Brutal massacre in Monrovian church leaves hundreds dead

The Associated Press

200 Monrovian students were killed in a massacre by a group of looters led by a British lawmaker who had been imprisoned for 18 years by the Soviet Union. Witnesses and other officials have confirmed that the attack took place on Monday, and that the attackers were using rocket-propelled grenades and mortar rounds.

The British lawmaker has not made any public statement regarding the attack, and it is unclear whether he was involved in planning it. The British government has not commented on the matter, and the incident has sparked international outrage.

The massacre has raised concerns about the stability of the region, and the international community is calling for an immediate investigation. The United Nations has dispatched a team to the area, and the U.S. government has offered to provide assistance.

BRITAIN - A British lawmaker and co-founder of the Conservative Party was killed today in a bombing in the northern English city of Manchester. Ian Gow was killed in the explosion, which occurred as he was leaving his office.

The bombing was the second in less than 24 hours to target a British politician, and it comes just days after a similar attack in London. The incident has sparked a new round of political crisis and tension in the country.

Ian Gow was a member of the British Parliament and a key figure in the party's leadership. He had been planning to run for the leadership of the party in the upcoming elections, and his death is a blow to the party's chances of regaining power.

The British government has promised a full investigation, and it has called for the international community to support its efforts to prevent further attacks.

WASHINGTON - Senate Democrats and Republicans opened debate Monday on campaign-finance reform at the Capitol, where they are seeking to end the two-year-old stalemate over legislation to regulate the role of special interest groups in elections.

The legislation would limit the amount of money that candidates can raise and spend, and it would create a public financing system for federal elections. Democrats and Republicans have been at loggerheads over the issue, and they have been unable to reach a compromise.

The legislation would also create a public financing system for state elections, and it would prohibit candidates from receiving unlimited contributions from corporations, labor unions, and other entities.

The legislation has faced significant opposition from both parties, and it is unclear whether it will pass before the end of the session.

Communication with landlord

a good way to settle disputes

By Julie Cresswell

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City, Iowa - Communication is the key to settling landlord-tenant disputes, according to Rep. Stephen Schultz, R-Monrovia, who says it is important to talk to your landlord and to keep records of all communications.

"Many times when we have tenants who are causing problems, we can work with them to resolve the issues," Schultz said. "But if the tenant is uncommunicative, then we need to take action to protect the property and the other tenants."}

Schultz said that tenants and landlords should always keep records of all communications, and that it is important to be clear and concise in all communications.

The Iowa City Housing and Inspection Services office receives several calls each week from both tenants and landlords relating to malfunctioning appliances, maintenance problems and housing code violations.

The "Rent Report" from things breaking down that were working when leased, to over-occupancy, the use of extension cords, blocked doorways, and leaves on the property's roof.

"It is important to bring in a landlord to oversee the issues, and to bring in a tenant and have them both answer questions," Schultz said. "If the landlord is not cooperative, then we need to take action to protect the property and the other tenants."}

Legislators offer plan to meet college expenses

By Mike Glover
The Daily Iowan

DES MOINES—Meeting all requests for financial college expenses will cost $200 million more a year, far beyond the state's ability to pay, legislators were told Monday.

Legislators said they were crafting a more education-focused budget plan for the session, comparing it to last year's $600 million plan. They said the new plan could be more affordable.

A comprehensive program is too expensive for a state trying to stay in the black, said Rep. Donald Shuey, D-Davenport.

The legislative interim committee is studying ways Iowa can make higher education more affordable.

Experts confront hazing, other problems through education, increased awareness

By Ann Marie Williams

Two years ago at the University of Texas, a student was killed after being forced to swallow a kilogram of sleeping tablets. The offices of the University of Iowa and other schools around the country have been forced to take hazing seriously.

Since 1978, an estimated 35 students have died as a result of ritualistic hazing incidents. The death of a student at the University of Texas has focused attention on the issue, compelling many of the dangers of hazing in their schools.

In Sept. 20, 10 nationally recognized experts on greek issues will address this

State abortion law challenged in court

By Michael Blood

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A federal court in Idaho has barred the state's 1991 abortion law from taking effect, ruling that the measure would impose an undue burden on women seeking an abortion.

The law, which took effect last week, is the toughest in the nation, prohibiting most abortions after the first trimester of pregnancy, except in cases where the mother's life is in danger or there is a substantial risk of serious impairment of a major physical or mental health.

The Idaho Supreme Court had upheld the law, saying it did not unduly burden women's right to choose abortion under Roe v. Wade. The court's decision was appealed to the federal court, which issued a temporary restraining order.

The federal court's ruling Friday comes just days before the law was set to go into effect. The court said it would issue a more detailed opinion later.

"It is unfortunate that the federal court found it necessary to interfere in a matter that was already before the Idaho Supreme Court," said Gov. Butch Otter.

The ruling allows abortion providers to continue performing the procedure until the full court considers the case.

Abortion rights groups had filed a lawsuit challenging the law, saying it would deny women access to a constitutional right. The American Civil Liberties Union is representing the plaintiffs.

Lawmakers in Idaho had debated the measure for months, with proponents arguing it was necessary to protect the lives of unborn children.

"This law is a commonsense approach to protecting the lives of unborn children," said Rep. Ken Mulder, a Republican and co-sponsor of the bill.

Opponents said the law was too harsh and would force women to travel out of state for an abortion.

"This is a personal decision that women should be able to make without government interference," said Sen. Jeanette Ribbon, a Democrat and sponsor of the measure.

The Idaho law is one of several that have been challenged in court. Several states, including North Dakota and Kansas, have passed similar measures in recent years.
The resolution as saying: "Secret army and interior troops have no right to exercise any criminal action against the territory without permission of the Supreme Soviet of the Republic, to this end."

But the leaders said they were willing to negotiate with Gorbachev on the issue. Muradian added: "The activist, speaking by telephone from Armenia's capital of Yerevan, gave no vital detail about the talks, mentioning that armed militants 15 days to turn in their weapons and that the talks are likely to continue. It encompassed all groups that international observers, armed forces, officials, soldiers or police, or attached military or civilian facilities."

Soviet television reported Monday that the government of the Nagorno-Karabakh region, which has declared independence, has issued a statement that the republic must turn in their weapons and, if necessary, fight for their self-defense. Russian President Mikhail Gorbachev said earlier that the government of the Nagorno-Karabakh region must turn in their weapons and, if necessary, fight for their self-defense.

"Everything is possible if you talk," Col. Ralph Brown, a Trinidad army chief, told reporters. "If we can negotiate, if we can come up with a plan, we can do something."

"We are not willing to negotiate with the rebels. But we are willing to negotiate with the government," Brown said. "If we can come up with a plan, we can do something."

Friday, when the school’s board will meet Wednesday in Little Rock, it acknowledged that the University of Arkansas enter the SEC.

Sugg said the decision to enter the SEC comes as the result of a study of the SEC, which showed that the SEC is the best conference for the Razorbacks.

"I felt that the SEC was the best conference for the Razorbacks," Sugg said. "We have had a lot of success in the SEC, and I feel that it is the best conference for our program."

Sugg said the move to the SEC will bring a lot of benefits to the Razorbacks, including increased revenue and improved exposure.

"We are looking forward to the move to the SEC. We believe that it is the right move for our program," Sugg said.

Sugg said that the Razorbacks will be looking to compete for SEC titles and bowl games each year.

Gatti leads Twins to 7-3 win over Angels

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS - Gary Gatti drove in four runs with his 12th home run, and a double and two singles in his 100th career game as the Minnesota Twins beat the Los Angeles Angels 7-3 on Thursday night.

Gatti opened the scoring with a solo home run in the third inning, and doubled in two more in the seventh. He came around to score one of his two runs by way of a two-out single on a sacrifice fly by Frank Thomas shortly afterwards.

Fifteen minutes after the game was over, Gatti was driving to his car in the parking lot, trying to decide whether to go to the Owners meeting in NBA Division 21, or to a wine store that sold a good bottle of Pinot Noir.

He decided to go to the wine store, where he met a friend who had a similar taste in wine. They spent the next hour discussing the merits of various wines, and ended up buying a case of Chateau Mouton Rothschild to enjoy over dinner.

Back at home, Gatti stretched on his couch and relaxed, enjoying the wine and the quiet of the evening. He knew he had made the right decision, and was grateful for the opportunity to share this experience with a good friend.

Women set example in Games

By John Heilman

SEATTLE - Check out the women at the Goodwill Games. They'll be there not just to compete but to show the world that women can be just as good as men.

The first day of competition in the Goodwill Games was held in Seattle, with events in both track and field and cycling.

In track and field, the women's 100-meter dash was one of the highlights, with American Florence Griffith-Joyner setting a new world record. In cycling, the women's road race was won by the Soviet Union's Olga Khodyreva.

According to reports, the event was well-received by the audience, who appreciated the diversity and athleticism on display.

NL West race open for Giants, Dodgers

By Tim Linked

The Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds' four-game series against the San Diego Padres was postponed due to rain on Friday, and the teams will make up the games on Sunday.

The Padres, who have already clinched the NL West title with a six-game lead over the Giants, are expected to rest key players in the upcoming series against the Dodgers.

The Giants, on the other hand, are hoping to make a late push for the division title. They have been on a tear recently, winning four of their last five games.

"We're looking forward to this series," said Giants manager Bruce Bochy. "Our guys are playing well and we're confident we can put up a good fight.

"We'll be ready for anything the Padres throw at us," added Bochy.

On the other side of the ledger, the Padres are hoping to maintain their lead in the NL West. They have been in good form lately, winning three of their last four games.

"We're feeling good going into this series," said Padres manager Bud Black. "We're confident we can put up a good fight against the Giants.

"We'll be ready for anything the Giants throw at us," added Black.

The first game of the series is scheduled for Sunday, with the second and third games to be played on Monday and Tuesday.
