Khmer Rouge gains led to U.S. changes

By Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration's abrupt change in policy toward Cambodia came after U.S. intelligence reported that the feared Khmer Rouge guerrillas were making military gains shockingly similar to those that led them into power 15 years ago, say sources familiar with the reports.

American intelligence analysts also have found, contrary to public assurances by the Bush administration, that supplies bought by the United States for non-communist rebels battling the Cambodian government often flow through supply lines controlled by the Khmer Rouge.

The analysis has been offered in briefings by the Central Intelligence Agency and by the Defense Intelligence Agency for congressional oversight committees and interested executive branch officials, according to the sources, who requested anonymity.

The Khmer Rouge presided over a massive social experiment in Cambodia during its 3½-year rule that resulted in the deaths of more than 1 million countrymen from execution, starvation and disease when urbanites were forced into the countryside to farm.

Apparently fearing the resurgence of the communist guerrillas, the Bush administration announced Wednesday it was withdrawing support for a U.N. seat for the three-party resistance that includes the Khmer Rouge and open talks with the Cambodian government's Vietnamese sponsors.

The sources said U.S. intelligence sees the events in 1974 and 1975 that led to the takeover of Cambodia by the Khmer Rouge as a virtual "model" for events occurring now.

Events happening now include attacks on provincial capitals and other significant targets, a near-permanent presence in the northern part of the country and deeper penetration since Vietnamese occupation forces withdrew last year.

The stepped-up attacks by the Khmer Rouge, which has a troop strength of 30,000 to 40,000, now threaten the Vietnam-installed regime of Hun Sen, and there are reports that in some instances the government's soldiers have stopped fighting, according to the analysis.

The intelligence reports appear to agree with observations made by an Associated Press reporter on a recent five-week, 450-mile trip into Cambodia's northern areas. The reporter saw well-supplied Khmer Rouge troops in control of large expanses of territory and spoke to commanders who claimed easier-than-expected success in routing government troops.

Soviet and Vietnamese aid to the Cambodian government has declined, and while Phnom Penh remains a bustling capital with a robust economy, the economy in government-controlled parts of the countryside is fragile and inflation is rising, the analysts concluded. Some government workers and military personnel are not being paid, the analysts said.

U.S. intelligence believes that all of the 140,000 Vietnamese troops who were in Cambodia have been withdrawn, with only a few advisers remaining.

The intelligence agencies estimate China's military aid to the Khmer Rouge at about $100 million a year.

Other sources have said the U.S. move may add to Khmer support

BANGKOK, Thailand — Prince Norodom Sihanouk on Thursday criticized a cutback in U.S. support for his guerrilla coalition, saying that would only make it "more firm and fierce" in battling the Cambodian government.

China indicated it would continue its crucial aid to the Khmer Rouge, while some of the coalition's other allies in Southeast Asia said they doubted the U.S. shift would promote a peaceful settlement.

Cambodia's government, along with its Vietnamese backers, welcomed the U.S. move Wednesday to withdraw recognition of the resistance coalition and open a dialogue with Vietnam on resolving the 11-year-old civil war.

Britain also praised the U.S. decision and said it also opposes the Cambodian resistance alliance, dominated by the fanatical Khmer Rouge, having Cambodia's seat at the United Nations.

The U.S. decision reflected fears of a resurgence of the Communist Khmer Rouge, which killed or

Guilty

Chewning convicted in wife's death

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

More than nine months after the body of Dianne Chewning was found naked and strangled to death in a Coralville motel room, justice delivered her what Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White called "a measure of dignity."

Thursday, Frank Chewning was convicted of murder in the second degree for his wife's death.

"Justice has been served," White said. "And with it brings a measure of peace and dignity to Dianne Chewning and her family."

The jury, made up of eight women and four men, delivered its verdict shortly after 4:15 p.m. Thursday after deliberating for more than nine hours Wednesday and Thursday.

Dianne Chewning's mother, three sisters and brother cheered, clapped and wept when the verdict was announced by Judge William Eads.

Frank Chewning, who did not take the stand to testify on his own behalf, remained unemotional during the reading of the verdict. He was then taken into the custody of the county sheriff and is scheduled to be sentenced Aug. 31.

The maximum sentence for second-degree murder in Iowa is 50 years with chance for parole.

"It's wonderful, it's wonderful," said one of Dianne Chewning's sisters about the verdict. "We were afraid he was going to get away with a lesser charge."

During the 2½ days of testimony, the question of whether Frank Chewning acted with malice aforethought when he strangled his wife emerged as the central issue of the case.

Malice aforethought is defined as a state of mind that leads a person to intentionally do a wrongful act out of hatred or with an evil or unlawful purpose. Defense lawyer Patrick Peters argued Chewning acted "in the heat of passion" rather than with malice aforethought.

Dianne Chewning's body was found Oct. 6 in Room 225 of the University Inn, Highway 6 West in Coralville. Frank Chewning was arrested for the murder of his wife in Ogden, Utah, Nov. 2.

Migrant labor housing dominates local trial

By Lindsay Alan Park
The Daily Iowan

Migrant labor housing issues dominated Thursday's trial of a Lone Tree farmer charged with 11 misdemeanor counts of zoning ordinance violations.

Darrell Thomas Bell, RR 2, Lone Tree, pleaded not guilty of violating rural zoning laws, which forbid placing more than two single-family dwellings on agricultural property of less than 40 acres.

The charges stemmed from the presence of several mobile homes on Bell's property used to house migrant laborers.

Bell operated a migrant labor camp for seedcorn detasseling in 1989 under a consent decree, which temporarily allowed him to operate the camp.

Bell and his business partners are suing the Johnson County Board of Supervisors for alleged civil rights violations and illegal discrimination in connection with the board's failure to pass regulations for migrant labor camps in Johnson County.

Judge Marsha Bergan presided over the trial, which began at 9 a.m. Thursday in magistrate court in the Johnson County Courthouse.

Bell's defense attorneys, Larry Lynch and Stephen Greenleaf, argued that county officials left Bell with no way to legally conduct his business.

"The problem is that no regulations have been passed," Lynch said.

While the defense questioned numerous witnesses mainly about conditions of — and issues relating to — Bell's migrant camp in 1989 and 1990, state prosecutor Anne Lahey

Phase 3 of construction of the UI Laser Center, located by the Union, is about to begin. Phase 3 was originally scheduled to begin a year ago.

Construction of UI laser building expected to be finished by 1992

By Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

The UI laser research building will be finished in two years — believe it or not.

Richard Gibson, director of UI Facilities Planning, dispelled rumors that the UI laser facility might never be completed. According to Gibson, even though there appears to be little activity at the site for the laser facility, work is under way to complete it.

"It doesn't mean that because there isn't anyone out there (on the site) that there isn't something being done," Gibson said. "And it should be completed two years from now."

The UI's laser building has had a long history of problems associated with it, accumulating when construction was halted last summer because contractors' bids exceeded the UI's budget by approximately $5 million.

"We would have awarded the contracts for Phase III of the project last summer and work would have been going on, but we couldn't," Gibson said.

The UI was forced to redesign parts of the building in an effort to meet the $21.5 million budget.

Part of the changes in the building's design include the removal of a wing that was originally planned for office space and leaving certain areas of the building in skeletal form.

Gibson said the "unfinishing" of some areas of the building could conceivably affect the work done there.

"I suspect that it will be a high priority to finish those spaces," Gibson said. "However, the cost to finish the project will be nothing compared to the cost of equipping some areas of the facility."

Gibson admitted the UI has had some difficulties constructing the building under budget, but he said the project is now under control. Bids for the construction of Phase III were received and accepted late last June. They came in $1.8 million below budget, much to Gibson's relief.

"I would admit very easily and quickly that when the bids came in, I was relieved," Gibson said. "We don't like to make the same mistake twice."

Students give thoughts on laser center

By Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

It was a simple question that drew a varied response from people on campus.

When asked, "What are your thoughts about the UI laser center?" responses ranged from confusion to apathy.

"I'm not sure what's going on there. Are they going to build it or not? I think they should build it or put it back to the way it was," — Mary Jo Schiltz, a senior from Bancroft, Ia.

"I think it's good for the university, but I haven't been looking into it at all." — Dean Wille, a UI graduate from Guttenberg, Ia.

Coralville resident found dead

By Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

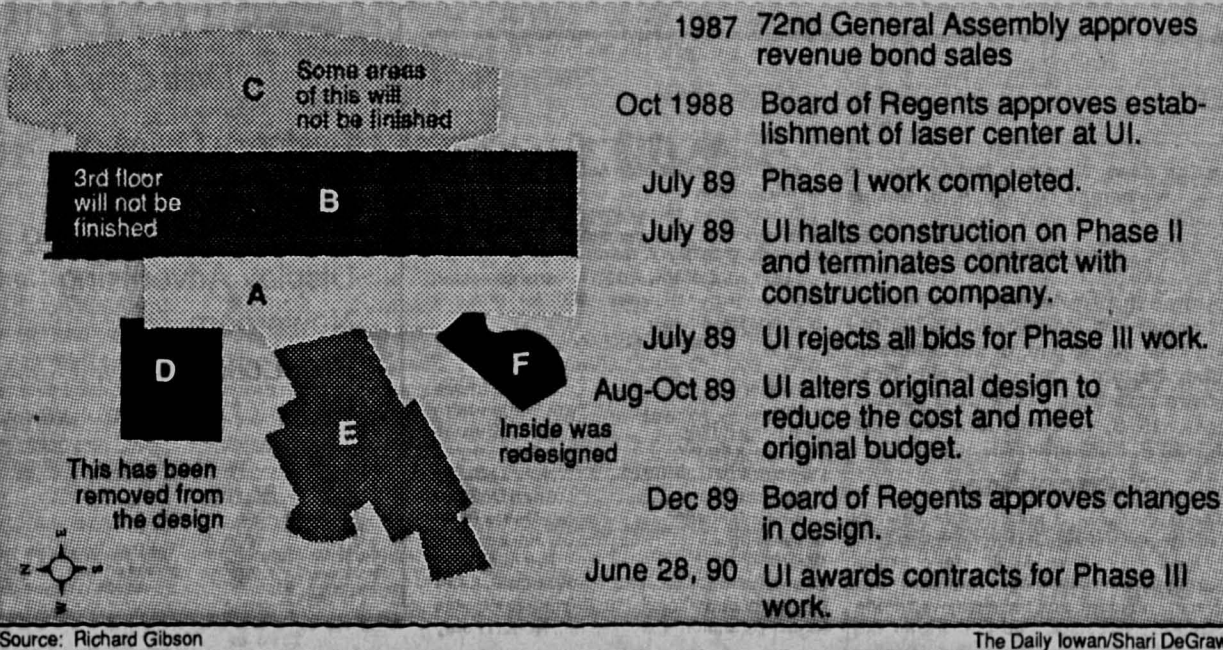

Johnson County authorities are investigating a possible suicide after the body of a man was discovered in a creek Wednesday afternoon.

The body of Andrew Elthon, 24, was recovered from Muddy Creek, which is located north of Coralville city limits. Johnson County Sheriff's Deputies responded to the scene about 3 p.m. Coralville detectives also responded because a missing person had been reported to them earlier this month.

Elthon, a Coralville resident, was reported missing by friends July 2, but authorities said he had been missing since June 23.

Johnson County Medical Examiner T.T. Bozek was at the scene and has not ruled on the cause of death at this time.

IC co-op offers another choice

By Susan Stapleton
The Daily iowan

Students who are tired of waiting in long book buy-back lines only to get a quarter for Dante's "Inferno" or to discover that "Cost Accounting" can't be bought back have a new resource to turn to — the Iowa City Book Co-op.

The store, owned and operated by 23-year-old Andre Delouiser, opened a week ago Thursday at 16½ S. Clinton St.

Delouiser said he opened the co-op primarily because of "the limitations the university co-op has put on students."

Delouiser takes non-current semester books — books that won't be used the following semester, which the UISA Book Co-op no longer accepts.

"(At the UISA Co-op) you can't bring back literature," Delouiser said. "Unless the book is used for school next semester, they won't take it. It just got to me because they were doing this to students."

He said he also felt the book buy-backs at other bookstores were unfair to students.

"There's no reason to pay $50 for a book because they buy them from you for $15 then sell it for $45 again," said Delouiser. "You might as well get your money's worth here."

Students set their own prices for their books at the Iowa City Book

Andre Delouiser, 23, of Iowa City, sits in front of a shelf of used books in his newly opened bookstore.

The Iowa City Book Cooperative, 16½ S. Clinton St., opened last Thursday and has over 1,200 books.

Co-op, and there aren't any long forms or cards to fill out.

To use the Iowa City Book Co-op, Delouiser requests that students' Social Security numbers are written inside the books, along with their asking price. The price of the book can't be more than the original price or less than $1.

Interested booksellers don't have to be a member of the co-op, but Delouiser said it pays better. Delouiser takes a 12.5 percent commission on members compared to an escalated commission up to 40 percent on non-members.

Membership costs start at $1 and escalate up to $5, depending on how many books you want to sell.

"The membership fee is basically a housing fee for the books," Delouiser said.

And you don't have to wait until the end of the semester for your money. Delouiser said he pays people once every 15 to 20 days.

Delouiser had about 50 books when he started July 12. Now he has over 1,200.

Most of his big customers were recommended by the UISA Book Co-op, which brought Delouiser one student with over 600 books and several other customers.

Delouiser said he eventually wants to publish books written by university students across the nation at his current Iowa City location.

Other long-term goals include a gay and lesbian section in September of around 5,000 new and used titles and a toll-free number for customers across the nation to call for used books.

"What I want students to do is call me about a book they want," Delouiser said. "I know where to get it used, and they can get it cheaper through me than other stores."

5th annual beach party offers sand but not surf

By Ann Marie Williams
The Daily iowan

The fifth annual World's Biggest Beach Party will be held in Williamsburg this weekend, featuring entertainment, five live bands and a football-field sized beach called No-Wa-Wa.

The beach party, sponsored by local service organizations and businesses, will be held Saturday and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Steve Gander, beach party manager, said the Williamsburg "beach" is probably the cleanest beach in the state of Iowa because of the recent flooding.

"All the other beaches are underwater," he said.

Between 15,000 and 16,000 people of all ages are expected to attend the event throughout the weekend, Gander said.

"You're never going to see five bands, skydiving and a comedian anywhere else for $10 per day," he said. "For the entertainment that you get, it can't be beat."

Bands scheduled to perform this weekend at the beach party include The Guess Who, Three Dog Night and The Rumbles.

In addition to music, the party offers activities including mechanical surfing, hot air balloons and a classic car show. Five volleyball courts and a frisbee golf course will also be set up.

For kids, the party offers a huge wading pool and lots of games and activities, and all the children who participate in the games will get prizes.

Contests ranging from "Ugliest Legs" to "Best Beach Belly" will be held, and over 6,000 prizes and trophies will be awarded throughout the weekend.

UI mathematics symposium

The UI will host an international mathematics symposium at the Union on Saturday. The program will feature 11 mathematics experts from five countries: Brazil, Germany, Japan, the Soviet Union and the United States.

The symposium will deal with "optimization," a mathematical method that uses supercomputers to determine the best possible combination of many variables. The speakers will outline new methods for solving complex optimization problems arising in the fields of economics, engineering, management sciences, and probability and statistics.

The symposium is sponsored by the UI Office of Educational Development and Research.

Duran-Cerda receives scholarship

UI graduate student Delores Duran-Cerda of Iowa City has been chosen as a National Hispanic Scholarship Fund Scholar for the 1990-91 academic year.

A student in Spanish-American literature and linguistics, Duran-Cerda graduated from the UI with a bachelor's degree in education. The NHSF scholarship is awarded on the basis of academic achievement, strong leadership and financial need.

Biocatalysis center established

A new Center for Biocatalysis and Bioprocessing will be created at the UI through a $300,000 legislative appropriation from the state of Iowa. Jonathan Dordick, UI professor of pharmacy, has been named director of the center.

Biocatalysis is a segment of biotechnology that uses living catalysts, mainly enzymes, in chemical reactions. The center was started by a diverse team of 35 UI faculty researchers whose total funding exceeds $5 million.

Biocatalysis researchers will also receive a $450,000 grant from the National Institutes of Health to fund graduate biocatalysis students.

1990 Elderfest planned

Kirkwood Community College will host a day of celebration and entertainment for senior citizens Saturday.

All area seniors and their families are invited to attend the program, which will include music, dancing and educational presentations. The entertainment and educational events are free. Tickets for the luncheon can be purchased in advance for $4 at all area congregational meal sites and senior centers. Lunch tickets will be available at the door for $5.

The event is sponsored by the Heritage Agency on Aging.

Courts

By Jenny Hanna
The Daily iowan

An Iowa City man was charged Wednesday with second-degree burglary and interference with official acts causing injury, according to Johnson County District Court records.

According to court records, police arrived Wednesday at the residence of John L. Evans, 21, 2119 Taylor Drive, to arrest him for a second-degree burglary charge.

When police arrived, the defendant fled out the back door of his home but was later located in the back yard of a nearby residence, court records state.

The defendant continued to flee from police but was caught and arrested by an officer, court records state.

The records state the officer suffered numerous abrasions as a result of the altercation.

The defendant allegedly stole an automobile Monday from Grand Prix Motors, 733 S. Capitol St., resulting in the original charge of second-degree burglary.

The defendant admitted to prying

a door of the business open and stealing several pieces to a socket set and a set of keys, court records state.

The defendant subsequently used the keys to steal a car that was in the shop to have its transmission fixed, court records state.

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for July 27.

Paul McCartney plays a five-string bass guitar during his concert Wednesday night in Ames.

McCartney gives choice show including prime Beatles hits

By Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

The Paul McCartney press conference preceding his concert Wednesday night in Ames was filled with a perhaps exorbitant anticipation. While the veggie vs. meat controversy didn't exactly equal the "more popular than Jesus" firestorm of 25 years earlier, it did give the impending event an edge that it otherwise would have lacked.

As expected, many of the reporters' questions dealt with what McCartney's publicist coyly referred to as "the issue." McCartney fielded the queries about his animal-rights pronouncements with good humor but never launched into a vigorous defense of his beliefs.

"We've been vegetarians for 20 years, and we've heard all these arguments before," he said, referring to himself and his wife, Linda. "It's a free country, guys, and we're free to express our opinions. . . . And so is k.d. lang, I reckon."

One reporter brought up the fact that while McCartney is a vegetarian, he also wears leather shoes. Evidence of hypocrisy, perhaps?

"Well, (vegetarianism) isn't a watertight argument," McCartney replied. "If they made good practical plastic shoes, I'd wear 'em. . . . For me it's just compassion for animals. I just don't want to eat them."

After the fifth or so meat question, McCartney provided the best line of the day: "I'm pro-corn," he said, smiling and holding up his hands in mock surrender. "How's that, guys? Very pro-corn." (He would later repeat this sentiment to the concert audience to huge applause — everyone, of course, conveniently ignoring the fact that a good portion of the corn grown in this state is used to fatten hogs.)

Some of the questions seemed a bit, well, esoteric: "What's the true story," one guy in the back wanted to know, "behind the missing note in 'Day Tripper'?"

"Your guess is as good as mine, guff," a bemused McCartney replied. "I've never even heard the legend of the missing note in 'Day Tripper.'"

Review

Cyclone Stadium was cool and breezy — perfect concert weather, in spite of the threat of thunderstorms. Overhead flew helicopters trailing banners with witty commentaries on the controversy: "KDWZ welcomes Paul McCartney" . . . "I Want to Hold Your Hoof" . . . "Hey Paul, Don't Have a Cow, Man."

The show, which started about 9:30, was preceded by an 11-minute film showing highlights from McCartney's career, juxtaposed with historical footage (Nixon, Vietnam, Chairman Mao) and backed by appropriate McCartney songs from the various eras. It was all very impressive and self-inflating for the audience.

Finally, McCartney and his band came onstage, picked up their instruments and opened with "Figure of Eight," the latest single from the "Flowers in the Dirt" album. The crowd's response was dutifully enthusiastic, but you could read the minds of the people in the stands: Beatles hits . . . Beatles hits . . . We want Beatles hits . . .

This collective desire was finally gratified with "Got to Get You Into My Life," the third song and the first of many nostalgic trips of the evening. No doubt about it, McCartney gave the people what they wanted: This was the closest thing rock 'n' roll had to a classical symphony, and he played master conductor throughout. People were really there to hear the music, to contemplate it, to get weepy listening to "Let It Be."

Everything was well-paced, with slower ballads from the late Beatles period alternating with earlier rockers and a few Wings nuggets: "The Long and Winding Road," "I Saw Her Standing There," "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," "Band On the Run." McCartney was in strong voice throughout — at age 49, he still can yowl better than anybody in the business.

Tribute was also paid to John Lennon, with a medley of three of his songs — "Strawberry Fields Forever," "Help" and "Give Peace a Chance." The gesture was appreciated heartily by the crowd, though it was a bit bizarre hearing McCartney try to imitate Lennon's nasal singing voice. His generosity was almost numbing — it was as though he were trying to provide everything, to give us the Beatles reunion concert we'll never actually witness.

The show featured what was probably the best sound quality I've ever heard in a stadium show: The drums, guitar, synthesized horns and Linda's inevitable tambourine all had CD-like clarity. I could nearly discern the individual strings being strummed on the electric guitars.

Interestingly, there weren't very many lighters held aloft during "Hey Jude," the concert's finale — which I suppose was appropriate, since the song is so epochal it doesn't really need visual effects. The almost perfect darkness, with 55,000 voices singing along, was the best accompaniment imaginable.

The show's encore — "Yesterday," "Get Back" and the "Golden Slumbers/Carry That Weight/The End" medley from "Abbey Road" (which, fortunately, was not followed by "Her Majesty") — pretty much summed things up. Unadventurous, maybe, but a beautiful package nonetheless.

A new bar may be opening up at 121 E. College St., formerly the location of The College St. Club.

But the "opening soon" sign in the window may have been better labeled "sooner or later."

Ruth Swisher, who owns the building, said she will hold the liquor license for the bar, "if we get a liquor license."

Swisher has yet to apply for the license through the city clerk's office.

Swisher, of Burlington, said she will own the bar so she can control it if she wants to change over to another tenant. She also owns several other buildings on the block, including The Soap Opera, 119 E. College St. and The Iowa Artisans' Gallery, 117 E. College St.

The College St. Club closed last December. The bar's reopening comes after a six-month forfeiture of Swisher's property to the U.S. government for its interest in the bar after the trials of Harry Ambrose and Larry Regennitter.

Ambrose and Regennitter, former owners of the College St. Club, are serving sentences for conspiracy to distribute cocaine and other cocaine-related charges.

Swisher filed a claim to retrieve her property June 28, claiming she lost $47,000 in rent after the bar closed.

"There was a payment made by me to the government for their interest in the bar that transferred the property back to me," Swisher said.

Swisher added she paid $6,000 for the interest that the government had in the bar's assets.

"Forfeiture comes before leases in the law. The government no longer has any interest in College St. Club," Swisher said.

Sources that did not want to be identified said Larry Regennitter's wife, Lisa, may act as the overseer for the bar; Joe Bell, former owner of Studio 114, 114 Wright St., may act as manager for the bar along with Kerry Burt, Studio 114's former manager.

The old College St. Club contained six bar stations, a dance floor and featured 10-cent beer specials.

Swisher said there would be no renovations to the bar.

"Everything seems OK except there's six inches of dust on everything," she said.

Midwest experiences personal income growth

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Iowa ranks 39th in terms of personal incomes growth, the federal government said Thursday in a report indicating the 1980s phenomenon of the bi-coastal economy is ending.

Personal income in Iowa grew 5.4 percent between the first quarter of 1989 and the January-March period of this year, the Commerce Department said.

Nationally, personal incomes grew by 6.9 percent over the first three months of 1989.

In states around Iowa, Minnesota showed the largest gains in personal incomes, with its rate of 8.4 percent the ninth best in the country. Incomes in Illinois and Missouri grew by 6.4 percent, and Wisconsin's grew at 5.9 percent.

Nebraska was tied with Iowa at 5.4 percent, and South Dakota's was 49th in the country at 3 percent.

Income in the Plains region — which includes Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota — grew at 6.8 percent, sixth best of the eight regions ranked by the Commerce Department.

Income growth in New England states, by comparison, was lackluster, ranging from 3.6 percent in New Hampshire to a near-average 6.8 percent in Connecticut.

Economists who follow regional patterns said the report provided evidence that the bi-coastal economy of the 1980s, in which California and the Northeast enjoyed more prosperity than the nation's heartland, is over.

UI COMMISSION REVIEW

Logical black hole

On Tuesday, UI Dean of Students Phillip Jones released a report detailing an 11-month review of UI student government commissions. The review, initiated last year as part of the UI's strategic planning for student government, in part examined the budgets of several organizations and the salaries received by students for their work. Jones, saying that in some cases there was "no consistent rationale for payment," recommended that several currently salaried student positions revert to a volunteer basis. But the elimination of salaries in certain student organizations is tremendously myopic, especially given the administration's efforts to increase diversity at the UI.

The commission that conducted the review found that, in general, the UI has three types of student groups. "Service" organizations include organizations such as Student Legal Services, the Rape Victim Advocacy Program and the Tenant Landlord Association. These organizations, according to the report, "provide services" to the UI community. A second classification, "campus" organizations, "provide a wide range of opportunities for a large number of students." Groups such as the Homecoming and Riverfest committees fall into this category. The final classification includes "pre-professional" groups, which are those that "provide a practical laboratory learning experience for the participants." Organizations such as the Bijou and KRUI were placed here.

The report concludes that students who work for service groups and are currently paid should continue to receive salaries. Because these students are "trained," the report says, the "rationale for compensation . . . seems reasonable."

While ideas of volunteerism are certainly praiseworthy, and not altogether untrue, the simple fact of college life . . . is that most college students have to work in order to help finance a higher education.

Fine. Students working for campus organizations, on the other hand, should not receive salaries, the report says. The "compensation" is the "opportunity to develop . . . skills through organizational participation." Again, because most of these groups operate on a seasonal schedule, such a policy seems reasonable.

Where the commission falls into a logical black hole is in its treatment of the pre-professional groups. According to the report, "the provision of resources and the opportunity to develop professional skills through the use of the resources is enough 'compensation' for the participants." Thus, despite the often long hours and significant training that is required for a job at, say, KRUI, the students will not receive stipends. The report made clear that all salaried positions in such groups would become volunteer positions this fall.

According to Kevin Taylor, director of the Office of Campus Programs and a member of the review commission, "students join groups with the idea of volunteerism and practical experience, or simply something fun to do." In other words, they don't need a salary, too.

While ideas of volunteerism are certainly praiseworthy, and not altogether untrue, the simple fact of college life that Jones, Taylor and the rest of the commission overlooked is that most college students have to work in order to help finance a higher education. Whether to help pay for constantly increasing tuition costs, rent or food, most students invariably need a regular income, regardless of how small it is. Financial aid, loans and scholarships just don't add up.

The unique advantage of pre-professional university jobs is that they allow students to gain valuable vocational experience while earning a subsistence level wage. And because the jobs are geared to students, there is time left to concentrate on academics.

But Jones would eliminate that for some. According to the report, students will have to sit in offices for hours each day as "volunteers." The commission believes there is no logical rationale for paying these students even a token stipend. After all, the joy of working and gaining experience should be enough "compensation," shouldn't it?

Maybe UI administration personnel could serve as models for this new system. UI vice presidents and deans don't really need to be paid. Isn't the knowledge that they are helping young adults broaden their minds and acquire a better understanding of the world around them compensation enough? Besides, they are allowed free use of UI facilities and are given private air-conditioned offices to sit in year-round.

The argument certainly makes sense — if one follows the logic of the review commission. But it is unlikely many UI employees would stay around without pay. All the deans and veeps would probably resign and find jobs that offer reasonable salaries.

Well, the same thing will undoubtedly happen with students. While students who can afford not to work walk into all the career-related and demanding jobs on campus, the average students will scramble for jobs at local fast-food outlets and uptown clothing stores. Such jobs don't offer much in the way of vocational experience, but they do offer monthly paychecks. And because many students will begin working long hours at night, UI faculty will have to learn to accept declining performances and dwindling academic interest.

By refusing to pay students for their work, the commission is overlooking the hard realities of college. Dean Jones, you seem to understand the value of an education, but you can't quite grasp the expense of one.

AIDS poster misses point

The last I heard, a controversial advertising poster showing a variety of people smooching had not yet appeared on Chicago buses and subways, although it is being displayed in several other cities.

This is the one that shows a man kissing a man, a woman kissing a woman and a man and a woman of different races kissing.

The printed message says something to the effect that love doesn't kill, greed and indifference kill.

The ad, we're told, was created by a group that wants to dispel myths about how people get AIDS. And kissing is one way you don't get it. However, some members of the Chicago City Council and the Illinois state legislature saw a different message in the poster.

They said it was nothing more than a plug, a promo, a hype for gay sex or gay lifestyle or the gay community or some such thing.

Since Chicago aldermen have no legal authority over public transportation, all they could do is huff and puff, which is what they do best anyway. And because they're Chicago aldermen, nobody pays much attention to them, except for their comedic value.

So the state legislature, which takes itself more seriously, passed a bill that would prohibit the displaying of the kissing poster.

But legal authorities say the legislature can't go butting into what kind of advertising is shown on Transit Authority vehicles, so the bill is probably meaningless.

And the city's Transit Authority says that it isn't in the business of censoring the advertising it displays and could be sued if it rejects the poster.

So when the legal quibbling is over, the posters will probably be put on display, and the people who created it will surely hail it as a victory.

But that doesn't mean that the aldermen and the state legislature were wrong. I'm amazed to find myself agreeing with them.

Yes, the poster appears to be nothing more than a plug for gay sex and lifestyle. And, no, it really has nothing to do with the realities of how people get or don't get AIDS.

Sure, people don't get AIDS by kissing. Nor do they get it by shaking hands, sitting on toilet seats or eating in restaurants that have gay chefs or waiters.

So they could just as well have created a poster showing people shaking hands, sitting on toilet seats or eating in a restaurant.

Instead, they show two men kissing. That's not a promo for homosexuality? Come now, even a Chicago alderman isn't dumb enough to buy that.

Mike Royko

Of course, they shrewdly include an interracial couple kissing. That way, besides accusing any critic of being homophobic, they can toss in the nasty charge of racism.

And I'm a bit puzzled by the statement that love doesn't cause AIDS, but greed and indifference do.

For one thing, I haven't heard anyone suggest that love causes AIDS. Love isn't an issue at all, unless you define love as having anal sex with a stranger in a bathroom, which would be kind of stretching love's definition.

And whose greed and whose indifference are they talking about?

The ad doesn't say. If they're talking about government indifference, that might have been true at one time. But it no longer is. Vast sums are being spent on AIDS research. Far more per victim than on cancer, heart disease and other diseases that kill far more people. And as the recent AIDS conference showed, scientists are working frantically to find solutions.

So if that poster is intended to do anything about stopping the spread of AIDS, it's a waste of money. Even worse, it's phony.

A new study has shown that AIDS is rapidly increasing among young women, particularly in New York, New Jersey and other northeastern cities.

At first glance, the study is a shocker. Women getting AIDS? That isn't the predictable pattern.

But it becomes less of a shocker when you read beyond the headline. Yes, more young women are getting AIDS. But how? Same old story. Most share dirty drug needles with other addicts. A lesser number get it by having sex with drug addicts.

The greatest tragedy to be found in the study is that some of the women become pregnant, so even before they are born, the infants have the disease and are doomed.

And other studies show that more and more young gay men in San Francisco and New York aren't bothering with safe sex precautions. They're again coupling with strangers and without condoms. So, after all these years of being told how to avoid it, AIDS is being spread again the same old way.

So I suggest that the creators of the posters cut out the con job with the kissing and the talk of greed and indifference.

You want to do a poster? Show a couple of glassy-eyed fools jamming the same needle into their arms. Or a couple of guys in a bathroom saying, "Let's get it on, and we can exchange phone numbers later."

Greed and indifference, not love? Why not try, "Love doesn't kill; stupidity, moronic self-indulgence and flat-out ignorance kill."

Or maybe a poster showing a dying infant and a line saying, "This baby has AIDS because his mother stuck a dirty needle full of dope into her arm. President Bush didn't stick the needle into her arm. The U.S. surgeon general didn't. Society didn't. You didn't. She did it to herself. So blame her. And if you don't want your baby to get AIDS, don't stick dirty dope needles into your arms."

Now maybe that isn't quite as subtle as a poster showing men kissing men, women kissing women and blacks kissing whites, but I think it gets the message across.

Or isn't that the idea?

Contractual pay issue

To the Editor:

I would like to address the bi-weekly pay issue, which has been a topic in the newspaper lately ["Bi-weekly pay plan causes discontent," July 11, The Daily Iowan]. Many people don't seem to realize that this is a matter of legal contract between the state of Iowa and employees of the state of Iowa that will expire June 30, 1991. The contract states, "All employees shall be paid on a bi-weekly basis by January 1, 1991." Bi-weekly pay must be in effect between Jan. 1, 1991, and June 30, 1991, or the state will be in breach of contract.

The implementation of this pay plan has not yet been agreed upon. The UI is proposing to begin the plan on Oct. 17. Rather than following the current practice of paying the employees for work done up until the day before payday, the UI wants to start holding employees' money back for more than 1½ weeks. The union is actively trying to stop the UI from starting the practice of keeping employees' hard-earned wages away from them.

I was delighted to see a petition that calls for the abolition of the new pay plan before it starts. The people signing this petition care about what happens in the workplace and want their opinions heard. The state is obligated by law to negotiate only with the properly designated employee representatives, which in Iowa is AFSCME Council 61. The negotiations for the new contract are about to begin. If any employees wish to have a voice in negotiations for the new contract or in their workplace, they should contact a union member immediately so they can join the union and be heard in time. If employees do not know a union member, they can call an AFSCME steward from the list on the bulletin board. They are glad to help.

Lofty ideals?

To the Editor:

I want to thank Maura Whalen for clarifying the real agenda of the anti-abortion movement ["Consequences," July 11, DI]. The anti-choice movement has always pretended to be concerned with life and morality: the lives of unborn children and the morality of life and death. Whalen's editorial makes clear that the real concern is a lot less lofty than they would like to admit: They don't like people having sex.

After wading through the numbingly irrelevant first half of the column, I hit the payoff. There, tucked away in the seventh paragraph, is the real reason teen-age girls should have to notify their parents: as punishment for sex. Girls should have to inform their parents, Whalen says, not because all life is sacred and abortion is murder, or because parents are better capable of informing doctors of their daughters' medical conditions; but because parents' anger and disagreement are "part of the consequences resulting from the choice to take a particular action." But that action, as she later makes clear, is not the decision to undergo an abortion but is instead the act of sex itself.

Whalen ends her piece in the best spirit of 17th century New England, lecturing us that "sex carries consequences." In this last sentence she has unwittingly stripped the anti-abortion movement of its pretense at high morality and revealed its real agenda: to stop women from having sex. This is aimed directly at women. If they were against men having sex, they would write laws that forced pregnant girls to tell authorities who the fathers were. How about an editorial aimed at policing randy males? Maybe something titled, "Boys should not forget their toys?" The truth is that for the anti-choice movement men who have sex are perfectly within their rights, but women who do likewise are dirty-minded little wretches who should be made to suffer as much as possible.

Statements like Whalen's should remind everybody, not just the pro-choice movement, that the anti-abortionists' real message is that they don't like it when women have sex. And they want to ensure that any woman who dares to do whatever she likes is properly punished. They want to dictate to all women exactly what they can do — with their bodies and with their lives. The real question is, who gave them that right?

Sioux City crash reunion helps survivors heal old wounds

By Roger Munns
The Associated Press

SIUX CITY — A year after they tumbled out of the smoke-choked fuselage of a shattered jumbo jet into a hot corn field, survivors of United Flight 232 returned to the crash scene Thursday to give prayers of thanks and sympathy.

"I wanted my boys to know that Sioux City is a place where normal things happen, that it's a place of mending as well as catastrophe," said Brownell Bailey of Bowmar, Colo.

Bailey's wife, Francie, was one of 112 people who died when the United Air Lines DC-10 cartwheeled at the Sioux Gateway Airport after an engine disintegrated, severing a hydraulic system that controlled the plane. Of the 296 on board the plane, 184 survived the crash.

Survivors and their families plus Sioux City rescuers streamed to the Sioux Gateway Airport, where they were allowed to walk around the crash site.

A memorial service was planned to coincide with the moment a year ago when the plane tumbled in flames while attempting an emergency landing.

"In my mind, Sioux City is not a normal place," said Sharon Bayless, who with her husband, Brad, both of Littleton, Colo., escaped the crash with minor injuries. "I have a lot of memories of some pretty gruesome things, and we both feel guilty that we walked away unharmed while so many others didn't."

"I knew it would be hard to come back," she said.

Bayless said a visit to the airport was important.

"I want to see it without bodies and luggage and airplane parts strewn all over," he said.

The Baylesses said one of their first priorities was to thank the rescuers.

"I suppose it's the old Midwest cliché, but there's a lot to be said about the way the people of Sioux City pitched in to help. I'm not sure that would have happened if this crash occurred somewhere else," he said.

Many of the survivors sought out United Air Lines Capt. Al Haynes to thank him for the job the crew did in guiding the crippled airliner to the airport.

"I have a lot of memories of some pretty gruesome things, and we both feel guilty that we walked away unharmed while so many others didn't."

Sharon Bayless

Despite survivors' thanks and praise, Haynes insisted there were no heroes in the cockpit of Flight 232 a year ago. But he said some people needed to look up to the crew as part of their healing.

"If we are serving some kind of function by being called heroes, so be it," Haynes said.

"I'd like to think that any other well-trained crew would have responded as we did," he said.

Roman Popielak, a crash survivor from Littleton, said he returned to Sioux City "so I could close the books."

"This is not opening wounds for me. It depends on your strength or makeup. I prefer to deal with my problems myself. Other people may need to lean on others and may feel more vulnerable," he said.

Popielak said ankle injuries suffered in the crash prevent him from running and doing other sports. Three fingers on his left hand are numb, ending his recreational piano playing.

"Now I play the accordinian," he said.

Adriene Badis, 41, of Durham, N.C., his wife and two children survived the crash, but they were separated for three hours.

"I told my older son (Eric, 7) that his brother and mother had died," he said. When he found them alive, "I was numb, elated, there are no adjectives."

Lori Michaelson used the reunion to put pressure on Congress to require child restraints on airliners. Currently, small children are permitted to sit on their parents' laps.

Michaelson's 11-month-old daughter, Sabrina — ripped from her grasp during the crash — was saved when another passenger, Jerry Schemmel of Denver, heard her cries and pulled her from the wreckage.

"Let's have something positive come out of this crash," she said.

"My actions have been overblown," said Schemmel, who appeared with Michaelson in one of numerous news conferences at Briar Cliff College.

"You'd be surprised, you'd do the same thing. I didn't run through a wall of fire to get her. God was looking over us. I didn't do anything spectacular. I just reacted," he said.

Mental health experts said the reunion was necessary for many victims in order to heal emotional wounds and to regroup their lives.

"Ignoring it is not an option," said the Rev. Gregory Clapper, a United Methodist minister from LeMars.

"Grief will have its way," said Don McCulley, director of the Siouxland Mental Health Center. "There is no understanding tragedies. Some ask, 'Why did God do this to me?' But God has pretty broad shoulders. He can probably handle it."

Trial Migrant

Chewning, 40, of Monmouth, Ill., was given leave from the Warren County, Ill., jail to accompany his wife to Iowa City for tests she received Oct. 4 at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

According to White, Chewning began to strangle his wife while giving her a neck massage after she reminded him he would have to return to jail.

White cited the work of Dr. Steven Moore, a pathologist at UI Hospitals, and State Medical Examiner Thomas Bennett, who performed the two autopsies and testified that Dianne Chewning had been strangled to death through "trauma to her head and neck" lasting for 60 to 90 seconds.

White also praised the "professionalism and expertise" of the Coralville Police Department's investigation and specifically cited Coralville Police Sgt. Terry Koehn and Special Agent Wade Kisner of the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation.

emphasized evidence relating to the misdemeanor charges when questioning the state's single witness, Johnson County Assistant Zoning Administrator Richard Dvorak.

Dvorak testified that on 11 separate occasions between Feb. 28 and July 16, 1990, he observed "at least six, if not more" and later as many as 16 mobile homes on Bell's property, which he said already held two residential structures.

Speaking in his own defense, Bell admitted he had taken no steps to remove the trailers this spring but challenged the prosecution's implications that he increased the size of the camp this year.

"I didn't enlarge it," Bell told the prosecution. "I was spending too much time fighting you people."

Defense witnesses for Bell included several migrant laborers and advocacy agents, state and county officials for health and social services, seedcorn company representatives, and Bell's wife and business partner, Mary Bell.

Mary Bell defended the use of the trailer camp as being the housing option best suited for the laborers' needs.

She told the court that motels "were uncomfortable for the families," who need access to cooking facilities.

Rebuttal witnesses for the state included Johnson County Supervisors Dick Myers and Pat Meade and Johnson County Zoning Administrator Ben Johnson.

Johnson testified that he told Bell a migrant labor camp would not be permissible on his parcel of land zoned A-1 rural.

But under cross-examination, Johnson testified the current ordinance doesn't allow for the camps under any zoning classification.

Intern assistant prosecutor James Cahoy said he expected Bergan to make a decision on the case as early as next week.

Bell's lawsuit against the board, which was dismissed April 24 in federal court, is pending in state court, though no date has yet been set.

Khmer

starved to death hundreds of thousands of Cambodians in slave labor camps and in rural villages during its 1975-78 rule. Vietnam invaded in late 1978 and installed the current government.

Some analysts say the U.S. move could open the way for diplomatic relations between the United States and Vietnam, estranged since the end of the Vietnam War in April 1975.

The Soviet vice minister of foreign affairs, Igor Rogachev, said Southeast Asia could not achieve real stability without normal diplomatic ties between the United States and Vietnam and Cambodia.

"For the moment, there isn't normalization, but we hope there soon will be," he said in Paris.

Sihanouk, a non-Communist who leads the three-party resistance coalition, said the U.S. move was "an act of very serious injustice."

The coalition now will be "more firm and fierce in their determination to continue to resist," he said in a statement from North Korea's capital of Pyongyang, where he lives part of the year.

It will only keep alive a government in Cambodia that is "a creature and creation" of Vietnam, he said.

Phnom Penh's official SPK news agency quoted a foreign ministry spokesman welcoming the U.S. shift as "paving the way for achievement of an early political settlement."

The official Vietnam News Agency quoted Vietnam's Foreign Minister, Nguyen Co Thach, as applauding the U.S. move.

Thach said Hanoi wanted "an early, fair and equitable solution ... (and) is ready to negotiate with concerned countries on the Cambodia issue."

Some guerrilla leaders said the U.S. shift could force them closer to China and strengthen the Khmer Rouge.

Prince Norodom Ranariddh, son of Sihanouk and commander of his army, said Wednesday that if the United States suspends its $7 million in annual aid to the non-Communist guerrillas, China has promised to double that amount.

"To cut off the non-Communist resistance you will strengthen the Khmer Rouge," he said.

Peace talks have foundered. The guerrillas reject Phnom Penh's wish to retain power in the period leading to elections.

Thailand also has not indicated it will decrease its sanctuary.

"I'm just wondering when it is going to be finished. It seems like it's always under construction and will never be finished." — Derek Henry, a junior from East Moline.

United States provides $13 million a year in covert aid to the non-communist resistance forces led by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, together with $7 million in overt, "non-lethal" aid. Singapore gives an additional $10 million yearly to the non-communist forces.

The U.S. aid remains the subject of hot debate on Capitol Hill, where the Senate Intelligence Committee has voted to end the covert program. Some congressional opponents of past U.S. policy say it makes no sense to withdraw recognition of the resistance coalition while continuing to send aid.

Senate Intelligence Committee chairman David Boren, D-Okla., called obliquely on Wednesday for an end to the covert program. Without specifically mentioning the program, he said all U.S. aid for Cambodia should be debated and voted openly, not through his committee.

U.S. supplies made available to non-communist troops are vulnerable to use by the Khmer Rouge because of shared supply lines, especially deep inside Cambodia where the militarily stronger rebels exercise total control of the supply routes.

While units from the three resistance factions are kept separated in areas near the Thai border, their separate identities and the independence of their operations become more blurred.

2 killed, 59 hurt in bus crash

OXFORD, England — A double-decker bus carrying gifted teen-age students from the United States overturned on a highway outside Oxford on Thursday, killing two and injuring all 59 other people aboard, police said.

Some were thrown from windows, some crawled out of the bus, some were later pulled free and at least three were trapped inside for an hour, authorities said. Four people were seriously hurt.

"It was a scene of utter chaos and mayhem," said ambulance superintendent Robin Finlayson. "There were girls and boys trapped in the coach and others strewn up the bank. They were crying, bawling and bloody. . . . Many had crush injuries."

Police identified the dead students as 18-year-old Autumn Dubose of Milburn, Ga., and a 16-year-old boy from New York state whose name was not released pending notification of his family.

The 61 people on the bus included 47 Americans, 5 Britons, 2 Japanese and one each from Canada, France, the Netherlands, Austria, Italy and Mexico, police said. The nationality of one student was not known.

Canada seeks end to dispute

MONTREAL — Canada's federal government intends to acquire land to end a dispute between Mohawk Indians and local authorities over a golf course addition on property the Indians consider sacred, a Quebec official announced Thursday.

However, a spokeswoman for the Indians said government officials must meet other conditions before the Mohawks lay down their arms.

The confrontation over the land, which the Indians claim as ancestral territory, has left one police officer dead and prompted an anti-Indian backlash. It was not clear if the officer was shot by fellow police or Indians.

At Thursday's news conference in Montreal, Quebec's native affairs minister, John Ciacchia, said federal officials have approved the purchase — or expropriation if necessary — of a 55-acre tract of forest. The village of Oka, 18 miles west of Montreal, had planned to use the land to extend a golf course.

Wildfire erupts after plane crash

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — A Navy attack jet with two people aboard crashed in the Santa Ynez Mountains just north of this coastal resort, igniting a brush fire that roared across 300 acres, forest service officials said.

The jet crashed just before 1 p.m. in the Los Padres National Forest about 11 miles north of the city, said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Maeton Freel. Firefighting aircraft began dumping slurry on the raging flames.

The Navy A-7 Corsair jet crashed at 12:55 p.m. while on a training mission, Hubbert said. The cause of the crash was unknown.

Some 250 firefighters were battling the blaze, which was burning northward. No structures were threatened, Freel said.

Committee to recommend reprimand

WASHINGTON — The House ethics committee voted without dissent Thursday to recommend a reprimand of Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., for his relationship with male prostitute Stephen Goble, according to sources familiar with the closed-door deliberations.

The reprimand would be a more severe sanction against Frank than Democrats on the 12-member panel had been advocating.

Waning funds may slow pace of the S&L bailout

By Dave Skidmore
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration's savings and loan bailout program could face a severe cash crunch this fall after regulators close or sell 77 institutions this summer, officials said Thursday.

The Resolution Trust Corp. Oversight Board, headed by Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, said unless Congress provides more money, regulators could have as little as $7.3 billion left for S&L deals when the new federal fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

"The bottom line . . . is it is absolutely clear . . . it would cause us to very significantly reduce the pace of resolutions," said Peter Monroe, president of the oversight board.

In addition to the $7.3 billion, the bailout agency would be able to spend any money it could get by selling repossessed real estate and sour loans inherited from previous S&L bailouts, he said.

If Congress fails to provide more money before adjourning for the November elections, the government will be forced to slow down the pace of the bailout or dramatically increase the pace of asset sales, if possible, he said.

The figures released Thursday and Monroe's comments are the clearest statement yet from the administration about the urgency of providing additional bailout dollars.

In appearances before congressional panels in May and June, Brady said additional money would be needed by the end of December or early next year.

Monroe's figures indicate that, at the current pace, the bailout will run out of money soon after Sept. 30.

So far, the trust corporation has "resolved" the cases of 210 S&Ls, leaving roughly 250 insolvent thrifts open and under government control. At least an additional 250 institutions still under private ownership also are expected to fail.

"We're two-sevenths of the way through," Monroe said.

Because money is scarce, officials will concentrate this quarter on closing the S&Ls that are losing money the fastest, he said.

In any case, officials will "never go back" to the type of deals done in 1988 by the now dismantled Federal Home Loan Bank Board, Monroe said. Because the agency lacked cash to pay off depositors, it attracted investors through guarantees and other subsidies lasting up to 10 years.

The 1988 transactions are coming under increasing criticism from Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and others in Congress for virtually ensuring lucrative returns to S&L buyers who made only a small investment.

The oversight board authorized the trust corporation to borrow up to $34 billion through the Treasury for the 77 resolutions in the July-September period.

Separately, the Treasury raised its estimate of borrowings for the quarter to between $62 billion and $66 billion, up from $30 billion to $35 billion estimated on May 2.

The news that government securities will be more abundant than previously anticipated depressed the bond market slightly, pushing up interest rates.

In other developments:

■ The trust corporation invited offers from investors for junk bonds inherited from failed thrifts. The bonds — 483 bond issues from 330 companies — have a face value of $3.7 billion.

■ Angry Northeastern and Midwestern lawmakers demanded that Texas, California and other states with a disproportionate share of troubled thrifts pay a bigger portion of bailout costs.

■ The House members said they were introducing a bill to establish a formula to determine each state's fair share. If a state declined to pay, its state-chartered thrifts no longer would be eligible for federal deposit insurance.

Other legislation, sponsored by Rep. Joe Kennedy, D-Mass., would force wealthy Americans to pay more of the cost. His bill would raise $100 million over five years by imposing new taxes on the income of individuals earning more than $100,000 per year and corporations earning more than $75,000 per year. It also would eliminate a provision that forgives inheritance taxes on capital gains at death.

Quayle attacks job-bias bill

By Mike Robinson
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dan Quayle said Thursday the president will veto a Senate-passed bill to combat job bias unless it is purged of provisions the administration contends invite hiring quotas. House sponsors left the door open to modest changes.

"The administration is not going to have a quota bill crammed down its throat disguised as a civil rights bill," Quayle said the morning after the Senate passed the bill.

House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas, said he believed there were enough votes on the House floor to pass the bill without changes, even if the administration was "still screaming about quotas."

But he and other Democrats suggested the bill could be altered.

One Democratic sponsor, Don Edwards of California, said, "We're going to listen respectfully" to any administration proposals. "We're going to be discussing one or two items that might make them feel a little better."

Republicans suggested that Democratic willingness to dicker over the provisions could signal concern about the chances of overriding a Bush veto.

"It's obvious that 34 votes are

vice president

enough to sustain a veto," said Rep. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., speaking of the Senate margin.

Democratic leaders said the bill — which tops the civil rights movement's congressional list — most likely would clear its final committee hurdle in the House on Tuesday without changes.

But House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said it most likely would not reach the House floor until September because of a logjam of bills awaiting action.

The bill would effectively overturn five Supreme Court decisions last year that civil rights leaders see as setbacks for their movement.

Provisions range from banning racial discrimination in the workplace to allowing victims to seek punitive damages in the most severe discrimination cases.

The sharpest clashes surround a provision that would make it easier to challenge hiring practices at companies where the work force does not mirror the ethnic makeup of the local labor pool.

Until last year, it was up to employers who were challenged to justify their hiring practices on the basis of business necessity. A high court ruling last year put the burden of proof on those who file the suits to show the hiring motive was other than business necessity.

The bill would again put the burden on employers.

The administration maintains that the business-necessity language, along with damages provisions, would attract lawsuits and spur employers to adopt their own unofficial hiring quotas as a defensive measure to keep out of court.

Bush has said repeatedly that he wants legislation to combat discrimination in the workplace but will not sign a bill that would lead to hiring quotas.

Quayle, meeting with reporters in San Antonio, Texas, said major surgery would be needed before Bush could sign the legislation passed Wednesday night by the Senate.

East German production takes nose dive

By Mark Fritz
The Associated Press

EAST BERLIN — East German industrial production plunged by 15 percent in June, and half a million workers have had their hours and wages slashed in the past two weeks, the government said today.

More than 700,000 workers now have either lost their jobs or faced sharp cuts in their salaries because of the country's quick move to a free market, the government said.

Lawmakers debated how to keep financing the country until unification with West Germany, as more than 2,000 uniformed police officers demonstrated outside the Parliament to demand better wages.

About 500,000 East German workers have had their hours reduced since July 1, when the nation merged its economy with West Germany's in a step to full unification, said East Germany's labor minister, Regine Hildebrandt.

Under a program financed by West Germany, workers who normally would be targeted for layoffs are being paid about 60 percent of their salaries to remain in the factories, where they are to receive training for other jobs.

On Wednesday, the government announced that unemployment was at 223,876, about 2.7 percent of the 8 million East German workers. That was up from 30,000 jobless in March.

Thousands honor Nixon at dedication of library

By Jeff Wilson
The Associated Press

YORBA LINDA, Calif. — Three Republican presidents who followed Richard Nixon into office praised him Thursday as a man who made the world a safer place.

Thousands turned out on a sweltering day for the dedication of Nixon's presidential library and to hear speeches from President George Bush and former Presidents Ronald Reagan and Gerald Ford.

Nixon was the nation's 37th president and the only one to resign from office.

"Nothing we have ever seen matches this moment, to be welcomed home so warmly on this day," Nixon said on behalf of himself and his wife, Pat.

Bush paid tribute to Nixon as "a true architect of peace." Ford's and Reagan's speeches were laced with humor and fond remembrances.

"You, Dick Nixon, have the gratitude of men and women everywhere who cherish peace with liberty," said Ford.

"I do not think it is an exaggeration to say that the world is a better place — a safer place — because of Richard Nixon," Reagan said.

In a glowing tribute, Bush said, "Richard Nixon was the quintessence of Middle America," a leader who presided over the nation during times "perhaps as tumultuous as any since Lincoln's."

"Richard Nixon helped change the course not only of America but of the entire world," said Bush. He said Nixon's path-breaking trip to China in 1972 "revolutionized the world" and recalled that it was Nixon who signed the first agreement with the Soviets to limit strategic nuclear arms.

Among those at the dedication were former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, other Nixon administration officials and Nixon's daughters, Julie Nixon Eisenhower and Tricia Nixon, and their husbands.

Tourists also turned out for the event. Wearing sandals, shorts and carrying beach chairs, thousands waited outside the Nixon library at dawn, paying $15 to park and shelling out another $15 for presidential T-shirts.

Police said 15,000 people were at the gates when they opened after dawn. "It's a very historic event, especially with four presidents here," said Margaret Gavras, 29, of

Richard Nixon
37th U.S. president

Huntington Beach, who arrived Wednesday night and parked her motor home at a church.

Jimmy Carter was the only living former president — and the only Democrat among them — not attending the opening. He had a previous commitment, said Carrie Harmon, spokeswoman for the Carter Presidential Center in Atlanta. She would not elaborate.

By Nixon's choice, his library will get neither federal money nor Secret Service protection. He contributed $2 million to the library. Admission is $3.95 for adults.

2 killed, 45 injured in blasts at Cincinnati chemical plant

By Joe McDonald
The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — An explosion ripped through a chemical plant Thursday, killing two people, injuring at least 45 others and shattering windows in nearby houses and businesses, authorities said.

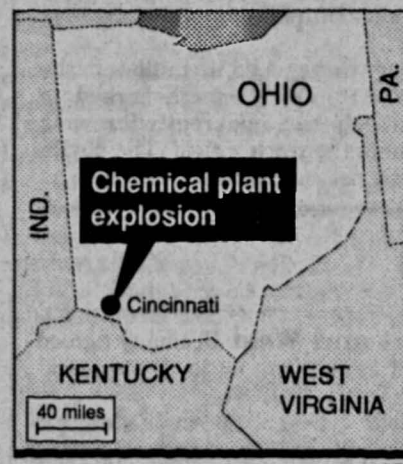

At least one person was missing, said Fire Chief Bill Miller. Four of the injured were listed in critical condition.

The explosion, which shook buildings more than a mile away, ignited a fire that took 2½ hours to contain enough that firefighters could enter the four-story brick building where the explosion occurred.

Miller said officials of the BASF plant told him about 50 chemicals were used inside the building, but none was believed to be toxic.

Federal and state officials sampled the air in the north-side neighborhood "to get a better handle on the chemicals involved," said Reuven Carlyle, a spokesman for Gov. Richard Celeste.

Dan Delaney, who works near the plant, said he saw a huge ball of fire and smoke out his office window. "Shortly thereafter, everybody was running down the street, out of the building to get out, sort of in a panic, just getting out of there as fast as they could," Delaney said.

"Police and firemen are all around, fighting the blaze," he said. "They just keep getting small explosions and more fireballs shooting up in the air."

Ken Kinderman, 29, a materials handler at the factory, said he was walking out of a locker room in an adjacent building when the explosion occurred.

"I opened the door and when the explosion hit, it threw me back through the locker room," Kinderman said. He said he had cuts on his back and arms but was not seriously injured.

Kinderman said the building where the explosion occurred was used for handling solvents and varnishes.

Windows also were shattered at some houses three blocks away.

The names of the two who were killed were not immediately available, Miller said.

Most of the injured, including an 8-year-old boy, sustained minor injuries, hospital officials said.

Ben Diedenhofer, a production manager at the plant, said he was in a lab overlooking the resin development building when the first explosion occurred about 2:15 p.m.

"It blew out all the windows. The whole resin building was engulfed in flames," Diedenhofer said.

"I couldn't get in to help anyone. I saw one person hanging on to the building. I was able to get him off."

A second blast occurred about 2:50 p.m., and it was that blast that did most of the apparent damage, Diedenhofer said.

Iraqi threats prompt Kuwait to request Arab support

By Nabila Megalli
The Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — Tiny Kuwait appealed to its Arab neighbors for help Thursday in the face of a barrage of threats from an increasingly belligerent Iraq.

In Baghdad, Iraq's President Saddam Hussein tightened his already iron grip on power, winning support from his rubber-stamp parliament for a presidency for life.

The developments underscored simmering tensions in the Persian Gulf, long a flashpoint for Mideast quarrels. The region includes about two-thirds of the world's proven oil reserves, so instability can pose a threat to the world's oil supply.

Oil has been the fuel for Iraq's quarrel with Kuwait. Baghdad in recent days denounced Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates for exceeding production quotas set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Iraq says falling oil prices brought on by the oil glut have robbed it of $14 billion in revenues in the past year, and Saddam this week accused quota violators of stabbing Iraq in the back "with a poisoned dagger."

Kuwait sought to defuse the dispute on Thursday.

It solicited Arab League help in settling its longstanding border dispute with Iraq. It enlisted the help of influential Saudi Arabia in easing tensions, and its diplomats fanned out across the Middle East.

Saudi Arabia's King Fahd has been in touch with both parties, diplomatic sources said.

"For the time being, Saudi Arabia wants tempers to cool," said one source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

A major factor in the Kuwaiti and Saudi responses has been fears that the quarrel could disrupt an OPEC conference, set to begin next Thursday in Geneva, on production and pricing policy.

Both Kuwait and the U.A.E. have already promised to cut oil production in line with the quotas decreed by the 13-member cartel. Also, oil prices — which had dipped to $14 a barrel recently — have recovered to around OPEC's benchmark level of $18 a barrel.

Some Kuwaiti officials and diplomats suggested that Saddam's accusations are aimed at winning a writeoff of a debt of $30 billion to Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. The two poured the money into Iraq during the 1980-88 war against Iran.

Gorbachev ran out of bargaining chips

By Bryan Brumley
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The collapse of pro-Soviet regimes in Eastern Europe and the impending union of the two Germanys gave President Mikhail Gorbachev little choice but to abandon his opposition to the new Germany's membership in NATO.

"I don't think he had any bargaining chips left, once East Germany collapsed," said Adam Ulam, a professor at Harvard University. "It was obvious that he would have to accept anything that was offered."

What West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl offered was $3 billion in credits to ease an increasingly desperate Soviet debt problem, plus continued German support for Western aid to the Soviet Union.

Gorbachev's about-face on the issue of German membership in NATO also came after he won promises that Germany would cut its armed forces and that the Atlantic alliance would adjust its policies to the shrinking Soviet threat.

"We got what we wanted, too. It was a step-by-step process, with concessions on both sides," a senior Soviet diplomat said.

A senior Western diplomat, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said, "Gorbachev got what he needed in London and from Kohl."

Both diplomats were referring to a statement issued after a recent North Atlantic Treaty Organization meeting in London. It said that the Western alliance was shifting from a military to a political alliance, as requested by the Kremlin. They also referred to an agreement by Kohl to reduce the German armed forces.

Analysis

Soviet media, however, still have not reported in detail Gorbachev's meeting with Kohl on Monday, when the Soviet leader dropped months of ardent opposition to German membership in NATO.

The Soviet Union lost 20 million people during World War II, and memories of the Nazi invasion still are bitter.

In his meeting with Gorbachev, Kohl agreed that in the next three or four years the united German army will be cut to 370,000 troops. The two Germanys now have about 600,000 men under arms, 480,000 of them in the West.

Kohl and Gorbachev also agreed: ■ to begin negotiations on the complete withdrawal of Soviet soldiers from what is now East Germany. The approximately 380,000 soldiers should be withdrawn in three to four years, they said.

■ that no NATO forces will be stationed in what is now East Germany as long as Soviet forces are there. German soldiers not integrated into the NATO command may be stationed there as soon as unification is completed.

■ that the rights of the four victorious World War II powers — France, the United States, Britain, and the Soviet Union — will cease immediately upon unification. But Western forces may remain in Berlin as long as Soviet soldiers stay in any part of the country.

Poland, which had sought guarantees that Germany would not seek to regain land that once was German but has been Polish since the war, this week said it was satisfied with the arrangement.

Ulam, reached by telephone in Cambridge, Mass., said he would "be surprised if the Soviets did not have their forces out of Germany within a year," shortly after the expected unification of Germany.

Most Soviet troops in Eastern Europe are stationed in East Germany and have been in a precarious position since the Communist government in Poland fell and the hard-line East German regime collapsed last year.

The Soviet Union, where people can wait a decade or more for housing, will have a difficult time absorbing the returning soldiers and their families.

Kohl has agreed to foot part of the bill for keeping Soviet troops in East Germany, Moscow-based diplomats said, but pressure is expected to mount to use the money for the civilian economy.

Kohl, along with President Francois Mitterrand of France, also has been pushing for Western aid to support Gorbachev's reform efforts.

President Bush has balked at the French and German proposal, urging the allies to wait until the Soviets move more decisively from a planned to a market economy.

Western diplomats in Moscow say Bush wants the International Monetary Fund to impose on the Soviets the same type of stringent economic conditions it would on needy developing nations.

"That way, it would be an economic condition, and not a political condition," said a Western diplomat.

Gorbachev might find that formula convenient, as well.

"He has given in on almost everything," said Ulam. "His political skills are great, but they consist largely of being able to swim with the current."

Iowa jockey given 3-year ban in state

DI wire services

DES MOINES — State racing officials on Thursday imposed a three-year ban on Iowa riding by a Prairie Meadows jockey who allegedly used an electrical device to shock a horse.

Jockey Jeff Johnston earlier had been suspended for one year and fined $1,000 by the track stewards at Prairie Meadows. The Iowa Racing and Gaming Commission voted Thursday to waive the fine but add two years to the suspension.

Johnston, 20, was accused of shoving the horse he was riding in the first race at the Altoona track on June 10. Track cameras picked up the alleged violation and also showed Johnston apparently throwing a small, hand-held electrical device onto the track infield. The device was later recovered, and Johnston has not contested the charge.

Sportsbriefs

Soccer officials from East and West Germany agreed Thursday to merge their leagues and form a joint national team next year.

The decision, announced by West German Soccer Federation spokesman Wolfgang Niersbach in Frankfurt, West Germany, means that one German team will compete in the 1992 Olympics and European Championship. In 1994, one German team will defend the World Cup title West Germany won in Italy earlier this month.

East German soccer players will be eligible for the joint national team beginning in 1991, Niersbach said. He said East German teams will withdraw immediately from European international competitions but that club teams would not withdraw until the 1990-91 European Cups finish next spring.

The United States remained unbeaten in the Women's World Basketball Championships Thursday in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, by outclassing Bulgaria 93-72 as Jennifer Azzi scored 13 points and Teresa Edwards and Katrina McClain 12 each.

The U.S. led 52-38 at halftime as it joined Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Cuba in the semi-finals. The Yugoslavs remained unbeaten by eliminating the six-time champion Soviet Union 64-63.

The Americans will play Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia will meet Cuba in semifinals Saturday with the two winners meeting Sunday for the title.

Derrick Rostagno has John McEnroe looking at a comeback for the second time in less than a month.

Rostagno, ranked 113th in the world, duplicated his first-round Wimbledon upset of last month on Thursday with a 6-3, 1-6, 6-1 victory over the world's former No. 1 player in the third round of the Sovran Bank Classic in Washington.

"I didn't lose, he played better," said McEnroe, who found himself in deep holes when the faster, more aggressive Rostagno broke him to begin the first and third sets.

McEnroe's loss at Wimbledon prompted him to say he would have to work harder to make another comeback. The second loss to Rostagno came just a day after McEnroe said he was looking forward to beating the man who sent him home from England early.

Jackson

"Seeing the best hitters has helped me get ready for college," Jackson agreed. "It's helped me by showing me what I need to work on. I'm not going into college cold."

Jackson signed a letter of intent to play at Iowa last spring. She said she was impressed with the Hawkeye campus and softball program during her December recruiting visit, despite the chilly weather.

"It was cold, but I expected that," Jackson said. "I'm really excited to play for coach Blevins and (Iowa assistant coach Ruth) Crowe. They're building a solid program."

"I liked the town a lot. Everyone was 'Iowa,' 'Iowa Hawkeyes' — that's all they talked about."

As a Hawkeye, Jackson is expected to be the mound complement to Big Ten Player of the Year Terri McFarland, who hails from the same Sacramento area as Jackson. The two were rivals in high school.

Rose

leader in 1985.

Spiegel praised Rose for his baseball accomplishments with the Reds, Philadelphia Phillies and Montreal Expos, calling him a "living legend" and "the idol of millions." But Rose's baseball records couldn't save him from a prison record.

"Today, we are not dealing with the legend," Spiegel said. "History and the tincture of time will decide his place among the all-time greats of baseball."

"With regard to Pete Rose, the individual, he has broken the law, admitted his guilt, and stands ready to pay the penalty."

Rose pleaded guilty April 20 to two counts of failing to report income. He admitted he hid $354,968 in income from memorabilia sales, autograph appearances and gambling earnings from 1984-87.

The charges carried a maximum six-year jail term and $500,000 fine. Spiegel's decision was in line with federal sentencing guidelines, which recommend some jail time for the offenses.

"After carefully considering all of these factors, I have concluded that Mr. Rose must serve some time in a prison setting for his crime in order to maintain respect for the law and as a deterrent to others who might consider cheating on their taxes," Spiegel said.

The judge gave Rose time before reporting to jail so he can have surgery to repair torn knee car-

That's where Jackson could help. "She gives us depth that we need in our pitching," Blevins said. "She will be able to take some of the burden. Karen will give us a truer rotation ... it doesn't put quite as much strain on one pitcher."

The sentencing followed 18 months in which Rose went from baseball hero to admitted felon. He blamed his troubles on a gambling problem, for which he is getting treatment. Spiegel said Rose must continue to get help for his gambling problem as a condition for his supervised release.

Rose agreed last August to a lifetime ban from baseball, but denied betting on baseball. A. Bartlett Giamatti, the late baseball commissioner, said he believed Rose had bet on his own team.

Rose is eligible to apply for reinstatement next month, but has indicated he won't do so.

rebounds and 6.6 assists while leading his father's Trenton Wesclin high school team to the Illinois Class A state championship game.

And, like the Hickory team, Trenton Wesclin upset one of the state's favored teams in the title game. Lusk and his teammates defeated Prairie Center, the top-ranked team in Class A, in double-overtime.

So did Lusk bury the game-winning jumper as time expired, like Jimmy Chippewa did in the movie?

Not quite.

"I fouled out in regulation," Lusk said. "The other guys were great ... We had a great team."

The win was also Lusk's going-away present to his father, who stepped down as head coach after the title game. Paul Sr. is still the athletic director at the school.

"It was my dad's last season coaching," Lusk said. "It was nice to let him go out with a championship."

In June, Lusk took his small-town act to the Illinois Basketball Coaches Association All-

Star game, where he broke a 15-year-old All-Star game record by scoring 31 points.

Lusk also won the slam dunk competition at the event, beating a field of Class AA players, most of them from the Chicago area.

At Iowa, Lusk is expected to compete with junior college transfer Val Barnes, incoming freshman Kevin Smith and several current Hawkeyes for playing time at the guard positions.

He has gotten his first taste of college-level competition this summer in Iowa City's Prime Time basketball league. Lusk is averaging 24 points, eight rebounds and five assists for the Flannigan's team.

But he said he's more concerned with honing his skills than with offensive numbers.

"I need to work on my 3-point shooting a lot," Lusk said. "I lived off going to the hole in high school. Here I have to pick my spots — when to do it and when not to."

Lusk's play has already caught the attention of his Iowa teammates.

"I'm impressed with (Lusk)," Hawkeye guard

Of his shot on the final hole, Faldo said, "The ball bounced left to right for a while, then right to left, then up the slope, bounced about a foot in the air and disappeared."

Peter Jacobsen's breaks were not quite so good. He got his third shot into the Road Bunker, that dreaded pit that fronts the 17th green. He had to play away from the hole. From a share of the lead, he made double bogey and dropped back into a tie for fourth at 68.

Also at 4-under were PGA champion Payne Stewart, Christy O'Connor Jr. of Ireland, Martin Poxon of England, Ian Baker-Finch and Craig Parry of Australia, Ian Woosnam of Wales and Sam Torrance of Scotland.

The rest of the major American stars were less than enchanted with their efforts.

American Greg LeMond talks strategy with his team before Wednesday's 17th stage of the Tour de France. LeMond is favored to win his third Tour after taking second in Wednesday's stage, just 5 seconds behind overall leader Chiappucci.

LeMond-Chiappucci battle heats up

By Salvatore Zanca
The Associated Press

BORDEAUX, France — Just when things got a little flat at the Tour de France Thursday, it began to heat up.

In temperatures of 104 degrees over a 125-mile straightaway course from Pau to Bordeaux, Greg LeMond remained five seconds behind Italy's Claudio Chiappucci in the overall standings with just three stages to go.

Eric Breukink of the Netherlands snuck past 1988 champion Pedro Delgado into third when he came in second in the 18th of 21 stages. Gianni Bugno of Italy won in a sprint finish with 147 of the remaining 157 cyclists.

Bugno crossed in 5 hours, 41 minutes, 33 seconds, averaging a leisurely 22 mph.

LeMond placed 32nd while Chiappucci was just three slots ahead, but both finished 19 seconds behind Bugno.

There is another flat stage on Friday before the fireworks start on Saturday in the time trial by Lac Vassiviere.

But the bad words started off the course when Chiappucci responded to LeMond's accusations about the Italian's behavior in the pack on Wednesday.

LeMond had a flat tire in the 17th stage and dropped back to change wheels. Race ethics usually call for the pack to slow down and not take advantage of the situation.

But Delgado's teammates attacked and took Chiappucci along.

"I was sure that they went faster because of it," LeMond said. "When I got back I told Chiappucci that I wouldn't forget this."

LeMond returned to the pack aided by a relay system from members of his team, pacing the defending champ and acting as windshields.

By the finish, the only thing LeMond lost was respect for Delgado and Chiappucci.

"Such things aren't done like that. It was a stupid tactic. One day or another, they'll pay," LeMond said.

But a teammate of Chiappucci defended the attack.

"This is the Tour and there are no gifts," said Acacio da Silva, who held the yellow jersey for a brief time last year.

Chiappucci would not get upset over the incident.

"It doesn't really matter. We'll see who has the yellow jersey in Paris," he said.

Chiappucci took the overall lead a week ago, but LeMond has sliced almost nine minutes off the Italian's lead since. The two-time champion became the favorite when he pulled within five seconds on Tuesday's final stretch up the mountain to Luz Ardiden.

The time trial on Saturday is where LeMond won his first Tour de France in 1985. The American is confident he can overtake the Italian there before the race ends on Sunday on the Champs Elysees.

Dolphins give reinstated Collins a try

The Associated Press

Tony Collins, reinstated earlier this month by the NFL after a two-year suspension as a two-time drug violator, has finally found a team that will try him out.

The 31-year-old Collins, a former starter with New England, agreed to a one-year contract with the Miami Dolphins and began workouts Thursday.

Collins rushed for 4,647 yards and caught 261 passes in seven years with the Patriots. His best season was 1983 when he rushed for 1,049 yards on 219 carries and made the Pro Bowl.

He said five other teams told him they weren't interested after he was allowed back in the league July 11.

"Only two or three teams showed any interest in me, so coach Shula has given me the opportunity to play when a lot of other people wouldn't," said Collins, who said he was "close to death" during his bout with drugs.

Oilers

Backup quarterback Cody Carlson and the Houston Oilers are apparently a long way from settling their contract dispute.

"It'll be Christmas before we get together," general manager Mike Holovak says of negotiations with Carlson. "I don't give it a chance right now because of the money, no way until they come down to my level."

Carlson, who has asked to be traded to a team where he'll have a chance to get more playing time, is one of 15 unsigned veterans and draft choices.

Raiders

Nine Raiders remain unsigned as training camp opens Friday, but coach Art Shell is hoping all will show up.

"We're getting it done, hopefully, and they'll all be in here ready to compete," Shell said

Thursday. "But there's always one or two that take a little longer."

Quarterback Steve Beuerlein, who failed to report Wednesday, is already a holdout and so is Anthony Smith, the No. 1 draft pick. Beuerlein is seeking something close to the $1 million that Jay Schroeder, who started nine games, signed for this week.

Running back Marcus Allen and defensive end Greg Townsend also were considered possible holdouts.

Patriots

Quarterback Tom Hodson, New England's third pick, is content to wait his turn while he learns his job from veterans Steve Grogan and Marc Wilson.

Patriots coach Rod Rust has said that the 36-year-old Grogan, a 16-year veteran, will compete with the 33-year-old Wilson, in his 11th year, for the starting job.

Swimmers focusing on Goodwill

By John Nelson
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Goodwill Games begin Friday, slightly off track but in the swim.

While many of the world's top track and field stars are passing up these games, the U.S. swim team was told to point toward the Goodwill Games as its big meet of the year.

That means American swimmers such as Matt Biondi, Tom Jager and Janet Evans, headliners at the 1988 Seoul Olympics, will be in top form when their sport gets the games rolling.

"This is our peak meet," said Evans, winner of three gold medals in distance events at Seoul. "We've been training for it since March."

At the same time, American track stars such as Mary Slaney and Butch Reynolds will be missing, along with top foreign names like pole vaulter Sergei Bubka of the Soviet Union, miler Steve Cram of Britain and middle-distance champion Said Aouita of Morocco.

Swimming, volleyball and gymnastics all were scheduled for Friday, the first of 17 days of competition in 21 events. Track and field begins on Saturday, when opening ceremonies will be held at Husky Stadium.

Biondi, winner of seven medals — five gold — at Seoul, and Jager, a silver and gold medalist two years ago, have been the top two freestyle sprinters in the world for more than four years. Evans is the premier longer distance racer in the world.

"We've still got two years before the next Olympics," Evans said. "At the Goodwill Games, we can get international experience and still get ready to swim fast two years from now."

"Normally, we point toward one big meet a year, and this is a good meet to pick. There's a lot of attention and all the Europeans will be here."

Swimming competition will be held at the 2,472-seat Aquatics Center in Federal Way, Wash., about 20 miles south of Seattle.

Mackey fired following arrest

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland State fired basketball coach Kevin Mackey today, two days after he admitted to a cocaine and alcohol problem.

"I fired Kevin Mackey, but really he fired himself," university President John Flower said at a news conference.

Flower said Mackey's behavior had "made a mockery" of ethical and moral standards.

Mackey was arrested Friday night as he drove away from a reputed drug house. A urine test showed he had .20 of a gram of alcohol per 100 milliliters of urine, above the legal limit of 0.14 of a gram. The test also showed some cocaine in his system.

At a news conference Tuesday, Mackey called his problems with drugs and drinking a "descent into hell."

He has pleaded innocent to charges of driving while intoxicated, consumption of alcohol in a motor vehicle and violation of the open container ordinance.

Mackey, 43, of Shaker Heights was hired as Cleveland State's head coach in 1983, after he had served as an assistant at Boston College since 1977.

Under Mackey, the Vikings went 14-16 in 1983-84, then recorded 20-plus wins each of the next four seasons.

The NCAA placed the program on probation the past two years for recruiting violations that included improper attempts to land 7-foot-6 Manute Bol.

MESSAGE BOARD

BUBBA-
Even though "You Don't Send Me Flowers," you still "Light Up My Life" and "I Can't Smile Without You." So, "Babe", let's have another night like "The Night that the Lights Went Out in Georgia" and may we remain "Forever Young".
I am yours

TO MY HARRY,
When we first met I thought that I'd either want to kill you or make love to you, I'm glad that I chose the latter. Thanks for caring enough to stick around for the fire.
FROM YOUR SALLY

HAS SOMEONE SENT YOU A MESSAGE THAT YOU NEED TO ANSWER????? Stop by The Daily Iowan, Rm. 111, Communications Center, Monday through Friday 8am-4pm.

MARY GREER
Get that stuff packed and grab your bike. Did you buy a tent? How about a Diet Coke? I know, Greg LeMond doesn't wear a helmet either. Well, hurry 'cause I'm picking you up at 5:30pm. Look out RAGBRAI here we come! And its gonna be great!

Spiegel gives Rose 5 month jail sentence

By Joe Kay
The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Pete Rose lost his composure, then he lost his freedom.

Baseball's all-time hits leader finished his fall from fame on Thursday when he was sentenced to five months in prison and an additional three months in a halfway house for cheating on his taxes.

He was also fined $50,000 and ordered to do 1,000 hours of community service with inner-city children during his one-year probation after getting out of prison.

Rose, whose 4,256 hits in 24 major-league seasons would seem to make him a certain Hall of Famer, will now have to go before the baseball writers who vote in January 1992 as an ex-con as well as having been banned from baseball for gambling.

Rose had hoped to avoid jail, but U.S. District Judge S. Arthur Spiegel said the severity of the tax crimes mandated prison, in part to serve as an example for others.

The former Cincinnati manager's voice cracked with emotion as he expressed shame over his guilty plea on two counts of failing to report more than $354,000 in income from the sale of autographs, memorabilia and gambling winnings.

"I think I'm perceived as a very aggressive, arrogant type of individual," Rose said, standing behind a podium a few feet in front of Spiegel. "But I want people to know that I do have emotion, I do have feelings, and I can be hurt like everybody else."

"And I hope no one has to go through what I went through the last year and a half. I lost my dignity, I lost my self-respect, I lost a lot of dear fans and almost lost some very dear friends."

His wife, Carol, sat behind him as he spoke. Rose's voice cracked again when he mentioned the hardship on his family. He accepted responsibility for what he's done.

"I have to take this opportunity to thank my wife for giving me so much moral support during this ordeal," Rose said. "It had to be very tough on her when your 5-year-old son (Tyler) would come home from school and tell her that his daddy is a jailbird."

Spiegel recommended Rose begin serving his sentence at an Ashland, Ky., prison on Aug. 10.

Rose, banned from baseball last Aug. 24 for gambling while managing the Cincinnati Reds, probably won't be eligible for early release, according to the federal Bureau of Prisons.

For Rose, the hometown boy who was rookie of the year for Cincinnati in 1963 and starred on the Big Red Machine of the early 1970s, sentencing came in a crowded courtroom just a few blocks from Riverfront Stadium, where he became baseball's all-time hits

Homers let Cardinals top Padres

The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Todd Zeile and Terry Pendleton hit home runs and Joe Magrane turned in a solid pitching performance for six innings as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Diego Padres 8-3 Thursday night.

Zeile's home run, his team-leading 10th, made him the first St. Louis rookie to hit that many since Hector Cruz in 1976. Pendleton's homer, his sixth, was only the third by a Cardinal hitter in 14 games.

Orioles 4, White Sox 1

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken tied a major-league record with his 88th consecutive errorless game at shortstop and drove in two runs with a first-inning double as the Baltimore Orioles beat the Chicago White Sox 4-1 Thursday night.

The loss was only the second for Chicago in its last 14 road games. The White Sox won six of their first seven games on an 11-day road trip.

John Mitchell (2-2), who benefited from three double plays, allowed seven hits in 8 1/3 innings before being relieved by Gregg Olson, who retired Scott Fletcher for his 21st save.

Ripken, who hasn't made an error since April 13, matched Kevin Elster's string of successive games at shortstop without an miscue. Elster set the mark with the Mets from July 1988 to May 1989.

Tigers 1, Red Sox 0

DETROIT — Jeff Robinson pitched a two-hitter for eight innings and Larry Sheets' sixth-inning single scored Alan Trammell all the way from first base, lifting Detroit over Boston.

Robinson (7-7), who struck out four and walked five, lowered his earned run average from 5.67 to 5.25 with eight innings of shutout pitching.

Robinson outdueled Greg Harris (7-4), who allowed eight hits and pitched the second complete game of his career in 61 starts.

Yankees 2, Twins 1

MINNEAPOLIS — Tim Lary snapped an eight-game losing streak and New York scored both of its runs on a fifth-inning error by Minnesota shortstop Greg Gagne.

Leary (4-12), who hadn't won since May 23 when he beat the Twins 12-0 on a four-hitter in the Metrodome, allowed eight hits in 7 1/3 innings.

After giving up a run in the second, Leary blanked the Twins on five hits in the next 5 1/3 innings before being relieved by Greg Cadaret with runners at first and third with one out in the eighth.

Mets 6, Braves 2

NEW YORK — David Cone won his sixth straight decision and reached double figures in strikeouts for the fourth straight game as the New York Mets beat the Atlanta Braves 6-2 Thursday night.

The Mets returned from a 6-6 road trip and have now won 16 of their last 18 home games.

Cone (7-4) allowed six hits, struck out 11 and walked three in 7 1/3 innings. He raised his season strikeout total to 117, third in the National League and has 60 strikeouts over the last 54 innings.

Phillies 5, Reds 2

CINCINNATI — Darren Daulton drove in two runs and scored twice as the Philadelphia Phillies snapped the Cincinnati Reds' four-game winning streak 5-2.

Pat Combs (6-7) allowed 11 hits in seven-plus innings.

Steinbrenner expects Vincent to rule in his favor

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — George Steinbrenner still insists he did nothing wrong and believes Commissioner Fay Vincent will agree if he looks at his case with an unbiased eye.

"If we had a fair hearing, if the facts are considered here, I believe we will have a favorable conclusion," the New York Yankees owner said Thursday. "I don't believe I did anything wrong."

But that is for Vincent to decide. He is expected, possibly next week, to announce what, if any, action he will take because of Steinbrenner's dealings with gambler Howard Spira and Dave Winfield.

Steinbrenner presented his side a day after transcripts of his hearing with Vincent on July 5-6 were made public. Dressed in a sport shirt and slacks and munching on a sandwich, he spoke at a hotel suite on Park Avenue, about 10 blocks from Vincent's office. Around him were newspapers with screaming headlines — "Boss Still Fears Spira" and such.

The transcripts showed an unsympathetic Vincent grilling Steinbrenner on several subjects, including the owner's different versions of why he paid Spira $40,000. There were several sharp exchanges, and in the aftermath, Steinbrenner linked Lou Piniella and gambling, an issue Vincent quickly put to rest.

"I want to defuse this," Steinbrenner said. "It's gotten out of proportion, it really has.

Nobody likes going through anything like this."

"At first, the commissioner requested that all of us not comment. I got clobbered by trying to abide by what I thought he wanted," Steinbrenner said. "I can certainly talk about what's public. I haven't said anything about the commissioner."

Steinbrenner insisted he did not leak the 372-page transcript and said he had "no idea" who did.

"The commissioner says our people did," he said. "No way did we release it."

"I was surprised at some of the things," Steinbrenner said of the hearing's tone. "But I'm not pointing a finger at anyone. The commissioner is free to hold any type of hearing he wants."

Steinbrenner said his lawyers still wanted to present at least 20 more witnesses to Vincent, although the hearing phase might be done already. He said he did not expect to talk with Vincent, who is at his summer home in Harwich Port, Mass., reviewing the matter with deputy commissioner Stephen Greenberg, counsel Harold Tyler and investigator John Dowd, before a ruling is issued.

"I don't think he wants to speak with me," Steinbrenner said.

There has been speculation Steinbrenner, who was suspended by then-commissioner Bowie Kuhn in 1974 for making illegal political campaign contributions, would contest any suspension in court. He did not say whether that was true.

"I'll leave that to the lawyers," he said.

U.S. golfer Steve Pate takes a swing during the first round of the British Open Golf Championships at St. Andrews, Scotland, Thursday. Pate shot a 2-under-par 70, four shots behind the leaders.

Open highlight: 'Monster putt'

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — It could only happen here, at the Old Course.

Only here, on the famous double greens that frequently cover more than an acre, can a golfer produce the long-range putting heroics Michael Allen managed on Thursday.

"It was maybe 100 feet. No. Probably longer. Maybe 150 feet," Allen, the longshot American said of his monster putt that helped him grab a share of the first-round lead in the British Open. "I could hardly see it. It was the longest putt I ever made."

"It was the longest putt I ever HAD."

Allen, who spent four years on the European circuit before joining the American tour as a 31-year-old rookie this season, was tied with Greg Norman at 6-under-par 66.

But Allen wasn't alone as golf turned into a ground game on this centuries-old course stretching along the coast of Fife.

Nick Faldo played a ground ball, a 40-45 yard bump and run with an 8-iron, in and out, down and up the slopes of the Valley of Sin and into the cup for an 18th hole eagle-2.

Norman 2-putted from well off the green — not an unusual occurrence on a course where there's little definition of where the greens and fairways end and the rough begins — for a birdie on 18.

Norman, who drove almost pin-high on the 18th, did not make a bogey and did not have a "5" on his card in his 66.

"Anything under 70 was basically my target," Norman, the 1986 Open champion, said. "I figured that would be close enough to stay in touch with the lead."

Faldo, who has won the last two Masters and was an overwhelming pre-tournament favorite here, used his last-hole eagle to finish at 67 — a shot behind the co-leaders.

"I had it going at the flag more often than not and then I got that good break on 18," Faldo said. See Open, Page 8

Moss 'big factor' in recruiting of Lusk

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Iowa basketball coach Tom Davis didn't have to work hard when recruiting Illinois all-stater Paul Lusk.

Davis just turned the job over to Iowa assistant coach Rick Moss, and Moss turned back the clock.

The Iowa assistant played against Lusk's uncle, Gary, in high school and coached Illinois high school basketball against the recruit's father, Paul Lusk Sr., for several years.

So it was relatively easy for Moss to recruit the two-time all-state selection from Trenton Wesclin high school.

"His father and I have been very good friends for a long time," Moss said. "I was able to recruit Paul . . . that was a real joy to me."

"Rick Moss was a big factor," Lusk admitted. "He and my dad coached against each other for a long time."

But Lusk said that wasn't the only reason he chose to play at Iowa.

"I always wanted to play in the Big Ten," Lusk said. "Iowa has just a great program."

Admittedly a "small-town white boy," the 6-foot-4, 185-pound Lusk looks like he's out of the movie "Hoosiers." And the high-scoring guard's high school career also resembled the 1986 movie.

In "Hoosiers," the setting is the small, basketball-crazy town of Hickory, Ind. A local hero, Jimmy Chippewa, leads the Hickory high school team to the state championship game, where they upset the highly-favored South Bend Central team.

Lusk's hometown isn't Hickory — it's New Baden, Ill., population 2,400 — but he said the townspeople are just as enthusiastic about basketball.

"On game night, you could rob our town," Lusk said. "Everybody's at the game."

As a senior, Lusk averaged 32.4 points, 10.6

Tournament gives Jackson look ahead

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Mowing down high school hitters was easy for Karen Jackson. She's already finding college batters a little tougher to handle.

Jackson, an Iowa softball recruit who was named the 1990 California Softball Player of the Year by Cal-Hi Sports Weekly, is facing the cream of the crop from the amateur and college softball ranks at the Women's World Championships in Bloomington-Normal, Ill., this week.

"It's a different level of competition," Jackson said of the championships. "In high school and ASA (American Softball Association), I'd get by easily. The hitters here are much better."

Jackson had little trouble with high school lineups during her senior season. The hurler from Roseville, Calif., was 20-0 with 0.05 ERA while leading her high school team to the California Tournament of Champions title last spring.

Softball

Jackson struck out 257 hitters in 130 innings and pitched 128 consecutive scoreless innings over one stretch of the season. She allowed only one earned run in 1990.

Although she is not a native of the country, Jackson said her family has some Puerto Rican in its background. And that, combined with her pitching for Roseville, was enough to get her an invitation to pitch on the Puerto Rican team.

According to Iowa softball coach Gayle Blevins, Jackson is seeing a combination of past and present college players at the World Championships, as well as the best players from other countries.

The Puerto Rican national team has a 3-4 record after the first four days of the week-long event. In her four appearances, Jackson has a 4.74 ERA and 19 strikeouts in 20 1/3 innings.

The hurler owns a 1-2 record in the tournament, including a complete game victory in Puerto Rico's 5-4 win over the Netherlands Monday. She also started in an 8-1 loss to Canada Sunday and in a 6-1 defeat by Australia Wednesday.

Puerto Rico will finish Friday in its pool today. The top teams in each pool advance to a championship tournament, but Jackson has other commitments and will be absent if the Puerto Rican team should advance.

Blevins said the experience would help ease Jackson's transition to college-level softball.

"To pitch against the caliber of hitters that she's facing and to play with that level of athlete around her, I think it gives her greater confidence in her ability to make the adjustment to the college level," Blevins said.
