Bush: Americans are hostages

Hussein uses foreigners to defend likely targets

By Rita Beamish
The Associated Press

BALTIMORE, Md. — President Bush declared for the first time Monday that 3,000 Americans trapped in Iraq and Kuwait are hostages. "America will not be intimidated," he said, demanding their release as the U.S. buildup of forces in the region proceeded at full speed.

"I want there to be no misunderstanding. I will hold the government of Iraq responsible for the safety of American citizens held against their will," Bush told cheering war veterans in a blistering speech in Baltimore.

"It could get fairly tough over there," he said later at a Republican fund-raising appearance in North Kingstown, R.I.

Bush called Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "a man of evil standing against human life itself." But he added, "It was not with passionate hate but really with a heavy heart that I had to commit our troops to Saudi Arabia" to head off possible Iraqi attack.

No shots have been fired in that desert standoff, but U.S. warships have sent warning shots near two Iraqi tankers in an effort to enforce an embargo on goods going in or out of Iraq. Asked late Monday whether the United States was prepared to stop the tankers, which kept moving despite the warning, Bush said merely, "Just watch. Just watch and see."

In Kuwait City, meanwhile, at least 12 Americans along with a number of other foreigners were taken from hotels and moved to undisclosed locations, the State Department said.

The Americans were among 2,500 U.S. citizens who were in the Persian Gulf country when it was overrun by Iraqi forces three weeks ago. About 530 others are in Iraq.

Thirty-five Americans who had been taken from Kuwait to a hotel in Baghdad were removed last week and remain unaccounted for, U.S. officials said.

Without giving any numbers, Iraq said Monday it had moved Westerners to potential U.S. military target areas, and it warned its people not to hide foreigners.

The official Iraqi News Agency said a spokesman for Baghdad's ruling National Council as saying, "Iraq's foreign guests have been in fact moved to all vital and military installations. They have been provided with all modern facilities and they are all in good physical condition."

Elsewhere in the inflamed gulf region, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney claimed success in an early stop on a support-seeking trip, announcing that the United Arab Emirates had agreed to let a squadron of U.S. military transport planes use their land.

"I don't see us going into Kuwait but if those orders ever came we would obviously want to be ready," one senior U.S. officer said in a news media pool report.

In Washington, the State Department advised Americans to defer non-essential travel to Jordan in light of "continuing unstable conditions in the region." A stiffer advisory was issued for Yemen — non-essential embassy personnel and dependents were ordered to leave, and all other American citizens without essential reasons for remaining were advised to do so as well — after anti-American demonstrations in the capital of Sanaa.

Bush, in his speech to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, renewed his call for Saddam to release Americans and thousands of other Westerners.

Heavy rains cause minor flooding

By Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

The past two days of heavy rain had many Iowa Citizens holding their breath.

The last time the skies poured about four inches of water on this river town, it was declared a disaster area. But local authorities say the recent downpour — of approximately 3 1/2 inches — has resulted in comparatively minor inconveniences for homeowners and drivers.

Flooding on North Dubuque Street near Mayflower Residence Hall Sunday night through Monday morning forced the city Streets Division to close two of the northbound lanes, redirecting traffic to the two southbound lanes.

The Sheriff's Office reported no major problems in Johnson County but said some secondary county roads were flooded and a bridge near Solon had been closed.

Gary Thompson, park manager for the Coralville Lake, said flooding caused the amount of water discharged from the Coralville Dam to be cut from more than 7,000 cubic feet a second to 3,000 cubic feet a second. Thompson estimated the outflow level would be returned to normal by this afternoon, which he said would add a foot and a half to the reservoir's pool.

John Pirnat and Nicky Knudson, both 10, spent Monday afternoon catching tadpoles at Lower City Park. Three and one-half inches of rainfall over the last two days flooded much of the park.

Thompson said the park staff has had to continually adjust the lake's buoys and park areas since this summer's heavy rains have caused the water level of the reservoir to fluctuate greatly.

"It's been an up and down summer," said Thompson. "It keeps us busy."

Iowa City was plagued with severe flooding in June, and Thompson said just when the water levels were starting to get back to normal, there was more heavy rainfall.

About 2,400 residents in the east part of Iowa City lost electricity about 6:50 Sunday night because of the storm, but 90 percent of the power was restored by 10 p.m., according to Chuck Pope of Iowa-Indiana Gas and Electric Company.

Pope said anytime a storm occurs with lightning, heavy rains and high winds, there are more problems with power loss.

Heritage Cablevision reported receiving a deluge of repair calls after the storm, but said most of the problems dealt with interrupted reception.

Oct. 1 budget deadline looms over government

By Steven Komarow
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House said anew Monday that federal programs could face more than $105 billion in spending cuts barring deficit-reduction action by the end of the fiscal year. President Bush appealed for cooperation from Democrats "because our country is at stake."

Bush's Office of Management and Budget released its new report under a timetable mandated by the deficit-fighting Gramm-Rudman law. The reductions the report described are preliminary now, but both military and civilian programs could face cuts in excess of 40 percent on Oct. 1 unless Bush and Congress reach a budget agreement before then.

However, one of the few things the budget negotiators have agreed upon is that they can't agree on $105 billion in either spending cuts or new taxes to meet the Gramm-Rudman goal. They've set their sights on about $50 billion in deficit reduction next year, with the assumption that if they can strike that deal they can then change the law to prevent any deeper cutbacks.

The president met with his budget negotiators Monday in preparation for the resumption of the bipartisan talks early next month.

Later, in comments at a Republican fund-raising gathering in Rhode Island and on his plane on the way there, Bush said that "cooperation is still possible" with the Democrats and that he has been pleased with the way some Democratic leaders have approached the problem.

"There has been some good faith effort in terms of negotiations. But it is essential now when the Congress comes back that this cooperation be renewed ... because our country is at stake."

In a more partisan attack, Bush said of bills under consideration in the Democratic-controlled Congress: "I will veto every single spending bill that busts the budget. ... We're in that tough a shape, so they can mark it down and put it in the bank."

The remark drew loud applause from the GOP audience.

In earlier comments, in a speech to the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Baltimore, he appealed anew for Congress not to cut military spending. He cited the Persian Gulf situation as an example of a need to retain military readiness

American missionary reported murdered by troops in Liberia

By Michelle Faul
The Associated Press

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast — Diplomats said Monday that government troops in Liberia had killed an American missionary, and there were reports that one of Liberia's rebel factions had reached an informal truce with the government.

The missionary, a Baptist, was killed by government troops who arrested him Thursday, according to diplomats. They said the body of the slain man, identified as Clark Alan Jacobsen, was handed over to the U.S. Embassy on Saturday. No hometown was given for Jacobsen.

The embassy was filing a formal protest with the government, the diplomats said. They did not say why Jacobsen was detained.

A second American arrested and accused of fighting for the rebels, Andrew Voros of New Jersey, was freed Saturday and evacuated from Monrovia by U.S. Marines, the diplomats said.

Jacobsen was the second American known to have died in Liberia's 8-month-old civil war, which has left at least 5,000 people dead, most of them civilians.

A Protestant missionary, Tom Jackson and his British wife, June, were killed March 24 near Bahn, a town in northeastern Nimba county where they had lived for years. They were forced by soldiers to travel in a convoy that was ambushed by guerrillas loyal to rebel leader Charles Taylor.

Most of the 6,000 Americans who had lived in Liberia were missionaries.

There was no official announcement of a cease-fire from either Johnson or Doe. News of the truce was received in a radio telephone call from diplomats in Monrovia.

Proposed beer tax is far from intoxicating

By Marc Morehouse
The Daily Iowan

While Congress ponders an increase in the federal excise tax on beer, area distributors are working to build public awareness and to lead a grassroots effort against higher beer prices.

Currently, the federal tax on beer is $9 per barrel. But as Congress looks for ways to raise revenue for a federal budget that faces $105 billion in cuts, one possible remedy is an increased federal beer tax. Some area distributors, such as the Dale Lee Distributing Co. in Cedar Rapids, fear a higher tax will raise the cost of beer and eventually hurt the industry.

Joe Lee of Lee Distributing said passage of a new federal excise tax law could raise beer taxes "dramatically" — anywhere from $18 to $45 per barrel.

"Some proposals have been as low as $18, and the highest has been $45," Lee said. "This would also raise the price of a six-pack from $3 to $4.50, which would cost a family that buys two six-packs a week $100 a year."

Along with the higher prices, Lee predicts a 12 to 17 percent decrease in the demand for beer, which he thinks will eventually affect the economic growth of the beer industry.

Dick Jackson of Doe Beverage in Iowa City said he also expects a decrease in sales.

"We would have to assume that the higher prices would result in a decrease in sales," Jackson said.

As part of its lobbying effort against the new tax, Lee has distributed petitions to all area beer retailers for their customers to sign in support of keeping the beer tax at $9 per barrel.

In its effort to combat the proposed tax hike, Lee Distributing has also organized a letter-writing campaign and lobbying trips to Washington, D.C. There is also a national effort coordinated by the National Beer Wholesalers Association.

"The main goal of our campaign is to give consumers an idea how the price hike could affect them," Lee said, "We want a grassroots effort to get consumers involved."

"We've taken our stance with the National Beer Wholesalers Association and have petitioned all levels of government," Jackson said. "Bar owners and the National Beer Drinkers Association have taken similar stands."

One of Lee's petitions is located at John's Grocery, 401 E. Market St., and is reportedly receiving a positive reaction.

"Almost everyone that buys beer signs the petition," said Doug Alberhasky, a manager at John's. "Having a user tax on beer isn't that bad, but this is such a high increase. Tax on a case of beer could go up from 28 cents to $4 a case."

"Just call local congressmen and say we're opposed to excise taxes. Right now that is the most important thing consumers can do," Lee said.

Barry Piatt, press secretary for Congressman Dave Nagle, D-3rd District, said Nagle is completely against excise taxes.

Iowa man arrested for murder

By Robert Macy
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — An Iowa man is in custody following a bizarre odyssey during which he carried the body of his dead girlfriend hundreds of miles in the sleeper section of his semitrailer truck, authorities said.

Robert Bartow, 35, of Fort Dodge, was arrested by Las Vegas Metro Police late Sunday night after earlier telling officers and a service station owner that the body of his girlfriend was in the rig.

The woman, believed to be in her late 20s or early 30s, appeared to have been beaten to death, according to Metro Homicide Sgt. Bill Keeton.

"I think it's safe to say he was a bit unstable," Keeton said of Bartow, who was booked into the Clark County Detention Center here on a murder warrant after being treated for a gunshot wound in the leg.

Keeton said the incident began Sunday afternoon when Bartow called police in Laughlin, Nev., 100 miles southeast of Las Vegas, saying he had killed a woman in Riverside County, Calif.

Authorities in Riverside were notified, but no body was found.

"We had the police in Riverside chasing all over the place, and they found nothing," Keeton said. "He failed to tell police he had possession of the body. We had no reason to search the truck. He wasn't with the truck at the time he called police."

Bartow surfaced again several hours later at a service station at Sloan, Nev., 15 miles southwest of Las Vegas, where he told the owner of a service station he had a dead body in his truck.

"The owner tried to phone police and Bartow punched him out," Keeton said. "The owner pulled a gun out of his pocket and shot Bartow in the leg."

Keeton said Bartow headed south from Sloan, "a hole in his leg and a dead body behind him."

The name of the victim was not released.

First phase of UI Pathways Project presented for council consideration

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

Plans for the development of the first phase of the UI's proposed "Pathways Project" were presented to the Iowa City Council for the first time Monday night.

City involvement in the UI campus development project is crucial since the first pedestrian pathway cannot be built without the city's cooperation in closing three blocks of North Capitol Street, according to Richard Gibson, UI director of planning and administrative services.

The proposed pathway would stretch between the Pentecrest and North Hall.

Construction of the UI's project and proposed College of Business Administration building would also require the city to close Jefferson and Market streets, he said.

Gibson requested the city's help in studying intersection-traffic flow. He said pedestrian-vehicle conflicts occur in three area "hot spots": the intersections of Madison and Jefferson streets, Madison and Market streets and Market and Clinton streets.

City officials have expressed concern over emergency vehicle access to the area, but Gibson said the vehicles could continue to enter.

Another problem with the project is service vehicle access to UI buildings along the proposed pathway, Gibson said. The loading dock at Burge Residence Hall is a crucial service area, and limited access to some service vehicles would be allowed, he said.

Pedestrians would have to move into safety zones along the sides of the pathway when service vehicles drive by, he added.

The North Capitol Street project is one of three pathways proposed by UI President Hunter Rawlings last fall. Other pathways are proposed for areas around the UI Main Library and UI Hospitals and Clinics.

The UI will probably complete the three pathways in phases due to the $3 million estimated cost of the project, Gibson said.

Gibson said North Capitol Street has been targeted as the first phase because it is the most important area on campus. He added that heavy use has caused the area to look run-down.

"I think the potential is so great to change the character of campus that it is almost beyond imagination," Gibson said.

Additional area improvements under consideration include a clock tower near North Hall and a skywalk between the Union Parking Ramp on Madison Street and the Union.

Branstad says Iowa's improved economy will stand in Republicans' favor in election

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Despite a slowdown in recent months, Iowa's economy is in its best shape in nearly a decade and won't hurt Republican candidates on the campaign trail, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday.

"Compared to 1982 and 1986, this is a lot better and lot healthier year for Republicans in Iowa," Branstad said. "In 1982, we had a national unemployment rate of 10 percent right before the election. In 1986, we were still suffering from a farm crisis that affected much of the Midwest."

Branstad, during his regular meeting with reporters, conceded there are signs of an economic slowdown in the state, and there is potential for higher fuel prices because of Mideast tensions to further dampen economic growth.

But Branstad said conditions are not nearly as bleak as during his earlier campaigns, particularly his last re-election bid in 1986.

That campaign was conducted against a backdrop of soaring interest rates and plummeting land values that forced thousands of farmers off the land and reduced population in large sections of the state.

"I feel pretty good about it," Branstad said. "Obviously, no governor can control what happens in the Middle East. Iowa has probably positioned itself as well as any state."

Branstad said he will be able to say during the campaign that he's pushed for diversification of farming and other steps that have insulated the state to a degree from the sorts of economic shocks that hit during the 1980s.

"We're in a much stronger position," Branstad said. "Obviously we are affected by the national economy. I think we're going to be able to handle the situation."

"I think we've put in place a lot of things to make the Iowa economy stronger than the national economy," Branstad said. He said those points could turn the economy into a positive issue for Republicans as the campaign unfolds.

Branstad is facing a challenge from House Speaker Don Avenson, and while most polls have shown the governor ahead, his lead isn't commanding.

The campaigns have announced plans for the first debate between the two next Saturday in Cedar Rapids. Branstad said they are close to completing details for three campaign debates.

"I think we're very close to announcing all three of them," Branstad said. "There will be two more debates, one in Central Iowa and one in Western Iowa. Details are very close to being worked out."

On another campaign topic, Branstad rejected suggestions that Republicans are facing trouble in legislative elections because they have fewer candidates than Democrats.

Last Friday was the deadline for filling ballot positions, and it passed with Democrats holding a solid edge in candidates. Branstad said it would be a "long shot" for the GOP to get control of either chamber of the Legislature.

Local organizations seek volunteer workers

Several area organizations are in need of volunteers. They include the following:

■ Big Brothers/Big Sisters: About 100 young children are waiting to share three to four hours per week with a Big Brother or Big Sister. A one-year commitment is required. One person is also needed to work on the Agency Newsletter for four hours bimonthly. Word-processing and layout experience needed. Contact Barbara at 337-2145.

■ Women's Transit Authority needs women who are at least 19 years old for a free nightly rape prevention service. Volunteer drivers and dispatchers are needed. Shifts are Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 9 p.m. to midnight. The car is provided. Call Amy or Barbara at 335-6002.

■ The UI Hospitals and Clinics has a wide variety of volunteer opportunities available including art cart, book bus, flower delivery, gift shop, patient escort and tutoring and coffee kiosk. Contact Trudi Rehquist at 356-2515.

■ Home Delivered Meals: Volunteers are needed to take one shift weekly on Wednesday or Friday from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. HDM brings a hot noon meal daily to the homebound elderly. Drivers need their own cars, but gas costs are reimbursed. Call Sonya Kurtz at 356-5212 Monday through Friday before 11 a.m.

These are just a few of the volunteer positions available in Iowa City. For information on other positions, call Julie Johnston at United Way's Volunteer Action Center at 338-7823.

Man's environmental crusade includes remnants of prairies

By David Sims
The Daily Iowan

In the last few months a lone man has been driving around the back roads of Johnson County, getting out of his car occasionally to look through an old cemetery or a roadside ditch.

Some rural residents have eyed the stranger with suspicion as he looked through the weeds and grass at the edge of their fields or along the road by their homes.

He's a tall, thin man with tanned skin, wearing a plaid shirt and blue jeans. He has a long mustache and his big silver belt buckle reads Wyoming — he looks like a cowboy.

Those who have ventured to ask him what he's doing have found that he's hunting for prairie remnants — which are survivors of the native grass and plants that once covered most of Iowa.

Russ Bennett is one of a growing number of county roadside vegetation managers who have the task of restoring the prairie to the land alongside the state's secondary roads.

Hired by the county, he's one of the agents of a plan intended to save money on roadside maintenance, reduce the amount of chemicals in our surface water, prevent soil erosion and restore what Walt Whitman called the characteristic landscape of America to the highways of Iowa.

Bennett said counties are turning to prairie to save costs on maintenance and chemicals that control weeds and shrubs. A strong prairie system fills every niche available, crowding out weeds and shrubs, he said. A prairie is a system of grasses and plants, which can include from 10 to 100 varieties of vegetation.

"A prairie is really a very short forest, amazingly well-tuned to survival," Bennett said.

Al Ehley, an agronomy professor at the University of Northern Iowa, coordinates information between the counties growing prairie in the roadsides. In the last year and a half, he has seen the number of Iowa counties opting for roadside prairie increase from six to 22, replacing the traditional cool season grasses.

Ehley cites the inefficiency of pesticides as a major reason for the switch.

"We've been spraying for 30 years and I don't see much change in the roadsides," Ehley said. "If any-along their land because it looks like he's bringing in the weeds — a potential public relations problem for Bennett, who is also the county weed commissioner.

"There is very little room for the out of the ordinary, the untidy or the throwback," he said. "Prairie is all of those. Prairie is like having tousled hair."

Bennett will work in Johnson County to increase people's awareness of the roadside. This year he intends to meet with local environmental and service organizations and to hear their ideas and input for the project.

"It would be nice to plant 6,000 acres of prairie for myself but it's not for me, it's for them," he said. He said the reaction from people locally has been almost exclusively positive, and he is glad to be working in a place where people are excited about the idea of bringing the prairie back to the roadside.

Bennett grew up on an Iowa farm near Maquoketa where the need to produce did not outweigh the responsibility to the land. "I was fortunate that my family had a strong sense of environment," he said. "We were brought up to respect (nature), to work with it, not against it."

Bennett said for most of his life, he has crusaded for the environment on his own, staying away from organized groups.

"I've always been a person who fought for the environment," he said. "I've always been willing to stand up and yell at someone who wanted to drain a lake or straighten a river."

But now he feels the only way to save the environment is from inside the system.

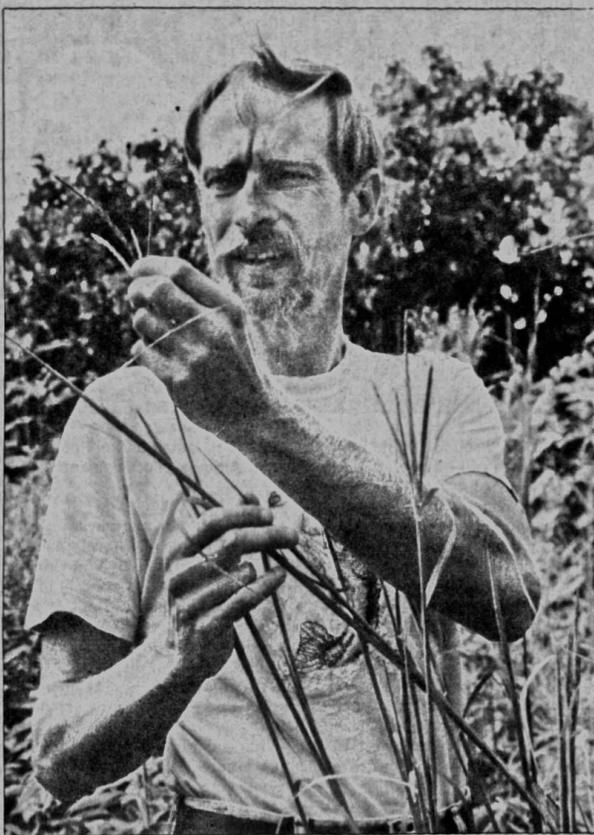

"It took me 40 years to learn that," he said. "And the system wants to work. It just sometimes doesn't know what to do. It needs prompting."

Bennett recently presented a five-year plan for prairie development to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors. He has been busy this summer — collecting prairie remnants, or samples, from the roadsides and cemeteries. He is also identifying areas where the prairie is already growing.

But, noting that it takes some prairie plants two or three years to start growing, he cautions people not to expect the prairie to reappear overnight. He hopes to have a foothold in five years and anticipates converting half of the 930 miles of county roadside into prairie within ten years.

"We've had people call and say, 'Where's the prairie?'" he said. "It's not Astroturf."

Beware of phony oil, gold deals

DES MOINES—Iowans should be wary of con artists who are using recent gas and oil price increases to trick people into phony oil and gold investments, the state's commissioner of insurance said Monday.

Acting Commissioner David Lyons said that phony oil and gas investments have been a staple of investment fraud since the 1973 Arab oil embargo and warned that recent Middle East tensions will be exploited to take advantage of nervous investors.

"Swindlers use current events to make the possibility or even necessity of a quick killing in the markets seem feasible and reasonable," he said. "What normally dies instead are a small investor's hopes of ever getting the initial investment back."

In a typical scam, investors are urged to put up as much as $10,000 into partnerships that promise high profits. Some of the investment is returned quickly with money taken from other investors, but then organizers leave with the bulk of the investment.

Lyons also warned investors to be wary of scams that try to take advantage of high gold prices to attract investment in legitimate-sounding loan deals. In the gold scams, investors are asked to put up 20 percent of the price of the gold with a promise to secure bank-financing for the rest of the amount.

Lyons said the loans will be called in if the price of gold drops, costing investors their original investment. He said gold prices probably won't go high enough to pay for the commissions, interest and fees for such loans.

Buying gold directly at current prices and keeping it in a safe deposit box is the only safe way to invest in gold, he said.

Traveling evangelist's body discovered in Osceola; examiner suspects foul play

The Associated Press

OSCEOLA, Iowa — A traveling evangelist whose body was found Saturday was beaten to death in an Osceola motel room, a Department of Criminal Investigation spokesman said Monday.

Spokesman Eugene Meyer said police believe Timothy Petersen of Hiawatha, Kan., died at a Super 8 Motel but said it is too early to speculate on the motive for the killing.

Meyer said Petersen, 41, was a gospel singer who traveled in the Midwest but said he doesn't know whether Petersen has been in the Osceola area before.

Osceola Police Chief Steve Niebur said Saturday that motel employees told investigators that Petersen was not the person who checked into the room. He said whoever checked in put a fake name and license plate number on motel records.

Death toll rises to 364 amid S. African strife

By Greg Myre
The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Zulus fired assault rifles at Xhosas sleeping in a workers' barracks early Monday, leaving 22 people dead and pushing the death toll to 364 in a week of tribal clashes, police said.

Zulus and Xhosas, the country's two largest black tribes and long-time rivals, have been waging vicious battles since Aug. 12 in the townships surrounding Johannesburg.

Police and eyewitnesses said Zulus armed with AK-47 rifles raided a Xhosa workers' hostel early Monday in KwaThema township east of Johannesburg. At least 22 people were killed, many of them Xhosas shot in their beds, they said.

Police in armored vehicles moved in after dawn to restore order. Enraged Xhosas set fire to a hostel used by Zulus before being driven off.

Fighting also flared in nearby townships, resulting in several deaths.

Looters continued to pillage hostels abandoned by Zulu migrant workers. People carted away refrigerators, stoves and anything else they could find.

Johannesburg newspapers Monday reported five killings Sunday in the Soweto township by the "necklace" method, whereby youths put gasoline-soaked tires around the necks of victims and set them alight.

API/Carl Fox

Police on Monday raised the death toll for the fighting from the past week to 364 and said hundreds were injured.

"We just keep finding bodies. They're everywhere," said a police spokesman.

The fighting appears to be mostly a tribal conflict with a long history, but it also has political overtones.

Nelson Mandela and many other leaders of the African National Congress, the largest opposition movement, are Xhosas. The ANC's rival, Inkatha, is a Zulu-based organization.

Train collision in Poland leaves 16 dead, 50 hurt

By Drusilla Menaker
The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland — A high-speed train plowed into the back of a slow-moving train in thick fog on the outskirts of Warsaw on Monday, killing 16 people and injuring more than 50, officials said.

The force of the collision lifted the last car of the slower train off the track. The engine of the speeding train ripped through the car as it passed underneath.

"It was a macabre sight with the coach standing up, and there was no floor," said a fire brigade worker who was among the first to arrive at the scene after the 6:20 a.m. crash.

The high-speed train was en route from Prague to Warsaw and was moving at about 60 mph when it hit the second train, which was traveling at about 9 mph as it arrived from Szklarska Poreba in southwestern Poland, according to a statement from the Polish Railroad.

The cause of the crash was not immediately known. Emergency workers at the scene suggested the engineer of the Prague train may not have seen the signal that caused the first train to slow down.

Forty-three of the injured were hospitalized.

Virtually all the victims appeared to be on the slower train. One of them, Bogdan Owsiak, told Polish television that most aboard were sleeping when the train was hit.

"I managed to squeeze out through a crack, and only when I fell to the ground did I see one of my legs was broken and I had an open wound," Owsiak said. "While we were waiting for ambulances we could hear people crying inside the train."

An American Embassy official at the scene said it did not appear there were any Americans among the dead or injured.

CRISIS IN THE GULF

More than oil

The cynics have spoken — again and again. While most of the country has expressed support for George Bush's decision to send troops into the Persian Gulf, some have attacked the policy, arguing that the only reason U.S. forces are there is to protect this country's economic interests. If the U.S. were not so dependent upon foreign oil, the argument goes, and if so much of that oil didn't come from the Middle East, and if Saddam Hussein's invasion of Kuwait did not pose an immediate threat to America's oil interests in Saudi Arabia, then no American military personnel would be there.

The cynics continue with claims that "American boys" are being placed in danger for nothing more than an overzealous economic policy. And this, they say, is the wrong reason for such a display of military might. (Incidentally, these attacks have come from both the right and the left, leaving a coalition of moderate Democrats and Republicans in support of the president).

Well, the simple truth is that there is much more to U.S. presence in the gulf than oil. If the cynics had bothered to review history — not ancient history, but just the last few decades — they would clearly understand that economic interests are not sufficient conditions for military action and that there is much more at stake in the Persian Gulf than petroleum.

What if the countries of the gulf region had agreed to massive cutbacks in production and a leap in prices? Would the U.S. have sent troops to protect its "economic interests" in low oil costs? Certainly not. The president would have bemoaned the unfair trade practices of countries with such a valuable commodity, Congress would have initiated plans for energy consumption, and the American people would have pulled together and tried to save fuel (though they would have been complaining the whole time). But there would have been no military action.

Interestingly, that scenario has already been played out, once in 1973 and again in 1979 during the OPEC oil embargoes. Then, there was no U.S. troop deployment, no Navy flotilla, no blockade to protect U.S. economic interests. Only a lot of complaining and saving. And that is how it should have been.

The massive U.S. military action currently going on in the Persian Gulf can be attributed mostly to the recent radical shift in the power structure of the world. With the demise of Communism throughout the world, leaders in all countries need no longer be as concerned with how their actions will affect two superpowers poised on the brink of nuclear annihilation. For 40 years the Cold War has been the defining factor in all major foreign policy initiatives for all parts of the world.

Not so, anymore. As the Soviet Union has struggled to shift to a market economy, its role as one of two world leaders has declined. The U.S., though battling a weak economy as well, has been left as the sole heir to this position.

The issue today in the Middle East is not oil — it's world order. If Saddam Hussein is given license to march into any country he has a distaste for, a dangerous precedent will be set. Leaders in more volatile parts of the world will be forced to start an arms buildup or to ally themselves with a local strongman. The result will be more disruption, destruction and death than this one maneuver in the gulf could possibly cause.

The issue in the Persian Gulf is not oil, it's peace. Long-term stability and respect for national sovereignty are at stake. The crisis is not, as some are so fond of pointing out, just an "Arab problem." It is a world problem, and the United States, as a world leader, has an obligation to lead the charge.

RUSH: A moment in the sun

I moved recently. I now live where there are real trees rather than tarpaper rooftops outside my windows, in a building that is not an unsupervised dormitory for delinquents from the North Shore. My first week in the building was heaven. Then came Saturday morning, the diary of which follows.

8:00 a.m. I am awakened by a noise from outside. It's yelling. Or cheering. Or some kind of singing. I wonder if Kinnick Stadium has picked itself up and moved East across the river. Maybe John Colloton didn't like where it was. In my innocence I keep wondering, Where can they be having an athletic event in this neighborhood? The noise gradually abates.

8:25 a.m. I decide to get out of bed. Making my way to the shower, I stop dead in my tracks at a new outburst. Hand-clapping. Yelling. Singing. I am standing before a full-length mirror and look up into my own eyes as if at an apparition of dread. Dear Lord. Next week is rush. Deliver me, I pray. I take a towel and turn the faucets full on.

9:00 a.m. I blow my hair dry much longer than necessary. Blow dryers make a lovely noise. I never realized how calming the tonal quality of a blow dryer is. Reluctantly, I turn it off and go to work at my desk.

9:45 a.m. I set aside Pascal's "Pensees." Sorry, Blaise, this is not your morning. I look in vain for a copy of Seventeen magazine to help pass the time then decide to try to get into the spirit. These are, after all, my new neighbors. I focus on the words, hoping to isolate any that may make sense. Fiji. They're singing something that sounds like Fiji. "I want to be a Fiji." Isn't that a touring cycle? Or are they saying floozy? No, it's Dee Gee. I give up.

11:00 a.m. It's one thing to know the dictionary definition of the word alto. It's another to endure the intravenous infusion of alto bombardment that signifies rush. The most astonishing of all paranormal phenomena produced by rush activity occurs when 40 untrained women yell songs in unison, altissimo. The sound has been known to press all fluid from the veins of exposed humans. It is an experience that would unnerve the Kodo drummers. Feeling like a cat from old army LSD testing films, I telephone a friend whose sole aim in life is service in the diplomatic corps. "Protocol hotline? Answer this one. Is 11 a.m. too early for a gin and tonic when it's the weekend before rush and you live near the intersection of Burlington and Summit?" "Nope. You're in the clear. Go for it."

High noon: I take a stroll. Young women are assembled on the lawns of immense old houses at every corner. I shake my head. I'm not much of a group person, but modern man is undeniably descended from tribal social structures. Perhaps that explains it. But thinking of other cultural ceremonies I've seen, I remember how expressions of tradition combine with real emotion to create a stunning sensory experience. Here on the corner of College and Governor, listening to members of an alto big-hair chorus clamoring to be A-Phis, I ask, Is this the best American moderns can do?

It may well be. The fact is, we are dealing with tradition during Rush Week. If anything in life is puzzling and easy to deride, it is a tradition. Why? Because you never really know how it started or what it means. Why do flocks of 18-year-old women want to be Dee Gees? Since we may never really know, it serves to look at what they do after they're in, not why they want to get there.

Many local social service organizations, including the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, the Domestic Violence Project and the Women's Transit Authority would suffer without the Panhellenic system. Volunteer workers, fund-raising events, and donations of clothing and furniture from residents and staff at various houses are significant. During the academic year, many roll their eyes as greeks teeter-totter for days to fund research into debilitating and fatal diseases. Volleyball marathons, best legs contests for men and women, and car washes for local charity abound. While I may deem their sense of politics embryonic or even wrong-headed, they invariably find their own way to make contributions to worthwhile organizations. If they occasionally spend too much time at the Fieldhouse as well, and throw up all over their topsiders, who am I to look down in judgment from my lofty booth at George's?

So to all aspiring Dee Gees, best of luck. Sing your hearts out. Follow your traditions with pride, even though the rest of us don't get it, and won't spend too much time trying.

To the rest, remember how glad you are to finally reside in a university community where artists perfect their art, mathematicians tote their figures, musicians pluck their strings and plink their keys, and even women who wear their bangs rolled back into the shape of fresh croissants get to have their moment in the sun.

Thanks, Sen. Harkin

To the Editor:
We can be extremely proud as Iowans to have a leader such as Sen. Tom Harkin serving and representing us at the federal level of government. Sen. Harkin authored the Americans with Disabilities Act, which extends civil rights protections to 43 million people with disabilities living in the United States.

Congressman Tom Tauke initially opposed the ADA. Partly because of his stance against it, he was endorsed by the National Federation of Independent Businesses. When it came time for a vote on ADA, there was so much widespread bipartisan support for it that Tauke changed his mind. I'm glad he did, but I am also wondering if the NFIB doesn't feel a bit chagrined now.

I will be voting again for Sen. Tom Harkin in November. I don't want Iowans to have that "chagrined feeling" from Tauke on similar issues in the future. With Sen. Harkin we can believe that he'll do what he tells us up front.

For the enhanced lives of 43 million Americans with disabilities, and as the parent of one of those persons, I want to say, "Thank you, Tom Harkin. Thanks 43 million!"

Republicans in bind over tax plan

Sen. Pat Moynihan, D-N.Y., ostensibly has applied the ointment of compromise to the abrasions caused by the budget unpleasantness. But he actually could be creating, from the unpromising material of his fellow Democrats, a serious opposition party.

Moynihan, the Senate's Sisyphus, recently applied his sore shoulder yet again to the rock that he has been trying to roll uphill. Many months ago he proposed cutting, in just two years, Social Security taxes, putting the system on a pay-as-you-go basis. This would have quickly shut the spigot from which now gush surpluses generated by the increase put in place in 1983.

Those increases were supposed to build "reserves" for when, around 2020, baby boomers retire. The "reserves," now flowing in at $1 billion on earnings (including the employer's portion), most workers in the 15 percent income-tax bracket pay a total tax rate higher than that paid by the richest Americans. The richest are in the 28 percent bracket, but any income in excess of $51,300 is exempt from Social Security taxes.

C. Eugene Steuerle of the Urban Institute notes that if fringe benefits, such as employer-paid health insurance, are thought of (as they should be) as income, then two workers with equal income can have significantly unequal Social Security tax burdens. A worker with $30,000 cash wages will pay $1,200 per year more than a worker whose $30,000 in earnings include $8,000 in fringe benefits. That means a five-year difference of $6,000 in tax bills.

If this regressive tax is not cut, by the end of this decade it will slurp up $200 billion a year more than Social Security will pay out that year. Moynihan says the money is not needed now for Social Security, so leave it with the workers who do need it. "The soul of the Democratic party is at stake."

Talking about the party's soul is what philosophers call a category mistake, like talking about the wit of Brussels sprouts. But consider the political consequences if Moynihan's tax cut for 132 million Americans were to pass in September with the support of most Democratic senators and opposed by most Republicans.

For a quarter of a century, since George Wallace got their attention, Republicans have celebrated Joe Sixpack, a fellow of hearty but simple appetites — beer, not Scotch. The courtship of Joe Sixpack is going to be complicated enough if Republicans, busy campaigning for a capital-gains tax cut, vote against the cut in Social Security taxes and that might not be Joe's only grievance.

Consider the surrealism of Washington these days. The estimate of the number of S&Ls that will fail has been doubled from 500 to (so far) 1,000. The Bush administration cannot say, within half a trillion dollars, the eventual cost of this black hole for money: Guesses range from $400 billion to $1 trillion, depending on the interest rate assumptions. And while these big numbers are banded about, Republicans have floated an itty-bitsy idea for helping to reduce the deficit by just $50 billion this year.

(Perspective: $50 billion is less than the deficit number will be increased by removing Social Security surpluses from the budget for deficit circulations. And $50 billion is just half of the additional sum sought last week for this year's S&L spending.)

The Republicans' bright little idea for nibbling at the deficit? A new tax adding 75 cents to a sixpack of beer.

George Will

a week, are scheduled to rise to $3 billion a week in 1997 and even more after that. But they are being used to finance government operations, thereby masking the real size of the deficit. (The real deficit is forecast to be $241.8 billion in fiscal 1991, not counting the cost of the savings-and-loan shambles.)

Moynihan's aim was — is — to force honesty in budgeting and equity in taxation. However, his party, the conservative (meaning resistant to change) party, flinched from Moynihan's radicalism and from the need to think (about equitable taxes to replace the Social Security revenues). But now comes Moynihan's compromise: Phase out the rate cuts over five years.

For someone earning the maximum income taxable for Social Security purposes (about $554,300 next year), the savings during 1991-1995 would be $1,900. In 1996, the wage earner would be saved $708. The tax rate would not rise again until 2010 and would not reach today's rate until 2015. Moynihan says 132 million Americans are paying a rate that is a quarter of a century premature, on a tax that is inequitable in its current use — financing the government's general operations.

This tax, which for 74 percent of taxpayers is a bigger burden than the income tax, is regressive: It has a flat rate and is not applicable on income above $51,300. Because of the 15.3 percent Social Security tax

Lawyer indicted in serial killer case

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. — A lawyer who for weeks has publicly defended himself against reports he was a suspect in a serial killing investigation was charged Monday with one of the nine slayings.

Kenneth Ponte, 40, who now lives in Port Richey, Fla., entered a plea in court that he was "absolutely not guilty." Bail was set at $500,000 surety or $50,000 cash, and Ponte was released after his mother posted her home.

An indictment charging Ponte with murder was filed last week and was sealed to give authorities time to notify victims' relatives. It accused Ponte of the beating death of Rochelle Clifford Dopierla, and said she was beaten and died on April 27, 1988.

She is one of nine women whose bodies were found near this southeastern Massachusetts community between July 1988 and April 1989. Two other women are missing and presumed to be victims. All had histories of drug use and some were prostitutes.

Bristol County District Attorney Ronald Pina declined to say if Ponte was a suspect in the other slayings. But court documents show that authorities believe he had a personal relationship with at least three victims.

Scope of Mapplethorpe case debated

CINCINNATI — A courtroom became an arena of artistic debate Monday over whether five sexually explicit photographs by Robert Mapplethorpe should be judged separately or as part of an entire 175-picture exhibit.

Defense lawyers for the Contemporary Arts Center and its director, Dennis Barrie, argued for dismissal of a misdemeanor charge of pandering obscenity. He said the exhibition as a whole wasn't legally obscene.

Both the director and the gallery were charged when they showed the photos by the late artist, which previously had drawn the anger of U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms and had helped prompt Congressional action to restrict funding of work deemed obscene.

In addition to that defense motion, Municipal Judge David Albanese considered a prosecution request to consider just the five pictures identified in the indictment in judging whether obscenity laws were violated.

Albanese did not rule on either request. Judith Reisman, a communications consultant who said she has studied sexually explicit photographs for the Justice Department and the American Family Association, testified that individual photographs would have affected visitors.

Defense lawyer H. Louis Sirkin countered, "But I go in to see the exhibit as a whole, don't I?"

"Absolutely not, absolutely not," Reisman said. "There are people who walked in and saw one picture and left."

Top Nazi suspect indicted in Stuttgart

WEST BERLIN — Josef Schwammberger, who spent nearly 40 years as a fugitive to avoid prosecution for Nazi war crimes, was indicted Monday in the deaths of more than 3,400 people in Poland during World War II.

Schwammberger, 78, was extradited from Argentina in May. As a commander of concentration camps during the war, he was accused of extreme cruelty, including ripping the gold fillings from prisoners' mouths before their deaths.

The indictment sets the stage for one of the last major Nazi war crimes trials in Germany.

Prosecutor's spokesman Helmut Krombacher said Schwammberger was indicted in the deaths of "at least 50 Jews." He was also charged as an accessory to murder in the killings of at least 3,377 other people, many of them Jews as well, Krombacher said.

The trial is expected to take place at the beginning of next year, the prosecutor's spokesman said.

10 reported dead, 5 wounded in clash between India, Pakistan near Kashmir

By Dilip Ganguly
The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — India placed its troops on alert across its northern border with Pakistan on Monday after clashes were reported with Pakistani troops in a remote area of the disputed Kashmir territory.

Describing the clashes as "a major border incident," United News of India said that according to unconfirmed reports at least 10 Pakistani soldiers were killed and five wounded in the clashes.

There was no official confirmation on casualties.

"It is very difficult to say if there were casualties. We are, however, checking," said an Indian government spokesman, Ram Mohan Rao.

The clashes reportedly occurred in the Kupwara sector of the disputed frontier, about 60 miles northeast of the Srinagar, the capital of India's Jammu-Kashmir state.

Earlier, Pakistani troops fired heavy artillery with explosive and incendiary shells at Indian border posts in Jammu-Kashmir state, Rao said.

"Exchange of small arms fire is a frequent occurrence on the border, but use of heavy artillery and incendiary ammunition is something new," Rao said.

In Islamabad, a Pakistani defense ministry spokesman denied the reported incident.

"There is absolutely no truth in the report of Pakistanis firing (at) Indian troops," said the spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity.

But in New Delhi, an Indian defense ministry official, requesting anonymity, said all troops were put on alert along the border after the incident.

Indian defense officials in Srinagar called the incident "serious." The officials, who also asked not to be identified, said some of the Pakistani shells landed a half-mile inside Indian territory.

Rao said the Indian government was waiting to receive more details about the border incident.

"Probably Pakistan wants to make a little more noise, but we have taken appropriate defensive measures," Rao said. He refused to elaborate on the measures.

A week ago, Pakistan accused Indian troops of using heavy artillery, anti-tank guns and mortars in an attempt to capture a border outpost in Pakistan-controlled Kashmir. At the time, India denied the claim.

India and Pakistan have fought three wars since gaining independence from Britain in 1947. Two of the wars were fought over Kashmir, a former principality claimed by both countries.

The present border is a cease-fire line drawn in 1972 that separates Jammu-Kashmir, India's only Muslim-majority state, from Pakistan's Azad (Free) Kashmir region.

In another sign of escalating tension, the prime minister of Pakistan-held Azad Kashmir on Monday ordered mandatory military training for all males.

"India wants to attack. . . . Responsibility for the whole of the Kashmir nation is on my shoulders," the prime minister, Mumtaz Rathore, told about 3,000 cheering supporters in the Azad Kashmir capital of Muzaffarabad.

"From this day onward my mission will be the liberation of Kashmir," he said.

A senior aide to Rathore, requesting anonymity, said military training would also be given to Muslim militants spearheading the secessionist uprising in India's Jammu-Kashmir state.

The aide said Rathore sought no prior approval from the national government in Islamabad before announcing the compulsory military training.

Pakistan-held Azad Kashmir is relatively autonomous, but the federal government is responsible for the region's defense, diplomacy and finances.

Analysts say Rathore's plans to provide military training for Kashmiris could cause a confrontation with the new right-wing government that succeeded ousted Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

Soviet convicts hijack plane to Pakistan

By Zahid Hussain
The Associated Press

KARACHI, Pakistan — A gang of convicts from a Siberian labor camp overpowered their guards aboard an Aeroflot passenger flight, hijacked the plane to Pakistan and sought political asylum Monday. No one was hurt.

One of the convicts apparently smuggled weapons on board in an artificial limb, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

The 11 hijackers surrendered after landing at Karachi International Airport, and the 29 passengers and nine crew members were freed unharmed, officials said.

It was the latest in an unprecedented spate of hijackings involving Soviet aircraft. There have been at least 13 hijack attempts in the past three months.

Airport officials insisting on anonymity said the Tupolev 154 had only five to 15 minutes of fuel left when it landed in Karachi. The authorities did not say whether the hijackers would be given asylum or sent back to the Soviet Union.

The hijacking began Sunday when 15 prisoners were aboard an Aeroflot flight from Neryungry, about 3,000 miles east of Moscow, where their labor camp was located. The flight was bound for the nearby city of Yakutsk in eastern Siberia, officials said.

It was not known why the prisoners were being taken to Yakutsk, or why they were serving time in prison.

The prisoners, armed with guns and homemade explosives, overpowered their guards and threatened to blow up the plane, said the independent Soviet news agency Interfax.

"All indications are that the weapons were concealed in an artificial limb used by one of the hijackers," Tass said.

The hijackers forced the plane to return to Neryungry. There, six prisoners left the plane but two more joined the group, according to Soviet Interior ministry spokesman Yuri Arshenevsky.

Of the 70 passengers left on board, the hijackers allowed 41 women and children to leave the plane in Neryungry, Arshenevsky said.

Then they flew west to Krasnoyarsk in Siberia, where authorities negotiated with them for two hours and allowed them to refuel.

The plane next flew to Tashkent in Soviet Uzbekistan. There, the hijackers demanded the aircraft be allowed to leave the country.

After negotiating through the night, authorities allowed the plane to be refueled and to take off. The hijackers promised to free the passengers and crew when they landed, officials said.

Karachi airport authorities initially denied the jetliner permission to land but relented when the pilot said he did not have enough fuel to fly to another destination, officials said.

The airport was briefly closed but reopened to normal traffic after the hijacked plane landed, officials said.

Pakistan is an Islamic country, but authorities said none of the hijackers was believed to be Muslim.

There have been at least 13 attempts to hijack Soviet aircraft since late May, mostly by Soviet teen-agers or young men who said they wanted to live in the West.

At least six hijackers made it out of the Soviet Union, but all were arrested. Soviet media emphasized that Western countries have been returning the hijackers to the Soviet Union to face charges.

Playwrights capture top 2 awards

The Daily Iowan

Playwrights Steve Feffer and Judy GeBauer, spring graduates from the UI Playwrights Workshop, swept the top two prizes in the 1990 Christina Crawford Awards for new plays. The awards were announced Aug. 9 at the 1990 Association for Theatre in Higher Education Conference in Chicago.

Feffer won the first-place prize of $1000 and GeBauer won $500 for the second-place entry. Both winning scripts, Feffer's "The Wizards of Quiz" and GeBauer's "Girls' Rules," were given readings at an Aug. 9 session of the conference, along with two Honorable Mention winners.

The awards were established and funded by novelist and screenwriter Christina Crawford, who chronicled her relationship with her mother, actress Joan Crawford, in "Mommie Dearest." She created the awards to support and encourage the development of young playwrights.

The 1990 competition, the ninth year of the awards, attracted

approximately 100 entries from student playwrights and other young writers from all parts of the country.

Feffer's winning script earlier captured a national playwrighting award sponsored by the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, and his play "Marilyn and Marc" was produced by University Theatres last fall as the UI entry in the 1989-90 American College Theatre Festival competition.

Both Feffer and GeBauer were among the select group of playwrights invited to participate in productions of their work this summer at the 1990 National Playwrights Conference at the Eugene O'Neill Theater Center in Waterford, Conn.

The Christina Crawford Awards are among the many programs administered by the Association for Theatre in Higher Education (ATHE). When the American Theatre Association disbanded in the mid-1980s, the organization's university and college division reorganized as ATHE, so although the ATHE is a young organization, its tradition stretches back for decades.

When the Christina Crawford Awards are presented each year, ATHE presents readings of the scripts by an Actors' Equity theater company in the city where the organization is meeting. This season's readings were presented by the Equity Library Theatre in Chicago.

CD 'long boxes' scrutinized

By David Bauder
The Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. — The leader of a movement that's pushing record companies to ditch the cardboard packaging in which compact discs are sold is claiming victory for its side.

By the end of the year, a system will be in place to get rid of the environmentally wasteful "long boxes," says Robert Simonds, chief financial officer of Rykodisc.

"Even the most vehement retailers would admit off the record that the days of the long box are numbered," Simonds said. "I think what they're mostly fighting for now is to make sure they're not stuck with the whole bill to pay for a new system."

His opponents don't quite share his optimism but admit they're looking for alternatives.

In an industry that loves to show its public concern for the environment and other causes, the controversy over the so-called long boxes is making people squirm.

Compact discs are generally packed into 5- by 6-inch plastic "jewel boxes." In order to curtail theft and use more eye-catching graphics, record companies wrap these containers in 6- by 12-inch cardboard boxes.

When they buy CDs, most consumers simply tear the boxes apart and throw them away.

That doesn't make much sense to Simonds, who says the long boxes are both a waste of money and

"(The CD long box) has replaced the record jacket as an art form."

Robert Simonds
Rykodisc executive waste of paper. His "Ban the Box" movement started with a letter published in Billboard magazine and grew with the 20th anniversary celebration of Earth Day.

Such musicians as R.E.M., Bobby McFerrin, the B-52s, Sting, Rosanne Cash, Olivia Newton-John, the Grateful Dead, and Crosby, Stills and Nash have pledged their support.

"If consumers stop and think about the package, they will think that it is kind of a pain in the neck," said Simonds, whose company is based in Milwaukee. "Then when they find out they're paying up to a dollar or more per disc just for the package, then they start getting angry. It's really struck a chord with consumers."

Simonds stepped up the pressure in recent weeks by asking CD purchasers to tear open the cardboard package in the music store and dump it on the clerk's counter. The Tower Records chain, one of the loudest opponents of "Ban the Box," has put recycling bins in some stores.

"It has replaced the record jacket as an art form, which is very important to conveying to the public the excitement of a record," he said.

The United States is the only country that uses long boxes. Getting rid of the boxes, retailers fear, will make them more vulnerable to shoplifters.

"They're not thinking through what the alternatives are before screaming 'ban the box,'" said Paul Smith, president of CBS Records distribution. "There has to be some way of merchandising the product. I think every record company in the business is actively seeking an alternative to the 6-by-12 box."

Although Simonds is the leader of "Ban the Box," most of his company's product — particularly the popular CD reissues of old David Bowie albums — are offered with long boxes. That's because some music chains have told him they won't sell the discs any other way, he said. Simonds offers a discount to retailers who buy his discs without the box.

Despite all the environmentally conscious musicians jumping on Simonds' bandwagon, it was Raffi, the Canadian singer of songs written for preschool youngsters, who blazed a trail. He was the first to insist in a contract with his record company that his CDs be marketed without long boxes.

"I simply believe that the excessive packaging of cassettes and CDs can no longer be tolerated in a global environmental crisis," said Raffi, who's signed to MCA.

New bar features rap, hip-hop

By Jennifer Wegrarz
The Daily Iowan

It's been a while since Iowa City had four downtown dance bars, but with the opening of New Sensations the balance is once again restored.

Friday the 18th was the day we visited New Sensations, as a service to our readers and because, frankly, we were curious. Would we be crushed on the dance floor? Would we be asked repeatedly our greek affiliation? Would the bathrooms meet up to David Crawford's strict expectations?

In essence, it is the same bar as it was when it was College St. Club — drink specials, 19 and over, terrarium dance floor.

The DJs spun a mix heavy on rap/hip-hop and house with very little pop, techno or industrial, relying on current and oldie hits and multiple hits by the same act to generate dancefloor interest. Thankfully, INXS' "New Sensation" was not in the mix, though maybe we came too late and missed it.

The musical surprise of the evening was sandwiching New Order's "True Faith" and "World in Motion" in a groove including Lisa Stansfield ("All Around the World," "This is the Right Time,") M.C. Hammer ("Turn This Mutha Out," "U Can't Touch This," "Have You Seen Her"), Digital Underground ("The Humpty Dance," "Doo-wutchyalike") and Technotronic ("Pump Up the Jam," "Get Up"). With all the new dance songs out there, the ploy of playing more than one song by an act was utilized far more often than necessary; former dance No. 1s "Everybody, Everybody" by Black Box and Madonna's "Vogue" were played twice as well.

Of course, it wouldn't have been a night at an Iowa City dance bar without "Push It" and "It Takes Two" somewhere in the evening's festivities; the absent "Pump Up the Volume" would have made the night truly complete.

The verdict? If you like the rap/house thing, you'll probably like New Sensations; the DJs don't appear to be suffering the musical identity crisis some others in town are, so the music should remain consistent for a while. Though not overly crowded on this particular night, expect large crowds until the novelty of "Ooo — It's a new bar!" wears off.

What's in a name? The jury's still out following Billboard chart action of several singles by relatively unknown performers aided by superstars. Glenn Medeiros' "She Ain't Worth It" featured a rap by Bobby Brown and went to the top of the Hot 100; he's joined by Ray Parker Jr. on the follow-up, "All I'm Missing Is You." What these singles — which aren't incredible dance-oriented pop, but listenable nonetheless — have going for them is slick, punchy production geared toward an older audience.

Two vapid and sickly-sweet singles by young female unknowns haven't fared as well. It's not just that the songs are weak, it's that they appeal to a very young audience more concerned with who is guesting on the single than if the song is actually any good. That blind devotion is turning radio programmers off, off, off.

Donnie Wahlberg of you-know-who joined Seiko for "The Right Combination"; apparently, it wasn't. After 10 weeks in the Hot 100, the song never got higher than No. 54 in July and has malingered in the nether regions of the chart ever since — despite some heavy airplay in Chicago and Detroit, according to Billboard, the song never took off as one might expect a New Kids-aided project to do. In Canada, however, it is a top 10. There is no accounting for taste.

"Angel of Love," by Ana and Jordan Knight is even more dead, not surprisingly, the song is charting at the same stations reporting "The Right Combination," but nowhere else.

If you have not heard either song around Eastern Iowa, don't hold your breath. J.J. Gerard, music director of Q103 (KQCR), says, "They're stiff. They're not hits." The station never programmed either song, and Gerard adds that the record companies have stopped promoting the songs to stations. The New Kids' "touch" is further utilized on Tommy Page's new single, "Turn On the Radio," co-written and co-produced by Wahlberg 'n' Knight. Page has already scored a No. 1 hit with these collaborators, so prepare for radio saturation.

An odd event at New Sensations Friday was the gathering of more than 30 people intently watching a big-screen TV. It was not a sports event — it was "Crazy," the new video by The Boys, a group touted by Motown as a "new" Jackson 5.

This video parodies "Faith," "Every Little Step," "Vogue," "Rhythm Nation" and Milli Vanilli chest-butting — and it's not a bad song, either. Try and catch this hilarious video gem on BET's "Video Soul" or "Video Vibrations" shows in the afternoons because, other than on "Street Party," you won't see it on MTV.

Michael in as Boss's last move

By Jim Donaghy
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — George Steinbrenner played The Boss until the end Monday, making one last change by once again naming Gene Michael general manager of the New York Yankees.

Steinbrenner had until midnight to give up control of the team under an agreement reached July 30 with commissioner Fay Vincent.

Steinbrenner, speaking at Yankee Stadium before Monday night's game against Toronto, said his resignation letter was signed and would be submitted by midnight. He must resign as the Yankees' general partner, although he can remain as the team's principal owner.

"I've always said 10 years is maybe enough for a corporate chief executive," he said. "Perhaps it's time for a change."

Two of Steinbrenner's limited partners wanted to block the agreement with Vincent, but U.S. District Judge Alice M. Batchelder refused to issue a restraining order.

"We obviously are pleased and gratified that the decision of the court in Cleveland is consistent with our position," Vincent said in a statement.

Batchelder's ruling cleared the way for Steinbrenner's resignation, and he said he was ready to go.

"I've gotten all of my work done," Steinbrenner said. Well, almost.

Before leaving, Steinbrenner changed general managers for the 14th time in his 17½-year reign, giving the job to Michael for the second time. Michael, also a two-time manager of the Yankees, was GM in 1980.

Michael began this season as a scout, became the "eye-in-the-sky" and was working as an advance scout when he was appointed general manager.

Michael replaced Pete Peterson, who will remain with the team as a special adviser to the general manager. Vice president George Bradley will also stay and be in charge of the minor-league department.

"I think we'll work fine together," Michael said. "I'm going to handle the major league part of it. I couldn't be happier. I've been with

Last-minute rescue fails Steinbrenner

By Chuck Melvin
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — A federal judge cleared the way for George Steinbrenner's resignation Monday night by denying a restraining order sought by two part owners of the New York Yankees who wanted to keep him in charge.

U.S. District Judge Alice M. Batchelder ruled that the two limited partners failed to show that Steinbrenner's July 30 agreement to resign as general partner was obtained under duress from Commissioner Fay Vincent.

"Plaintiffs did not present evidence that this settlement was anything other than an unpleasant choice that Mr. Steinbrenner made," Batchelder said. "The evidence presented here was far from persuasive."

The judge questioned earlier in the day whether Steinbrenner would remain as general partner even if she ruled in favor of the two partners. The possibility of having Steinbrenner testify by telephone from New York was discussed, but then dropped with the approval of both sides, she said.

"No injunction from this court can order Mr. Steinbrenner to continue in his role as general partner," Batchelder said.

Her ruling came shortly after 7 p.m. EDT, more than two hours after Vincent's office wanted Steinbrenner's resignation in hand.

The lawsuit was filed last Thursday by Daniel R. McCarthy and Harold M. Bowman, both part owners of the Yankees. In the suit, they contend that Vincent's investigation of Steinbrenner's association with gambler Howard Spira was an "inquisition" that resulted from the commissioner's personal dislike of Steinbrenner's hands-on style.

Mark B. Cohn, attorney for McCarthy and Bowman, announced immediately that he wanted to appeal to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati before midnight, when Steinbrenner's resignation was due to take effect. But Patrick McCartan, one of Vincent's attorneys, said a judge's decision on a temporary restraining order cannot be appealed.

"If you have a plane ticket, you can go anywhere, but it doesn't mean you'll be heard when you get there," McCartan said.

McCartan said the lawsuit would now progress to the next stage, the partners' request for a preliminary injunction against the July 30 agreement. He said it would probably be a couple weeks before a hearing is set.

Cooks inherits starting job at two positions as injuries sideline Patriot punter, tight ends

The Associated Press

Three New England tight ends — Lin Dawson, Eric Sievers and Zeke Mowatt — have gone down with training camp injuries and the survivor, Marv Cook, found himself filling in for another injured player Monday.

Cook was pressed into service as the Patriots punter after Brian Hansen suffered a dislocated shoulder in Saturday night's 44-10 loss to Tampa Bay.

Hansen, signed as a free agent, was the lone punter on the roster and had kicked one 47-yarder when he was injured. Cook's lone attempt was a 33-yard line drive.

Hansen is expected to miss a week or two with Cook filling in until he returns. The tight end punted in his junior and senior years at Iowa, averaging better than 39 yards a kick.

"My first punt in college was a 64-yard punt," he said. "It hit about 20 yards from me, though, and rolled the rest of the way." Bills

The linebacker situation got worse in Buffalo on Monday.

The Bills, with starter Shane Conlan missing because of a holdout, lost regular Darryl Talley because of arthroscopic knee surgery.

Talley damaged cartilage in his right knee during Buffalo's 24-13 loss to Detroit on Friday.

"We were told it wasn't complicated and he'd be able to begin working out after two weeks and be able to play in three weeks," Coach Marv Levy said. "That's the most optimistic projection."

It was unclear whether Talley would be in uniform for the Bills' season opener on Sept. 9 against Indianapolis.

Talley had off-season surgery for cartilage damage in the same knee, but he said the old injury involved cartilage at the back of his knee and the new injury is in the front. He also had surgery on his elbows during the off-season.

Levy said Monday that veterans Tim Cofield and Hal Garner and rookie Marcvecus Patton would play in Talley's spot.

The Daily Iowan/David Greedy

Rodgers remains Fry's answer to the quarterback question

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

"Well, Paul," Jim Hartlieb said to Paul Burmeister, "as you approach the incoming season, how do you see the quarterback situation and how do you fit into it?"

"I fit into the puzzle third with you being second and Matt being first," Burmeister answered. "So I'm third, and hopefully I'll at least stay that way if not get better along the way."

"That's great," said Jim. "Thank you."

The Iowa football media day was a little boring for Hartlieb, the Hawkeyes' second string quarterback.

After the spring battle for the starting quarterback position between Hartlieb and last year's starter Matt Rodgers, the throng of reporters surrounding Rodgers Thursday left no doubt as to who won.

Although Hartlieb completed 12 of 16 passes for 110 yards in the spring game, Rodgers and his game experience proved the victor in the intrasquad battle.

And head coach Hayden Fry doesn't want any more questions about it.

"Right now Matt is No. 1 and if he does well, he'll remain No. 1," Fry said. "But he also knows he's got Jim breathing down his neck. That's a great situation to have. But I don't want anyone to come out and say, 'Who's the damn quarterback?' The quarterback is Matt Rodgers. He earned it; he started 10 games last year."

Which left Hartlieb to sit on the ground with teammates as Rodgers entertained the press.

"That's all right," Hartlieb said. "I'm staying off my feet for the shuttle. We're going to run conditioning tests after this, so I'll be more rested."

"Matt deserves it," Rodgers' backup said more seriously. "He had a great year, so you should get what you deserve, I guess. He can keep fielding all the questions today."

Rodgers became only the second sophomore in the school's history to pass for over 2,000 yards last year, but according to him, that was just because the team had no other options.

"We had to do it; we had to throw it," said the 6-foot-4, 205-pound junior. "We had to make up for (running back) Tony (Stewart) being out, the running game. I don't credit that to myself. I think it goes to receivers, the line, the defense, getting us out there. There's a lot of things that go into that."

Despite his passing statistics, after the Hawkeyes finished 5-6 and weren't invited to a bowl game, there was discussion about replacing Rodgers with Hartlieb.

And even though Fry defends his starter adamantly, Rodgers admits that he had a bad year.

"(Fry) doesn't have to defend me. I did what I did last year and people just have to take that for what it is," Rodgers said. "I didn't think I had a very good year last year, and I know coach Fry thinks the same thing."

"I'm not thinking about last year; that's out of my mind. I've already made all the corrections of all the things I did wrong last year, and now I'm just looking forward to this year."

Now the job lies with Rodgers and Hartlieb, but they aren't the only two after the first team spot. Burmeister, a redshirt freshman, is also in the running.

And behind Burmeister, although they will not be competing this season, are Michigan State transfer Matt Eyde and freshman Jefferson Bates.

"Paul Burmeister's pushing me all the way," Hartlieb said. "He's got a great arm and he's got a great attitude. I haven't seen the other quarterbacks yet but I'm sure they've got great arms, too. You've got to stay on your toes here."

"I've definitely got my work cut out for me to get some playing time," Burmeister said. "At this level, there's going to be competition at every position, and competition brings out the best in people. Hopefully that's what will happen."

As for the other two, they will just spend the year watching and learning from their competition — all of whom will return next season.

"There are a lot of good quarterbacks here," Eyde said. "I always knew the competition would be really good. They're all really good like anywhere in the Big Ten."

"I'm going to redshirt and get a feel for things," Bates said.

Sox rip Oakland 11-1, cut lead to 5½ games

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Sammy Sosa's two-run homer and a two-run triple by rookie Frank Thomas led Jack McDowell and the Chicago White Sox to an 11-1 rout of the Oakland Athletics on Monday night.

The triumph cut Oakland's lead to 5½ games over the second-place White Sox in the American League West and ended a personal six-game winning streak for loser Dave Stewart (17-9). It was the third time this season the White Sox defeated Stewart, who is seeking a fourth straight 20-win season.

McDowell (10-6) gained his second victory over the A's this year with a three-hitter as the White Sox beat Oakland for the fifth time in eight meetings.

Rangers 6, Mariners 5

ARLINGTON, Texas — Julio Franco singled home the winning run with the bases loaded and none out in the bottom of the ninth inning Monday night, giving the Texas Rangers a 6-5 come-from-behind victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Franco's third hit scored Pete Incaviglia and handed the Mariners their fourth straight setback.

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 5

NEW YORK — George Steinbrenner's 17½-year reign in the Bronx ended Monday night with one more news conference and the New York Yankees' 6-5 11-inning victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

The Yankees won the game with one out when Alvaro Espinoza chopped a bases-loaded single over the head of shortstop Tony Fernandez with the runners moving. Greg Cadaret (5-4) pitched 7 2-3 scoreless innings for the victory, yielding three hits.

By losing, the Blue Jays dropped one game behind Boston in the American League East. The Red Sox beat Baltimore 2-1.

Angels 5, Tigers 3

DETROIT — Rookie Pete Coachman had two hits and two RBIs, including a tie-breaking double in a seventh-inning rally that gave the Angels a 5-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers on Monday night.

The Angels' three-run seventh gave Mark Langston (7-15) his second straight victory. Langston went seven-plus innings, yielding three runs and five hits. Paul Gibson (3-3), who faced only one batter, was the loser in relief of Jeff Robinson.

Cardinals 7, Braves 2

ST. LOUIS — Ken Hill pitched a six-hitter and Rex Hudler got three hits and drove in three runs as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Atlanta Braves 7-2 Monday night.

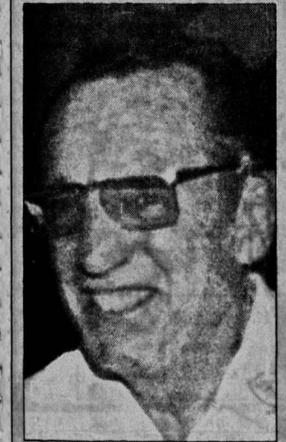

Hill (4-1) won his third straight decision. He struck out six, walked two and retired 10 batters in a row before Dave Justice hit his 19th home run to lead off the seventh.

Hudler, making his first start in six games since sustaining a bruised shoulder, had a two-run single in a four-run first inning, singled in the third and fifth and had a run-scoring groundout in the seventh. In his last nine starts, Hudler is hitting .419 (18-for-43).

Red Sox 2, Orioles 1

BOSTON — Ellis Burks hit a sacrifice fly to score Carlos Quintana with an unearned run in the eighth inning, giving the Boston Red Sox a 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Monday night in a game marked by 15 bases on balls.

Raiders deny quick move to Oakland

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — A Los Angeles Raiders official said Monday there is nothing to substantiate a broadcast report that the team might move back to Oakland in time for the start of the National Football League season.

"The same source said a few weeks ago that without a doubt, the Raiders would play the Dallas Cowboys in their preseason game at Oakland instead of Los Angeles," said the official, who asked not to be identified. "As we all know, the Raiders beat the Cowboys 16-14 Saturday at the Los Angeles Coliseum."

ESPN, citing unidentified sources, reported Sunday night that DENVER — Defensive lineman Dennis Brown returned an interception 23 yards to set up Mike Cofer's field goal with 14 seconds left, climaxing a 20-point comeback and giving the San Francisco 49ers a 27-24 victory over the Denver Broncos in a rematch of Super Bowl teams Monday.

The 49ers, who trailed 24-7 early in the second half after John Elway threw two touchdown passes and ran for another, rallied behind backup quarterback Steve Young.

Elway staked Denver to an apparently comfortable lead as the Broncos sought to erase part of the stigma from their 55-10 Super Bowl blowout loss to the 49ers in January.

Young, replacing Joe Montana late in the first half, had a pair of second-half TD passes, including a 4-yard flip to tight end Jamie Williams with 40 seconds to go, tying the score 24-24.

Sportsbriefs

Two plays later, Denver's Gary Kubiak threw a short pass to fullback Melvin Bratton, who bobbled the ball and then knocked it into the air with his knee — right into the 290-pound Brown's hands.

Brown rumbled to the 4-yard line, where he was tripped up by Kubiak with 17 seconds left. Cofer kicked a 22-yard field goal on the next play, squaring San Francisco's preseason record at 1-1 and dropping Denver to 2-1.

Elway completed 14 of 17 passes for 177 yards. Having what coach Dan Reeves has called his best preseason, Elway has completed 26 of 32 passes for 295 yards in limited action this summer.

After running for a 2-yard touchdown following a 49er turnover, Elway capped an 80-yard drive with a 13-yarder to Vance Johnson for a 14-0 first-quarter lead. He completed five of six passes on that drive.

Kubiak replaced Elway for one series in the second quarter, but Elway returned with 1:26 left in the half and directed a hurry-up offense that produced a field goal and a 17-7 halftime lead.

Elway then took Denver 77 yards on the opening possession of the second half before retiring. He completed all four of his passes for 72 yards on that drive, including a scrambling 14-yard toss to rookie Shannon Sharpe at the rear of the end zone for a 24-7 advantage.

Montana led San Francisco on a trademark 79-yard, 18-play scoring drive early in the second quarter, with Montana getting the score on a 1-yard dive.

Montana then gave way to Young, who threw a 46-yard scoring pass to rookie wide receiver Ronald Lewis when defender Elliott Smith misjudged an apparent interception. That made it 24-17 late in the third quarter.

For pastor Alec Smith or Harare, Zimbabwe, the road to bankruptcy is paved with good intentions.

A series of charity soccer games he arranged last year to raise money for starving children lost $120,000, the preacher said Monday.

Smith, 40-year-old son of Ian D. Smith, who was the leader of the former British colony of Rhodesia, said "only a miracle" could have saved the "Goal Against Hunger" series once local bureaucrats got involved.

Bureaucratic snafus led to the last minute rescheduling of games, petty disputes, poor advertising and endless demands from officials for free admission tickets for themselves and relatives.

At one match, Smith said, riot police were hired to supervise only a handful of fans. Their charges exceeded the gate receipts, and they refused to leave the field until they were paid cash for their services.

Air fares, ground rentals and state levies amounted to double the income earned from the matches, and he alone was left to pay the shortfall.

"It was African bureaucracy at its worst," Smith said.

Pitcher Shawn Boskie underwent successful arthroscopic surgery for a bone chip on his pitching elbow, but when he'll be ready to play again remained uncertain, the Chicago Cubs announced.

Doctors on Monday told the team the chip on his right elbow proved to be less troublesome than they had feared, and that there was no need to keep him in the hospital overnight.

"We're not sure when he'll be ready for action," Cubs' spokeswoman Vickie Pietryga said. "He may miss the rest of the season." Boskie has a 5-6 record with a 3.69 earned run average.

Meanwhile, left handed pitcher Lance Dickson, who was optioned Sunday to Class AAA Iowa, was admitted to Northwestern Memorial Hospital with an infection below his right knee, the Cubs said. Dickson had been hit in the leg during batting practice last week. He's expected to remain in the hospital for three or four days.

John "Hot Rod" Williams was close to signing an offer sheet Monday with the Miami Heat, but his agent and team officials denied a report of a seven-year, $28 million deal.

"At this point there's nothing official," Heat spokesman Mark Pray said. But one source said the team and Williams' agent, Mark Bartlestein, were not far apart in negotiations.

The 6-foot-11 Williams, who has been with the Cleveland Cavaliers since he entered the NBA four years ago, is one of the most attractive restricted free agents available. If he signs an offer sheet, the Cavs would have 15 days to match the offer.

A report in The National said the Heat would offer Williams $28 million for seven years, making him the NBA's second-highest paid player behind Houston's Akeem Olajuwon.

Quintana opened the eighth with a hit off first baseman David Segui's glove and took second when Segui threw to an uncovered base for an error. After Jeff Ballard relieved starter Pete Harnisch (9-8), Wade Boggs, who drove in Boston's first run with a grounder, beat out a hit to first, sliding into the bag ahead of Segui's throw to Ballard. Quintana went to third and scored on Burks' sacrifice fly.

Royals 7, Twins 1
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Willie

Wilson and Frank White hit two-run doubles as the Kansas City Royals beat Minnesota 7-1 Monday night, handing the Twins their sixth straight loss.

Storm Davis (7-8) yielded a run and four hits in eight innings. His longest previous outing this year was 7 1-3 innings against the New York Yankees on May 20. Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth.

Pirates 7, Astros 1
PITTSBURGH — Neal Heaton pitched six shutout innings for his first victory since June 24 and Gary Redus hit a two-run homer as Pittsburgh beat the Houston Astros 7-1 Monday night, the Pirates' sixth consecutive victory.

Heaton ended his six-game losing streak as the Pirates (72-49), 23 games over .500 for the first time since 1979, matched their longest winning streak of the season. The National League East Division leaders also won six straight from April 24-29.

The Pirates, coming off a weekend four-game sweep in Cincinnati, improved to 42-19 against the National League West. The Astros lost for 40th time in their last 52 road games and have the worst road record in the majors, 18-44.

Brewers 4, Indians 3
MILWAUKEE — Dave Parker homered and drove in three runs as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Cleveland Indians 4-3 Monday night, giving Tom Edens his first career victory as a starter.

Edens (3-1), used primarily in relief, made his second start of the season and fourth of his career and lasted a career-high 5 2-3 innings on a misty evening. He gave up seven hits and three runs.

this organization for 21 years." Michael, a former player and coach for the Yankees, got a three-year contract.

On Sunday, Steinbrenner extended the contract of manager Stump Merrill through the 1992 season. Merrill took over the team June 6 when Bucky Dent was fired with an 18-31 record, and the Yankees have gone 31-39 under their new manager.

"We've been together a long time," said Merrill, who attended Steinbrenner's press conference. "Stump and Stick."

Steinbrenner switched managers

18 times during his tenure. His front office, coaches and players seemed to change equally as often.

"There have been a lot of mistakes, but there have been a lot of good decisions," Steinbrenner said.

"I just wanted to show you I'm not remorseful, that I'm not in grief," he said. "Actually, I feel pretty good about things."

Under terms of the agreement with Vincent, Steinbrenner can attend games at Yankee Stadium as long as he buys a ticket. He cannot sit in the owner's box.

"I hope the fans will get along with me sitting with them," he said.

of former Oakland owner Charles O. Finley's failed lawsuit against former commissioner Bowie Kuhn and called on the judge to once again uphold the authority of the commissioner.

"This is a big boy," McCartan said of Steinbrenner. "He signed a contract with the commissioner."

Vincent was prepared to suspend Steinbrenner for two years as a result of his relationship with Spira. Steinbrenner, instead, opted to give up control of the team.

Steinbrenner was "trying to put the best face on a horrible situation when he signed the agreement," Cohn said.

"The injury was at that moment, when the commissioner said, 'You are out, one way or another,'" Cohn said.

McCartan argued that the limited partners should not be allowed to interfere.

"They have no right to challenge. They have no standing," McCartan said. "A third party has no right to assert the rights of another person."

John Burke, an economics professor at Cleveland State, testified for the partners about Yankees' attendance. John Minco, a marketing expert, testified about Steinbrenner's value as a high-profile owner.

"I think he's one of the few owners able to get on city-side of pages, even the gossip columns," Minco said. "I don't know another owner who can get Nelson Mandela wearing a Yankees jacket and saying, 'Tonight I am a Yankee.'"

The partners' lawyers showed a videotape of a television story about Steinbrenner last week.

"We're not dealing, as the TV program showed, with any shrinking violet," McCartan said. "This is a well-advised, tough businessman who had counsel sitting beside him when he signed this agreement. This is a negotiated resolution to a controversy."

Raiders

Raiders owner Al Davis was scrambling to work out final details of a move to Oakland, including a buyout of the team's lease at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

ESPN also reported that the NFL has been prepared for months for a quick switch back to Oakland.

Davis could not be reached by the Associated Press for comment.

Don Perata, president of the Alameda County Supervisors and a leader in local attempts to bring the Raiders back, told KCBS radio in San Francisco that he thinks a move is likely.

"It could all come together, and I suppose even though I've never, ever assumed they would be back this year, if Al Davis can say, 'We have a contract and we have a release from L.A. and we have the approval of whatever is required from the NFL,' yeah, it could happen," Perata said.

The Raiders drew a crowd of only 28,273 to their game against the Cowboys. The Raiders are scheduled to open the regular season against the Denver Broncos Sept. 9 in Los Angeles.

The Raiders, who moved to Los Angeles from Oakland in 1982, are unhappy with their aging home stadium, the oldest in use by an NFL team.

Oakland has made a $127 million relocation offer, and Davis has until September to accept or reject it.

Los Angeles mayor Tom Bradley met with Davis last week to encourage him to accept a new offer to keep the team in the city. Spectator Management Group, the private manager of the Los Angeles Coliseum, has an offer on the table which would advance $20 million to the Raiders.

The money would be paid before $100 million in proposed renovations to the 67-year-old Coliseum are completed.

On Friday, the city of Fontana and a private company announced they had submitted to the Raiders a proposal for a sports complex that would include a 75,000-seat football stadium. Under that proposal, the Raiders would be part owner of the complex, which is projected to generate $600 million in revenue during its first 15 years. Fontana is 50 miles east of downtown Los Angeles.

Cardinals
Meanwhile, the linebacker situation improved in Phoenix as the Cardinals reached contract terms with starter Anthony Bell.

Bell, a four-year starter for the Cardinals who had a career-high 115 tackles last season, held out for 26 days. Phoenix Coach Joe Bugel thought that was long enough.

"This will give us a big lift," Bugel said. "Three weeks before the season opener, I think it's perfect timing. One week or two weeks, you're asking for trouble."

The Cardinals have two remaining holdouts — Pro Bowl safety Tim McDonald and rookie running back Anthony Thompson.

Falcons
Aundray Bruce, starting his third season, sees a dramatic change in Atlanta under new coach Jerry Glaville.

"This defense is wide open," the linebacker said. "I mean it just lets you play — run and hit."

Bruce, the No. 1 pick in the 1988 NFL draft, said under old coach Marion Campbell the Atlanta defense read and reacted.

"But this year, we're attacking.

We're making the offense play off of us, something all defensive players enjoy doing," Bruce said. "It's something I've been waiting on, and now it's finally here. It's like a breath of fresh air."

Raiders
Two straight Pro Bowls, three in the last four years. Ordinarily, those aren't the credentials of a free agent but they come right out of the resume of guard Max Montoya, signed in the off-season by the Los Angeles Raiders.

Montoya, 34, said he wasn't surprised the Cincinnati Bengals left him unprotected but was surprised to leave them.

"They told me I was going to be put on Plan B and said they hoped I wouldn't go anywhere," he said. "I was very comfortable and secure in Cincinnati. I didn't really think anyone would approach me with the kind of numbers it would take for me to leave."

The Raiders did, and he did. "You like to think you can play forever," he said. "Offensive linemen can have a long career. They often mature later than other football players. I feel good. I haven't been injury-plagued in my career. I feel like a young 34."

Baseball veterans travel as contenders seek help

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

Zane Smith, John Candelaria and Mike Marshall are the surest signs that the pennant races are on the way. They're the voyaging veterans.

It happens every season about this time. A team in contention picks up a useful player from a club that started to fade in May.

Hall of Famers Enos Slaughter, Johnny Mize and Eddie Mathews made the trip and so did 300-game winners Gaylord Perry, Don Sutton and Phil Niekro. All traded late in the year, each going to a team looking for one final piece of the puzzle.

Smith, a left-hander, has won both of his starts since coming to Pittsburgh in an Aug. 8 trade with Montreal. He likes what he sees from the top.

"This team wants to win," Smith said. "I think it shows in every game we play."

The Blue Jays, needing a left-hander, acquired Candelaria from Minnesota and the Red Sox gambled some minor-league prospects on Marshall in a deal with the Mets.

Sometimes it works. Mike Boddicker with Boston, Rick Reuschel with San Francisco and Dave Henderson for the Red Sox gave their clubs the boost they needed.

Sometimes, it doesn't. Atlanta, trying to stay close to Los Angeles in 1983, acquired Len Barker in August. Barker went 1-3 down the stretch and won only nine games in the next two years for the Braves. To get him, Atlanta traded then-youngsters Brett Butler and Brook Jacoby.

Sometimes, it works out for both teams. Sutton went to Milwaukee on Aug. 30, 1982, and pushed the Brewers into the World Series. Houston got three minor leaguers in return, including Kevin Bass.

By Aug. 31, rosters must be set. Anyone added after then is not eligible for postseason play.

The Yankees have three veteran starters — Andy Hawkins, Tim Lincecum and Dave LaPoint — that some of the contenders would like to have.

Last year, the Texas Rangers got Harold Baines from Chicago and helped make the White Sox contenders in 1990. For Baines, the Sox got infielder Scott Fletcher and outfielder Sammy Sosa.

Whether big-name veterans are worth a package of prospects is always a gamble.

Boddicker went 7-3 for Boston and helped the Red Sox win the AL East in 1988 after last-place Baltimore traded him for still-developing Brady Anderson and Curt Schilling.

Reuschel helped the Giants win the NL West after Pittsburgh traded him in August 1987 for young pitchers Jeff Robinson and Scott Medvin.

"At first it took me a while to get over the trade," Robinson recalled. "I remember when Al Rosen (Giants general manager) said it was a good opportunity to go over to Pittsburgh. I thought, 'Don't feed me that bull.' But he was right."

Henderson was traded from Seattle to Boston on Aug. 19, 1986, for young players. He went on to hit the home run that saved the Red Sox in the AL playoffs and then batted .400 in the World Series.

In the last few years, Cesar Cedeno, Bill Madlock, Rick Honeycutt, Ken Phelps, Johnny Ray, Jim Morrison, Glenn Wilson and Bob Forsch were late-season additions around the majors. Before then, it was Sparky Lyle, Vic Davillilo and Davey Lopes.

And back in the 1940s and 1950s, it was the New York Yankees all the time. They seemed to start the trend in 1949 by getting Mize and in later years added the likes of Sal Maglie, Jim Konstanty, Ewell Blackwell, Dale Long and Slaughter.

Lottery to continue despite controversy

By Charles E. Beggs
The Associated Press

SALEM, Ore. — The Oregon Lottery Commission voted Monday to continue its sports betting game for a second season, despite bills in Congress and a lawsuit that seek to end the wagering.

Oregon last year launched the first state lottery game in the country based on results of professional sports contests. The Legislature directed the lottery to establish the game in hopes of aiding college athletic departments.

But revenue was less than expected, and the sports programs didn't get much from the effort.

The NFL and NBA protested the new game, and the NBA filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court.

Lottery director Jim Davey said Monday he thinks the sports betting game can be better promoted and become successful, if allowed to stay alive.

Sales of the Sports Action game will begin Sept. 5 for the first games in the NFL's new season, which begins Sept. 9.

The first round of the lottery game offered bets based on point spreads of professional football and basketball games.

Sales totaled $7.2 million, compared with a preseason estimate of $10.6 million.

Colleges could have received as much as $2.4 million for athletic programs but ended up with just $400,000. The sports lottery law required the other $2 million go to economic development because the lottery's overall sales also had fallen below estimates.

Davey said he doubts the lawsuit will proceed before late fall. The issues generally have boiled down to whether Oregon's lottery is infringing on the NBA's trademark and property rights.

Connors attempts comeback in tourney

By Bob Greene
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Returning to the scene of some of his greatest triumphs, Jimmy Connors admits he is a long shot to win the Tournament of Champions.

"I like to come out here and create some interest for these guys who are supposed to be the best in the world," said Connors, who will turn 38 next month and is coming off a wrist injury.

Top-seeded in the 24-man field at the West Side Tennis Club is defending champion Ivan Lendl. Connors, although ranked 72nd in the world, is seeded third in the exhibition tournament, which begins today and concludes Sunday with the nationally televised (ESPN) final.

Connors won the first two of his five U.S. Open titles at Forest Hills, on grass in 1974 when he defeated Australia's Ken Rosewall, and on clay in 1976 when he downed Sweden's Bjorn Borg. The U.S. Open switched to nearby Flushing Meadow and hardcourts in 1978, and the West Side Tennis Club followed the move to hardcourts this year on the show courts.

"I don't have to win anything," Connors said Monday. "I have to go out there and feel that my game is solid enough to hold up. And I need to get in better shape."

Mulholland, Fielder win MLB honors

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Cecil Fielder of the Detroit Tigers was named American League player of the week on Monday for the second time this season and Terry Mulholland of the Philadelphia Phillies was named National League player of the week.

Fielder hit four home runs last week to raise his major-league leading total to 39. He was 10-for-17 last week with eight RBIs and seven walks.

Roger Clemens of Boston, who went 2-0 with 19 strikeouts, was runnerup. Rob Deer and Gary Sheffield of Milwaukee and Geno Petralli of Texas also were considered.

Mulholland pitched the eighth no-hitter of the season last Wednesday night against San Francisco.

Offerman makes big entrance

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — It took only three pitches for Jose Offerman to create an impact with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"Someone told me I needed to be up there, but I told them I'll wait until it's my time and get ready," Offerman said. "And when they called me up, I was ready. My time has come now."

The 21-year-old shortstop became the 61st player to hit a home run in his first major league at-bat in Sunday's 2-1 loss to the Montreal Expos. On Saturday, he was called up from Albuquerque of the Pacific Coast League after Tim Belcher went on the 15-day disabled list.

Offerman, the sixth player the Dodgers have used in the leadoff spot this year, was called up to get on base and set up runs. He did a little extra on Sunday.

"Before the game I told him to just be relaxed and play the game the way he played in Albuquerque," said Dodgers pitcher Ramon Martinez. "You're first time up you have some nerves, maybe. But he hits a home run in his first at-bat and makes the great plays. It's exciting."

The 6-foot, 160-pounder from the Dominican Republic hit his homer against Dennis Martinez. It made Offerman the fifth Dodger to homer in his first at-bat and the first since Dan Bankhead in 1947.

Offerman singled his next two times up, stole a base and made a nifty over-the-shoulder grab of Tom Foley's pop to short center in the fifth inning.

"I wasn't nervous," Offerman, signed by the Dodgers as a free agent in 1986, said. "Baseball's the same, whether you play here, Albuquerque or San Antonio."

Offerman had only six homers in 1,224 minor league at-bats over three seasons and none in 450 Triple-A at-bats with Albuquerque.

"He doesn't look like a good power hitter to me," the Expos' Martinez said. "I asked about him and they told me he likes to hit the ball the other way. So after I went 0-2, I tried to bust him in to see how he'd react, and he reacted well. But I left it in the middle of the plate, he was ready and he took me deep."

"It's not embarrassing. It's great for him to come out that way in his first game in the big leagues. Anybody who comes to the big leagues, it's for a good reason."

Pros miss International's quirks

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. — After five years of format changes at the International, most pros are ready to return to Square One.

"If you asked all the players, I'm sure most of them — if they're honest — would say they want to go back to the format we had the first year," Davis Love III said.

And Love, who won the fifth International under a fifth format on Sunday, is one of them.

"This is great," he said of the latest version, "but the old way was better."

Whether a return to the original version of a five-day, four-round, cut-the-field-every-day tournament will occur remains in question.

"I'd like to get locked in on something and not have to be changing things every year," said Jack Vickers, president of the Castle Pines Golf Club, where the event is held.

"We're keeping an open mind on all possibilities," including a shift to stroke play rather than the modified Stableford scoring system used since the tournament's inception.

Scrapping the Stableford, with its point totals instead of strokes, appears unlikely.

"We want to be a unique tournament," Vickers said.

Some players find the point-scoring system and the elimination process confusing and annoying.

"I just tee it up, play 18 holes and then ask my caddy if I get to play again tomorrow. That's about the extent of my understanding of it," Bruce Lietzke, who has played in all five Internationals and reached the final field four times, said.

Others take a different view.

"I like this better," U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin said of the 1990 format that provided for a carry-over of point totals for the first three days. "We're getting closer and closer and closer to stroke play."

And that's just what bothers the proponents of a return to the first-year format.

"This tournament is atypical," said Richard Zokol. "It's different. If it's going to be different, make it different. I think it was more exciting, more dramatic, more fun the way it used to be, when we had a cut and a playoff every day. I'll tell you this. I'd see the other guys not in a playoff going out on the golf course just to watch. And you won't see that in any other tournament."

North meets South in Carolina tourney

By Paul Nowell
The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — North Carolina's Dean Smith was joined by three of college basketball's top coaches Monday to preview the Tournament of Champions that begins Nov. 30 at the Charlotte Coliseum.

The event pits Smith's Tar Heels against South Carolina — the first time the schools have played since North Carolina beat the Gamecocks in the East Regionals of the NCAA Tournament in 1972.

South Carolina left the Atlantic Coast Conference in 1971, the same year that the Gamecocks won their only ACC title in a dramatic last-second victory over the Tar Heels.

North Carolina was leading 51-50 when a jump ball was called with six seconds remaining. Tom Owens scored to give South Carolina the victory.

The second opening-round game matches Houston and Iowa State.

The tournament, now in its third year, features a top Atlantic Coast Conference team against three national powers. North Carolina won in 1988 with victories over Arizona and Missouri.

Last year it was N.C. State's turn to host the tourney. Then-coach Jim Valvano's team defeated Ohio State and Pittsburgh to continue the ACC's dominance of the home-grown affair.

North Carolina will have three returning starters — forwards Rick Fox and Pete Chilcutt and guard King Rice — from last year's team that finished 21-10 and advanced to the NCAA's Final 16.

"We won't be as good as a year ago, which wasn't so good," said Smith. "We have a lot of highly recruited underclassmen, but they won't replace a Kevin Madden or Scott Williams."

The newcomers are led by 7-foot center Eric Montross of Indianapolis.

South Carolina is coming off a 14-14 year, but returns with all five starters.

Although the teams haven't met in nearly two decades, they have played 73 times, with the Tar Heels winning 53.

"The reason we're here is I thought this was going to be the best team I ever coached at Iowa State."

Johnny Orr
Iowa State basketball coach

Houston, which had a 25-8 record last year, is led by fifth-year coach Pat Foster. Three starters — forward Craig Upchurch and guards Byron Smith and Derrick Daniels — are among seven returning players.

Iowa State will come to Charlotte with a veteran team led by center Victor Alexander and forward Doug Collins. But coach Johnny Orr said the tournament is one of several for his squad in the early weeks of the upcoming season.

"The reason we're here is I thought this was going to be the best team I ever coached at Iowa State," he said.

"We've played Houston two years in a row, so to come down here and draw him (Foster) is tough," he said. "I'd rather play someone else."

Houston won the last time the teams met, a 83-82 victory at home.

MESSAGE BOARD DESPERATELY missing Buffy (baby Bear) and Batman/ Michelle. Since you are both busy looking for new Bat kiddies to play your Bat games with I am all alone at Bat Central, Gotham is so very lonely without you both. Since Buffalo Bill is extinct I must find other diversions. Bat travel is not much fun alone (although Batman/ Michelle if I could borrow your BatBMW I might make due). I do hope that you get tired of your old/new Bat friends and come back to the Bat Cave soon. Until then, same Batmessage board, same Batmessage time.

Moeller, out of Bo's shadow, sets sights on Big Ten title

By Harry Atkins
The Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Gary Moeller feels like he's seeing Michigan for the first time. Perhaps he is.

Over the last 22 years, Moeller has been looking over Bo Schembechler's shoulder. Now, the Wolverines' fortunes rest squarely on Moeller's shoulders.

Moeller, a member of Schembechler's first staff in 1969, was named to replace Schembechler in January after the coach resigned to become president of the Detroit Tigers.

"You get home at night and you get excited just thinking about it," Moeller said. "You start getting fired up because it dawns on you: That's your team. When you drive by the stadium, you look at it a little differently."

He knows following a legend won't be easy. Moeller saw what happened to new coaches at places like Southern Cal, Ohio State and Alabama.

"Sure, I'm nervous. But nervousness can be a positive emotion," Moeller said. "I'm looking forward to the challenge. I'm as anxious as everybody else to see what this team is going to be like."

About as anxious as everybody is to find out what Moeller is like. He knows the comparisons with Schembechler will be inevitable.

"A lot of people think I'm softer, probably," Moeller said. "I guess I'm slower to boil. But when I get mad, I stay mad."

"No matter what happens, this is going to be a clean and honest program, in the interest of the kids. But the pressure is there to win."

The Wolverines are aiming for a third consecutive Big Ten title. They have 19 starters back from last year's 10-2 team.

The defense has nine returning starters, led by All-American safety Tripp Welborne and linebacker Erick Anderson.

The offense has an outstanding line, led by Dean Dingman and Greg Skrepenak. The line averages 290 pounds with Skrepenak the biggest at 322 and Matt Elliott the lightest at 269.

While fullback Jarrod Bunch returns, running backs Leroy Hoard and Tony Boles, receivers Greg McMurtry and Chris Calloway, tight end Derrick Walker and quarterback Michael Taylor are gone.

The replacement pool is far from empty.

Elvis Grbac started four games while Taylor was injured last year. Michigan won all four. There are two talented receivers, Derrick Alexander and Desmond Howard, plus a stable of runners led by John Vaughn and Allen Jefferson.

"I think the defense is going to have to carry us for awhile," Moeller said. "On offense, we'll throw more deep passes. We've got to throw more bombs."

Wait a minute!
Forward pass? Bombs? At Michigan?

"Everybody's going to make it out that I disagreed with Bo's philosophy about throwing the ball," Moeller said. "That's not true. We're going to try to fit our style to our personnel. No matter who the new coach was, he was going to have to change a little bit."

"Elvis Grbac obviously is not going to run the same type of offense that Michael Taylor did."

Somebody wondered if the 101,701 fans who fill Michigan Stadium each Saturday would grant Moeller a grace period.

"I don't know. Notre Dame there and UCLA here is a tough way to start," he said. "I'd like to win both of those games. But I want to see progress, too."

Schembechler's record was 234-65-8. He was 194-48-5 at Michigan and guided the Wolverines to 13 Big Ten championships. Nineteen times in his 21 seasons at Ann Arbor, the Wolverines were in the Top 20 of the final Associated Press poll.

Seminole leaves for Blue Jays

The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — Chris Weinke of St. Paul, considered one of the nation's best high school football and baseball players, signed with the Toronto Blue Jays on Monday, 11 days after beginning football practice at Florida State.

Weinke, who turned 18 on July 31, received a $375,000 signing bonus from the Blue Jays, according to his agent, Ron Simon of Minneapolis.

"It was tough giving up football, but in the long run baseball is my sport," Weinke said. "I loved it (Florida State). It was a great place to be. But after I started talking to the Blue Jays, their organization is so first-class that I knew if I got into that organization it was going to work out."

A first baseman at St. Paul's Cretin-Derham Hall High School, the 6-foot-4, 210-pounder will join the Blue Jays as a non-roster player in Boston on Thursday, team vice president Pat Gillick said. As a non-roster player, Weinke can travel with the team but is not eligible to play.

Weinke, a quarterback, worked out in two-a-day practices for the Seminoles for 10 days. He left the Tallahassee campus Monday morning.

"They knew coming down that I had baseball in the back of my mind," Weinke said of the Florida State football coaches. "They weren't as shocked as I thought they'd be. Obviously they were disappointed, but they were happy for me."
