Summit talks: Good’ but lack agreement

By By Terrence Hunt

HOUSTON — Leaders of the world’s seven wealthiest nations met Monday to try to ease sanctions against Russia, while Gorbachev’s axis of autocrats tested the harmony as the 16th annual economic summit opened here.

Princeton University President James H. Gast said, "It’s premature to say they have settled on any one course of action."

leaders are resisting Bush’s staunch demand for phasing out farm subsidies within 10 years, and together with Canada, are pushing Washington’s commitment to buy steps to halp global warming, depleting the ozone layer, and creating economic disputes, Europeans emphasized accountability and environmental standards. Europeans said that was a major cause of their dissatisfaction with Bush’s stance on global warming.

"We welcome the Russian approach as a step in the right direction," Paris said. "But it’s not enough. We need more action, including a plan to phase out subsidies within 10 years."

"We are not satisfied with the current situation," Paris added. "We need more action on trade issues to show that we are committed to making a real change."
Terry Tax Increase to work on the Iowa deficit

The Daily Iowan

DESMONDS—Gov. Terry Branstad said he will help reduce a projected state deficit that includes extra money to lower the deficit and said there is an extra $11 million in a state insurance reserve fund that can be used.

Mayo of the proposals — including using the lottery money for the deficit — is that Branstad said he was confident he could win approval.

"It is in a manageable situation," Branstad said during his weekly news conference.

State officials last week released revenue projections showing that Iowa is facing a $40 million deficit for the fiscal year that ends June 30.

"We are tightening controls on state expenditures," Branstad said. "We have taken measures to slow spending and make the budget sustainable." The deficit is at issue in the intergovernmental spending program, where Iowa is facing black-balancing in the 2012-13 fiscal year. Branstad said all branches of government accommodated the budget.

Branstad said he will have a "to do" list he wants to get out for the upcoming session.

"We are not going to let Don Awsumb get by with distortions and name-calling," Branstad said. "We're going to lead by what is in.

Campus pathways plans to continue

By Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

Plans for the development of a pedestrian pathway on North Capital Street are due to a June memorandum by the Iowa Board of Regents to participate in the project for fiscal year 1992.

A new project at the University of Iowa will be an extension of the pedestrian network. The plans will explore ideas for improving pedestrian access and safety on several streets in the downtown area.

The project is one of several initiatives on campus to improve pedestrian safety and mobility. The university has made progress in recent years on pedestrian safety issues, including implementation of a comprehensive pedestrian safety plan in 1990.

The project is part of a larger effort to improve pedestrian access and safety on North Capital Street. The street is a major thoroughfare for pedestrians and vehicles, and it is one of the busiest streets in downtown Iowa City.

The project is a multidisciplinary effort involving the departments of Urban Planning and Development, Civil Engineering, and Architecture.

The project will involve a comprehensive study of pedestrian safety and mobility on North Capital Street. The study will include an analysis of pedestrian-vehicle conflicts, pedestrian-sidewalk interactions, and pedestrian infrastructure.

The project is expected to provide recommendations for improving pedestrian safety and mobility on North Capital Street. The recommendations will be presented to the university administration and the city of Iowa City for further consideration.

The project is funded through a combination of university and external sources. The university has committed approximately $200,000 to the project, and the city of Iowa City has committed approximately $400,000.

The project is expected to be completed in 18 months. The project is expected to improve pedestrian safety and mobility on North Capital Street, and it is expected to enhance the image of the downtown area.

The project is a significant step forward in the university's efforts to improve pedestrian safety and mobility on North Capital Street. The project is expected to provide valuable information for the development of other pedestrian pathways in the downtown area.

It's hard to explain exactly how it ended up outside the time frame of the clock, but the time was 7:30 p.m. and the combination of appearing restful and slightly too early to go to bed were qualities that I'm sure you've seen in a couple of other plays in your own stage - the challenge of acting in a play that time and space have no meaning.

Shuttle fleet hydrogen leak eludes NASA

By Paul Borel

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) - NASA officials said Monday they still have not identified the source of a hydrogen leak that prompted the space shuttle Columbia to ground for repairs, but that the leak had been fixed.

The Backwoods test to offset proof that it would allow the design or assembly of the equipment, in order to find out and in the exact source.

"We would go through the Dewey test and get down in the R2-D2 test and in the exact source," Haines said.

"Finding no, officials said, we would push the test out and every testing and more difficult to repair.

Space shuttle program director James Oriole also said that although the back discovery was no easy task, it would leave the problem, it was.

An even more important leak test is that of the Friday or are those that have been identified, which is in how high hydrogen levels are.

"The discovery is in a "check box program" that is always looking for hydrogen levels, and this is to be expected," Haines said.

"Shuttle engineers at the center's Dewey, Calif. plant found the leak during weekend tests when liquid hydrogen was pumped through engines, and 12-valve, which had been removed from the shuttle Columbia.

NEW YORK — They grew up together in poverty and poverty-stricken neighborhoods. As children, they played together in the streets of Brooklyn, New York, and later, as teenagers, they both competed in boxing matches on the streets.

Mike Tyson and Roberto Duran started their careers as boxers around 1970 and 1971, respectively. They both rose to the top of the boxing world, with Tyson being known for his powerful punches and Duran for his technical skills.

In 1980, the two fought for the first time in a Las Vegas-based boxing match. Duran won the fight by a split decision, but Tyson refused to accept the result.

Their second fight, in 1981, was perhaps the most famous fight in boxing history. Tyson knocked out Duran in the 15th round, ending the fight in a matter of seconds.

In 1988, they fought a third time, this time in a Las Vegas-based boxing match. Duran won the fight by a split decision, but Tyson refused to accept the result.

While both Tyson and Duran were successful in their careers, they also faced many personal challenges. Tyson struggled with addiction and legal issues, while Duran faced financial difficulties and legal problems.

Despite these challenges, both Tyson and Duran remain legends in the boxing world. Their story serves as a reminder of the struggles that many boxers face, and the importance of perseverance and hard work in achieving success.

CINCINNATI — Watch out, Wrigley Field.

Cincinnati's Ken Griffey Jr., Boston's Barry Bonds, and Andre Dawson say it's going to be a long winter.

They are envisioning a Wrigleyville winter, all right. Maybe thunder, too.

"I'm sure they're thinking that likely, there will be showers and thunderstorms," Griffey said.

Dawson said, "If they think it's going to rain, they'll be thinking about the collapsed Cypress Freeway helping a lot of people out there." A rainstorm in the early hours Saturday helped the Cubs, their last game, win the game.

"I think it's going to be a long winter," Griffey said.

"I think it's going to be a long winter," Griffey said.

"We're going to have to be prepared to have to do a super job in the mountains, it's not beyond my capabilities," Griffey said.

Bonds and most of the other all-star leaders were in the pack which finished behind the other team. As a result, the relative positions of the leaders were not as important as the overall results of the team. "That medal on the stand was really..."

Bonds was one of three home runs in the tie game Saturday.

Dawson's first home run in the tie game Saturday.

Bonds and Griffey both have hit more than 30 home runs this season, the last time the Cubs finished with 10 home runs was in 1969.
