 lead. He did lower his earned run average to 3.38.

Lee Guetterman pitched a scoreless eighth and Dave Righetti took over to start the ninth. Gary Sheffield led off with his second home run of the season, making it 2-all, and Righetti (1-0) wound

Roger Clemens up with the victory. Astros 2, Padres 1
HOUSTON (AP) — Eric Anthony doubled home Craig Biggio from first base with one out in the 10th inning Thursday and the Houston Astros beat the San Diego Padres 2-1.

Big Ten basketball sets TV schedules

The Daily Iowan

At least 26 Iowa basketball games will be televised next season as a part of the Big Ten's agreements with three television networks, according to schedules approved by league athletic directors at the conference's recent summer meetings.

Raycom Sports and Entertainment, ABC and ESPN will broadcast 133 of the 152 conference home games next year. All 90 Big Ten contests will be televised.

Three Iowa games — including road games at Wisconsin and Illinois and a home contest with Minnesota — will be cablecast by ESPN under its contract with the Big Ten.

Iowa's first-round game against Temple in the Preseason NIT is also scheduled to be aired by ESPN, but is not covered in the agreement. Should the Hawkeyes win that game, later round NIT games may also be broadcast by the network.

Raycom will televise 21 Hawkeye games, including 14 conference matchups. Iowa's home games against Iowa State Dec. 8 and UCLA Dec. 22 will also be aired by Raycom.

ABC will tip off its Big Ten coverage, which includes 21 Big Ten appearances, with Indiana against Louisville in the "Big Four Classic" in Indianapolis Dec. 1. The network has no Iowa games scheduled.

The date and television coverage for the Hawkeyes' final home contest with Ohio State has not yet been announced. The game is slated for either Saturday, March 9, or Sunday, March 10.

The Big Ten is currently in the final year of its four-year agreement with ABC and the second year of its six-year contracts with ESPN and Raycom Sports and Entertainment.
