Iran agrees to resume full diplomatic relations with Iraq

By Mona Ziade
The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Iran said Monday it has agreed to restore full diplomatic relations with its former adversary Iraq, which is hoping to break out of its international isolation and coax support from other countries.

But it was not clear whether Tehran, by reopening embassies and exchanging diplomats with Baghdad for the first time since the Iran-Iraq war, has agreed to allow Iraq to ship in food and medicine through Iran to bypass U.N.-imposed economic sanctions for Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Middle East analyst Hans-Heino Kopietz noted diplomatic relations between Iran and Iraq never officially were severed despite the two countries' bloody 1980-88 war. They closed their embassies in 1986 and their diplomats returned home, but there was no formal declaration breaking relations.

The Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, reported the agreement was reached during talks in Tehran between Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati and his Iraqi counterpart, Tariq Aziz.

Aziz returned to Baghdad on Monday after a 24-hour visit to Tehran, the first by an Iraqi official since the Islamic revolutionary government seized power in Iran in 1979.

Quoting a reliable source, IRNA said that "Aziz, in his talks with Ali Akbar Velayati, called for the restoration of bilateral relations and reopening of embassies in the two countries.

"Officials of the Islamic Republic of Iran gave a positive response to the Iraqi foreign minister's call and announced their consent in this connection," IRNA said.

There was no immediate comment from Baghdad.

Kopietz, a former specialist with London's International Institute for Strategic Studies who is now a consultant, said it was too early to say if Iran, its relations with the West marred by a decade-long hostility, would go as far as rescinding its

Johnson-led rebels slay President Doe

By Clarence Roy-Macaulay
The Associated Press

MONROVIA, Liberia — President Samuel Doe was reported Monday to have died of gunshot wounds suffered in fighting with rebels who captured him a day earlier.

On Sunday, breakaway rebel leader Prince Johnson named himself president until elections can be held. Shortly after Doe's capture, however, loyalists named a successor to the former Liberian leader.

Liberia's main rebel group said Monday it would intensify the fighting, dashing hopes for an early end to the 8½-month-old civil war that has left more than 5,000 civilians dead.

The National Patriotic Front led by Charles Taylor on Monday demanded withdrawal of the 3,000-member West African force in Monrovia to quell the fighting, which has often been factional. Rebels have also accused Doe of corruption and human rights abuses.

Although fighters loyal to Johnson control the capital, Taylor's 10,000-member army has overrun most of the rest of Liberia.

In Washington, the State Department said it had been told by reliable sources that Doe had died from gunshot wounds suffered in his legs during a shootout Sunday with rebels loyal to Johnson.

A State Department spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said U.S. officials considered the reports confirmation of the Liberian leader's death.

"We have been informed by various sources, including representatives of rebel forces, that President Doe died . . . (from wounds) that he suffered in the shootout with Johnson's forces over the weekend," the spokesman said.

The British Broadcasting Corp. quoted witnesses who visited a Johnson camp near Monrovia as saying Doe's mutilated body was on display there.

The witnesses quoted by the BBC did not say how Doe had Rebel leader Prince Johnson, pictured in Liberia last month, claimed Monday in a telephone call to the British Broadcasting Corporation that he would run the country until elections are held.

Peace strategy for Cambodia gets approval

11-year civil war to end as factions reach accord

By Ghafur Fady
The Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Cambodia's Vietnamese-backed government and leaders of rebel factions agreed Monday to a U.N. peace plan that calls for power-sharing and free elections.

Cambodia Premier Hun Sen said a date for a cease-fire had not been worked out, but all sides appeared optimistic following two days of talks to end the 11-year-old civil war.

"We have not reached peace yet . . . but we have the framework," said Son Sann, former Cambodian premier and leader of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, part of the three-party guerrilla force.

Efforts to reach a peace accord since July 1988 had failed when the factions disagreed about power-sharing issues. Under the approved U.N. plan, each of the four factions would be represented in a governing council.

A joint statement said Hun Sen's government would get six seats on the so-called Supreme National Council. Six others seats would be shared by the resistance coalition. A 13th seat is reserved for Prince Norodom Sihanouk, leader of the rebel coalition.

The council is expected to make its first formal appearance Sept. 18 at the U.N. General Assembly seat now held by the rebel coalition.

The council would cede much of its authority to the United Nations, which would administer the country until free elections. U.N. officials have said up to 10,000 troops and 10,000 civilian personnel could

"We have not reached peace yet . . . but we have the framework."

Son Sann
Khmer leader

be sent to Cambodia to administer the peace plan and oversee elections.

The plan, which also calls for disarming the four armies, was adopted last month by the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council: the United States, Soviet Union, China, Britain and France.

"We are very pleased with the document . . . and we accept it without reservation," said Khieu Samphan, head of the Communist Khmer Rouge, which rejected the plan in June because each faction did not have an equal number of seats on the council.

"If I can summarize it in one word — success," said Edwige Avice, French deputy foreign minister, who led the peace talk effort along with Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas.

The rebel coalition includes the non-Communist forces of Sihanouk and Son Sann, who are backed by Washington, and the Chinese-backed Communist Khmer Rouge.

The rebels have been battling to oust the Vietnamese-backed Phnom Penh government, which seized power in late 1978 after its forces toppled the Khmer Rouge.

Dan Quayle visits Iowa, backs Tauke

By Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Vice President Dan Quayle, in a campaign stop in Cedar Rapids Monday, praised the recent summit between Mikhail Gorbachev and President Bush, saying "once again, strong America is taking the lead."

"The meeting said one thing: The world is united against Saddam Hussein," Quayle said to a crowd assembled at the Five Seasons Hotel, where he was stumping for U.S. Senate candidate Tom Tauke.

"We have seen how quickly the world will respond to strong, precise and prudent leadership," Quayle said. "George Bush is showing the world that leadership."

Quayle spoke out against critics who say the U.S. is a declining power.

"That myth has been put to bed; once again a strong America is taking the lead," he said.

Dan Quayle

Quayle, who served with Tauke in Congress, declared Tauke the winner of his debate Sunday with Tom Harkin.

"I declare you the winner of last night's debate hands down — no doubt about it," he said.

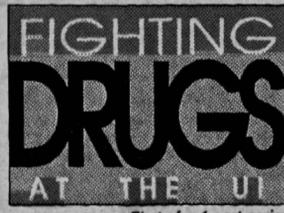

Quayle, originally from Indiana, said, "I feel at home here; these are my kind of people and I have faith that the people of Iowa will do what is best for the country and elect Tom Tauke."

UI strives for clearer policy on alcohol

By Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

Alcohol, drugs and sex are as much a part of the college experience for most UI students as are astronomy, design and statistics, but Peter Nathan wants to warn students that these social practices can lead to dangerous substance addictions.

Nathan, UI vice president for academic affairs and a world-renowned expert on alcoholism, said in a recent interview that the UI is consistent with other schools in its drug and alcohol prevention and intervention programs. But he feels more needs to be done.

First of a 4-part series

"People have been willing to tolerate the effects of drunkenness — it's part of the Iowan tradition, to feel everyone be," he said.

"But if you get people at the beginning of an abuse pattern, you are better off in trying to help (them)," he said.

In the past, the university community has tended to diminish alcohol and its effects, passing it off as part of the college experience, Nathan said. But he warned that many abuse patterns are formed at young ages.

At a meeting between the three state universities last June in Des Moines, policies and programs designed to help both students and faculty deal with alcohol and drug abuse problems were discussed.

Nathan said part of the problem in dealing with alcohol and substance abuse problems at the three universities was a lack of a clear policy outlining where and when alcoholic beverages would be supplied.

"I think none of the three universities feels it has a policy that is fully suited for the needs of the college," Nathan said. "That is the root of the whole effort. We have to agree on a policy before we can act."

Questionnaire probes harmful drinking habits

The Daily Iowan

When groups of college students gather together, it is typical that alcohol will be introduced. If handled in moderation, it can make for an enjoyable evening.

If not, the results could be a hangover, a fight, an OWI or a regretted sexual encounter.

The following questions, distributed by Health Iowa, are designed to identify a potential drinking problem.

- Have you ever tried to cut down on your drinking but couldn't?
- Do you drink more than you used to?
- Do you feel guilty about your drinking?
- Do you ever forget what happened to you while you were drinking?
- Is drinking affecting your performance in school?
- Have you lost friends or important others because of your drinking?
- Have people irritated you by criticizing your drinking?

- Is drinking affecting your reputation?
  - Is drinking causing you financial problems?
  - Do you ever drive after having too much to drink?
- According to the Health Iowa Program, if you answered yes to any question, you need to think about your drinking habits.
- Health Iowa, located at Student Health Services, offers educational programs and confidential counseling for alcohol-related problems. To contact Health Iowa, call 335-8392.

MacLean Hall trees to be replaced with shrubs

By Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

The trees on the west side of MacLean Hall will soon disappear, or at least will look a little shorter.

The UI Campus Planning Committee unanimously passed a motion Monday in favor of replacing eight cedars lining the building with shrubs as part of Maclean Hall's remodeling project.

"I think that trees are a very sensitive issue, and by voting yes (to remove them), the committee agrees to take the heat if people get mad," committee chairman Richard Lloyd-Jones said.

The deteriorating and overgrown trees will be removed to allow easier access to the building and to avoid heavy construction activity on the busier east side of the building, according to committee member Richard Gibson.

"It seems like a short-range solution to a long-range issue, but the reality is we've been working on a master plan for the development of the Pentacrest. . . . The result of that work is that these trees should be removed and replaced with some lower bushes," Gibson said.

The committee said the amount of shade reaching the MacLean classrooms and offices will not be affected by the removal.

"There are many taller trees on the Pentacrest to shade the building," Lloyd-Jones said.

"We're talking about a million dollars' worth of construction work in (MacLean) and everything scattered all over the place. . . . We're trying to keep trucks and such on (the west) side of the building," Gibson said. "It is necessary."

"Trees are always a very very touchy issue and I hope we do a responsible job of being respectful of them," he added.

Polls open today for elections

By Cynthia Taylor
The Daily Iowan

Voters in the Iowa City school district will go to the polls today to cast their ballots for three school board candidates, who will each serve a three-year term.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. today at the North Liberty city hall, Hills fire station and the following Iowa City schools: Northwest Junior High and Lincoln, Horn, Twain, Longfellow, Lemme and Mann elementary schools.

If you are unsure where to vote, contact the county auditor's office at 356-6004.

Candidates for the three vacant positions on the school board are Vida Brenner, Connie Champion, Betsy Hawtrey and Sally Staley.

Vida Brenner, 225 Linden Court, has been a member of the district's Language Arts Course Review Committee as a representative of the Learning Disabilities Association. She also helped write the minority report for the At-Risk Committee.

Incumbent Connie Champion, 430 S. Summit St., has been a member of the At-Risk and the Multicultural/Nonsexist committees in addition to being a former board president.

Incumbent Betsy Hawtrey, 715 piece of state legislation designed to encourage teachers to stay in the profession.

While Champion and Hawtrey are seeking re-election, Jay Christensen-Szalanski will not return for another term.

Fran Malloy, board president, and Ellen Widiss, vice president, will step down when the board elects new officers at the Sept. 25 meeting.

Dry weather rough on corn crops

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — It's like one of those good news-bad news jokes, but Iowa corn farmers aren't finding it very funny.

Hot, dry weather over the past week helped eliminate concern that an early frost would damage Iowa's corn crop, but the conditions also increased stress on corn plants, causing premature drying, the weekly agriculture department report on the condition of Iowa crops said Monday.

Overall for the week, temperatures averaged 10 degrees to 13 degrees above normal, ranging from a high of 100 at Keosauqua on Thursday to a low of 54 degrees at Spencer on Sunday. Rainfall statewide for the week averaged .35 of an inch, below the normal for the week of .86 of an inch.

The report said 72 percent of the corn was in or past the dent stage, compared to the average for this time of year of 89 percent. Twenty percent of the corn in the state has reached maturity, well behind the average of 51 percent for the second week in September.

The hot weather of the past two weeks started causing stress on the plants with leaves and husks drying down fast, the report said. Corn borers were reported as a problem in many parts of the state.

Courts

The Daily Iowan

Five Iowa City men were charged with second-degree burglary Monday after police identified them from descriptions of prowlers at a UI sorority, according to court records.

At 2:42 a.m. Monday, a complainant at the Sigma Kappa sorority, 811 E. College St., reported having seen prowlers at the house, court records state.

Court records state that Andrew P. Teneick, 20, Jason Villines, 19, Jason Parks, 18, Dennis Garwood, 18 — all of 707 N. Dubuque St. — and Erik Snider, 18, 921 Slater Hall, admitted their involvement. The five men admitted that they were prowling houses, sororities in particular, with the intent to steal items, according to court records.

■ An Iowa City man was charged Saturday with operating while intoxicated and leaving the scene of a personal injury accident.

Records state Andrew L. Walker, 22, 35 Lincoln Ave., was stopped by police after a driver involved in a hit and run accident pointed out the defendant's vehicle leaving the scene.

Court records state that after stopping the defendant, the officer noted considerable damage to the defendant's vehicle and noticed the defendant was "very intoxicated."

Preliminary hearing in the matter is set for Sept. 29.

German reunification inspires politicians to travel to the U.S.

By Aaron A. Dolan
The Daily Iowan

Three East German politicians preparing for the upcoming unification of Germany said Monday they are "inspired" by American principles and want to improve upon them in their own country.

The three newly elected members of the East German Volkskammer, or Peoples' Chamber-Parliament, are visiting the U.S. to learn about democratic and free market principles, in preparation for the Oct. 3 union of the two Germanies. In office for less than three months, the three are responsible for shaping legislation to reorganize industry and to reform social policy.

The visit, held at the home of Iowa State Sen. Jean Lloyd-Jones, was sponsored by the United States Information Agency and coordinated here by the Council for International Visitors to Iowa City.

And the Big Question: Just how will the two Germanys, divided since World War II, cope with the burden of unification?

Surprisingly, all three of the East German politicians agreed that abortion is the main problem.

We don't want to copy the American system; we just want to be inspired by it.

Armin Kleinau

"Abortion in East Germany was a form of contraception," explained Silvina Paulinski, a former music and German teacher. "Abortion laws were more open in the East than in the West. The governments right now have compromised by avoiding the question until the new government is formed."

Another problem, perhaps the major one for East Germany, is unemployment, according to Paulinski. She said that before the fall of the Berlin Wall, unemployment was nonexistent in East Germany because everybody was paid, regardless of productivity. With the introduction of capitalism, of course, things will change.

The West German government has pumped millions of dollars into the East German economy, but "the money hasn't trickled down to the common people yet," said Armin Kleinau, an engineer and city council member. "Things are expected to move faster now."

Carmen Stange, a former economist, said that East Germany needs to develop a middle class and create small businesses.

"Small businesses are also given cheap credit to encourage their development and growth," he said. "The governments have already done much to teach the East Germans about capitalism. The public is being informed about capitalism through the media, TV, handouts, trade organizations and conversations with West Germans."

Paulinski suggested that inefficient factories in East Germany should be kept open until their employees are retrained, and several speakers added that the ultimate solution lies in West Germans investing and starting factories in East Germany.

Kleinau summarized the group's reason for learning about the American way.

"We don't want to copy the American system; we just want to be inspired by it," he said.

Paul Muhly, assistant dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, right, talks with members of the East German Parliament, who are in Iowa to learn about

National ACT averages unchanged; minority scores improved

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — The average Iowa score on the ACT exam was unchanged from last year, according to figures released Tuesday by the American College Testing Service.

Iowa students scored an average of 21.8 out of a possible 36. The national average of 20.6 also was unchanged from the previous year. The average scores were lower than the 1985 averages of 22.3 for the state and 20.8 for the nation.

The percentage of Iowa students taking the test increased from 60.5 percent of all seniors in 1989 to 61.2 percent of the seniors.

In 1986, only 57.9 percent of Iowa seniors took the test.

The ACT did not release a state by state list of results and discouraged comparisons, citing differing circumstances in various states.

In a news release, the ACT said students took a new "enhanced" test last year.

The ACT, based in Iowa City, said students who took college preparatory programs did better than other students. Nationally, the average score was 22.3 for students who took four units of English and three each of mathematics, social studies and sciences. Students whose high-school curricula weren't as rigorous scored an average of 19.1 on the test.

In Iowa, students taking the core college prep courses averaged 23.5 on the test, 3.7 points above the 19.8 average of students taking less than the core courses.

"This information should be a clear lesson to students, parents and educators that a rigorous academic program in high school can make a difference in college success," said William Lepley, director of the Iowa Department of Education. "We need to continue to have high expectations for students."

Male students in Iowa scored better than female students taking the test, scoring an average of 22.2 to the women's average of 21.4. Nationally, men scored an average of 21.0 and women scored an average of 20.3. Nationally, men scored better in mathematics and women scored better in English portions of the test, the ACT said. Men scored 20.7 and 20.1 in math and English, while women's scores were 19.3 and 20.9.

The test also asked students to rate their high-school experiences and found that some of the better scores came from those who didn't think much of their secondary education.

Harkin proposes clean Senate campaign, stumps rival Tauke

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — For the second time, Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin set a clever trap for GOP rival Tom Tauke and stole the most arresting moment of a campaign debate.

The real question then becomes one of whether Harkin will end up liking the prize he collected, or whether he'll be stuck with something that dogs him through the campaign.

Elections aren't won and lost on such moments, but Harkin effectively denied his rival a chance to make inroads in a race the freshman Democrat is leading.

Heading into a campaign debate, a politician has a few relatively simple goals in mind. Foremost among them is to control the message emerging from the debate, in essence to write the headlines. The message Tauke intended to send from Sunday's debate was clear — that Harkin was a big-spending liberal who wants to raise taxes. His aides went so far as to distribute statements making that point while the debate was still going on. But Harkin trumped that card with a call rare chance for a challenger to score points. Each time a challenger is denied that opportunity, it's a victory for the incumbent.

The move makes enormous tactical sense for Harkin as well.

As an incumbent who is leading in the race, Harkin at this point has little need to attack Tauke. On the other hand, Tauke probably must go on the offensive if he's to make any headway at all in the race.

Harkin's call for a ban on negative campaigning would deny Tauke an essential tool needed by challengers who trail.

Worse, from a Republican point of view, calling for a ban on negative commercials simply sounds good. It appeals to the good government types and to most voters who clearly don't like slash and burn commercials — even as they're influenced by them.

Should Tauke begin to attack Harkin as he inevitably must, Harkin will be able to take the stance that he did everything he could to avoid the bloodletting and joined only reluctantly.

Clearly elated with the move, Harkin's campaign called attention to it again Monday by writing Tauke to urge the offer again.

But the issue is mixed. Harkin has never shied from the rough-and-tumble of politics, and part of his problem with voters is an image as a slasher.

Raising the whole issue of campaign tone brings those memories to mind and leaves an opening that can be exploited. Tauke's reply was quick-witted and showed he senses that opening.

It's an open question as to how well he will exploit the opening.

The exchange marked the second time that Harkin has scored in a campaign debate by ignoring the debate's structure and going directly to Tauke.

In the last debate, he challenged Tauke directly to specify when a woman should have the option of choosing an abortion.

In Sunday's debate, he broke from the format to stride across the stage to seek a handshake agreement on the positive campaign pledge.

Both were effective performance devices that showed he understands that candidates who want to score in debates ignore things such as format, structure and questions and go directly to the points they want to make.

Tauke showed less understanding that when he protested that the debate was supposed to be about education and the environment, not about clean campaigning.

Sunday's debate, like any political debate, was about whatever the candidates chose to make it about.

Analysis

for the two to sign an agreement to avoid negative campaigning.

That call — and Tauke's refusal — dominated news coverage of the debate. A debate that was to focus on education and the environment became instead a debate over clean campaigning, and Tauke's message was effectively buried.

A debate is one of those moments in a campaign when a significant number of people pay attention and it's a relatively

Branstad calls for increase in ethanol

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad on Monday urged President Bush to set a goal of increasing ethanol use six-fold, blending half the nation's gas with alcohol.

Branstad said tax breaks on ethanol fuels should be extended, marketing improved and federal cars switched to alcohol-blended fuels.

"The run-up in gasoline prices recently demonstrates why," Branstad said at his regular meeting with reporters.

"I'm recommending that one-half of the gasoline in the country be blended with ethanol," Branstad said. He said that could happen within five years.

Ethanol-blended fuels currently make up 8 percent of the national market. Branstad said increasing that to 50 percent would help Iowa's economy.

It would create a market for an additional 2 billion bushels of corn, roughly one-fourth of the corn grown in the state, Branstad said.

Ethanol-blended fuel currently represents roughly 30 percent of the Iowa market.

Branstad issued his call as officials were meeting in Washington to prepare a domestic response to fuel supply problems and price increases sparked by Mideast tensions and potential disruptions of supplies.

Branstad said part of that response should be an increase in the use of ethanol.

"We are recommending that the Bush administration set a goal to increase consumption of ethanol," Branstad said.

In addition to cutting down on the nation's dependence on imported oil, using more ethanol would be good news for the environment, because that fuel burns cleaner than pure gasoline, Branstad said.

The state's fleet of nearly 4,000 vehicles has been operating on ethanol-blended fuel for three years without significant technical difficulties, Branstad said.

He said Bush should order federal vehicles to make a similar switch.

Branstad also said he plans on beginning a drive to encourage state workers to use ethanol fuel in their private vehicles. And he said he would encourage businesses to do the same.

"We are already contacting a number of major employers in Iowa," Branstad said.

Branstad also pushed Congress to give final approval to a Clean Air Act that encourages ethanol use.

Ethanol fuels receive both a state and federal tax break, and Branstad said those breaks should be extended.

"This is a critical area that could make a significant difference," Branstad said.

Ethanol backers are pushing to extend the federal tax break for 10 years, and Branstad said he backed that effort.

served? Who is responsible for serving them? What does the university consider responsible preventive education? All of these problems remain to be worked out," Nathan said.

Nathan is widely known for his studies of alcoholism and substance abuse and its effects on a person's body, a subject to which he has devoted his professional career. He holds a nine-month federal appointment for the secretary of Health and Human Services.

"When I first started out, I worked at Boston City Hospital in an alcoholic clinic and I liked it a lot — I'm a clinician as well — but I wanted to know more about alcoholism," he said. "There were so many questions I needed answered."

Nathan believes the alcohol and drug abuse programs currently in position at the UI are a good beginning, but he feels there is still a long way to go.

"We have here a treatment program that can only meet the needs of those with serious problems," he said, such as drunken drivers who are required to seek treatment.

"We're meeting maybe 5 percent of the required need and not even meeting the needs of self-referrals — this is only a portion, not the bulk of the students," he said.

"The alcohol and drug problem is significant here. For too long, students and faculty have allowed this problem to exist, and too many lives have been ruined," he said.

A strong peer group aimed at trying to stress moderation in drinking habits is the best defense against alcoholism, according to Nathan, because students and faculty won't respect or follow a program they don't support.

He added, "I want to get people to use alcohol reasonably and moderately — not a completely unreasonable request."

died. They said, however, they watched Johnson interrogating Doe about the disappearance of millions of dollars of state funds during his 10-year rule.

Gambian President Sir Dawda Jawara, chairman of the Economic Community of West African States, said Monday, "Now that Doe has been toppled by Prince Johnson... it might help the peace process in Liberia."

Both Johnson and Taylor had demanded Doe step down.

The civil war began after Taylor crossed into the West African nation of 2.3 million residents from Ivory Coast on Dec. 24. The task force was dispatched Aug. 24 to end bloodletting that has often followed political lines.

Taylor declared Monday that his movement would "intensify its efforts to bring this crisis to an end by moving into Monrovia at any expense." He spoke in a broadcast over the state radio, which is behind his lines.

He has repeatedly claimed to be on the verge of seizing the capital but has been bogged down in the city's eastern suburbs for nearly three months. At one point, he claimed his forces killed Johnson.

Taylor spokesman Tom Wowieyu said his group will fight until the regional army pulls out.

He accused the West Africans of seeking to install "a puppet government."

"They have failed to be a peace force," Wowieyu told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from Burkina Faso. "Their mission has failed, and a prime example is the capture of Doe by the Prince Johnson group right in their headquarters."

Doe was captured outside the headquarters of the West African task force where he had gone to pay an unscheduled visit to the force's commander, Lt. Gen. Arnold Quainoo.

Doe met with Johnson and some of his fighters outside the task force headquarters in Monrovia, and they quarreled.

Rebels battled the government troops with guns and grenades, chasing Doe and his entourage from room to room of the headquarters. The fighters captured Doe, shooting him in both legs, and carried him off to their camp.

In all, 64 people, mostly Doe loyalists, died in the fighting.

On Monday, Johnson's men continued the hunt for Doe supporters, killing an unknown number of people, witnesses said. Meanwhile, Doe loyalists named Brig. Gen. David Nimley acting president.

Liberia has been without effective government for months.

Iraq offers free oil to Third World

The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — President Saddam Hussein of Iraq Monday offered to provide Third World countries with oil free of charge in what he described as a gesture of solidarity.

But the Iraqi leader did not say how the oil would be transported. A U.N.-ordered embargo bans trade with Iraq.

"We hereby declare that we are prepared to supply all Third World countries with oil free of charge in accordance with the needs of each country," Saddam said in his latest televised message.

The statement was read by a broadcaster on Iraqi state radio and television, monitored in Nicosia via satellite and translated from Arabic by The Associated Press.

Saddam addressed his message to Third World governments but did not specify the countries. He said he was making the offer regardless of the various governments' stands in the Persian Gulf crisis.

The initiative is "in appreciation for your evenhanded policies toward Arab causes, the foremost of which is the Palestinian cause," Saddam said.

"We are brothers to you. We share the same destiny," he told the Third World countries.

Baker plans Syrian excursion

By Barry Schweid
The Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Secretary of State James Baker said Monday he would go to Syria to coordinate anti-Iraq efforts with President Hafez Assad, despite major differences that include U.S. listing of Syria as a sponsor of international terrorism.

"We share the same goals," Baker said, referring to the U.S. drive to isolate Iraqi President Saddam Hussein with a strict economic boycott and to confront him with an international ground and sea force.

However, the United States considers Assad one of the more radical Arab leaders in the Middle East, and Baker acknowledged, "We continue to have some differences with Syria and we expect to discuss those differences."

In a news conference at NATO headquarters, Baker also reported that Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and the overthrown government of Kuwait would contribute $12 billion to help pay for the U.S. defense of the Persian Gulf and to assist nations hurt financially by their adherence to the boycott of Iraq authorized last month by the U.N. Security Council.

Barring unforeseen expenses, the contributions would cover the estimated $6 billion the United States planned to spend in defending Saudi oil fields this year.

Baker said President Bush had directed him to go to Damascus to meet with Assad Thursday night after talks in Moscow with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and

Associated Press

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker addresses a news conference at NATO headquarters in Brussels Monday after briefing NATO allies on the summit in Helsinki.

Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

"The president felt it was an important time to have a face-to-face dialogue," Baker said.

Syria, in a makeshift alliance with the United States, has sent troops to Saudi Arabia and to the United Arab Emirates to guard their oil fields against an Iraqi attack.

Over the years, the State Department has sharply condemned Syria's domestic human rights record and accused it of sponsoring terrorism against American and Israeli civilians.

Syria is one of the seven countries on the department's terrorism list, making it ineligible for U.S. military equipment, sophisticated technology and U.S. assistance in acquiring international bank loans. After an eight-year lapse Iraq was put back on the list Sept. 1.

Baker said he spoke by telephone with the ambassadors of Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates Monday morning and received word that they, along with the overthrown Kuwaiti monarchy, will contribute a total of $12 billion to the economic and military campaign against Iraq's Saddam Hussein.

While touring the Persian Gulf last week, Baker received commitments of aid — without specific amounts — from King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and President Zayid of the United Arab Emirates. Emir Jabir al Sabah, of the displaced Kuwaiti government, offered $6 billion.

Baker said roughly half of the $12 billion would go to offset costs of American efforts in the gulf, including U.S. forces. The other half would assist poorer nations observing the boycott of Iraq.

After Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Aug. 2, the Bush administration reached out to both Syria and Iran to join the campaign against Saddam, relying on their longstanding differences with Baghdad.

Assad and Saddam headed rival factions of the Baathist party while Iran fought an eight-year war with Iraq.

As Baker briefed NATO foreign ministers on the summit Bush and Gorbachev held Sunday in Helsinki, Finland, the Iraqi news agency reported Iran has agreed to establish diplomatic relations with Iraq.

A U.S. official said Baker had no plans to meet with Iranian representatives, while Baker said he would not go to Tehran.

"The United States has not had good relations with Syria," Baker said. "We would like to see an improvement in those relations."

He made no mention of Iraq's reported diplomatic reconciliation with Iran. When asked if the United States would welcome Iranian help, Baker said, "You bet we would."

Hussein gasps for breath as embargo crushes Iraq

By Terrence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House on Monday said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was "grasping at any straw he can find" in mending relations with Iran, once a bitter enemy, and was offering free oil to Third World nations.

"The man is desperate, reaching out wherever he can," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said.

As his spokesman belittled Saddam, President Bush worked on the speech he will deliver Tuesday night before a joint session of Congress on the Persian Gulf crisis.

"He's going to be very candid with them about exactly what we're doing there and why and what our purposes are," Fitzwater said. He said there would be no surprises or new initiatives.

Also on Monday, Bush called the leaders of France, Egypt, Turkey, Saudi Arabia and Canada to brief them on his weekend summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. Bush and Gorbachev said they were prepared to take additional steps against Iraq if the sanctions failed to force Baghdad to withdraw from Kuwait.

Reporting on Bush's conversations, Fitzwater said, "The response has been overwhelmingly supportive and almost euphoric in many cases in terms of the Soviet Union and the United States being able to come together this way."

"It's a very important source of strength for many countries around the world who have had ties in both countries or had relationships one way or another to have this happen," he said, referring to the summit accord.

Iraq, meanwhile, sought to break the trade embargo imposed on it by the U.N. by offering free oil supplies to Third World nations. In another development, Iran agreed to restore diplomatic relations with Iraq, its bitter enemy in a bloody eight-year war.

Fitzwater predicted Iraq would not benefit much from improved relations with Iran. "They've been enemies for so long. It's hard to believe Iran's going to be too supportive in this effort."

"It shows Saddam Hussein is reaching out to a country where he murdered millions of their people," Fitzwater added. "So, he's grasping at any straw he can find."

He noted that Iran has said it will abide by the U.N. sanctions, and it will be expected to honor that commitment.

As for Saddam's offer of free oil for developing countries, Fitzwater said, "It means nothing. The sanctions clearly cover the oil — at any cost."

In a written statement, Fitzwater said, "Saddam Hussein's latest statement is a transparent attempt to deflect the focus of world attention from his blatant aggression against another country. Such maneuvers have not worked in the past and will not work this time."

Senate demands monetary, military aid from other nations

By Matt Yancey
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate approved a resolution Monday threatening a deterioration in U.S. relations with nations that don't contribute enough to the effort against Saddam Hussein. Japan and West Germany were among countries singled out by irate senators.

The resolution, attached to a spending bill for the Postal Service, Treasury Department and other government agencies, directed President Bush to present Congress a detailed report on the administration's cost-sharing efforts by Nov. 30.

"During his consultations with other international leaders," Bush "should consider stressing . . . that failure by any country to actively contribute in the most appropriate manner for that country could have a detrimental impact on its bilateral relationship with the United States," the resolution said.

Passing by voice vote in the first such congressional action since Bush ordered U.S. troops to Saudi Arabia, the resolution reflected lawmakers' sensitivity to complaints from voters that the United States is shouldering too much of the burden in the war of nerves with Iraq.

With 100,000 U.S. servicemen and women now deployed in the Persian Gulf, the Defense Department estimates that its Desert Shield operation to deter further Iraqi aggression will cost about $11.3 billion over the next year.

The European Community voted last week to contribute $2 billion of economic aid to Egypt, Turkey and other countries who have contributed troops to the buildup.

Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and the exiled government of Kuwait have pledged $12 billion to help pay for the U.S. military buildup and to assist poor nations hurt by adherence to the trade embargo against Iraq.

However, Japan, which gets about half of its oil from the Persian Gulf region, so far has pledged only $1 billion despite pleas from Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady for more.

U.S. verbiage can't compare

MASSACHUSETTS MUTINY

More of the same

Michael Dukakis can't seem to find peace anywhere these days. Even in his home state of Massachusetts, one of 10 states he won in his 1988 presidential race against George Bush, Dukakis is facing a political storm.

Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy took control of the Massachusetts government last week as the Duke flew to Europe on a "trade mission." Murphy, who has become increasingly dissatisfied with Dukakis' handling of the state's economy, unveiled her plans to slash the budget and lessen the state's fiscal burdens. She had kept many of her proposals secret for days, even from Dukakis.

Among Murphy's plans are executive orders to slash the state's work force and cut salaries to save the state $150 million. She has also requested that government agencies cut their budgets by 10 percent from last year's spending levels.

Dukakis, who seems to have a knack for ill-fated publicity moves (remember his infamous 15-minute stint in a tank), is now out parading around Europe pretending his state is not entrenched in a fiscal quagmire.

Murphy was instantly criticized by members of her own party for risking Democratic unity — and the state's economy — for a "political stunt." She was, until yesterday, one of three leading candidates in the Democratic race for the gubernatorial nomination. But on Monday she withdrew from the race to prove that, in her own words, "This is not a political ploy; it is an honest and necessary act of leadership."

There is really no doubt that the proposals were motivated, at least in part, by politics. But at the very minimum, Murphy seems to be taking a no-nonsense approach to worsening Massachusetts economy. Unlike Dukakis.

During the 1988 presidential campaign, the governor was criticized extensively for his botched efforts to pull Massachusetts out of financial dire straits. And indeed those criticisms contributed significantly to his dismal performance at the polls. Did the Duke get the hint? Did he spend his remaining two years trying to revitalize the state's economy? It doesn't look like it. Dukakis, who seems to have a knack for ill-fated publicity moves (remember his infamous 15-minute stint in a tank), is now out parading around Europe pretending his state is not entrenched in a fiscal quagmire.

Enter Evelyn Murphy. Sure, she's grandstanding in Dukakis' week-long absence, but she's making an effort to tackle some serious budgetary problems in a responsible manner.

And she's not helping to improve the Dukakis image.

Congratulations are in order for the lieutenant governor. Facing down criticism from her own ranks, she is at least doing something for the economy Dukakis has ignored for years.

Not much amusement has come to us from the Middle East lately. For weeks, I've looked to the press and seen sorrow and anger. Weeping wives wrap their arms around the thick necks of sailor husbands, tanks plow ominously over desert sand and stealth bombers fly through the sky like avid bats. Such a parade is not exactly the sort of thing to incite chuckles. So I sit long of face, watching the papers like a child yearning for the rain to stop on a Saturday morning.

Stateside, the funniest thing to appear was a local television station's attempt to institute a "Gas Line 9" segment. Viewers were urged to phone in the lowest prices for gasoline spotted in the Cedar Rapids area during the day. It was funny once, but it fizzled as soon as gasoline distributors banded together against undercutting prices much as the world has done against Saddam.

I look to history and try to take heart. Middle Eastern nations frequently do more than their share to jazz up the flat political landscape requisite in an age when too many people can blow up the world too many times over. Unless I'm making it up to alleviate boredom, I seem to recall a time in the '70s when Begin and Sadat began the Middle Eastern Name-Calling Championships. Each weighed in as a diplomatic heavyweight. One was referred to as a "pygmy." The other countered, calling his nemesis a "dwarf." It made reading The New York Times an earthier pursuit, something a woman could roll up her sleeves and relish.

Recently, extremist factions of Islam have provided some nice moments. Their foray into the entertainment industry produced a ridicuous film clip, in which a fireball of wrath hurled by Allah consumed a hapless escapee from Pakistani dinner theatre playing the part of Salman Rushdie. Happily, it ran on most American news shows. Then came Saddam. A mirth death gripped the Middle East.

But something happened to make me think things may be getting funny over there again. I spotted the following headline in The Des Moines Register on Labor Day: "Thatcher of Saddam: A loser; his retort: Old hag!"

Kim Painter

First I ask you to consider this from a copy editing standpoint. A copy editor sees a headline with that much punctuation maybe once in a lifetime. Maybe. It's absolutely rich. Two colons, one semicolon and an exclamation point. Pack my bags, I'm goin' to heaven!

I read on eagerly. It got better. Maggie accused him of "hiding behind the skirts of women and children." "This man is a loser," she said, wrapping up her first round.

The Iraqi press came out of its corner flailing. "The old hag Thatcher seems to have been upset. . . ." Another paper called her a "circus buffoon who is dancing on American ropes. . . vomiting poison like a spotted serpent." I thought of Mags and her innocuous, bespectled husband, Denis, who endearingly asks for "G&T" at state receptions. I was perturbed by these characterizations of her. I'd be willing to go so far as to call her a pit bull in drag, but never a poison-vomiting spotted serpent. That's just too much.

My glee soon gave way to depression. In turn became envy. They sure do know how to call names in that part of the world. . . . You're envious, too. Don't be ashamed. You're entitled. After all, what's served up and set before the hard-working taxpayers of America when things get tense? Dwarfs? Pygmies? Spotted serpents?

No. No vomit for us. We get Margaret Tutweiler at the State Department. Margaret Tutweiler and her permanently pursed lips (she has them done at the dry cleaner). "I have no comment about the poison-vomiting spotted serpent tonight. President Bush meets with his Cabinet later to discuss it. We may have a statement tomorrow."

It's not Tutweiler's fault. She is simply a victim of the emotional poverty that holds our entire diplomatic machinery in thrall. It's hell living in a country with a government that acts like the world's police force. In the squad car of American diplomacy, officers are subjected to crushing boredom. They must exercise teeth-grinding restraint. Just once I'd like to see us cut loose where it really matters. I'd love for us to claim our rightful title as World Name-Calling Champs. Go ahead, Margaret. Make my day.

No insight

To the Editor:

Russ Bailey's sad attempt at humor in his cartoon Sep. 7 illustrates something that I feel must be addressed: the lack of insight in examining the Persian Gulf crisis by many on this campus. I'm sure if Bailey would take the time to think about being a family member of a hostage, or a hostage himself, he would find little humor in the shooting of an unnamed individual, American or otherwise. Unfortunately, this is not the only example of people on this campus not thinking about what they are saying.

author. I wonder what a Kuwaiti student might have said. The point is, everyone is entitled to an opinion, just think before you ask.

More recycling

To the Editor:

It is very gratifying to see in the Iowa Memorial Union large bins reserved for aluminum can recycling. But what about paper recycling? Each day, thousands of students throw tons of newspapers, scratch paper and junk mail straight into the trash. Can't we have at least one bin marked "newspaper" and another marked "bond paper"? And how about similar bins in residence hall lobbies? Such a program could save hundreds of trees each year.

Conservatives split over Gulf policy

As U.S. forces, and policy, settle into the sand for the long stay, a question instantly asked is: Will we become "bogged down" there? The answer is: Of course, and that is good, or at any rate the least bad outcome.

The alternative to being bogged down there is Iraq rampant there. That is, the alternative to being bogged down is not to have gone there.

A quick resort to force might have been satisfying, but catharsis is not an acceptable purpose of foreign policy. It might have been wise, but it certainly would have been no guarantee of a short stay.

One reason the Berlin Wall is down is that U.S. forces were "bogged down" in Europe for 45 years after the war ended. It is now 483 months since President Truman committed forces in Korea, and the world is better because some U.S. troops are still there. For many years, concern for oil supplies, and for Israel's safety, have caused America to seek a permanent presence on the ground in the Middle East. To those who say we are now "bogged down" there, others reply: It's about time.

Many complaints and warnings about today's undertaking are coming from conservatives. They, of all people, should understand the point the Bush administration wants to make. There is no nonsense about the merits of the regime overthrown, none of the sentimentality and mythology ("Brave little Belgium") that has bedeviled policymaking in other conflicts. The point here is the nature of the aggressor, not of the aggressed against.

In one of the great injustices of intellectual history, Machiavelli became a byword for immorality because he made a moral point: Economizing violence in the long run often requires measured force in the short.

Twice in his congressional testimony last week, Secretary of State James Baker referred to the crisis as an "opportunity." It is "the first opportunity to limit" aggression in the post-Cold War context. It is an "opportunity to solidify the ground rules of the new order." U.S. policy is, therefore, Machiavellian — commendably so. In one of the great injustices of intellectual history, Machiavelli became a byword for immorality because he made a moral point: Economizing violence in the long run often requires measured force in the short.

Skepticism and interventionism are intrinsic to conservatism. It is now surfacing — resurfacing, really — because of the waning of the historical contingency — communism — that caused conservatives to suspend their faith.

Modern conservatism was born in reaction to the French Revolution's assault on privacy in the name of civic claims. Conservatism has always been defined by its defense of limits on the claims of the public.

Contemporary American conservatism, born in reaction to the New Deal and subsequent enlargements of the state, has a strong anti-government cast. The core of this conservatism is objection to conscription of the individual into collective undertakings.

For 45 years, conservatism has been schizophrenic, favoring strong, power-projecting, ambitious, interventionist, confident government in foreign policy but insisting upon demure, chastened government regarding domestic policy. Conservatives lived with the tension of a divided mind because they correctly understood the radical nature of the totalitarian challenge. The sudden snapping of Cold War tension has some conservatives recoiling radically from what was for them an unnatural and uncomfortable tolerance of the confident, demanding, expensive government necessary for a foreign policy of containment.

Jane Kirkpatrick says, "With a return to 'normal' times, we can again become a normal nation." The rending argument between conservatives, like the argument between Hamilton and Jefferson and between Lincoln and Douglas, concerns nothing less than what this nation should be, normally.

impossibility of crisp, tidy ("surgical" is a favored adjective) historical action, particularly with the blunt instrument of military force. Still, many conservatives are sorting themselves into two camps — the overreachers and the underreachers.

The overreachers have the Wall Street Journal, which would like to "take Baghdad and install a MacArthur regency." Well, now.

Who would play MacArthur? He was a prickly, difficult genius, but a genius. And before he was installed in Tokyo, that city and many others (including Hiroshima and Nagasaki) were pulverized and the emperor had led his people into capitulation and docility. Who will play that role in Iraq? Or are we to do in Iraq what we were spared the agony of doing in Japan: Take the capital, street by street?

The Journal is always emphatic and frequently correct in criticizing the U.S. government's hubris in domestic policy, Washington's fallacious belief that it can control events. Given the Journal's warranted skepticism about Washington's ability to effect its will in, say, Cleveland, why such confidence in Washington's ability to manufacture MacArthurs and conduct regencies in Baghdad?

Conservative underreachers say Iraq's aggression does not involve U.S. interests proportional to the current commitment. Such conservatives must answer questions they are used to posing to liberals about the use of U.S. power: If not here, where? If not now, when?

The very fact that Kuwait is a boutique nation, more a country club than a country, and no democracy, makes it a suitable subject for the

Murphy proposes cuts, then quits race

BOSTON — Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy dropped out of the race for governor today, days after igniting a firestorm by staging a Statehouse coup against Gov. Michael Dukakis.

"This is no time for business as usual and it is no time for politics as usual. Therefore today I am withdrawing as a candidate," Murphy told a news conference this afternoon.

"This is not a political ploy," she said. "It is an honest and necessary act of leadership."

For the Sept. 18 Democratic primary, she threw her support behind former state Attorney General Francis Bellotti, who she said represents the best hope for change in the Statehouse.

Last week, after Dukakis left on a trade mission in West Germany, Murphy seized the crown of acting governor, unveiling proposals to slash state spending to help overcome the state budget crunch.

The plans, which Murphy predicted would save the state up to $150 million, included executive orders to fire an estimated 1,000 workers and cut salaries for some others.

Murphy acknowledged Dukakis could simply undo her work once he returns Friday, but insisted she was trying to save the state from sinking further in its fiscal mess.

Critics called her move an act of desperation because of her standing in the polls that would be rejected by voters.

Regulators ask to bar Neil Bush

WASHINGTON — Neil Bush could become a director at another savings and loan and repeat the conduct that harmed a failed Colorado thrift, regulators told an administrative law judge in a document filed Monday.

In written arguments submitted to Judge Daniel Davidson, the Office of Thrift Supervision opposed Bush's request to dismiss the government's conflict of interest case against him.

The president's son was an outside director of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association, a Denver thrift that collapsed in late 1988 at a cost to taxpayers estimated at $1 billion. Bush, 35, continued to deny any wrongdoing.

The OTS is seeking an order against Bush that effectively would bar him from working for a bank or a savings and loan.

The thrift agency called that argument "specious." Under the S&L bailout legislation enacted by Congress last year, regulators are supposed to stop harmful practices whether or not the practices would damage a specific institution if continued, the OTS said.

"Bush is perfectly capable of becoming a director at another institution and repeating his misconduct there," the agency's brief said. "Indeed, throughout these proceedings he has evinced no willingness to consider that he has done anything wrong, nor even any understanding that he ever had potential conflicts of interest."

FDA charged with poisoning grapes

WASHINGTON — The Chilean Exporters Association charged on Monday that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration contaminated two Chilean grapes with cyanide, setting off a public health scare in March 1989.

A report issued by the association in Washington and Santiago, Chile, concluded that, based on scientific studies, the grapes could not have been tampered with in Chile or at the port of Philadelphia where the poisoned grapes were found.

"The grapes were contaminated at the FDA laboratory in Philadelphia," the report said. "The manner in which the contamination took place could have been accidental or intentional."

FDA officials have said repeatedly that they believe the grapes were poisoned in Chile before the ship left on its two-week voyage to the United States.

Of the report's conclusion, FDA spokesman Bill Grigg said, "We think that's preposterous."

The FDA went looking for the grapes after the U.S. embassy in Santiago received an anonymous telephone threat March 2, 1989. After it found the two tainted grapes, the FDA urged that all Chilean fruit be removed from U.S. markets while more tests continued.

Little progress made on budget

By Alan Fram
The Associated Press

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. — Stalled budget talks between Bush administration officials and congressional leaders reached the negotiators' self-imposed deadline Monday and participants began complaining publicly about the lack of progress.

"I would say the talks are going nowhere fast," Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady declared.

For a fourth day, bargainers haggled in the privacy of the officers' club of Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland, 10 miles from the capital. With little progress to report, House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., the Democrats' chief negotiator, canceled a scheduled White House meeting with President Bush.

"There's no movement at the moment," said one official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In addition to Brady's comment, on ABC's "Good Morning America," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said chief of staff John Sununu had indicated there was wide disagreement on most areas: taxes, spending cuts and the military budget.

"I'm optimistic that we'll get a deal at some point. I'm not optimistic that these particular talks will produce it in time."

Nicholas Brady
U.S. Treasury Secretary

"So we're still hopeful but it's looking less and less optimistic" for a quick agreement, Fitzwater said.

The negotiators want to devise a package of tax increases and spending cuts that would slice $50 billion from next year's budget deficit and would save $500 billion over five years. Next year's shortfall will be at least $250 billion — a record — unless savings are found, a level that would trigger automatic spending cuts.

Before the talks began, bargainers said they had to shake hands on a deal by Monday to give Congress time to enact it by the Oct. 1 start of the coming fiscal year.

With the sessions producing little progress, participants have begun to talk about perhaps finishing in time for Bush's scheduled speech Tuesday night to a joint session of Congress.

But some negotiators are beginning to fear that the talks won't produce fruit until after Oct. 1.

If there is no deficit-reduction plan in force by that day, the Gramm-Rudman law will automatically pare government spending by $100 billion. Democrats and Republicans agree that a cut of that depth out of the $1.2 trillion federal budget would be intolerably harsh.

"I'm optimistic that we'll get a deal at some point," Brady said. "I'm not optimistic that these particular talks will produce it in time."

The frustration was spreading to lawmakers left behind on Capitol Hill, some of whom began urging Bush to turn up the heat.

"He's reaching the point where he really needs to go over the head of Congress to the American people, and sock it to the Congress for not being serious about reaching an agreement," Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., said on the Senate floor.

Participants said fundamental disagreements remained over how deep to cut defense and domestic programs and whose taxes should be raised.

Democrats want to pare at least $13 billion from the $303 billion defense budget, about $8 billion more than Republicans.

Democrats were also trying to limit reductions in benefit programs such as Medicare, although officials have said the two sides were trying to complete a package that would cut those programs by about $10 billion.

Democratic proposals have focused on raising taxes for the wealthy and imposing new energy, gasoline and alcohol levies.

GOP tax offers have included higher rates for beer and alcohol and reducing the federal income tax break for state and local taxes.

One major dispute has been over the administration's insistence that the capital gains tax rate be cut.

Republicans say cutting the rate at which profits on the sale of property is taxed would raise government revenues by encouraging more transactions. But Democrats, who say the proposal would disproportionately help the wealthy, are insisting on a tradeoff.

Black, white universities confederate

By Tamara Henry
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fourteen historically black colleges and universities are affiliating in pairs with seven midwestern research universities to improve the research capabilities of the black institutions, the Education Department said Monday.

The new coalition, known as the University Consortium for Research and Development, was unveiled at a conference where Energy Secretary James Watkins announced an "academic partnership" between his department and a Hazardous Materials and Waste Management Consortium formed by the historically black colleges.

The Midwest consortium will try to win more research grants and contracts from private sources and federal agencies, particularly the Defense Department. The Energy Department's partnership will seek to increase the production of specialists in waste management, officials said.

The nation has 107 colleges and universities that traditionally have attracted black students, sometimes in the past being reserved for them by law when blacks were excluded from white institutions.

Today those institutions serve more than 228,000 students. The Education Department said the institutions have provided undergraduate education for three-fourths of all blacks holding doctorate degrees; three-fourths of all black officers in the armed forces and four-fifths of all black federal judges.

Xavier University President Norman Francis said, "Too often our youngsters have not had the opportunity in undergraduate school to do research, and we are very concerned about increasing the number of our graduates in graduate school so they will become the researchers of the future, as well as the faculty members of the future."

Edward Fort, chancellor at North Carolina A&T State University, noted that of the 30 top producing research institutions during the 1988-89 school year, none was a historically black institution.

the Khmer Rouge tried to transform Cambodia into a radical agrarian society, resulting in the deaths of nearly 1 million people.

In a statement issued in Beijing on Monday, Sihanouk said he would take a six-month leave from politics because of ill health. Prince Norodom Ranariddh, Sihanouk's son and leader of his faction in Jakarta, said his father suffered from kidney stones.

The five Security Council nations said they "would welcome" Sihanouk as head of the council, but the factions will be able to decide its makeup and the arrangements to transfer power to the U.N.

In a message from Beijing on Saturday, Sihanouk quoted Chinese Prime Minister Li Peng as saying "the time is ripe to solve the Cambodian problem."

The peace talk process sped up after the United States withdrew diplomatic recognition of the rebel coalition because it included the Khmer Rouge.

On Sept. 6, the Bush administration opened its first talks with Hun Sen's government.

commitment to the U.N. embargo.

"What it means is simply that they agreed to revive the diplomatic relations, possibly at ambassadorial level, to establish a direct channel of communication" that would speed up a formal border demarcation, Koptetz said in a telephone interview.

IRN had preparations for reactivating diplomatic missions will begin "in the near future," but gave no other details.

Aziz flew home Monday after a meeting with Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani, which also was attended by Velayati, IRNA reported.

He had met alone with Velayati for 2½ hours immediately after his arrival Sunday in Iran.

IRNA quoted Aziz as saying before his departure that his talks in Tehran were "positive, serious, practical and friendly."

It said Aziz called for speeding up "the trend of improvement of ties between Iran and Iraq and an exchange of diplomatic delegations."

He said Iran and Iraq should join in confronting "imperialist trends to sow discord among the people of the region," adding that he has invited Velayati to Baghdad and hoped to see him there soon.

IRNA reported too that Aziz explained Baghdad's position in the gulf to Rafsanjani and Velayati, who reiterated Iranian condemnation of the annexation of Kuwait as well as the deployment of foreign forces in the region.

Aziz had been expected to ask Iraq to allow shipments of food and medicine across its 730-mile border. The Tehran Times, an English-language daily said to be close to Rafsanjani, hinted two days ago that Iran might allow "humanitarian shipments" into its one-time archenemy.

Iran has declared it will abide by the U.N. sanctions. But it has strongly condemned the U.S. presence in the region, and there was speculation that hinting at aiding Iraq was aimed at securing financial aid from the West.

There were unconfirmed reports from Baghdad that the Iranians already have allowed rice, flour and wheat consignments across the northern border.

"The aid in food and medicines that Iran could provide could be of crucial importance at this stage," said a diplomat in Tehran, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Under the sanctions, Iraq's vital oil exports have been blocked, cutting off its main source of revenue.

The Tehran Times hinted that Iran could decide to allow Iraqi oil out through its pipelines to its big Kharg Island terminal in the northern gulf.

Analyst Charles Snow commented in the respected Middle East Economic Survey newsletter Monday that such a move "would be a massive and flagrant violation of sanctions and the question is what the Iranians hope to gain by even suggesting such a scenario."

Iraq has been desperately seeking that kind of support to help it circumvent the sanctions, because its tiny coastline is effectively blocked by the U.S.-led multinational fleet in the gulf.

Women's group displays art

Innovation and expression abound in works by WCA

By Lindsay Alan Park
The Daily Iowan

"... the growing good of the world is partly dependent on unhistoric acts, and that things are not so ill with you and me as they might have been is half owing to that number who lived faithfully a hidden life and rest in unvisited tombs."

—from "For Middle-aged, Middle Class Iowa Women," a wood, wire and cloth construction piece by Karin Stevens Connolly.

Collectively, the artistic acts of 21 women are making local history with the first major group exhibition by the central Iowa chapter of Women's Caucus for Art (WCA), on display through Sept. 26 in the main galleries of The Iowa City/Johnson County Arts Center.

Art

Founded in San Francisco in 1972 and rooted in the feminist movement, the national organization of WCA is composed of more than 3,500 working artists, art historians, administrators and other women interested in art.

The central Iowa chapter, in existence since 1988, has 22 members from Iowa City, Grinnell and the Quad Cities and meets monthly, according to chapter president Anne Gochenour.

As the word "caucus" signifies, WCA has a political agenda, which Gochenour said is to strengthen awareness of women and people of color in the arts and to ensure they are included in the history of art.

Though WCA takes a unified political approach toward education about, and promotion of, women's art, no overall manifesto directs the approach or content of works members produce.

A few of the most interesting pieces in "Coming Out" do, however, make political statements against oppression, divisiveness and aggression and promote unity and nurture.

On a claw-marked "fleshtone" canvas, Anne Gochenour's "Taming the Beast" depicts the mauling and skinning of a button-cute Gund teddy bear. The darkly humorous disparity between apparent cause and effect in the piece suggests vengeful overkill by a macho game hunter, compensating for impotence in the face of nature's power.

hierarchy's pharisaic claim of AIDS as God's plague on homosexuals. The artist uses church icons and religious history to promote compassion and understanding in place of self-righteousness.

Mimi Holmes' elaborately adorned, and somewhat phallic, textile sculpture "A Second Heart's Desire" softens a potentially aggressive image. Holmes' charming embellishment of the piece — including hundreds of brightly colored plastic beads, sequins, seashells, bells, doll arms and assorted trinkets strung together — lends it a Middle Eastern bazaar exoticism.

In her "Burial Drawings," Holmes complements her needlecraft with tiny ink marks resembling neat embroidery stitches. She fills smoke puff shapes with delicate, patterned montages of indistinct human and animal figures. The fluid mosaic quilting recalls Gustav Klimt's symbolist paintings.

Several other pieces play with materials and our textural expectations.

Judith Cooper Skorton's "Quartet" (from Embedded Series) appears as an ominous row of four barred stucco windows. Using mirrors, photo transparencies and prints, Skorton blurs two- and three-dimensionality and allows the observer to count herself among the imprisoned.

Ildiko Repasi's ceramic sculpture "Archeologic Discovery" pieces together a cultural object from a "fantasy" past. On the gallery floor, six voluptuous female nudes nestle among pillows which, while appearing soft, are actually made of the same fired clay.

With their frameless, stretcherless format and depiction of the female body, Jeanne Kane's paintings "Caryatid No. 1 and No. 2" at first resemble a pair of Budweiser beach towels tacked onto the gallery wall. The confident drawing of the figures, however, gives them strength — particularly in figure No. 2, in which the figure is curled up like a magician's assistant avoiding a saw. In contrast, the graceful elongation of lozenge-shaped arms and thighs in No. 1 rivals that of poet/illustrator William Blake's 18th century drawings of angels.

The Arts Center is located at 129 E. Washington St., in the lower level of the Jefferson Building. Hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

That Grammar Guy

By Jake Stigers
The Daily Iowan

Gentle Communicators, Today we will discuss nit-picky distinctions among verbs and auxiliary verbs.

Bring generally indicates physical movement toward a speaker or writer. Take is used for movement away from a speaker or writer.

Xanthippe, my delicate kitten, brings the newspaper to me every morning. Unfortunately, she takes the section with the crossword, so I never get a chance to work it.

Bring can also mean to produce, as a result. The discovery of his previous relationship to Jocasta brought drastic changes to Oedipus' ability to match colors and patterns in his wardrobe.

Many dictionaries allow entitled and titled to be used interchangeably. The Associated Press does not. I side with AP. To entitle is to furnish with a right or claim to something. To title is to furnish with a name.

The first volume of my autobiography is titled "Jake: The First Week." Well, sorry to be so arrogant; I'm entitled to a bit of self-indulgent humor. After this is my column.

In the modern grammar of the masses, may and might are synonymous. According to "The Careful Writer" by Theodore Bernstein, however, may indicates a greater degree of possibility than might.

In purist grammar, may and might have distinct differences. As this is often a purist column, I will explain these differences: May is present tense and might is past.

Therefore, I think (present tense) I may go outside to jump on my pogo stick. My landlord said (past tense) he might evict me otherwise.

Until next time, happy communicating.

'Cook' leaves bad taste

By Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

A brief review: I sat through "The Cook, the Thief, His Wife & Her Lover" in its entirety Friday night for no other reason, I suppose, than to say I had done it. Foreknowledge of critical acclaim will make you do strange things. From the very first scene onward I was possessed by a desire to get up and walk out but was restrained by the aura of brilliance built up by earlier reviews.

It was evident from the beginning that the movie wasn't really about any such grand subjects as the decay of civilization — it was simply about making us hate one particular man. The thief's violent boorishness was pounded into our heads, over and over, as though we hadn't recognized in the very first scene that he was loathsome. It was a stupid, paralytic approach — just one loud scene of physical and mental brutality after another. This movie deserves its X rating, and all of the commercial inconvenience that goes along with it.

The film quality was exceptionally poor. Everything seemed slightly out of focus (I never could read the items listed on the menus used to signal a change of scene), and the actors' faces were washed-out and bland. It was a chore to keep one's eyes on the screen.

Probably the best indication of the audience's reaction was during the knife-in-the-gullet execution scene, when about 20 people — perhaps a fifth of the total audience — rose en masse and exited in quiet dignity. Way to go, folks.

National Football League commissioner Paul Tagliabue had big shoes to fill when he was finally elected to his post last year. But they weren't the shoes of Pete Rozelle, his predecessor, under whose guidance professional football became the most popular and exciting sport in America.

No, the shoes Tagliabue is expected to fill are those of David Stern, commissioner of the National Basketball Association, under whose guidance professional basketball has become the most popular and exciting sport in not only America, but the world.

In electing their new commissioner, the NFL owners acted as if they were electing a new Pope, and accordingly were ready to let Rozelle actually die before appointing his successor. While Rozelle languished in his own apathetic limbo, the owners struggled over their decision.

Tagliabue's owner patrons were the young turks headed by, one would suspect, San Francisco money bag Eddie DeBartelo, Jr., who was recently accused of buying the four Super Bowls his 49ers won during the 80's.

Hornacek signs seven-year deal

By John Pacenti
The Associated Press

PHOENIX — Phoenix Suns guard Jeff Hornacek officially signed a new seven-year contract with the NBA team Monday worth a reported $10 million.

Suns president Jerry Colangelo said the contract makes Hornacek, a former Iowa State guard, the third-highest paid player on the team.

All-Star guard Kevin Johnson signed a seven-year, $15 million contract last Sept. 14 while All-Star forward Tom Chambers inked a five-year, $9 million deal with Phoenix as the league's first unrestricted free agent on July 5, 1988.

In keeping with club policy, Colangelo would not disclose exact financial terms but sources said the deal was worth between $1.5 million and $2 million per season.

Hornacek, a second-round draft pick in 1986, had two years remaining on his previous contract for about $400,000 per season.

The seven-year deal supersedes the old pact.

Colangelo announced late last season that the team would renegotiate the contract and reward Hornacek "commensurate with his ability."

The 6-foot-4, 190-pound Hornacek averaged 17.6 points last season and was the league's leading field goal shooter among guards at 53.6 percent. He also ranked 11th in 3-point shooting at 40.8 percent.

Colangelo called Hornacek "an overachiever with tremendous heart" and one of the two best guards in the NBA.

He added that the contract will See Hornacek, Page 2B

NCAA asks Illinois for additional info

The Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — The NCAA will not decide whether Illinois violated recruiting rules until it receives additional information from the university, the school announced Monday.

Judy Rowan, associate chancellor for public affairs, said the information does not relate to any of the major allegations against the university's basketball program.

The NCAA issued an official letter of inquiry in February accusing Illinois of offering cash and cars to top recruits.

The university presented its response before the Committee on Infractions Aug. 12 in Colorado Springs.

Illinois officials will meet again with the NCAA at Overland Park, Kan., on Sept. 29 to provide the latest information sought by the committee.

No ruling is expected until after that session, the university's announcement said.

Hot Blue Jays pick up fifth in a row

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Toronto Blue Jays chipped another half-game off Boston's lead in the American League East on Monday night, defeating the staggering Kansas City Royals 6-1 as Kelly Gruber drove in four runs.

The Blue Jays, who trailed by 6½ games a week ago, won their fifth straight while Boston was splitting a doubleheader with Milwaukee, including George Brett's league-leading 43rd double. He retired 16 consecutive batters before John Candelaria pitched the ninth.

Hector Wagner, a 21-year-old right-hander who spent the season at Class AA Memphis, lost his major league debut. He gave up six runs — five earned — and 10 hits in 6½ innings.

Red Sox 5-1, Brewers 4-6
BOSTON — Dave Parker hit his 21st home run and Robin Yount continued his climb on the all-time hit list as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Boston Red Sox 6-1 for a split of Monday's two-night doubleheader.

The Red Sox won the opener 5-4 as Luis Rivera keyed a four-run fourth inning with a two-run double and Greg Harris posted a career-high 13th victory.

Yount went 3-for-4 in the first game, breaking a tie with Lou Gehrig for 38th place among baseball's all-time hit leaders. He went 2-for-3 in the nightcap for 2,726 career hits.

Boston began the evening 4½ games ahead of Toronto in the American League East.

Pirates 3, Phillies 2
PHILADELPHIA — Bobby Bonilla's ninth-inning sacrifice fly enabled the Pittsburgh Pirates to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 and maintain their 3½-game lead in the NL East.

Pinch-hitter Wally Backman walked leading off the ninth, advanced to second on Jay Bell's 34th sacrifice of the season and moved to third on an infield single by Jeff King before scoring the Pirates' winning run.

Pirates reliever Stan Belinda (3-4) nailed down the victory when he got pinch-hitter Rod Booker on a forceout at the plate on an attempted squeeze play and retired Darren Daulton on a fly ball.

Mets 10, Cardinals 1
NEW YORK — Darryl Strawberry hit his 32nd home run and drove in three runs Monday night as Frank Viola and the New York Mets began a key homestand with a victory, beating the St. Louis Cardinals 10-1.

Strawberry also doubled and singled as the Mets returned to Shea Stadium following a 2-6 road trip that dropped them 3½ games behind Pittsburgh in the National League East.

The Mets, the best home team in baseball at 47-22 after their eighth consecutive victory, play 10 straight at home while the Pirates play 10 in a row on the road.

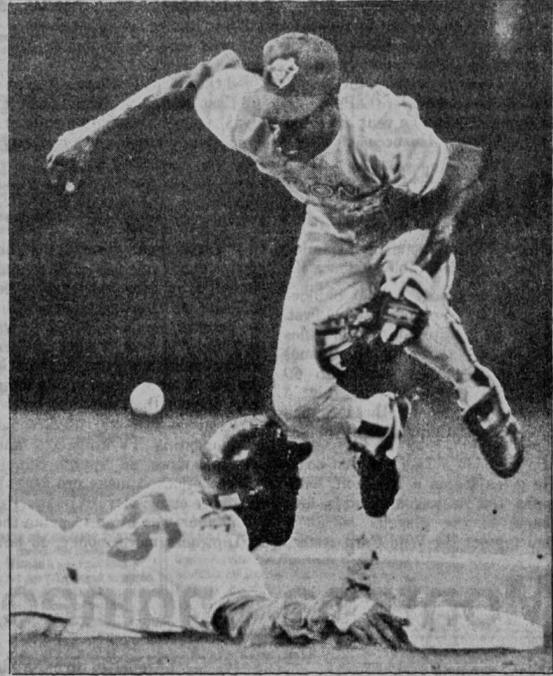

Viola (18-9), second in the league in victories, is 3-0 against St. Louis this season and 5-1 lifetime.

Indians 3-2, White Sox 2-6
CLEVELAND — Eric King got his first win since June 27 and Bobby Thigpen extended his major-league record to 49 saves as the Chicago White Sox ended a four-game losing streak and beat the Cleveland Indians 6-2 for a split of Monday's two-night Monday.

Cleveland won the opener 3-2 when pinch-hitter Carlos Baerga drew a bases-loaded walk from reliever Barry Jones with one out in the ninth inning. Doug Jones (5-5) got the victory, striking out two batters with a runner at third in the top of the ninth.

Chicago's Carlton Fisk had a home run in each game, giving him 17 for the season and 49 since he turned 40 years old.

The split didn't help Chicago, which began play 9½ games behind Oakland in the American League West. See Baseball, Page 2B

BYU shakes up college poll

By Rick Warner
The Associated Press

Brigham Young's upset of top-ranked Miami caused a major shakeup in The Associated Press college football poll on Monday, lifting Notre Dame to No. 1, catapulting BYU to No. 5 and plunging Miami to No. 10.

Notre Dame, which opens its season Saturday against Michigan, received 37 first-place votes and 1,451 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Fighting Irish were No. 2 last week.

"It doesn't matter who's ranked number one through the season," Notre Dame linebacker Michael Stonebreaker said. "The only thing that matters is who's ranked number one at the end of the season."

Auburn, which shared the No. 3 spot with Florida State last week, rose to No. 2 after beating Fullerton State 38-17. Florida State remained in third after downing East Carolina 45-24.

Auburn received eight first-place votes and 1,385 points, while Florida State received 11 first-place votes and 1,367 points.

Idle Michigan moved up one spot to No. 4, while BYU jumped 11 places to No. 5 — the highest ranking for the Cougars since they won the 1984 national championship. Three voters were so impressed by BYU's 28-21 victory over Miami that they made the Cougars No. 1 on their ballots.

"The guys are really excited," BYU coach LaVell Edwards said. "But like I told them after the game, there's good news and there's bad news. The good news is that we just beat Miami. The bad news is that it's only the second game of the season."

Southern Cal, which had the week off, rose one place to No. 6. Tennessee also moved up a notch, to No. 7, after trouncing Mississippi State 40-7.

Nebraska got one first-place and moved up two spots to No. 8 following its 60-14 rout of Northern Illinois. Big Eight rival Colorado fell three places to No. 9 after barely beating Stanford 21-17 on Thursday.

Miami dropped to No. 10, its lowest ranking since occupying the same spot in the 1987 preseason poll. The Hurricanes haven't been this low in a regular-season poll since the ninth week of the 1985 season, when they were No. 11.

Notre Dame insists No. 1 not important

By Thomas P. Wyman
The Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame players began talking about the No. 1 ranking as soon as Miami lost, but the Irish insisted Monday the polls don't matter.

"That's what people have been talking about since Miami got beat," quarterback Rick Mirer said. "But we're not changing any of our ideas or any of our focus towards Saturday's game."

So never mind the polls. Irish eyes are glued to Saturday's season opener against No. 4 Michigan. Next week's list won't be so kind if Notre Dame stumbles.

For now, Notre Dame is No. 1 in The Associated Press college football poll, taking the spot Miami lost after the Hurricanes' 28-21 defeat by Brigham Young. The Irish moved from No. 2 without ever taking the field.

Take care of each game, says Coach Lou Holtz, and the polls and bowls will fall into place. His players learned long ago to pick up the chant.

Even if the Irish place little stock in the polls, the team was pleased to have some good news at last. The Notre Dame football program has been rocked recently by allegations of steroid use, Holtz's supposed abuse of injured players and recruiting violations.

Expos 7, Cubs 4
 CHICAGO — Tim Wallach had two hits and two RBIs and rookie Chris Nabholz won for the fifth time in his last six starts as the Montreal Expos beat the Chicago Cubs 7-4.

Nabholz (5-0), yet to lose in the majors after seven starts, pitched five innings and gave up four runs on seven hits. He struck out four and walked four before getting relief help from Dale Mahoric. Tim Burke got the last out for his 18th save.

Cubs reliever Mitch Williams, named as the starter just before game time, lasted three innings and gave up four runs on four hits and two walks while striking out one.

Rangers 1, Yankees 0
 NEW YORK — Rafael Palmeiro's single with two out in the 11th inning following an intentional walk to Julio Franco drove in pinch-runner Kevin Belcher and gave the Texas Rangers a 1-0 victory over the New York Yankees on Monday night.

Palmeiro's hit made a winner of Kenny Rogers (8-5), the third of three Texas pitchers. Gary Mielke went two-thirds of an inning and Mike Jeffcoat retired the last batter for his fourth save.

Rookies Scott Chiamparino of Texas and Dave Eiland of New York both pitched brilliantly. Chiamparino, making his second major league start after being acquired from Oakland in the Harold Baines deal last week, gave up four hits in seven innings, walking one and striking out four.

Tigers 8, Orioles 0
 BALTIMORE — Frank Tanana

allowed three hits over seven innings and Lou Whitaker broke and 0-for-25 slump with a homer and three RBIs as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Baltimore Orioles 8-0 Monday night.

Tanana (7-7), who entered the game with a 6.06 ERA, struck out five and did not allow a runner past first base in winning for only the second time since June 14.

Mike Henneman and Jerry Don Gleaton each worked one inning as the Tigers pitched consecutive shutouts for the first time since 1985.

Hornacek

keep Hornacek with the Suns for the rest of his career.

Suns head coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said signing Hornacek is an important step in moving Phoenix closer to an NBA title, which has eluded the franchise in its 22-year history.

"The thing that makes me the happiest is here is a guy that walked on at Iowa State and he showed them he could play," Fitzsimmons said. "He was then drafted 46th by the Suns and he showed the Suns he can play and last year he showed the NBA he could play."

"I know I don't have the athletic ability that a lot of the guys in the league have but I know I can overcome that with my smarts," Hornacek said.

Hornacek, holding his 11-week-old son Ryan for much of the news conference, credited some of his success to Colangelo.

"Jerry told me I had to change my shot," Hornacek said. "My dad tried to tell me for years to try to change it, but he was never paying me."

Bob Woolf, the Boston-based attorney for Hornacek, arrived Saturday to finalize the negotiations. Woolf also represents forward Jason Williams, the Suns' first-round draft pick out of St. John's who was taken 21st overall despite missing most of last season with a fractured right foot.

Williams reportedly was set to sign a one-year, $1.5 million contract with the pro Italian team Il Messaggero last week, but now wants to re-open negotiations with Phoenix.

Woolf said he will bring the 6-foot-10, 240-pound Williams here today to meet with Colangelo.

follow-up information from the university," the school said in a statement issued Monday.

"The NCAA asked for further information on items that were discussed only briefly during the university's August appearance before the committee," the statement said.

In its February letter, the NCAA alleged that in 1987, Illinois offered one high school player (LaPhonso Ellis of East St. Louis Lincoln) $5,000 to sign and $5,000 a year to attend Illinois, as well as an automobile.

The NCAA also accused Illinois of offering another player (Deon Thomas of Chicago Simeon) $80,000 in 1989 to sign and a Chevrolet Blazer upon enrollment.

Ellis eventually signed with Notre Dame. Thomas signed with Illinois but was not allowed to join the team during the investigation and eventually red-shirted for the 1989-90 season.

Thomas has denied any improper inducements from the university.

The university has barred assistant coach Jimmy Collins from recruiting.

Shipley

a perfectly luminous replay failed to provide "irrefutable evidence."

Tagliabue's next official blunder only served to perpetuate his first, when he instituted several rules aimed at shortening the games (perhaps a secret pact with 60 Minutes?). Already he has hinted at reneging some of these to tack on an extra minute here or there.

So what does Tagliabue do next? He gives teams a week off, elongates the season and adds four teams to the playoffs — as if figuring out the Wild Card system isn't punishment enough for the dying breed we call professional football fans. Now they are to be subjected to the any team within two percentage points of .500 makes the playoffs system that makes hockey more unbearable than it already is and drags the winter sport of basketball into mid-June.

This at least makes fiscal sense by elongating TV contracts and creating more ad space. But it certainly doesn't make pro football any more enjoyable.

Tagliabue was hired to make the NFL owners more money, so he's tried to fix a system that ain't broke (pun intended). Finks probably would've kept football where it was and belongs, but don't for a second believe his old-guard backers are purists. "Complacents" is more accurate. They're already rich as hell; they just want to keep it that way.

Pro football is going down the toilet because the owners are interested in one thing — money. They see the NBA steal their thunder and have a tizzy because someone's making more money than they are.

Anyone who has witnessed Cleveland owner Art Modell whine and moan about his "hard luck" Browns doesn't have to wonder who accused the 49ers of buying their Super Bowls, or who is worried about getting cheated out of a Super Bowl by a bad call.

And anyone who ends up sitting through a season (or game) that lasts through February shouldn't have to wonder who made up all these stupid new rules. And don't look at the commissioner. John Shipley is the DI Sports copy editor.

Montana engineers last-second win

DI wire services

NEW ORLEANS — Joe Montana drove San Francisco 60 yards in the final two minutes to set up Mike Cofer's game-winning 38-yard field goal with nine seconds to play on Monday night as San Francisco got off to a stumbling but successful start in its quest for a third straight NFL title by beating New Orleans 13-12.

The 49ers, who fell behind 12-10 on Morten Andersen's fourth field goal with 9:18 to play, got the ball for the last time on their own 19 with 1:30 left and no timeouts. Then Montana, who had been sacked six times, hit John Taylor for 25 yards, his longest completion of the night, to start the drive.

On a third-and-6 at the New Orleans 48, he hit Roger Craig for 11 yards and then connected with Jerry Rice on a 20-yard completion to set up Cofer's winning kick.

Montana, under pressure all night from linebackers Rickey Jackson and Pat Swilling and a group of interchangeable linemen, didn't fare much better at the scene of one his greatest triumphs — the 55-10 win at the Superdome last January that made the 49ers the first repeat NFL winner in a decade — until the final drive. In this, the first game of what the 49ers call the "Threepeat" year, he went 26-for-43 for 210 yards.

Andersen's field goals of 41, 39, 28 and 32 yards weren't enough to overcome the self-destructive tendencies of the New Orleans offense and John Fourcade, who threw two interceptions with the Saints in range of the San Francisco goal line and finished with just 12 completions in 34 attempts for 186 yards. They also got just three points from two San Francisco turnovers inside their own 25.

Peeler could be ineligible

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Junior guard Anthony Peeler has enrolled for the fall semester at the University of Missouri, but school officials haven't determined whether he'll be eligible to play.

Peeler completed the registration process Monday, the university's Sports News Service said.

Peeler, from Kansas City, averaged 16.8 points and 5.4 rebounds for the Tigers last season, 179 assists and 63 steals.

LOS ANGELES — The epilogue of a dramatic and emotional six-month melodrama at Loyola Marymount was played out Monday in the building where it all began when Jay Hillock was introduced as the school's new head coach.

Hillock, 41, was promoted from his job as an assistant to replace Paul Westhead just three days after Westhead left suddenly to become head coach of the NBA's Denver Nuggets.

"I am not Paul Westhead, and for me to emulate him would be a real mistake," said Hillock, who was hired by Westhead in 1985. "I am, however, committed to pressing and running on each and every possession."

CASTELFRANCO VENETO, Italy — Ben Johnson, declaring himself fit and clean, confirmed Monday he will begin his comeback in January following a two-year suspension for steroid use.

Johnson said he wants to win the world and Olympic titles over the next two years and regain the world record in the 100 meters.

"I want to take back the titles and the records I have been deprived of," Johnson said at a news conference.

The Canadian said his first meet would be the Hamilton Spectator Games at Hamilton, Ontario, on Jan. 11.

Open surprises end season of upsets

By Steve Wilsten
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The wind swirled as the U.S. Open ended a turbulent Grand Slam season and began the 1990s with fresh faces, new champions and the hint of a revival by an aging master.

Parity has come to tennis after two decades of dominance by a handful of superstars.

Pete Sampras and Gabriela Sabatini made the leap to the upper echelon of the sport by capturing their first major titles, each playing net-charging games that feature power and quickness.

Sampras, 19, the youngest U.S. men's champion in history, jumped from 12th to sixth in the ATP rankings Monday after beating Andre Agassi in the final on a chilly, breezy Sunday evening to win the $350,000 top prize.

Sabatini, 20, beat two-time defending champion Steffi Graf in the women's final with a surprisingly good new net game and boosted her standing in Monday's Virginia Slims ranking. Sabatini, who also pocketed $350,000, is still No. 4, but the points she picked up by winning the Open narrowed the gap between her and No. 3 Monica Seles.

For the first time since 1966, eight different players claimed the top honors in tennis this year: Ivan Lendl and Steffi Graf won the Australian Open; Andre Gomez and Monica Seles won the French; Stefan Edberg and Martina Navratilova won Wimbledon; and Sampras and Sabatini took the U.S. titles.

"There are no easy matches anymore because there are too many good young players," Lendl said after losing to Sampras last week in the quarterfinals.

Navratilova, who lost in the fourth round to Manuela Maleeva-Fragniere, shared the same opinion about the women's game.

"It's good that there are surprises. It's not as predictable as it once was," she said.

It was more than exciting, it was chaotic, a random assault on the biggest names in the game from start to finish: Edberg, the top seed, blown out in the first round by Alexander Volkov; Becker, No. 2, blasted in the semis by Agassi; No. 3 Lendl gone in the quarters; No. 8 Brad Gilbert knocked out in the third round by Amos Mansdorf; No. 11 Michael Chang beaten in the third round by Andrei Cherkasov.

On the women's side, the most notable early casualty was Monica Seles, taken out in the third round by Italy's Linda Ferrando, who was in turn beaten by Soviet Leila Meskhi.

The young unknowns were riding high, but coming along with them until the final weekend was a 31-year-old who believes he may have at least one more championship left in him.

John McEnroe, a bandanna around his forehead and hope in his heart, played some of the most masterful tennis of the tournament until he lost to a stronger, quicker and more accurate Sampras in the semifinals.

McEnroe moved up from 20th to 11th in Monday's rankings and said he plans to continue his comeback. His next Grand Slam event will be Australia, where he started the year by getting tossed out after a cursing and racket-throwing tantrum.

Edberg remains No. 1 for the moment, with Becker second, Lendl third, Agassi fourth and Gomez fifth. But Sampras is coming on strong and McEnroe is threatening.

Infante happy with two quarterbacks

By Rick Gano
The Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Anthony Dilweg helped the Green Bay Packers to their first season-opening victory since 1984 in his first NFL start.

Don Majkowski, who signed a million-dollar contract last week, stood on the sidelines cheering as Dilweg threw three touchdown passes.

So who'll be the quarterback this week when the Packers face the Chicago Bears?

Coach Lindy Infante said Monday he doesn't know and might not for several days.

"The door is certainly open. We'll wait and see as the week progresses. I'm not going to make the decision until I'm forced to at end of the week," Infante said.

"I went into this game hoping we'd have a raging quarterback controversy when it was over because that would have meant Anthony went in and played good and we won the game. We came out of this exactly where I wanted to come out."

But now the quarterback question lingers. Dilweg completed 20 of 32 passes for 248 yards without an interception in a 36-24 victory over the Los Angeles Rams.

"Anthony certainly played rather well," Infante said.

Dilweg got his chance because Majkowski held out for 45 days before signing a one-year contract with a $1.5 million base salary and incentives.

Majkowski was rusty after four practices but by the end of this week will probably be ready to play.

So how can a Pro Bowl quarterback be paid $1.5 million to signal in plays from the sidelines?

But can the team afford to tamper with success by yanking Dilweg after his successful debut?

"You got to have two good quarterbacks to play in this business during the course of the season," Infante said. "I said all along I had confidence in Anthony and I think he did a fine job.

"Certainly there will be speculation as to what is going to happen here in the future but it's a very, very positive coaching dilemma."

Infante usually prefers to pick one quarterback and, as he puts it, give him "the lion's share of the work."

But Majkowski's holdout changed that. He and Dilweg will receive equal practice time this week.

"If you design things, you have a quarterback who is your starter and it's very clear," Infante said.

"We didn't design the holdout, so therein lies the difference in what is ideal and what is reality. We have a quarterback who wasn't here all training camp and who was our starter last year and may in fact be that before long. We have a guy who went into a game and played well and we won and the team responded to him."

Dilweg, who threw only one pass as Majkowski's backup in 1989, said Monday, just as he did after Sunday's game, that he'd accept Infante's decision. He said Monday the subject of the starting quarterback for the Bears' game hadn't been discussed.

"That's the coach's decision. My job is to make it tough for him," Dilweg said. "He's got to make that decision and I'll support it 100 percent."

Majkowski was happy for Dilweg and even ribbed him Sunday about the swarm of reporters clustering around his locker because they were blocking the adjacent one occupied by Majkowski.

It was a one-game role reversal. Dilweg had put up with the same conditions last year when Majkowski was always the center of attention.

"I don't really have anything to say. We'll just wait and see," Majkowski said Monday. He also said he hadn't discussed with Infante who might start Sunday.

"It's only fair to him (Majkowski) to give him as many opportunities as we can to try to win this spot back but at the same time what's the most important thing is being fair to the team," the coach said.

Best vs. worst: Athletics 12, Yankees 0

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — So now we know exactly how much better baseball's best team, the Oakland Athletics, is than its worst, the New York Yankees.

The Athletics are so good that they probably could play an entire year and not lose to the Yankees. In fact, they did.

"I never say a team can't beat a great team," Rickey Henderson said. "On any given day they could beat us, I guess."

Maybe, but they didn't.

The U.S. kids win the Little League World Series once in a while, college teams beat the pros occasionally in spring training and women's All-Star softball squads sometimes beat big leaguers in exhibitions.

And even the worst team in major-league history, the 1962 New York Mets, managed to beat everyone, albeit that they went 2-16 against Pittsburgh and Los Angeles.

But in 1990, the Yankees could not beat Oakland.

The A's, a sweeping success in last year's World Series, finished off the first-ever season sweep against the Yankees on Sunday, winning 7-3.

Oakland won all 12 games in completing just the fourth season sweep in big-league history. Each has come since 1969, when division play cut down the number of games teams used to play against each other — as many as 22 — to 12 in most East-West matchups.

In the other sweeps, Kansas City was 12-0 against Baltimore in 1988, Baltimore went 11-0 versus Oakland in 1978 and Baltimore was 12-0 against Kansas City in 1970.

This time, from Bob Welch's 6-0 victory on April 30 to Dave Stewart's 7-3 win Sunday, it was another awesome effort by the A's.

Here are the numbers:
■ Oakland outscored the Yankees 62-12, including four shutouts. Only one game was decided by one run and at home, the A's won six times by a total of 31-4.

■ Oakland outhit the Yankees 112-68. Willie McGee joined the A's last week and still had time to chip in six hits.

■ Oakland outthrew the Yankees 13-4. Henderson, Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco each hit four for the A's, and McGwire drove in 11 runs, one short of the Yankees' season total.

Never before had a Yankees team failed to win at least two games against another club in a season. The 1912 edition was 2-19 against Boston and the 1982 version went 2-11 versus Baltimore, but nothing like this year.

"We wanted this game a lot," Steve Sax said after New York's final defeat. "We're out of the race, but we realized we'd lost 11 games to them."

The Yankees came out determined to win. Tim Lary's second pitch of the game narrowly missed Henderson, who homered twice Saturday night to spark a late rally, and the two had words.

New York did overcome an early 3-0 deficit and bounced back to tie it in the seventh inning, but Oakland scored four runs in the ninth.

That made it 14 straight for the A's over New York. The last time New York beat Oakland, George Steinbrenner was still running the Yankees, Bucky Dent was the manager, Don Mattingly was healthy and Dave Winfield wasn't — and that was only a year ago last Saturday.

"A lot has changed," said former Yankees co-captain Willie Randolph, now Oakland's second baseman. "They're a young team and they'll get better. We all take our lumps."

Not Oakland, at least not these days. The Athletics lead the American League West by 9½ games and are 89-50; the Yankees are 57-82 and may lose more than 90 games for the first time since 1913.

Maybe it will be different the next time the A's and New York meet — April 30, 1991, in Oakland, according to next season's preliminary schedule.

Henderson, though, isn't so sure. He was traded from the Yankees to the A's last summer for Greg Cadaret, Eric Plunk and Luis Polonia and since then, Oakland is 16-2 against New York.

"I still never really understood why they traded me," Henderson said.

So what if he was still with the Yankees? "They might have won 20 or 30 more games this year," he said, grinning.

BATMAN AND CHIP: Seems as though with everyone coming back and finally being together again, we've lost track of a few things. I think it's time for an update... Batman saw Wonderwoman the weekend and as usual, things were BatWonderful. Chip has been bonding with the rental units. And I, Buffy, as usual am living for the future, (interesting situation with the Falcon as he has been returning to the nest a lot lately). But, I think it is time to pull the ranks back together since our time as one is growing shorter all the time- December is just around the corner. Let's make some plans and watch Batmovies and play with our Batoys soon. Be cool, not that I have to tell you guys that!
Gushy, smushy smackers, Buffy

Indianapolis Colts rookie quarterback Jeff George is attended to by team physicians after being sacked by the Bills' Cornelius Bennett in the fourth quarter of Sunday's game in Buffalo. George left the game with a headache but said he would be back at the Colts' practice today.

George survives NFL debut

By Aaron Watson
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Jeff George awoke Monday with a massive headache and a stiff neck.

The pain wasn't a reminder of the quarterback's impressive NFL debut Sunday in the Indianapolis Colts' 26-10 loss to Buffalo. It was simply the result of Cornelius Bennett's crushing hit that forced George out of the game in the fourth quarter.

A checkup at Methodist Hospital showed no serious injuries, and a confident George said that after a day off, he'll be back at work on Wednesday to prepare for Sunday's home debut against the New England Patriots.

As Bennett sacked George, the quarterback banged the back of his head against the artificial turf at Rich Stadium.

"I just got a headache, it comes with the territory," said George, who participated in light running drills at the Colts' training complex on Monday. "Whenever you play a defense like Buffalo, it's always going to cause some problems."

"I was more upset that we were still in the game at that time and I had to come out."

George, who was 13-for-26 for 160 yards, had brought the Colts back into the game in the second half with a drive that led to a touchdown and cut the Bills' lead to 16-10.

After he left, however, the Colts collapsed and Buffalo cruised to the victory.

George said he was happy to get his first regular-season NFL game under his belt and didn't see Bennett's unceremonious welcome to the league as an omen.

He shrugged off the Colts' so-called quarterback jinx, which has left the team with injured quarterbacks for the past several years.

"I never worry about that. You can get hurt outside football, even walking to your car. You never know," he said.

But for a few hours on Sunday, Colts fans held their breath. After Bennett's sack, George couldn't see or keep his balance and had to be driven back to the Colts' locker room. He bruised the back of his brain that controls his vision, Coach Ron Meyer said.

"He took a very hard hit," Meyer said. "He was conscious but he couldn't see. Fortunately, the injury looks like one he will come back from."

George signed a six-year, $15 million contract.

"We're going to come back raring to go. I think I could be ready to go tomorrow," George said. "Headaches don't last that long."

Top teams already hurting

By Jim Golen
The Associated Press

Just two weeks into the college football season, injuries have knocked out star players from top teams.

Consider:

■ Houston wide receiver Manny Hazard, who had an NCAA-record 142 catches last season, is out for three weeks with a dislocated elbow sustained in the Cougars' 37-9 victory over UNLV on Saturday. Houston is ranked 18th.

■ Alabama running back Siran Stacy, the team's leading rusher, is out for the year after injuring his right knee in the third quarter of Saturday's 27-24 loss to Southern Mississippi.

■ Chuck Webb, who rushed for 1,236 yards last season, went down for the season with torn ligaments on his third carry in Tennessee's 55-7 rout of Pacific on Sept. 1. The Volunteers are No. 7 in this week's poll.

On Monday, Stacy underwent surgery.

"I'm just so down," Stacy said before the surgery. "I was expecting a lot out of this season."

It gets worse for Alabama. Stacy's top backup, Derrick Lassic, also was injured on Saturday.

"Siran had the potential to be the best back I've ever been around," Stallings said. "Siran always played hard, in games and in practice. He had a bright professional future and that's the direction he was looking."

Hazard, who also set Southwest Conference records with 1,689 yards and 22 touchdowns in 1989, had two catches for nine yards before he was hurt.

Cavs blew opportunity to get cheaper Hot Rod

By Chuck Melvin
The Associated Press

STRONGSVILLE, Ohio — The Cleveland Cavaliers gambled and lost when they failed to sign restricted free agent John Williams to a long-term contract last winter, Williams' agent said Monday.

Friday, the Cavaliers retained Williams by matching the Miami Heat's seven-year, $26.5 million offer sheet for the 6-foot-11 forward. Under the contract, Williams will get $5 million in salary and bonuses this season, making him the NBA's highest-paid player in 1990-91.

Cleveland could have kept Williams for far less, probably less than half the price, if it had reached a deal with him early last season, Williams and his agent, Mark Bartelstein, indicated at a news conference.

"We constantly tried to get something worked out, even before we went and talked to other teams," Bartelstein said. "We called them before the free-agent market opened up and said, 'Listen, we're thinking about getting an offer sheet, and if we do get an offer sheet, it's going to be gigantic.'"

Cleveland reportedly could have signed Williams to a five-year, $10 million contract if it had acted before last January. Two months later, when the Cavaliers said they would agree to those terms, Williams and Bartelstein turned them down.

"When we made the proposal to the Cavaliers, it was clear we wanted a decision on it immediately," Bartelstein said. "We were dealing with the risk of injury and we were getting closer to free agency. So when they came back later and basically said we'll match your proposal from a couple months earlier, it didn't make any sense at that point. Another 20-some odd games had gone by."

Walsh says Hampton should quit

CHICAGO (AP) — Bill Walsh, former coach of the San Francisco 49ers, says Dan Hampton's knees are in such bad shape that the Chicago Bears' defensive tackle should quit playing football.

"He shouldn't be playing football ever again," Walsh, now a commentator, said Sunday on NBC-TV.

"Ten knee operations. He talks about his knees — they're so stiff he can't walk. The day before the game they have to be drained."

Walsh, who won three Super Bowls with the 49ers, said Hampton could end up in a wheelchair if he doesn't quit.

"The player is going to play as long as he can," Walsh said. "He has a huge heart and he loves the game and it's part of his life. He has to be helped with his decision."

But Hampton dismissed Walsh's statements, saying, "I don't have any doubts about what I can do this year."
