UI, regents liable in sexual harassment case

By Andy Brownstein
and Diana Wallace
© The Daily Iowan, 1990

A federal judge in Des Moines Tuesday found the UI and the Iowa Board of Regents liable for sexual harassment against Associate Anatomy Professor Jean Jew, but the State Attorney General's Office claims the ruling "short-changed" the UI and said it may appeal.

After 14 days of testimony, U.S. District Court Judge Harold Vietor ruled that the UI failed to address Jew's complaints about sexually defamatory statements made against her since 1973. In a lawsuit filed against the UI in 1985, Jew contended that these rumors kept her from receiving tenure. Vietor ordered the UI to promote Jew to full professor and to pay her more than $50,000 in back pay and benefits retroactive to 1984.

The judge said anatomy department faculty displayed "a pattern of verbal conduct which sexually denigrated Dr. Jew ... in a concerted and purposeful manner."

The federal suit contends that members of the anatomy faculty, specifically Robert Tomanek, spread rumors that Jew had a sexual relationship with former department head Terence Williams and received favorable treatment from him.

The court also ruled that the UI failed to respond promptly to Jew's formal complaints — even after a faculty committee in 1984 found that Jew had been harassed.

UI President Hunter Rawlings and Regents Secretary R. Wayne Richéy both said they weren't fully briefed on the matter as of Tuesday and would reserve comment for later this week.

But a spokesman for the Iowa Attorney General's office, which represented the UI and the regents in the case, said the ruling "challenged the university's academic freedom" and "short-changed" the UI.

"The judge's opinion failed to recognize the difference between individual thought and university policy," said Deputy Attorney General Gordon Allen.

"Several faculty members voiced what they felt were inequities in the anatomy department. The judge saw these comments as illegal," he said. "But the university was reluctant to step in and tell the professors what to think, say and feel."

Such challenges to the judge's ruling will be a major bone of contention in the attorney general's analysis of whether the UI should appeal the case, Allen said. He added that he would advise the university about the matter within

5 dead in Florida; authorities suspect work of serial killer

By Ron Word
The Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Two more bodies were discovered Tuesday in this university city, and police linked them to the mutilations of three women students whose deaths set off a wave of fear at the start of the school year.

"It's clear this part of the country has some maniac on the loose," University of Florida President John Lombardi said during a staff meeting. "It reminds us of a natural catastrophe. The killer is selecting victims by criteria that are not clear to us."

The bodies of a man and a woman were found together Tuesday morning at a student apartment complex near another complex where two bodies were discovered Sunday, said Alachua County Sheriff's Lt. Spencer Mann.

Police set up a command post between those off-campus sites and about two miles from the apartment where a third body was discovered early Monday.

The two latest victims were identified as Tracy Paules, 23, and a 23-year-old friend, Manuel Toboada, both graduates of American High School in Miami. Toboada had just been accepted at nearby Santa Fe Community College and was planning to study architecture, said a friend, Eric Dunham, 22, of Sarasota. Paules was a pre-law senior at the University of Florida majoring in political science.

Gainesville Police Chief Wayland Clifton said "all five victims are probably connected to one suspect or two suspects" because the methods of the killer appeared similar. He didn't elaborate.

Mann was more cautious, but said there were similarities in the slayings. He said, however, that the most recent victims weren't mutilated.

The Gainesville Sun reported Tuesday that mutilation of the first three bodies found was the apparent connection.

The Sun, quoting unidentified sources, said Christa Hoyt, 18, was decapitated and that her breasts and those of at least one other victim were mutilated. Police have refused to comment on details of the mutilation.

"I don't think it takes a rocket scientist to figure out that anybody that commits homicide using mutilation is a pretty sick individual, and it's somebody we want to get off the streets very badly," said Mann, the Alachua County sheriff's spokesman.

"It looks like it's a part of a serial killer," State Chancellor Charles Reed said earlier in Tallahassee.

Some students fled home, while others' parents rushed here to guard their children. Some students said the slayings were reminiscent.

Senate Armed Services, Foreign Affairs, Appropriations and Intelligence committees. After Bush's opening remarks, the briefing was closed to the press.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, was asked later if Congress had given Bush a blank check for dealing with Iraq. "Of course not," Mitchell replied. "Approval of the president's action is not approval of all future action."

Several lawmakers said they questioned Bush about developing new energy policies for the United States. "I must say, the president's response on that wasn't the strongest," said Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash. "He said we need alternatives."

Bush threatens Iraq with 'stiff price' for Persian Gulf conflict

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush, bolstered by strong support in Congress for his Persian Gulf strategy, warned Iraq on Tuesday it will pay a stiff price for occupying Kuwait and "an even stiffer price" by broadening the conflict.

"Let no one abroad doubt our national unity or our staying power," Bush told more than 170 members of the House and Senate, assembled for a rare, face-to-face briefing from the president and his top aides.

In comments later, the lawmakers gave Bush a bipartisan vote of confidence for his showdown with Iraq over its Aug. 2 invasion and takeover of Kuwait.

However, some lawmakers suggested that America's wealthy allies who aren't sending military contingents to the area, such as Japan and Germany, should share the expense of the military buildup by others.

The president said he soon would announce commitments that other countries were willing to make, members of Congress said.

The Pentagon said the U.S. buildup in Saudi Arabia and nearby waters, by far the biggest force deployed in opposition to Iraq, would cost $2.5 billion by the end of September.

Bush "gets high marks for stating clearly the goals and making it an international effort," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo. "So far, so good."

"There's very strong support for the president's actions," said House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash. "He was commended by speaker after speaker. ... There were really no overall reservations."

Yet, some lawmakers questioned how long the United States would be involved.

"There was concern about where the line in the sand is," said Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich. "There is no sense of how long it will last."

The White House reacted cautiously to an announcement from Iraq that all women and children foreigners would be allowed to leave the country beginning Wednesday. The State Department said it could not confirm the report.

"Our position has always been that everyone should be allowed to leave," said White House deputy press secretary Roman Popadiuk. And, Bush said, "When it comes to the safety and well-being of American citizens held against their will, I will hold Baghdad responsible."

The president, breaking away from his summer vacation in Maine, flew to Washington for consultations and for the briefing of members of the House and Senate Armed Services, Foreign Affairs, Appropriations and Intelligence committees. After Bush's opening remarks, the briefing was closed to the press.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, was asked later if Congress had given Bush a blank check for dealing with Iraq. "Of course not," Mitchell replied. "Approval of the president's action is not approval of all future action."

Several lawmakers said they questioned Bush about developing new energy policies for the United States. "I must say, the president's response on that wasn't the strongest," said Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash. "He said we need alternatives."

Rawlings will speak briefly from the east steps of the Old Capitol. Tom Lunde, executive officer of the Undergraduate Collegiate Senate, will speak on behalf of the student body.

In addition, Rawlings will attend a welcome reception for new students from 6:30-8:30 p.m. on the Union Field. Entertainment and refreshments will be provided. All UI students are invited to come to the informal gathering.

New Wave plans demonstration

The Daily Iowan

A UI student group is planning to protest a scheduled speech by UI President Hunter Rawlings during opening ceremonies on the Pentacrest today.

The group, New Wave, claims Rawlings' speech "will not reflect the true attitude of the UI toward human rights and funding priorities."

Specifically, the group claims the Reserve Officers' Training Corps

(ROTC) violates the UI human rights policy because it excludes gays, lesbians and bisexuals from service. ROTC recruits on the UI campus. In addition, the group contends that the UI is not spending enough money to increase the amount of lighting on campus.

The group also advocates increased funding for minority recruitment and retention, renovation of the African-American Cultural Center, the Women's

U.N. Security Council plans Cambodian truce

By Peter James Spielmann
The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The five permanent Security Council members agreed Tuesday on plans for a truce in Cambodia and U.N. administration of the country until a new government is elected.

It would be an "unprecedented" U.N. operation to solve a regional conflict, one U.S. diplomat said — costing $3 billion to $5 billion over one or two years and involving up to 10,000 peacekeeping troops and 10,000 civilian personnel.

The five — the United States, Britain, France, China and the Soviet Union — ended two days of private talks on details of a transitional administration to guide Cambodia to peace and democracy.

"We have gone as far as we can as the five permanent members," said a U.S. diplomat involved in the talks. "Now it is up to the four Cambodian parties. The question is, can the four Cambodian factions agree?"

The diplomat was referring to the Khmer Rouge, its two non-communist guerrilla allies and the Vietnam-installed government in Cambodia.

The Cambodian factions are to meet in Indonesia in September.

The U.S. diplomat said, "We think there are grounds, if not for wild optimism, at least for strong confidence" all parties will agree.

Western ambassador close to the talks said he thought the chances were better than ever.

On Aug. 22, he said, the three resistance factions issued a communiqué expressing support for the work of the five permanent Security Council members and willingness to accept military and administrative arrangements, which were worked out earlier.

Tuesday's accord means the backers of the warring factions — the United States, the Soviet Union and China — agree on a peace plan.

The Khmer Rouge gets its weapons and supplies from China; the Soviets back the current Cambodian government of Prime Minister Hun Sen; the United States backs the two non-communist guerrilla factions.

For 170 students, temp housing is necessary evil

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

Tracy lives army style, crammed between a row of bunk beds and dressers in a one-room lounge at the end of sixth-floor Rienow.

She watches a TV perched on a crate in the foot-wide opening between beds. Four other roommates live in the lounge without a phone, sink or even (gasp!) air conditioning.

Among 30 UI students in temporary housing, Tracy is hoping and praying a room will open up soon.

These nine women and 21 men are the last of the "lounge lizards" remaining in Rienow and Burge Residence Halls. UI Residence Services moved almost 150 students from lounges to residence-hall rooms during the first week of school and hope to have the rest moved by Sept. 15.

Although students complain about lack of privacy and spartan living conditions, housing officials say temp housing is a necessary evil.

George Droll, director of residence services, said temp housing helps fill vacancies caused by no-shows.

"In the perfect world, there would be no no-shows, so you could plan this down to the last bed. But that's not the case," he said.

"We try to establish our temp-housing capacity at what we predict our no-show rate will be," he said. "Temp housing helps us manage our occupancy and keep costs down."

Droll said many universities have temp housing, including Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa.

Only 170 students have lived in temp housing this semester, a significant drop from the UI's peak of 540 students in the early 1980s.

Droll said residence services eliminated 400 beds this year due to a freshman enrollment drop that has lowered demand for on-campus housing.

Board to consider school tax

By Cynthia Taylor
The Daily Iowan

A proposal to replace the current enrichment tax levy with an instructional support levy will be discussed at a public hearing Sept. 25 at the Iowa City School Board meeting.

At a board meeting Tuesday, member Craig Willis said the proposed levy would raise the same amount of revenue as the enrichment tax but would reduce the local tax burden up to 20 percent.

Although a five-year plan option does exist for the levy proposal, the majority of the board said it favors a four-year plan. The board will vote on the measure at the Sept. 11 meeting.

Barbara Grohe, superintendent of schools, said other districts throughout the state who were represented at the recent Urban Education Network meeting are considering the same resolution.

In some of those districts, the public is challenging the boards' decisions and is petitioning for a vote, Grohe added.

In other local action, the school board unanimously approved Policy 701.3, which outlines the Free and Reduced Lunch Program.

Fran Malloy, board president, also pointed out that the Sept. 11 meeting time has been changed to 4 p.m. to accommodate the 1990-91 school board elections.

The current board will swear in new members Sept. 25 at 7:30 p.m., and the public hearing on the instructional support levy will follow.

At Penn Elementary School, the building project is scheduled to be completed Sept. 26. The board will be faced with a revised proposal that allows for an access ramp to be built at the rear of the addition.

The ramp, which was left out of the original proposal, is required by the Department of Education. Board members initially felt the area where the ramp is to be added was not adequately supervised to deter such activities as skateboarding, according to member Jerry Palmer.

Pocahontas-based reservists ready to leave for active duty

The Associated Press

POCAHONTAS, Iowa — For Iowa's activated Army reservists there's equipment to check, packing to do and orders to receive.

And there are wills to write.

By early this week, Capt. Pat Reinert already had completed more than 20 wills for Pocahontas-based reservists.

Reinert, a lawyer who works in the U.S. attorney's office in Cedar Rapids, says that's standard operating procedure when a reserve unit is called to active duty.

But this is the first time that the Pocahontas-based 4249th Port Security Detachment of Military Police unit has been called to active duty. The unit departs this week for a 90-day assignment in North Carolina.

Reinert also has completed more than 30 power-of-attorney documents for the unit's family members. Those documents smooth the way for such matters as paying a family's bills while reserves are away, he said.

"Our job is to ensure that the soldiers are ready to go and their families ready to be separated from them," Reinert said.

Among those using Reinert's services Monday was reservist Don Trexel of Gilmore City. Trexel and his wife, Christie, both have been called to active duty. Their boys, ages 5 and 1, will stay with relatives in Omaha, Neb., while their parents are away.

Don Trexel has been busy tying loose ends since he and his wife received the call to duty Saturday. "I've had a lot of support from neighbors, and the bank, the post office and the co-op all have been very helpful," he said.

Trexel, a reservist for nearly 20 years, farms part-time. A neighbor will harvest his crops.

"The biggest loose end I have now is my dog," Trexel said. "My dog is a real people dog. If she doesn't find someone at home, she goes looking for them."

Pocahontas-based reservists say the family members they leave behind are the ones who face the real difficulties.

"I'm not so concerned about soldiers doing their jobs there," said Staff Sgt. Jim Dirks, a reservist from Gowrie and a squad leader. "I'm more concerned for the families back home."

The Pocahontas-based reservists, trained in port security, will be stationed at a port in Wilmington, N.C.

Pfc. Harris Bockoven, 21, of Fort Dodge, also is heading to North Carolina.

"I'll probably be 22 when I get back," he said.

Bockoven, whose parents are Betty and Jim Bockoven of Fort Dodge, has been in the reserves for about a year.

"There were some people who when they first signed up thought they would never be called up," he said.

Recent UI meeting recaps summer, plans for emergency phone systems

By Marc Morehouse
The Daily Iowan

The restructured UI student government met Tuesday for the first time this fall as the UI Student Association.

All three branches of the UI met Tuesday at the Union to outline meeting plans, discuss budget proposals and recap the organization's summer accomplishments.

The UI executive officers staffed the office over the summer and were busy with administrative tasks and other projects.

Among the summer's activities:

■ Mark Havlicek, student body president, attended each of the three Iowa Board of Regents summer meetings. At the May meeting in Mason City, he discussed last year's UI student government scandal and surrounding audits. Havlicek expressed support for the regents' reaction to the situation.

In June, UI President Hunter Rawlings presented the proposed Pathways Project to the board. Rawlings has asked student organizations to help defer much of the project's cost by volunteering their time, and Havlicek plans to solicit help from fraternities and sororities for the project.

UISA also attended the July regents meeting.

■ The regents and upper administration at the UI proposed that the FCC license held by KRUI-FM, the student radio station, be transferred to the regents. The main reasons cited for the proposal were legal liability and financial accountability. Havlicek said student government has been assured the move is legally necessary and not an administrative attempt to assume control of the station.

■ Havlicek and Heather Fenik, vice president of the student body, were invited to Bloomington, Ind., to help Indiana University restructure its student government. They also learned how to complete the restructuring of the UI student government during the trip.

■ June Davis, UI assistant vice president; Bill Furmeister, UI director of public safety; and other members of the administration are working in conjunction with the UI to develop plans for the installation of 15 or more emergency phones around campus. The phones were proposed last year by student government officers. Emergency phone systems have been successful at other campuses around the country, Havlicek said. Parking lots and walkways are the tentative locations for the phones.

Havlicek was pleased about the administrative response to the students' proposal.

"We thought the administration forgot about us," Havlicek said. "The administration is going to fund the entire project. A lot of campuses are begging for this."

UI Orthodontics establishes memorial

The UI Department of Orthodontics has announced plans to establish a memorial in honor of George Andreasen, who taught in the department for more than 25 years before his death in the fall of last year.

Andreasen joined the faculty of the College of Dentistry as a professor of orthodontics in 1963 and was chairman of the department from 1965 to 1975. In 1980, he was named Iowa Inventor of the Year for his work with nitinol wire.

A committee comprising graduates of the UI orthodontics program along with John Casko, professor and current head of the department, has initiated a campaign through the UI Foundation to raise funds to equip an orthodontic research laboratory in the UI College of Dentistry in memory of Andreasen.

Johnson County Extension announces candidates

Twelve county residents have been nominated as candidates for membership on the Johnson County Extension Council, to appear on the general election ballot Nov. 6.

The extension is the county governing body for the Cooperative Extension System. Council members hire county staff, manage the county extension budget of approximately $180,000 and help determine programming.

The terms of all current extension council members will expire on Dec. 31, 1990.

Nominees are: Loretta Basten, Solon; Tom Bayliss, Riverside; Audry Beuter, Iowa City; Peg Colony, North Liberty; Jane Gay, Iowa City; Ruth Kabela, Iowa City; Gene Kasper, Oxford; Lucy Parker, Hills; Cathy Sladek, Iowa City; Victor Strabala, Oxford; Guy Williams, Iowa City; and Norman Ziskovsky, Swisher.

Tuition at Iowa universities has risen by 83 percent since Republican Governor Terry Branstad took office, according to Democratic gubernatorial candidate Don Avenson.

Avenson, campaigning in Iowa City Tuesday, outlined his own "limited tuition increase plan" for Iowa's universities and community colleges at a press conference in the Union.

"Tuition costs at our state universities have risen by 83 percent since Terry Branstad took office, and they now exceed the national average for four-year public colleges," Avenson said.

"Even worse, community college tuition costs are the seventh-highest in the nation. That's where working Iowans are going to get advanced training and skills for better jobs," he added.

Although out-of-state students are not included in his proposal, Avenson said "non-resident tuition is about as high

"An influx of people to Iowa would be a healthy change from the Terry Branstad days."

as it should get."

Avenson said the limited tuition increase may attract out-of-state students willing to establish residency in order to take advantage of the low in-state tuition.

"An influx of people to Iowa would be a healthy change from the Terry Branstad days," he said.

Avenson stated that while tuition has risen, per capita income in Iowa has "fallen further behind." He said this makes it more difficult for Iowans to pay the tuition.

"My first goal will be to reduce tuition at state universities and community colleges to the national average; it makes no sense to have world-class institutions if Iowans can't afford to attend them," he continued.

Avenson said there should eventually be no tuition at community colleges, and non-traditional college students deserve to have a place to learn specialized skills.

In addition to proposing complete elimination of community college tuition at a cost of $30 million a year, Avenson suggested freezing tuition at state universities at a cost of $4 million a year.

In order to maintain the relative balance that now exists between public and private colleges, Avenson favors additional state tuition assistance for private college students.

Avenson plans to implement his tuition plan as adequate state revenues become available.

Avenson said he will provide full support for regular university and community college operations, including salaries and capital improvements, and that revenue lost to the universities when tuition is frozen will be replaced with additional state aid.

Avenson criticized Branstad's opposition to reducing tuition to the national average.

"I believe Terry Branstad is out of touch with today's college costs," he said. "This week my sons bought textbooks for this semester and each of them paid over $300 — that's as much as Terry Branstad paid for an entire year of tuition when he went to college."

Branstad, now seeking a third term in the governor's office, received a bachelor's degree in political science from the UI in 1969.

Last year, Avenson also called for the elimination of tuition at state universities, but he said he withdrew that proposal because he realized elimination of university tuition could not be achieved without additional state revenues.

Parents need to rededicate to education

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa deserves its high ranking in education performance, but parents need to redefine their roles if the state hopes to maintain that level, PTA officials say.

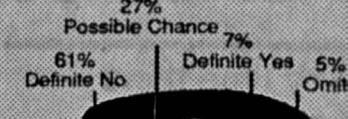

"I'm not sure parents realize all that's involved," said Jean Morgan of Newton, president of the state PTA.

"Kids can't make it on their own. It isn't enough any more for parents to just attend the school carnival," she said.

Morgan said Iowa schools deserve the "B" rating given by the American Association of Parents and Children on Monday. Only two states, Connecticut and Wyoming, got higher ratings, while most of Iowa's neighbors also rated a "B." Illinois and Missouri rated a "C."

Branstad declares flooding disasters

By Tom Seery
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad on Tuesday declared four northeast Iowa counties disaster areas after viewing damage from weekend flooding caused by up to 8 inches of rain.

"We saw really a lot of devastation from the flooding in northeast Iowa," said Branstad, who flew in an airplane over the area and also visited several cities in Buchanan, Chickasaw, Clayton and Fayette counties.

"The damage is in the millions of dollars — a lot of county and city parks, a lot of commercial businesses and a lot of homes," he said. "Fortunately, the people have been pulling together."

"Friends and relatives have taken care of many people displaced. There are some staying in motels, but for the most part it's people in the community and neighbors and family taking care of the people that are displaced."

Branstad said he also will ask President Bush to sign a federal disaster declaration for the region, making federal aid available in addition to state assistance.

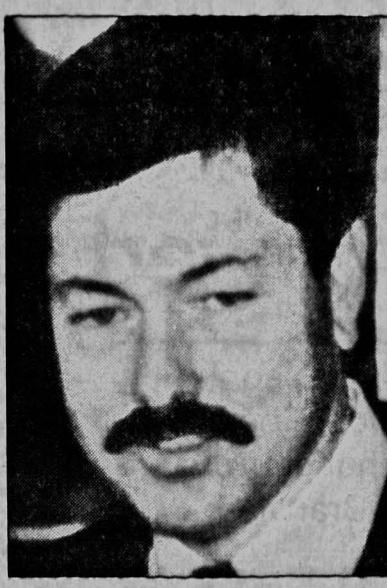

"We are now No. 2 to Texas in terms of damage this year from flooding. Now it's hit every section of the state of Iowa," he said. "It's really becoming a severe strain on our state."

After Tuesday's tour, the governor said he saw "a lot of erosion damage to parks and private property, and of course a lot of people don't have flood insurance."

At Elgin, "a brand new county park had been destroyed," he said. "In fact, seven of the eight county parks in Fayette County are presently unusable."

He said a number of houses were severely damaged in the region, including several where basements caved in.

Most of the region had 2 inches to 4 inches of rain last Friday and Saturday, but intense storms in some spots dumped up to 8 inches of rain and sent rivers to near record levels.

At Independence, the Wapsipinicon River crested Sunday at more than 8 feet over flood stage. Flooding of the Turkey River also caused substantial damage at Elkader and other cities.

Damage continued in the area as Branstad visited Tuesday.

Could Dr. Seuss be hired as an adviser for Iowa?

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Employees of the state's Department of Employment Services could learn a lesson or two about motivation from children's author Dr. Seuss, according to the director of the agency.

Employment Services Director Cynthia Eisenhauer said she has recommended in a memo to department employees that the agency's managers use the new Seuss book "Oh, the Places You'll Go!" to motivate employees and to teach them the importance of setting goals.

But Eisenhauer denied Monday that the same memo also says workers will be evaluated on their ability to "keep the director, the DES and the governor out of trouble."

"That's not something that will be included in anybody's performance evaluation," she said.

She said a retraction of that portion of the memo will be issued.

The advice to use the book was included in an Aug. 13 memo that summarizes a staff meeting and lists the agency's strengths and weaknesses. During the meeting, Eisenhauer suggested using the Dr. Seuss book, according to the memo.

Eisenhauer defended her advice to use the book as a management tool.

"It is a book that encourages people to take risks in the hope they will be successful," she said.

The memo also says Eisenhauer feels "she is getting bogged down in details" and wants to turn her attention to programs and policies.

Among the strengths listed in the memo are "good will" employees who "show a commitment to make DES better" and "some employees showing initiative in going beyond the call of duty."

Weaknesses include "minimal consultation among employees before decisions are made; lethargy of some employees throughout the agency; lack of cohesiveness of the three divisions; defensiveness when problems occur."

Gas prices set records in biggest leap since '79

By Steven P. Rosenfeld
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — The steepest surge since 1979 has left gasoline prices at or near record highs in Iowa, a motorists' club reported Tuesday.

Regular leaded gas and diesel fuel both reached new heights in a pre-Labor Day survey, while unleaded regular is just below record levels, the American Automobile Association of Iowa said.

The price explosion at the pumps followed Iraq's Aug. 2 occupation of Kuwait and a blockade of shipments of Iraqi oil.

Elsewhere, Iowa's secretary of agriculture urged the state's motorists to increase their use of ethanol-blended gasoline.

"While I support our government's actions to protect American lives and sovereign nations in the Middle East, I would point out that it is a lot cheaper to produce ethanol from our corn fields in Iowa than it is to send troops, tanks and planes to the Middle East to protect foreign oil fields," said Secretary Dale Cochran.

AAA Iowa said prices rose an average of 22 cents a gallon at self-service islands and have increased an average 19.5 cents at full-service since a survey before the Independence Day holiday.

In 1979, after Iran's revolution, regular gas at full-service pumps rose from 76 to 96 cents a gallon within a four-month period, and self-service regular jumped from 72 cents a gallon to 94 cents, the motorists' organization said.

In the latest survey, regular unleaded gasoline sold for an average $1.33 a gallon at self-service pumps in Iowa, up from $1.11 in the July 4 survey and $1.06 in the Labor Day survey of 1989. The record of $1.38 a gallon was set April 3, 1981, AAA Iowa said.

Regular leaded gas at self-service islands averaged a record $1.34 a gallon in the new survey against $1.12 in the last survey, $1.06 a year ago and the former record of $1.32 in 1981. Diesel fuel averaged a record $1.31 a gallon, up from $1.07 in the last survey, $1.03 a year ago and the previous high of $1.30.

Premium unleaded rose to $1.45 a gallon from $1.25 in the July survey and $1.19 a year ago at self-service stations and climbed to $1.53 from $1.33 in July and $1.30 a year ago at full-service islands.

At full-service pumps, regular unleaded gas averaged $1.42 a gallon compared with $1.23 in the July 4 survey, $1.18 a year ago and a record $1.43 set in April 1981, AAA Iowa said.

Regular leaded gas averaged a record $1.40 a gallon, compared with $1.21 in the July 4 survey, $1.16 a year ago and the previous high of $1.39 in 1981. Diesel fuel averaged a record $1.38 a gallon compared with $1.20 in the last survey, $1.12 a year ago and the previous high of $1.33.

The survey said 37 of the 58 service stations contacted will be open during the Labor Day holiday weekend, but only 13 will be open around the clock.

The Iowa Department of Agriculture said its Weights and Measures Bureau is especially watching gas stations to make sure the prices posted on signs match the prices charged at the pump.

"Any time there is a rapid rise in gas prices we tend to get more complaints from consumers who say they are not getting what they paid for," said Bill Brewer, a department spokesman. He said that in 99 out of 100 complaints, there is no malfunction at the pump.

Cochran said any dealer whose advertised price differs from the pump price could face criminal charges.

Analysts forecast widening trade deficits improvement.

David Wyss, an economist with DRI-McGraw Hill, said he believed a mild recession would begin in the October-December quarter and last for two quarters.

He forecast that the U.S. trade deficit would widen sharply in the current quarter and the final three months of the year, reflecting higher oil prices.

"The problems in the Middle East just added to the other problems the economy was facing," Wyss said. "Trade is going to get worse before it starts getting better again."

Even though oil prices retreated somewhat Monday, the price of a 42-gallon barrel of crude on the world market still stands about 35 percent higher than it did Aug. 1, the day before Iraq's invasion.

David Steinberg, an economist at Merrill Lynch, predicted that the increase in oil prices would add between $6 billion and $7.5 billion to the quarterly deficit figure.

Steinberg said it was too soon to predict whether the oil runup will be enough to trigger a recession or simply leave economic growth at a near standstill.

"Although this event is smaller than oil shocks in the past, it comes at a time when the economy was already quite weak," Steinberg said.

The $22.6 billion trade deficit in the third quarter was down $3.7 billion from a first quarter gap of $26.3 billion. It was the lowest quarterly imbalance since a $21.3 billion shortfall in the last three months of 1983.

In the second quarter, U.S. imports fell 2.6 percent to $119.32 billion, an improvement of $3.2 billion, with a big $3.5 billion drop in the foreign oil bill being partially offset by a $300 million rise in non-oil imports.

U.S. exports were up $480 million to a record level of $96.7 billion, besting the old mark of $96.3 billion set in the first three months this year.

The trade deficit is the difference between imports and exports.

Judge allows church to exhume remains

By Samuel Mauil
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A judge Tuesday gave the Roman Catholic Church permission to exhume the remains of a former Haitian slave proposed for canonization as the United States' first black saint, nearly weeping as she read her ruling.

The Archdiocese of New York wants to exhume Pierre Toussaint's remains for identification by a pathologist and church officials, said Monsignor Robert O'Connell, who heads the cause for Toussaint's canonization.

Church records show that Toussaint, who died a free man in New York in 1853 at age 87, was buried at Old St. Patrick's Cathedral on Mulberry Street in what is now Little Italy.

O'Connell said Toussaint's remains eventually will be buried beneath the altar of St. Patrick's Cathedral on Fifth Avenue, where all New York archbishops and Bishop Fulton Sheen are interred.

Acting state Justice Phyllis Gangel-Jacob granted permission to exhume Toussaint's body.

"It is rare that this court has an opportunity to participate in such a historic event, if only tangentially," Gangel-Jacob said.

Court papers referred to Toussaint as "a model of charity" who is considered the founder of Catholic Charities because he helped the needy for 66 years before formal systems of assistance existed.

Gangel-Jacob said Toussaint had lived "a long and apparently virtuous life," giving money to the poor and nursing the ill during yellow fever plagues that swept New York City.

"In those times the only consolation may have been the miracles of faith and trust," Gangel-Jacob said, struggling to keep from weeping.

After pausing as her voice broke, Gangel-Jacob said, "Indeed, for the thousands of victims of the scourge of AIDS, Alzheimer's disease, melanoma and other currently incurable diseases, the same may be true today."

The judge refused to tell reporters what had moved her as she read her decision.

O'Connell said the church is investigating two miracles attributed to Toussaint. One involves a Haitian man who claimed he was cured of lung and stomach cancers by praying to Toussaint. The second is claimed by a Miami woman who said Toussaint cured her breast cancer.

According to a church brochure, Toussaint was born into slavery in Haiti in 1766. At 21, he was brought to New York by John Berard du Pithon and his family, for whom he worked as a slave.

Black leaders blame police for violence

Tom Cohen
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa President F.W. de Klerk told church leaders Tuesday he would investigate charges that police had beaten supporters of the African National Congress in a township violence.

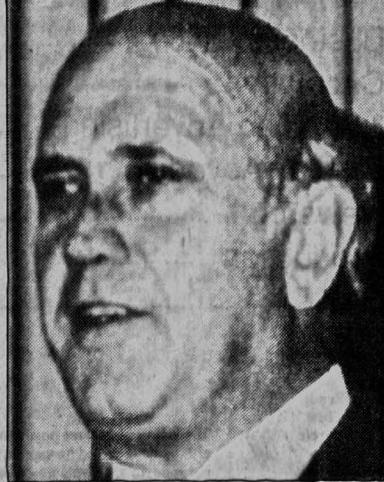

Black leaders have blamed police during the two weeks of savage street fights in black townships and Johannesburg that killed more than 500 people.

Police said two black men were killed in unrest Tuesday, but the battles were peaceful for a straight day following a government crackdown.

On Tuesday, police raided the headquarters of South Africa's largest labor federation and arrested its secretary general, Jay Naidoo, and two others. The three were charged with kidnapping, robbery and assault. All three were released on bail, and Naidoo faced charges.

The raid followed a news conference at Naidoo's Congress of South African Trade Unions, where officials presented a man they said had been spying for the police, the independent South African Press Agency reported.

Delegation of church leaders,

F. W. de Klerk
Will look into violence including Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu and the Rev. Frank Chikane, head of the South African Council of Churches, met in Pretoria with de Klerk and Adriaan Vlok, the law and order minister.

After the two-hour meeting, Chikane told journalists the president had pledged to investigate charges that police aided Zulu-based Inkatha supporters in the fighting against Xhosas and other blacks loyal to the African National Congress.

ANC leader Nelson Mandela, Tutu and other anti-apartheid figures have said police bias toward Inkatha inflamed the situation. They accused police of disarming and scattering ANC supporters while allowing Zulus to carry crude weapons considered part of their tribal heritage and costume.

Northern Illinois twisters kill 19

By Jim Paul
The Associated Press

CREST HILL, Ill. — Tornadoes ripped through several northern Illinois towns Tuesday, blowing residents out of apartment buildings and leveling at least 90 homes and a high school. At least 19 people were killed, authorities said.

Local hospitals said at least 280 people were being treated for storm-caused injuries.

The tornadoes touched down at least four times just after 3:30 p.m. CDT along a seven-mile southwesterly path from the community of Plainfield to Joliet, about 40 miles southwest of Chicago, Illinois State Police said.

In Crest Hill, on the outskirts of Joliet, seven people were killed when the twister flattened an apartment complex, said Lockport Fire Chief Dave Martis. Three bodies were lying in a corn field next to the complex and four others were pulled from the collapsed buildings.

"When the storm went through, some of the buildings disintegrated," Martis said. "High winds blew some of the people into the corn field."

Guy Allton, 16, watched the storm from his house near Plainfield High School.

"We went outside, and there was picnic tables flying past our faces and stuff," Allton said.

Afterward he helped pull people from nearby houses, including two badly hurt babies.

"Everything was messed up," Allton said. "Lots and lots of people hurt."

Julie Budzinski of the Will County Coroner's office said at least 19 people had been confirmed dead.

Five people died in Plainfield, said John Watson, ambulance services chief for the Plainfield Fire Department.

At least three people were killed in Joliet, said City Manager John Mezera.

Budzinski was unable to say where the four other victims were killed.

The National Guard was called out Tuesday evening to help state police prevent looting and to control crowds in the area, said Lynn Bobo of the Illinois Emergency Services and Disaster Agency.

Commonwealth Edison spokesman John Hogan reported 17,000 customers without power in the area hit by the storms.

Judi Mack, a spokeswoman for St. Joseph Hospital in Joliet, said the hospital had received 157 storm victims. Only 25 were admitted with injuries ranging from minor to severe, she said.

Thirty-five people were taken to Silver Cross Hospital, where they were in serious to fair condition, said spokeswoman Susan Larson. Several other hospitals also reported treating storm victims.

Plainfield High School was destroyed and some teachers and students were injured, said Steve Schernerhorn, who with other teachers and student athletes crouched in the halls as the roof was blown off.

"We had some very short warnings. We immediately took cover," he said in a telephone interview. He said about 25 houses near the school were destroyed.

Dozens of athletes were in the gym shortly before the tornado hit, but coaches moved them to another part of the school just before the gym roof collapsed onto the floor.

E. Germans hold strikes, demand jobs

By Deborah G. Seward
The Associated Press

HALLE, East Germany — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl tried to woo East German voters with promises of jobs and prosperity Tuesday as a work stoppage over unification fears brought some municipal services to a halt.

Kohl's campaign speech received mostly cheers, but a group of leftist protesters responded by hurling tomatoes and peaches.

Earlier, about 45,000 workers across East Germany staged warning strikes to demand better wages and job security in a united Germany.

Kohl told a crowd of nearly 5,000 in Halle, about 125 miles southwest of Berlin, that the legacy left by 40 years of Communist rule was a "sad thing" and "it is our goal that this economy becomes a blossoming landscape."

It was Kohl's first appearance at an East German rally since the setting of the Oct. 3 date for unification. It also marked the start of his campaigning in East Germany for the leadership of a united Germany.

During the appearance, several hundred supporters of the now-dissolved Communist Party repeatedly interrupted Kohl, who came to this industrial city of 400,000 residents to open a training program for young workers.

As Kohl took to the podium, leftists tossed tomatoes and peaches over the metal barrier separating the crowd from the chancellor. The food splattered at the foot of the platform.

Kohl, tanned after an Alpine vacation, criticized the demonstrators, saying the issues of unity "will not be decided on the street."

Kohl told the crowd he was optimistic an agreement could be reached by the end of the week on the so-called "unity treaty." Dispute over abortion rules has delayed ratification of the treaty, which covers a host of unification issues like tax revenues and property claims.

East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere also appealed to his countrymen to rebuild their country.

Gov. Bob Martinez ordered 50 state troopers and Florida Department Law Enforcement agents and two crime labs to Gainesville. Reed warned other Florida colleges to step up security.

FBI agents also joined the investigators.

State officials and police urged students not to go out alone, to keep doors locked and use dead-bolt locks, and to keep in touch with their worried parents.

Three University of Florida students who live across the street from the apartment complex where the two bodies were found Tuesday said they were going home.

"We're horrified, we're scared, and we're going home at least temporarily until this thing blows over," said Lydia Blanco, 22, who lives with her sister Illeana Blanco, 20, and Lauren Bacle, 19.

Bush also met with the foreign minister of Oman, Yusuf Bin Alawi, who said he hoped that Iraq's Saddam Hussein would be "courageous enough" to withdraw his invading army from Kuwait.

Bush turned toward the foreign minister and commented, "Very good statement. Absolutely right. There is no other answer."

The Pentagon on Tuesday estimated the total cost of the U.S. deployment at $2.5 billion through the end of September, nearly double the previous estimate of $1.3 billion.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said the increased costs can be attributed to the expense of calling up reserve and National Guard forces, to increased operations for ships and aircraft, and to increased fuel costs.

Williams also said Iraq's troop strength in and near Kuwait had increased to 265,000 soldiers.

Bush got a standing ovation from Republicans and Democrats assembled at the Old Executive Office Building for their first meeting with the president since he ordered American troops to Saudi Arabia.

The president has demanded a complete and unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi forces.

Operation Desert Shield will cost U.S. $2.5 billion

By Lawrence L. Knutson
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Operation Desert Shield will cost an estimated $2.5 billion through the end of September — nearly double the earlier estimate of $1.3 billion, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

The sharply higher costs are attributed to the expense of calling up reserve and National Guard forces, increased operations for ships and aircraft and increased fuel costs, said spokesman Pete Williams.

Other factors include increases in the number of C-130 aircraft in the Persian Gulf region and increases in the number of aircraft carrier battle groups deployed there, Williams said.

The cost estimate includes $1.13 billion for the Army, $494 million for the Navy, $556 million for the Air Force, $20 million for defense agencies and $300 million for increased fuel prices.

Reporting on its reserve call up, the Pentagon said that by the end of this month it will have activated 4,129 people in hundreds of Army, Air Force, Navy and Coast Guard units across the country.

The total includes:

- Air Force: 7,386, including 616 from Air Force Reserve units, 386 from the Air National Guard and 6,384 Air Force reservists who weren't formally activated but who volunteered for duty in the gulf crisis.

- Navy: 2,236 sailors from 127 units will be activated by month's end.

- Army: 4,236 soldiers activated so far, including 542 National Guardsmen from 19 units and 3,694 Army reservists from 34 units.

- Coast Guard: 271 personnel. The Pentagon said additional expenses include the cost of calling up reservists, up to a total of 48,200. The cost of the call up, the operations of the reserve forces and their subsistence is estimated at $347 million through September, it said.

It pegged at $175 million the cost incurred due to the increased tempo of flying time and ship use. The Pentagon noted that the number of deployed carrier battle groups in the area of the Arabian peninsula will increase to three from 1½.

The Pentagon also said the 51 C-130 transport planes in use in the crisis will more than double.

Saddam Hussein, president of Iraq
"Guest" women and children are free to leave

Saddam frees 'guests' to preserve Arab image

By Walter C. Putnam
The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Saddam Hussein, in what Baghdad said was a sympathetic response to hostages' pleas for their children's safety, announced Tuesday that foreign women and children would be allowed to leave Iraq.

The dramatic announcement came hours after the Iraq president met with a group of foreigners who were trapped by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The official Iraqi News Agency, which carried the announcement, said Saddam was moved by the foreign families' fears over their children's plight.

"We hope it's true," State Department spokesman Mark Dillen said of the announcement. But, he noted, "We have seen promises and statements by Iraq in the past that have proven false."

He said the department had received no official word of the Iraqi decision and was seeking more information through its embassy in Baghdad.

Britain's Foreign Office, too, said it was seeking official confirmation that women and children would be freed. "We would love to hear it," said a spokesman, who by custom was not identified.

About 3,000 Americans and 3,300 Britons are among the 21,000 Westerners trapped in Iraq and Kuwait. Saddam has vowed to use them as human shields against attacks on Iraqi installations.

British and U.S. officials say Iraq has moved more than 150 Britons and more than 60 Americans from Kuwait to strategic locations.

A statement from Iraq's ruling Revolutionary Command Council said the decision was made "to preserve the Arab humanitarian image," the official Iraqi News Agency said.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the Iraqi president decreed "that all women and children who are foreigners in Iraq are allowed to move freely in Iraq or to travel whenever they want starting tomorrow, including the families Iraq is hosting."

Saddam has consistently referred to the captive foreigners as guests, not hostages, and has told them their presence would help prevent all-out war from erupting.

Verdict

the week.

According to state law, the UI and the regents have 30 days to decide to appeal or let the ruling stand. Otherwise, Vietor has ordered the UI to implement the changes outlined in his report in 45 days.

Carolyn Chalmers, a lawyer with the Minneapolis law firm Leonard, Street and Deinard, which represented Jew in the case, said she hoped the university would not follow what she called the attorney general's "demonstrated policy of fighting Jew tooth and nail."

If appealed, the case will go to the 8th District Federal Court of Appeals.

Tuesday's decision was Jew's second courtroom victory. Jew also filed a civil defamation suit against Tomanek in 1985, which was tried in Johnson County District Court in June.

The eight-member jury ruled that Tomanek slandered Jew and ordered him to pay her $35,000 in damages.

Tomanek's involvement in the initiation of such rumors came out in the federal trial as well.

Court documents state that Tomanek repeatedly used "sexually defaming language" in reference to Jew.

"(He said) in locker room language that Jew and Dr. Williams had been seen having sex in Dr. Williams' office, that Jew was a slut, that they'd had an affair and that they'd been seen coming out of a hotel room together," according to court documents.

Judge Vietor also singled out College of Medicine Dean John Eckstein for his conduct in the situation.

In response to Jew's complaints, Eckstein advised Jew that "there was nothing that could be done, and that a single woman has these kinds of problems in a small-town, goldfish-bowl environment," Vietor wrote in his ruling.

Eckstein would not comment on the case Tuesday.

Regardless of whether the UI appeals the decision, both Jew and her lawyers were elated over the judge's ruling.

In an official statement Tuesday, Jew said she felt vindicated by the court's decision.

"It has been a very difficult experience to challenge the university," she said. "I have learned that I am one of many faculty discouraged by the university's attitude toward serious issues affecting women in the university community.

"Because of this, the lawsuit took on importance beyond my individual concerns. I am looking forward to pursuing my scientific work in an improved work environment," she said.

Jew's attorneys, Chalmers and Robert Zeglovitch, responded, noting that the decision is legally significant for women in universities.

"Historically, courts defer to university decision-making," Chalmers said. "An order of retroactive promotion is rare. The fact that promotion was ordered in this case shows the severity of the conduct and the serious impact that it had on Dr. Jew."

Copies of the court ruling will be sent to the regents, Rawlings, UI vice presidents, deans of colleges, and all department heads, faculty and staff in the UI College of Medicine. The UI must also provide a copy to anyone who wants to read it, according to the judge's decree.

Gulf Crisis

Watch and learn

As the thawing of Cold War tensions between the United States and the Soviet Union allows for more dialogue between the two superpowers, it is becoming more apparent that the Soviets have acquired expertise in several fields. Whether or not the United States is willing to tap into this knowledge is now the question at hand. One area in which the United States could take cues from the Soviets is the current crisis in the Persian Gulf.

The Soviet Union is being criticized — and rightly so — for having military advisers helping Iraqi troops learn how to use and maintain weapons. However, the fact remains that these advisers know and understand the abilities of the Iraqi army. The Soviet Union has been providing the Iraqis with military supplies for some time, and Soviet officials undoubtedly have a good idea of Iraq's military capabilities. With this in mind, it would seem a prudent move to watch carefully how the Soviets are handling the situation.

The Soviets have been reluctant so far to use or advocate military force against Iraq. They have only recently relented in the U.N. Security Council, advocating the use of military force in upholding a blockade against ships traveling to and from Iraq. This apprehension might give insight to the Soviets' understanding of Saddam Hussein. Having dealt with him as a friend for years during the Iran-Iraq war, they can now use that knowledge to deal with him as an enemy.

So far, the Soviet Union has handled the issue on its own terms, doing things the way it wants, when it wants. It seems the United States feels it must automatically take the lead in all international issues and drag the United Nations along if it's convenient. For once, the United States should take a backseat in the affair and give the Soviets the wheel.

The Soviet Union has already condemned the United States' expulsion of Iraqi diplomats as an action that will only make matters worse. President Bush should confer with Soviet officials about the decision and rethink his position if need be. Open dialogue with an expert in any situation is a good strategy, and the Soviets have the makings of an excellent consultant. It's been awhile since the United States and the Soviet Union have been on the same side — too long in today's world.

Letters

Mindless potshots

To the Editor:

After reading Julie Creswell's article ["Palestinian state must be created, says UI prof," "UI student returns from trip through volatile Middle East," August 23, DI], it seems apparent that this section of the paper was assembled in a completely one-sided and irresponsible manner.

Thursday's Metro/Iowa section was titled "Gulf Crisis Hits Home," yet both articles were about Israeli occupation of the West Bank. The logical inference is that the Israelis are to blame for the current siege between Iraq and the United States over Kuwait. Indeed the article on Professor Rex Honey states, "Honey believes that the gulf crisis and similar conflicts could be avoided if the U.S. exerted more pressure on Israel to give up its hold on the occupied Palestinian territories."

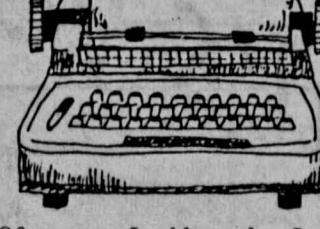

Not only does this distort the complicated issue of Israeli security versus Palestinian autonomy, but it is simply vicious to blame the Israelis for the current Persian Gulf conflict. Control of the approximately one-fourth of the world's oil reserves that lie beneath Kuwait and Saudi Arabia's sands is the reason Iraq and the U.S. are on the brink of war. Neither nation is fighting a war for Palestinian nationalism. However, nothing in the entire "Gulf Crisis Hits Home" section mentioned Kuwait's oil.

Furthermore, Professor Honey's statements are broad oversimplifications. While it is true that the Israelis have controlled the West Bank for 23 years, the Jordanians controlled the area for 20 years prior to that. Not only did the Jordanians ignore Palestinian desires for statehood, but they slaughtered thousands on Black September in 1970.

Professor Honey neglects to mention that the West Bank was used as a launching pad for military invasions and fedayeen terrorist raids into Israel and that the Israelis are reluctant to release control of the West Bank without a guarantee of security. So far, no PLO leader has been willing to recognize Israel's right to exist.

In addition to Honey's oversimplifications, the DI decided to include a horrifying eyewitness account of Israeli brutality in the area. However, I do not understand how UI student Heather Fenky's two-week trip to the West Bank has anything to do with the crisis in the gulf.

Of course I abhor the Israeli army's handling of the Intifada, which at times has been marked by outright cruelty. But, perhaps if the DI had written that as many Palestinian casualties have occurred at the hands of other Palestinians, some perspective into the complexity of the situation would have been gained. Also, if the DI had chosen to interview Israeli families that had been victimized during the years of the PLO's violent raids, its coverage would have acquired a sense of objectivity. (Presenting both sides of an issue often does that!)

The Israelis and the Palestinians have been fighting one another since the 1920s. The DI's coverage of the West Bank fails to take into account the horror both sides have had to endure. The two articles place all the blame on the Israelis, not only for the turmoil on the West Bank, but also for the gulf crisis. If the DI wishes to comment on the compelling issues of the day, its writers and editors should research and analyze the problem — not take mindless potshots.

Halloween arrives early

Few things relax me more than a good book. A few nights ago I lay in bed cuddled up with one by C.S. Lewis, relaxing completely with his wonderful little story of the apocalypse, which involves good and evil, dead things, reanimation of dead things, and the destiny of mankind. The world seemed well in place and manageable.

Suddenly, my peace vanished. From the kitchen came a loud, startling screech which — if the imagination can be stretched — sounded like a cross between an angry bicycle and a mouse.

Two of my three cats were in bed with me. In unison, they pricked their ears, raised and turned their heads, and widened their eyes. My cats have been trained to maintain their cool, so this behavior was all the encouragement I needed to run to the bedroom door, shut it and pray for deliverance. There's got to be a morning after.

But no. I could not, for the third cat — big, happy, black and white Kato — was nowhere to be found. I know Kato was an investigative reporter in his previous life, so I knew he was on the scene. "Kato," I said softly. "Kato."

Like a good cat, Kato did not come. So I set aside the apocalypse, slid out of bed and walked in sort of a crouch out into the living room. Then came another screech. Kato was in the kitchen near the fridge. His attention was focused down, so whatever invaded us was smaller than he. Probably a mouse, I surmised.

This reassurance was momentary, for then I heard a ruffling sound that mice can't produce. Kato jumped back. The mouse took the shape of a large, brown bat, leaped into the air and flew out of the kitchen directly toward me. I released a guttural cry/moan that I have been saving all my life for such an occasion and fled out the back door, not bothering to close it behind me.

And for five minutes I stood in the yard in my worst pair of underwear watching this bat fly around in circles and watching Kato take magnificent leaps into the air to swat at it.

Not that I just stood there. No, I was plenty busy with thoughts of how helpless I was and how stupid I looked.

And I thought of the tennis racket stories where the "brave" among us serve up the animal to its maker. But three things prevented my pursuing this option. First, I didn't really want to kill the thing. Second, it was so huge that I fully expected it to metamorphose into a vampire at any moment, and I didn't want to be caught poised to swat a vampire. And third, all I had was a racquetball racket, which wasn't nearly big enough. Well, fourth, I'm not that good at racket games.

So I stood there unnerved, clapping my hands and yelling hey, trying to communicate to the animal between those wings that it could leave through this door, thank you.

Then the thought occurred to me that Kato might be exposing himself to danger. (I was not concerned about the other cats, for I had heard them slam shut the bedroom door and, in fact, could see them gazing out at me from the window.) With the reckless and unthinking valor of a hero, I made for the door. At that moment, the largest spider I have ever seen in my life dropped straight down from above the threshold into my face.

Falling backward onto the cement I saw Kato swat down the bat and pin it against the couch.

I yelled and shook my limbs and the bat got free and flew out the door with Kato chasing it. The rest is history. Kato was retrieved. The spider got out of the way. And I changed underwear.

But the story doesn't end there. See, I've had some trouble adjusting. You know, nightmare and stuff. I began to avoid my apartment. Only recently have I stopped looking around for bats when I get into my car.

As you have no doubt gathered by what you've read here, I am not one to hide from my fears. So I did what I had to do. I called the Indian Creek Nature Center and said: I want the lowdown on bats, and I want it from the director.

In an effort to save you from the same fate suffered, here it is:

■ The lowdown on bats. Bats are our friends; they eat insects. Most aren't rabid. Bats don't attack unless they're seriously threatened. Bats aren't attracted to buffoon hairdos.

■ Tips on dealing with bats. First off, call the center, because I'm not sure I got everything down. Basically, you need to seal up your home. Do this at dusk, when the animals are out feeding (on insects). Or do it after you've placed fans and lights in the attic for a few days. Either way, chances are the bats won't be in.

■ Bat fact. If you feel bad about kicking out your guests, you can even set up a bat house near your home. I'm serious.

■ What to do if you hear wings. Don't panic. I mean, don't panic. Open a door or window for it (I was right, HA!). Above all, don't go swatting at the poor thing with a racket. Use a fish net or gloved hands if you must apprehend one. Oh, and take a few moments to put on some shorts, for gosh sakes.

Visit to Israel sheds light on conflict

The very mentioning of the words "Middle East" today evokes feelings of fear, violence and hatred. The average reader who browsed through the article last week in The Daily Iowan ["UI student returns from trip through volatile Middle East," Aug. 23] regarding Heather Fenky's student delegation to the Middle East probably experienced feelings of hatred toward the Israeli people and pity for the Palestinians. But those are harsh judgments in light of the article's one-sided nature. I spent more than five weeks this past summer with a group of college-age students visiting Israel and learning about its land and its peoples. I discovered that one can not easily pass judgment on the Israelis without a much better understanding of their history and daily way of life. In fact, having experienced Israel firsthand, I feel that the Israelis and their government are acting in the only manner that will help to ensure the survival of their country and their people.

My experiences in the Middle East took me across the entire country of Israel — from the Lebanese and Syrian borders in the north to Tel Aviv on the shores of the Mediterranean to the Red Sea, which borders on Egypt, Jordan and Saudi Arabia. This simple account of geographical

I kept this historical account in mind as I traveled throughout the land. When I was at Rosh Hanikra, on Israel's northern border, I stopped to take a picture with Israeli soldiers. Haphazardly, I set my bag down and left it there. As I walked away, a swarm of soldiers converged on the bag, yelling and screaming for fear there might be a bomb inside. They quickly set their fears to rest when I retrieved my bag. This illustrated to me the way the Israelis have been forced to live. They must always be wary of any possible physical threat on their lives.

As I walked away, a swarm of Israeli soldiers converged on my bag, yelling and screaming for fear there might be a bomb inside.

When I visited an Israeli army base, I spoke with a number of soldiers all of whom were about 19 or 20 years old. I asked them about the Palestinians in the occupied territories. They told me about friends and relatives of theirs who had been killed in the wars of earlier years. These same Palestinians attacked Israel. Some had recently been in the West Bank and spoke of a large number of cinder blocks that had been thrown at them by groups of Palestinians. The soldiers had to defend themselves, and their only choice was to respond with violence.

Those who speak of Israelis as being tyrants over Palestinians do not understand the entire story. The Israeli people did not ask to be attacked by their Arab neighbors. If the Palestinians had recognized the state of Israel in 1948, there might not be a conflict between Jews and Arabs today. As it is, however, Israelis must fight and struggle every day to protect the borders of their land. My visit to Israel showed me a Jewish people whose only ambition is to survive and remain in peace.

Stuart Oberman is a senior at the UI majoring in electrical engineering. He is originally from Omaha, Neb. Suzanne Fields' column will resume next week.

Guest Opinion

borders is very significant, for in an area smaller than the state of Iowa, the Israeli people are surrounded on all sides by people who want little else than to see the Jewish nation destroyed.

Before anyone can so easily indict the Israelis, I found it important to understand at least part of the country's history. In 1948, Israel declared itself an independent country, thus ceasing to be called Palestine. Under the British plan for partition, Israel would be for the Jews and a separate country would be created for the Palestinian Arabs. The Arabs flatly refused this offer and also refused to recognize the existence of a separate Jewish state.

After this declaration, Israel was simultaneously attacked by all of its Arab neighbors, but, within the year, Israel had emerged victorious. The regions known as the "occupied territories" came about as a result of Israel's victories, not only in 1948, but also in 1956, 1967 and 1973. In each of these wars, neighboring Arab countries tried to destroy Israel, but each time Israel defeated her enemies. The country's only goal was the survival of an Israeli state, a national homeland for Jews.

Performers denied federal support

Associated Press

ASHINGTON — The National Endowment for the Arts says grants for four avant-garde theater performers were vetoed because they Chairman John Froehner decided their work would "enhance public understanding and appreciation of the arts."

The four performers, Karen Finley, Holly Hughes of New York and Miller and John Fleck of Los Angeles, who appealed Froehner's decision, were told Friday that their appeals had been denied.

The NEA confirmed the action in a statement Monday.

Public performances by the four, all of whom had received NEA grants in the past, involve monologues and other stage routines that generally deal with politics, racism and sexual oppression and frequently include strong sexual content.

The performers have been singled out by conservative members of Congress as examples of the NEA's unwillingness to subsidize works that might be offensive.

Federal grants for the four performers were approved last spring by an NEA "peer review" panel of artists, but Froehner took the rare step of overruling the panel's recommendations.

He acted after a majority of the endowment's presidentially appointed advisory body, the National Council on the Arts, urged him to veto the four grants because they "were not appropriate for federal support," the NEA statement said.

The arts endowment is charged by Congress with determining, among other criteria, whether a work will enhance public understanding and appreciation of the arts," the statement said. "The chairman, deciding that these would not, accepted the council's recommendation."

Lawyers for the four rejected grantees announced Friday they will sue the NEA in federal court, charging that Froehner's decision was based on political rather than aesthetic grounds.

Volkov shocks No. 1 Edberg

By Steve Wilstein
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Top-ranked Stefan Edberg succumbed to his U.S. Open jinx Tuesday and the rocketing returns of a young Soviet star.

Alexander Volkov methodically took apart a surprisingly slow Edberg, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), 6-2, in the first opening-round defeat of a top-seeded man here in 19 years.

In other matches involving seeded players:

John McEnroe tamed his temper to beat Javier Sanchez 7-6 (10-8), 7-6 (7-3), 6-4 in two hours, 42 minutes.

Andre Agassi put on a show of power tennis in one of his best efforts since reaching the French finals, defeating Grant Connell of Canada, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

Jennifer Capriati saved a set-point in the first set and won her Open debut as a pro, 7-5, 7-5, against a very tough 15-year-old, Anke Huber.

Capriati won the first two games at love and took a 4-0 lead before Huber stormed back to win the next five games. But Capriati dug in and Huber yielded, losing a set-point in the 10th game and double-faulting on set point in the 12th.

Capriati, who won the juniors here last year, had similar problems holding a lead in the second set. She jumped ahead 5-2, but let the lead slip away as Huber tied it 5-5 with a crafty mixture of shots.

Again facing trouble, Capriati held serve, then broke Huber with another hard forehand that Huber lunged at but could only tap back-hand into the net.

Ivan Lendl, aiming to regain the top ranking that Edberg took away Aug. 13, easily won his first-round match and said he wasn't totally surprised by Edberg's defeat.

"Of course it's an upset, but when you think about it deeply you can see how it happened," the third-seeded Lendl said after beating Martin Laurendeau, 7-5, 6-2, 6-2.

"Volkov's strengths play into Stefan's weaknesses, and Stefan's strengths play into Volkov's strengths."

Volkov, a left-hander who switched from a two-fisted style about five years ago, excels at return of service and is able to handle with his forehand the kick on Edberg's serve that torments many right-handers.

Volkov also passes well, and mixes up his game with chop backhands that can throw off Edberg if he is a step late to the ball, as he was in this match.

Martina Navratilova, also trying to get back to the No. 1 spot she held for so long, attributed Edberg's sluggishness to an overdose of tennis this summer.

"I was surprised how many times Edberg played between Wimbledon and the U.S. Open," said Navratilova.

She said she told her coach before the U.S. Open: "I don't think Edberg will make it through to the second week."

"I hate to be right," she said, "but he played too much tennis. He went to Japan the next week after Wimbledon. He won the other tournaments. But, great, it doesn't do him any good at the Open."

Navratilova, well-rested, had little trouble beating Federica Hau-muller 6-4, 6-0 to advance to the second round.

Zina Garrison, seeded fourth, advanced easily with a 6-1, 6-3 victory over Beate Reinstadler, and Gabriela Sabatini, seeded fifth, beat Kathy Jordan, 6-1, 6-1.

Edberg, 24, won a career-best 21 matches in a row, starting with Wimbledon and running through three other titles, including the ATP Championships in Cincinnati. He reached the No. 1 ranking for the first time on Aug. 13, but now is in danger of losing it by year's end to Lendl or Boris Becker.

Mats Wilander, another Swede who lost in the first round, had the shortest reign as No. 1 when he took over the top spot for 20 weeks after winning the U.S. Open in 1988.

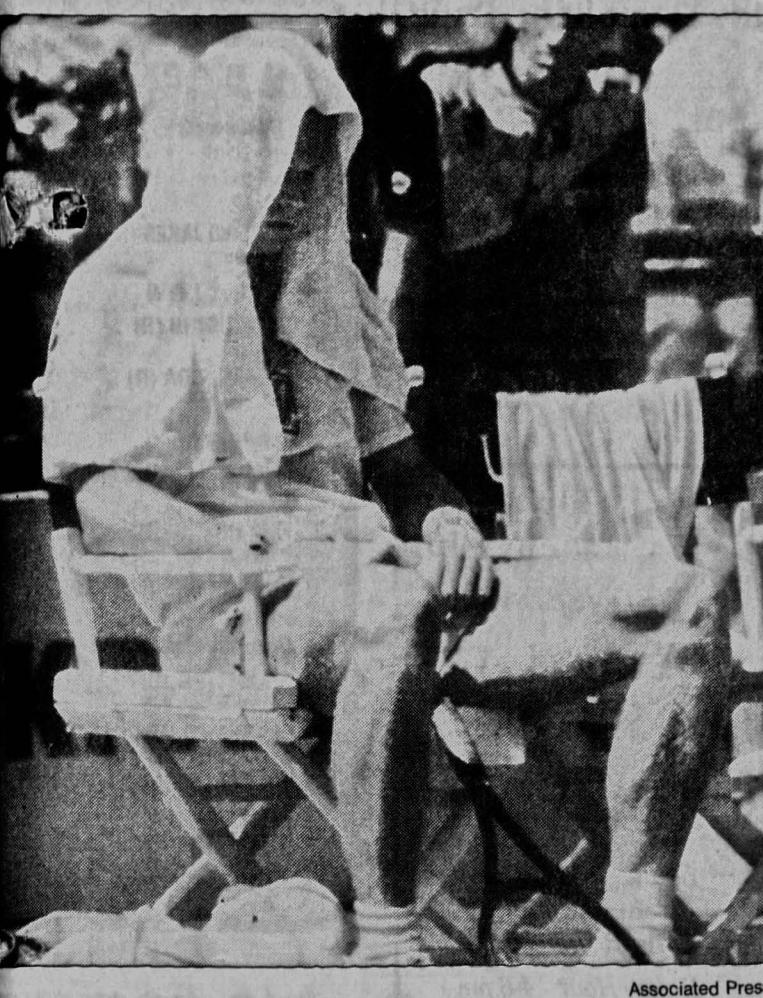

Despite Edberg's loss, he will remain No. 1 on the ATP computer rankings when they are released next on Sept. 10, the day after the U.S. Open ends.

Edberg, knocked out in the fourth round here the past two years after reaching the semifinals in 1986 and 1987, has never won the Open.

Edberg blew a chance to get back in the match when Volkov was serving at 30-40 in the 12th game of the second set and trailed 5-6.

Edberg hit a short backhand and Volkov raced in and drilled a backhand on the paint down the line to save the set point. Volkov won the next four points, the last two on an ace and an overhead

Stefan Edberg, the No. 1-ranked player in the world, sits dejectedly after losing match to the Soviet Union's Alexander Volkov, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3), 6-2 Tuesday in the first round of the U.S. Open at New York.

Iowa-Miami offered on pay-per-view TV

General public season tickets cost $108 each.

For more information, contact the ticket office at (319) 335-9431.

The clash between Hayden Fry's Iowa football team and the No. 1-ranked Miami Hurricanes Sept. 9 at the Orange Bowl will be on television, but not network or basic cable television.

Heritage Cablevision will be offering the game on a pay-per-view basis. The game will cost $14.95 for Heritage subscribers.

Desrambling equipment will cost subscribers an additional $2 to $5.

A security device will also be issued which will cost $250 if it isn't returned.

Local bars have the option of picking up the game for a $4 per person fee, based on seating capacity.

The game will be Iowa's third of the season, following home contests against Cincinnati and Iowa State. Miami will play No. 1 Brigham Young and California before their game against the Hawkeyes.

Iowa students, faculty and staff will be interested in ordering 1990 Iowa football season tickets may do so by placing an order at the Iowa Athletic Ticket Office in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Student season tickets cost $42 for all six games, and each student may also purchase one "guest" season ticket for $108. Faculty and staff season tickets cost $81 each.

Student season ticket pick-up will begin Tuesday, Sept. 4, at the ticket office in Carver. Each student must present their own student ID with the current registration sticker and a picture ID at the time of pick-up.

Faculty and staff season tickets will be mailed in early September.

Season tickets are also available for purchase by the general public.

Volkov won the first four points of the tie-break and won it easily as Edberg made repeated errors — a backhand long, another into the net, one more wide and a final one into the net again.
"I didn't play a very good match," Edberg said. "I didn't feel very comfortable. I was struggling out there to find my game, the usual way I play. On the other hand, Volkov played a very good match.
"He obviously returned very well and he served well. I think the key was that he came up with good shots when he really needed to on some important occasions. He hit the lines and really went for it. He was very relaxed out there and had nothing to lose."
Volkov, 23, suddenly a celebrity, signed a few autographs before leaving the court.
"He was much more tired than I was," said Volkov, who had never before played on the Open's sta-bium court. "I saw him so many times on TV and in practice. I knew his topspin serve and that I had to play inside the court. If not, then I had no chance. My coach told me to hit to the middle, to the forehand, and then go to the net."
"I don't know when I am going to play well. Sometimes I play so well, like today."

Rich rookie gets cool reception

By Harry Atkins
The Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich.—Andre Ware is a rich rookie. But he's still a rookie—and on his first day in the Detroit Lions' camp, he got the treatment reserved for rookies.

When Ware entered a team meeting at 11 a.m. on Tuesday, an hour late because he had to take a physical examination, nobody spoke to him—except one crusty veteran who told him to take off his cap.

"The purpose of a rookie quarterback is to blend in with his teammates," offensive tackle Lomas Brown said after two hours of practice in 95-degree heat. "By the same token, the team also has a duty to blend in with the quarterback, no matter who he is."

At the moment, the Lions' quarterback is still Rodney Peete. But Ware, who ended his holdout Monday night when he signed a four-year contract worth $4.6 million, plus a $2 million signing bonus, will get plenty of chances to earn the job.

Coach Wayne Fontes said Ware might play as much as half of Detroit's exhibition game Friday night in Cincinnati.

"I look for Andre Ware to play a lot on Friday," Fontes said. "He might play a half. It depends on how Rodney and Bob Gagliano are going. He'll run the patterns he's comfortable with. We'll call them for him."

Peete, who has been very sharp in leading the Lions to a 3-0 exhibition record, seized the moment to request a pay raise. Peete, the Lions sixth-round draft choice in 1989, signed a two-year contract worth only $215,000.

"There are a number of guys we know we've got to talk to and I intend to do that," said Lions general manager Chuck Schmidt, who joined the large knot of media, photographers and fans who showed up to record Ware's first practice.

Out on the practice field, Ware got a crash course in the Lions' version of the run-and-shoot offense from assistant coach Mouse Davis. Davis would show Ware a diagram on a play sheet and Ware would watch either Peete or Gagliano run the play.

"He's not familiar with specific plays but he knows the basics," Davis said. "He's not as far behind as your average rookie because he's been in the offense and he's been to our minicamps."

Later, Ware began running a few plays.

Ware set 26 NCAA records at the University of Houston, where he won the Heisman Trophy last season.

NDON—Former heavyweight champion George Foreman will try to extend his 22-fight winning streak against Argentinian challenger Walter Masseroni next month in London Arena.

Foreman, 42, has won 22 consecutive contests since coming out of retirement in 1987. Twenty-one of his victories have been by knockout. Sept. 25 fight will be a world title contest.

Masseroni, who will celebrate his 25th birthday three days after the fight, did not have an impressive record entering this year. He had 10 victories, four losses and a draw before this year, all in Argentina.

A spokesman for promoter Frank Warren said Masseroni's record was not available.

The Argentine debuted in 1984 and lost his first three fights. He won on a disqualification to Jose Rodriguez in a bid for the American heavyweight title on Aug. 8, 1989.

Young Unitas aspires to NFL

The Associated Press

BALTIMORE — When somebody gave Joe Unitas a jersey with the No. 19 on it, he refused to put it on.

"I gave it back," he said. "I didn't want it. It was kind of like saying I'm trying to be him, so I wear a different number."

Joe, 16, is determined to make a name for himself in football despite being the son of ex-Baltimore Colt Johnny Unitas.

"When I was younger, I used to feel a little bit of pressure to play, but now I choose to play," Joe said last week after practice at St. Paul's School in Brooklandville, Md., where he is a sophomore.

His father also made it clear that his son shouldn't feel pressured.

"I've told him just because he is my son and the name draws a lot of attention, people are probably going to expect a lot more out of him than they should," he said. "I told him not to let that concern him and to go out and have fun. Those people are wrong to expect something like that."

Joe is gaining a reputation at St. Paul's for his own accomplishments. Last year, he started more than half the games on defense, although he played some offense for the MSAC Conference championships.

He also played regularly on the freshman basketball team and the junior-varsity lacrosse team. He scored the winning goal in the championship game last spring.

do much on offense because we were trying to work him out at defense. He probably got in at quarterback twice when we were ahead of teams. Overall, he did a really good job on defense, and we expect him to be better this year."

Ask Joe whether he prefers offense or defense, and he says, "I like games, because once you have that, they can't take it away," said Johnny Unitas, who helps manage Atlantic Electronic Inc. in Northwest Baltimore.

"The athletic ability can be diminished quickly through injuries. I told him if his grades aren't where they should be, I would insist he get pulled off the team. He's worked his butt off. He's not an 'A' student, but he has worked for everything he's gotten, and I think he's more appreciative."

There are similarities between father and son.

Like Joe, the elder Unitas played football at a small high school in Pittsburgh

"I was just an average player," the elder Unitas said. "I went to a small, Catholic school with about 300 kids, mostly girls. I made the All-Catholic League team there, but I just threw the ball all over the place."

Johnny Unitas earned a scholarship to Louisville, and the rest of his football career can be found in the NFL record books.

Joe also is hoping to be discovered, but St. Paul's is not a football power.

"I've told him just because he is my son and the name draws a lot of attention, people are probably going to expect a lot more out of him than they should. I told him not to let that concern him."

Johnny Unitas
Former Baltimore Colts quarterback

This summer, the 5-foot-11, 150-pound Unitas is the veteran among the defensive backs and one of three sophomores competing for the starting quarterback job. Another Unitas at quarterback?

"As a freshman at 138 pounds, I thought he was terrific," St. Paul's coach Mitch Tullai said. "He didn't quarterback, but I like to hit people more than being hit."

Although his goal is to play quarterback at the University of Miami and in the NFL, education is his top priority. His father makes sure of that.

"I've always told him education is much more important than playing

Official: Expos will find buyer

The Associated Press

MONTREAL — Montreal Expos president Claude Brochu said Tuesday he's optimistic that he can meet owner Charles Bronfman's Friday deadline to make an offer for the team.

Brochu has spent the summer trying to find local buyers for the Expos after Bronfman put the team up for sale in the spring.

Bronfman set Sept. 1 as the deadline for local interests to make an offer. After that date, he said he'll consider offers from out-of-town buyers with no guarantee the team would remain in Montreal. He's believed to be seeking about $100 million.

"I remain optimistic that we'll have an offer ready by the end of the business day of Friday," Brochu said Tuesday. "But we'll just have to wait and see."

In an effort to encourage local buyers, Brochu announced Monday that the club had signed a five-year, $23-million deal with Labatt's, a major beer company, for broadcast rights to Expos games.

On Tuesday, he announced a similar deal — a four-year agreement worth about $14 million — with Petro Canada.

Brochu is continuing efforts to reach similar agreements with a soft-drink company and an auto firm.

"We are trying to show potential investors that the Expos are viable," Brochu said. "The agreements are of major commercial import in that they show investors that there is a future for major league baseball in Montreal."

A prospectus sent to potential investors details the Expos' cumulative losses of about $35 million since they joined the National League in 1969. But it projects profits of slightly more than $3.8 million in 1991, rising to about $5.7 million in 1993.

Bronfman reportedly has received an offer of $135 million from a Miami-based group and investors in Buffalo are also reported to have made an offer of about $100 million.

Loose ball

Eagles cornerback Izel Jenkins gets the jump on the loose ball he pulled out of Colts wide receiver Clarence Verdin in the first quarter of last night's preseason contest. Philadelphia recovered the fumble and the game, rallying from a 16-7 deficit to win 17-16.

Live, via satellite: Irish take Europe

The Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Finally, the Irish will get to see Notre Dame football.

A changing European television market has given Notre Dame a "window of opportunity" to sell its football broadcast rights to a London-based sports channel, athletic director Dick Rosenthal said Tuesday.

The Fighting Irish have a tentative agreement to have their games televised in six European countries — including Ireland — for three years beginning this fall.

The deal, which was reached Monday, would allow London-based Screensport to use the feeds from Notre Dame games being televised in the United States, according to Rosenthal.

Screensport is an all-sports satellite channel that reaches most of northern Europe.

Rosenthal said a growing number of private television channels in Europe have opened the market for programming, but the market is still small. He declined to disclose terms of the agreement but said Notre Dame's earnings would be small.

"I made it very clear we have gotten an agreement on it only verbally, but we have every confidence there will be a final deal," he said.

In February, the Fighting Irish, whose television rights were held by ABC and ESPN, broke from the 64-team College Football Association to sign its own five-year, $37.5 million contract with NBC.

NBC will have exclusive television rights to Notre Dame's home games for five seasons beginning in 1991.

England, Germany, the Netherlands, France, Italy and Ireland are the countries targeted.

First Boston, then bugs pester Blue Jays

Associated Press

TORONTO — The Toronto Blue Jays called in exterminators Tuesday to get rid of the pests in the SkyDome. And, no, they weren't the Boston Red Sox.

The Red Sox opened up a three-game lead over the Blue Jays in the American League East by beating Toronto in three of four games in a weekend series in the Skydome. A day later, the real pests swarmed in during a 4-2 loss to Milwaukee.

The bugs — flying ants, mosquitoes and moths — descended en masse Monday night on the artificial turf, prompting stadium engineers to close the dome's retractable roof and turn up the air-conditioning.

The invasion prompted umpire Don Denkinger to stop the game against Milwaukee for 35 minutes in the bottom of the fifth inning.

"I've never seen anything like it," he said. "I've seen games called by rain, wind and snow, but never bugs. I've seen bugs before, but I've never seen them this heavy and this thick."

Don Denkinger
American League umpire

SkyDome officials planned to keep the dome closed for Tuesday night's game with the Brewers, but David Garrick, the SkyDome's vice president of public relations, said it was because of the threat of rain, not bugs.

A similar bug attack occurred some 30 years ago during a game in Detroit.

"I've seen bugs before, but I've never seen them this heavy and this thick."

Don Denkinger
American League umpire

Frank Feneck, the grounds crew chief at Tiger Stadium, said it was a hot, humid day and the Cleveland Indians were in town.

"But we just used regular insect spray," he said. "We gave the outfielders a can, they put it in their pocket and they sprayed it around them."

Jimmy Piersall, a Cleveland outfielder at the time, recalled stopping the game to go into the clubhouse and grab a can of bug repellent.

"They were really a pain in the neck," Piersall said Tuesday from his home in Wheaton, Ill. "But the ones last night were bombers. I think they were Canadian bugs."

The only advice Feneck could give Toronto was "just give them a can of spray and play ball. That's all you can do."

The Blue Jays called in their exterminators on Tuesday, but another pest control expert said there is little that can be done.

Paul Gault, a spokesman for Rentokil, said it's just Mother Nature at work.

"At this time of year, traditionally various insects are going to be going through their reproductive phase," he said. "Generally, the ones that are going to be flying will be reproducing as they fly. They will be converging on one area en masse."

Lewis Clock, an exterminator with West Dale Pest Control, had another theory. He said the influx of insects was caused by a combination of heat, humidity and the dome being opened late in the day.

Give another chance. Give blood.
