Souter refuses to discuss views on abortion during hearings

By Richard Carelli
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee David Souter firmly refused to discuss his views on abortion Thursday as the Senate Judiciary Committee opened confirmation hearings. Democrats promised to continue pressing him on that and other controversial issues.

Souter told Senators it would be inappropriate for him to discuss such a hotly contested constitutional matter as abortion, though he said he accepted the constitutional right of privacy on which the Supreme Court based its abortion-legalizing 1973 decision, Roe vs. Wade.

The New Hampshire judge, nominated by President Bush to be the court's 105th justice, spoke slowly and somberly in the crowded Senate hearing room of the position he called "the greatest responsibility that any judge in our republic can undertake."

The court has been deeply divided in recent years with 5-4 rulings on such contentious issues such as abortion and civil rights, and conservatives are hoping that Souter will help anchor the court firmly on the right.

"If the Senate of the United States believes it is right to confirm my nomination, then I will accept those responsibilities as obligations to all of the people of the United States whose lives will be affected by my stewardship of the Constitution," Souter said.

Committee chairman Joseph Biden,

D-Del., then began the long process in which Souter would confront questions from all 14 committee members.

Biden engaged Souter in a dialogue about the right of privacy, which although not specifically mentioned in the Constitution, has been recognized by the Supreme Court since a 1965 decision called Griswold vs. Connecticut.

At one point, Souter talked about a need for the Supreme Court to follow its own precedents — stating that past decisions should be overturned only after careful consideration.

"The first question is whether the prior decision was wrong," he said. And if the court does determine its previous ruling was incorrect, he added, it should measure "the degree and kind of reliance placed upon" the ruling and the "cost of overruling" it.

Souter began his testimony after sitting quietly for two hours while senators made opening statements.

He proved an attentive and respectful witness, though hardly devoid of humor.

When one senator, worried about his questioning time expiring, cut Souter's response to a question short, the nominee quipped, "You're going to turn me into a laconic Yankee if you keep doing that."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., questioned the nominee closely about positions he took while New Hampshire's attorney general and, before that, as an assistant in the attorney general's office.

Kennedy focused on cases in which the state defended a literacy test for prospective voters and resisted federal regulations seeking information about hiring in state government.

In both instances, Souter emphasized, he was "acting as an advocate" and "representing a client." He said both positions were tenable at the time, in the 1970s.

Earlier, Souter said he would view his Supreme Court service as a responsibility "to make the promises of the Constitution a reality for our time and to preserve that Constitution for the generations that will follow us."

Drawing battle lines quickly, Democrats advised him to "open for us the window into your mind" while Republicans told him to keep his own counsel in facing sensitive questions.

'Safe Saturday' continues

By Aaron A. Dolan
and Marc Wallace
The Daily Iowan

If you add 70,000 cheering fans plus 132 cops and throw in a few hundred cans of beer, what do you get?

A lot of energy and potential problems.

"70,000 people gets things going for me," said UI student Bret Madrigal, explaining why he attends the Iowa Hawkeye football games. "There is a lot of energy there. If you're feeling any stress, it's out the window."

But the combination of excess energy and alcohol in Kinnick Stadium can cause problems, according to Lt. Richard Gordon of the Department of Public Safety. Around 132 officers from the Department of Public Safety, the Iowa Highway Patrol and the Two-Star Detective Agency will be at the game to watch for potentially dangerous incidents.

Gordon said ejection and possible criminal charges face individuals who create problems for other fans or are "obviously" intoxicated.

"With that many people, we obviously can't stop everybody," he said. Officers will approach those who draw attention to themselves or drink while next to an officer, Gordon said.

In response to a tradition that probably outdates many UI students, the UI designed a program to "create a better environment for fans to enjoy the game," according to Dean of Students Phillip Jones.

"Safe Saturday" was initially designed to eliminate open fires, loud stereos, open bars and beer trucks outside the stadium, he said. Six years later, it now also prohibits botas, beer cans and other alcoholic containers inside Kinnick.

To alleviate any confusion about what is or is not allowed, the UI Athletic Department sent a pamphlet to all season ticket holders indicating no "botas, coolers, cans, bottles, banners, seat backs, noisemakers, horns, bugles, video cameras or any other disruptive devices" will be allowed in the stadium.

In addition, no objects may be thrown from or in the stands — including bodies.

An activity involving the hand-over-hand passing of a fan — usually female — to the top of the stadium is also prohibited for safety reasons.

"We stop that due to possible injury to the person being passed," Gordon said.

"It's time that we ask the students to be responsible for their own actions so that everyone can have an enjoyable day," said William Fuhrmeister, director of the UI Department of Public Safety.

Gordon said the program has curtailed the number of arrests for public intoxication.

Five years ago it was not uncommon for eight or nine people to be arrested for public intoxication each year, he said, adding that last year only five people were arrested all season.

Parking areas will open at 7 a.m. on football Saturdays, and traffic control will continue two hours after the game. No beer trucks, kegs or open bars are allowed in UI parking areas, and no open fires, amplified sound or alcoholic beverages are permitted in the

To Park Or Not To Park ...

- Free UI parking at Hancher Auditorium, Finkbine Golf Course and the UI Softball Complex
- Free RV parking at Finkbine Golf Course
- Free UI Campus service will shuttle fans from the Pentacrest and Hancher to and from the stadium, starting two hours before game time (the return pickup point is at the Hospital School on Newton Road)
- The free shuttle serves fans who use the two municipal ramps on Burlington Street (1,450 cars) or who park elsewhere in downtown Iowa City. By riding the shuttle, fans avoid traffic congestion near the stadium.
- Public parking will be permitted in the UI Main Library lot on football Saturdays. The charge will be 30 cents per hour.
- Parking for persons with disabilities will be reserved in hospital Ramp II until 30 minutes before kickoff. The charge for ramp parking near the stadium is $4 per vehicle.
- Space for 2,000 cars is available in UI lots near the stadium, weather permitting. The charge is $4 per vehicle.
- Due to construction, surface parking will not be permitted in the area immediately east of the stadium and south of Hospital Ramp II.

UI parking ramps near the stadium.

But these rules don't interfere with a good time, according to UI student Jennifer Ormsby.

She described activity within the stadium as "a party without music. We go to watch our friends and cheer the team."

"You feel a friendship with a lot of strangers," added UI student Stewart Senger. "We're having fun, for the team."
Game time is 1:05 p.m.

Faculty letter urges Rawlings not to appeal

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

The letter UI President Hunter Rawlings received in his mail yesterday had a simple and direct message: Do not appeal the Jean Jew case.

The letter, signed by 93 faculty and staff from four UI colleges, was sent to Rawlings and Vice President Peter Nathan Thursday to demonstrate that a large portion of the UI community wants to see the five-year-long harassment case put to an end.

The letter reads:

"As concerned members of the University community, we urge the University of Iowa not to appeal the federal court judgment in Professor Jean Jew's case. We believe that the University's efforts could be more productively directed towards creating a hospitable professional environment for women in the university community."

On Aug. 28, a U.S. district court judge found the UI and the state Board of Regents liable for harassment against Jew, an associate professor in the UI Department of Anatomy.

Jew filed suit against the UI and the regents in 1985, stating that she had been harassed by members of the anatomy department who, for more than 12 years, spread rumors that she was having a sexual relationship with former department head Terence Williams.

Federal District Court Judge Harold Viotor ruled that the UI failed to respond adequately to Jew's formal complaints — even after a faculty committee found in 1984 that Jew had been harassed.

Viotor ordered the UI to promote Jew to full professor with back pay and benefits retroactive to 1984.

Rawlings said the UI has not yet decided on whether it will appeal. The deadline for the decision is two weeks from today.

Those who oppose an appeal say it would send the wrong message about the UI's concern over the

700 expected for UI Parents' Weekend activities

By Cynthia Taylor
The Daily Iowan

Seven hundred parents and students are expected to "Follow the Black and Gold Road" through Parents' Weekend, which begins today.

The theme, developed by the Student Alumni Association, the Alumni Association and the Parents' Association, ties together the events scheduled for parents and students this weekend.

The Friday night performance of "Mame" will be one of two main attractions for participants, said Barb Standish of the Alumni Association. Over 600 tickets have been sold for the Broadway musical featuring Juliet Prowse.

Standish anticipates Jim Wand's hypnotist show to be another popular event.

"It's one of the center attractions because both parents and students ... participate," she said. "We did it last year and it was very successful."

Today's activities include tours of Carver-Hawkeye Arena, backstage of the "Mame" set at Hancher Auditorium and the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

This afternoon, UI professors Don Pope-Davis and David Schoenbaum will share their views on contemporary issues. Pope-Davis, professor of education, will direct a student discussion on the ethnic climate at the UI.

Schoenbaum, professor of history, will present "Coming In Out of the Cold War," a survey of social and political change in eastern and central Europe.

"If I were the President of the U.S., it would be a State of the Union address," he said. "It's a serious effort to talk about things we don't usually talk about on campus — what the end of the Cold War means for the campus, the community and the United States."

After a reception later in the afternoon with UI President Hunter Rawlings, participants can attend either "Mame" or the Farm Scholarship basketball game, featuring Hawkeye alumni.

Saturday morning features tours of the Old Capitol, downtown Iowa City, the UI Museum of Art and the Museum of Natural History.

At 1 p.m., the Hawkeye football team takes on Cincinnati at Kinnick Stadium. UI Mom and Dad of the Year will be announced at the pre-game tailgate event.

The program concludes Sunday with early morning golf at Finkbine Golf Course and a farewell brunch.

UI offers aid for faculty, staff with alcohol, drug problems

By Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

After a while, he needed two shots. And then two shots and a beer. It helped him cope with his girlfriend, who was threatening to leave, and it made him a better speaker in class.

Soon, however, students began complaining that John smelled of alcohol when he came to class and that he was sometimes forgetful during lecture. But John was convinced the alcohol was helping, not hurting, his performance.

While John does not exist, there were at least two separate incidents of students complaining about faculty alcoholism to the UI Ombudsperson in 1989.

Job stress, financial difficulties or family problems cause UI faculty members to search for help using alcohol or other drugs, but the Office of Faculty and Staff Services offers another solution.

"Reaching the troubled faculty is made more difficult because of their work environment," said Jim Goldman, manager of staff services. "They don't have the visibility or accountability through the administration."

"Usually these faculty with problems are vulnerable to denial and often are not confronted," Goldman said.

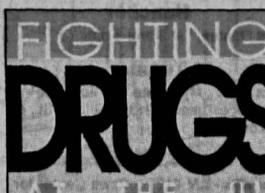

"We hope through education and supervisor training we can make supervisors, departmental deans and the administration more conscious of the problems and get the person some help," Goldman added.

The employee assistance program is a free, confidential, voluntary and safe program for all UI permanent employees and their families who seek assistance, Goldman said.

In 1987, a task force was appointed to explore the need for such a program. Since then, the program has grown tremendously — so much that it has outgrown its staff, according to Peter Nathan, vice president of Academic Affairs.

"For employees, there is the employee assistance program who has 1½ people (working) for 6,000 staff and faculty members," Nathan said. "We have some 5 to 10 percent of those people with alcohol problems, and you get a sense of the inadequacy of the program."

But with the addition of another part-time clinical psychologist,

Last of a 4-part series

Anne Helene Skinstad, Goldman feels the program will be able to meet the university needs.

"Presently, we can meet the request for referrals, but it remains to be seen if we can move as quickly on our other goals," Goldman said.

Skinstad's areas of concentration are general psychological problems, substance abuse and women's issues.

Goldman said the bulk of the program's clientele suffers from relationship problems, with job stress and substance abuse making up a large group also.

The program provides four direct services:

Muslim leaders condemn Iran's 'un-Islamic' actions

By Arthur Allen
The Associated Press

Iraq warned Thursday of possible terrorist attacks against U.S. forces, again sounding the theme of Arab feelings wounded by the presence of non-Muslim soldiers massed in the holy lands of Saudi Arabia.

But a convocation of Muslim clergy in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, condemned the Iraqi annexation of Kuwait and said the U.S.-led multinational force's presence was justified by Iraq's invasion.

The Iraqi warning was contained in a memorandum handed to the U.S. chargé d'affaires in Baghdad, according to the Iraqi News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus. It said Iraq was responding to a U.S. claim that Iraq-based terrorists were preparing to attack U.S. targets.

The United States is creating a "pretext" for aggression, the memorandum was quoted as saying, and "Iraq reserves its legitimate right to self-defense, to reciprocate and to retaliate firmly against these parties if it becomes a target."

"President Bush should expect that the crimes the United States of America is committing against the Arab nation and the insult it is directing to the Islamic shrines by occupying holy lands will undoubtedly produce a natural reaction from the Arab and Islamic masses," said the memorandum.

INA said the U.S. claims were contained in a note delivered Wednesday to the Foreign Ministry in Baghdad.

U.S. officials had no immediate comment. In the past they have noted

Proposed bill would outlaw oil price-gouging

By David Sims
The Daily Iowan
and The Associated Press

Sen. Tom Harkin has voiced his support for a proposal that would make oil price gouging a crime punishable with jail time and a $500,000 fine.

"The National Emergency Anti-Profitting Act of 1990," authored by Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., would enable the president to stop oil companies from using military emergencies to gouge consumers at the gas pump. The measure was unveiled Wednesday at a Capitol Hill news conference.

The act would grant the U.S. attorney general authority to investigate cases of alleged price gouging. In addition, the federal government would have the power to seize any illegally obtained profits from oil companies.

Lorraine Vols, a spokeswoman for Harkin, said the bill is a reaction to the jump in gas prices that occurred after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. The bill would also apply to any future market disruptions of oil or other vital commodities resulting from military actions or natural disasters. Harkin seeks to make the bill retroactive to cover the recent crisis.

Vols said the president could have invoked the powers of the bill if it had been in effect when the crisis began, when prices shot up and the public was angry. He has since asked the oil companies to follow a policy of restraint, and gasoline prices have held steady, she said.

Harkin has been critical of the oil companies' conduct during the crisis, but a spokesman for Amoco Oil Co. in Des Moines said the company has cooperated with the president's request.

"The price of crude oil has gone up more than the price per gallon at the pump," said Dan Savage, public affairs representative for Amoco.

ADL: Public has unbalanced view of Middle East

By Jessica Davidson
The Daily Iowan

Passionate opinions about events in the Middle East are causing people to lose their perspective, and the public should not believe everything it hears and reads, according to Robert Wolfson, director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'Nai B'rith.

Wolfson, who directs the Plains States ADL office, came to Iowa City after reading recent stories in The Daily Iowan and other Iowa City newspapers that "had some inaccuracies in them and things being said that did not provide a balanced view of conflict in the Middle East," he said.

The Anti-Defamation League, established in 1913, is active in educational efforts, monitors extremist groups, and is dedicated to "securing the Jewish people and securing justice for all Americans," Wolfson said.

He said one of inaccuracies was in comparing the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip to the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait. He said he found the comparison "abhorrent."

He said they were isolated events, but some people in the pro-Palestinian community are trying to equate the two. Israelis are in the West Bank and Gaza as the result of a war, while Kuwait was invaded, he said.

"Israel is not in the mainstream of this. This is not a reflection of the Palestinian/Israeli problem. This is a reflection of the Arab problem," he said.

Wolfson also said racist stereotypes and violence against Arabs have come out since the conflict between Iraq and Kuwait began.

"We deplore that kind of prejudice against anybody," he said. "Unfortunately, when things happen in the world and emotions get high, people do lose their sense of balance. But that's not an excuse."

"Most Americans can't tell Japanese and Chinese apart. How are they going to tell different Arabs apart? So they're mad at the Iraqis this week. How do you tell an Iraqi from a Palestinian from a Lebanese? I don't think most Americans do; I think they lump them together as Arabs. And that's terrible. Each of us comes from different traditions and places," Wolfson said.

Wolfson said he encourages people to learn more about the Middle East beyond what they read in the papers or see on television.

"(News) is a product. It has to be limited in scope. Sometimes it's not very contextual; it assumes that all of us have some knowledge. But the Middle East has such a rich and conflicted history, people have to really stop and think," he said.

An Iowa City motorist allegedly struck a bicyclist Wednesday about 5:40 p.m.

A car driven by Jeffrey Burke, 19, 935 Kyle Drive, allegedly struck a bicycle driven by Chase Haldeman, 8, 1765 Washington Drive, according to Johnson County Police records.

The car was traveling west on Rochester Avenue near the intersection with Ashwood Drive while the bicycle was traveling east on Rochester Avenue, records state.

The bicyclist reportedly pulled into a driveway on Rochester Avenue, looked both ways, pulled out and was struck by the car on the crosswalk, records state.

Haldeman was taken to Mercy Hospital with minor injuries, according to police records.

A motorist was charged with failing to yield to a left turn after hitting a bicyclist Tuesday.

According to Johnson County

Police records, the car, driven by Tamera M. Mincks, 22, 320 S. Gilbert St., Apt. 1025, struck a bicyclist, Heather M. Fenyk, 20, 1249 Slater Hall.

Mincks failed to yield to a left turn at the corner of Gilbert Street and Iowa Avenue, records state.

Fenyk was treated and released from UI Hospitals and Clinics.

A Coralville man was charged Tuesday with possession of stolen property.

Michael G. Jondle, 22, 701 8th St., Coralville, bought a stereo radio from his stepbrother for $20 on Sept. 7, said Johnson County District Court records. The defendant knew the radio was stolen and returned it to the rightful owner when confronted by him Tuesday, records state.

The defendant was placed in the custody of the Sixth Judicial District Department of Corrections yesterday. A preliminary hearing will be held Oct. 3.

A Coralville man was charged with fraudulent practices in the second degree Sept. 6.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Jeff E. Wildman, 818½ 12th Ave., Coralville, knowingly falsified Job Service records by indicating that he was unemployed when he was actually employed by Seedorff Masonry, Inc. This allowed him to receive $2,100.20 in unemployment benefits to which he was not entitled, records state.

Wildman was released on his own recognizance, and a preliminary hearing will be held Oct. 3.

Buildings not meeting fire codes; UI granted $2.5 million for safety

Amy Davoux
The Daily Iowan

Light bulbs are exploding in Van Allen Hall. Dwight Nicholson, chairman of the UI Physics and Astronomy department in Van Allen, said a recent $2.5 million fire-safety allocation from the Iowa Legislature is the best news he has heard all day.

"Our light bulbs are exploding — and they start fires when they explode," Nicholson said. "$2.5 million for fire-safety improvements? That's the best news I've heard all day."

Narval Tucker, administrative assistant at the School of Art and Art History, said there is no smoke detector system in the Art Building.

Protection against a fire in that building, he said, means fire extinguishers and exit doors.

Van Allen, the Art Building and nine other buildings top the list of high priorities for the $2.5 million fire-safety grant, according to Jim Coombes, manager of Facilities Planning and Utilization at the UI.

Various other buildings are also considered high-priority because they have been cited by the State Fire Marshall's office as needing more exits, Coombes said.

Although an estimated $5 million is needed to tend to all of the UI deficiencies, half that amount is a step in the right direction, according to Dick Gibson, UI Director of Planning and Administrative Services.

"We'll be lucky if the $2.5 million will take care of half of (the deficiencies)," Gibson said. "Five million is our best guess at this time. Besides, it's a moving target."

Coombes said new deficiencies are identified yearly with the annual State Fire Marshall's office visits.

He said the current list of deficiencies is extensive because a lack of funding delayed some corrective actions by the UI.

"We need to give credit where credit is due," Coombes said. "For years we've yelled and screamed and pounded on the table. Now we're finally getting attention and getting funding."

"From my standpoint, verbal support from legislators is one thing — funding support is the real key."

Avenson proposes economic overhaul

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Democratic candidate for governor Don Avenson on Thursday said he would end state aid for companies that pay less than $6.50 per hour and would eliminate direct grants to businesses.

Proposing a major overhaul of economic development programs in Iowa, Avenson said he would shift to low-interest loans to lure businesses and would focus far more sharply than programs backed by incumbent Republican Gov. Terry Branstad.

Avenson also said he would give local and regional officials more authority to supervise development policies.

"When I'm elected governor the first thing I'm going to do is say no more giveaways," Avenson said. "I think it's time for Iowa to start an economic development policy that lifts the middle class back up."

State programs provide money for new businesses to move to the state or for existing businesses to expand. Avenson said Branstad's handling of those programs has been a disaster.

Avenson said the main failing is that a lot of the money has gone to companies that offer low pay and don't do much to raise workers out of poverty. He set a specific standard he would apply as governor.

"I don't even think we should talk to companies in terms of taxpayer dollars, giving them taxpayer money or lending them taxpayer money unless they pay $6.50, $7.00 an hour or more and benefits," Avenson said.

His comments came at a news conference outside the offices of the Department of Economic Development, which administers the development programs.

Branstad aides rejected the criticism, saying most jobs created by economic development programs are high-paying.

"The average wage for state economic development programs is over $8.70 an hour," said spokesman Dick Vohs. "Communities that request these funds ask for flexibility so that they can develop or work with businesses that are bringing jobs to their towns."

One of the most eagerly sought of the state's development programs is one that gives direct grants to local governments, which in turn give the money to expanding businesses. That program should end, Avenson said.

IC celebrates National Hispanic Month

Events to center on rich cultural heritage

By Risa Grudena
Special to The Daily Iowan

There's more to fall than just football games and Oktoberfest in the Amana. Sept. 15 through Oct. 15 is National Hispanic Month, which will celebrate the diversity and flare of Hispanic culture through lectures, exhibits and social events.

Maria Pineda, a staff member at the Chicano-Indian American Cultural Center, said that the Hispanic population has increased much in recent years and has gained more cultural awareness in the U.S.

"There are now more Hispanics in prominent positions who say 'we have to do something to let people realize that the Hispanics are on the rise,'" she said. "They achieved this through National Hispanic Month."

Although Mexicans compose the bulk of the Hispanic population in the U.S., there are also groups from all the other Latin American countries. Pineda said the reason for the name "Hispanic Month" is to recognize the importance of these other nationalities.

"It gives the different cultures within the Hispanic society recognition and a chance to express themselves," she said.

National Hispanic Month begins the day before Mexican Independence Day, Sept. 16, which for many truly begins the month. Teresa Sierra of Opportunity of Iowa explained that National Hispanic Month overlaps several other Hispanic holidays in September and October.

Many events will take place in Iowa City during the following weeks. On Friday, Sept. 14, the month will be kicked off with a potluck and open house at 5:00 p.m. at the Chicano-Indian American Cultural Center. Then on Sunday, Sept. 16, there will be a picnic celebrating Mexican Independence Day from 1-6 p.m.

On Sept. 26, the Veteran Affairs Medical Center will be holding a cookout and piñata-breaking contest at noon in recognition of Hispanic Month. On Oct. 5 and 6, Iowa City will be hosting the Chicano Conference of the Midwest, featuring several renowned Hispanic speakers from all over the U.S.

National Hispanic Month ends shortly after Columbus Day, Oct. 12. Columbus Day, or Dia de la Raza, is widely celebrated in Latin America as an important reminder of the various ethnic influences introduced to the Americas with the arrival of Christopher Columbus.

The Latin American Student Association, ADELA, will focus its activities on Dia de la Raza and the following week with poetry readings, lectures and videos. ADELA may also hold a peña, which is a gathering of people to play music, read poetry and dance.

There will be other Hispanic Month activities taking place across the state as well. International Day will be celebrated in West Liberty with a dance at the Fairgrounds this Saturday night and a parade at 1:00 p.m. on Sunday afternoon.

National Hispanic Month does not have a long history. The United States Legislature extended National Hispanic Heritage Week to a month in August 1989.

Gov. Terry Branstad signed a proclamation announcing National Hispanic Month for the first time the following month, on Sept. 6, 1989.

Harkin, Tauke get negative, bicker over ads, absenteeism

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa's U.S. Senate race turned sharply negative Thursday as incumbent Democrat Tom Harkin and GOP challenger Tom Tauke fought over campaign ads and congressional attendance records.

Harkin said Tauke has launched a negative advertising campaign and called on him to pull the spots.

"There are some storm clouds on the horizon," Harkin said. "I think he's going to start unloading on me negatively."

Tauke rejected that suggestion and has attacked ads that Harkin has run.

"It will only go further if Senator Harkin takes it there," said Tauke spokesman Allen Finch.

Tauke started the ball rolling when he accused Harkin of missing 44 percent of the recorded votes in a key spending committee on which he sits in the Senate.

"I think he's just not doing the job," Tauke said.

Harkin rejected the charge, saying, "I can assure you nothing goes through appropriations without my knowing about it."

UISA fails to resolve budget disputes

By Marc Morehouse
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Association called a special session Thursday to resolve disputes about the Budget Protocol Act tabled on Tuesday.

But the budget act failed to pass again Thursday because of concerns about the language of the legislation. The UISA will discuss the bill again Sept. 19, its next regular meeting.

At Tuesday's meeting, there was considerable debate on the Student Association Budgeting and Auditing Committee's power to "set a student group's agenda" and decide what is most important on a group's prioritized list of programs.

SABAC changed the language of the proposed legislation to ensure that the agendas of student groups would not be changed by the committee's funding decisions.

"The process hasn't changed. We've moved to eliminate the misconception that SABAC could make changes in a group's funding priorities," said Alan Kistler, chairman of the Bylaws Committee and member of the Graduate and Professional Student Senate.

The main difference between this year's proposed Budget Protocol

Act and last year's system is the procedure for making budget cuts.

Last year, if the budget exceeded its limit, student government could call for an across-the-board percentage cut for all student program funding.

This year's proposal would establish criteria to evaluate individual student programs before deciding if a program should lose its funding.

Criteria for budget cuts include the number of students affected by the funded program and importance of the program to the student organization, according to Tom Lunde, executive officer of the Undergraduate Collegiate Senate.

"This would help SABAC set up guidelines to be objective, without regard to a student group's affiliation and ideology," Lunde said.

But Lunde said SABAC's funding decisions should not affect student group agendas, and groups will be able to hold programs not funded by the UISA.

The UISA also passed the Emergency Grant Authorization Act Thursday, which will access funding for programs scheduled before Nov. 1. Funds will be available immediately.

"The burden of proof is on you," Biden told him. "We have a right to know, and a duty to discover, precisely what you... think about the great constitutional issues of our time."

He urged Souter, "Open for us the window into your mind. And give us a little bit of a glimpse into your heart."

Biden and the committee's two other leading liberals, Kennedy and Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, asked Souter to discuss candidly his views of key issues on which the Supreme Court is closely divided.

But Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the committee's ranking Republican, said his colleagues had no right "to question a nominee about how he or she would decide a particular case. It is inappropriate." Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., added, "Overly explicit questions are not only unwise but, I believe, impermissible."

Reminding Souter that federal judges are ethically bound not to publicly discuss matters that are, or may be, before any court, Simpson gave the judge some Western advice: "Sit deep in the saddle."

Kennedy said little in Souter's record as a state judge and attorney general in New Hampshire "demonstrates real solicitude for the rights of those who are weakest and most powerless in our society."

"It is the responsibility of this committee to find out whether Judge Souter is committed to these rights and other basic values enshrined in the Constitution," Kennedy said.

harassment of women.

"It makes me feel very vulnerable to work in a university that is blind to the special concerns of women, and to what constitutes justice when this sort of discrimination happens," said Carolyn Cutrona, associate psychology professor. "If the university appeals, they're making a perfectly unambiguous statement that they're not taking a stand against the harassment of women."

UI Law Professor Martha Chamallas said the UI should take this opportunity to renew its commitment to providing hostile-free work environments for women, rather than continue to fight the case.

She said, "There've been well-intentioned people at this university for decades and this still went on. We have to figure out what structural and personal features were at play in Dr. Jew's case, and find ways to change these things."

"This begins with open, non-defensive talk," she added. "It does not begin with the university appealing the case."

Rawlings said Thursday evening he hadn't yet seen the letter.

Deputy Attorney General Gordon Allen said his office, which represented the UI and the regents in the federal trial, is "just about done" with its review of the case and will consult the UI and the regents in the next few days.

In an Aug. 29 Daily Iowan article, Allen said the judge's ruling failed to distinguish between individual thought and UI policy. He added that this would be considered in the attorney general's analysis of an appeal decision.

that two Palestinian leaders linked to terrorist acts — George Habash and Mohammed Abbas — now have their headquarters in Baghdad.

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker flew to Damascus on Thursday to try to reinforce U.S. cooperation with Syria against Iraq, its longtime enemy.

Meanwhile, more than 300 Muslim religious scholars and preachers from the Saudi-funded Muslim World League issued a declaration after a meeting that ended Wednesday. They condemned Saddam's annexation of Kuwait as "un-Islamic."

The "Mecca Declaration" said the invasion of Kuwait and the massing of Iraqi troops on Saudi borders "are enough Islamic reason" to justify the presence of non-Muslim forces for Saudi Arabia's defense.

"Muslims should not attack or commit any felonies against each other," the declaration said. "Within these rulings, Iraq's invasion and occupation of Kuwait is against the principles of Islam."

Saddam last month attacked the Saudi monarchs for inviting in the Americans, saying their presence sullied the holy sites of Mecca and Medina. Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, Iran's spiritual leader, echoed Saddam's statement on Wednesday in a further sign Iran and Iraq may be entering an alliance of convenience following their eight-year war.

Baker expresses concern over call for 'holy war'

By Barry Schweid
The Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria — Secretary of State James Baker voiced concern Thursday about the call from Iran's spiritual leader for a "holy war" against the U.S. troops deployed in Saudi Arabia.

Baker spoke for talks Friday with Syrian President Hafez Assad on the campaign against Iraq, said Wednesday's comments by Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, the Iranian spiritual leader, were "obviously of deep concern."

"We are not indifferent to threats against our forces," the secretary said.

Baker noted that Arab forces were also part of the Persian Gulf operation intended to guard against further Iraqi aggression. Syria, which is on Iraq's northern border, has sent 3,000 troops to Saudi Arabia and 1,000 to the United Arab Emirates.

As for continued Iranian adherence to the U.N. economic embargo against Iraq, Baker told reporters, "We are watching it closely and believe it is holding."

In Washington, meanwhile, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said Khamenei's "position appears to be based on a misunderstanding of what we mean. . . ."

The United States sent troops to Saudi Arabia at the government's invitation to deter Iraqi President Saddam Hussein from attacking the oil-rich kingdom, he said.

"And we will leave Saudi Arabia when that mission is accomplished or whenever we might be asked to leave by the Saudi government," Boucher added.

Officials in Washington who have analyzed Khamenei's speech are said to feel the Iranian cleric was expressing the fears of his country and those of others in the area that the United States will use its foothold in Saudi Arabia to stay forever.

"This is our way of allaying those concerns," said one Washington official who requested anonymity.

On Wednesday, Khamenei said that "confronting the greedy interventionist schemes of the United States to encroach on the Persian Gulf is considered Jihad (holy war), and anyone who is killed on the path is a martyr."

The Bush administration had solicited both Syria and Iran to assist in the Iraqi campaign because of the two nations' longstanding hostility to Saddam's government.

While Iran has repaired relations with Iraq, with which it fought an eight-year war that ended just two years ago, the Tehran government has endorsed the U.N. boycott.

Baker is the first U.S. secretary of state to visit Syria since George Shultz came here in 1988 to sound out Assad on the prospects for Arab-Israeli negotiations.

Syria's human rights record has been sharply criticized by the State Department, which has kept Assad's government on a list of seven countries accused of sponsoring terrorism.

A terrorist group with strong ties to Syria, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine — General Command, is suspected in the December 1988 bombing of Pan Am flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland. The disaster took 280 lives.

U.S. stay in gulf may be long one

By John King
The Associated Press

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — The top American military commander extolled exhausted troops in the Saudi desert Thursday to "bear with me" as evidence mounted that the growing U.S. deployment here will be a prolonged one.

"Don't think I ever forget that you have loved ones back home," Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told Army infantrymen during a stop at their desert camp.

At each of a half-dozen stops at Army, Air Force and Marine camps, the four-star general, clad in desert camouflage, promised troops they had the support of President Bush, the Congress and the American people.

After each pep talk he was pressed by servicemen with questions about the likely length of their stay.

"I want to get you home as fast as possible but bear with me," Powell said. "I can't give you an exact date."

At a news conference, Powell said rotations of troops will start "as soon as possible," a welcome message for the troops but another sign that military planners foresee a lengthy deployment.

"Even if Iraq pulled out starting tomorrow, I'd be here probably six months minimum," one general who met with Powell said, asking that he not be named.

Powell refused to say how long the Bush administration would tolerate an Iraqi occupation.

"That's not for me to judge," he said. "That's for the political leaders, and it's not just for the United States to judge."

A senior American military officer in Saudi Arabia,

who spoke on condition he not be named, said no end to the U.S. military presence is in sight. He all but ruled out a unilateral U.S. military action to force Iraqi forces from occupied Kuwait.

"It's the classic Mexican stand-off," said the official. "I wouldn't want to launch an offensive against Kuwait with 150,000 to 200,000 troops on the ground. . . . And I don't think Saddam Hussein is going to leave."

Powell said the mission of the American troops remained a defensive one and that the U.S. forces would leave when asked to by the Saudi government.

"We have no desire to have any permanent presence," he said.

The U.S. deployment to the region, including sailors and Marines at sea, now was close to 145,000.

Powell said the U.S. deployment was slightly behind schedule because of delayed transport ships and a limited airlift capacity.

'Mame': A snazzy diversion

By Jennifer Weglar
The Daily Iowan

"Life is a banquet and most poor sons-of-bitches are starving to death."

So quoth Juliet Prowse as Mame Dennis — in a line that exquisitely sums up that character's personality — in the musical "Mame," which opened a seven-night run at Hancher Auditorium Tuesday. It continues its run through Sunday.

Though it started a little slowly, the glitz and glamour that is "Mame" proved an entertaining and enjoyable experience.

Jitters in a new performance environment can account for some of the technical glitches, namely too-hot microphone levels that at first rendered the dialogue indecipherable; after several minutes, the problem was corrected, and the cast settled into the show.

Set against the shimmering backdrop of '20s Manhattan, "Mame" opens with a wild party in full roar. By juxtaposing Mame, wearing a bugle-beaded canary yellow pantsuit, with her revelers, clad in black, white and grey, Mame as life-force is the evident theme of the play.

Nothing fazes her; nothing disturbs her. When her orphaned nephew from Des Moines, Patrick, arrives at her door as the party is in full drunken swing, Mame is only at a loss for seconds. Then she offers the lad a martini and introduces her friends: The noted publisher M. Lindsay Woolsey (Frank Joachimsthaler); the "progressive" educator at the Laboratory of Life, Ralph Devine (Paul Hope); the "First Lady of the American Stage" and Mame's dearest friend, Vera Charles (Delphi Lawrence).

Prowse's portrayal of Mame is lively and vivacious as she introduces Patrick (played by Joseph R. Sasnett) to her laboratory of life where the only rules are to "Live! Live! Live!" For Mame, experiencing the world in all its fascinating glory is the point of existing. She tries to instill in Patrick the urge to discover and try new things, and see and accept people and situations for what they really are.

As Patrick grows older he also grows away from living life by Mame's credo. He is set to marry the charmless and affected Gloria (Michelle DeJean), a debutante whose parents revel in the exclusivity of their community and their own close-mindedness. Mame realizes while Patrick is no longer her "little love," she can still offer him an alternative, open-minded world view; Patrick realizes Mame's unpredictable, fast-paced world is where he really wants to be.

A laboratory of life where the only rules are to "Live! Live! Live!"

Among the supporting cast, Meghan Duffy delivers a strong comedic performance as Agnes Gooch, playing the role of young Patrick's nanny somewhere between Ed Grimley and Agnes DiPesto. John Almberg (as Georgia plantation owner Beauregard Jackson Pickett Burnside) and Jennie Welch (as Dixie belle Sally Cato) turn in humorous performances as well.

Dance numbers, "Mame" and "That's How Young I Feel," feature Prowse's trademark high kicks and the energetic ensemble. The sets, costumes and lighting are simple but effective, with the rhinestone-bejeweled backdrops bathed in violet, red and ice blue light.

Though the press releases tend to hyperbole, "Mame" is a show of sentiment and sophistication and a story that will continue to entertain for another 35 years.

Law would require refund of grants

By Robert M. Andrews
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A bill heading toward Senate floor action would require the National Endowment for the Arts to recoup federal funds from grant recipients convicted of violating obscenity laws.

The measure, approved Wednesday with a 15-1 vote by the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, also would extend the embattled NEA's life for five years, with $175 million in spending authority in the first fiscal year, starting Oct. 1.

Arts supporters predicted that the bill's broad support by committee liberals and conservatives, including Sens. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, would boost its chances of approval by the full Senate.

Amid a bitter political controversy over the NEA's past support for works that conservative critics have denounced as obscene and sacrilegious, the Senate panel voted to have the courts — rather than the federal arts agency — decide which works are obscene.

Under the bill, NEA grant recipients convicted on criminal charges of violating obscenity or child pornography laws would have to return their federal grant money to the arts endowment within 90 days. They would be barred from receiving new NEA grants for at least three years.

Hatch said the bill would solve the problem of "protecting taxpayer funds and artists' freedom of expression at the same time." Kennedy hailed the committee's rejection of harsher anti-obscenity curbs on the endowment.

With a 14-2 vote, the committee defeated a proposal by Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., that would have imposed strict guidelines on NEA panels that select grant applications for approval.

Coats' amendment would have forbidden support for works that violate the Supreme Court's obscenity standards or child pornography laws and that make religious attacks. Kennedy said it represented unconstitutional prior restraint on artists.

The NEA's statutory authority expires Sept. 30, along with a congressional ban enacted last fall at the urging of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., that prohibits the endowment from subsidizing works that "may be considered obscene."

'Alice' unites skits, melodies

By Henry Olson
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City's Riverside Theatre will begin its 10th season and will officially open its new residence this weekend with a revival of its most popular production ever.

"A... My Name Is Alice," opening Sept. 14, is a five-woman theatrical cornucopia — a series of sketches and cabaret acts touching upon everything from some women's (and men's) tooth for trashy romance to the inability of a of women coming of age and gaining wisdom, although the show is not only about that.

Though "Alice" has a definite slant, it escapes the impasse of being earnest. One piece lampoons the "woman as victim" stereotype: A poetess, who appears occasionally throughout the play, presents works from her oh-so-serious tome "For Women Only." She muses: "I am woman/ A crippled bird/ The ledge is cold/ My wings are clipped/ He did it. He did it."

The play, however, is definitely not characters." Indeed — Threlkeld's parts range from a sexually repressed psychiatrist to a female basketball player with a doctoral degree in 17th century metaphysical poetry. Perhaps her biggest stretch is her role as a male construction worker who gets an unpleasant taste of his own medicine when a woman pedestrian begins returning the sexual innuendo he's been doling out.

The fall production of "Alice" differs only slightly from the show's Riverside premiere last Riverside Director Ron Clark says, "This show deals not only with women's relationships with men, but with the good and bad relationships they have with each other. We see them facing all sorts of dilemmas at many different periods in their lives.

"It's the only musical revue I've found with a unique point of view. It presents very feminist ideas through humor. . . . The show offers new insights into the issues for women only. "The music is terrific. We have everything from torch songs to rock. Its combination of comedy and integrity should appeal to everyone," says Clark.

Melissa Threlkeld, a member of the cast, says, "Men love 'A... My Name Is Alice' for the humor. It relates archetypal experiences in women's lives with enough comedy and character that both sexes will enjoy it."

For Threlkeld, "Alice" offers "an opportunity to play a wide range of January. Threlkeld, Gloria Galask, Karen Moeller and Carmen Troyer, all of whom appeared in the spring cast, are also in the current production; Laura Miller will be joining the cast for her Riverside Theatre debut.

Clark says that he wants to keep the chemistry of the first production intact, but adds, "I have switched some of the actresses around. . . . I like to keep them on their toes."

Author Cherry reads tonight

The Daily Iowan

Novelist and poet Kelly Cherry will read from her latest work, "My Life and Dr. Joyce Brothers: A Novel in Short Stories," tonight at 8 p.m. at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. The reading, part of the "Live from Prairie Lights" series, will be simultaneously broadcast on WSUI AM 910.

A book that has been described as "a fast-paced, laugh-out-loud tour de force" by the The Milwaukee Journal, "My Life and Dr. Joyce Brothers" is the story of Nina, a woman who has reached the brink of middle age only to find herself divorced, childless — in other words, alone again.

The book tackles some serious subjects — alcoholism, aging parents — but always with a "beam of humor" to illuminate the way.

Cherry grew up in Richmond, Va., and now lives in Madison, Wis., where she is a professor of English at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. In addition to four other novels, she has published three volumes of poetry.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN

'Family' life

A lot of things in this world might be humorous if they weren't so tragic. One of those things is the unique concept of justice recently demonstrated by Judge Rosemary Shaw Sackett in the Iowa Court of Appeals. An editorial in the Des Moines Register this week detailed two very disturbing dissensions Sackett made involving the futures of neglected children. Unfortunately, the Register's editorial writer saw fit to concur with Sackett's decisions.

In one case, Judge Sackett dissented with the court's decision to temporarily remove a 5-year-old girl from her home. The court record, according to the editorial, portrayed the child as "literally living in filth, with garbage piled up on the floors and cat feces liberally scattered around the rooms and even attached to the child's clothing."

Sackett explained her reluctance to support the removal of the child from these conditions, writing that "a few hours of cleaning service would have cost the state less than the judicial time and court-appointed attorney's fees spent to litigate the adequacy of this woman's housekeeping skills. . . ."

Housekeeping skills. If you try to follow that line of logic you may never be the same. A little girl covered with animal feces reeks of grossly deficient parenting skills, assuming one is close enough to earth to catch the stench.

Another ruling with which Sackett recently dissented regards the permanent removal of a 7-year-old boy from his mother. The "mother" in this case happens to be a homeless woman with a history of alcohol and drug abuse who abandoned the boy for days at a time.

Sackett referred to the termination of this woman's parental rights as "drastic" and suggested the state direct its efforts toward finding her adequate housing and child care.

Although the Register's writer conceded that Sackett's statements "may be simplistic" — a generous analysis to say the least — the writer ultimately concluded that Sackett was "on the right track." Worse still is the fact that the writer went on to offer a logical defense even more bizarre than Sackett's: "Some families may not measure up to the middle-class standards of human-service workers and judges, but they are families."

Now really, to suggest that a homeless 7-year-old under the periodic supervision of a drug addict is still a "family" is like saying that a rusted-out Yugo with no engine and four flat tires is still a "car." The term "family" has no a priori value when it is so clinically defined.

Further, to call such standards of evaluation "middle-class" is an insult to every person who happens to fall beneath the economic parameters of that bracket. No one is concerned about how many Nintendo cartridges these children own; it is their health and safety that are being questioned within the bounds of standards that are far from rigid or elitist.

Obviously, the termination of parental rights, whether temporary or permanent, should be a last resort. Like most state-run agencies, the Department of Human Services is no model of efficiency, and the foster care system in this state is in desperate need of reform. These factors are bound to create frustration and disillusionment in people like Judge Sackett who have to contend with a faulty infrastructure on a daily basis.

But until those reforms can be realized it is not responsible to abandon the system entirely. Not as long as there are "families" out there whose patterns of abuse and neglect threaten the lives of children.

Where are the short Greeks?

The moment I sat down for lunch I knew it was a mistake. It was one of those cute, new yuppie-poo restaurants with ferns and a menu that listed calories.

I knew it was an even bigger mistake when five minutes passed before the busboy dropped the silverware and napkins in front of us.

About 10 minutes later I snared a waitress as she was hurrying by and asked, "Is there any chance we can see a menu?" She flung down a couple of menus and rushed off. About five minutes later, she was back for the orders.

Mike Royko

"I'm so sorry," she said. "We're short-handed. One of the girls didn't show up today."

When she finally brought the food, it wasn't what I had ordered.

"There are some problems in the kitchen," she said. "We have a new cook."

"Never mind," I said. "I'll eat it, whatever it is. But what about the beer?"

"Oh, I forgot, you wanted a beer," she said. The beer arrived just in time to wash down the last bite of the sandwich.

When she brought me the check, which was the wrong amount because she charged me for what I ordered instead of what I got, I asked, "Who runs this place?"

"The manager," she said. "He's in the booth having lunch."

On the way out, I stopped at the manager's booth. He was a yuppie in a business suit. He and a clone were leisurely sipping their coffee and looking at a computer printout.

"Nice place you have here," I lied. "Do you own it?"

The young man shook his head. It was owned by one of those big corporations that operate restaurants in far-flung office buildings and health clubs.

He also proudly told me that he had recently graduated with a degree in restaurant and hotel management.

He explained it all. His waitresses were short-handed, his cook was goofing up the orders, the customers were fuming, and what was he doing?

He was having lunch. Or, as he'd probably say, he was doing lunch.

I don't want to be an alarmist, but when this nation collapses, he and those like him will be the cause.

First, we had the MBA — especially the Harvard MBA — who came along after World War II and took over American industry. With his bottom-line approach, the MBA did such a brilliant job that the Japanese might soon buy the whole country and evict us.

But we're told not to worry. Now that we don't manufacture as much as we used to, we'll be saved by the growing service industry.

The problem is that the service industry is being taken over by people like the restaurant manager and his corporation. They go to college and study service. Then they install computers programmed for service. And they have meetings and look at service charts and graphs and talk about service.

But what they don't do is provide service. That's because they are not short Greeks.

You probably wonder what that means. I'll explain.

If that corporation expects the restaurant to succeed, it should fire the young restaurant-hotel degree holder. Or demote him to cleaning washrooms.

It should then go to my friend Sam Sianis, who owns Billy Goat's Tavern, and ask, "Do you know a short Greek who wants to manage a restaurant?"

Sam will say, "Shoo, I send you one my cousins. Jus' got here from the old country."

Then he'd go to Greek Town and tell his cousin, who works as a waiter, that his big chance had come.

When the next lunch hour rolled around, and a waitress failed to show up for work, Sam's cousin would not sit down to do lunch. He would put on an apron and wait table himself.

If the cook goofed up orders, Sam's cousin

With his bottom-line approach, the MBA did such a brilliant job that the Japanese might soon buy the whole country and evict us.

would go in the kitchen, pick up a cleaver and say, "You want I keel you?"

He wouldn't know how to read a computer printout, but he'd get drinks in the glasses, food on the table and money in the cash register.

That simple approach is why restaurants run by short Greeks stay in business and make money. And why restaurants that are run by corporations and managed by young men who are educated beyond their intelligence come and go. And mostly go.

So if you are ever approached by a stockholder who wants to sell you shares in any of the giant service corporations, tell him not to bother showing you the annual report. Just ask him one question.

"Is it run by short Greeks?"
If he says no, leave your money under the mattress.

Victims' rights

To the Editor:
David Crawford has once again exposed his knee-jerk solution to yet another societal problem ["Iowa's legacy, Sep. 7, DI]. Crawford would have you believe that taking guns from the hands of innocent people will solve our crime problem. That is only the beginning of his misguided philosophy.

The infringement of any individual's right to keep and bear arms is unconstitutional. It is that simple. The solution to the problem of handgun crime cannot be achieved by across-the-board free market restrictions, nor can it be achieved by prosecuting more heavily those who choose to defend themselves against crime instead of those who commit crime. I feel that the only way to eliminate crime of this nature is to show the criminal that our society will not tolerate senseless violence. We need to reinstate the death penalty in Iowa, as well as to demand stiffer sentences for all those found guilty of violent crime.

Today's criminal mocks our judicial system because liberal judges and ACLU members want to ensure that the criminal's rights are not violated. Our society must demand that the rights of the victim be given priority.

By restricting an innocent citizen's right to purchase a handgun at any time only places society at a greater risk. Yes, it is a shameful legacy that in 1990, some 10,000 people will die in the United States from handguns alone. It must be understood that the responsibility for those deaths lies not with the NRA, Sen. Grassley or Rep. Lightfoot, but rather with those who support legislation like the Brady Bill.

To the Editor:
UI professor Rex Honey has taken a courageous and prudent stand in advocating a sovereign Palestinian state ["Palestinian state must be created, says UI prof," Aug. 23, DI].

Purported humanitarians shut their eyes to the atrocities committed by the Israelis against the Palestinians. Meanwhile, all Arabs are depicted by American media as swarthy, despicable fanatics and terrorists. As Plato said, "Those who tell the stories rule society."

Liberals need not fret over Souter

Unless some startling revelations emerge during his confirmation hearings, David Souter will be the next Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Much has been written about Souter's nomination to take recently retired William Brennan's seat on the court. The primary topic of most of this writing, however, is the inability to discover Souter's position on the important issues. Given Brennan's position as leading liberal on the court and Bush's avowed conservative values, it is reasonable to expect liberals to be anxious about Souter's nomination. Conservatives, however, are also expressing concern due to the paucity of information on Souter's views. Just as liberals want to avoid a nominee who will necessarily. Although some pro-choice groups are troubled by some cases Souter participated in as Attorney General of New Hampshire, he was also a trustee of a New Hampshire hospital that voted to allow abortions. Keep in mind that conservative Nixon appointee Harry Blackmun had ties to the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota and he authored the court's opinion in Roe vs. Wade.

Second, "liberals" and "conservatives" don't vote that way on every issue. Blackmun, despite his opinion in Roe, is generally a conservative, albeit a more moderate one than Rehnquist, Scalia or Kennedy. Even such conservative stalwarts as Scalia and Kennedy occasionally vote with the liberals. In the court's two 5-4 decisions upholding flag-burning as protected speech, Scalia and Kennedy joined with Brennan, Marshall and Blackmun against Rehnquist, O'Connor and the moderates White and Stevens. Even if Souter does vote conservatively on some issues, it is unlikely he will do so on all of them. For example, his interest in hiking and the outdoors may lead him to vote more liberally on environmental issues. Thus, both Souter supporters and opponents should focus their attention on more than the one or two issues currently in the public's eye.

Third, that Souter has no experience with federal constitutional issues may allow him to have a more open mind when he faces these issues on the Supreme Court. People, including judges, try to maintain consistent belief systems. Not previously facing these issues in a judicial capacity means he is not officially committed to any particular position and can approach them with an open mind.

Finally, it could be worse. Suppose the Senate rejects Souter. Depending on how events unfold in the Middle East and this year's Congressional elections, Bush might end up with even more supporters in the Senate, allowing him to nominate someone with a clearer conservative ideology. Liberal groups might be better off accepting Souter and hoping for the best, rather than expending all their energy fighting his nomination only to end up with someone even more conservative. It happened with the Bork nomination — eventually, Kennedy was confirmed.

S. African youths kill commuters

By Barry Renfrew
The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Youths with spears and machetes went on a rampage Thursday in a black commuter train, hacking to death at least 26 people and injuring about 100 as terrified passengers leaped from the speeding coaches.

Police have no reason for the attack, which came after black action fighting left at least 13 other people dead Thursday in townships around Johannesburg.

Witnesses at the train station told The Associated Press that about 10 black youths, most in their late teens, boarded the train at the Jeppe Station in Johannesburg and began attacking passengers as the train was moving.

Another gang of men was waiting for the train when it pulled into the next stop, George Goch station, about five minutes later. They began shooting and stabbing the screaming passengers as they tried to flee.

Passengers jumped from the train or tried to hide under seats as the youths stabbed and hacked people in the coaches. The dead included elderly women and men who were unable to run away.

"They worked their way down the coaches very systematically, killing people. They were well-organized and spoke to each other as they attacked people," said one man at George Goch station, where the train was halted.

Bodies littered coach floors and pools of blood formed along the platform. Scores of screaming passengers pushed and shoved to get off the train as it stopped, witnesses said.

The attackers jumped from the train just before it reached the George Goch station and escaped, witnesses said. The gang waiting on the platform also fled.

"We cannot live like this in South Africa," said a black police officer looking at the contorted bodies of four people piled on the floor of one car.

Police commanders said they did not know who the attackers were, but two officers at the scene said the youths were Zulus. A train conductor said he heard the youths speaking Zulu.

Hundreds of heavily armed police and army troops in battle gear cordoned off the area. Army patrols with assault rifles walked along railway tracks, hunting for bodies.

W. Germans, Soviets sign 'friendship treaty'

By Terrence Petty
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — West Germany and the Soviet Union initialed a landmark treaty Thursday intended to eliminate long-standing distrust between the Soviets and Germans as the powerful new German nation emerges.

The document is also intended as the cornerstone for German help for the battered Soviet economy. Already, West Germany has pledged to give the Soviets $7.6 billion to help cover the withdrawal of Soviet troops from East Germany. Another $1.9 billion will be contributed in the form of a low-interest loan from Bonn.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and his West German counterpart, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, initialed the friendship treaty.

The actual signing of the friendship accord is expected sometime soon between Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

The Soviets suffered massive losses during World War II. After the war, Moscow's Cold War influence over Communist East Germany was the source of frequent tensions between Bonn and Moscow.

The treaty states that it is of primary importance to "finally be done with the past and to use understanding and reconciliation to achieve an important contribution toward the overcoming of Europe's division."

With Germany set to reunite Oct. 3, Bonn and Moscow want to lay a solid foundation for relations that have been steadily improving over the past two years.

"Now we can with justification say

"Now we can with justification say that the postwar period is over."

Hans-Dietrich Genscher
W. German Foreign Minister

that the postwar period is over," Genscher elatedly said after the ceremony.

As the two nations were planning closer relations, the Soviet news agency Tass reported that Bonn had denied a visa for Tass' new bureau chief in West Germany. The West German Foreign Ministry said it could neither confirm nor deny the report that Sergei Sosnovsky was being barred from the country.

Tass said that as relations between the countries improve, "the denial of a visa to a Soviet journalist representing a world news agency can only leave observers perplexed."

"The journalist has been denied a possibility of providing objective information, which is expected by Tass subscribers in the Soviet Union and abroad," the state-run news agency said.

The friendship treaty is the most comprehensive bilateral accord between the Soviets and West Germany since a 1970 treaty in which they renounced the use of force against each other.

In the new document, the two sides reaffirmed pledges not to use force against one another and to "honor without reservation the territorial integrity of all European states in their current borders."

Did Reggie need it this quiet?

Pete Sampras, the 1990 U.S. Open tennis champion, was awaiting the second serve from John McEnroe during the tournament's semifinal when it happened.

As McEnroe tossed the tennis ball up in the air for his serve, something occurred in the crowd of 20,000 mesmerized mutes which flustered the great professional, causing him to glare into the stands.

A fan made a noise.

The umpire, his jaw dangling on the court and his eyes hanging from their sockets in surprise, attempted to scream "Quiet Please!", but, obviously in shock, he could only muster "QUEEEAASSEE!"

The television announcers, who only speak during commercials, broke their silence, stating, "HMMMMMMMMMM," and the 19,999 stunned fans began pelting their unruly neighbor with obscenities — in sign language, of course.

The noise, currently under investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the United States Tennis Association, may have been a spoken word, an innocent cough, or quite possibly a bodily movement which accidentally emitted a sound. Damn that chafing.

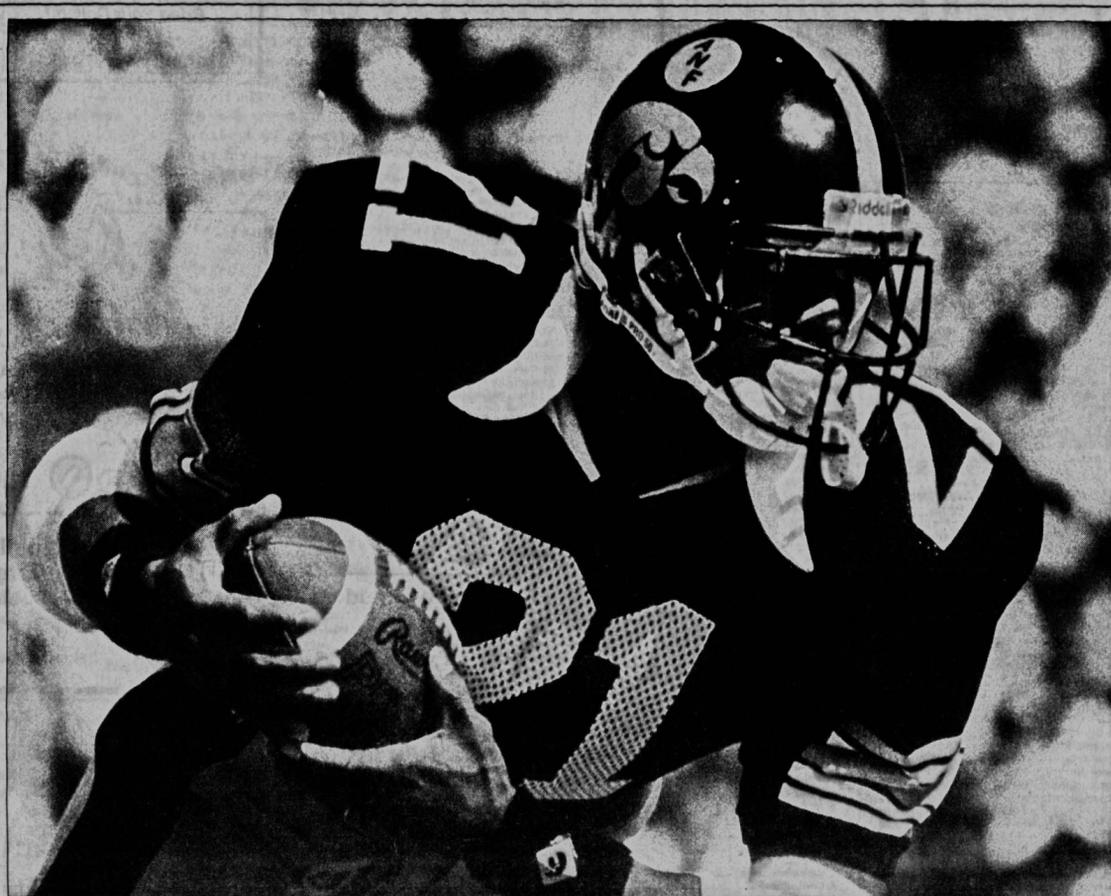

Nonetheless, the sound disrupted one of the greatest tennis players of all time. Rumor has it that once convicted, the suspect may face the maximum sentence allowed for such conduct: Strangulation by Monica Seles sweat socks — and NO grunting allowed!

The 1990 U.S. Open was the first time I seriously watched the sport of tennis. It will also be the last.

True, there were several fantastic athletic moves displayed amid the hundreds of umpire screams for "Quiet Please," and "Please take your seats," yet I found the game too proper — wimpy, if you will.

I don't truly understand why tennis players (and golfers, for that matter) need absolute quiet and still atmospheres to play their game. What makes their game so different than baseball, football or Running back Tony Stewart, who became the first sophomore in Iowa history to rush for over 1,000 yards two years ago, has regained the starting tailback position for the first game of his senior year. Nick Bell, who was Iowa's leading rusher and an honorable mention all-Big Ten pick last year, will also see considerable playing time at several positions, according to Iowa head coach Hayden Fry.

Hawkeyes ready for action

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry has a lot of concerns about his 1990 football squad. But he doesn't seem to mind.

That's because his problems are different than those of other coaches. He doesn't have to decide who's good enough to start, but which of his many qualified candidates will get the No. 1 assignment.

And when the Hawkeyes open their season against the 0-2 Cincinnati Bearcats Saturday in Kinnick Stadium, the players Fry decides to start will get their first game tryout.

"We've got so many bodies out there it's difficult to say who's going to play and who's not," Fry said. "I wish we had more problems like that from a depth standpoint."

One of the Hawkeyes' most talented positions, running back, is settled. Fry has chosen to start senior Tony Stewart over senior Nick Bell.

Stewart was the first Iowa sophomore to rush for over 1,000 yards but missed the final two games of the 1988 season because of a knee injury.

Bell, rated No. 4 of the nation's top seniors by the NFL scouting combine, was slated to play first team running back after a 1989 campaign in which he finished with 603 yards rushing and was an honorable mention all-Big Ten pick by The Associated Press.

But Fry said that both the seniors will see a lot of playing time.

"Right now I think Tony Stewart will probably start and Nick Bell will rotate at running back and fullback," Fry said. "There are four backs in the backfield; it might be that they're both in there at the same time."

Wide receivers are also in abundance for the Hawkeyes.

Junior Jon Filloon is slated to start at split end and will be backed up by senior Sean Smith, while sophomore Danan Hughes and junior Mike Saunders are first and second team, respectively, at wingback.

"I don't think there's any question this group of wide receivers is as strong as any group we've had," Fry said. "We've got more competition at the wide receiver position than we've ever had."

"We do not have the one individual outstanding proven star but as a group, as a unit we will rotate four if not five receivers during the course of the ball game."

The other battle for first-team positions is in the secondary, where rookies Scott Plate, Jason Olejniczak and Carlos James are challenging veterans Merton Hanks, Eddie Polly, Brian Wise and Doug Buch.

"Several in the defensive secondary are still really unsettled and as a result we'll rotate quite a few guys in the first ball game to find out who really is No. 1," Fry said.

"Obviously Plate and Olejniczak and James are all brand new from a varsity football standpoint. Buch, who played very sparingly last year, will be starting."

"We're going with the veteran people to start the ball game with the intention of playing

Farm Game brings past Hawk greats

By Jay Nanda
and Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

Old-time Hawkeye basketball greats such as Fred Brown and John "Bo" Hairston, as well as recent graduates Les Jepsen and Matt Bullard, will reunite for the third Iowa Farm Scholarship Game tonight at 8 p.m. at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The game, which is the third of its kind in the state's history, is serving as a reunion for two of the best teams in Hawkeye history — the 1970 Big Ten champions and the 1980 Final Four squad.

And for one of those Final Four members, Bobby Hansen, the idea for the first Farm Scholarship Game in 1986 brings back some fond memories.

"In 1985, a bunch of guys came back during one era for (1980 teammate) Kenny Arnold, who had a brain tumor," Hansen said. "It was great to see everyone."

"The next year I was driving around Iowa and I realized how beautiful the farms were," added Hansen.

"We wanted to keep the game going. The money raised wouldn't have even put a dent in the farmers' needs, so we made a trust fund and used the interest to pay for scholarships for children of farmers."

Among the coaches that will be at tonight's game are Ralph Miller, who coached the 1970 Big Ten champions and recently retired as the head coach at Oregon State, 1980 Hawkeye coach Lute Olson, and Jimmy Rodgers, Iowa's Most Valuable Player in 1964 and 1965.

"I planned on being there to see the football game so I'll just do a couple of things," said Rodgers, who is the father of Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers and a former coach of the Boston Celtics.

"This is a chance to be part of something that I think is real important. A number of people are coming back to play, a lot of guys in the NBA."

In addition to the more than 40 Hawkeye players that will be taking part in tonight's game, four former greats have been selected as honorary captains.

Carl Cain, a member of the 1956 Olympic team, and Murray Wier, a two-time Hawkeye MVP, are scheduled to appear. They will be joined by Chuck Darling, a winner of the Chicago Tribune's Silver Trophy as the Big Ten's MVP, and Bill Logan, who along with Cain, is only one of seven Hawkeyes to have his jersey retired.

Iowa to play underdog at Texas

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

On the surface, it doesn't look exciting: unbeaten Texas — 7-0 and ranked fifth in the latest volleyball coaches' poll — against unranked Iowa, 1-4 on the year.

But Texas coach Mick Haley said he isn't overlooking the Hawkeyes, and Iowa acting head coach Maureen Marek said her team is ready to play the Longhorns.

"I don't think (the Hawkeyes) would come down here if (they) couldn't be competitive," Haley said. "I don't think we're taking them lightly. It's a big game — a lot of people are talking about it."

"I think the team is looking really optimistic. They know they have nothing to lose and everything to gain," said Marek, who is filling in for head coach Ruth Nelson. Nelson has been ill since late last week and is expected back with the team early next week.

Sunday's meeting with the Longhorns in Austin will wind up the Hawkeyes' weekend road trip to Texas. Iowa opens the trip Saturday in San Marcos against Southwest State.

Three of the Hawkeyes' four losses have come at the hands of nationally-ranked teams, while the other was to 6-3 Iowa State in Ames, and Haley acknowledged that Iowa's early-season record could be deceiving.

"A record doesn't have a lot to do with teams at this time of year," Haley said. "A lot of good teams are 2-3 or 3-5 right now. The first part of the year you have to work on rough spots, and you don't know about injuries or other things."

Two of the Iowa players said they liked the underdog role.

"Nobody's expecting anything from us," senior Ruth Spethman said. "I'd rather be in that position. It's more fun to go in there and surprise people."

"I think the whole team is really excited to play," junior Trista Schoenbeck said. "We're really going to give it our best shot. Maybe we'll surprise them."

But before the Hawkeyes can attempt the upset, they must face Southwest Texas State, currently 3-4 overall. The Bobcats returned three starters and two all-Southland conference players — honorable mention picks Liz Faour and Andrea Limbrick — from last year's 12-24 team.

Limbrick is presently third on the team with 55 kills and holds a team-leading .295 attack percentage. Wendy Chapman leads the Bobcat team with 72 kills and Kim Ruhl is second with 64, but both are hitting under .200.

There's little doubt, though, that the highlight of the weekend will be the Texas matchup on Sunday. Haley's Longhorn team returns all six starters from last year's NCAA South Regional finalists.

"We have the same team back from last year," Haley said. "We have a mature team. We did pretty good, finishing fifth in the country last year. (Losing the regional final) is kind of eating at them, though."

The Longhorns appear to be taking their frustration out on their opponents, as Texas owns a .292 hitting percentage to an .050 percentage for their foes.

Nikki Bush, a 6-foot junior, leads the way with a .472 attack percentage and a team-leading 52 kills. Senior Dagmara Szyszczak (.377, 32 kills) and sophomore Errica Hibben (.330, 33 kills) are close behind.

"We've had some injuries and we keep rotating people in and out of the lineup," Haley said. "Still, we've been playing pretty well."

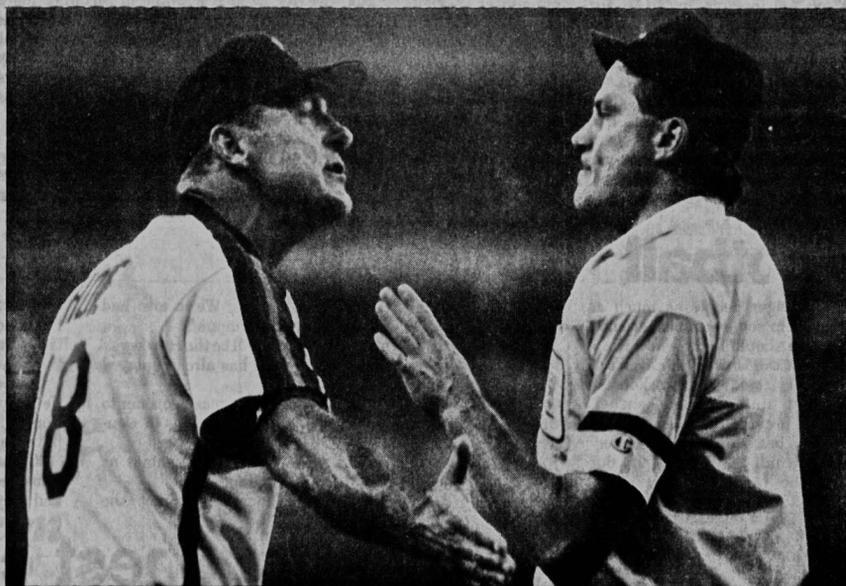

Texas has already faced one Big Ten foe this year, downing Indiana in three games last weekend.

Big Ten competition is also on the Iowa team's mind, according to Marek. Conference play starts next weekend and Marek said that Iowa's strong pre-conference schedule is designed to prepare the team for league competition.

Iowa opens the Big Ten season Sept. 21 at Indiana and faces the defending league champion Ohio State team in Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 22.

"Texas has a strong program, we're looking forward to playing them," Marek said. "When you start against good teams, that shows you how much better you need to be. We're getting ready for the weekend after when we open the Big Ten season."

"Every match played before Big Tens is very important," Spethman said. "We've played some really great teams. We don't have many wins, but we have some great experiences."

Astros manager Art Howe and home plate umpire Bill Hohn argue a call in Houston's game at Cincinnati Thursday night. Howe was ejected, and his team beaten by the Reds, 7-5.

Larkin homer beats Astros in 9th

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Barry Larkin hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning Thursday night and the Cincinnati Reds beat the Houston Astros 7-5, increasing their lead in the National League West to 6½ games.

Bill Doran led off the ninth with his fourth hit and Larkin followed with his sixth home run off Brian Meyer (0-3). The Reds extended their lead over second-place Los Angeles and San Francisco, who were both idle.

Rob Dibble (7-3) pitched the ninth for the victory.

The Astros hit a season-high four home runs. Glenn Davis hit his 22nd, a two-run shot for a 5-3 lead in the seventh.

Mets 6, Pirates 3

NEW YORK — Darryl Strawberry's bat and arm dominated the dream matchup between Dwight Gooden and Doug Drabek, and the New York Mets moved back within 1½ games of first-place Pittsburgh in the National League East, beating the Pirates 6-3 Thursday night.

Strawberry hit a three-run homer for his 100th RBI and threw out Barry Bonds at the plate as the Mets completed a two-game sweep of the Pirates and tied a team record with their 11th straight victory at home.

New York is 50-22 at Shea Stadium, the best home record in baseball.

The Mets and Pirates finish the season with three games at Pittsburgh.

White Sox 9, Red Sox 6

CHICAGO — Ivan Calderon, batting leadoff for the first time in his career, doubled to start a tie-breaking three-run third inning and broke the game open with a three-run homer in the fourth, leading the Chicago White Sox to a 9-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox on Thursday night.

Boston maintained its four-game lead over Toronto in the American Olivares (1-0), making his fifth start, allowed three runs on six hits in six innings. He struck out three and walked five.

Lee Smith pitched one inning for his 26th save. He gave up Delino DeShields' RBI grounder.

the younger people as much as possible to give them some early experience. By Big Ten play we should know who's No. 1."

While the Hawkeyes haven't played a game yet, Fry said the workouts they've had against unfavorable weather conditions should prepare the team... if they survive.

"This has been without a question the most difficult fall camp we've had due to the heat and the humidity," Fry said. "We've had quite a few guys go down and had to keep

Freshmen to face toughest challenge

"I'm interested to see if we can sustain a strong performance on a tougher course," the Iowa coach said. "(Minnesota's Boldstad course) is a longer course and the readings are more difficult. Another thing that's interesting, we play 36 holes on Saturday and 18 on Sunday. We play that format quite a bit, but the three freshmen have never done that."

"I'm pretty sure I've never played that format before," said Mary Jo Rollins, one of three freshmen slated to start in Thomason's lineup this weekend. "I don't think it will be too bad. I play a lot of 36-hole day tournaments."

"The main thing is getting yourself through Saturday in good position. Once you do that, Sunday is a breeze."

The Hawkeyes will compete against seven other teams at the Minnesota Open. Thomason said she expected Indiana and the homestanding Gophers to provide the toughest competition at the tournament.

Last weekend, the Hawkeyes shot a three-round total of 918, led by senior Stacey Arnold's 227 and Rollins' 229. Arnold finished 14th overall while Rollins placed 18th.

Juniors Shirley Trier and Becky Fugelstad recorded 231s to tie for 60th, and freshman Stacy Boville rounded out the scoring with a 241.

The Hawkeyes fifth-place finish in the 18-team tournament placed them ahead of Big Ten rivals Indiana and Minnesota and southern powers Duke and Wake Forest.

"I thought we did really well, especially the freshmen," Arnold said. "For their first time, they did a great job. It was a good course for their first time out. It wasn't too difficult, but it wasn't easy, either."

"I was excited about surpassing Duke and Wake Forest (in North Carolina)," Rollins said. "We've got a lot more potential — we had some scores the first two days that weren't very good. We can be better."

Thomason's squad also got some good news from the media this week, as Arnold was selected as a preseason first-team all-American by Golfweek magazine.

"I was surprised," Arnold said about the honor. "It's kind of a motivator for me. I was having trouble getting back into it this fall. It's a nice thing."

"She's a great player with a lot of potential," Thomason said. "I don't think she's completely realized that potential yet."

The Iowa squad was also one of seven considered as top 20 contenders by the magazine.

"I'm excited for our team," Arnold said. "I think we'll be really good this year."

Hawkeyes set to defend MCFHC crown

By Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

The only Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference champions in the sport's history, the Iowa Hawkeyes, take the first step in defending their crown today and Saturday in East Lansing, Mich.

Iowa squares off against the Michigan State Spartans this afternoon before their trip culminates Saturday versus the Ohio State Buckeyes.

Last season was the inaugural year for the MCFHC, since the Big Ten officially dropped field hockey as a sport after the 1988 season. And it was Coach Beth Beglin's Hawkeyes that came away with the conference title, after earning a 9-0-1 record.

This year, Iowa stands at 5-0 after home victories last weekend versus Ball State and Massachusetts. But the real season begins, according to Beglin.

"Our conference this year is very, very important," Beglin said, "because the winner of our conference gets the automatic bid to the NCAA tournament. We have to take every conference game because the conference this year will be very close."

Whereas the Hawkeyes were undefeated in last year's conference race, both the Spartans and the Buckeyes were at the opposite end of the spectrum. Michigan State was tied for fourth in the MCFHC with a 3-7 record, while the Buckeyes brought up the rear in the six team conference with a 2-8 mark.

The Hawkeyes go from playing last year's two worst conference teams this weekend, to competing against 1989's two best national teams the following week, North Carolina and Old Dominion. For this reason, Beglin is concerned as to how her team will respond in East Lansing.

"We still have to maintain a focus that these two games are important," the Hawkeye coach said. "You cannot afford an upset loss in the conference because if you do, you will be out of the running (for the conference title). If you lose to a team that you're really not supposed to lose to, it will kill you at the end."

Iowa forward Kris Fillat, who leads the team with eight goals and 16 points, says she feels the Hawkeyes have heeded the warning.

"We can't take any team lightly," the junior said. "I don't think (Michigan State) is as good as Michigan, but we have a battle with them every year."

Olympic panel will recognize Kuwait

The Associated Press

TOKYO — The International Olympic Committee drew a line in the sand Thursday, saying it still recognized the national Olympic committee of Kuwait.

The action was welcomed by the son of an IOC member from the Middle Eastern nation slain in the Iraqi invasion of his country last month.

"They now know that there is still a Kuwait and that we still have an Olympic committee. We are grateful for that," said Sheikh Ahmed Al-Sabah, head of the Kuwaiti Olympic panel in exile.

But the IOC refused to step into the debate on whether Iraq should participate in the Asian Games, which begin in Beijing Sept. 22.

A statement from the IOC's executive board said that was a decision for the Olympic Council of Asia, a 38-nation body that runs the games. The council's ruling panel has voted to bar Iraq from the games and expel the nation from the organization, although that decision is due for review.

Iraq says it plans to send a team to Beijing and has accused Arab foes of treachery in voting it out. Kuwait also plans to have a team there.

"The IOC executive board expressed its support for the Kuwait National Olympic Committee and for all Kuwaiti athletes, hoping that they will soon be able to resume their activities under normal conditions in their country," an IOC statement said.

As it began three days of meetings, the IOC board also said it was ready to start on a framework for readmitting South Africa after more than 20 years of exile. But first, the board said, apartheid must be abolished.

"We have not changed from our position," Michele Verdier, the IOC spokeswoman, said. "The conditions that led to our expulsion of South Africa are still there. We will readmit South Africa when those conditions have been eliminated."

But Verdier said recent political changes in South Africa required the IOC to start preparing for the day athletes from that nation would be back in international competition.

"We are pragmatic people," she said. "We have to get ready for the day when the curbs have been lifted."

Verdier said the IOC would participate in meetings between sports officials from South Africa and the rest of the continent in Harare Nov. 4. She said international sports federations should keep to a unified timetable of talks on the South African issue, giving a chilly reception to plans by the International Amateur Athletic Federation to hold its own discussions next month.

The board also decided it needed more legal data before deciding whether to proceed with a multimillion-dollar mobile drug lab.

Houghton's recruits 'best in the Big Ten'

By David Taylor
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team will begin the fall season with a mixture of youth and experience, as the Hawkeyes return several key players from last year's 13-14 squad, which also finished 4-5 in the Big Ten. That should establish a steady foundation for the seven new faces joining the roster this year, according to head coach Steve Houghton.

M. Tennis

"This is the best year we've ever had for recruits," Houghton said. "It's probably the best recruiting class in the Big Ten this year as well."

The freshman class has an international look this season with four of the recruits coming from countries outside of the United States.

Fabian Heller from Argentina will not arrive until spring but is expected to compete for one of the top three positions on the team.

"Fabian is an outstanding player," said Houghton.

Two players from Sweden are being counted on to help out immediately. Klas Bergstrom from Stockholm is a top prospect in both doubles and singles, while Carl Manheim of Lidingo comes over from a top 20 ranking of Swedish junior players.

Naguib Shahid of Winsor, Canada is a talented player who will be counted on to contribute substantially.

Neil Denahan, a Michigan state champion, is also a top talent.

"Neil has played very well in practice so far this fall," said Houghton. "He should be a good player for us this year."

Todd Shale, from Cedar Rapids, was an Iowa state champion last year, but has been hampered by an ankle injury and is not yet at full strength. He too, should add depth and strong play.

Of the returning players, senior Thomas Adler, yet another product from the Swedish pipeline, is the most highly regarded by Houghton.

The Hawkeyes will open today at the Iowa State Invitational in Ames.

The meet will follow an unusual format as there will be no team scores, only singles, which will be in four flights. The first flight will consist of each team's No. 1 and 2 players, the second its No. 3 and 4 players, etc.

Young back to form after second chance

By Jim Cour
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — The Seattle Mariners say left-hander Matt Young just gets better and better. It's his record that's lousy. Two years ago this month, Young underwent major reconstructive surgery on his left elbow. Signed by the Mariners as a free agent last Dec. 15, his career has been resurrected.

"We knew his arm was sound when we signed him," Mariners pitching coach Mike Paul said. "We just didn't know what we were going to get. The improvement in Matt Young from April until now has been phenomenal in our eyes. He's just gotten better as the season's gone along."

Young, 32, has pitched much better than his 8-14 record indicates. In 195 2/3 innings in 29 games, his earned-run average is 3.31. He leads a young and promising Mariner pitching staff with six complete games. "It's very gratifying to me," Young said. "I had a lot of things to prove to myself. I'm the one who has to live with myself."

Starting pitching has been Seattle's strong point this season while the offense has struggled.

As a result, starters Erik Hanson, Randy Johnson, Brian Holman and Young have had to be at their best to get victories.

"When he started this year, there was always the question of, 'Do I still have it? Can I get people out?' Well, he's held up very well with the run support he's been given this year," Paul said.

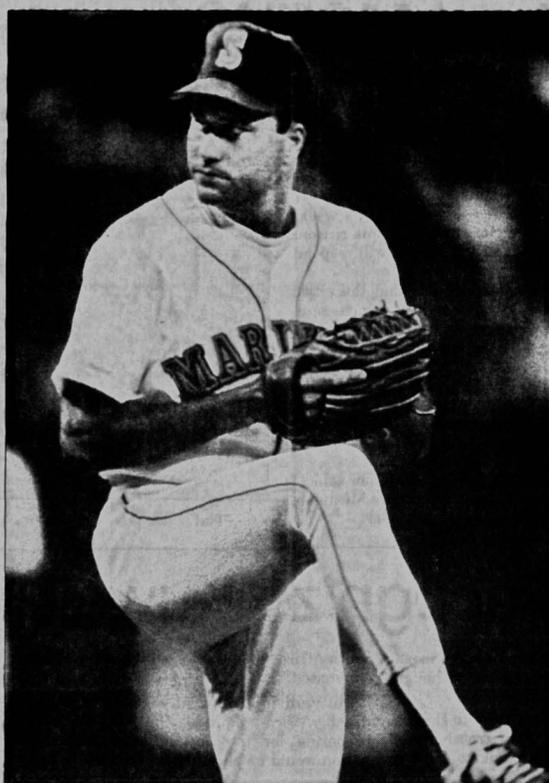

The 6-foot-3, 205-pounder pitched with the Mariners from 1983 through 1986. The Mariners traded him to the Dodgers after the 1986 season.

In 1983, as a rookie, Young represented the Mariners in the All-Star game. He pitched a scoreless inning in Chicago.

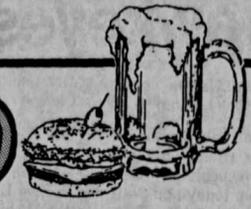

Young has a 51-74 career record while pitching for some bad Seattle teams. Now he's trying to help the Mariners to their first winning season.

The Mariners and Young are talking about a new contract but Young talks cautiously about his future in Seattle.

"I would like to come back here but I'm 32 and I have to look out for myself and my family," he said. "It's hard to say what's going to happen. Hopefully something can get done before the end of the season."

Seattle pitcher Matt Young is the senior member of the Mariners' strong young pitching staff. Though his record stands at 8-14, his teammates haven't exactly scorched the base paths for him. His ERA is a very respectable 3.31.

Off-court losses dampen hopes

By David Taylor
The Daily Iowan

Despite losing the last two meets of the season last spring, the Iowa women's tennis team seemed primed to head into the fall session with a balanced and talented squad — one that finished second in the Big Ten, with a 7-2 record, and 16-4 overall.

Sights were set on another high finish, but unfortunately the off-court losing continued well into the summer.

First, Liz Canzoneri finished her career with the Hawkeyes, depriving the team of its No. 1 singles player. A rough loss, but not overwhelming to a team that finished with their best record ever under third-year coach Micki Schillig.

The toughest blows were absorbed only recently when in little over a month's time, Madeleine Kooreman and Rhonda Fox, two players counted on to contribute heavily, both left the team for personal reasons.

A shaky start to a new season, but not everyone has vacated the premises, and Schillig said she feels the team can duplicate some of last year's success if they pull together.

"This will be a test to the whole team, losing these two players," Schillig said. "We had expected to come in experienced, but instead we must adjust to the underdog role, same as last year. "It really is a case of how bad the girls want it, both for themselves and the team. Everyone has to pick up the slack for our losses."

Tennis

They are hard workers and have the potential, so desire and team unity will be the keys to the season."

Despite the problem of losses in numbers, the Hawkeyes retain a strong cast, and have two freshman and two transfers that should bolster the lineup and make solid contributions.

"We've had a few setbacks, but it won't be a rebuilding year," said junior Catherine Wilson.

Wilson comes off a 16-9 season at the No. 1 doubles position. She also finished with an 8-5 record in singles play.

Also returning from good seasons are Tracey Donnelly and Tracey

Peyton. Donnelly, a junior, picked up 18 wins in doubles play, while finishing 6-7 in singles.

"I think we will have a good season if everyone pulls through," Donnelly said. "We have a lot of depth, and we're all pretty close in ability."

Peyton, a senior, collected 13 victories last year playing at a variety of positions.

Andrea Calvert comes off a freshman season in which she gathered 16 singles wins and Schillig said she hopes that a summer of tournament action will boost an already strong game.

"Andrea played a lot of tournaments last year and should come back stronger this fall," Schillig said. "Tracey (Peyton) will also be better in her final year. I expect good things from her."

Hash comes over from Iowa State, where she finished fourth in the Big Eight Championship at No. 2 singles as a freshman.

The team will open competition today, playing in the All Iowa Invite at Drake in Des Moines. Rival state schools Iowa State, Northern Iowa and Drake will make up the field of competitors for the Hawkeyes.

Casillas back for Atlanta

The Associated Press

SUWANEE, Ga. — Atlanta Falcons nose tackle Tony Casillas ended his holdout Thursday and signed a two-year contract.

Casillas underwent a physical examination at Piedmont Hospital and practiced with the team.

Terms of Casillas' contract were not disclosed.

The Falcons' No. 1 pick in the 1986 NFL draft, Casillas said he was looking forward to playing under new coach Jerry Glanville and felt he would fit into Glanville's playing system.

"I've said all along it would work and I want to get in and be a part of it," he said.

Casillas' agent, John Maloney, and Falcons president Taylor Smith negotiated the contract by telephone Wednesday.

Hawkeyes gearing up for three-way over weekend

By Scott Garringer
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's cross country team follows up its 27-28 victory over Augustana last Saturday with a three-way meet with Big Ten power Minnesota and intrastate rival Northern Iowa this weekend.

Iowa coach Larry Wiczorek said he expects a dandy.

Iowa Men's Cross Country

"Minnesota returns everyone back from their third-place squad a year ago, plus red-shirt Chris Harder," Wiczorek said. "Harder is capable of being their number one runner."

"Northern Iowa also has everyone back from a very strong team last year. Unfortunately for us, Bill Castle will be coming back. He was the Mid-Continent Conference Runner-of-the-Year and was the conference champion last season."

"It should be a real test, but one I think we can pass," Wiczorek went on. "We have had a strong week of practice, although we didn't want to work them too hard in preparation for this meet."

Wiczorek said that he is continuing his quest for strong backup support for his top three, Kevin Herd, David Brown and L.J. Albrecht.

However, the search may be near its end.

"Last week, Doug Koon and Steve Morrissey stepped up and ran very good races," Wiczorek said. "If they can continue, we have the potential to be a strong team."

Minnesota coach Roy Griak isn't quite as upbeat as Wiczorek.

"We are at a disadvantage this early in the year, because we just started practice this week," said Griak, the dean of Big Ten coaches. "School starts Sept. 24, so we haven't had much time to prepare."

"Also, Iowa is always improving and we had a close meet with them last year, so it should be a close meet."

Northern Iowa coach Chris Bucknam said he's in the dark about how his team will fare against the Hawkeyes and Gophers. UNI hasn't opened its season yet and many factors contribute to Bucknam's mystery.

"It's hard for us to get a true picture of our fitness level because it has been hot to work too hard," Bucknam said. "Plus, we don't know how the other teams run on hilly courses like Finkbine or what their injury situation is."

"But at the same time, it's our first meet out of the blocks and obviously, we're going to try to win."

Iowa, Minnesota and UNI lock horns Saturday at Finkbine Golf Course at 10:30 a.m. Although Minnesota beat Iowa both in a close dual and at the conference meet last year, and Iowa stopped the Panthers in a dual, this is the first year these three teams have run together.

Chumps and prophets put it all On The Line

The Daily Iowan

The first week of the infamous Daily Iowan On The Line contest is drawing to a close.

Ballots were due Thursday at noon, that's when the two hands of the clock are both pointing straight up for those 50 people who turned their picks in late.

A meager 530 people played our game this week, a pretty good turnout for the first week of the contest. (It probably seemed like 15,000 for the reporters who counted the ballots.) But we know that it's just too intimidating for mere mortals to go up against the illustrious DI staff pickers.

Speaking of the staff pickers, none of them can come up with a decent Blaise Bryant joke even though his name just begs for it. That will be the DI's next contest.

Our guest picker this week is that fallen hero of the diamond and long-time Cincinnati resident: Pete Rose (played by Nation/World Editor John Kenyon). He's disappointed that the prizes are so small, but at least he won't get locked out of the Hall of Fame for playing. He was easy to get a hold of, too... he was a captive audience.

Sports Editor Erica "Bonehead" Weiland and Rose joined 37 other daring fools in picking Northern Iowa to beat Oklahoma State. Upset? Yeah, right.

"That's OK," Weiland wants to tell the other Panther fans. "We'll kick their %!&." Whatever.

But in the world of sports predictions their are not only fools, but also prophets and chumps. Thirteen exceptional individuals have staked out a special label as one of the above for picking Cincinnati, fresh off a 34-0 loss — a spanking at the hands of Central Michigan — to defeat the mighty Hawkeyes.

These are the few, the bold, the truly insane.

This week's games should be close; the picks were tough. But if you have the prescience to name the winners and the score of the war between James Madison-Virginia Military you can win some big prizes. If you want an inside tip, Rose suggests going with James Madison in the tie-breaker. "Madison — he's on the $50 bill, right? Sounds like a winner to me."

We'll publish the list of winners in Monday's paper, and if you're lucky enough to bag the $25 gift certificate from Enzler's, we may even quote you.

In our recounting of the T-shirts, we discovered that we have some extras. So instead of the normal 10 T-shirt winners, we will have 11 every week.

Big Eight carries on reign as nation's top rushing conference

By Doug Tucker
The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — As usual, the Big Eight is on the run.

Nebraska, Iowa State, Colorado and Oklahoma are 1-2-3-4 in national rushing statistics after the first full week of the college football season.

But that's no surprise. The Big Eight was the nation's preeminent rushing conference in the 1980s, piling up more than 112 miles altogether and providing the nation's No. 1 rushing offense every year but one.

Five times in the 1980s, Big Eight teams were ranked 1-2 nationally in rushing.

The Big Eight even boasts another candidate for the national rushing championship. But, for once, he does not wear the colors of Oklahoma, Nebraska or Oklahoma State.

He's Blaise Bryant of Iowa State, who leads all Division I rushers with a 177-yard average, the total he put on the board while scoring four touchdowns and helping the Cyclones pound Northern Iowa 35-6 last week in their opener.

Bryant may have trouble duplicating his 177-yard effort this week because the Cyclones must travel to Minnesota, whose defense is expected to offer more resistance than Northern Iowa's.

Bryant, who burst upon the scene last year as a transfer student, appeared to have an outstanding game against Northern Iowa with more than 170 rushing yards and four touchdowns. But just wait, says Coach Jim Walden, until he really gets tuned up.

"I won't say he had a poor day in terms of effort. The effort was there," Walden said. "But he said he had a bad day, and I know what he meant. We haven't done a lot of high-velocity contact and backs, good athletes, need to get into a flow. Football is not something you quit and go back to. You've got to sense it. It was obvious that his timing and his mechanics, making the proper cut, were off. You lose a little something when you don't do contact work."

Only a coach could notice the little things that just weren't clicking.

"Blaise was getting into things too quick," Walden said. "He missed some cuts. He knows what I'm talking about. But he scored four touchdowns. It sounds like we're being picky, but really and truly he didn't have a good day. He played hard, but not as mentally good as he will have to down the season."

The Cyclones, featuring one of the country's top running backs, are being mentioned as a good candidate for a bowl game this year. But Walden has analyzed that possibility as carefully as he studied Bryant's moves and cuts, and he believes he knows exactly what must happen.

"We have three seasons, three separate seasons," he said of his schedule.

The first part of the season has the Cyclones playing Northern Iowa, Minnesota, Iowa, Western Michigan and Kansas.

Fry examines the high cost of living while lamenting about how to beat Cincy

High prices

"We come in for our home games and we're driving the bus with the players and I see $5 for parking," Iowa football coach Hayden Fry said. "And you add that to the $18 that they charge, that's $23. Then if you want a program or a hot dog or whatever, gee, you've got to be a millionaire to go to these things."

"What do they charge now for basketball, $13? I don't know, I'm from the old school."

"That's not as ridiculous as paying 50 bucks to go over and watch some rock group over here in the auditorium or in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. It's just one night of all that noise."

"I don't really know if any team is worth that kind of money ... Gee, you've got to be a millionaire to go to these things."

"I don't have to pay for my ticket. But I'd really have second thoughts as John Q. Public out there paying that much money to go to a ball game."

When They Can't Stand Us...

Fry: "(The team will) do whatever they have to do to get away from the coaches right now."

We're Favored, but...

Fry: "Know we're a big favorite to win this weekend, and I'm trying to figure out how we're going to do it."

40?

"We couldn't score that much in pregame warmup," Hayden Fry after a reporter suggested that the Hawkeyes could score 40 or more points against Cincinnati Saturday.

Catch more

Merton Hanks: "I think (interceptions) have been the low point in my statistical career at Iowa. I just have to catch a few more of those batted-down balls. Instead of batting them down, I have to catch a few of them."

Football hero

Fry: "I'd love to have a football team where all of them emulated Merton"

Hanks as a person, as a Christian, as a football player having the enthusiasm and energy he has. The way he goes about life, he's just really an exceptional human being."

No gimme

Hanks: "We're in a unique situation because this team has so much to prove. There is no gimme on our schedule. We know collectively, we have to go out and earn everything that we can get."

Hold that line!

Jim Johnson: "If we see a team that's going to double team us, we're just going to send another end or somebody else. If we rush five, two guys on one person is going to open up a hole somewhere.

"I don't think any team can be affording to double team anybody just because of the fact that (tackle Matt) Ruhland, he holds his own and you've got Moses Santos and LeRoy (Smith) that can just fly from the ends."

"Rod Davis and Mike Wells are just going to be battling up the middle. You've got one kid that can run a 4.7 40(-yard dash) and you've got another kid who can send a 300-pound center 10 yards back in the backfield."

"They'll probably think about (double teaming us) at first, and they might even try it, I think it's going to hurt them in the long run."

Foster comes out of shadows for final season

Tackle time

Iowa linebacker Melvin Foster, right, chases down Minnesota quarterback Marquel Fleetwood during the Hawkeyes' 1989 loss to the Gophers.

By Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

Leading the team with 116 tackles in the 1989 season wasn't his biggest achievement.

Neither was being ranked sixth in the Big Ten for averaging 10.6 tackles per game.

For Iowa linebacker Melvin Foster, learning was the biggest thing he's picked up in college.

"If I was to look back on the four years I've been here," Foster said. "I think the major accomplishment for me was when I was redshirted and had to sit out a year in order to learn the techniques of a 52 defense.

"I came from a 4-3 defense in high school and it was really just run to the football. And now that I'm at the university and they've got the 52 where you've got the slant defense, the eagle defense and it's more technique. Now I have the 52 under my belt as well as the 4-3, so that pretty much helps me out."

A USA Today and Parade first-team all-American as a high school senior, Foster came to Iowa expecting to get in and play.

When he got to Iowa City, he found a different situation.

"It took me a good year and a half to actually get used to ... getting into the 52 defense," the senior from Houston, Tex., said. "There are so many things you have to do and to know. I won't say until after this year if I've mastered it, but I think I've got it down pretty well. I feel real comfortable with it.

"On the snap of the ball, I float to a different gap just on the basis of repetitions, going over it time after time after time again in practice."

While Foster has been successful since his freshman season, he was usually in the shadow of former Iowa linebacker Brad Quast. Now Quast is gone — recently released from the NFL's New York Jets — and Foster is in the limelight.

But the 6-foot-3, 240-pounder said he doesn't feel pressure to "fill Quast's shoes" this season.

"I've started in and out of games throughout my career even though Brad was considered the guy here on campus as far as linebackers were concerned," Foster said. "I sort of had to take a backseat. But while taking that backseat I learned a lot.

"I don't feel like I'm having to fill the shoes of Brad Quast. I've always felt that I was in my own shoes and it will always be that way no matter where I go even after college football."

During his redshirt year in 1986, Foster was named scout team defensive Player of the Year. The following year he recorded 49 tackles as a backup to

"I don't feel like I'm having to fill the shoes of Brad Quast. I've always felt that I was in my own shoes and it will always be that way..."

—Melvin Foster

J.J. Puk.

In his Iowa career he has totaled 230 tackles, which ties him with former Hawkeye Bobby Stoops for 21st on the school's career tackle list.

"I've always looked at myself as being a leader here at the University of Iowa," Foster said. "I've found out that a player can't be an individual player in order to help out a football club. That's the attitude I'm taking is just being a team player and to do as much as I can to help this team win.

"I really don't know what to expect from the season as far as my play is concerned. I feel like every year I get a little bit better so all I can ask of myself is just keep playing and keep improving. Hopefully that improvement part will end up in a good season for myself as well as for the team."

Foster is also looking for a good end to his academic career. The sociology major expects to get his degree in December and would like to become a probation officer.

That, he said, stems from growing up in Houston.

"There's a lot of crime rate there, and I see a lot of people come and go," Foster said. "A lot of people get put on parole in a matter of years, and I think the system is, in a sense, almost warped because (they think that) if the jails are overcrowded that we should give this person parole.

"I don't think that's right. I'd like to become a probation officer and if someone doesn't deserve parole, they won't get parole."

But Foster didn't have that attitude until he got to Iowa City. Looking back, he said he realizes that going to school away from home was a good move for him.

"Coming to Iowa was definitely a way to get out of Houston," Foster said. "I know if I would have stayed in Houston and gone to ... any of the Southwestern Conference schools, I would have been at home because all my friends are there, the partying is there and it was in driving distance.

"Things probably wouldn't have worked out for me. I came here to Iowa, I'm far away from home and a lot of times I felt like going home. But I was a long distance from home. I had to stick it out, and I think that was a wise decision on my part."

But, Foster said, it's tough being away from his mother, brother, two sisters and niece.

Besides being a big influence overall on his life, Foster says his mother was also a great cook. And that is what he misses now that he's on his own.

"I think I miss here home-cooked meals more than anything," Foster said. "Even living in an apartment and cooking my own food just doesn't cut it. It's nothing like mom's food."

Despite the distance, Foster said he is close to his family because of the way they were brought up. And according to him, that will never change.

"My mom has always been there for me," Foster said. "I guess a typical inner-city kid coming out, I didn't have the good things in life. By going through that, seeing (my mom) cry every now and then because she didn't know if she would be able to give us a good Christmas or when was the next food going to be put on the table, it only drew us closer together.

"Sure I miss her but she understands as well as myself that I'm growing up and she has to let go. But even though she has to let go, there will always be that special someone. And she'll always be that special someone in my heart."

Noseguards create 'nice' problem for Fry

By John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

When a football team has more than one player ready to fill a starting spot, it's generally perceived by the media and fans as a problem. A controversy. Not so by Hayden Fry.

"I wish we had more problems like that, from a depth standpoint," said the Iowa head football coach.

One such position the Hawkeyes will have no trouble filling this season is defensive noseguard, because this year Iowa has two outstanding players ready to fill the spot.

Starting at noseguard for the Hawkeyes Saturday against Cincinnati is Rod Davis, a junior out of Queens, N.Y., who started two games last season and made seven appearances after playing in seven games as a freshman.

Right on the veteran's tail is Mike Wells, a redshirt freshman who, after playing for the scout team last year, is ready for some Big Ten experience.

Is this a controversy? No. Both Davis and Wells are expecting to see equal playing time this season, regardless of who gets the starting nod.

"It's not really that important who starts," said Davis. "We complement each other. He's much stronger than I am, but I'm much quicker than he is. It works hand-in-hand."

Wells, who last year was named scout team defensive MVP against Wisconsin, is happy to finally get his chance to play in a game.

"He's starting the game and I'm not worried about that," Wells said. "I just need some experience under my belt because ... I'm nervous."

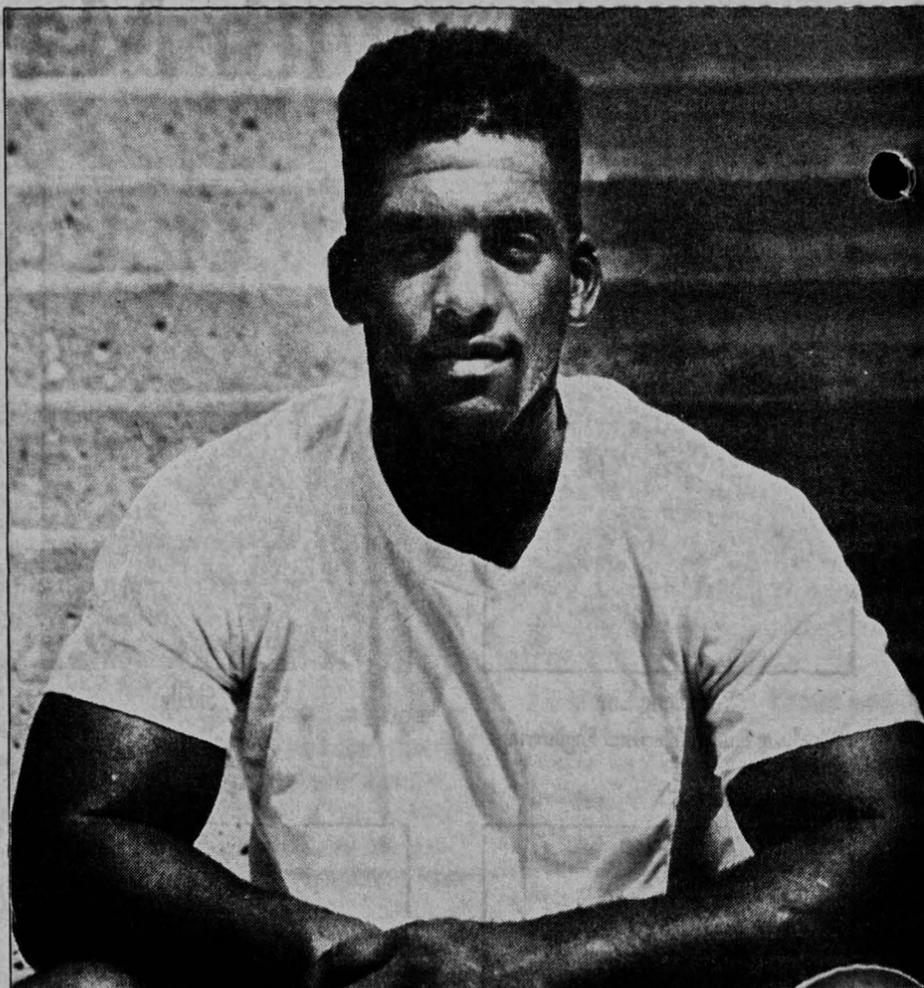

And that, says Coach Fry, is one reason that Davis will start the Hawkeyes' season opener.

"Normally, if we have two guys even, from a practice-performance standpoint, then the guy who's been in combat, the guy that's heard the bullets flying, will get the starting call above the other guy and then we'll come on with the less-experienced guy.

"That doesn't mean Wells won't play as much as Davis. But that's how we'll do it. We'll give the veteran the opportunity to start and then we'll come on with the other guy and we'll let him play quite a bit."

For both Davis and Wells, the situation has been a healthy one.

"We had a real tough competition in scrimmages," said Davis. "But we help each other out. Even though I've been here a little longer than he has, sometimes I forget things and he keeps me up to date."

Randy Bardy

Rod Davis

The Iowa coaches work with a grading system during practice "to keep us on our toes," said Davis. Often the system will help determine who starts and who comes in off the bench.

"If you do a play right during practice you get a plus; if you do it wrong you get a minus," said Wells. "Last scrimmage I think Rod got a 93 percent and I got a 90 percent. So we're pretty close."

That's a good assessment because, despite the fact that there's been a battle for the starting spot, almost everyone familiar with the Hawkeyes knows that both Davis and Wells will play — a lot.

What Fry has in his two noseguards are two players not only capable of starting, but who also fit nicely together in terms of their individual talents.

Davis puts it into context: "He looks to run through; I look to run around you."

Senior defensive tackle Jim Johnson likes the prospect of playing side by side with the Davis and Wells.

"Rod Davis and Mike Wells are just going to be battling up the middle," said the All-America candidate. "You've got one kid that can run a 4.7 40(-yard dash) and another kid who can send a 300-pound center 10 yards into the backfield."

One thing is for certain, regardless of who plays when and where, both Davis and Wells feel their experience last year helped them prepare for the 1990 quest for the Rose Bowl.

"Right now I feel like I can do it all," said Davis. "From looking at films of myself I'd say I'm an all-around player right now. I've developed my running game and my passing game."

For Wells, the challenge is to see how well he performs in Division I action after his redshirt year.

"To be honest, I wanted to redshirt," he said. "It gives you an extra year to get with the program and learn how everything works. That really helped me."

The biggest change so far for Wells has been practicing with the two-deep as opposed to the scout team.

"My head was spinning last year," said Wells. "I didn't know what was going on. Being with the (two-deep) as opposed to the scout team is, if you do something wrong, you get yelled at immediately. We're watching film everyday, and the coaches will point out what you're doing wrong."

"On the scout team you don't really know what you're doing wrong and you can't really seek out the coaches during the day because they need to spend time with the real team."

Johnson weathers coaching change, captainhood to lead squad

"That's probably the biggest honor I've gotten — being a captain."

—Jim Johnson

By Brian Gaul & Steve McLeran
The Daily Iowan

Iowa defensive tackle Jim Johnson and his teammates on the line have been running more defensive drills this season.

That isn't because the Hawkeye defensive scheme is any more complicated. But it is due to a different coaching philosophy.

Dan McCarney, Iowa's defensive line coach last season, left the Hawkeyes to join new Wisconsin coach Barry Alvarez' staff as defensive coordinator. He was replaced by Ted Gill, who coached the defensive line at Rice last season.

"Coach Mac (McCarney) would let you know right there on the spot if you were screwing up," Johnson said of Iowa's defensive drills. "Coach Gill will make you run the play over about eight times and then let you figure it out for yourself."

"(McCarney's) big philosophy was to just line up, tee off against somebody and just go and make things happen. Coach Gill is a perfectionist. He wants you to do the same thing but he wants you to do it in the package of our defense."

Johnson said he doesn't have any problems with that philosophy and feels that it will eventually help him.

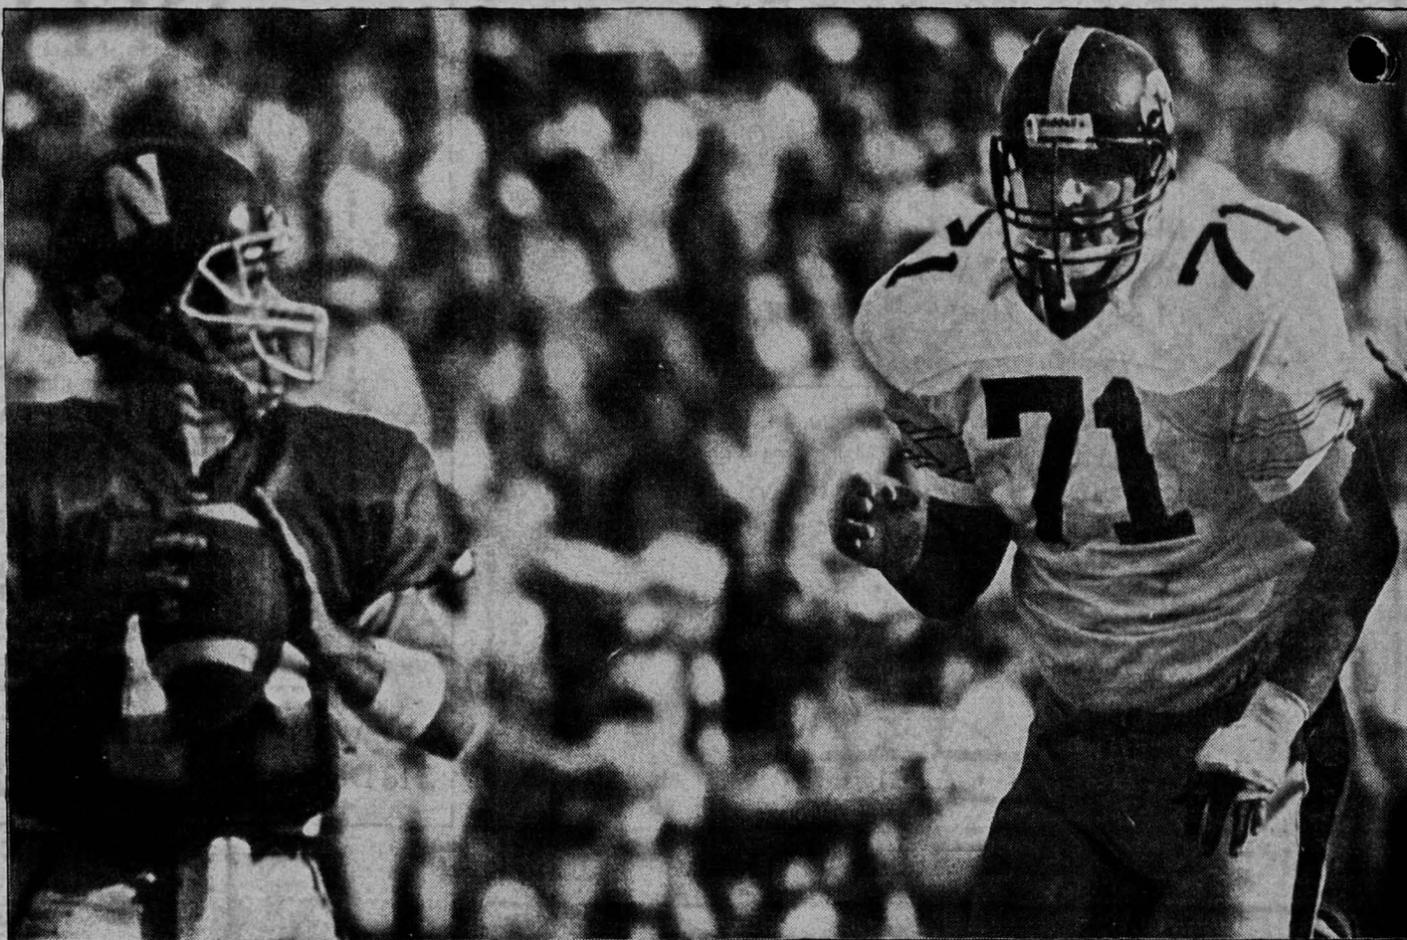

"You have to learn by experience," the 6-foot-3, 270-pound lineman said. "If it takes eight reps to do it right, then that's what you have to do. That's Coach Gill's philosophy and no one's having any problems with it. He's going to make us into better players."

Johnson and fellow defensive tackle Matt Ruhland, both students of McCarney's aggressive defensive style, were all-Big Ten selections last year. Johnson said that McCarney would be missed.

"(McCarney) wasn't only a coach, he's a good friend of mine," Johnson said. "He's a great coach and he's going to make those (Wisconsin) kids win. They just have to believe in him."

But Johnson said Gill, who has been an assistant at eight other schools, has also earned the respect of the Iowa players.

"We believe in Coach Gill right now,"

Grrrrr!

Iowa defensive tackle Jim Johnson stalks Northwestern quarterback Tim O'Brien during the Hawkeyes' win over the Wildcats last season in Evanston, Ill. A captain of the Iowa squad this year, Johnson has been drawing preseason attention from several magazines.

Johnson said. "Everybody's listening to what he's saying and if we've got a question, we'll ask. He's a real personable type of guy. He'll sit down with you, and if you're doing things wrong, he'll let you know."

The coaching change isn't the only adjustment that Johnson will need to make this year. As a returning first-team all-Big Ten selection, the Forest City, Iowa, native is likely to see more double-teams from opponents this season.

But Johnson warns that might not be the best strategy.

"If we see a team that's going to double team us, we're just going to send another end or somebody else," Johnson said. "If we rush five, two guys on one person is going to open up a hole somewhere. I don't think any team can be affording to double team anybody."

"They'll probably think about it at first, and they might even try it. I think it's going to hurt them in the long run."

Johnson took the Big Ten conference by storm last year, leading the league with 21 tackles for loss among his 106 total stops. Johnson was also the league leader in quarterback sacks with 12 for 70 yards in losses.

Johnson was also co-winner of the Roy J. Carver Award for Iowa team's MVP. He started all 11 games and became just the fourth Iowa down lineman to record over 100 tackles in a season, finishing with 106 stops.

Johnson has already been drawing preseason attention and accolades this year. He has been named first team all-Big Ten by four football magazines and a second-team all-American by two of them.

But for Johnson, the biggest honor was being named team captain. Johnson joins cornerback Merton Hanks, running back Tony Stewart and offensive guard Greg Aegerter as the Iowa team leaders.

"That's probably the biggest honor I've gotten — being a captain," Johnson said. "No one can take that away. I'll have that forever."

But there's also a down side to that title, he said.

"Sometimes you've got to be a little more cautious on what you do and what you say," Johnson said. "A lot of the guys, I think, respect what I do on the field because I'm so mentally determined to do my job."

"Sometimes I show that, and sometimes I show it a little too much. Some guys pick up on that and sometimes might want to imitate me. If that helps us win, that's fine."

Parents Weekend

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

Aptly titled "Follow the Black and Gold Road", the University of Iowa kicks off its annual Parents Weekend today, Saturday and Sunday.

Centering around the Hawkeyes' season-opening football game with the Cincinnati Bearcats, the Parents Weekend Committee is working to give the parents some excitement — and a little magic.

"We, the Student Alumni Association, have programmed for a diverse group this year," said Parents Weekend Co-Chair Jolene Finch. "We designed the weekend's activities so that both the students and their parents would have a great time."

Upon arrival into the "wonderful land of Iowa City," parents will receive the "royal treatment," beginning with a welcome by the sponsoring Student Alumni Association Ambassadors. Along with a chance to be pampered, the welcome will give those who attend a chance to meet other UI parents.

Friday's agenda provides a plethora of activities and adventures: a tour of Carver-Hawkeye Arena, a backstage view of Hancher Auditorium, mini-lectures on a variety of subjects and a reception by UI President Hunter Rawlings.

To top off the evening, parents will get a first-hand view of Mame, headlining star of stage and screen Juliet Prowse in the title role. What more could anyone ask for, right? Wait until Saturday.

Saturday's excursions begin with guided campus tours, when parents can take in all the precious gems of the city and university, including the Old Capitol, the Museum of Natural History, and the UI Museum of Art.

Never straying from the black and gold path, parents may enjoy a trip to Old Capitol Mall or a sightseeing expedition of the walking mall and surrounding stores and shops.

Don't go and wear out those ruby slippers — the fun is just beginning. "We're off to see the Hawkeyes, the wonderful Hawkeyes of Iowa City" so be sure to wear the brightest black and gold to cheer on the Hawkeyes.

And, if football isn't their cup of tea, parents can tour one of two local attractions: the Hoover Library in nearby West Branch or Main Amana and the Amana Colonies.

Saturday evening brings the mystical and musical together, as parents (and their children, of course) can choose between seeing Mame — in case they missed it Friday — or becoming a victim beyond conscious control under the direction of hypnotist Jim Wand.

Of course there's always that intangible thing labeled "parent-child bonding," like "Hey, Mom, I could really use some groceries. How about let's go to the grocery store and have a nice long talk. Boy, I missed you and Dad!"

If Mom and Dad wake up with the chickens, Sunday morning offers "tee-time" at Finkbine Golf Course between 6:30-9:00 a.m. Before heading back home, the IMU offers a farewell brunch until 11 a.m. Then parents can spend the remainder of the afternoon with their children or click their heels three times and repeat: "There's no place like home," leaving the land of Iowa City somewhere over the rainbow.

Cincinnati Style

Cincinnati will come into the game with a varied offensive look, and a multiple 50 scheme on defense with emphasis on linebacker and secondary coverage.

On offense Cincinnati returns senior Terry Strong, the team's leading rusher with 411 yards and two touchdowns last season. Strong was also the third-leading receiver, catching 18 passes for the year.

Defensively, seniors Kyle Stroh and John Thornton return at the tackles and the secondary is solid with two returning starters from a crew that intercepted 10 passes last year.

First-year Michigan coach Gary Moeller will get a baptism of fire this Saturday when he matches his Wolverines against the top-ranked Fighting Irish of Notre Dame.

At the helm for No. 4 Michigan is quarterback Elvis Grbac, and Moeller said he plans a few departures from former Wolverine coach Bo Schembechler's style.

"Grbac is more of a thrower than his predecessors (Michael Taylor and Demetrius Brown)," said Moeller. "We are anticipating about a 15 percent change in offensive balance towards the passing game."

Illinois coach John Mackovic has a few kinks to work out of his team following its 28-16 loss to Arizona last week. Unfortunately for him, he has to do it before his 21st-ranked team clashes with No. 9 Colorado Saturday.

"We had far too many penalties against Arizona," Mackovic said. "It took us out of our game plan and took away many of the things we thought we could do."

John Cooper's No. 17 Buckeyes fumbled four times and threw one interception against Texas Tech Saturday and still won, 17-10. But Cooper warned his squad that they won't be able to do that against Boston College this weekend.

"Boston College has a good team and is highly underrated," Cooper said. "If we so much as peek ahead to USC (Sept. 29), we could come away with the loss."

Michigan State's George Perles has All-Big Ten quarterback Dan Enos returning and All-Big Ten flanker Courtney Hawkins to throw to, but he's worried about Saturday's game with Syracuse.

"Syracuse is a big, strong football team," Perles said. "They are more dangerous than many people give them credit for."

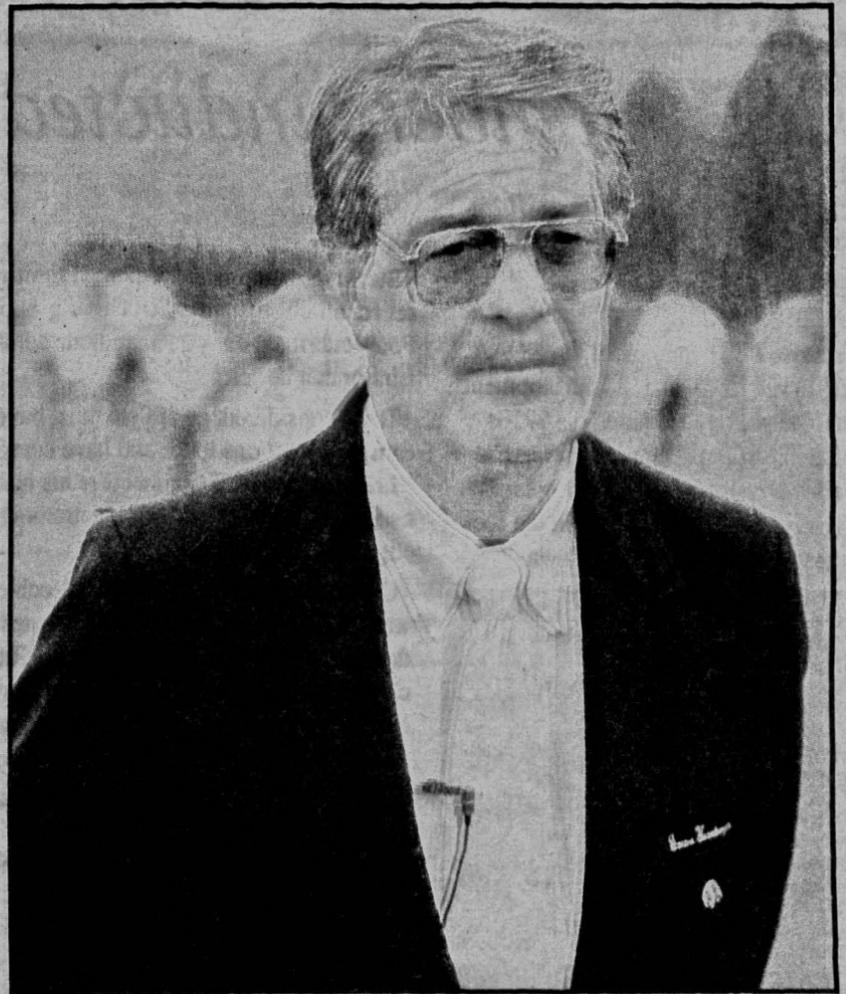

Minnesota's John Gutekunst knows a little bit about Heisman Trophy candidate running backs like Iowa State's Blaise Bryant. He had one of his own a year ago in Darrell Thompson.

"Thompson and Bryant have much of the same running style," said the fifth-year coach whose squad takes on the Cyclones Saturday. "Both of them have the ability to run over people, and Blaise runs like he's running down a hill."

Wisconsin Badgers coach Barry Alvarez is disappointed that his team didn't capitalize on some opportunities during its opening loss to California. But he said he is happy with the injury situation going into Saturday's matchup with Ball State.

"We came out relatively injury-free," said the former Iowa assistant, "and we will need to be to beat Ball State. They play good team defense by throwing a lot of different schemes at you."

Purdue's Eric Hunter, who is The Sporting News' preseason first-team All-Big Ten quarterback will lead the Boilermakers into battle with Washington Saturday, while Indiana takes on Kentucky and Northwestern faces Duke.

Hall of Fame

Six members inducted into Hawk Hall of Fame

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Two Rose Bowl champions, an NCAA basketball runner-up and the development of Finkbine golf course made the 1950s one of the most important and successful eras in Iowa history. And four people involved in that success highlight the second class of inductees into the Iowa

Charles Darling

Letterman's Club Athletic Hall of Fame.

This year's class, with their sports and years of competition, are: Charles Brookins, track, 1922-24; Chuck Darling, basketball and track, 1950-52; Mike Enich, football, 1938-40; Kenny Ploen, football, 1954-56; Bucky O'Connor, basketball coach, 1950, 1952-58; and Paul Brechler, business manager and athletic director, 1946-59. Brookins, Enich and O'Connor are deceased.

Induction ceremonies for this year's class will take place as part of the annual Letterman's Banquet Sept. 15 following Iowa's season-opening football game with Cincinnati. The inductees will also be honored during the game.

The Letterman's Hall of Fame opened last year as part of the athletic department's celebration of the 100th year of Iowa football, according to Letterman's Club executive director Les Steenlage.

"A Hall of Fame is something that has been missing from the university for several years," Steenlage said. "It was a natural that the Letterman's Club set it up and become a part of it."

Twenty-one members were inducted into the original class last year, including notables such as Heisman Trophy winner Nile Kinnick, football coach Forest Evashevski, basketball player Don Nelson, track star and coach F. X. Cretzmeyer and Outland Trophy winners Alex Karras and Calvin Jones.

Steenlage said that a six-person limit was set for all classes after the charter group. Four letterman, one coach and one administrator can be selected each year.

To be considered, an athlete must have earned at least one letter and have completed his eligibility 10 years before his nomination. All coaches and administrators are eligible.

O'Connor, Darling, Ploen and Brechler were all a part of Iowa's athletic success during the 1950s. Iowa won two Big Ten championships in both football and basketball and one each in tennis and wrestling during that period.

Ploen, a quarterback on the 1956 Iowa football team that won the Rose Bowl under the guidance of Evashevski, went on to be an all-Pro for the Winnipeg Bluebombers of the Canadian Football League.

"I'm pleased and honored to be selected," said Ploen in a telephone interview from his real estate business in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada. "When your career is over and as you reflect back, it's nice to be thought of as a great player."

Ploen has also been selected to the All-Century Hawkeye football squad and the CFL Hall of Fame. He called his stay at Iowa the fulfillment of a "boyhood dream."

"It was part of a boyhood dream playing at the home state university. I grew up following the Hawkeyes in the Des Moines

Kenny Ploen

Register," Ploen, who was MVP of both the Rose Bowl and the Big Ten conference in 1956-57, said.

Ploen also said the highlights of his career included the Hawkeyes' surprising rise to national prominence in 1956 and their appearance in the 1957 Rose Bowl.

Iowa, ranked No. 3 nationally entering the game, defeated Pac-10 champion Oregon State 35-19 on Jan. 1, 1957.

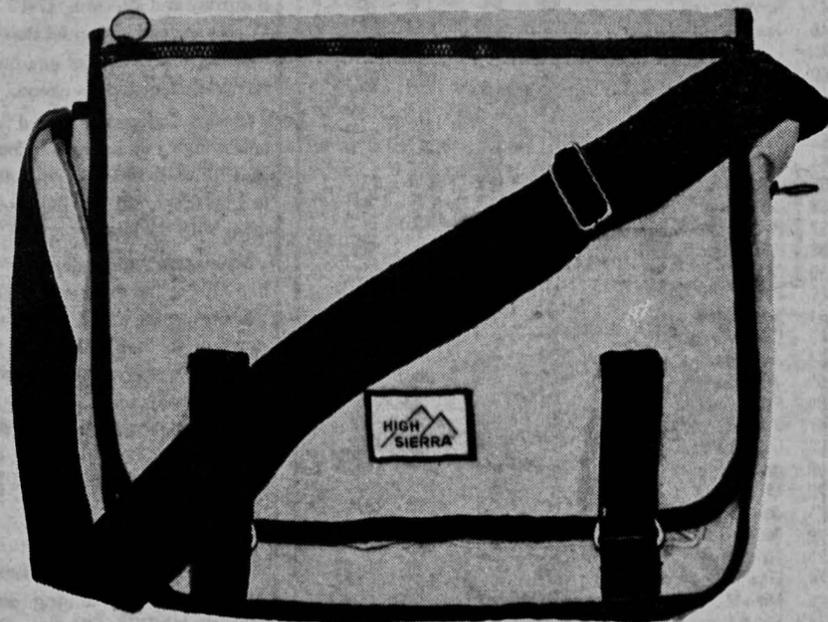

"We came out of nowhere and won the Big Ten. Just winning the Big Ten was a thrill," Ploen said. "At the Rose Bowl, just running out onto the field in pregame warmups was a dream for me."

O'Connor was the coach of the 1956 Iowa basketball team, nicknamed "The Fabulous Five," which finished second in the NCAA Tournament. He also coached

Fry's Hawkeyes going after 0-2 Bearcats

By Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry knows his team is supposed to win against Cincinnati Saturday. But he doesn't want to dwell on it.

"I know we're a big favorite to win this weekend and I'm trying to figure out how we're going to do it," Fry said. "We not only want to win Saturday, we want to look good doing it. We're not going to hold back, we're not going to pull any punches, we're not going to be timid."

The Bearcats bring an 0-2 record into Kinnick Stadium after losses of 34-20 and 34-0 to Bowling Green and Central Michigan, respectively. They went 1-9-1 last year.

But the Hawkeye squad hasn't played a game yet, and that, Fry said, will give Cincinnati an advantage.

"We realize that Cincinnati is not the toughest team from a won-loss standpoint or a personnel standpoint on our schedule," the coach said. "But the fact that they've played two games, that's got to be very beneficial to them to be improved this week. As a coach you have to look at the possibilities even though they've lost both games and they've had all kinds of problems. They do have some individual talent.

"When our guys looked at the films, it was pleasing to see them realize that (the Bearcats) can move the football and can play defense."

A factor in the Hawkeyes' play this year will be redemption. The team is trying to forget about its 5-6 campaign in 1989 and to establish itself this season.

"We want to have a great season, redeem ourselves in Kinnick Stadium," senior linebacker Melvin Foster said. "Let's try to turn it around and have a good home record as well as on the road and to go to somebody's bowl game."

"Last year was a real sour feeling, I know, for the seniors as well as me being a junior. I mean, I was a senior too, a senior school-wise not eligibility-wise, and I had that bitter taste of not being able to go to a bowl game."

"We're going to go into the ballgame to get after Cincinnati and try to estabhope they develop a little personality. But being a first game we're aware that we're going to make some mis-

Field hockey team continues winning standard, boasts 5-0 record at 1990's beginning

By Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

The new decade has started off with a bang for many of Iowa's fall sports teams, while others are looking to improve their performances. The following is a summation of what the Hawkeyes have done in each sport and what can be looked forward to this weekend.

FIELD HOCKEY

Coach Beth Beglin's Hawkeyes currently own a 5-0 record, following a double dose of home victories last week at the Hawkeye Field Hockey Field. Iowa handed defeats to the Ball State Cardinals, 4-0 and the Massachusetts Minutewomen, 1-0.

Junior goalkeeper Eileen Moyer recorded her second and third shutouts of the season, while junior forward Kris Fillat scored three of the five goals on the home-stand. Fillat now leads the Hawkeyes with eight goals on the year.

"I'm supposed to take the ball and get into scoring position," Fillat said. "That's just what I expect from myself. And Beth expects a lot from me and I like that."

The Hawkeyes have also been up some key defensive stats, including outscoring their opponents 19-2 and outshooting them 146-16. Beglin's squad has also accumulated 73 penalty corners as opposed to their foes.

"I'm really pleased with our corner defense," Beglin said. "We didn't give up any to Ball State and to give up only three corners to a team like Massachusetts is outstanding."

This weekend the Hawkeyes open the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference season in East Lansing, Mich. Today they take on the Michigan State Spartans and Saturday Iowa will face the Ohio State Buckeyes, also in East Lansing.

VOLLEYBALL

Following up last season's first-ever NCAA appearance with a 1-4 start may not be what the Hawkeye spikers had in mind at this point, but Iowa will look to change things around this weekend.

Coach Ruth Nelson's Iowa squad began the 1990 campaign with three straight losses on the West Coast to nationally-ranked teams: UC-Santa Barbara, San Diego State and defending national champion Long Beach State.

"It was a great experience playing against high-caliber teams," senior Ginger Lorentson said after the road trip.

The Hawkeyes returned to Iowa last weekend to finish third at the Big Four Tournament in Ames.

Iowa dropped its opening match Saturday to Iowa State 15-9, 16-14, 8-15, 7-15, 15-8, but came back Sunday to register its first victory of the season, against Drake.

Nelson's squad will next travel to Texas where they will tangle with Southwest Texas State Saturday and fourth-ranked Texas Sunday.

WOMEN'S GOLF

Boosted by a freshman and a senior, Coach Diane Thomason's Hawkeyes shot their way to a fifth-place finish at the North Carolina Open last weekend.

The Iowa squad shot a 918 for the three-day tournament, which featured 18 schools. The Hawkeyes were led by 1989-90 all-Big Ten member and NCAA qualifier Stacey Arnold, whose tournament total of 227 was good for 14th overall; and freshman Mary Jo Rollins, who finished 18th with a 229.

"I was really pleased with the way our freshmen played," said Thomason.

In addition, Thomason's linksters finished ahead of Big Ten opponent Indiana. Last season, Iowa finished second to the Hoosiers at the Indiana Invitational, Lady Buckeye Invitational and the Big Ten Championship.

Next up for the Hawkeyes is the Minnesota Open Saturday and Sunday at Minneapolis.

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

The Hawkeyes picked up where they left off a year ago, when they defeated Northeast Missouri State at the Hawkeye Open last weekend, 20-44.

Iowa is coming off an eighth place national finish, the highest in the school's history. Coach Jerry Hassard garnered co-Big Ten Coach of the Year honors in the process.

Against Northeast Missouri State, Iowa sophomore Tracy Dahl was the first to cross the finish line, as she registered a time of 17:53 for the three-mile course.

"We have been working hard to prepare for the season," Hassard said after his team's win. "We responded well and I saw many things I liked."

Iowa has the week off to prepare for the Purdue Invitational on September 21.

MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

out of the gate in record-breaking fashion last Saturday, when they squeezed out a 27-28 win at Augustana in Rock Island, Ill.

Sophomore Kevin Herd shattered Augustana's four-year-old course record of 19:52 with a time of 19:20.9, to win the meet. Iowa senior David Brown also broke the record with his third-place finish in 19:50.6.

The Hawkeyes will try to make it two in a row on Saturday, when they play host to Minnesota and Northern Iowa at 11:00 a.m. at Finkbine Golf Course

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Last year's Big Ten Coach of the Year Micki Schillig, who guided the Hawkeyes to a 16-4 record in 1989, leads her team to Drake today through Sunday for its season-opener at the All-Iowa Invitational. Iowa then entertains Nebraska in their home-opener on September 21.

MEN'S TENNIS

The men's team also kicks off its season today through Sunday, as they travel to Ames to compete in the Iowa State Invite.

Coach Steve Houghton's team is coming off a 13-14 season, which included a 5-4 win at longtime nemesis Michigan. The Hawkeyes tied the Wolverines for fifth in the Big Ten with a 4-5 mark.

Tailgating makes for unique football experience

By Jamie Butters
The Daily Iowan

It's a family affair. Well, in a manner of speaking.

For those who like to make the most of the gameday experience, tailgating is a popular UI tradition which tends to revolve around family and friends.

Tailgating is that event peculiar to football where fans congregate outside the stadium to get in the spirit (so to speak) before the game and celebrate immortality or drown their sorrows once the outcome is determined.

The term appears to be derived from the part of a pickup truck or stationwagon which folds down in back. Either this is because that is the best place to put the food and drink or because as Jordan Flatt paraphrases P.J. O'Rourke, "pickups and front porches have a lot in common — they're both good places to drink beer."

Vehicles are an integral part of not only the name but, especially for those from out of town, the event. Anything from buses to RVs to rusty, rust-colored Subarus are used. Tailgating is possible without a car as is evidenced by groups in tents. The guide is that if there is that if people are enjoying food, drink in the general proximity of a football game — it's a tailgate.

For Flatt, a senior from West Des Moines, tailgating is a family tradition. He has been tailgating with his family and family friends for six or seven years because, "It's the only fun thing to do outside of Des Moines."

Along with the festivities before and after football games, his family has other sub-traditions — for instance a "prayer meeting" where they root for Iowa State to lose and a betting pool ($5 a piece) on the total number of points scored in the game.

A typical tailgate, according to Flatt, begins at about 9:30 or 10:00 a.m. with "Cajun" bloody marys — that is bloody marys with lots of pepper. The rest of the morning is spent drinking beer, eating food and looking for an open port-a-potty.

The tailgating tradition, however, also runs strong in the greek system, according to Jennifer Gangloff of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority. Many fraternities and sororities tailgate, usually in joint parties, where a fraternity hosts a party for a sorority. This doesn't appear to be as much out of chivalry as pragmatism: Sororities are not allowed to have kegs.

Gangloff said they begin tailgating at 8:00 or even earlier. "You just get up, brush your hair and go," Gangloff said, "Of course I never go that early."

She said the tailgating parties are a fun way to "hang out with a bunch of people before the game. We all go over together."

Starting so early has its drawbacks, however, "some stay at the party throughout the game," she said. Others, she said, return to the party at halftime. This may be in order to avoid the infamous "third-quarter hangover."

Some tailgating Hawkeye fans aren't quite so caught up in the dringing aspects of fanhood. "The food," proclaimed Shawn Aucutt, "The food is definitely my favorite part (of tailgating)." The Cedar Rapids native said he doesn't drink too much before the game starts so he can "try to remember the game."

Darling, an all-American who broke 11 Big Ten and Iowa scoring records and won the Chicago Tribune Silver Basketball trophy as Big Ten MVP in 1952.

"I'm real pleased, I don't know if you really expect to get selected this early," Darling said from his home in Englewood, Colo. "It's real nice. I think (the Hall of Fame) is a real fine idea."

Darling also was a shot putter for the Iowa track team and president of his senior class in the College of Liberal Arts. Darling said his most vivid Iowa memories are of his college coach and a painful loss to Illinois in 1952.

"I think the biggest disappointment was not beating Illinois my senior year for the Big Ten Championship," Darling said. "It was a good year and a great team. I have nothing but good memories of Bucky O'Connor."

O'Connor compiled an overall record of 113-59 in his nine years and led Iowa to two appearances in the Final Four. O'Connor's 1955 team finished fourth and his 1956 NCAA runner-up squad was the first in Iowa history to win 20 games.

Brechler was athletic director from 1947-

59 and was involved in the creation of Finkbine Golf Course.

"We decided we needed another course because the back nine got flooded every now and then," Brechler said from his home in Denver, Colo. "We bought some farm land and built a golf course on it."

Brechler was also an athletic director at California-Berkeley for 3 1/2 years and commissioner of the Western Athletic Conference from 1962-68.

Brookins, an NCAA track champion in the 200-yard low hurdles in 1922 and 1923, went on to set the world record in the 220-yard low hurdles in the 1924 Olympics. He later coached the Iowa track team in 1928.

Enich was a member of the 1939 Iowa Ironmen football team and captained the 1940 squad. He graduated from the College of Law in 1941 and was a district court judge until 1978.

Noseguards continued from page 6

The closest thing Wells had to actual Big Ten experience last year was suiting up for one of the biggest games of the 1989 season.

"I got to dress for the Michigan game last year," said Wells. "I had goose bumps. I really wanted to get in there but I figured I wouldn't play as well as the guys out there."

"(Defensive line coach Ted) Gill seems to have confidence in me and makes me feel confident in myself."

But that seems to be the case for both Rod Davis and Mike Wells, because the Hawkeyes know they're strong noseguard. And quick. And that is a very valuable combination.

takes. We just hope they're not humongous."

Iowa returns almost everyone from last season, and Fry said he feels that the year of experience has helped those players.

Now he is having difficulty deciding who the No. 1 player is at several positions. That is a problem Fry says he likes to have.

"We've had some great battles at different positions," the coach said. "By Big Ten play we should know who's No. 1. I wish we had more problems like that from a depth standpoint."

One of the biggest "battles" is at running back between seniors Tony Stewart and Nick Bell.

Bell was slated to start a month ago. But now Stewart, who was the school's first sophomore to rush for over 1,000 yards two years ago, holds that position.

Fry stressed, though, that both will see a lot of playing time.

"Right now I think Tony Stewart will probably start and Nick Bell will rotate at running back and fullback," Fry said. "But there are four backs in the backfield. It might be that they're both in there at the same time."
