U.S. Embassy personnel cross Iraqi border

By George Gedda
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fifty-two of 55 dependents of U.S. Embassy personnel from Kuwait crossed from Iraq into Turkey late Sunday, but three young males were detained by Iraqi border authorities, the State Department said.

A spokeswoman for the Kuwait task force at State Department headquarters said, "The convoy of Kuwait embassy dependents crossed the border from Iraq into Turkey about 2 a.m. Iraqi time (5 p.m. CDT.). Fifty-two of the group of 55 who earlier had permission to cross were allowed to leave."

"Three young men in the group, male dependents of Kuwait embassy diplomats, were not allowed by Iraqi officials to transit the border and are in the company of an American Embassy Baghdad escort officer.

"The 52 were met by a party from the American Embassy in Ankara. They will rest tonight in Turkey, and plans are being made for their en route journey home."

The spokeswoman, who declined to allow her name to be used, said she had no information on the ages of the three males held back, nor on what would happen to them.

She likewise had no details on the whereabouts of the 52 allowed to cross other than that they were in safe hands and were moved some distance away from the border in buses to spend the rest of the night.

The announcement from the State Department came a few hours after an ABC News report that a bus carrying the Americans had been turned back at the border, leaving U.S. officials waiting in Turkey uncertain for a time as to what was happening.

Meanwhile, national security adviser Brent Scowcroft said Sunday that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, faced with increasing global opposition to his conquest of Kuwait, is now intent on seeking a way out of the "box" he is in.

Scowcroft and a variety of other experts interviewed Sunday all indicated there was room for hope that the 24-day-old Persian Gulf crisis could be resolved short of military conflict.

"I can see a peaceful way out of it," Scowcroft said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley" program. "Saddam Hussein must now see he's facing overwhelming world opinion."

"He is casting about for a way out of the box in which he finds himself," Scowcroft said.

The pressure on Saddam appeared to increase dramatically Saturday when the U.N. Security Council gave the United States and other nations the right to use military power in enforcing the economic embargo against Iraq.

Scowcroft said Saddam has shown himself in the past to be a realist, citing his willingness two weeks ago to bow to Iran's terms for a settlement of their eight-year war. Among other concessions, Saddam agreed to recognize the prewar boundary of the two countries.

Meanwhile, State Department press officer Anita Stockman said Sunday the U.S. Embassy in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait has been informed that two additional Americans have been taken into custody by Iraqi troops.

She said the information was relayed to the embassy by telephone.

Sufferers get paid to sneeze

Amy Davoux
The Daily Iowan

An August day in the park is hardly the sort of activity to inspire fear and anxiety, but for 108 onlookers at City Park this weekend, it was cruel and unusual punishment.

All ragweed sufferers, these participants came sniffing and sneezing to spend two days in the park as a part of a ragweed allergy study testing the new drug Nedocromil.

Wary participants arrived early Saturday morning to check possible allergic reactions to the irksome weed, and those who tested positive were given Nedocromil nose spray or a placebo, according to Dr. Thomas Casale, associate professor in the UI Department of Medicine.

"We had to be here at 6:30 in the morning, and then they tested us to see if we were sneezing enough to be in the survey," said Matt Lilleg, 13, of Iowa City. "If our symptoms weren't high enough we could get bumped."

But Casale said only 16 prospective participants had to be turned away due to lack of symptoms.

Casale added he was surprised at the study's high turnout, given the early morning storms in the Iowa City area Saturday.

Terry Reardon, a representative of Fisons Pharmaceuticals, who sponsored the event, didn't expect more than a handful of people to attend. "It was pouring rain. I thought there'd be 10 people," he said.

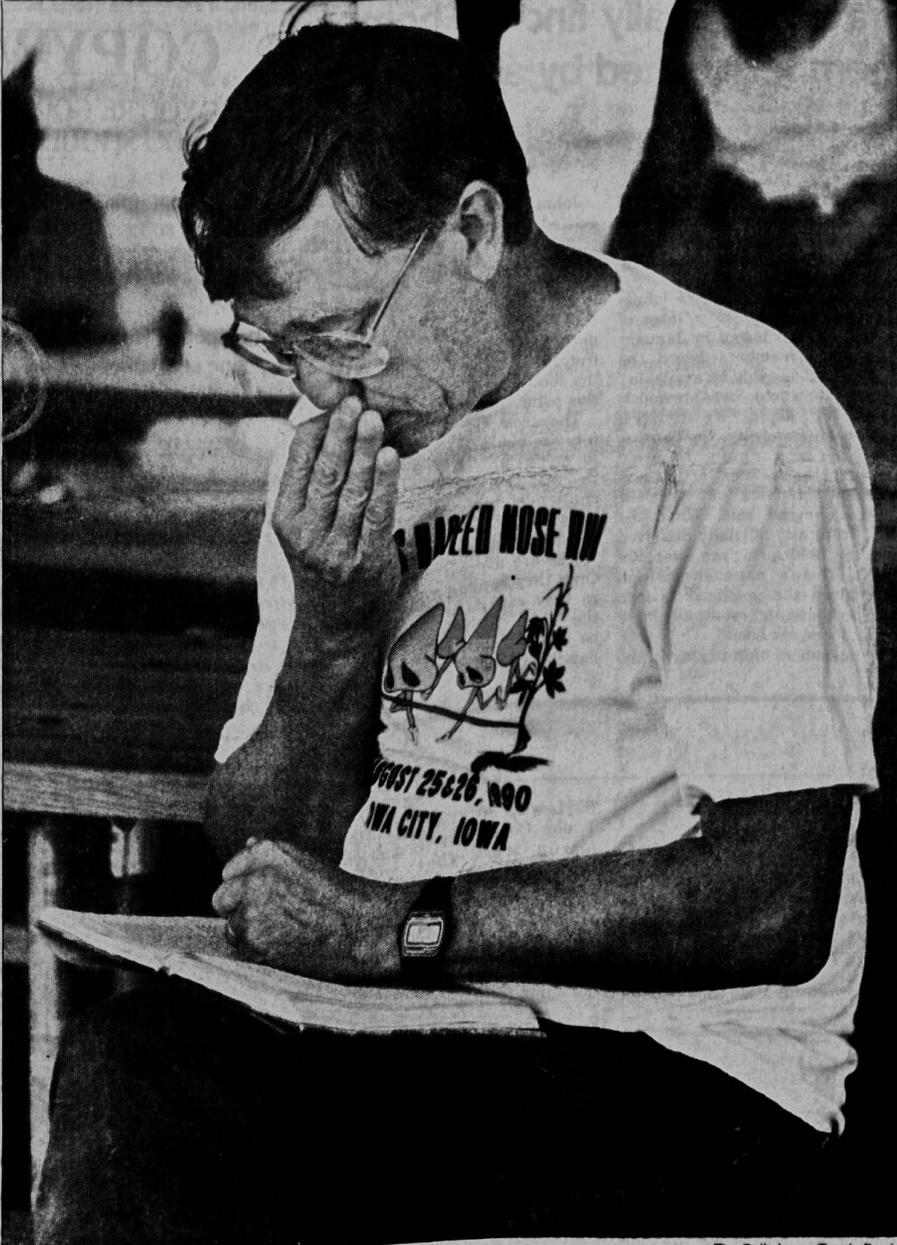

Besides slowing the early hours of the study, the rain also put a damper on weekend pollen counts, making them significantly lower than in past weeks, Casale said.

However, he added, the symptoms were obviously present in the subjects' incessant sneezing and runny, stuffy or itchy noses.

Aileen See of Solon, Iowa, proved Casale's point, saying her symptoms seemed to be acting up more than usual on Saturday, with congestion, sneezing and a runny nose causing some discomfort.

"When ragweed season starts at the end of August and runs until the end of September, I take my medication and if it gets really bad I head for the air conditioning," she said.

But not everyone agreed.

Iowa City resident Lou Becker reads a book while participating in a ragweed allergy study Saturday morning at City Park. More than 100 allergy victims participated in the two-day test.

"Of course, you begin to wonder if the lack of symptoms is a function of the drug or your own mind" reacting to the drug, said Bob Durr, a UI graduate student.

After completing evaluations, participants continued normal activities, from sunbathing to tossing around the free frisbees provided by Fisons.

Fisons also distributed free "Fisons Ragweed Nose Run" T-shirts, food and drinks, and monetary compensation for the participants.

According to Casale, Nedocromil has already undergone several tests proving its effectiveness. This weekend's study was designed to test the drug's curative speed and to watch for any side effects.

This weekend's study ran both Saturday and Sunday from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m., with participants taking hourly symptom evaluations until they went to bed both evenings.

"The study is two long days, but it provides a lot of information," Casale said.

Reserves from Iowa called to active duty

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — An Army Reserve unit from Pocahontas has been ordered to active duty and will be leaving this week for Wilmington, N.C.

In addition, two Army Reserve units from Council Bluffs were placed on alert for possible mobilization.

The 4249th Port Security Detachment, the first reserve unit in the state to be called up since the Persian Gulf crisis began, has 67 soldiers who act as military police and specialize in port security.

Retired 1st Sgt. Lee Lakin, the unit administrator, said the group was holding its normal monthly training in Pocahontas over the weekend and would be activated on Monday. He said the group would be shipped out on Wednesday, but Lt. Col. James Yonts, a spokesman for the 4th Army at Fort Sheridan, Ill., said the Pocahontas unit might leave as early as Monday.

Another Army spokesman, Lt. Col. Larry Byers, said the Pocahontas soldiers would likely remain on guard duty at the port area in Wilmington rather than going to Saudi Arabia.

"But all units are capable of being forward deployed," he said.

The unit was notified of the order about 10 p.m. Friday by the 88th U.S. Army Reserve Command at Fort Snelling, Minn., said Lt. Col. Richard Smith, public affairs. See Reserves, Page 8A

Iraqi foreign minister, U.N. leader to meet

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar will meet Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz this week to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis, U.N. and Iraqi officials said Sunday.

The meeting will be the United Nations' first formal attempt to mediate the international dispute.

The secretary-general will meet with Aziz on Thursday in the Jordanian capital, Amman, "in order to engage in a full exchange of views on the crisis," said U.N. spokeswoman Nadia Younes.

She said she could not say whether any other leaders would attend the meeting. "We're not ruling anything out," she said.

The crisis was set off by Iraq's invasion and annexation of Kuwait, acts that have been condemned by the United Nations in a series of resolutions. The latest came Saturday with support for military enforcement of the U.N. embargo against Iraq.

U.S. and other warships have assembled in the Persian Gulf region since the crisis began. American planes and thousands of troops have been rushed to Saudi Arabia, which borders Kuwait.

Aziz said in Baghdad on Sunday that he planned to meet with Perez de Cuellar this week, but he did not elaborate. He declined to say whether Iraq was prepared to compromise on Kuwait's status, but he said his country would listen to any proposal.

"We are open to listen to suggestions," Aziz said in an interview with CNN. "We have not closed the door to any idea. But this question is complicated by the American threat to Iraq."

Aziz called the United Nations "a pawn" of the United States and said other countries voted for U.N. resolutions against Iraq because they "were under severe pressure from the United States."

Kuwait's U.N. ambassador, Mohammad Abulhasan, said he did not foresee a breakthrough in the planned meeting. In an interview, the envoy said Perez de Cuellar was only to gather information.

"I don't expect him to negotiate with Iraq," Abulhasan said.

On Saturday, Perez de Cuellar said in Bogota, Colombia, that he

Chiefs blame feud on whites

By Greg Myre
The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Rival chiefs blamed the white-led government Sunday for the black factional fighting around Johannesburg that has claimed more than 500 lives in the past two weeks.

Most of the fighting has involved Zulus loyal to the conservative Inkatha movement against Xhosas and other blacks who support the African National Congress.

A delegation of Zulu and Xhosa chiefs toured troubled townships Sunday and pleaded for an end to the fighting.

The delegation, which included seven Xhosa and six Zulu delegates, said it did not represent any political party. But the chiefs all belong to the Congress of Traditional Leaders of South Africa, a group with close ties to the ANC.

The chiefs said the violence was "not a Zulu-Xhosa conflict, but has its roots in the system of apartheid."

President F.W. de Klerk and police have repeatedly denied allegations of police bias. De Klerk has said individual policemen may have acted improperly, but the force as a whole has followed orders to be impartial.

Asked to cite examples of police favoritism, Monkonyana said police did not disarm Inkatha supporters or use tear gas against them, but routinely took such actions against Inkatha's rivals.

However, journalists and other observers have witnessed police firing tear gas at Inkatha backers and disarming them at migrant workers hostels, the flashpoints for much of the violence.

Debate emphasizes differing views

CEDAR RAPIDS — Gubernatorial rivals Don Avenson and Terry Branstad highlighted their differences on abortion rights and offered starkly differing views of their record and the direction the state is headed in their opening campaign debate.

Branstad attacked Avenson's "radical views" on abortion rights while Avenson charged "it's Terry Branstad that's waffling."

In their opening debate of the gubernatorial campaign, the two fought over a broad range of issues in a lively exchange before newspaper editors.

Avenson charged Branstad with giving mere lip service to key environmental issues, while Branstad countered that all of the new legislation on the books bears his signature.

Democrat Avenson underscored

his pro-choice position on abortion rights.

"Don Avenson believes that politicians should stay out of the most important decision a woman can make," said Avenson. "We need a governor who is strong enough to stand up for the women of Iowa."

Republican Branstad, who has long held anti-abortion views, discounted the issue, saying "I'm a consensus-builder" and suggesting he would push for no change in state law.

Computer Talk

Wanna buy a computer? Give it some thought first

Do you need a computer? The computer industry thinks so. They want you to spend your hard-earned money on their gadgetry. In a typical ad, Apple claims that its Macintosh computer "gives you the competitive advantage you need in the classroom."

But will spending $2000-$4000 give you an edge over your classmate? Are your grades to suffer because you'd rather spend your money on pizza and beer?

Dan Ryan

mates? Are your grades to suffer because you'd rather spend your money on pizza and beer?

Not necessarily. Few would argue the fact that computers aid in writing papers, crunching numbers and producing presentations. But do you need to buy one?

Dozens of buildings on campus have rooms full of computers designated for student use. Most are free. Several clusters require payment for lab fees, printer costs or computer time — none of which will come close to the cost of a computer. So why pay for a computer when you can use one free?

The question comes down to convenience versus cost.

There are several advantages to owning a computer. First of all, you need never worry about finding an open computer at one of the many "instructional technology centers" scattered around campus. Almost nothing is worse than having a paper due and being unable to find a computer handy to type it in.

Unfortunately, the availability of computers is hard to predict. But it's a safe bet that if your paper is due tomorrow, so is everyone else's. Even if you find a computer, you will undoubtedly be forced to contend with inane background chatter. People at UI computer clusters are seldom quiet.

A person on your left may be cursing at a program he's been trying to fix. To your right, someone is muttering about how her margins just won't print out right. Next to her is a friend asking her to forget about it and go out drinking.

Computers are tough enough to use without having to block other people out. With your own computer, you have a better chance of getting peace and quiet.

Of course, you might have roommates who are chowderheads, in which case the labs are a great place to be. One advantage of owning your computer is the option of playing video games. (They're discouraged at the computer centers.) While this can be fun, there are a few thoughts to consider:

First, you're in college, so why are you playing video games in the first place? You should be studying!

Why pay for a computer when you can use one free?

Second, if you live in a residence hall, you may suddenly find yourself with a throng of neighbors wandering in to see if they can "just play a game or two."

Finally, if all you want to do is play games, buy a Nintendo and save yourself a couple grand. Besides, Nintendo games are usually better anyway. Of course, a Nintendo will be a harder sell to your parents than a computer.

You might want to buy a computer just to become more of an expert. When you own one, you're apt to spend more time with it, learning new instructions and commands.

Computer classes offered by Weeg Computer Center are an alternative to this method. While helpful, they don't take the place of trial and error and hands-on experience. Unfortunately, computer centers are ill-suited to this method of learning. They're noisy, crowded and uncomfortable. You want to go there, finish your assignment, and get out.

But owning a computer doesn't guarantee you'll be an expert overnight. You'll still have to spend time and energy learning how the thing works. If you don't, your computer will only collect dust. Your decision to buy, then, rests on two primary questions. First, will the convenience of having a computer in your residence hall room/apartment be worth the investment of $2000-$4000?

Second, will you take advantage of this convenience? Will you be more apt to use it and understand it better? Or will you be too lazy, busy or intimidated by it that you rarely use it?

Young woman dies in car accident days after marrying U.S. soldier

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — An Iowa woman died in a car accident in California less than a week after marrying her fiancé bound for the Persian Gulf.

"For his sake we must be ready to face death every day," Tanya Mortensen-Irlmeier, 19, wrote in her Bible this week of her husband of less than a week, Seaman Steve Irlmeier, 22.

Family members said he was preparing to ship out to the Persian Gulf when she died early Thursday outside of Irvine, Calif. The car she was driving drifted to the center lane and hit a car stopped to clean up the debris of another car accident the day before, and she died upon impact.

Her mother, Nadine Mortensen of Audubon, said the couple married last week after Irlmeier learned he would be shipped out on the U.S.S. Missouri. Mortensen said her son-in-law is having problems dealing with his wife's death because he was the one going into a dangerous mission.

Fraternity finally finds a home; members elated by acquisition

By David Ketterling
The Daily Iowan

After more than a year of hard work and determination in search of a home, the members of Phi Kappa Theta fraternity have obtained a new house at 339 N. Riverside Drive in Iowa City.

Fraternity president Mike Johnsrud called the process a "labor of love." The saga began in January 1990 when members heard the house would possibly be available.

Since the structure was previously owned by Alpha Epsilon Pi, another UI fraternity, the housing committee was careful to avoid "stepping on any toes" or pushing existing occupants out of their home, Johnsrud said. When the other fraternity officially dissolved after the 1990 spring semester, Phi Kappa Theta's national advisers were given the go-ahead to look into the house and eventually lease it on a four-year basis.

The members plan to stay in the house as long as possible but are currently building up enough equity to build a house of their own.

Johnsrud noted the fraternity has existed to date without a physical structure.

"It would be really interesting to see how some other fraternities would survive without a house," he said. "Physical structure plays a major role in the success of a fraternity, so we're very proud of the success we've experienced up to this point."

The accomplishments of the fraternity are noteworthy, but according to greek adviser Mary Peterson, the members face their toughest challenge living in their new house.

"As a chapter," Peterson said, "these are a great bunch of men. Once they become financially solid so they can do improvements on the house, their biggest task will be dealing with each other on a day-to-day basis."

Hindu god celebrated at festival

By Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Lamps burned and the smell of incense filled the air as about 200 followers of the Hindu faith gathered at the International Center Friday evening to celebrate the festival of "Ganesh Chaturthi."

Although Hindus also hold the ceremony at home, this year marked the first time the annual festival was celebrated publicly at the UI, said Murali Krishna, organizer of the event and secretary of the Indian Student Association.

Friday was the beginning of the nine-day puja, or worship ceremony in honor of the Hindu god Ganesh, the elephant-headed lord of learning and remover of obstacles, Krishna said. Ganesh is one of the several Hindu gods.

At the ceremony, believers burned incense, sang praises, prayed to remove "obstacles" and presented offerings of leaves, flowers, fruits and rice cakes to the idol, Krishna explained.

Participants in the ceremony worshipped Ganesh using 16 different names.

"Each name has its own significance," explained participant Prasad Peri.

As the remover of obstacles, Ganesh is the god Hindus must worship before starting any kind of work — even in the morning before they begin the day, Krishna said.

The festival is considered to be an important one for Hindus.

"For kids, it's a good time to start the (Hindu) learning," Krishna added.

The Daily Iowan/David Greedy

UI graduate student Chandana Baxi takes part in an annual celebration for Ganesh Chaturthi, the god of learning in the Hindu faith, Friday night at the International Center. This year marks the first time that the festival has been publicly held in Iowa City.

During the traditional nine-day run of the puja, worship is held in both the morning and evening, and there is also entertainment in the evenings.

On the ninth day there is a parade to a nearby body of water, where the clay idol of Ganesh is immersed in the water and dissolved. Other offerings are also then placed in the water.

"The idol is sacred, and we don't want anyone to walk over it," explained Krishna. "It mixes with the soil itself ultimately, and returns to where it came."

Officials hope worst of NE Iowa flooding is over

By Roger Munns
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Swollen rivers that forced evacuations and closed dozens of roads in northeast Iowa were gradually receding Sunday, but officials said the cleanup would take weeks.

"We hope we've had the worst of it," said Independence Fire Chief Charles Conklin.

The National Weather Service said the Wapsipinicon crested at 20.28 feet early Sunday morning, more than 8 feet above its 12-foot flood stage, and had dropped marginally by midday.

Late-night vigil registers voters

By Tonya Feit
The Daily Iowan

Stumbling bar-hoppers, midnight joggers and other assorted creatures of the night may not seem like the likeliest candidates for voter registration, but they were the prey of the University Democrats' 24-hour hunt for potential voters this weekend in Iowa City.

Several University Democrats stalked the streets Friday armed with a donkey suit and registration cards, and by 10 a.m. Saturday they had registered about 900 citizens to vote.

"Our goal was to register 500, and we exceeded that," said Laura Retzler, a University Democrat. "The Pentacrest has been very successful. We were out Wednesday and Thursday and registered a lot of people then, too."

The "24 on the 24th" program began at 10 a.m. on Friday on the Pentacrest. Throughout the day, University Democrats asked passers-by to register to vote for the party of their choice before the fall elections.

"People need representation in government," said Jacqui Long, registration field organizer for the Johnson County Democrats. "The governor's race is very important to the UI and its students."

Although the majority of the voters registered in the drive were Democrats, independents and Republicans were registered as well.

While most of the drive was conducted from the sidewalks of the Pentacrest, organizers expanded their drive throughout the downtown area as sunlight and Pentacrest traffic faded.

"So many people pass by the Pentacrest in between classes," said Retzler. "But then we walked around about 2:30 a.m. when the bars were closing and got a lot that way. We even got a few joggers about 5 a.m. too."

The 24-hour vigil fulfilled part of the group's goal of registering 10,000 voters by October 27, but the group plans to hold several more registration drives before the elections in November.

The Daily Iowan/Michael Williams

His better half? UI graduate student Jack Nettleton ditches his shoes and relishes a breath of fresh air after over an hour in the back half of a donkey costume Friday afternoon on the Pentacrest. Nettleton joined the University Democrats during their voter registration drive, which they hope will register 10,000 students by the election.

Initial Branstad-Avenson debate does not produce clear winner

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS—The best piece of news for Republican Gov. Terry Branstad in his opening debate with Democrat Don Avenson was the number of voters who didn't see it.

It's not that Branstad gave a poor performance, because he didn't. He handled some issues, including the also. His attack on Avenson as a big spender was a predictable appeal to the governor's political base in the conservative wing of his party.

His description of Avenson as divisive raised eyebrows among those who thought elections were all about candidates offering differing views of the issues from which voters can pick.

Throughout the debate, Branstad gave the strong impression of a candidate simply going through the motions. Rather than giving the impression of a strong and confident governor, Branstad appeared for all the world like a candidate befuddled by all the attention folks are giving to this election stuff.

His approach allowed Avenson to score points with what was simply an average performance. For his part, Avenson was clearly struggling with the delicate balance of how to attack Branstad while still coming across as kind of a nice and folksy person.

As the debate wore on, Avenson's confidence clearly grew, and he relaxed visibly, making his task easier. Television, after all, is a cool medium at its most effective when performer is bonding with audience and a relaxed performer does that best.

On theatrics, Avenson got the best of the day, while the two probably tied on the issues.

Avenson scored solid points on environmental questions, pointing out that virtually all of the new initiatives to protect air and water were forced on the governor by the Legislature.

But for his part, Branstad had a breathtaking performance on abortion. Handlers have long been advising anti-abortion candidates like Branstad that their best tactic is to do everything short of a complete flip-flop to muddy the waters.

Branstad filled that bill. Asked about abortion, he first allowed how his children reminded him of the sanctity of life, then immediately boasted of how he had sought no restrictions on abortions and made it clear that no new restriction was fine with him.

Wrapping up his response, Branstad declared he wasn't precisely certain what his position was but declared he had an "open mind" and, in effect, would do whatever his pollsters said.

That is precisely the kind of all-things-to-all-people approach that handlers have been telling anti-abortion politicians to follow, and it makes an enormous amount of political sense by appealing to the great middle of the political spectrum equally uncomfortable with abortion and government interference in a woman's decision.

Republican Senate candidate Tom Tauke should videotape Branstad's performance and play it every night before he goes to sleep.

Purity of position is marvelous in philosophy and baseball. Politics is about expediency.

Overall, since Branstad is a two-term incumbent his performance can objectively be viewed as a loss. But he hedged his bets.

Television debates are all about television. It's true that the initial debate was broadcast live in populous eastern Iowa, but it came on a sultry Saturday afternoon with heavy competition from baseball games and golf tournaments.

While it was rebroadcast statewide on public television Saturday night, it's a fairly safe bet that the demographics of the undecided voter bloc don't match up well with those of the viewing audience of public television on a Saturday night.

To steal a phrase from the 1988 presidential campaign, Bubba don't watch no public TV.

The experience of Branstad's campaign staff clearly showed in negotiations over the debate. His best option is simply not to debate. The second best is to debate when it isn't on television.

Some of Avenson's best moments were uniquely television moments, small gestures that appeal to viewers but are impossible to translate into words.

Similarly, Branstad's worst moments were embarrassing pauses while he searched for words or seemed distracted.

Avenson is going to be heavily outspent by Branstad in this campaign, with most of the money going for television commercials. Avenson's best hope is to get maximum advantage out of each time he has free exposure.

Campaign debates are precious moments of free exposure, and Avenson didn't get the maximum push off the initial clash.

Given that, he may have lost the first debate before it ever began.

Analysis

volatile abortion question, deftly and hit the themes his handlers had clearly laid out in advance.

But for a two-term incumbent governor, Branstad was oddly defensive and his punches lacked snap. He delivered all the right lines but with little of the relish he's brought to earlier campaign debates.

Those themes that Branstad decided to highlight were puzzling

Redwood trees discussed at benefit

Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Will Pacific redwood forests soon be in a class with the dinosaurs — things of the past?

This was the question posed Friday evening at a benefit for Earth First! car bomb victim Judy Bari, a redwood conservationist, at the Unitarian Universalist Society, 10 S. Gilbert St.

Bari has garnered the praise of many environmentalists for her efforts, as well as the condemnation of others who saw her as a violent agitator.

Though the evening was billed as a benefit for Bari, most of the discussion centered around the trees she fought to preserve.

Earth First! activists are touring the United States to gather support for "Redwood Summer," a campaign of civil disobedience and protests, which is planned to stretch into the summer of 1991.

Their presentation included "Where the '90s Begin," a 20-minute video on the struggle for the redwoods, which told the story of the Oakland, Ca., car bombing that killed Earth First! activists Darryl Cherney and Judy Bari.

In the past, Earth First! has been linked to an activity known as "tree spiking," which entails driving large metal spikes into the trees causing the wood to split — making it worthless to lumber companies.

Loggers are put in great danger by the activity, which can cause electrocution when the spiked trees are run through cutting machines.

Earth First! members claim no responsibility for the loggers, saying they notify the timber companies beforehand.

"The timber companies don't give a damn about the workers; they care about the bucks," said Hal Rowe, an Iowa representative for Earth First!.

Rowe claims the companies show false compassion for the workers.

"The companies are manipulative," he said. "They use the safety of the workers for argument's sake."

In recent months, Earth First! has decided to forgo tree spiking and to commit only acts of non-violent civil disobedience.

One of the speakers at the benefit was distressed that some perceived the environmental group as condoning violence.

"It should not be referred to as violence unless you're doing it irresponsibly," the speaker said. "Earth First!-ers are always responsible."

She went on to say the group encourages people not to spike trees unless they "know what they are doing."

Newly freed captive tells of hostages

By Edith M. Cederer
The Associated Press

DUBLIN, Ireland — Freed hostage Brian Keenan, who flew home to Ireland Saturday, said he saw American hostages Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland during his four-year captivity in Lebanon and that both had been well.

"It's an understatement to say I'm delighted to be home," he said, his voice breaking as he read a statement in Dublin. "It's where the heart is, you know."

Keenan, 39, looking pale but otherwise physically fit, earlier had an emotional reunion with his two sisters in the Syrian capital, Damascus, almost 24 hours after he was freed by his captors in Beirut.

In his comments in Damascus he did not say when he had seen the two Americans. He described Anderson as being comforted by a picture of his daughter, Sulome, and said Sutherland entertained his fellow hostages with jokes and stories.

He said he had seen British hostage John McCarthy only two days ago but did not mention any other hostages.

His hair cut short and his beard neatly trimmed, Keenan struggled to hold back tears as he sat between his sisters, Elaine Spence and Brenda Gillham. He read the statement to reporters in Dublin but took no questions.

Keenan said he had spent "a long 4 1/2 years (in captivity) and it sometimes seemed like 4 1/2 lifetimes."

"On my way here I thought of what I was going to do," he told reporters. "And finally I said to myself, I would eat all the food in the world, drink all the drink in the world and make love to all the women in the world, and then maybe I'll get a good night's sleep."

Keenan said he was overwhelmed by his homecoming, "but another part of me goes back to those men who are left behind."

"They're somewhere out there; somewhere in here," he said, pointing toward his heart.

"As you see he still has his wit and his humor. His character is still very strong. He is the same Brian that left us 4 1/2 years ago," said Spence.

Asked why her brother's voice was so weak, Spence said he spoke in a whisper because he communicated that way with the other hostages and hasn't gotten used to raising his voice yet.

Keenan's sisters arrived in Syria with Irish Foreign Minister Gerry Collins and a doctor and a nurse. They all flew back to Ireland three hours after Keenan was formally turned over to Collins at the Syrian Foreign Ministry.

OPEC nears oil increase vote

By Sally Jacobsen
The Associated Press

VIENNA, Austria — OPEC appeared close Sunday to calling an emergency meeting to approve an increase in oil production because of the Persian Gulf crisis.

A vote of seven nations is needed to call an emergency meeting, and the Venezuelan oil minister, Celestino Armas, said six countries already supported the measure.

Armas, in Vienna for informal talks with other OPEC nations, said the oil market is suffering from "an important disruption, and we have to do something about that."

Since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2, prompting a U.N. oil embargo on both nations, crude prices have risen from about $20 a barrel to more than $30, threatening the global economy.

Ministers from 11 of the 13 member nations from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries were in Vienna, site of the cartel's headquarters, for the talks.

Those supporting an emergency meeting were Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, Kuwait, Qatar, Ecuador and the United Arab Emirates, Armas said.

Saudi Arabia and Venezuela tried last week to call an emergency meeting on increasing production but were rebuffed. Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, the United Arab Emirates and a few others have the ability to pump more crude oil.

Some nations, like Iran, have argued that there is enough oil in storage to make up for any shortages caused by the gulf crisis.

Only Iraq and Libya were not represented at Sunday's gathering, OPEC sources said on condition of anonymity.

Saudi Arabia has said it intends to increase production by up to 2 million barrels a day — with or without OPEC's blessing — to make up some of the loss of crude caused by the Persian Gulf crisis.

But clearly Saudi Arabia, the world's largest crude exporter, would like the cartel's approval to exceed its OPEC supply quota of 5.4 million barrels a day.

Analysts estimate some 4 million barrels of crude a day have been pulled off the markets because of the international embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil. They said four other OPEC nations — the United Arab Emirates, Venezuela, Nigeria and Libya — also have the ability to pump extra oil.

Venezuela's Armas said his country will boost output to fill its stocks because of the possibility that the oil crunch will continue for some time.

What Are The Long Term Effects Of Instant Gratification?

Ironically human nature is often the greatest deterrent to making an intelligent decision.

But who can blame us? We're only human. And living for today has its rewards. Except in the area of jewelry. Where a certain discipline, understanding and patience can be quite rewarding.

Take Aesop's famous hare and tortoise for instance. As you recall, it was the impatient hare who looked so promising at first. Yet, it was the dogged determination and single-mindedness of the tortoise that triumphed in the end. One can easily make the same observation about jewelry.

At first glance, it may appear to be quite attractive. But will it be as attractive when you wear it in the years to come?

Such a question can muddle the mind and haunt one during peaceful moments. Perhaps we can provide a word or two of optimism.

You see, with nearly eighty-five years of experience behind us, we know a little something about jewelry.

And we'll be the first to tell you there are no shortcuts. Only pitfalls to avoid. To succeed, it takes hard work, diligence, and the kind of wisdom that can come from years of experience.

So if you are thinking about buying jewelry, we suggest you resist the temptation to do anything instantly.

You may find the long term effects most gratifying.

Coal mine blast traps workers

By Slobodan Lekic
The Associated Press

DOBRNJA, Yugoslavia — An explosion of methane gas or coal dust on Sunday trapped 169 coal miners underground, and an official said there was little chance any survived.

Only one man, who was working near the surface, was pulled alive from the Dobrnja-Jug pit of the Kreka mine, said Vidan Krsnanovic, technical director of the rescue operation.

If the trapped miners died, it would be the worst mining disaster in Yugoslav history.

"The rescue work is proceeding very slowly," Krsnanovic told reporters. "Corridors in the mine have caved in, there are high concentrations of toxic gases and it is very hot inside."

He said about 90 rescuers, breathing equipment strapped to their backs, were searching for survivors. But he said it was virtually impossible any of the trapped miners survived.

"There is no need to talk about such a possibility," he said.

Krsnanovic did not give a figure for the number of bodies found. An earlier report by the official Tanjug news agency said two people were found alive and eight bodies were recovered.

The Tanjug report had said 170 miners were in the mine when the blast occurred about 1:30 a.m. Sunday.

There was no immediate indication how far underground the miners were trapped. The blast occurred at a depth of about 1,500 feet.

Tangled ruins of the conveyor belt that carried coal from the shaft were scattered around the mine mouth. Huge pieces of a concrete archway that formed the mine entrance were being pulled away by cranes.

The force of the blast ripped out steel supports and ventilation equipment, Tanjug reported.

Kreka mine, one of the oldest in Yugoslavia, was the site of a weeklong strike for higher pay that ended Friday.

Socialist headquarters set ablaze in Bulgaria

The Associated Press

SOFIA, Bulgaria — Anti-Communist protesters set fire Sunday to the headquarters of the governing Socialist Party, throwing torches through windows and scattering documents in the street.

Police sealed off roads into the capital and announced a national alert.

President Zhelyu Zhelev said the country was in danger of "drifting... into a military dictatorship." He cut short his holiday in the Black Sea city of Varna to deliver a nationally broadcast radio appeal for law and order.

Several firemen and bystanders near the burned building were apparently injured by falling debris, said a doctor on the scene. One demonstrator said police were clubbing protesters inside the building.

The eight-story granite building from the 1950s, the largest in the capital of Sofia, was formerly the headquarters of the Communist Party, which changed its name to the Socialist Party after reformers ousted hard-line Communist leader Todor Zhivkov in November.

As firefighters fought to control the blaze, the commander of the national police announced that the main roads into Sofia had been closed to all but those on official business. Bulgarian media carried a statement issued by the unidentified commander announcing that police across the nation had been placed on alert "so that no similar incidents happen in other regions." The statement did not elaborate.

By 3 a.m. Monday, five hours after the blaze began, the fire had been nearly extinguished by firefighters.

The crowd outside the building, which swelled to as many as 10,000 people at one point, had shrunk to about 1,000 by early Monday. About 700-800 police armed with clubs observed them but made no move to disperse the crowd.

On Sunday evening, several thousand demonstrators had gathered outside the party headquarters to demand the removal of Communist symbols from the building.

More than a dozen young people broke away from the main body of demonstrators, shattering windows on the ground floor.

As the crowd of demonstrators shouted "Down with the Communists," the smaller group threw burning torches into rooms, witnesses said.

They also destroyed furniture and hurled papers onto the street outside, remaining for hours in those sections of the building untouched by the flames.

officer for the reserve command.

The Pocahontas group was the only unit in the 88th Army Reserve Command to be called so far. The 88th includes some 12,000 soldiers in Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, Wisconsin and the upper peninsula of Michigan. Other commands also have units in Iowa.

"The entire unit will be called up," said Smith. He said the unit's authorized strength is 67 soldiers, including at least one woman.

Lakin said the unit is one of three that specializes in port security. The others are in New York and California. It includes only about five residents of Pocahontas, he said, with most of the others living within 40 or 50 miles of that town.

"I think the enthusiasm at the present time is high," he said. "I think most of them are proud that they are going to go and do what they are trained to do."

He said it is the first time in the unit's 30-year history that it has been activated.

"It's sort of like joining the volunteer fire department. Sooner or later, there's going to be a fire."

Lakin, who retired three years ago, said he will not accompany the troops and will instead give moral support to families in Iowa.

"We will do everything we can do to support the families that are left behind," he said.

Debate

"I think this should not be a referendum on abortion," countered Branstad. "I don't want to tear this state apart on an emotional issue."

"(Avenson) is the one whose views are out of touch, radical views," said Branstad. "There's a lot more to being governor than abortion."

"It's Terry Branstad that's waffling, it's Terry Branstad that's moving on this question right now," said Avenson.

During their clash, neither candidate made a major gaffe, but they offered a strikingly different view of the state.

Branstad, completing his second four-year term in office, insisted that he should be given credit for turning the state's economy around after a decade of recession. Avenson, Speaker of the House since 1982, said the state has shrunk and gotten poorer during Branstad's term as governor.

Saddam's statement came in Baghdad, where he was asked by reporters traveling with Austrian President Kurt Waldheim whether he would agree to meet with the U.N. secretary-general in Iraq.

"Of course," Saddam replied, "The U.N. secretary-general is always welcome."

The news agency said Saddam was Saddam's news conference came at the end of a one-day visit by Waldheim, who flew out of Baghdad with about 100 Austrian nationals who had been stranded in the country.

Perez de Cuellar made his offer hours after the U.N. Security Council authorized the use of military force to enforce the trade embargo against Iraq to punish Saddam for his Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

That Grammar Guy

By Jake Giers
The Daily Iowan

Gentle Communicators, As another fall semester of academia commences at the UI, I want to call to your attention a gross error made frequently during the summer in reference to the darkening of one's body with the aid of the sun. The use of the colloquial lay out not only reeks of a manifest lack of education, it greatly jars the senses of those in the literate minority.

The use of the verbs lay and lie is relatively simple. As I have stated before in this column, it is best to remember this apothegm: Lay is to place and lie is to recline. Or to be more technical, lay is transitive and takes an object while lie is intransitive and does not.

The past tense of lay is laid, as is the past participle (the conjugation used with an auxiliary verb). The past tense of lie is lay and the past participle is lain.

Are you confused? Allow me to illustrate with some sample sentences:

Where did I lay the most recent copy of Obnoxious Grammarians Weekly? I thought I laid it on the coffee table next to the bust of Dolly Parton. I know I have laid it there many times in the past.

Cleva, my audibly flatulent dachshund, and Xanthippe, my delicate kitten, like to lie in front of the television and watch their videotape of "Domesticated Animal Aerobics." Yesterday they lay there through three showings of it. They have lain there placidly viewing it every day for the last three months.

It is not yet too late to correct your tanning vocabularies; the season is still with us. Remember: One does not lay out. One lies in the sun. Until next time, happy communicating.

Latest 'Exorcist' sequel more modest

By Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

I'll watch the original "Exorcist" just about anytime it comes on TV; it's one of my favorite movies because in spite of the premise's essential cheesiness, the film's style is remarkably self-confident. The scenes of demonic possession are horribly straightforward, undorned by either spooky music or weird camera angles; when Linda Blair's bloody, grinning head creaks around 360 degrees, the film seems to be saying, proudly: Look close, folks — it doesn't get any worse than this. Like all great scare movies, "The Exorcist" is an event, and it knows it.

"The Exorcist III," the latest sequel directed by "Exorcist" author William Peter Blatty, is more modest in approach — it doesn't focus on one apocalyptic possession, but rather a series of mysterious murders gradually shown to have a connection to the crime since its method (removal of fingers, carving of astrological symbols onto the body) resembles that of a certain "Gemini Killer," who supposedly died years ago in the electric chair. Soon after, two priests, one of whom is Kinderman's close friend, suffer similar fates, and the detective becomes obsessed with finding out the truth.

Kinderman's investigations lead him to a local hospital, where one of the murders has taken place. He comes into contact with an unnamed patient in the "disturbed wing" — a Patient X, who, it turns out, bears a striking resemblance to Father Karras, the priest who had supposedly died 15 years earlier during the original exorcism.

At this point, the murder mystery is compelling enough without bringing in any occult mumbo-jumbo, but, well, it's "The Exorcist III," so what are you going to do? Kinderman eventually discovers a supernatural link among Karras, the spirit of the Gemini Killer and, apparently, Satan (who pretty much stays in the background throughout — there aren't any pea soup scenes in this movie). The explanation of how Karras' body was possessed is boringly clinical — it's the only real slow spot in the film.

The hospital is the perfect setting for Blatty's scare tactics, filled with lots of Gothic architecture, endless darkened hallways and inexplicable flickering lights. One of the best scenes, a drawn-out sequence involving a nurse alone in a hallway, is a creepy triumph that ranks with some of the classic horror scenes in movie history.

The film's climax is a somewhat annoying mixture of blood and supernatural portentousness, but it's satisfying nevertheless — giving the impression that a cycle has been completed.

One of the more interesting aspects of "The Exorcist III" is that it's occasionally very funny — and intentionally so. In case you've forgotten, the original "Exorcist" was almost completely humorless, taking itself so seriously that it was like a visual dirge. But in this movie there are several hilarious bits of dialogue — in particular, the wisecracking between Kinderman and his friend Father Dyer (Ed Flanders). An early scene, in which Kinderman confides in Dyer about his visiting mother-in-law and her obsession with a fish that she insists on keeping alive in his bathtub, is a riot. (Keep an eye out also for a bizarre, split-second cameo in a restaurant by ex-Surgeon General C. Everett Koop.)

"The Exorcist III," then, is an impressively directed and performed horror movie that does exactly what it should — specifically, to make people in the audience scream and avert their eyes. (The laughter is a sort of bonus.) While it's kind of obnoxious for Blatty to place his name so prominently in the credits (the film's full name is "William Peter Blatty's The Exorcist III"), his pride is, more or less, justified.

'Arts blackout' flouts censors

By Diane Bartz
The Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Symphony Orchestra players tuned, then laid down their instruments before a note had been played. Stage lights blinked off during a performance of Shakespeare. Unemployed ballet dancers lighted candles in a vigil.

All around the Berkshire hills, at precisely 8:30 p.m. Saturday night, about 30 groups taking part in the traditional summer festival stopped dead for three minutes to protest reduced government funding and censorship of the arts, said "arts blackout" organizer Frank Bessel.

"The primary consideration is to recognize culture as a priority, even as an election issue. More and more people are not getting (a moral education) or they're getting it from television sitcoms," said

Bessel, artistic director of the Berkshire Public Theatre in Pittsfield, in western Massachusetts.

The protest also was aimed at the National Endowment for the Arts, which has cut the funding of some controversial artists.

At Tanglewood, a retreat for The Boston Symphony Orchestra, Managing Director Kenneth Haas stopped the musicians shortly after they tuned their instruments, said BSO spokeswoman Kim Smedvig.

The symphony, the most popular cultural attraction in the Berkshires, has spent each summer since 1937 at the former country estate in Lenox, about 130 miles west of Boston.

events of the first film. (I've never seen "Exorcist II: The Heretic" — and neither, I suspect, have you — but that's OK, since the new movie's plot is simply a continuation of the original.) What's surprising is that "The Exorcist III" works quite well, providing plenty of stylishly frightening moments. While Blatty caters to horror movie conventions, he does so with skill and imagination.

George C. Scott, in a nicely spry performance, plays Georgetown Police Lt. Kinderman, who as the film begins is investigating the murder of a young boy. Kinderman is particularly disturbed by the

ENERGY CONSERVATION

Executive privilege?

With President Bush's announcement last week that he will be calling up reserves for the gulf crisis until October, it is obvious that he is committing the U.S. for the long haul. And with fuel prices rising quickly due to the situation in the Persian Gulf, things could soon get bad enough that the U.S. will find itself in another energy crunch. In very little time, a fuel shortage could alter everyone's lifestyle. Everyone's that is, but the president's.

Soon Bush will come on television and ask the American people to conserve energy in this time of crisis. But unlike Jimmy Carter — who donned a sweater to make his announcement during the mid-'70s crisis — Bush will be issuing his request out the side of his mouth while on one of his plane trips to his summer home or from a cart on the golf course.

Being on the other side of the Oval Office door shouldn't exclude Bush from cutting back on those unnecessary things that will make life a little easier for all Americans.

How seriously can a plea to conserve energy be taken when it is issued from a chief executive who makes needless plane trips almost daily during the height of the crisis? And the plea will carry even less clout when Bush puts into action his new Air Force One — a plane that is packed with even more luxuries than its predecessor and is even less fuel-efficient.

It will be interesting to see where Bush cuts back on fuel consumption. Will he spend less time on his boat that gets two miles to the gallon? Or will the man who runs five miles a day give his golf cart a rest and walk around the links? Either way Bush will make a sterling example to the American people.

Giving up luxuries during a fuel shortage is the duty of every American. No, it's not in the Constitution; it's one of those unwritten laws, much like the one that allows President Bush to send troops to the Persian Gulf without the consent of Congress. Nonetheless, it is an obvious duty that most Americans are happy to oblige. Being on the other side of the Oval Office door shouldn't exclude Bush from cutting back on those unnecessary things that will make life a little easier for all Americans.

President Bush had a great opportunity to set an example for the American people by skipping his vacation and being very vocal about it. Instead, he chose to go ahead with the vacation and continue burning fuel, be it by land, air or sea. Executive privilege? No. Just the leader of a country more concerned about his own lifestyle and aspirations than those of his people. Sounds like a certain someone in the Middle East.

ETHANOL FUELS

The current crisis in the Persian Gulf and subsequent gasoline price hikes have left Americans searching for ways to reduce dependence on foreign oil. By using ethanol blended fuel, Americans can lower oil imports and provide positive side effects to both the economy and the environment.

In 1989, the use of ethanol reduced oil imports by 30 million barrels per year while capturing only 8 percent of the total gasoline market. By increasing ethanol use to even 50 percent of the market, the United States could lower oil imports by over 180 million barrels per year, thus significantly reducing the chances of being held hostage to the interests of oil-producing nations.

Ethanol provides positive environmental impacts as well. According to the Iowa Corn Promotion Board, ethanol use lowers carbon monoxide emissions in most cars by more than 25 percent. Lowering carbon monoxide emissions decreases ozone depletion according to an Environmental Protection Agency study. Further, ethanol blended fuels release up to 49 percent less carbon dioxide than straight gasoline. This translates to a reduced risk of global warming.

Ethanol blended gasoline also enhances engine performance. The standard 10 percent ethanol blend increases the octane rating by 3 points. Ethanol thereby increases engine power and eliminates engine knock. The myth that ethanol makes cars run poorly is easily dispelled. Ethanol fuels contain a detergent additive that cleans the fuel system. The detergent breaks loose deposits in the fuel system that were placed there by standard gasoline. After the first tank of ethanol — which admittedly may make a car run rough — most cars run better and cleaner.

Ethanol consumption also helps the Iowa farmer and the Iowa economy. Iowa is the second-largest producer of ethanol in the nation. Currently 220,000 bushels of corn are processed into ethanol every day in Iowa. The processing of ethanol co-produces corn gluten feed that is helping to revitalize Iowa's cattle industry. The blending of ethanol with all the gasoline sold in the United States would provide a market for 4 billion bushels of corn. The alcohol produced by corn is a renewable resource. Standard gasoline is a fossil fuel and is non-renewable.

In today's energy- and environment-conscious world, ethanol blended gasoline is the right choice at the pumps and should receive bipartisan support from the nation's leaders.

Stalled budget negotiations:
Who's responsible, anyway?

For the last 12 weeks, President Bush and White House negotiators have wrangled with Democratic congressional leaders over how to cut the projected 1991 budget deficit. Fault for their lack of progress has been laid on both sides by the other, while the public has blamed politicians in general. But the collapse of the talks earlier this month is clearly the result of the Democrats' repeated refusals to negotiate and the obstinate demagoguery of House Majority Leader Dick Gephardt.

The "budget summit," as it has been termed by the White House, accomplished little during even its most productive moments. It seems the only thing on which the summitters agreed is that they couldn't agree on anything. Such inaction does not bode well for the U.S. economy — or the public, for that matter. The deficit for fiscal 1991 is projected to be the largest in history — between $250 billion and $300 billion. And this outrageous sum threatens to grow due to increased economic pressures caused by the crisis in the Persian Gulf and to the skyrocketing cost of oil. Additionally, the unknown costs of the S&L bailout will undoubtedly add a significant sum to the overall debt, despite the best efforts of Bush's budget staff members to include rough estimates in their projections.

Threatened with the harsh, indiscriminate cuts of the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law, Bush convened the budget summit early in the summer in hopes that positive negotiations and cooperation among the parties would result in a combination of higher taxes and budget cuts. By law, the deficit is not to exceed $64 million in fiscal 1991. But the negotiations have achieved little, thanks to the Democrats' will for inaction.

Bush has certainly done his part to make the talks successful. After months of stalling by both sides, Bush — at the height of his popularity — reneged on his famous 1988 pledge of "no new taxes." He conceded that progress could not be made unless all options were on the table. While his popularity, especially among Republicans, was plummeting, Bush maintained that good government demanded compromise. He sought a summit with Democrats to hammer out a budget that would meet Gramm-Rudman requirements.

An admission that his campaign-winning slogan was perhaps spoken in error was a dramatic step for Bush. It demonstrates that he was willing to forgo popularity and face a harsh backlash from constituents for the sake of national interests.

Conventional wisdom holds that there are two types of politicians inside the Beltway nowadays. The "good-government" reformers are the ones willing to cut deals and compromise for the sake of reform and America's interests. The "Pols," or radical partisans, are always striving to improve their image and that of their party, even in the face of national crises. Bush has shown himself to be in the "good-government" camp. Political pundits from all parts of the spectrum have agreed that Bush, unlike Reagan, is always willing to cut a deal if he thinks it is in the nation's best interest.

Most of the Democratic leaders participating in the budget summit fall into the opposing camp. It's no secret among politicians that proposals for higher taxes are immensely unpopular among the public. And the party that makes the proposal for a tax hike will take the brunt of the blame, regardless of who votes for what. Thus, the reason the Democrats are afraid to make their own proposals for budget solutions is clear: Gephardt finally sees hope for November's elections.

His plan is really quite simple. With Bush's popularity already waning and with the Republicans no longer able to spout rhetoric of "tax-and-spend liberals," the Democrats are in a position to make significant gains in Congress come November. Bush will struggle with deficit solutions and will ultimately present a plan of both higher taxes and spending cuts. Gephardt and his House minions will vote for the plan, arguing that there is no time left for a better solution, but they will criticize the Bush solution as insensitive because of cuts in social spending. Blame for higher taxes will be placed on the White House as well.

Thus, Bush will have made all the difficult choices and will take all the blame, while the Democrats will waltz through November unscathed, having "wimped out," but having gotten away with it.

For eight years the Democrats blamed the budget deficit on Ronald Reagan, despite their control of the purse. Now, when Bush is making a serious, good-faith effort to save the economy from recession, Gephardt and the Democrats refuse to cooperate and insist on continuing their partisan games. So much for good government.

Michael Lorenger
Editorial Page Editor

President George Bush's handling of the nation's budget problems — and his blaming of Congress for this year's quagmire — is downright shameful.

Last week, Bush took a break from his vacation in Kennebunkport, Maine, to scold the Democrats in Congress for stalling on the budget talks — not proposing any spending cuts or revenue increases. But his own efforts (to use the term loosely) at leadership on the budget issue have been disgusting.

The automatic argument, and the one used weakly by Congressional Democrats, is that it is the president's job to draft a budget. Period. That is a narrow-minded view but a somewhat valid claim. Anyway, Bush can claim to have done something of that sort. He did propose a budget, but even at the time it was released, I don't see how anyone could have taken it seriously.

He lied about the state of the economy through the office of his budget chief, Richard Darman. He overestimated the nation's potential for growth, underestimated the likelihood of inflation, ignored the costs of the S&L bailout and scheduled the use of Social Security surpluses in order to temporarily pad and extend his immense popularity. Perhaps he thought he would then be able to push through the capital gains tax cut. Bush and his staff claim that such a cut would help the economy grow, but they have apparently exaggerated the resulting benefits.

Bush's evasion of the budget problem is disgusting. It is amazing that taking a tough stance on the budget appeared to him to not be prudent at that juncture. Of course, now Bush has what he wants — an enemy outside of the U.S. borders — in Saddam Hussein. But it was ignorant of him to not recognize that there was a crisis in the budget (if not also the environment) long before there was one in the Persian Gulf.

It is not that Congress is innocent of budgetary incompetence. The inertia of Congressional politics moves (as it has for all of my short life) in the direction of each member of Congress trying to have as much federal money spent in his or her own district as possible. This is another disgusting systemic problem, but it seems that the responsibility to correct this trend should come from the one place where decisions don't need to be made by committee — the executive branch of the federal government — namely, the president. If the President of the United States acts as if the budget of the United States government is out of his hands, then who is supposed to do it for him? Is that job reserved for representatives from New York?

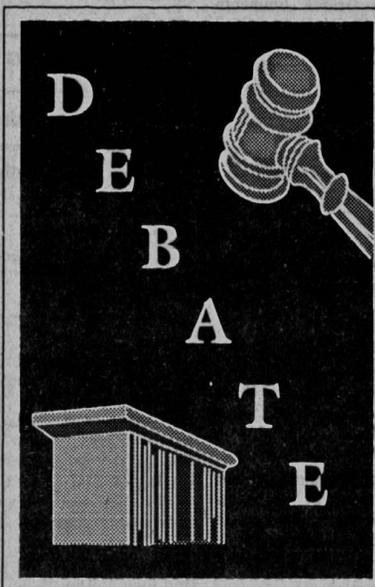

Ronald Reagan was elected president with a clear mandate to turn the Titanic that is our national deficit and debt around. Instead, he throttled full steam ahead. Nowadays we are taught in basic macroeconomics classes that it doesn't really matter how big a debt the federal government runs. As many times as I've heard it explained that we can print as many dollars as we need at any time (although that will drive down the value of the currency and destroy the world economy) and that no one, ever, will come after the treasury secretary and threaten to break his legs if the bills aren't paid, I still have to believe that the dollars used by the federal government are something like the ones I earn and use to pay for food, rent, beer and taxes.

The situation Bush is in now over the budget is emblematic of politics in a modern, information-overloaded society. It's something that the Eastern European countries will soon learn. The lesson is that when a problem is overwhelming and the system is dead wrong, politicians will rarely try to do anything about it other than posture themselves for the next election. They already have a mentor in the president of the Russian republic: Boris Yeltsin.

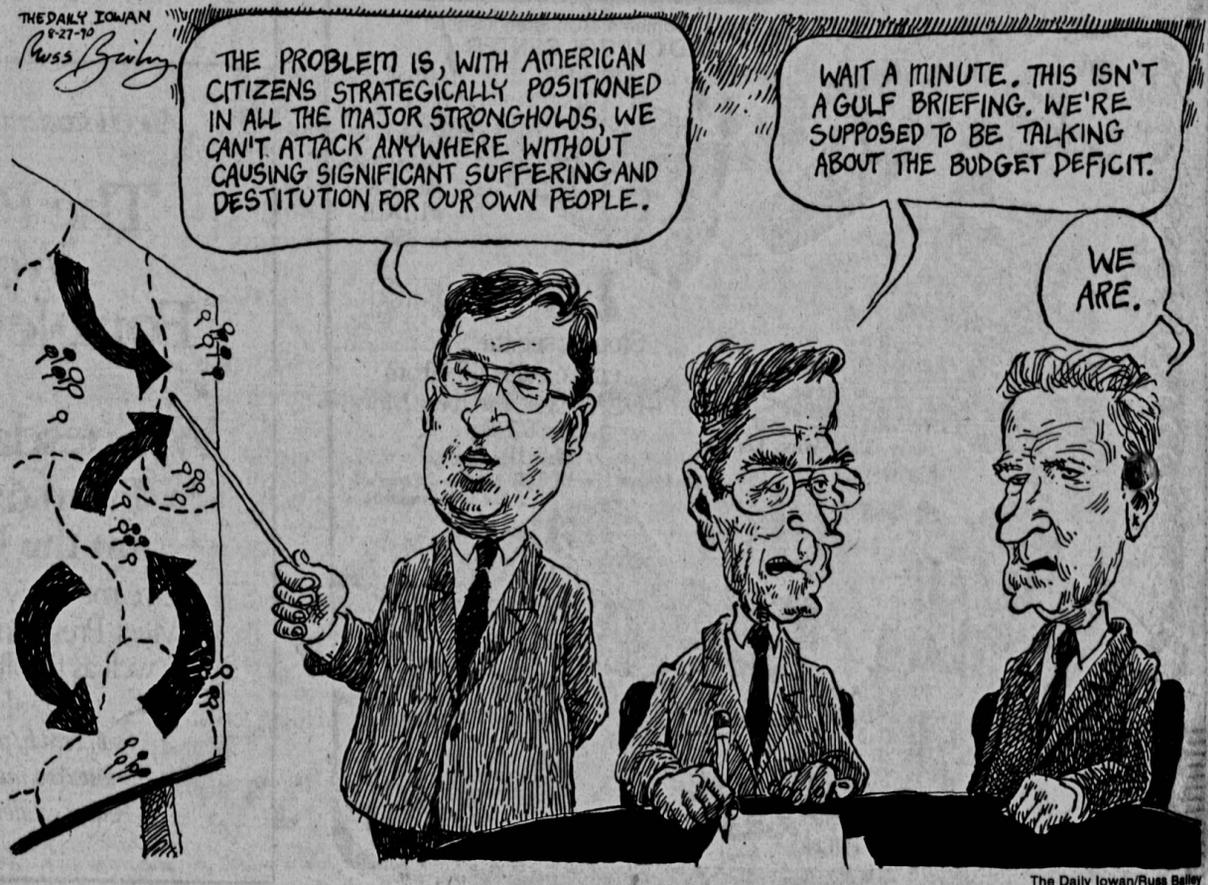

Bush has a serious problem on his hands with the budget. He didn't create it, but essentially it is his to solve — ideally with some help from Congress and the American people. But all he has done is make token gestures and then stand back and blame the Congress. Yes, he gave up his inane pledge of running the country without raising taxes. That concession consisted of regressive excise taxes that might make a difference of about 20 percent of this year's deficit. Yes, he called a budget summit with Congressional leaders. Then, in the midst of strong bipartisan support of the president's handling of the gulf crisis, he blasted them for not trying hard enough to help him balance the budget.

Yes, he has done all these things, but has George Bush really made an effort to correct the nation's budgetary problems? The answer is clearly no.

Chartered boat capsizes, 19 dead

NANTOU, Taiwan — An overloaded tourist boat carrying oil company employees on a moon-gazing cruise overturned on a lake in central Taiwan, killing 19 people and leaving at least 33 missing, police said Sunday.

In London, a spokesman for Shell Oil Co., whose subsidiary Shell Taiwan Ltd. chartered the boat, said about 80 employees were aboard. A list provided by the travel agent for the excursion showed 91 joined the trip, police said.

A Taiwan official said four Britons were among those killed in the accident on Sun Moon Lake late Saturday, the eve of the Chinese Valentine Day festival. Moon-gazing is a traditional part of the celebrations.

Police said they arrested yacht owner Hsu Ching-hsin for alleged unintentional manslaughter in the accident. The boat lacked a license to operate on the lake and was packed beyond its 60-person capacity, they said.

The vessel had been chartered for a weekend cruise for employees on the lake in Nantou, 160 miles southwest of Taipei, according to Johnathan Crossman, general manager of Shell Taiwan.

Alleged ghost scares up business

LOS ANGELES — Stories of a ghost lurking in a scene in the movie "Three Men and a Baby" are scaring up business for video stores nationwide.

Viewers are transfixed by a scene in which Ted Danson and Celeste Holm, co-starring as Danson's mother, walk by a window in a home shared by characters portrayed by Danson, Tom Selleck and Steve Guttenberg.

Partially obscured in the window is what appears to many viewers to be a young boy hiding behind a curtain.

Some viewers claim the figure is the ghost of a child who died in a home where the film was shot.

But Disney spokesman Steve Feldstein said viewers actually are looking at a cardboard cutout or standee of a man in a top hat and tails. The 1987 movie was filmed on a Toronto sound stage, not a private home, he said.

Stuck ride causes thrills, ills

FALCON HEIGHTS, Minn. — Several people on an amusement ride at the Minnesota State Fair became ill when workers were unable to stop it for at least 15 minutes.

"No one was in any danger, but they got spun for a long time," Jerry Hammer, the fair's spokesman, said after the incident Saturday. "What we wound up with was a lot of sick people."

Riders suffered dizziness and vomiting, and some were taken to a hospital in nearby St. Paul, he said.

Hammer didn't know how many people were on the ride when it malfunctioned, but estimated the attraction holds about two dozen.

The ride, called the Enterprise, is a wheel that lies flat on the ground, with cars attached to the outside of the wheel. There's an arm that raises the wheel so it can spin perpendicular to the ground. After a short time, it's supposed to slowly settle back down to the ground, but on Saturday night it failed to do that.

Quintuplets gather to swap tales

It's wearing the same clothes as four other kids born at the same time who look like you.

Davis, of Winnsboro, Texas, is literally one in a hundred. There are only 20 full sets — meaning all five children are still alive — in North America. Nine of those families gathered in Chicago's Grant Park Saturday in a promotional event for New Jersey-based Tyco Industries, Inc.

Problems arise from jail cell shortages

By Michael J. Sniffen
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — From coast to coast, the federal government is out of jail cells.

Space is so short that the 52 deputy U.S. marshals in west Texas last year drove nearly 1 million miles moving prisoners — sometimes driving all night from remote jails.

It is so short that 25-30 women awaiting trial for federal crimes in New York City are held 550 miles away in Alderson, W.Va.

And public defenders in Seattle drive 30 to 90 miles daily to see clients, sometimes taking all day to visit a jail on a Puget Sound island.

"There's a national jail crisis," said Howard Safir, operations chief of the U.S. Marshals Service for the past 12 years. "There's just no room at the inn."

Every day, armed deputy marshals ferry their hazardous cargo through America's towns and countrysides. The routes change often — to prevent escapes and because yesterday's vacant jail is now full.

Those involved say all this driving risks lives, wastes money and conflicts with the defendant's right to a fair trial.

If someone attacks one of the marshals' caged vans to break out a prisoner, "we've got a shotgun," said Chief Deputy Bob Christman of Seattle. "So if it goes down, there's going to be somebody dead."

Moving prisoners between jails and courts costs the Marshals Service $27.5 million a year. Assistant Director Joseph Enders said a major portion of that could be saved — as much as 70 percent in some districts — if there were enough cells close to courthouses.

Using far-flung jails "causes serious problems in communicating with our clients, tremendous expense and inefficiency," said Richard Richman, a federal public defender in Boston.

Some federal officials say this crunch could have been avoided. They see it as the predictable outcome of a decade of law and order legislation and as spending that added more than 4,500 lawmen and prosecutors but gave short shrift to jails, a less glamorous but crucial component of criminal justice.

As a result:
■ Marshals in Boston hold most of their prisoners in Connecticut and want to rent a condominium in Danbury to save hotel expenses for deputies. Defendants in Rhode Island, New Jersey, New Mexico and Oregon also are held in other states.

■ Prisoners awaiting trial in Kansas, Washington and west Texas are scattered in as many as 10 jails in each state. Marshals in Miami use 11 south Florida jails.

■ In Oregon, marshals spend more than half their time hauling prisoners. Marshals everywhere complain that the driving drains manpower from their other duties: hunting federal fugitives, serving court orders, guarding courthouses and protecting threatened witnesses and judges.

At the federal level, jails hold people awaiting trial; convicts go to prison. For years the federal government did not have its own jails because most federal defendants got out on bail before trial.

New KGB mission: Protect perestroika

By Alan Cooperman
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — A top KGB official Sunday disclosed the espionage arrests of some high-ranking Soviet officials in recent years and paid grudging tribute to the CIA as a crafty and determined adversary.

In the interview in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, the KGB official, Victor Grushko, also said the duty of the once-feared secret police is to protect perestroika, Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of political and economic reform.

Interviews with top KGB officials were once extremely rare, but they have been appearing in print and even on television recently as part of a campaign to revamp the spy agency's image.

These days the KGB emphasizes its role in fighting corruption and foreign intelligence agencies. It has been playing down its history of terrorizing Soviet dissidents, tapping telephones and carrying out the late dictator Josef Stalin's purges.

Grushko said that since 1985, the KGB had arrested more than 30 "extremely dangerous" spies. Virtually all were tried and shot, he said.

Those arrested included Maj. Gen. Polyakov, a former top officer in the counterintelligence department of the Soviet General Staff, he said. Polyakov, whose first name was not given, would have been one of the highest-ranking Soviet spies in history.

The KGB official boasted that the Soviet spy agency has stopped more than 120 attempts to relay secrets to Western intelligence services in the past five years.

Other than Polyakov, other alleged spies identified by Grushko were A.G. Tolkachev, an engineer in the Radio Industry Ministry; a KGB agent identified only as Vorontsov; and a scientific worker at the Institute of the U.S.A. and Canada identified only as Potashov.

Hawks want national respect

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

This season, it will take a little more to please coach Ruth Nelson's Iowa volleyball team.

Last year, Nelson's squad received Iowa's first ever bid to the NCAA volleyball tournament. But the Hawkeyes lost a three-game match to Big Ten champion Ohio State, 15-9, 15-6, 15-13, in the first round of the Midwest regional in Columbus, Ohio.

"In the NCAA last year, I think our team was happy with just being there," Nelson said before Iowa's gold and black scrimmage Saturday night. "It's interesting how much their goals have changed. They're expecting so much more from themselves this year."

This season, a Big Ten title and another NCAA berth are foremost on the minds of Nelson's team.

"I think the seniors want to win the Big Ten Championship this year," senior setter Janet Moylan said. "We've all been a little hesitant to say that, but we shouldn't be. We have six seniors and a great supporting cast."

"I want to win the Big Ten and get an NCAA berth," senior middle hitter Barb Willis said. "I don't think other teams around the nation take us seriously. They think we were a fluke (last year). We want to prove we weren't."

is first-team all-Big Ten selection Kari Hamel, but the six seniors return and Nelson adds eight freshmen to her roster. According to the Iowa coach, the Hawkeyes will have a more balanced this season as a result.

"We really relied on Kari Hamel and Barb Willis to put the ball down last year," Nelson said. "Now, our team will look towards three or four people for leadership, not just one player. Of course, Willis and (Jenny) Rees are going to get the majority of sets."

Willis recorded Iowa's top hitting percentage at .265 and was a first-team all-Big Ten selection a year ago. Rees led the Hawkeyes with 57 service aces and was third with 284 kills last season.

In addition to Rees and Willis, Iowa's senior class includes Moylan, an honorable mention all-Big Ten pick; defensive specialist Ginger Lorentson and outside hitters Ruth Spethman and Jennifer Thompson. Nelson said her seniors came into the season "in the best shape they've ever been."

"We've got six seniors who want to make it the ultimate year for them," the second-year Iowa coach said. "When you've got seniors and they've grown and know it's their last year, they seem to rise to the occasion."

"I've come in more focused and prepared," Willis said. "I can shut out the rest of my life. I've never been able to do that before."

Nelson will have to blend her veterans with a talented freshman class. Three of Nelson's recruits — Courtney Gillis, Christy Janssen, and Erin Weaver — are expected to

Hawkeyes relish role of underdog

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

The annual Associated Press preseason college football poll is out and it probably isn't surprising to most people that the Iowa football team isn't ranked.

After a 5-6 season in 1989, the Hawkeyes didn't receive a vote in this year's poll.

But to Iowa coach Hayden Fry, rankings don't mean very much.

"We get so hung up on numbers," Fry said. "We have to get into the schedule before we can predict anything. But we feel much better this year than we did at the same time last year."

Fry's squad will begin its season Sept. 15 with a home contest against Cincinnati. That will be followed by the annual intrastate battle with Iowa State at Kinnick Stadium.

Then the Hawkeyes begin their road schedule, traveling to Miami, Fla., to take on the defending national champion Miami Hurricanes.

Iowa's other games are: Oct. 6 at Michigan State, Oct. 13 vs. Wisconsin, Oct. 20 at Michigan, Oct. 27 vs. Northwestern, Nov. 3 at Illinois, Nov. 10 vs. Ohio State, Nov. 17 vs. Purdue and Nov. 24 at Minnesota.

Five of those opponents — Miami, Michigan, Illinois, Ohio State and Michigan State — are ranked in the poll, while Purdue also received one vote.

The Wolverines are the top Big Ten team in the poll at No. 6, while the Illini have been ranked 11th, the Buckeyes 17th and the Spartans 23rd.

Being unranked at the beginning of the season, Fry and his team are in a position which the coach enjoys — being the underdog.

"I feel like the most underrated team in the field," Fry said. "I love this position; I love being an underdog. That really jacks the guys up. But if they're not jacked up (for the season) after finishing 5-6 last year, I don't know what will do it."

Starting quarterback Matt Rodgers said he also thinks the Iowa squad will be improved this season.

"I don't think we're going to be embarrassed anymore," Rodgers said. "I think we're going to start off a lot better than we did last year. We can't get out there and lose the first game, we have to win it and that'll set the scene for the rest of the season. Right now we're just looking forward to the first game."

9 Iowa walk-ons earn football scholarships

DI wire services

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry has announced that nine former walk-ons have been awarded scholarships for the 1990-91 school year.

Those nine players are: defensive tackle Bret Bielema, defensive back Phil Bradley, center Steve Breault, tight end Alan Cross, defensive end Mike Kroemer, wide receiver Mike Martens, fullback Paul Kujawa, quarterback Erik Slowik and defensive back Jason Wilson.

"We're very happy to be able to put these fine young men on scholarship," Fry said. "They've earned it through their talent, hard work and dedication to the Iowa football program."

"We've always felt that walk-ons have an excellent chance to make it at Iowa, and this is as good an example as any of the opportunity at Iowa. Walk-ons have always been, and always will be, an important part of our program."

Beth Daniel shot 4-under-par 68 Sunday to win the Northgate LPGA Classic in Brooklyn Park, Minn., by six strokes, the third victory in the last four tournaments for the LPGA's leading money winner this season.

Daniel, who shot 66 and 69 in earlier rounds, finished at 13-under 203 for 54 holes over the 6,149-yard Edinburg USA course and won $56,250.

Penny Hammel, who shot 69 Sunday, and Chris Johnson, with a 68, tied for second at 209. Caroline Keggi, Barb Bunkowsky of Canada and Cindy Rarick were at 211.

The victory was the fifth this year and 23rd of Daniel's career. She has won nine tournaments and $824,282 since ending a four-year victory drought about 13 months ago. She has 20 top-10 finishes in her last 25 starts, and in her previous three won the Youngstown and Mazda events and finished second in the Big Apple Classic last week.

MARK JOHNSON
The Daily Iowan/Andy Haman

Iowa assistant wrestling coach Mark Johnson has been named head wrestling coach at Oregon State.

Johnson, a U.S. Olympian both as an athlete and coach, was an assistant to Hawkeye head coach Dan Gable for eight seasons.

The two-time all-American at Michigan and former AAU and USWF national champion was named NCAA Assistant Coach of the Year by Amateur Wrestling News in 1986, after the Hawkeyes won their ninth straight national team title.

"I'm pretty happy," Johnson said. "It's a hard decision, but it's one I knew I had to take eventually."

A native of Rock Island, Ill., and 1987 Illinois wrestling Hall of Fame inductee, Johnson said it will be tough to move from the Midwest.

"That's the only thing that hurts," he said. "My wife and I are both from the Quad Cities, we're both Midwesterners. But Oregon is a great place to raise a family."

"The positives outweigh the negatives."

Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable has been listed as the No. 1 college wrestling coach by the book America's Greatest Coaches.

Author Michael Koehler's book is the first ever to rank 531 of America's all-time coaches, including National League manager/pitcher John J. McGraw, Notre Dame leader Knute Rockne; and high school basketball coach Vergil Fletcher.

Miami remains No. 1 in AP preseason poll

DI wire services

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Miami, which ended the 1980s as the nation's top-ranked college football team, is starting the '90s the same way.

The Hurricanes are ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press preseason poll.

"It's nice to be recognized, but it also puts a burden on you," Miami coach Dennis Erickson said. "When you're No. 1, everybody wants to play their best against you."

The Hurricanes received 24 first-place votes from a panel of 60 sportswriters and broadcasters. Notre Dame, which finished second last season, was runner-up again with 22 first-place votes.

It is the first time Miami has been ranked No. 1 in the preseason poll, which started in 1950. The Hurricanes' highest preseason ranking was No. 3 in 1986.

Miami lost six starters from last year's defense, which allowed the fewest points and yards in the nation. But the Hurricanes return eight starters on offense.

Still, the offense barely managed to beat the defense, 9-8, in a scrimmage Saturday.

"This was a great defensive performance," Erickson said after the scrimmage. "We played defense like the Hurricanes are supposed to play. That was an unbelievable performance."

Sonny Lubik, Miami defensive coordinator, said the team is right on schedule: "We feel this unit can be the same type of defense" as last season.

Erickson said Miami can have a good team, but the schedule is stronger than it was last season.

"Last year, we won some games when we didn't play well. I don't think we'll be able to do that this year," he said.

That schedule includes a Sept. 29 game against Iowa, the third game of the season for the Hawkeyes.

Auburn was third in the preseason poll, Florida State was No. 4 and Colorado was No. 5. Auburn received three first-place votes and Florida State — which handed Miami its only defeat last season — got six.

Colorado, which held the No. 1 ranking last season before losing to Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl, received four first-place votes.

Red Sox open 4-game lead with third straight shutout

The Associated Press

TORONTO — The strategy for Greg Harris was simple Sunday. Watch what Dana Kiecker and Roger Clemens did and try to duplicate it.

Harris did even better, pitching two-hit ball for 7½ innings as the Boston Red Sox pitched their third straight shutout for the first time in 28 years, beating Toronto 1-0 and increasing their largest lead of the season in the American League East to four games.

"The way those two guys pitched I knew it was going to be hard to match them," Harris said. "But I knew from the start that I had good stuff. In the first inning I was throwing strikes and everything was feeling great."

Reds 6, Pirates 2
A hot-hitting Eric Davis made the difference for the Cincinnati Reds against Pittsburgh.

Davis and Joe Oliver hit two-run doubles and Rick Mahler won his second straight start since moving into the rotation, giving the Cincinnati Reds a 6-2 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates on Sunday.

"Davis is like Darryl Strawberry," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said. "If you run into guys like that when they've got it going, they can destroy you. (Davis) may be the most gifted player in the league."

Expos 4, Padres 2
MONTREAL — Larry Walker hit a three-run homer in the eighth as the Expos rallied.

Junior Noboa and Tim Lincecum opened the eighth with consecutive singles for Montreal, which was held to five hits over the first seven innings by Bruce Hurst (8-9).

Tim Wallach flied out and Andres Galarraga struck out before Walker hit Hurst's first pitch over the right-field fence for his 15th homer.

Braves 4, Cubs 3
ATLANTA — Greg Olson doubled home the winning run in the ninth inning and John Smoltz (11-9) pitched a six-hitter as Atlanta sent Chicago to its fourth loss in five games.

With Atlanta trailing 3-2, Ron Gant hit a leadoff home run off Bill Long, Gant's 24th home run of the season.

How to spot Iowans not wearing black and gold

Welcome freshmen and transfers. When you admit it or not, those of you NOT from this beautiful state are attending the University of Iowa because you are too stupid to get into your own state's school. Accept it. Admit it.

Now try repeating after me: "I am attending the University of Iowa because I am an inadequate student not capable of mustering up the academic excellence needed to attend (your state school)."

Feel better? Maybe I can help. The toughest transition in your future will not be learning how NOT to descend to Iowans. Instead, you must learn to UNDERSTAND them and how and why they function as they do.

The following guide might be of some assistance:

HOW TO UNDERSTAND AN IOWAN IN THE 1990s

■ SPOTTING AN IOWAN — First off, let's throw away all the stereotypes that no longer exist.

Iowans DO NOT wear overalls without shirts underneath, DO NOT chew on long strands of straw and DO NOT walk around with manure squishing between their toes. Rather, Iowans wear either Moto-cross or Maid-Rite T-shirts, don feed hats and have power crystals dangling from their necks.

For a non-Iowan, distinguishing Iowans from a crowd is not difficult, unless that Iowan has a non-Iowan as a boyfriend or girlfriend. This is so because the non-Iowan will most likely introduce the Iowan to fashion, causing what is known as an "Undercover Hick."

■ SPOTTING AN "UNDERCOVER HICK" — This becomes challenging because instead of looking for fashion blunders as tip-offs, a non-Iowan must look deeper into the Iowan, mainly their personal habits.

In order not to be fooled by the sharp-dressed student sitting next to you at football or basketball games, there are several keys to looking beyond appearance:

First, is the person drooling? This is a dead giveaway. Medical researchers believe that the majority of Iowans drool because they were raised outdoors and with livestock.

Secondly, does the person substitute BOOS with rooster calls? Once again, medical researchers believe that, stemming from their childhood, Iowans make rooster calls when upset because it reminds them of another day on the plantation.

And finally, is the person chewing tobacco? This is the strangest phenomenon according to the researchers. They believe that Iowans NEED something in their mouths at all times, and because the chewing of cow dung would be unsuitable for public display, they utilize tobacco. Hmmm.

■ ARE THEY JEALOUS OF NON-IOWANS? — If an Iowan passes the two previous tests, a non-Iowan MUST converse with the person to be absolutely certain.

While Iowans may control their fashion desires, they cannot help but show their jealousy to non-Iowans, particularly Chicagoans. The biggest clue to this would be if someone said, "Gosh, I hate Chicagoans."

Why do Iowans feel this way? I found that their bitterness lies within two theories. First, they are extremely jealous that Chicagoans have buildings with more than one floor. And second, Iowans hate the fact that Chicagoans actually buy their food as opposed to harvesting it.

Oh yeah, if you hear someone say that their idol is John Deere instead of, say, Michael Jordan, I'd be pretty confident that there is an Iowan in your midst.

You're probably wondering why I still attend the UI, since I am obviously a Chicagoan. The reason is simple: Iowans love sports — any and all — and support their teams with more loyalty and rigor than any place I've ever seen. And that, along with their friendly demeanors, is what has made my years in Iowa so enjoyable.

But I'm still not going to the rodeo.

see considerable playing time this year.

Gillis was the first California player ever to sign with the Hawkeyes, but not the last. Janssen, Weaver and Rachel Pfanner are also from California.

"They come out of top-level California club programs," Nelson said. "That's a luxury the University of Iowa has never had before. Club experience is so, so important. Last year, Iowa had the least number of club players in the Big Ten."

Meshing the newcomers with the veteran players has not been easy for the Iowa coach. Nelson said that she has had to separate her freshman during practices to teach them fundamentals.

"We have nine players from last year who are on the same level and eight freshmen on a different level," Nelson said. "We need to bring the freshmen to the level of the upperclassmen."

The Iowa coach will get an indication of how well her combination works with an early nonconference schedule that includes four teams from Volleyball Monthly's Top 20.

Evert, Connors to miss Open

By Steve Wilstein
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The U.S. Open tennis championships, besieged by New Age players wielding power rackets and power games, begins Monday without two crowd favorites — Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert — for the first time in two decades.

Connors, a five-time champion, is noticeably older and injured, officially withdrew Sunday because of a strained left calf suffered Saturday in a match against Ivan Lendl. Connors, a week shy of his 38th birthday, hadn't missed a U.S. Open since 1970.

Evert, winner of six U.S. Opens, made an emotional departure from regular singles competition here last year.

If the Open will miss Connors' and Evert's fierce competitiveness and unique styles, it will not lack for drama, as top seeds Stefan Edberg and Steffi Graf try to hold off challenges for their No. 1 rankings.

Edberg, who beat Boris Becker in the final of Wimbledon, likes his chance of winning the U.S. Open for the first time.

"I don't have any fear of it this year," said Edberg, a semifinalist in 1986 and 1987 but only a fourth-rounder the past two years. "It's full of terrible circumstances like bad weather, noisy fans, the planes, traffic. There is a lot to be frustrated about, and generally that makes it an open Open. You have to be strong to win it."

Edberg figures if he can't win it, the title might go to defending champion Becker, three-time winner Ivan Lendl or two-time semifinalist Andre Agassi.

Agassi, runner-up at the French Open, skipped Wimbledon to devote himself to practice and iron-pumping exercises for an assault on the U.S. Open, the tournament he considers the most important in the world.

Agassi, 20, is one of the New Agers building his game on power. But unless he fulfills his promise soon, he may be passed by the game's hardest young server, Goran Ivanisevic, the Yugoslavian who beat Becker in the French Open and came close to topping him in the Wimbledon semifinals. Ivanisevic also came close to beating Edberg Sunday in the final of the Hamlet Cup Challenge at Commack, N.Y., losing 7-6, 6-3.

Ivanisevic, who will be 18 on Sept. 13, lost in the second round in his first appearance here last year. But he has vastly improved and looms as a major threat.

Lendl warmed up for the Open on Sunday with a victory over Aaron Krickstein to capture the WCT Tournament of Champions. Meanwhile, Graf beat 14-year-old Jennifer Capriati in the Pathmark Classic exhibition.

John McEnroe gave some hints that he could make this Open more interesting when he exhibited some of his old quickness and impressive shot-making abilities while beating Brad Gilbert on Friday at Commack. But a loss to Edberg on Saturday exposed McEnroe's inability at 31 to put together a series of good performances after long layoffs.

The power game of young players also is evident in the women's draw, with 16-year-old Monica Seles and Capriati growing bigger and stronger by the day.

Seles said she won't wilt under the heat and pressure of playing on the stadium court, as she did last year in losing to Evert in straight sets.

"The stadium court, that's what killed me," Seles said, after winning a tuneup event Saturday by beating Arantxa Sanchez-Vacario, the 1989 French champion. "It was the first time it was full and I could see all the famous people I see in the magazines. I feel like it wasn't me out there the way I played. But I learned a lot from it."

Bo makes it four in a row with homer in first inning

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bo Jackson became the 19th player to hit home runs in four consecutive at-bats when he returned from a 5½-week layoff Sunday in the Kansas City Royals game against the Seattle Mariners.

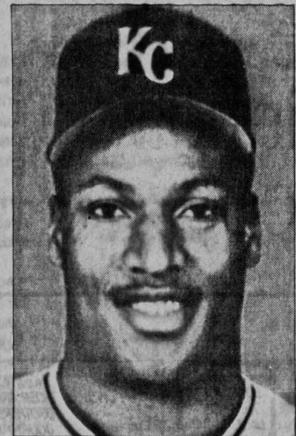

Jackson, activated after Saturday night's game, hit the first pitch he saw from Randy Johnson 435 feet over the left-centerfield wall for a two-run homer in the second inning. It was Jackson's 20th home run of the season.

The next inning, Jackson flied out to right.

Jackson had not played since July 17, when he homered his first three times up against the New York Yankees, then partially dislocated his left shoulder trying to catch Deion Sanders' sinking line drive.

In that game, Jackson hit two-run homers in the first and third innings off Andy Hawkins and hit a three-run home run off Hawkins in the fifth. Jackson hurt himself in the bottom of the fifth after the third home run, the 100th of his career.

Jackson is the first player to homer in four consecutive at-bats since Larry Herndon did it for Mike Schmidt, who also accomplished the feat, also is one of four players to homer four consecutive times in one game. The others were Robert Lowe of the Boston National League team (1894), Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees (1932) and Rocky Colavito of the Cleveland Indians (1959). Schmidt did it in 1976.

Willis, Rees get lesson in Japan

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

When Iowa senior volleyball player Barb Willis is playing or practicing, she is loud.

"Way to go!" "Let's go!" and other encouragements can be heard throughout whatever gym Willis is in.

A month ago, however, only one of Willis' teammates could understand those shouts.

A month ago, Willis had to yell "Ose ose" or "Gumbate" to get the same effect.

A month ago, Willis and Iowa senior Jenny Rees were playing in Japan.

The idea came from Willis, who as a senior, wanted to come back and have her "best season."

Last summer Willis became the first Iowa player chosen for the 1989 U.S. Olympic Festival but missed action due to a fractured hand.

This summer, the 6-foot-1 middle hitter first thought about trying out for the National "B" team or another U.S. team.

But Iowa coach Ruth Nelson suggested that playing abroad could be another option.

That's when Willis got in touch with former U.S. Olympic coach Arie Selinger, who now works with a team in Osaka, Japan, sponsored by the Daiei corporation.

"I wanted to do something with

The Daily Iowan/David Greeley

Iowa volleyball players Barb Willis, left, and Jenny Rees spent three weeks this summer training with a team in Osaka, Japan, sponsored by the Daiei corporation.

volleyball since this is my last year," Willis said. "At home in Camanche (Iowa), it's hard to train and there aren't a lot of facilities. I wanted to try to stay in shape and come back in shape."

While Selinger said Willis was welcome to train in Osaka, he encouraged her to bring someone else, someone who spoke English, with her. That's when Rees decided to go.

Both seniors spent three weeks in July with the Daiei team, and according to Willis, the learning began the moment they got to the airport... and weren't met by anyone on the team.

"When we first got to the airport, we couldn't find anyone who was supposed to meet us," Willis said. "So we just wandered around a little until finally the (team) manager came up to us and said, 'Are you volleyball players?'"

The next morning also provided a unique experience, Willis said, when she and Rees participated in a mandatory aerobics class.

"We had aerobics first thing in the morning, and Jenny and I didn't want to get up and do aerobics," Willis said. "But they started with a Bob Dylan song and ended with Christmas carols. So Jenny and I ended up laughing the whole time. They didn't know what the words meant."

Despite the humor, the Iowa players had to deal with a big obstacle — a very different language.

"That was the hardest thing," said Rees, a 5-foot-10 outside hitter. "We had dictionaries, but we didn't know how to pronounce anything. Whenever we tried, they laughed."

"But we had to learn Japanese. We had to call our sets in Japanese, and in four or five days we adjusted."

"They all spoke a little English," Willis added. "We did have an interpreter, so it wasn't too bad. But the interpreter wasn't with us all the time, like when we were at the dorm."

The three weeks involved practice from 9 a.m. to noon and afternoon sessions from 3-6:30 p.m. When the end of July rolled around, Willis and Rees said they were ready to return home.

"I was a little homesick, but it was a great opportunity, a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," Rees said. "I don't know if I'll ever have a chance to go back to Japan. I gave up a lot, but it was worth it."

Mickelson wins U.S. Amateur

By John Mossman
The Associated Press

DENVER — Long-hitting left-hander Phil Mickelson added the U.S. Amateur title to his two NCAA championships, beating Manny Zerman 5 and 4 Sunday in a grueling 36-hole final.

Mickelson, 20, of Arizona State, was five under par through the 32 holes played on Sunday. He birdied five of his last 12 holes to hold off Zerman, 20, of the University of Arizona.

Mickelson, 3-up after the morning 18, immediately dropped the first two holes of the afternoon. The players alternated winning the next four holes, but Zerman was unable to pull even.

The front nine featured some brilliant play. Mickelson, in danger of having the match fall to even after hitting over the third green, holed out a 50-yard pitch shot for birdie.

Zerman nearly aced the 168-yard sixth hole, his shot finishing six inches from the cup.

After hitting a difficult pitch shot to within inches of save par at No. 7, Zerman chipped in from 55 feet at the par-3 eighth. But Mickelson promptly sank a 25-foot putt to halve the hole.

Mickelson went 2-up with a routine par at No. 10 while Zerman drove into the rough and was short of the green with his second shot and bogeyed.

He went to 3-up on the next hole with a birdie. He was just left of the par-5 hole in two, pitched to 10 feet and made the putt. Zerman couldn't make an eight-footer to tie.

At 13, a short par-4, Mickelson wedged to six feet and sank the birdie putt to go 4-up. Zerman two-putted from 10 feet.

Mickelson closed out the match at 14 with a two-putt par while Zerman hit his approach over the green, chipped to five feet and missed the par putt.

In the morning 18, Mickelson won four straight holes, three of them with birdies, to move to a 3-up lead.

After steady play in the previous five rounds of match play, Zerman hit only nine fairways and nine greens before the lunch break. It also marked the first time he had finished over par on the front nine.

Mickelson lost the first hole, driving into a creek to the right of the green. But he holed birdie putts of eight and four feet on the next two holes, and won No. 4 with a par when Zerman was short with his approach shot, pitched to six feet and missed the putt.

Mickelson reached the 543-yard fifth hole in two and two-putted for another birdie.

Zerman won No. 7 when Mickelson three-putted, but Mickelson got back to 3-up at the turn with a 20-foot birdie putt at No. 9.

The lead alternated between 3-up and 4-up on the back side. He got to 4-up when Zerman bunkered his second shot and didn't get up and down at No. 10. Zerman won the 14th with a 15-foot birdie putt, but Mickelson won the 16th with his own 15-footer for birdie after Zerman drove into the right rough and put his second shot into the rough left of the green.

Mickelson's ill-advised second shot at the par-5 17th enabled Zerman to cut the deficit to 3-up.

Tennessee running back Chuck Webb tries to elude the tackle of Colorado linebacker Alfred Williams in the first quarter of the Disney Pigskin Classic Sunday. Tennessee and Colorado tied, 31-31.

Vols, Buffaloes battle to 31-31 tie

The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Mike Pritchard helped give No. 5 Colorado a two-touchdown lead with runs of 78 and 55 yards, but Andy Kelly's sensational passing brought No. 8 Tennessee back for a 31-31 tie in the inaugural Pigskin Classic Sunday.

A 13-yard run by Webb on a draw play and a penalty got the ball to the Colorado 41, but the game ended as Webb ran another 25 yards before being run out of bounds on the 16 as time expired.

Colorado pulled to 24-17, as Kelly completed four of six passes, including a 24-yarder to Alvin Harper for the touchdown with 8:53 left.

Colorado ended a string of seven straight losses at neutral sites dating back to 1972, including to Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 1 and in two Freedom Bowls at Anaheim Stadium.

Webb, who had seven 100-yard games as a freshman, gained 131 yards on 27 carries.

Colorado had turnovers on its first three drives and four in the first half. Hagan was intercepted on the Buffaloes' second and third drives, by Dale Carter, a junior college transfer making his first start, and Mark Fletcher.

But Tennessee had bad luck, too, as Burke had two field-goal attempts blocked, by Greg Thomas and Alfred Williams.

The Volunteers converted the middle turnover, though, when Webb scored on a 3-yard dive over the top for a 7-0 lead with 7:52 left in the quarter.

After Williams blocked Burke's 44-yard field goal try, Hagan led the Buffaloes on a 19-play, 97-yard drive that consumed 9:33. Hagan threw only once, a 19-yarder to tight end Jon Boman for first-and-goal at the Tennessee 2. Hemmingway went under the pile on fourth-and-one to tie the score 7-7.

Colorado went ahead 10-7 on Jim Harper's 35-yard field goal midway through the second quarter.

Dave McCloughan, a cornerback who also had an interception, scored on a 55-yard punt return for a 24-10 margin with 9:34 left, running up the sideline and eluding punter Joey Chapman near the end zone.

DENVER (AP) — Al Unser Jr. drove to his third straight victory Sunday, winning another strategic battle with teammate Bobby Rahal in the inaugural Denver Grand Prix.

BUFFY and CHIP: I have mixed emotions since my return to you both. Our love has obviously grown stronger, yet I feel this Batman can only handle one superhero - Wonderwoman. But don't fret because I will always keep both of you sheltered under my cape. Although Wonderwoman is my true love, the big commitment is not official. Therefore, I truly hope we can continue to love one another - physically and emotionally - until the semester ends and my new life begins. Until next time, may your Batdolls keep you company until I can warm your hearts myself. It's great to be back. Love and sloppy wet kisses, Batman/Michale

Pro Bowler, Anderson cut from Bears

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — The Chicago Bears Sunday cut four-time Pro Bowl safety Dave Duerson, along with former Iowa player Bill Anderson and 12 other players.

The cuts included three veterans, two draft choices and nine free agents, bringing the Bears' roster to 58 players.

Duerson, 29, was a third round draft choice from Notre Dame in 1983. He was chosen for the Pro Bowl after the 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988 seasons.

The Bears have faced a logjam at the safety position, with Duerson, No. 1 draft choice Mark Carrier, Shaun Gayle, Markus Paul and David Tate vying for jobs.

In addition to Duerson and Anderson, the others placed on waivers were:

- Bryan Bero, a first-year fullback from Ohio State;
- Steve Fumi, a free-agent tight end from Miami of Ohio;
- Steve Hyche, a second-year linebacker from Livingston;
- Alan Koch, a free-agent guard from Rice;
- James Lott, a free-agent cornerback from Clemson;
- Roman Matusz, a tackle drafted in the 11th round out of Pittsburgh;
- Chris Roscoe, a free-agent wide receiver from Hawaii;
- Kent Sullivan, a first-year punter from Cal Lutheran;
- Ray Tarasi, a free-agent kicker from Penn State;
- Brian Taylor, a second-year cornerback-running back from Oregon State;
- Steve Thompson, a free-agent defensive end from the University of California-Davis;
- Henry Tuten, a free-agent wide receiver from Pittsburgh.

Surprise teams go 3-0

The Associated Press

The NFL exhibition season can provide a lot of solace for perennial losers.

Unless they remember what happened to Dallas last season — 1-15 after a 3-1 preseason.

San Diego and Atlanta won Saturday night, improving to 3-0, equaling the mark of the Detroit Lions, who beat Kansas City 35-21 Friday. The only other unbeaten team is the New York Giants, but they're used to it. Not only are they usually winners during the regular season, but their preseason mark under Bill Parcells is 27-6.

The Falcons, 3-13 a year ago, have now equaled their regular-season win total of 1989.

"We know it's only the preseason but it feels good to be 3-0," said Atlanta quarterback Chris Miller, who completed 18 of 24 passes for 209 yards, including a 54-yard touchdown pass to George Thomas, in the Falcons' 17-14 victory over the Green Bay Packers. Steve Broussard, Atlanta's No. 1 draft choice, ran 71 yards for a touchdown. Green Bay is 1-2.

"We did a lot of things wrong, we made a lot of errors, but you've got to win on the road and we did that," Atlanta coach Jerry Glanville said.

The Chargers remained unbeaten with a 29-28 victory over San Francisco. The victory margin was a safety that followed a botched punt by the four-time Super Bowl champions who, just to prove the point, are 1-2.

The Giants got two touchdown passes from Phil Simms in beating the New York Jets 17-7.

In other NFL preseason action Saturday night, it was New Orleans 28, Buffalo 23; Miami 17, Denver 16; Dallas 20, Pittsburgh 9; Washington 31, Cleveland 13, and the Los Angeles Rams 27, Phoenix 7.

In Sunday action, Minnesota beat Houston 22-21 on Jim Gallery's 24-yard field goal with one second left.

Philadelphia is at Indianapolis tonight.

Atlanta not only showed good offense, they showed good defense, sacking Anthony Dilweg, Green Bay's starting quarterback, four times and getting eight sacks in all.

"We saw something that we could see a lot of this year," said Dilweg, who was 13 of 28 for 218 yards and an interception in just over a half. "They're a very aggressive team defensively and they came after us quite a bit. They were bringing everybody."

Vikings 22, Oilers 21

Gallery atoned for missing a 25-yard field goal with 5:14 left by hitting his 24-yarder that kept the Oilers winless in three games.

The Vikings (2-1) won despite generally poor quarterbacking by Rich Gannon, who was 5-for-13 in his first career start, and Wade Wilson, who was 7-for-19. Third-stringer Sean Salisbury rallied Minnesota from a 21-12 fourth-quarter deficit against mostly Houston reserves.

Gallery, who beat out Jim Breech to gain the kicking job at Cincinnati last year only to be cut a month into the season after a 2-for-6 start, is doing most of Minnesota's kicking because of Rich Karlis' holdout.

Chargers 29, 49ers 28

Billy Joe Tolliver and Mark Vlasic threw touchdown passes and Thomas Sanders scored on a 1-yard run for San Diego.

Vlasic replaced Tolliver in the third quarter and capped his first drive with a 3-yard touchdown pass to rookie Derrick Walker.

Steve Young, who relieved Joe Montana in the third period, directed a 79-yard drive in his first possession that ended in Spencer Tillman's 1-yard touchdown dive. Young also ran for a late fourth-quarter touchdown.

Washington 31, Cleveland 13

Gerald Riggs ran 72 yards for a touchdown and Earnest Byner, a former Brown, scored on a 12-yard run, both immediately after Cleveland fumbles. Riggs finished with 105 yards on eight carries.

Washington (2-1) also scored on Jeff Rutledge's 40-yard pass to Gary Clark, capping a 95-yard drive in the fourth quarter, and James Wilder's 1-yard run with 1:53 to play. Cleveland is 1-3.

Giants 17, Jets 7

Simms completed all 11 of his second-quarter passes, including touchdowns of 17 yards to Mark Ingram and 25 yards to rookie Rodney Hampton. Simms finished 13 of 16 for 165 yards.

Raul Allegre kicked a 44-yard field goal on his first attempt of the preseason for a 17-0 lead early in the third quarter. The Jets (2-1) scored on a 31-yard pass from Tony Eason to A.B. Brown in the third quarter.

Saints 28, Bills 23

John Fourcade had a 13-yard touchdown pass to Lonzell Hill and a 21-yarder to John Tice and directed a 65-yard drive capped by a 1-yard plunge by Rueben Mayes as the Saints improved to 3-1.

Buffalo (0-3) got three field goals from Scott Norwood, a 13-yard touchdown pass from Frank Reich to Rich Gicewicz in the third quarter, and a 34-yard touchdown pass from Gale Gilbert to Al Edwards with 4:25 left in the game.

Dolphins 17, Broncos 16

Marc Logan's 1-yard touchdown run with 1:54 remaining capped a 79-yard, 9-play drive directed by Scott Secules as Miami (1-2) broke a seven-game exhibition losing streak. Sammie Smith scored for Miami on a 3-yard run and Pete Stoyanovich kicked a 43-yard field goal. John Elway completed 17 of 29 passes for 151 yards and one touchdown, a 2-yarder to Paul Green, for Denver (2-2). Elway has completed 43 of 54 passes during the exhibition season.

Cowboys 20, Steelers 9

Troy Aikman and Steve Walsh threw second-half touchdown passes, rallying Dallas (1-2).

The Cowboys trailed 6-3 when Aikman flipped a 2-yard scoring pass to tight end Steve Folsom with 3:28 left in the third period.

Grace finds stroke after All-Star break

By Tom Saladino
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Mark Grace of the Chicago Cubs is back among the National League's top hitters, after a slump that lasted nearly four months.

Grace has been on a tear since the All-Star break, hitting .382 in his last 39 games, including a career-high 18-game hitting streak that ended Aug. 10.

Mark Grace

After getting two run-scoring singles Saturday night in a 6-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves, the left-handed Grace was batting .457 over his last nine games (16-for-35) and had lifted his average to .307, eighth best in the NL.

"When you're hot, you get hits like I got last night," Grace said before

Sunday's game against the Braves. "I didn't hit either one particularly hard, but they happened to fall in."

"I had struggled for four months and finally I got into a good groove. Fortunately I came around after the All-Star break."

Grace is in his third full season with the Cubs after being a 24th round draft selection in 1985. He hit .296 with seven home runs and 57 RBI as a rookie in 1988.

Last season, he hit .314 with 13 homers and 79 RBI, and blossomed in the NL playoffs against the San Francisco Giants, hitting .647 with a homer and 8 RBI in five games.

"When you're a good hitter, you'll hit," Cubs manager Don Zimmer said of Grace. "He's a good hitter, and he came out of it."

But Grace struggled for the first couple of months.

"He got off to a bad start and was swinging bad," Zimmer said. "He couldn't get a hit and was in the .260s."

"He was hitting dribblers — nothing hard — and was all screwed up. He went through a tough spell."

With the revival of Grace's bat, added to the production of Ryne Sandberg, Andre Dawson and Shawn Dunston, the Cubs, who were battling for last place in the NL East most of the season, have moved up in the standings.

After Saturday night, they were 60-65 and in fourth place, five games behind third-place Montreal.

Irvan misses checkered flag, but wins first NASCAR event

By Tom Sharp
The Associated Press

BRISTOL, Tenn. — Ernie Irvan won his first NASCAR Winston Cup race and missed the best part.

"I didn't even see the checkered flag," he said Saturday night, after winning the Busch 500 at Bristol International Raceway. "I guess I should have kept my eyes open, but I was too excited."

Irvan spent the final 90 laps watching Rusty Wallace, which didn't take much effort. Wallace was on his back bumper the whole time and finished a car length back in second place.

"Rusty could have done anything," Irvan said. "All he had to do was tap me."

"I'm sure he was thinking somewhere down the line he'd be running first and I'd be second. Racing is a give-and-take thing. If it ever comes to that, I'll race him the same way."

It was a big day for Irvan. Not only did he get his first Winston Cup victory in 79 starts, his Morgan-McClure Racing Team announced it had signed a three-year extension with sponsor Eastman Kodak. To make things sweeter, Bristol is Morgan-McClure's home track.

"We've been feeling a win coming," Irvan said. "You know there's going to be a night, but it couldn't have come at a better place."

Dale Earnhardt started on the pole and dominated the race before he and Ricky Rudd tangled on lap 410. Irvan took advantage of the break to take the lead. The brush with Rudd forced Earnhardt into the pits for tires, and the race became a duel between Irvan and Wallace.

"I didn't want to get beat by Rusty at the end," Irvan said. "I was worried about him passing me from the time he passed Mark Martin" and moved into second place.

"I made about every mistake you could make and still won the race. Rusty was behind me making a few mistakes, too. The track was like an obstacle course. It was hard to keep your traction."

Irvan earned $49,600. He averaged 91.782 mph around Bristol's .533-mile, high-banked oval track.

Martin, the Winston Cup points leader, finished third. Terry Labonte was fourth, and Sterling Marlin fifth.

Earnhardt, who led 350 of the 500 laps and was in command until tangling with Rudd, finished 17th. When Earnhardt had the lead, he could pull away from the pack. But just as important on the short track was his ability to work through traffic.

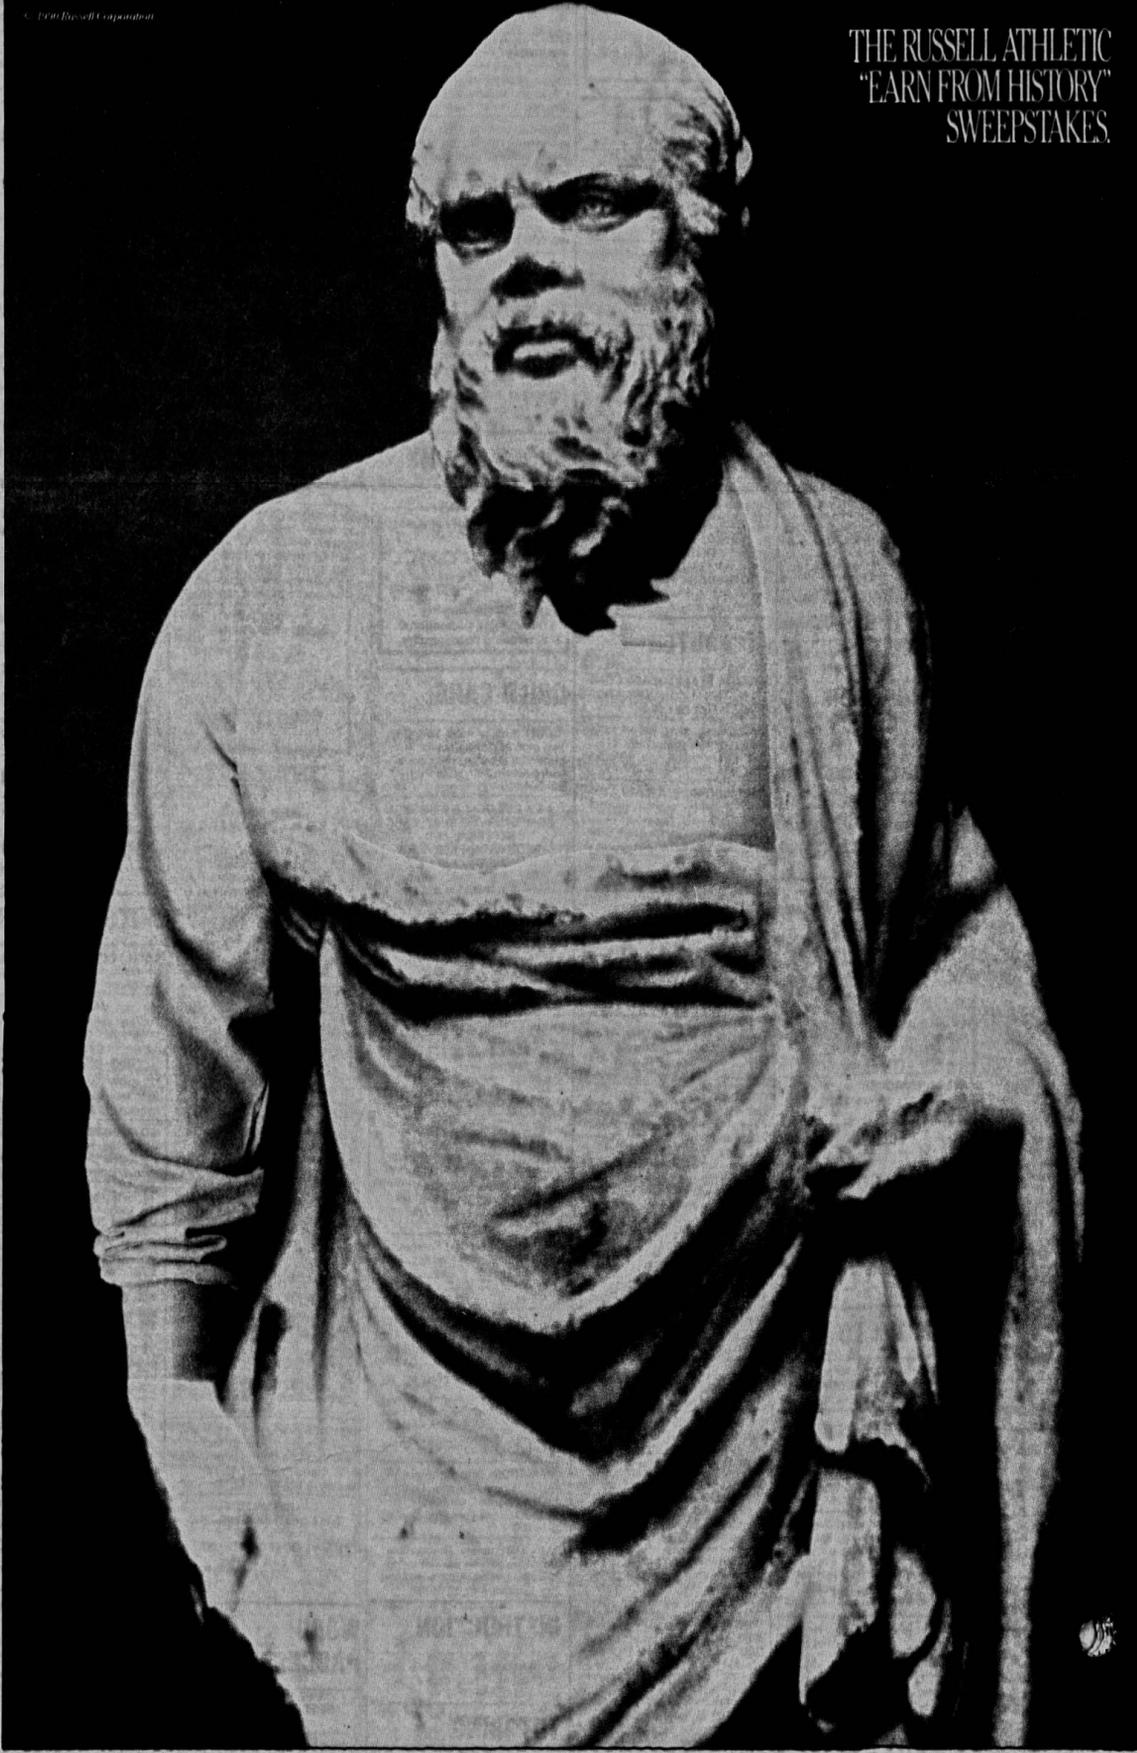

"If I hadn't pitted, I might have finished third," he said. "It's just a shame it happened. That car was perfect."

Martin increased his season points lead over Earnhardt by 13 and leads by 61 points. Martin gained 30 points on third-place Geoff Bodine and leads him by 184 points.

Wallace picked up five points and is in fourth, 270 behind Martin with nine races left.

Attendance was 58,200, a track record.
