Skyrocketing oil costs increase retail prices

By Dave Skidmore
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Skyrocketing oil costs pushed retail prices up a sharp 0.8 percent last month as the Persian Gulf crisis began hitting Americans' wallets, the government said Tuesday.

The seasonally adjusted increase in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index was double the 0.4 percent rise in July and the largest since January, when a severe cold snap pushed prices up 1.1 percent.

In a separate report signaling slackening economic growth, the Commerce Department reported the sharpest increase in the trade deficit since August 1982. Americans imported $9.33 billion more than they exported in July, up 75 percent from June.

Analysts said the trade deterioration was particularly worrisome because it was recorded before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait sent oil prices, and thus the value of U.S. imports, spiraling.

U.S. Trade Balance

"We're looking at the worst of all possible worlds for the economy: worsening inflation and slower growth," said economist David Jones of Aubrey J. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer in New York.

Financial markets turned down in response to the double dose of bad news.

For the first eight months of 1990, prices rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 6.2 percent, up sharply from the 4.6 percent rise for all of 1989.

"Inflation is now at the worst pace in eight years," said economist Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch. "It is the worst since 1982, when the economy was coming out of double-digit inflation."

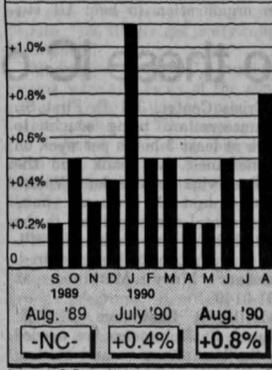

The department attributed nearly half of the August increase to energy costs, up 4.3 percent. Gasoline prices rose 7.6 percent, while fuel oil prices jumped 15.4 percent after six consecutive declines. It was the steepest increase in both categories since January.

Food inflation, however, moderated. Prices, held back by a decline in fruit and vegetable costs, rose 0.3 percent, the smallest since May. Fresh fruit prices tumbled 4 percent, but dairy costs rose 1.3 percent. Prices in other food categories also increased.

Excluding the volatile food and energy sectors, prices rose a seasonally adjusted 0.5 percent after a 0.6 percent increase in July. That translates into an annual core inflation rate of more than 6 percent, a persistently high rate to accompany an economic slowdown, analysts said.

They believe more bad news is coming in the next several months. Crude oil prices have continued to rise in September, topping $33 a

Iowa regents board debates tuition hike

By Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

Hoping not to repeat "past mistakes," the Iowa state Board of Regents discussed 1991-92 tuition increases for state universities at a Tuesday meeting in Cedar Falls.

"If we go through the '90s like we did the '70s, we'll relive the decade of the '80s and see substantial departures of senior tenure faculty members," said Iowa State President Gordon Eaton.

Eaton, who announced his resignation in July, warned the regents to remember what happened when tuition increases didn't match the inflationary rates — a loss of 150 faculty members at ISU.

The regents' board office has recommended a 3.8 percent, or $72 per year, tuition increase for resident undergraduate students, and a 4 percent increase for all others.

During Tuesday's preliminary consideration of tuition increases, regents heard opposing proposals by university student body presidents.

Mark Havlicek, president of the UI Student Association, said while he and Molly Olinger, president of Iowa State University's student body, supported the goal of the regents to attract excellent faculty and improve education, they felt a 3 percent, or $56 per year, tuition increase for all students would be more fair and would aid accessibility to college.

"We cannot maintain our own competitiveness by penalizing students that live outside of the state," said Olinger.

Havlicek agreed and said the rising costs of books and housing, as well as a potential increase in student fees, must also be acknowledged.

But Lisa Raine, president of the University of Northern Iowa student government, asked the regents to consider a tuition freeze, citing the 109 percent tuition increase for UNI students over the last 10 years and additional college costs.

"Through various sources I've been told that students can expect a 100 percent increase in the mandatory student health fee for the upcoming year," Raine said.

"Obviously this isn't a tuition increase per se, but it would be an increase in the actual cost of college, or as I see it — hidden tuition," she added.

UI budget to be reduced by $1.7 million

By Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

In light of declining enrollment at the UI, the Iowa state Board of Regents approved a $1.7 million reduction in the UI's total operating budget on Tuesday.

At the regents meeting in Cedar Falls, Mary Williams, board member from Davenport, asked how a loss in tuition revenues would affect teacher salaries.

Peter Nathan, UI vice president of academic affairs, said the decrease in revenue won't translate into a direct loss of faculty members.

"Our belief is that we can do it without cutting courses," Nathan said.

Syrian/Iranian conference may aid hostage release

By Ed Blanche
The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Syrian President Hafez Assad's visit to Tehran next week comes amid signals from several quarters that some of the Western hostages held by pro-Iranian Shiite Muslim militants in Lebanon could be released soon.

Diplomats in Damascus, the Syrian capital, said Tuesday the plight of the hostages is one of the main topics Assad will discuss with President Hashemi Rafsanjani and other Iranian leaders.

In Islamabad, capital of Pakistan, Iranian Ambassador Javad Mansoori told a news conference Tuesday that an unspecified number of the 13 Westerners held in Lebanon might be freed "perhaps in the next few days." Pakistan, a Muslim state like Iran, has been used as an intermediary with Iran by the United States.

Mansoori gave no details but said that Tehran has received "promises" from Shiite zealots holding the captives that some will be released. He did not name the groups.

Most of the hostages — six Americans, four Britons, two West Germans and an Italian — are held by Shiite factions linked to the fundamentalist Hezbollah, or Party of God. It is Tehran's main ally in Lebanon.

Syria, the main power broker in Lebanon and Iran's main Arab ally, has played a role in earlier hostage releases. Assad's visit to

UI minority enrollment flourishes

By Aziz Gokdemir
The Daily Iowan
and The Associated Press

From the sprawling monster of a hospital to Weeg Computing Center, from Hancher to the Hawkeyes, there are many aspects of the UI that may be boasted about, but the 9.1 percent minority enrollment figure for freshmen is the latest.

The figure is the largest in UI history.

"Since 1968, the UI has concentrated on attracting minorities," according to Philip Hubbard, vice president of student services and director of Opportunity at Iowa.

The Opportunity at Iowa program coordinates universitywide efforts to increase diversity on campus, according to a UI brochure.

Creating and enhancing an academic community diverse in gender, race, ethnicity and nationality is one of the UI's goals outlined in a 1989 strategic plan for achieving distinction.

Hubbard said the UI has established firm relationships with colleges, high schools and minority organizations and is attracting minorities from all levels — freshmen, graduates and professionals.

The influx of minority students comes despite a 3 percent overall drop in UI enrollment. Total minority enrollment for the university is 2,093 — 7.5 percent of the student body.

The minority enrollment is up from 1,959 last year — 6.7 percent of the student body.

Overall, fall enrollment dropped by 839 students, making the total fall enrollment 28,045 students, according to figures provided by the UI Registrar's Office.

The number of entering freshmen dropped by 725 students, or 20.6 percent of the total student body.

"While there are certainly fewer incoming freshmen at the UI, every indication is that they have higher ACT scores, high-school grade point averages and class rankings," according to Michael Barron, admissions director.

All undergraduate colleges lost students except the College of Nursing, which has 343 students, up seven from last fall.

Enrollment in the UI graduate college increased by 91 students. Enrollment in the professional colleges stayed about the same as last year.

Keating jailed in S&L scam; judge sets bail at $5 million

By E. Scott Reckard
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Charles Keating, the man blamed by the government for the nation's biggest savings and loan collapse, was jailed in lieu of $5 million bail Tuesday after he was indicted on criminal fraud charges.

It was the first criminal case filed against Keating, who has become a symbol of the national thrift scandal because of his high pay, lavish personal habits, investments in risky real estate and junk bonds, and alleged use of accounting gimmicks to conceal wrongdoing.

Keating, the former chairman of American Continental Corp., and three other executives were charged in a 42-count state indictment with selling securities by false statements or omissions, selling securities without qualifications and lying to the California Department of Corporations.

The department approved the sale of the high-risk, high-yield junk bonds, technically known as unsecured debentures, at branches of the failed Lincoln Savings and Loan of Irvine, which Keating controlled through American Continental.

More than $200 million worth of junk bonds were sold to 22,000 investors, many of them elderly.

"I don't know how many bondholders are out there ... but they're dancing in the street tonight. We'd like to get our money back," bondholder Shirley Lampel said Monday after the district attorney's office said it had completed its presentation to a special state grand jury.

The government seized control of Lincoln in April 1989. Regulators estimate the bailout could cost taxpayers as much as $2 billion. Last month, a federal judge in Washington upheld the government takeover of Lincoln, saying the operation of the thrift by Keating and others "amounted to looting."

Keating already is charged in several civil cases, including a $1.1 billion racketeering case filed by the agency responsible for the thrift bailout. The federal government is conducting a separate criminal investigation into the alleged looting of Lincoln.

The indictment was handed up late last week but kept sealed until Tuesday. It focuses on 20 alleged victims, a case narrow enough that Los Angeles District Attorney Ira Reiner said it could be presented without confusing a jury.

"We could have named 22,000 victims," Reiner said. "But that would have created an unwieldy case that would have gone on forever and a day."

The felony charges do not seek to recover money for the bond buyers, but a judge could theoretically order restitution as part of sentencing if Keating and the others are convicted, prosecutors said.

Keating, 66, a Phoenix developer, has contended that the government has attempted to make a scapegoat out of him because he was an outspoken critic of the thrift regulatory system. He maintains the bondholders would never have lost money if the government hadn't seized Lincoln last year.

'We are really in the dark ages on this issue.'

Possible UI subsidizing brightens future of day care

By Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

Although dim, there appears to be light at the end of the tunnel for UI faculty and student parents.

After years of alleged neglect, the UI may begin subsidizing campus day-care centers and developing new programs to provide care for the children of UI parents, according to local child-care affiliates.

"The need for child care is immediate," said Terry McCall, director of the Rainbow Day Care Center. "What it comes down to is: The university must take over child care."

The 4-Cs — formerly student senate subsidized child-care centers — wants to be included under the same UI umbrella as Student Health, but the realization of this longstanding goal seems to be out of the group's reach.

"It seems we keep getting pushed to the bottom," said Lisa Stillmunkes, director of the University

Parents Care Collective. "The university kept saying, 'OK, OK, we'll get to you.' We just want to know what can be done to generate money for us."

"At a campus that has 40,000 faculty and students, (having child care) for only 120 families is a drop in the bucket," added Marilyn Simpson, member of the Council on the Status of Women. "We all accept that the need is there, but the problem is: Where is the money coming from?"

The Ad Hoc Committee on Child Care has prepared the UI's first annual child-care progress report and has developed a five-year plan to be implemented this fall.

This year, the plan calls for increased salaries and benefits for the 4-Cs directors. The figures currently range from $14,000 to $21,000 — numbers Stillmunkes called "hardly a salary."

The plan further calls for a pool of trained students to offer in-home and part-time care for sick children by 1996 and recommends a UI hospitals-sponsored center for hospital employees.

"I think (child care) is a very high priority and is growing to even a higher priority all the time," UI President Hunter Rawlings told day-care affiliates at a meeting last month. "I join with you in feeling strongly that we've got to make progress in the coming year."

The need for day-care reform has also reached the ears of the Iowa Legislature and the state Board of Regents.

A regulatory bill passed by the Legislature "loosened up" regulations on child care and allowed day-care facilities to house more children. There has also been a slight increase in the amount of state funding available for child care, according to Sen. Richard Varn, D-Solon.

In addition, the regents' 3.8 percent undergraduate tuition increase proposal will provide $60,000 to subsidize day care for students.

Last in a 3-part series

A list of child-care improvements needed at the UI was first compiled in 1986 by the parenting concerns and child-care committee of the UI Council on the Status of Women. Since then, the UI has taken steps in the right direction, said Norma Roy, chairwoman of the committee.

"The disappointment is that the University of Iowa is not taking the lead; instead it's dragging its feet," she said. "We are really in the dark ages on this issue."

In the future, the committee would also like to explore the notion of "flex place," which would allow parents to work at home while caring for their children.

As for the issue of sick-child care, Roy said she hopes the UI will concentrate further on developing its parental leave policy rather than on a new program or center.

"I think kids need to have Mom or Dad at home to care for them," she said.

Current UI policy allows parents only five sick days to care for ill children. Those five days can be quickly used up in the early years of child care, often leaving parents in a bind, Roy said.

"The university needs to acknowledge that the faculty aren't going to abuse their sick leave ... but when their child is sick, they need to be there," she said.

Roy said she hopes the UI will not stop there.

"Child-care facilities should be added automatically, like bathrooms and parking lots," she said. "I know that's kind of visionary, but I think the day will come."

Avenson proposes rural Iowa get its 'fair share'

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Democratic gubernatorial candidate Don Avenson on Tuesday proposed allocating a third of the state's economic development dollars by region to make sure all areas get a share.

Avenson said a disproportionate share of the development money has been going to Iowa's urban areas, which were not as hard hit during the farm-based recession of the 1980s.

Rural areas and small towns devastated by the economic crunch got little development money, Avenson said.

"The golden circle concept is a great idea for Des Moines, but what we really need is a golden state," Avenson said. "No part of Iowa should get left behind."

Avenson made the comments during a campaign stop in Denison. Copies of the proposal were distributed by his campaign office.

Avenson said the state earmarks roughly $18 million a year for discretionary economic development spending. He said $6 million should be set aside for allocation by region "to ensure that every region of the state gets its fair share."

The remaining $12 million would be allocated on the merits of the projects, he said.

Avenson did not offer details of how the geographic allocation would be made or whether it would be based on population.

It is the second revision of Iowa's economic development programs Avenson has proposed in the past two weeks.

Volunteers needed in Johnson County

By Stacy Williamson
The Daily Iowan

Volunteers Needed!!! Signs with this and similar slogans can be found everywhere around the Johnson County area, urging people to donate their time.

According to Julie Johnston, coordinator of the Volunteer Action Center, 20 E. Market St., there are more than 70 agencies around the Johnson County area looking to fill hundreds of different volunteer positions.

Johnston emphasized the diversity of opportunities available and the range of people needed to fill those positions.

"I've had Ph.D.s (looking for volunteer work), all the way through to retarded citizens and to someone with a community-service obligation," she said.

Some agencies, such as Big Brother/Big Sister, rely almost completely on volunteers to operate, explained Barbara Curtin, director of programs at Big Brother/Big Sister.

Curtin and two case workers compose the permanent staff, while more than 100 volunteers keep the organization running.

Ruth Melby, a graduate assistant with the Student Volunteer Clearinghouse at the UI, told of benefits that come from volunteering.

"(Volunteering) is something that you can be doing for others and yourself... it's an educational and growing experience," Melby said.

Johnston added there are additional benefits for students who decide to give of their time.

"That experience can look very good to future employers," she said, adding that volunteering can give students experience within the fields they plan to pursue.

Said one student volunteer, "You see a lot and you learn a lot. I had a great deal of personal growth. It helps sharpen your thinking in trying to solve problems."

Kristin Rose, a big sister in the Big Brother/Big Sister program, said she enjoys her volunteer time.

"It's a special type of relationship between someone my age and a younger person," Rose said. "(My little sister) keeps me in touch with a child's view of life. It's nice to take a break from the life of a 20-year-old."

The Volunteer Action Center was created through the United Way and Johnson County Department of Human Services. The center attempts to match all potential volunteers with opportunities that meet their individual needs and abilities.

The VAC also advertises for all Johnson County United Way agencies and other non-profit government agencies in need of volunteer help.

The Student Volunteer Clearinghouse, located in the Office of Campus Programs in the Union, is an organization to help UI students and student groups set up volunteer projects with many organizations.

Melby said that the SVC has been involved in finding volunteers for such events as Riverfest and the Special Olympics.

A catalog listing volunteer opportunities in the Johnson County area is available at the VAC, SVC and the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St.

Those interested in performing volunteer work can contact intermediate agencies such as the SVC and VAC or contact an agency directly.

A Marshalltown, Iowa, man had charges of carrying weapons and possession of a firearm by a felon dismissed Friday.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Raymond A. Smith, 42, 410 State St., Marshalltown, was dismissed of the two counts because the state had insufficient evidence to prove the defendant was in possession of a firearm. Records said that the state has dropped the case.

According to records, the defendant allegedly hid a 22-caliber revolver behind a cigarette machine at a Super 8 Motel, 611 First Ave., Coralville. The weapon was allegedly found later by housekeepers, who discovered it was loaded and subsequently turned it over to Coralville police, records state. Police later learned the defendant was a convicted felon, according to records.

■ An Iowa City woman charged Sept. 12 with second-degree mischief, second-degree arson and OWI in the alleged vandalism of a former boyfriend's vehicle was ordered yesterday to avoid contact with the victim.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Janis M. Kincaid, 30, Box 1841, received an order yesterday "to prevent the defendant from having contact with the victim, either in person or by telephone."

The defendant was charged Sept. 12 for allegedly vandalizing a former boyfriend's jeep on the 100 block of Wright Street.

UISA approves Budget Act after 2 weeks of debating

By Marc Morehouse
The Daily Iowan

A new bill requiring stricter standards for budgeting UI student groups seeks to dispel the notion that student organizations have a "divine right" to UI funds, according to one student senator.

After two weeks of debate, the UI Student Association passed the Budget Protocol Act at its regular meeting Tuesday, as members released a massive sigh of relief. The budget had been hotly contested, but there were no signs of discontent at this meeting.

"We are really happy we finally got something passed," said Al Beardsley, a member of the Graduate and Professional Student Senate. "We finally got everything ironed out."

Funding priorities for UI student groups were the focus of the controversy surrounding a previous version of the bill. The language of the rejected budgeting proposal gave the Student Association Budgeting and Auditing Committee the power to choose a student group's funding agenda.

"We've made it clear that SABAC could adjust the funding level of programs, not prioritize a student group's programs," Beardsley said.

SABAC has established four criteria to judge a student group's funding requests and must cite one or more of the following criteria if it decides to cut funding:

- The group's priorities for requested programs.
 - The likelihood of a program accomplishing its stated purpose.
 - The number of students in the target population of the program. The requesting group must estimate the number of students the program will include.
 - The target population's need for the program. Groups will be asked to provide a justification of the need for the program among targeted students.
- Student groups have three avenues for appeal if they disagree with SABAC's funding recommendations. These are:

■ After SABAC submits a published decision to the student senate, SABAC has to hold a public hearing to consider appeals.

■ During this deliberation, the student group can directly appeal to the Student Association.

■ A student group can take the matter to a "totally" independent student judiciary court, but only after it has tried the other two appeal processes.

"In the past, the budgeting process assumed student groups had a 'divine right' to funding," Beardsley said. "We are moving to an approach that says we as representatives of the student body have more leeway to allocate money in the best interest of the whole student body."

Beardsley was referring to the past procedure for handling student groups' budgets.

Emergency grant available despite senate bickering

By Marc Morehouse
The Daily Iowan

Student groups in dire need of immediate funding have some help on the way, according to Dave Belyn, chairman of the Student Association Budgeting and Auditing Committee. The help will come, despite the fact that Belyn, who some senators described as "hard to work with," was voted off the committee at Tuesday's senate meeting.

Each branch of the Student Association — GPSS, Undergraduate Activities Senate and the Undergraduate Collegiate Senate — is allowed to have three senators on SABAC.

UAS, of which Belyn is a member, had four representatives and voted Tuesday on the three members it wanted on the committee. Belyn was not one of them.

He will remain chairman of SABAC but may be removed at a later date.

Senator Lisa Steckman led the opposition to Belyn, saying he was "hard to work with" and cited several instances where Belyn had stormed out of meetings "in temper tantrums."

In a five-minute clash, Belyn asked to defend himself, saying "my character has been slashed." His request was refused by UAS executive officer Troy Raper on the basis that it wouldn't be fair to the two SABAC nominees who couldn't attend the meeting. Raper asked senators earlier to bring the meeting into a closed executive session, but no motion was made to do so.

After the vote was handed down, Belyn stormed out of Tuesday's meeting at the Union's Lucas-Dodge Room. He could not be reached later for comment.

Unanswered from Tuesday's meeting are the questions of how Belyn can be the chairman of SABAC if he is not a member, as well as the specific instances leading to Tuesday's events.

Despite the clash, The Emergency Grant Authorization Act will still be enacted to let student groups bypass the time-consuming budgeting procedure outlined in the recently passed Budget Protocol Act if their programs take place before Nov. 1.

"The new budgeting process is very precise," said Al Beardsley, Graduate and Professional Student Senate member. "The grant allows SABAC to give temporary allocations to let early programs run."

Belyn said groups can pick up grant applications beginning this Friday and should submit the completed forms to SABAC before Sunday.

An organization will not be able to receive a grant that would exceed the total level it was funded for in the 1989 fiscal year.

Charred body found in Davenport

The Associated Press

DAVENPORT — Investigators checked dental and fingerprint records Tuesday to determine if a charred body found in Davenport was that of a missing Rock Island, Ill., girl.

Davenport police said a young girl's body that had been burned beyond recognition was found Monday night by a janitor at a Davenport school. The victim might be Jennifer Ann Lewis, 9, who was reported missing three hours before the body was found, police said.

"I've got two detectives alone just working on confirming that it's her," said Davenport Lt. Don Schaeffer, who is running the joint investigation with Rock Island police.

"Due to the similarities of the missing girl and the found body, a joint investigation by both departments is being conducted," Davenport police said in a news release.

Schaeffer said the detectives were checking the missing girl's fingerprint records from her school and dental records. Police also were comparing a photograph with the body.

Davenport police Capt. Ted Carroll said Miss Lewis was last seen Monday evening in Rock Island, one of the four Mississippi River communities that make up the Quad Cities. Carroll said the girl was wearing a purple-and-white dress and described her as having brown hair and brown eyes, being four feet tall and weighing 60 pounds.

"She was reported missing yesterday evening at approximately 6 p.m., from a Rock Island address, and we received a call on the burned body shortly after 9 p.m.," Carroll said.

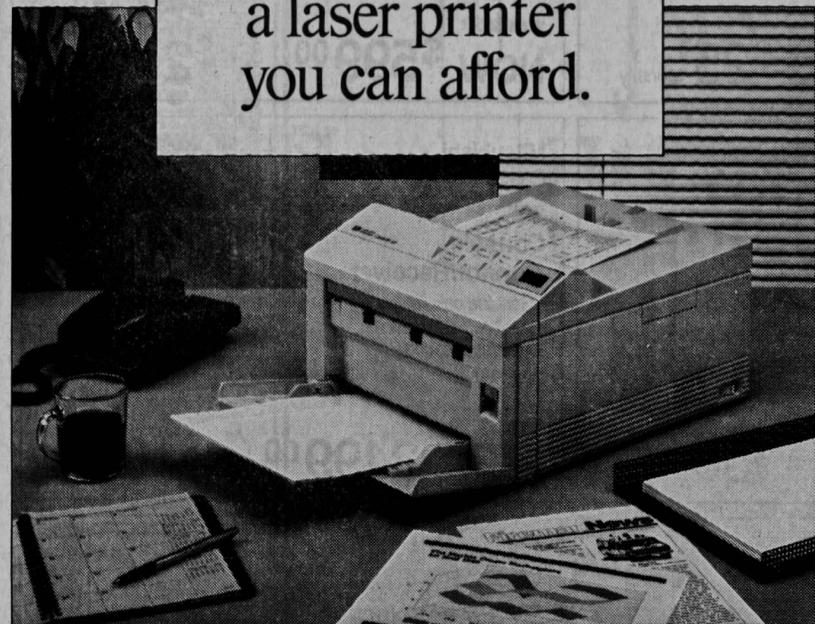

He said an autopsy on the burned body was performed about 4 a.m. Tuesday by Dr. Peter Stephens, a local forensic pathologist.

Neither Carroll nor Schaeffer would give any information on the results of the autopsy.

Davenport police Monday night said the death was being treated as a homicide.

"I don't think the possibility of an accident exists," said Paul Beckman, Scott County Medical Examiner. "I would say homicide until proven otherwise."

Council limits rent for public housing

By Cynthia Taylor
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council Tuesday authorized a city housing authority application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for 25 additional public housing units.

Rent for affordable housing units is 30 percent of a tenant's income. More than 325 city residents are waiting for such housing.

According to housing authority officials, applicants who are on the waiting list are paying 50 to 90 percent of their income on rent, many times only from Social Security benefits and food stamps.

The Iowa City Council also adopted a resolution Tuesday night establishing maximum rents for public housing.

Previously, when a tenant made enough money to afford local rent costs, the tenant was forced to move out of public housing. With the new rent ceiling, tenants have up to 36 months to buy a home or rent property.

The public housing program profits under the new plan by not losing tenants who pay higher rent, said Mayor John McDonald, adding that the tenants benefit by not being forced to move out immediately due to economic reasons.

Rent ceilings will be based on Fair Market Rents as published by HUD. Current rental prices are $488 for a two-bedroom unit, $611 for a three-bedroom unit and $684 for a four-bedroom unit.

In an effort to improve public housing opportunities in Iowa City, the newly formed Affordable Housing Task Force will hold an open meeting Oct. 27 to hear opinions on public housing in the area.

Tuition

After hearing the student presidents speak, Marvin Pomerantz, regents president, said he could support a 3 percent tuition increase but warned that lower tuition does not mean higher accessibility for students.

"This is, and always will be, a controversial issue," Pomerantz said. "But lower tuition does not equate to accessibility. This is an absolute fallacy."

"If there is not enough student aid, we should increase the amount of aid," Pomerantz added.

But several board members questioned how much money the universities would lose if the regents accepted a 3 percent tuition increase instead of the 3.8 percent increase.

Pomerantz said one percentage point equals approximately $1.4 million.

Susan Phillips, UI vice president of finance and university relations, said she was pleased with the reactions of the regents to certain issues.

"Obviously the regents are asking the right questions," Phillips said. "We'd all like to keep tuition down, but it's a tough decision."

The regents will make a final decision about the tuition increase at the next meeting in October.

Regents

UI President Hunter Rawlings added that student demands for courses had been filled better this fall than in the last six years due to the lower student-teacher ratio.

After passing the revisions to the UI's operating budget, the board moved to discussion over budget requests for fiscal years 1992 and 1993.

The regents board office recommended operating budgets of $533.3 million for fiscal year 1992 and $574.5 million in fiscal year 1993.

But John Fitzgibbon, regent member from Des Moines, expressed concern that no funding was provided for marketing the universities to increase enrollment.

"We've internally allocated (for marketing) because we cannot afford any more decreases in enrollment," Nathan said as he explained how the UI funded its marketing.

Both Iowa State University and the UI said more funding would be needed for marketing campaigns to increase enrollment. The University of Northern Iowa was the only state university in Iowa to have an increased enrollment this year.

The regents also asked for clarification of the UI tuition remission for the graduate assistant program, which was budgeted $1.5 million by the board office.

Peter Nathan referred to the program as a "graduate tuition scholarship" and said it was necessary to attract quality students and faculty.

"This ties in with undergraduate education quality," Nathan said. "We're not competitive in many fields because we're the only university in the Big Ten that doesn't have this program."

Economy

barrel this month, compared with an average of $20 in July. That will work its way through to the gasoline pump.

Also, increases are ahead for chemicals, paint, plastics and other petroleum-based products, said economist Allen Sinai of the Boston Co.

"The chain of effects of oil inflation is massive through the economy. We calculate that 75 percent to 80 percent of the items in the consumer index ultimately are affected by oil," he said.

However, many analysts believe economic growth is too slow and demand too weak to support a sustained inflation burst if oil prices stabilize.

In another report, the Labor Department said Americans' inflation-adjusted earnings fell a seasonally adjusted 0.6 percent in August. Earnings fell 0.5 percent in each of the two preceding months.

In other details of price activity in August, housing costs rose 0.7 percent and transportation was up 1.8 percent. Both were driven by rising energy prices, with gasoline accounting for nearly 90 percent of the transportation rise.

Medical care rose 0.9 percent, in line with a long string of sharp increases; tobacco was up 0.3 percent after having risen more than 2 percent in both July and June; clothing and upkeep costs were up a slight 0.1 percent.

The various changes put the index for all consumer goods at 131.6 in August. That means that a hypothetical selection of goods costing $100 in the 1982-84 base period would have cost $131.60 in August, up $7 from a year earlier. The index numbers are not adjusted for seasonal variations.

The recent combination of oil-induced inflation and slow economic growth has put monetary policymakers in a quandary. The Federal Reserve Board normally pushes interest rates higher to fight inflation and lower to stimulate lagging growth.

"It just poses the worst possible dilemma," Jones said. "Fed policymakers are likely to keep policy unchanged while they let the dust settle from the Middle East explosion."

Tehran follows talks in Damascus last week with Secretary of State James Baker during which they discussed the hostage issue.

Assad, long a maverick in the Arab world, has sided with the United States in the Persian Gulf crisis against his longtime Arab rival, Iraq. It is the first time Syria has been aligned with Washington in any Middle East conflict. And Assad, cast adrift from his long-time Soviet mentor because of detente, is eager to establish new links with the West.

Hopes that some hostages will be freed have brightened since the Persian Gulf crisis set off by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The confrontation between Iraq, Iran's foe in its 1980-88 war, and the United States has provided Rafsanjani with unexpected benefits that have helped him consolidate power in the faction-ridden Iranian hierarchy.

Rafsanjani, leader of Iran's so-called pragmatists, has been seeking to rebuild bridges with the West, despite opposition by anti-Western radicals. He is believed to have had a hand in the release of American educators Robert Polhill and Frank Reed in April and in last month's freeing of Irishman Brian Keenan.

When the United States rushed to aid threatened Saudi Arabia, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was forced to cave in to Iranian conditions for a peace treaty.

Iraq withdrew its troops from territory occupied in the conflict, agreed to share sovereignty of the waterway forming the southern border between the two countries and began exchanging prisoners of war.

State Supreme Court justice orders Hardy trial resumed

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — A state Supreme Court justice on Tuesday ordered the trial of a Blackhawk County murder case resumed after the presiding judge made it clear he would allow a defense lawyer to lay the groundwork for an appeal.

After a bitter exchange between the lawyer and judge over a long-distance telephone hookup, Justice Louis Lavorato ordered the trial of Kenneth Charles Hardy to start again at 9 a.m. Wednesday.

Hardy is charged with first-degree murder in the death of Rochelle Lea Barry, 23, of Charles City. Prosecutors allege Hardy lured Barry to a wooded party area in Waterloo a year ago and killed her.

Lavorato said he was powerless to remove Judge George Stigler from the case even if he had been asked to do so. Lavorato's order came after a hearing where Stigler and attorney Alfredo Parrish made clear their distaste for each other.

During the hearing, Stigler complained "I must be living in a wonderland" and said "God help us all" if Parrish's tactics were tolerated. Parrish said Stigler has a frightening "hair trigger" and launched a courtroom "tirade."

Lavorato, acting for the entire Supreme Court, ordered the trial to resume after Stigler said he would give Parrish every chance to lay groundwork for an appeal.

"That is a decision (Stigler) is going to have to make," Lavorato said. "I can't make it for him. You can't make it for him. It's his call."

Lavorato halted the trial Monday after Parrish filed an appeal saying Stigler showed "clear bias" and would not let him take the legal steps needed in the case.

With Parrish in Des Moines and Stigler hooked in by telephone from Davenport, the two made their points to Lavorato.

"If other judges in the state have to put up with Mr. Parrish's shenanigans and foolishness, then God help us all," Stigler said.

"The court went off on a tirade," Parrish argued.

week. He urged the high court to intervene, claiming his client was being damaged by Stigler's handling of the case.

"It indicates something is going on down there," Parrish said. He urged Lavorato to "take note of the tone" of Stigler's voice, which was clearly angry.

Stigler had an angry exchange with Parrish over testimony last week in the case. He conceded a

"If other judges in the state have to put up with Mr. Parrish's shenanigans and foolishness, then God help us all."

Judge George Stigler

Parrish complained that Stigler "to some extent was helping the state," a complaint that Stigler vigorously denied. Stigler complained bitterly about Parrish, a lawyer from Des Moines.

"I'm beginning to doubt that he knows what exists within his own mind," Stigler said.

Lavorato asked Stigler if Parrish would be permitted to take the legal steps he desired. "He will be extended every courtesy," Stigler replied.

"I'm going to take him at his word," Lavorato said. "He's a good judge."

"I'll go back and try as best I know how," Parrish said. "I don't know if it is in anyone's best interest to have him continue on the trial."

Parrish said issues in the case have been to the Supreme Court four times, even before it goes to the jury. He brought the latest appeal after an exchange last comment he made was in error and prepared a warning for the jury.

After one witness had testified, Stigler had said in the presence of the jury that one part of the testimony was "critical" to an understanding of the case.

He later apologized and prepared a written warning for the jury noting that deciding what evidence was critical was up to the jury.

"There's been one time and one time only where I lost my temper, and I apologized for that," Stigler said. "I get the feeling I'm living in a wonderland."

Stigler accused Parrish of having "little or no respect or professionalism toward the court."

"He's almost hair-trigger when it comes to ruling," Parrish said. "It scares me in a courtroom."

"He is distorting the truth in this motion as he has distorted the truth throughout this trial," Stigler said.

Indian complains of racial harassment

The Associated Press

DUBUQUE — The city council says an American Indian woman should take her complaint that police failed to protect her family from racially motivated harassment to the city's human rights commission.

Cheryl Vandermillen, of Ojibway descent, asked the council Monday night to direct the commission to investigate the police department and an officer. But council members advised her to take her case to the commission herself, and she agreed.

Mayor Jim Brady said if the council filed the complaint, it was public and would become "a press field day." He said a citizen's complaint remains confidential until it reaches a hearing.

City Manager Ken Gearhart defended city employees. "Sometimes I get the feeling there's a willingness to bend over backward to listen to the other side," he said.

Vandermillen said her daughter and some friends, including some black children, were playing June 22 when men threw a can of beer at them and yelled racial slurs.

She said she called police and she and her husband, Ray Vandermillen, and her daughter went to look for the beer can and to get the license number of the car. They found a man beating a woman, and some men assaulted her husband, she said. Police arrived and arrested two men, who were charged with assault.

The woman said her family continues to be harassed, and each time she complains, the same police officer shows up and fails to take any action.

"It's never been handled as a racially motivated incident."

Police Chief John Mauss said that the Vandermillens' initial complaints were about the 12-minute response time of the police and that only two men had been charged with assault.

Welfare calls for increased budget

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — The director of the Iowa Department of Human Services is requesting that the state increase the department's budget to $730 million dollars over the next two years, according to a new budget proposal.

The budget calls for raising state welfare spending to $685 million in the next fiscal year and to $730 million for the fiscal year ending in 1993, a 21 percent increase over current spending.

Director Charles Palmer said the increases are necessary to keep pace with inflation and to cover the costs of increasing demand for services from the department.

"This is a budget which tries to responsibly meet needs and which doesn't have a lot of new, discretionary items," he said.

The department's budget for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1991, includes about $603 million dollars in state money. The agency serves about 400,000 Iowans annually and also receives federal aid that increases the state's welfare budget to about $1.4 billion.

Some of the largest increases in Palmer's proposal would go to programs aimed at helping adults, children and families with special problems and to medical services programs.

Programs for adults, children and families would increase from $124.3 million to $165.5 million during the two years, up 33.1 percent. Medical services would increase from $246.5 million to $298.7 million, up 21.1 percent.

Money spent on management and delivery of services would increase by 32.3 percent, up from $53.5 million to $70.8 million.

Under the proposed budget, state spending for economic assistance to welfare clients would rise from $50.1 million to $59.8 million over the two-year period, a 19.2 percent increase.

European nations recommend extending embargo to air

By Jocelyn Noveck
The Associated Press

European nations, their anger at Saddam Hussein fueled by raids on their diplomatic compounds in Kuwait, demanded Tuesday that the U.N. trade embargo on Iraq be extended to the air as well as the sea.

The decision reflected the growing resolve among European leaders to punish Baghdad. It came a day after the European Community voted to expel Iraqi diplomats and restrict the movements of others.

At the United Nations, officials said the five permanent members of the Security Council had worked out an agreement on terms of an air embargo and were hoping to get it passed by the full 15-member council before Monday.

Under the embargo, officials said, planes on their way to Iraq would not be forced down but could be challenged.

The five permanent members are the United States, the Soviet Union, China, Britain and France.

The flow of Kuwaiti refugees across the newly opened Saudi border thinned abruptly as news spread that Iraqi troops were seizing young husbands and sons from families as they tried to leave.

Refugees said the erratic manner in which the Iraqis were treating them appeared part of a harsh campaign to break down their will to resist.

International pressure on Saddam Hussein was increasing, with countries implementing diplomatic sanctions and alliances slowly shifting in the Middle East.

Saudi Arabia, meanwhile, emphasized that its renewal of ties with Moscow, another former ally of Baghdad, should send a clear sign to Saddam.

"When these two countries stand together for the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait . . . and identify their position in a common way, this, I believe, should give a message to Iraq that their position is untenable," the Saudi foreign minister said.

Saudi Arabia has been the staging ground for some 150,000 U.S. troops that have been deployed since the Aug. 2 Iraqi takeover of Kuwait.

Jordan has tended to side with Iraq, its most important trading partner, and on Tuesday it received some harsh criticism from the State Department for acting as host to a radical Palestinian guerrilla conference, where delegates have called for attacks on U.S. forces.

Spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the United States is "surprised and dismayed that this conference took place and we have told the Jordanians so."

She also said the United States expects Jordan will end its continuing purchases of Iraqi oil.

One of Saddam's few key supporters, PLO chief Yasir Arafat, arrived in Jordan Tuesday following talks with Saddam in Baghdad. He met immediately with King Hussein in a continuing effort to come up with a solution to the crisis, officials said. It was his third visit to Jordan in less than four weeks.

The first Japanese presence appeared in the gulf Tuesday — a 17-member Japanese medical team sent to Saudi Arabia.

In Paris, defense and foreign ministers of nine European nations — the Western European Union — decided to take steps as soon as possible to enforce the U.N.

embargo by air as well as by sea, a statement said, and to coordinate air and ground forces.

The union is the sole European body dealing with defense issues. Its members include nine of the 12 European Community nations. Only neutral Ireland, Greece and Denmark are not members.

France and Britain, both of whom have now sent ground forces to the gulf, want their allies in the union to join them — at least symbolically. Italian and Dutch newspapers speculated Tuesday their governments might send ground troops. A number of nations have sent ships and planes.

On Monday, EC countries decided in Brussels to expel Iraqi military attachés and restrict movements of Iraqi diplomats. On Tuesday, Britain told the 41 Iraqi diplomats still in the country they cannot go more than 25 miles from central London without permission. Portugal restricted Iraqi diplomats to within 19 miles of central Lisbon.

At the border between Kuwait and Saudi Arabia, hundreds of cars were still lined up with fleeing Kuwaitis Tuesday, but their numbers were greatly decreased as news spread the Iraqis were seizing young men.

Since Iraq unexpectedly opened the border Saturday, about 6,000 refugees have entered Saudi Arabia. Men under the age of 40 were grabbed as cars were picked to leave the country in a haphazard manner, the refugees said. Iraqi troops began seizing the men Monday and sending them north in buses.

Some Kuwaitis said the men would be forced into the military, others said they would be interned in Iraq. The Iraqis gave no explanation.

Capital gains cut delays deficit-reduction meeting

By Jim Luther
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The fight over President Bush's proposed capital-gains tax cut, which is stalling critical deficit-reduction talks, extends a decade-long battle pitting Democratic charges of a tilt to the rich against a Republican focus on a need to spur economic growth.

"It is absolutely incredible that the key item . . . (in dispute) is the president's insistence on giving a new gift to the higher rollers in this society," Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., told reporters Tuesday.

However, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said the Democrats' argument against cutting taxes on capital gains, which are profits from the sale of investments, was simply wrong.

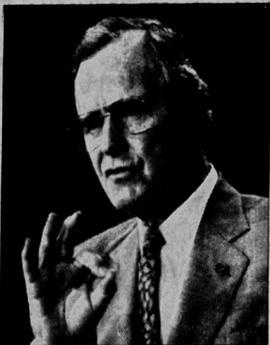

"Let's dispel any notion that the Republican capital-gains tax (reduction) is to help the rich," he said. "We're supposed to get growth out of this budget."

As Democrats accused Bush and his party of risking a deficit agreement to win on capital gains, the president sent his top negotiators to the Capitol to discuss the next step in trying to avoid massive, arbitrary cuts in most federal programs starting Oct. 1.

White House and congressional negotiators working on a plan to cut the deficit by $50 billion next year hit an impasse Monday night after reaching tentative agreement on several spending cuts and tax increases.

They met for an hour in the Capitol Tuesday, and agreed to continue working toward a compromise.

If the capital-gains issue could be settled, said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, "the rest would come together

George Bush
Wants capital gains cuts

quickly."

Domenici said, "There are a number of hangups."

He noted Republicans have proposed to offset part of the capital-gains reduction by limiting the state and local income tax deductions available to people with incomes over $200,000. When the two items are combined, he said, "I don't see how that's helping the rich."

Still, Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., declared that a capital-gains cut "is an ideological obsession of the right wing of the Republican party and unfortunately the president has yielded to it."

Economic growth has been Bush's argument for the reduction since he proposed it during his 1988 campaign. Some economists agree that reducing the tax would give people with money incentives for making new investments that could create jobs. Others say there is no evidence for such a claim.

Cheney recommends successor to Dugan

By Ruth Sinai
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney consulted with the White House on Tuesday about his selection of a Vietnam veteran and former Thunderbird pilot to replace the general he fired as Air Force chief of staff.

Cheney's spokesman, Pete Williams, said the secretary had discussed with White House officials his selection of Gen. Merrill McPeak to replace Gen. Mike Dugan, fired Monday after revealing to reporters secret U.S. plans that contemplate bombing Iraq and personally targeting President Saddam Hussein.

Williams declined to say how soon President Bush is expected to act on Cheney's recommendation.

White House sources said, however, that the Pentagon had not yet sent over the paperwork to set in motion the presidential review process. The sources, who requested anonymity, said that after the paper arrives, it will take some time for officials there to review the matter before Bush decides whether to nominate McPeak.

At the Pentagon, meanwhile, Cheney sought to reassure his subordinates that they have nothing to fear from talking to reporters.

"It would be a thorough misreading and a total misunderstanding if anyone were to conclude that we're trying to discourage people from talking to the press," Williams said.

The spokesman said he had said as much to commanders and other Pentagon officials.

"We encourage our military commanders to be open and accessible," he said.

In contrast to his predecessors, Dugan had encouraged more openness with the press — to a point that got him in trouble after he told three reporters aboard a plane to Saudi Arabia late last week that the United States has contingency plans to bomb Baghdad and target Saddam.

Explaining his decision to dump Dugan, Cheney said Monday that the chief of staff had displayed a "lack of judgment" by engaging publicly in "wide-ranging speculation" about U.S. military options in Iraq.

Dugan will receive a full pension, which for an officer with his rank and seniority totals about $60,000 annually, officials said.

McPeak, 54, is commander in chief of the Pacific Air Forces at Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii. His responsibilities include U.S. air operations from Japan to the United States and a command of more than 60,000 people.

In his 33 years of service, McPeak has flown more than 4,000 hours on fighter planes and became a skilled parachutist.

For two years starting in 1966 he flew solo or the lead position in nearly 200 air shows as a member of the Thunderbirds — the U.S. Air Force Air Demonstration Squadron.

The stunt flying was good preparation for his next mission: Vietnam. McPeak flew 269 combat sorties in the year he served there, earning several decorations.

He then attended the National War College and got a master's degree at the same time.

McPeak was assigned to command U.S. air bases in England and Spain and was promoted to chief of staff of U.S. air forces in Europe.

Winnie Mandela charged

By Tom Cohen
The Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The government said Tuesday it will charge Winnie Mandela with kidnapping and assault, a move that could endanger its peace talks with her husband's African National Congress.

Winnie Mandela, wife of ANC leader Nelson Mandela, will be charged in the alleged abduction and beatings of four young men at her home in December 1988. One of them, 14-year-old Stompei Seipei, was found dead.

Winnie Mandela's bodyguard, Jerry Richardson, was convicted of murdering Seipei and sentenced to death last month. At his trial, the surviving victims testified that Winnie Mandela, 56, beat them with a whip. She has denied wrongdoing.

The announcement came as Mandela, the country's best-known black leader, met with other ANC officials to discuss the police crackdown on fighting in townships around Johannesburg.

Mandela on Monday threatened to suspend the peace talks if the government fails to halt the carnage that has killed nearly 800 blacks since Aug. 12. Most of the fighting has been between black ANC supporters and the Zulu-based conservative Inkatha movement.

Mandela said new police measures announced Saturday — including reinforcements, roadblocks, weapons searches and mounted machine guns on police vehicles — would be "ineffective" and were a "license to kill" for security forces.

Mandela has staunchly defended his wife and might be encouraged by supporters to break off talks if the government proceeds with the prosecution.

President F.W. de Klerk and Mandela met twice last week, and both say they want black-white talks on ending apartheid to move forward as quickly as possible. But the township battles, combined with the charges against Winnie Mandela, make setbacks appear more likely than breakthroughs.

"After careful consideration of all the relevant facts, including possible implications beyond the normal legal ones, I have decided to prosecute Mrs. Mandela."

Klaus von Lieres und Wilkau, attorney general for the Johannesburg Supreme Court, had said he would await completion of the Richardson case before deciding whether to charge Winnie Mandela.

"After careful consideration of all the relevant facts, including possible implications beyond the normal legal ones, I have decided to prosecute Mrs. Mandela," he said in a statement.

There was no immediate comment from Winnie Mandela or her husband.

They have accused the government of using the case as a propaganda campaign against them and the ANC, the largest black opposition group. They have said they would welcome a chance for Winnie Mandela to defend herself.

She has denied any wrongdoing but has never given a full account of the episode.

An ANC statement refrained from criticizing the government and urged the news media to let the courts decide the case.

Winnie Mandela will stand trial with seven members of her former bodyguard unit who already have been charged, the attorney general said. She will face four counts of kidnapping and four of assault with intent to commit grievous bodily harm.

She is expected to be formally charged Sept. 24, when the former bodyguards are scheduled to appear in the regional court in Soweto, outside Johannesburg.

Her former bodyguards, about two dozen teen-agers known as the Mandela United Football Club, were repeatedly in confrontations with police, journalists and black groups in the township. Anti-apartheid groups accused them of waging a reign of terror.

According to court testimony, four black youths were kidnapped in December 1988 from a church in Soweto and taken to Winnie Mandela's home in the township, where they were assaulted.

Winnie Mandela's bodyguards accused Seipei of being a police informer and the three men of having homosexual relations with the white minister who ran the church home, according to the testimony.

The Methodist church cleared the minister of any misdeeds. There was no evidence presented that Seipei, a well-known anti-apartheid activist despite his young age, was a police spy.

Unless you really enjoy reading manuals, get a Macintosh.

Tim Moses
Computer Science
Vanderbilt University

"Macintosh practically eliminates the need to keep manuals next to my computer, because—regardless of which program I'm using—I can open, close, save, and print files in exactly the same way. And you can't say that about any other computer.

"Today lots of other computers are attempting to look and work like a Macintosh, but it's just not possible. They're too fundamentally different to begin with. This may sound a little strange, but comparing a Macintosh to other computers is like comparing apples to oranges. You can squash the orange into shape and paint it to look like an apple, but underneath the makeup, it's still an orange.

"It's funny—I work at the Vanderbilt computer store and I've seen lots of people switch from other computers to Macintosh, but I've never seen anybody with a Macintosh switch to another computer."

Des Moines group a 'Point of Light'

DENVER — President Bush on Tuesday named a Des Moines parent support group as the recipient of the White House daily "Point of Light" award.

The Special Care Parents volunteer group provides emotional and educational information and support to parents of premature or high-risk infants, the White House said.

The Point of Light designation goes to individuals and groups that exemplify Bush's inaugural call for people to involve themselves in community activity, like "1,000 points of light," making society better for everyone.

Man has the devil beat out of him

HONDO, Texas — An Assembly of God pastor and two church members accused of trying to "beat the devil" out of a south Texas man have gone on trial on false imprisonment charges.

The Rev. James Douglas Price, 42, pastor of First Assembly of God Church, and brothers Robert Leo Nixon Jr., 42, and Alvin Ray Nixon, 31, are accused of false imprisonment in the Jan. 29 incident.

According to a Medina County grand jury indictment, the three used force and intimidation to detain Evertt "Ray" Weimers, 43, and slapped him and poured oil on him as part of a religious rite.

Dr. Ricardo Castillo, who treated Wiemers for facial and shoulder injuries, testified Monday that Wiemers told him several men tried to beat the devil out of him in an exorcism.

The doctor said Wiemers told him that before the beating he spoke with Price, pastor of the church in Devine, 30 miles southwest of San Antonio. He said he told Price he had been despondent over marital and financial problems.

"The preacher told him the reason he was feeling that way was that he had the devil in him and needed to be exorcised," the doctor said. "Then the preacher went to get some more parishioners to beat it out of his system."

Valdez spill cleanup continues

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The second summer cleanup of beaches tarred with crude oil spilled from the Exxon Valdez ended with state officials still worried that buried blobs of oil could cause more environmental damage.

Exxon crews scoured contaminated shorelines for five months, starting in April, to remove oil left through the winter after the 987-foot tanker slammed onto a reef in March 1989 and spilled nearly 11 million gallons into Prince William Sound.

Most beaches still covered with oil after the agitation of typically violent winter storms were cleaned up, but many large collections of crude oil lie offshore, covered by shifting sand and gravel.

"The same forces that buried it can unbury it," state spokesman Ernie Piper said.

Gov. Steve Cowper said he's worried that oil untouched by the cleanup will "leach toxic substances for a long, long time."

Initially, 1,245 miles were coated with spilled oil, Piper said. At the start of the 1990 cleanup, about 100 miles of beach remained tainted, he said.

By Saturday, when Exxon shut down operations for the winter, only four miles were classified as heavily oiled, Piper said. Cowper commended Exxon and the Coast Guard for what was accomplished, but fretted about the environmental future of the area where thousands of animals live and breed.

"I don't think we'll ever see the point where the spiller and the regulator will ever agree to everything," Cowper said last week. "It's our job to bark at the heels of everyone. It's our beach."

Feminist: Souter is bad for civil, women's rights

By Richard Carelli
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee David Souter was praised by friends Tuesday as a strong supporter of civil liberties, but a feminist leader called him "a total disaster for civil rights and women's rights."

The Senate Judiciary Committee, which completed three days of questioning Souter on Monday, turned its attention to about 40 witnesses testifying for and against him.

His confirmation as the high court's 105th justice — and a key vote on such divisive issues as abortion, civil rights and church-state relations — seemed certain.

Before Tuesday's hearings began, Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, told reporters her group had begun a major drive to block Souter's confirmation.

"We know that man will be a fifth vote to overturn Roe vs. Wade," Yard said, referring to the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion. "Our lives are on the line. Women in this country are going to die. We're talking about your daughters, your granddaughters. He is a disastrous choice, a total disaster for civil rights and women's rights."

During the hearings, Jerry Diamond, like Souter a former New Hampshire attorney general, praised his friend's honesty and integrity. Diamond added, "His central tenet is the dignity and freedom of the individual. He is a strong supporter of civil liberties."

The 14-member committee was expected to conclude its hearings Wednesday and vote on Souter's nomination next week. The committee's recommendation then will go to the full Senate.

Tuesday's first witnesses, Kate Michelman of the National Abortion Rights Action League and Faye Wattleton of Planned Parenthood, urged Souter's defeat.

"Judge Souter's personal qualifications are not at issue," Michelman said. "The issue is whether or not the Supreme Court will continue to uphold the fundamental constitutional right to privacy, including the right to choose." Wattleton asked the senators to "send a message that the period of tolerance for political gamesmanship around our fundamental reproductive rights has ended."

In three days of testimony, Souter steered clear of giving his personal views on abortion or stating how he might vote if asked to overturn Roe vs. Wade.

But some of his answers made him appear more moderate than his staunchly conservative reputation. In fact, several conservative senators appeared concerned by some of Souter's testimony.

Two senators on record as supporting abortion rights said Tuesday the Souter opponents were engaging in poor strategy.

"I really believe you're making a big mistake," said Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo. "I'm on your side, but I think you're hurting your cause."

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said, "It's not realistic to expect that if Judge Souter is turned down, we will get a nominee who . . . will commit in advance to uphold Roe vs. Wade."

Specter noted that President Bush who nominated Souter, favors overturning the 1973 ruling.

Those testifying in favor of Souter's nomination were former Attorney General Griffin Bell and former Virginia Gov. Gerald Baliles.

Philadelphia storefront collapses, crushing 3

By Lee Linder
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — A two-story brick storefront collapsed onto a busy downtown sidewalk Tuesday, crushing three people to death and injuring eight others, authorities said.

Among the 11 caught in the collapse were four police officers who had been walking their beat, authorities said.

The facade apparently was weighted down by metal signs and security gates that had been anchored in the wall, said Fire Commissioner Roger Ulshafer.

The collapse occurred shortly before 2:30 p.m. between Ninth and 10th streets on the south side of Market Street, one of the city's main arteries.

"I looked up and saw a wall of bricks coming at me, and all I could do was close my eyes," said Neil Daniel, who was fixing his car.

"I heard people start screaming." "I just turned around and the whole thing came tumbling down," said David Miller, a passerby.

At least two people were trapped, police said.

Alom Kadosh, manager of the Stereo Sound store, said he was sitting in the front when the wall gave way.

"It happened so fast you couldn't see anything. But as soon as it happened people went outside and everybody pitched in to help pull off the bricks and the metal that covered the people that had been trapped underneath," he said.

All of the dead and injured were on the sidewalk. There were no injuries inside the three different buildings that shared the brick facade, authorities said.

One woman died of a crushed chest and another of head injuries; a man died of a crushed chest, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Film 'Lola' explores a postwar passion

By Lindsay Alan Park
The Daily Iowan

“People here have an inner and an outer life, and the two have nothing to do with one another,” observes Barbara Sukowa as Lola, the title character in German director Rainer Werner Fassbinder's 1982 film showing at the Bijou this Wednesday and Thursday.

“Lola” is very much about such irreconcilable dualities in people, which Sukowa epitomizes through her character's virgin/whore extremes. Fassbinder cues us to expect double dealing and downfall in this film by borrowing from other femme fatales of cinema. Lola's name and “singer” profession are nods to Dietrich's Lola Lola (in Josef von Sternberg's “The Blue Angel”), while her hair-flipping screen entrance duplicates that of Rita Hayworth in “Gilda” (though unlike Gilda, no one bothers to ask Lola if she is decent).

Set shortly after West Germany's acceptance into NATO in 1955, “Lola” indicts post-war Germans' corrupt embrace of the “free” enterprise system by showing us people growing increasingly polarized within an already traumatically divided nation.

Fassbinder hints that the same baser human impulses that fueled fascism in Germany may have achieved more successful expression through capitalism.

An elite ring of city officials in the town of Coberg, led by Herr Schuckert, the building contractor, grows steadily richer on public money through secret violations of building ordinances. Churchgoing moralists and society pillars by day, the powerful satiate themselves nightly with booze and women in a racy club where Schuckert's paid mistress, Lola, is the star attraction.

But suddenly this smug, cynical group is threatened by the integcity of the newly hired building commissioner, Herr von Bohm (Armin Mueller-Stahl) — who, they fear, may succeed in cleaning up the town much as he cleaned out his cluttered office his first day on the job.

Mueller-Stahl, who this year played Jessica Lange's former-Nazi father in “Music Box,” radiates honesty and goodness in the role of von Bohm. On screen, Mueller-Stahl is so riveting a presence of strength and incorruptibility — with his cleft chin, graying temples and piercing blue eyes constantly highlighted in a square of blue light — that it is a long time before we see how his integrity isolates him and makes him seem eccentric.

Lola, by contrast, is usually bathed in red and pink light, complementing her unloosed, passionate nature. Though she craves money and power like the politicians and longs to own her own club, Lola is far more driven by a thirst for respect and acceptance — she wants to belong.

While the film's heart is devoted mainly to the resulting encounters between the “scarlet” Lola and serenely “blue” von Bohm, Fassbinder paints the entire film with a vibrant and varied palate, and uses '50s decorative elements with inventive style and humor.

Sukowa, who resembles a German Ann-Margret, gives a rich performance, balancing cold calculation and bitter humor. She is also allowed to be more physically beautiful in this film than, for example, her more famous role in Von Tratten's film biography “Rosa Luxemburg.”

Also memorable is Rosel Zech's portrayal of the bored, bitchy Frau Schuckert, which contrasts nicely with her helplessly neurotic lead performance in Fassbinder's following film, “Veronika Voss.”

“Lola” is showing at the Bijou tonight at 9 p.m. and Thursday at 7 p.m. in German with subtitles.

UI Symphony opens season

Free concert to feature works by Beethoven and Sibelius

The Daily Iowan

The UI Symphony Orchestra opens its 1990-91 season with a free concert of works by Beethoven and Sibelius at 8 p.m. tonight at Hancher Auditorium.

James Dixon, the Philip Greeley Clapp/Carver Distinguished Professor at the School of Music, will conduct a performance of Sibelius' “Symphony No. 2 in D major.” Dixon and the orchestra will be joined by pianist Uriel Tsachor, a member of the School of Music faculty, in Beethoven's “Piano Concerto No. 3 in C minor.”

The second is the most popular of the seven symphonies of Finnish composer Jean Sibelius. It was begun in Italy and Switzerland in 1901 and completed later the same year in Finland. The composer conducted the first performance at Helsinki March 3, 1902. The first American performance, given by Theodore Thomas and the Chicago Symphony, followed less than two years later, on Jan. 2, 1904.

At a time when Finland was struggling to free itself of Russian domination politically and German domination musically, Sibelius was honored by his countrymen as a nationalist in both arenas. He began his musical education at the Helsinki Conservatory, but later he studied in the pre-eminent centers of German musical culture, Berlin and Vienna.

Working within the German symphonic style, which was the international musical standard of the time, Sibelius managed to create his own distinct, personal voice. Through his symphonic works he became the first Finnish composer to achieve international recognition, and he virtually created a Finnish national style.

His orchestral suite “Finlandia Awakes,” of which his famous “Finlandia” was the finale, was so clear and rousing a call for Finnish independence that the work was banned by the Russian authorities as seditious. Following its premiere in Helsinki in 1900, it was not heard again in Finland for more than six years.

Scholars have not agreed whether or not the second symphony is an overtly nationalistic work. In Finland it was considered a description of “Finland's struggle for political liberty,” ending in triumph. Although this interpretation was popular while Sibelius was still alive, the composer himself never gave a definitive answer.

The symphony follows the traditional four-movement model of the Powerful accents and sharp contrasts of mood mark the thematic material. The second movement, in the remote key of E major, makes a strong contrast. The finale returns to the somber original key but concludes happily in C major.

Uriel Tsachor joined the faculty of the UI School of Music in the fall of 1988. The first prize-winner of the Bosendorfer Empire International Competition in 1986, the second prize-winner of Busoni Competition in 1985 and a laureate of the and conductor of the Quad-City Symphony in Davenport since 1965. He studied conducting at the UI under the late Philip Greeley Clapp and was the protégé of Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and the New York Philharmonic.

Dixon has appeared as a guest conductor with major orchestras throughout the world, including the North German and West German radio orchestras, the national symphonies of Greece and Peru, the Minneapolis (now Minnesota) Orchestra and the Chicago Symphony. He has won numerous awards for his musical and educational activities, including the Gustav Mahler Medal, the Ditson Award from Columbia University and the Laurel Leaf Award from the American Composers' Alliance. He received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from Augustana College in Rock Island, Ill., in 1980.

In 1989, he was appointed Philip Greeley Clapp/Carver Distinguished Professor of Music at the UI.

The University Symphony presents a series of free concerts on the UI campus and often tours to the surrounding communities in Iowa. Its annual concert series also includes two concerts with the university's choral forces, as well as performances at the annual Dance Gala and the spring production of the UI Opera Theater.

The Sept. 19 concert inaugurates the 1990-91 season of performances at the UI School of Music. The schedule includes concerts by large groups — choruses, bands and jazz bands — as well as chamber music concerts and recitals by members of the School of Music faculty and their guests. Most of these performances are free.

For a complete schedule of concerts at the UI School of Music, contact Mona Shaw in the Music Public Relations Office, (319) 335-1667.

classical German style. A brisk first movement is followed by a brooding slow movement, a vigorous scherzo movement and, following the example of Beethoven's “Fifth Symphony,” a finale that resolves minor-key conflicts in a triumphal major-key conclusion.

Beethoven himself gave the first performance of his “Third Piano Concerto,” acting as both conductor and soloist. The extremely long concert on April 3, 1803, in Vienna also included premieres of his “Symphony No. 2” and the oratorio “Christ on the Mount of Olives,” as well as a performance of the “First Symphony,” among other works.

The “Third Piano Concerto” was composed during the time that Beethoven was coming to grips with his growing deafness. The depression he suffered is not outwardly reflected in the music of that period, however, which includes some of the composer's most confident and uplifting works.

The concerto is in three movements. The first has the dark and fiery character Beethoven often associated with the key of C minor.

Queen Elizabeth Piano Competition in 1983, he is a graduate of the Rubin Academy in Tel Aviv, Israel, and the Juilliard School in New York. He has performed as a soloist in Tel Aviv, Jerusalem, New York, Chicago, Vienna, Paris and other cities around the world.

Tsachor has performed with the Israel Philharmonic by invitation from Zubin Mehta. He has also appeared as soloist with the New York City Symphony, the Teatro La Fenice Symphony in Venice and the National Orchestra of Belgium, among others. He has performed both live and in recordings for radio and television stations in Israel, Europe and the United States, and he has made recordings for the EMI, Musical Heritage Society, PHONIC, Divox and EMS labels, including some in the UI School of Music Recording Studios. He recently returned from presenting a series of recitals and master classes in Taiwan.

Dixon has conducted the University Symphony Orchestra since 1954 and has been music director

'Miss Saigon' show will go on under negotiated conditions

By Michael Kuchwara
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The curtain will rise as scheduled next spring on the Broadway version of “Miss Saigon,” a production plagued by casting disputes over race and charges of artistic interference.

The hit London musical will open in April at the Broadway Theater, its producer Cameron Mackintosh and Actors' Equity announced Tuesday after nearly two weeks of negotiation over casting.

In a joint statement, Mackintosh and the union said, “Equity acknowledges the artistic integrity of the creative team of ‘Miss Saigon.’ Cameron Mackintosh acknowledges Equity's efforts to improve equal employment opportunities for its ethnic members, and he and his creative team support that goal.”

Mackintosh canceled the New York production of “Miss Saigon” last month when the union refused to let a white British actor, Jonathan Pryce, repeat his starring role as a Eurasian pimp on from a joint statement by Cameron Mackintosh and Actors' Equity

Broadway.

Equity, under a firestorm of protests from its members, later rescinded its order banning Pryce and agreed to meet with Mackintosh after Labor Day in an effort to get the musical back on track.

Details of their agreement, reached Monday, were withheld, but The New York Times, citing sources familiar with the negotiations, reported in Tuesday's editions that Mackintosh may use two non-American Asian actors in the Broadway production for one year.

The producer would need to make a specific request to bring over Lea Salonga, a Filipino actress who plays the leading female role in the London production, the Times said.

Mackintosh also will agree not to use yellow-face makeup or facial devices designed to simulate Asian eyes in any American production and to make an effort to recruit Asian-American actors for lesser roles, the newspaper said.

Of the nearly 50 roles in the play, some 34 are written for ethnic minority actors.

“Miss Saigon,” set during the closing days of the Vietnam War, centers on the romance between a Vietnamese bar girl and an American soldier.

The controversy started Aug. 7 when Equity said it was blocking the casting of Pryce because it wouldn't “appear to condone the casting of a Caucasian in the role of a Eurasian.”

Mackintosh scrapped the production the following day. The union relented, but the producer said he would refuse to go ahead with the New York production unless he was given a free hand on other casting decisions too.

UI RESIDENCE SERVICES

Poor judgment

Since Aug. 24, there have been four incidents in which an unidentified male has made an unauthorized entry into a female's room in UI residence halls. According to the UI Department of Public Safety, none of these incidents has resulted in anything as serious as rape (although there reportedly were "a couple of touchings"), and all occurred where the room had been left unlocked. The incidents obviously represent a potential hazard to the safety and well-being of the public, and the UI failed to live up to its obligations in such circumstances.

In response to the reports, the UI Department of Residence Services instructed the Resident Assistants in Burge and Currier — the only affected halls — to post signs and inform residents to lock their doors. There was no action taken to inform the residents of the other seven residence halls, nor was there any attempt to inform the rest of the university community.

Admittedly, the decision of whom to inform and to what extent was a judgment call that had to be made, but the decision left Residence Services far short of meeting its moral obligations to its residents, the UI community and the public in general.

Students in a university community tend to assume that because of all the security measures and friendliness of their neighbors, they are safe. Sadly enough, they are not safe, but neither guidebook nor stern warnings by RAs can break this illusion of security. The residents often pay no heed to such warnings because they assume "it could never happen to me" and because the incidents seem isolated. But if residents were aware that these incidents are occurring down the hall, on another floor or just down the street, they might take that extra few seconds to make sure the door is locked.

A DI article that appeared Sept. 18 quoted Pam Boersig, assistant director of residence services, as saying, "Students promote a lot of rumors. We try to get a balance between making people aware and not getting people worked into a frenzy. They need to be concerned, but we don't want people to become paranoid."

There is going to be a certain amount of paranoia associated with the knowledge of potential danger, but there is also plenty of paranoia associated with unfounded rumors that, as Boersig said, students tend to promote. Informing the residents will induce no more paranoia than rumors, and with a little information and alertness, the residents will be better prepared to protect themselves and they may actually be able to help apprehend the culprit. Furthermore, some students assume that the stories they hear are unfounded because there is no evidence to lend them factual support.

There is a definite need to inform residents of potential threats to their safety. When Residence Services decided to have RAs in only the affected buildings warn their floors of the danger, it made a serious and potentially dangerous miscalculation.

Why did it not put warnings out in all of the residence halls? Why did it not cooperate with reporters from The Daily Iowan who were trying to warn the rest of the community? How could it have assumed that the incidents would not spread to the other halls or to private student residences?

It makes more sense to admit the facts rather than to let the public be deluded into pacifism through lack of accurate information. A little paranoia on the side of safety is far better than a misinformed public.

Letters

It's the same on both sides

To the Editor:

Kim Painter's column comparing the Republican and Democratic parties was quite amusing ["Election year guide to parties," Sep. 18, DI]. Trying to find some real political insight from the elephant and donkey symbols of the political parties is like saying that the UI is a predominantly liberal campus because the hawk on the floor of Carver-Hawkeye Arena is flying to the left.

I was also amused by the analysis of why Tom Harkin is raising campaign money out of state. She claims it's because the Democrats in Iowa are too poor to support their candidate. Actually, it's just because he knows the easy way to get money. The very night that he had a telethon to raise money from Iowans, Harkin was at a $1,000-a-plate fund-raising banquet in Massachusetts (you know, the state that elected Mike Dukakis and Ted Kennedy).

Compare this to the image that Painter tries to evoke by comparing the $6 Johnson County Democrat Barbecue to a Republican formal dinner. Yes, the Republican Party does have $100-a-plate dinners, but so does the Democratic Party. Both also have events with higher ticket prices. And the College Republicans are known for their awesome free parties.

Painter extends this "Republican-Party-of-the-Rich" analysis to pass off the blame for the S&L scandal on the GOP. Seriously, does anyone really believe that the reason the Republicans can afford to donate $100 to their party is that they have looted the S&Ls? Anyway, remember that four of the scandalous "Keating Five" were Democrats.

It's really sad to see student money supporting such partisan political distortion. It's sad that her attempt to sway students' votes was not balanced by a Republican column. And most of all, it's sad that a DI columnist couldn't provide more insight into the upcoming elections.

Read this first, then recycle it

I'm sitting here feeling guilty about my cup of coffee. Not the coffee, the cup. It's Styrofoam. Though I try to avoid it, I still occasionally end up with that insidious white container in front of me. My penance: write a column on recycling.

Wait! Don't go. Give me a minute. You've made mistakes, too. Your penance: read this column. I promise it won't be just another boring "how to recycle" piece. This will be truly educational and you'll feel better about yourself after reading it. Guaranteed.

Educational Portion
The ideal recycling scenario goes something like this: We create waste. We sell it to someone who recycles it. We buy it back in recycled form. We create waste. . . .

David Crawford

The traditional recycling scenario goes something like this: We create waste. We throw it away.

The advantages of the ideal over the traditional are manifold. For one, we make money. There's a real market for recycled goods, especially paper. In fact, virtually the only solid wastes we can't sell are newspapers and diapers — newspapers only because the mills can't yet keep up with the quantity being salvaged. Another is that we preserve the environment. This is nice because we still might abort the current destruction that would otherwise require our grandchildren to carry oxygen and wear spf-250 sunscreen before going outside to play in the fill. It's also nice because it's the law.

Right now the UI is somewhere between the two. Following several years of sporadic and piecemeal efforts, the UI is now firmly directed toward comprehensive recycling. The paper project begun in May has been successful; expansion is pending the installation of fire-safe containers. As paper is the most significant waste, it is the current focus of UI planners. Until projects to recycle other materials are implemented, such materials can be dropped at municipal bins.

Purchasing efforts at the UI are concentrated on increasing both the amount of recycled goods and the percentage of recycled material in them. This is nice, once again. And once again, it's the law.

So we're close to realizing the magic formula: make money and save the environment.

There. Have you learned anything yet? If not, consider this: The rambling breeds in birch and coniferous woods from Scandinavia to Japan. See. I guarantee. I deliver.

Feel Good Part

The combined efforts of the UI with the municipal recycling of Iowa City and Coralville have put our community in good shape environmentally. State legislation is serving to impel this action. But, of course, it comes down to you and me to get the job done. The conscientious among us are recycling milk jugs, glass bottles, motor oil, newspaper, ledger grade paper and tin cans. Lawn refuse is composted and mulched for future municipal, university and private citizen use.

So give yourself a pat on the back for helping smooth the transition into recycling. If, in fact, you've done nothing to further the cause, swat yourself on the back and get with it. Either way, you'll feel good about yourself.

Friendly Reminder Part
Stop patting (or swatting). We still have some work to do. As consumers we must start with source reduction. Stay clear of Styrofoam; even though much of the polystyrene is being produced without chlorofluorocarbon, an efficient Styrofoam recycling system is not yet in place. And use other resources wisely. Don't use a gallon of water to clean an empty tuna can. Buy products available in bulk. Drive a little less. Turn off the faucet when brushing your teeth.

The combined efforts of the UI with the municipal recycling of Iowa City and Coralville have put our community in good shape environmentally.

And keep recycling. Keep dropping off those cans and jugs and bottles and papers.

Inspirational Conclusion

We've come a long way in a short time. Recycling officials have nothing but praise for recent community efforts. Let's make a deal. I'll keep trying to carry my coffee mug with me and you keep doing your part. We're on the verge of a great victory.

Kitty's memoirs: Now you'll never know

Would you vote for a president whose wife is an alcoholic, a drug addict or a manic depressive? Or all three?

Do you think she would spell trouble for the holder of the highest office in the land?

Does the first lady have to get an A in health and deportment to qualify for her job?

These are questions raised by "Now You Know," a memoir by Kitty Dukakis. In it she describes the many ways that she's an "addictive personality" and how she tried to conceal the true nature of her "diseases" from husband, children, friends and country.

It's easy to say that nobody votes for a president on the qualifications of his wife to be the first lady. Mike Dukakis lost fair and square, and if anything, Kitty the campaigner was an asset.

But what if we had gotten to know Kitty, really know the addict-alcoholic-depressive, during the campaign? What would we have done with that information? Would voters have had a legitimate concern that her health could jeopardize her husband's ability to be the president?

The message here is that Kitty would have been a big problem for the president if her husband had been elected, that he would have been a over to rapacious journalists to ferret out. The seed for deception was there, nonetheless.

When a president's wife flies out of control, the president is personally vulnerable. He needs to take the time to comfort and protect her. If her "disease" is a secret, he is more vulnerable, because it could be exploited by enemies.

In this age of the public confessional, it's probably a blessing for Kitty, and other public figures, including Betty Ford, that addiction and alcoholism are perceived to be "diseases."

In this age of the public confessional, it's probably a blessing for Kitty, and other public figures, including Betty Ford, that addiction and alcoholism are perceived to be "diseases," so that a public pities rather than criticizes the victim. If we judge Kitty to be morally culpable, as exhibiting irresponsible behavior, she wouldn't feel quite so free to make her deeds known, particularly the third, fourth and fifth times.

But the disease model, as Kitty Dukakis tells it, also adds a note of despair, suggesting that you can never know when "disease" will sneak up on you again. The sufferer's got a perfect alibi for a recurrence: "The disease/devil made me do it." This enabled Kitty to write two prefaces describing her backsliding not as something she did, just something that happened to her.

Would we be as sympathetic toward the victim of "sexual addictions" or "gambling addictions" or "lying addictions," which make the panoply of modern diseases, if we thought the sufferer might be a first lady?

Mary Todd Lincoln, who was known for her extravagance, would have been diagnosed as suffering from a "shopping" disease if she were first lady today. She was by most accounts one of the most vilified of our presidential wives, vilified less than Rachel Jackson but more than Eleanor Roosevelt. She was almost as controversial as Lincoln himself.

It's the conventional wisdom that first ladies reflect the status of women of their time while at the same time shaping the expectations of what women can do. This is a role largely undefined in modern times. Each woman must make of it what she will.

A reader of Kitty's "Now You Know" closes the book with an eerie feeling that both the country and Mrs. Michael Dukakis were spared a terrible ordeal by George Bush, the man who defeated her husband, an ordeal that had nothing to do with his qualifications to be president.

Suzanne Fields

big problem for her, too.
"Had the vote gone differently, had Michael and I moved to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, I am certain the first crisis would have sent me out of control," she writes on the first page of her book. "I am equally certain, thrust into the smothering, protective confines of the White House, I would not have been able to seek proper help."

During the primaries, she twice went on binges, and once her husband sought help from his brother-in-law, a physician, to revive her after she passed out on her bed. But, with an eye no doubt cocked on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, he didn't encourage her to get treatment.

Her staff saw to it that her hotel suites were adequately supplied with Stolichnaya and rocks. Did they know intuitively what she would tell us now, that she desperately needed a drink to unwind, that she was seething on the inside?

After the election, when she grooved on rubbing alcohol, Kitty and Mike thought for a moment that maybe, just maybe, this was one episode they could keep from the insatiable, prying press. Then, of course, they realized it would be foolhardy to turn that kind of story

Atlanta to host centennial Olympics

By John Nadel
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The athletes get the gold medals, but the host city gets the real gold. Ever since Los Angeles in 1984, Olympics are big business, and Atlanta stands to earn real big profits from the 1996 Games.

Where Montreal faced a reported billion-dollar deficit from the 1976 Summer Games and Lake Placid, N.Y., ran up a $6 million debt from the 1980 Winter Games, LA was a financial bonanza.

Official Olympic revenue according to a 1985 report was $746.56 million, including a $215 million surplus.

And that wasn't even close to the overall economic impact on Southern California.

A study by Economic Research Associates said the Games generated $3.29 billion in revenue for Southern California from such sources as tourism, Olympic-related business, advertising, construction and sales. That amounted to 1.6 percent of the total gross product for Los Angeles County in 1984.

Save for the Soviet boycott, the 1984 Games far exceeded expectations. There were no significant incidents. Logistics weren't a problem. Attendance records were broken long before the Games concluded and the money poured in, unlike Olympics past.

"Without question, Los Angeles

Ken Chapman, right, event coordinator of the Atlanta Olympic Committee, pops champagne for volunteer workers Tuesday in Atlanta after the city was chosen to host the 1996 Summer Olympics.

became a community that showed the world what it could accomplish," said Peter Ueberroth, who headed the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee and later served as baseball commissioner. "It showed a face of friendship. Atlanta can do the same thing."

"I felt Atlanta would get the Games, I think Atlanta was the most qualified city for the Games. One other thing I'd say — beware the doomsayers. All kinds of people will surface who predict doom and gloom for their efforts. They'll survive despite those doomsayers and do very well. Just beware of them, that's all my advice."

The only city besides Los Angeles interested in hosting the Games six years ago was Tehren. A permanent site was being considered because of past problems, like those experienced in Montreal.

Then came Los Angeles, a huge profit and a new way to handle the Games.

The official revenue included $286.5 million from television, $123.2 million from sponsorship, $139.8 million from ticket sales, $167.3 million in interest and other sources and $29.7 million from commemorative coins.

"The arrangement with the IOC and the city of Los Angeles was unique and different," said Patrick Escobar, vice president of communications for the Amateur Athletic Foundation, which was created to replace the LAOOC in 1986 to continue distribution of the surplus to local youth organizations.

"I don't know what Atlanta's arrangement is going to be. The city of Los Angeles was not liable. The Games were run by a private organization."

The privately run 1984 Games meant thousands of jobs, but there were thousands of volunteers, too.

"There was the economic benefit, which was huge, but people came together in Los Angeles as never before," said deputy mayor Mark Fabiani. "It was an opportunity for everyone to cooperate, to volunteer, to put on a three-week show for the world."

"Putting on an event of this size is a gargantuan task. It can't be done without the cooperation of the citizens."

Shortly after Tuesday's announcement, Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley sent a letter of congratulations to Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson.

And there was an offer, too.

"The summer of 1984 was a proud time for Los Angeles," Bradley wrote. "I hope the experience will be as exciting for Atlanta."

Wingate charged with rape

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — After being charged with raping a 17-year-old woman, San Antonio guard David Wingate faces an uncertain future with the Spurs.

San Antonio owner Red McCombs said Tuesday that the team was close to reaching a contract with the backup guard, and might have had one this week. But the rape charge Monday has held that up.

"We're very concerned about the image of the Spurs," McCombs said. "Our players have become a very big part of this community. They're looked up to by our young people and all of our citizens."

Wingate, 26, who played on Georgetown's 1984 NCAA championship team, averaged 6.8 points in 78 games last season.

He is free on $10,000 bond after being charged with second-degree rape, battery and a fourth-degree sexual offense. If convicted on the rape charge, Wingate could spend 20 years in prison.

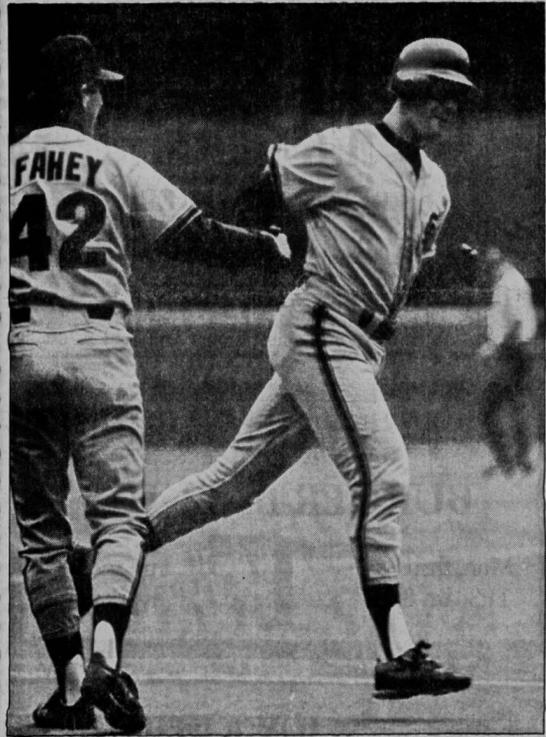

The woman told police that she went to Wingate's for a party, began drinking and became ill. Wingate allegedly came into the room where she was resting and lay next to her.

She told the court that she tried to resist but was "so drunk and felt so out of it that she was helpless."

Police said the woman and her sister left the party to contact authorities. An examination done by a physician revealed evidence of sexual intercourse, the court records said.

Wingate told Howard County police he had sex with the woman but insisted the contact was consensual.

McCombs stressed that Wingate has only been accused, not convicted, of a crime, but said: "We're very concerned where there is any improper even suggested against any one of our players or any member of our organization."

San Francisco first baseman Will Clark is congratulated by coach Bill Fahey Monday after a first-inning homer, the first of his two on the day as the Giants downed the Reds 5-3 in Cincinnati.

Blue Jays tie Sox on Mulliniks' single

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Toronto moved into a first-place tie with Boston in the American League East on Tuesday night as Rance Mulliniks' run-scoring ninth inning with two outs in the ninth inning gave the Blue Jays a 3-2 victory over the New York Yankees.

The Blue Jays have won five straight games and 10 of their last 12, to equal Boston at 81-68. The Blue Jays trailed Boston by 6½ games on Sept. 4.

Bud Black (12-10) got the victory in relief despite giving up Kevin Maas' 19th homer of the season, a solo shot. Uecker that made it 2-2 with two outs in the eighth. Black was acquired Monday from Cleveland.

Orioles 4, Red Sox 1

BALTIMORE — Boston's Tom Bolton pitched 6½ hitless innings before Baltimore solved him with four runs in the seventh, including rookie David Segui's three-run homer, as the Orioles won 4-1 Tuesday night to drop the Red Sox into a first-place tie with Toronto in the AL East.

Bolton (9-4) took his no-hitter and a 1-0 lead into the seventh, but he couldn't finish the inning as the Orioles got five hits — four of them with two out.

Giants 5, Reds 3
CINCINNATI — Will Clark hit a pair of homers Tuesday afternoon and Kevin Mitchell also homered as the San Francisco Giants beat Cincinnati 5-3 to slow the Reds' playoff drive.

The Reds' lead over the defending National League West champions slipped to 7½ games. Cincinnati's number for clinching its first division title since 1979 is 11.

The Giants ended a four-game losing streak by hitting three homers off a struggling Tom Browning (13-9) — solo shots by Clark and Mitchell and a two-run homer by Clark.

Dodgers 6, Braves 2

ATLANTA — The Los Angeles Dodgers climbed back within 4½ games of Cincinnati in the National League West by defeating the Atlanta Braves 6-2 Tuesday night as Kal Daniels doubled home two runs and scored two.

The game defied to 4½ before losing to Cincinnati on Sunday, picked up a game on the Reds, who lost to San Francisco 5-3. The Reds have 15 games remaining, Los Angeles 14.

Cubs 8, Pirates 5

CHICAGO — Jerome Walton homered on John Smiley's first pitch and Damon Berryhill hit a three-run homer on his last one to cap a six-run first inning as the Chicago Cubs beat Pittsburgh 8-5

Hawkeyes ranked 8th in 1st field hockey poll

IOWA CITY — The University of Iowa field hockey team is ranked eighth on the first NCAA coaches' poll released yesterday.

The Hawkeyes, 7-0, boast the best record among the 20 Division I teams ranked, but were hurt in the early balloting by their strength of schedule. Iowa's only win against a ranked opponent was a 1-0 decision over Massachusetts September 9.

The Hawkeyes won't lack for high caliber opponents this weekend, as they travel to Norfolk, Va., to take on No. 1 Old Dominion and No. 2 North Carolina.

The Lady Monarchs, 6-0-1, are the 1989 NCAA runner-up, and the Tar Heels, 4-1, are the defending national champions. Iowa and Old Dominion play Friday, Sept. 21 at 6 p.m., and the Hawkeyes and Tar Heels meet Sunday, Sept. 23 at 1:30 p.m.

Jury says Martin not behind wheel

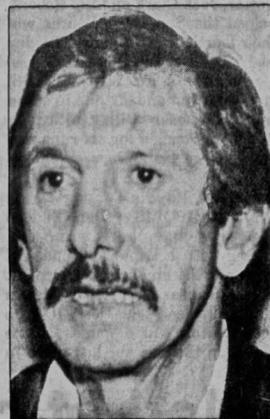

The Associated Press

PORT CRANE, N.Y. — A Detroit bar owner, who had claimed he was not behind the wheel of the pickup truck in the Christmas Day crash that killed Billy Martin, was found guilty Tuesday of driving with a blood-alcohol content above the legal limit for intoxication.

William Reedy, 53, a close friend of the former major league manager, was cleared of a lesser charge of driving while injured by a Town of Fenton Court jury that deliberated for about two hours before reaching a verdict.

Reedy was fined $350 and had his driving privileges in New York state revoked for at least six months.

Reedy was convicted of a charge of driving with 0.10 percent or more blood-alcohol content, a misdemeanor. The charge carries the same penalties in New York as driving while intoxicated, but is lodged against some drivers because intoxication can be more difficult to prove in court, said George Fileau, spokesman for the state Department of Motor Vehicles.

In Reedy's case, the jury felt he was not impaired due to his high tolerance level for alcohol, but it did find that he was legally over the 0.10 percent limit, said Kevin Guyette, assistant Broome County district attorney.

Reedy was driving Martin's pickup truck on Dec. 25, 1989, when it crashed into a culvert near the entrance to Martin's farm north of Binghamton.

"I'm pleased with one verdict and unhappy with another," said John Blechman, Reedy's attorney.

"We've never denied that Mr. Reedy was drinking, and the jury's verdict showed that drinking had no effect whatsoever on the accident," Blechman said.

Blechman said he was considering an appeal, which would be heard in Broome County Court.

Reedy declined to comment on the verdict. He planned to head back to Detroit Tuesday night, Blechman said.

Martin's wife, Jilluan, said "we are gratified with the verdict. Now maybe Billy can rest in peace."

Martin's widow attended the trial but did not testify. She has filed a wrongful death lawsuit against the town and Reedy. Bob Pearl, the Rochester attorney representing her said the verdict "established for all time that William Reedy was the driver."

Reedy's defense centered on Blechman's contention that his client was not behind the wheel of Martin's truck when it slid off the snow-slickened country road and into a culvert.

Martin was a member of five World Series championship teams with the Yankees during an 11-year playing career. He acquired a battling, contentious reputation in the 16 years he managed in the major leagues.

Fry, Elliott give their side of film exchange

By Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

In the words of Hayden Fry, sometimes other things take precedence over the game of football.

"We obviously have this press conference to talk football," the Iowa football coach said at his weekly meeting with the media Tuesday. "But we have a related subject that we might as well get out of the way immediately."

Recent reports say that Iowa State football coach Jim Walden refused to give Iowa a tape of the Cyclones game with Minnesota last weekend because Fry wouldn't give him a tape of the Hawkeyes' Cincinnati game.

Fry turned the beginning of his press conference over to Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott to answer questions about the controversy.

"Bump Elliott represents the University of Iowa in regards to the so-called film exchange," Fry said, "or lack of a film exchange."

Elliott stressed that there was an agreement between the two schools to exchange the tapes. But, he said, Iowa State told Fry that they wouldn't send their tape.

"I would assume for that reason, Iowa State suggested that they wouldn't send the Minnesota film to Iowa."

Now the question seems to be why Northern Iowa refused to give Iowa the tape of their game with the Cyclones.

"Iowa State, to my knowledge, made no request of Iowa not to attempt to send the film," Elliott said. "I assume Iowa State said, 'You've seen us once, you can't see us twice.' Because they played two games as opposed to our one, that doesn't mean that we shouldn't have an opportunity to see those films."

But Elliott added that he's heard stories about Iowa State dropping Northern Iowa from their schedule if the Panthers staff gave the tape to Iowa.

"There was an indication," Elliott said. "Maybe some member of their coaching staff suggested that there might be a problem with them scheduling UNI in the future if they proceeded to exchange the film. That's what I've heard."

Another problem for Walden was that his staff couldn't scout the Iowa-Cincinnati game because NCAA rules state that a team can only scout another team once by one coach.

Iowa State had sent a scout to the Hawkeyes' spring game last April.

"He legally couldn't scout our game," Fry said. "They did that this spring. So you see the game that's going on is really funny but unnecessary and it shouldn't be associated with intercollegiate athletics."

Although the controversy seems to be all that is being discussed at this time, sophomore receiver Danan Hughes said he doesn't think it will affect the game much.

"That has to do with the coaches," he said. "Regardless of what films we watch or what films they watch, we still have to go out there and play. That's just between the coaches and the directors. I don't pay too much attention to that."

Tuesday night, handing the Pirates a season-high sixth straight defeat. It was the first homer since last Aug. 3 for Berryhill, who went on the disabled list on Aug. 19, 1989, underwent arthroscopic surgery on Sept. 6 and did not return until earlier this month.

Expos 4, Mets 3
 NEW YORK — The New York Mets blew another chance to move into first place in the National League East on Tuesday night, wasting Darryl Strawberry's dramatic game-tying three-run homer in the eighth inning and losing to the Montreal Expos 4-3 on pinch-hitter Junior Noboa's RBI single in the ninth.

The Mets, who lost for the third time in four games, remained one-half game behind the Pittsburgh Pirates, who dropped their sixth straight, losing 8-5 to the Chicago Cubs.

The third-place Expos, who have won four in a row, including a three-game sweep of Pittsburgh, are 4 1/2 games out, their smallest deficit since Aug. 15.

Indians 8, Brewers 3
 CLEVELAND — Charles Nagy won for the first time in the major leagues as the Cleveland Indians beat the Milwaukee Brewers 8-3 Tuesday night for their sixth victory in seven games.

Nagy (1-4) gave up three runs, nine hits, walked two and struck out a career-high eight in 7 1/2 innings before Doug Jones finished for his 37th save, matching his team record set in 1988. Milwaukee is 0-5 at Cleveland this season.

Padres 8, Astros 1
 HOUSTON — Home runs by Joe Carter, Jack Clark and Bip Roberts helped the San Diego Padres win their fourth straight game Tuesday night, 8-1 over the Houston Astros.

San Diego's Ed Whitson (13-8) gave up a run and six hits in seven innings. Loser Bill Gullickson (9-13) was tagged for six runs and eight hits in 4 1/2 innings.

show called "Baseball Legends," include Joe Frazier and Kurt Rambis.
 Police were looking for Dent and his partners, who apparently abandoned their Glendale offices shortly after the show, authorities said Monday.
 At least 10,000 fans showed up at the Pasadena Center earlier this month for the three-day event showcasing about 30 sports and television celebrities who sold their autographs for $6 to $30 each.
 Stars said they were told they would be paid anywhere from $1,000 to $32,000 to attend the event, but when they tried to cash checks from the promoters, they bounced.
No retrial on horizon
 CHICAGO — Federal prosecutors said Tuesday they haven't decided whether to retry two New York-based sports agents accused of illegally signing college football players.

 "What happens now is, we review it and decide if we want to pursue this case," said Victoria Peters, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Attorney's Office.
 On Monday, the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the 1989 convictions of Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom.
 Peters said U.S. District Judge George Marovich would have to set a status hearing to ask the government if it wanted a retrial.
 "Nobody has even discussed this at this time," Peters said. "I don't think it will be decided for at least another three or four weeks."
 Walters, 58, of New York, had been sentenced to five years in prison. Bloom, 30, of Sherman Oaks, Calif., was given three years. But the agents have been free on appeal bond since their April 13, 1989 conviction after a five-week trial.

Atlanta Hawks sign Rumeal
 ATLANTA — Rumeal Robinson, the Atlanta Hawks' No. 1 draft choice from the University of Michigan, Tuesday signed a four-year contract with the NBA club.

Terms of the agreement were not announced. Robinson, a 6-foot-2 point guard and the 10th pick overall in the June draft, averaged 14.3 points and 5.7 assists during his career at Michigan.
 "I'm very excited about joining the Atlanta Hawks organization," said Robinson at a hastily called news conference at Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium prior to the Braves-Los Angeles Dodgers baseball game.
 "I just came in to sign a contract and the (Hawks) thought it might be a good idea to have a press conference, but with today being the day Atlanta was awarded the Olympic Games, there wasn't much of a turnout," said Robinson with a grin.

 One reporter was on hand.
 "We figured there would be a good chance that nobody would show up," Hawks public relations director Arthur Triche said.

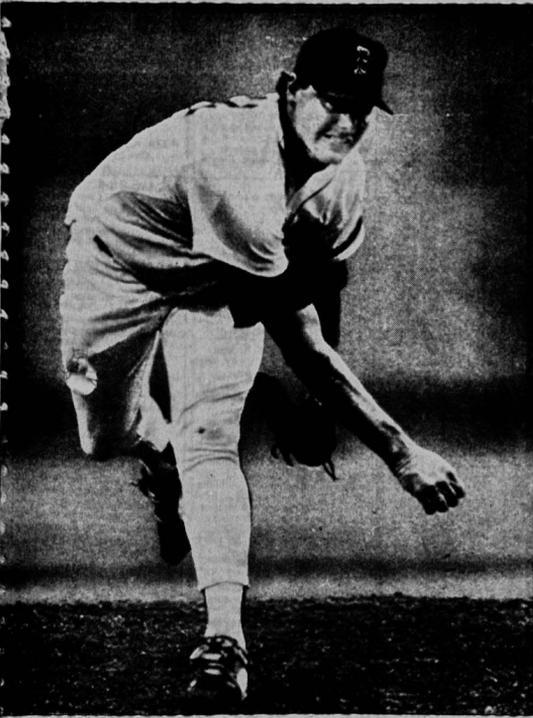

Hoover-ball goes big-time
 Hoover-ball, a sport that originated in 1929 and was revived in 1988, will go home Sept. 29, as the first annual Hoover-Ball Capital Classic will be staged in Washington.

Between 12 and 20 teams, fielded by staffs of U.S. Senators and Congressmen, will compete. The event is staged by the Hoover Library Association in West Branch, Iowa.
 Hoover-ball, likened by one participant to "throwing a frozen turkey over your garage", is played with a medicine ball and follows volleyball rules. It was named for President Herbert Hoover's method of losing weight while in office.
 The National Hoover-ball Championships, held in West Branch every year, have been growing in popularity. This year, fifty teams competed. Next year, 75-100 are expected.

Iowa City needs football coaches
 The Iowa City Recreation Department is looking for coaches for Youth Flag Football. The coaches would be responsible for some of the 400-500 participating children in grades 3-6. The flag football season lasts from the end of September to the first week in November.

The job requires between four and six hours a week, with pay at $4 an hour. For more information or to apply, contact Rick Ertz at 356-5100.

Boston Red Sox 20-game winner Roger Clemens, who has missed the last two weeks with tendinitis in his right shoulder, threw without pain for 15 minutes Tuesday and is scheduled to pitch against New York Sunday. Clemens was 20-6 with a 1.98 ERA before the injury.

Clemens appears fit, may get Sunday start

BALTIMORE (AP) — Roger Clemens, sidelined for two weeks by tendinitis in his right shoulder, threw hard for 15 minutes Tuesday and was penciled in tentatively for a return to the mound for the Boston Red Sox in New York on Sunday.

"He threw the hell out of the ball," Manager Joe Morgan said. "He threw hard, he threw free and easy. He's ready."

Morgan said that Clemens, who has a 20-6 record and leads the AL with a 1.98 earned run average, would return home and be checked by Dr. Arthur Pappas, the team physician, probably on Thursday.

If Pappas, an orthopedic specialist, gives his OK, Morgan said, Clemens will rejoin the Red Sox in New York Friday for a weekend series with the Yankees.

Morgan said that he had changed the rotation, moving Clemens from a scheduled start on Friday night to Sunday.

That, he said, would enable Clemens to open a three-game series with Toronto on Sept. 28 in Boston. Clemens also would be available to start with sufficient rest against the Chicago White Sox in the regular-season finale in Boston on Oct. 3.

If he's not needed for Chicago and the Red Sox beat Toronto for the AL East title, Clemens would start against Oakland in the opener of the AL Championship Series on Oct. 6 at Fenway Park.

Erickson weary of Miami antics

By Steve Wine
The Associated Press

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Coach Dennis Erickson, who last week told his Miami Hurricanes to temper their talk, has now cracked down on showboating.

At least two Hurricanes "crossed the line" of good taste with dancing, prancing and posing after big plays in last Saturday's nationally televised 52-24 victory at California, Erickson said Tuesday.

"I wasn't very proud of it, and I know our team wasn't very proud of it," the coach said during his weekly news conference. "There's a point where it's embarrassing to the program."

Erickson said players guilty of excessive celebrating in the future will be benched for the rest of the game and possibly longer. It was the coach's second edict concerning behavior in as many weeks. Following an opening-game loss at Brigham Young, he ordered the Hurricanes to stop making degrading comments about opponents.

Erickson declined to spell out guidelines as to what kind of celebrating he would permit.

"We are going to play hard, and we are going to be excited about playing the game, and we are going to jump up and down," he said. "But there's that line that we're not going to cross at the University of Miami. If they do, they're just not going to play."

Celebrating by several Hurricanes drew boos from the California fans and a shower of postgame criticism in Bay Area newspapers and on Miami radio talk shows.

The primary targets were receiver Randal Hill and linebackers Micheal Barrow and Jessie Armstead. Hill raised both arms after each of his first six catches. Barrow and Armstead shook their hips in a sack dance.

"People my age pretty much understand the dances," Barrow said, "because some of the things we did, you'll see a lot of people doing in nightclubs."

"Mostly the people that disagreed with it were older alumni. I can understand that."

Miami's next game is Sept. 29 at home against Iowa. What will celebrations of big plays look like then?

"A square dance," offensive tackle Mike Sullivan said.

Newfangled doll can't match toys of an earlier generation

By Jennifer Weglarz
The Daily Iowan

During a recent perusal of Saturday morning television, I was appalled to see, sandwiched between "We're into" Barbie and Ninja Turtles commercials, an advert for Baby Uh-Oh.

The Premise: Because changing diapers is a task we all enjoy, yet one at which we are not very skilled, let's create a doll that, well — provides youngsters (preferably girls) with a constructive play experience.

Runnin'," has been pulled from the shelves of 110 Disc Jockey and 25 Music Express departments (licensed to Montgomery Ward stores).

The stores — part of the Wax Works chain based in Owensboro, Kentucky — removed the recordings because of explicit content concerning gang violence and oral sex. The EP, on Ruthless Records, bears the standard warning sticker of the Recording Industry Association of America.

Earlier this year, N.W.A.'s debut, 1989's "Straight Outta Compton," was ruled obscene in Williamson land), the nation's largest music retailer with more than 800 stores (three in IC), also doesn't carry "Nasty as They Wanna Be," and a move by them could trigger other retailers to follow suit.

Incidentally, "100 Miles and Runnin'" is at No. 32 this week on the Billboard album chart; Ruthless Records reports the EP has sold over half a million copies to date.

M.C. Hammer, who performs in Cedar Rapids tonight and on an ABC salute to Oprah Winfrey tomorrow night, has a new single and video, "Pray." If you think the music sounds suspiciously like Prince's "When Doves Cry," well, good for you! The video features our Oaktown homeboy — and his energetic, if somewhat scantily clad, dancers — cutting a rug for the Lord.

The minimal storyline includes Hammer breaking up a fight and earnestly explaining to the antagonists that they need to pray to make it today. Interspersed among shots of the self-titled Dancin' Machine are surreal clips of a woman striking odd poses in a white choir robe.

All we need now is a Hammer-Madonna "Pray/Like a Prayer" remix, then we'll be truly happy.

Today's kids may think they have it all, but we children of the '70s know better.

The Product: Baby produces her uh-oh through the most advanced (yet sanitary) means possible — water! The diapers are treated with a chemical that changes color when water touches them, hence yellow and brown stains. The same technology also gives Baby diaper rash and rosy cheeks (to show her pleasure, no doubt, about being dry).

Needless to say, I felt not a pinprick of jealousy. Today's kids may think they have it all, but we children of the '70s know better. We had a doll that "ate" a gelatinous substance that was supposed to come out in the diaper some minutes later (and I think it was also reusable!), as though with a diabolical mind of its own, most of the gelatin remained in the bowels of the doll, creating its own special mess. Uh-oh indeed.

Just when you thought it was safe to release an album: N.W.A.'s second recording, "100 Miles and County, Tenn. "100 Miles and Runnin'" has been praised by some critics for its portrayal of inner city life and for the power the recording gets from the group's anger — aspects that also fueled "Straight Outta Compton."

The real kicker in this tale is that at the Wax Works chain stores minors are not permitted to purchase stickered material in the first place, so nobody is being "protected." The chain, which also does not stock 2 Live Crew's "Nasty as They Wanna Be" — but does carry other stickered recordings — will accomplish some things that it may not desire by refusing to stock the new EP: This action will drive away adult customers, thereby benefiting other record stores, and N.W.A. itself will also reap the benefits this kind of notoriety brings.

It will be interesting to see how other nationwide chains react to Wax Works' decision. The Musicland Corp. (Sam Goody, Music-

Hendrix remembered by fans

The Associated Press

RENTON, Wash. — Twenty years after his death, legendary rock guitarist Jimi Hendrix still packs 'em in.

They don't come in large numbers at any one time, but they come. Some bring guitars, some bring flowers. Visitors might spend a little time at his grave, strumming tunes.

"The crowds here have mellowed a bit, as has the mood of the country," said Hank Kerns, general manager of Greenwood Memorial Park, where Hendrix is buried.

"Once in a while they'll leave a beer can, but we're careful to get it picked up right away."

Kerns said the number of visitors to Hendrix's grave has increased during the past few years, and the Goodwill Games brought more than usual. One national magazine, he said, listed visiting the gravesite as one of the things to do in Seattle while attending the international athletic contest.

Hendrix died in London on Sept. 18, 1970. According to coroner's records, he died when he choked on his vomit. A non-lethal amount of barbituate drugs was found in his system.

"Forever in our hearts," reads his headstone, which includes an electric guitar carved in bas-relief. There is little to indicate he was the king of acid rock, but by the time of his death at age 27 he had forged a lasting legacy.

"I heard he was buried around here. I needed to make the pilgrimage," Peg Wood said Sunday during a visit to the cemetery.

The 26-year-old recently moved to Seattle from Illinois to begin an internship with the Veterans Administration as she pursues a doctorate in psychology. Her "other life" is playing rock guitar.

"My parents named me Peggy Sue, for God's sake. I was destined for a life of decadent rock 'n' roll," she said, laughing.

Hendrix, who grew up in Seattle's predominantly black Central Area, was about 14 when he talked his father into buying him a $5 used guitar, according to Al Hendrix.

"He wore that thing out," the father said. "Later on I got him his first electric guitar and I got a sax. I didn't know much about the sax and he didn't know much about the guitar. So we'd make quite a bit of noise."

At first, the young Hendrix was content to play along with recordings of blues greats B.B. King and Muddy Waters.

"So I told him, 'Come up with something original,' and he did," recalled Al Hendrix. "The first time I heard 'Are You Experienced?' (the first Jimi Hendrix Experience album), it was something altogether different than what I was used to listening to."

Al Hendrix still goes to his son's grave about once a month, still gets a kick out of recalling the times he has found fans sitting around the grave with guitars in hand.

Fans frequently leave small items. Peg Wood added a guitar pick to the collection there.

"He was the most inventive guitar player I ever heard," she said. "I like the blues. But I felt he rewrote them. He changed the rules so that there weren't any rules. He freed me up."

'Secret' diary provides 'clues' for baffled 'Twin Peaks' fans

By Deborah Hastings
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — "The Secret Diary of Laura Palmer" is roughly equivalent to "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" on a four-year bender.

If "Twin Peaks" the television series seemed dark, violent and just plain confusing, don't pick up the musings of its dead homecoming queen.

This girl imbibed more controlled substances and indulged in more sexual dalliances than the entire cast of a porno movie on location at a crack house.

Released last week by Pocket Books, "The Secret Diary of Laura Palmer" is one of several marketing spinoffs (including a cassette tape, pie and coffee) from the mind-boggling ABC series created by eclectic filmmaker David Lynch and former "Hill Street Blues" writer Mark Frost.

The diary actually is written by Lynch's 22-year-old daughter, Jennifer, and is living proof that the apple does not fall far from the tree.

Jennifer Lynch's first novel is a twisted slice of Americana in which nothing is quite what it seems and sex is never quite making love.

It is vaguely reminiscent of her father's chilling depiction of sexual blackmail in "Blue Velvet."

But Laura Palmer's diary is not cloned from David Lynch films. Rather, it is 184 pages of ruminations about life in a fictional Northwest lumber town as seen by its homecoming queen.

It is written, of course, before her murder, which only further unsettled an already unsettling place to live.

"Peaks" freaks, grab a pencil. Though the book is billed as containing definitive clues that identify Laura's killer, it's not easy going.

Like the TV series, which ended its first season without disclosing the murderer, the book is crammed with red herrings, confusing twists, oblique references and everything but a simple, declarative sentence that states "Laura Palmer was killed by (whoever it was who dumped her body in that lake)."

And talking to Jennifer Lynch about how to decipher the book is exactly like talking to her father or Frost about the show's reeling plot lines.

Which means you never get a direct answer.

Yes, says Jennifer Lynch with a smile, smoking cigarettes in her publicist's West Hollywood office, she knows who the killer is.

Will readers of the book? "The careful reader will know the clues and who the killer is," she replies.

What about this BOB character in the book, and why is every mention of his name spelled in capital letters?

"That's the way it needed to be," she answers.

Have we seen BOB thus far in "Twin Peaks" episodes? "I should probably let that slide," she replies.

On the subject of herself and on the inner workings of Laura Palmer, the author is, thankfully, less enigmatic.

Jennifer Lynch carries herself with a self-possession that belies her age. In conversation, she refers to her father as "David" and in a clear, but unassuming, way patiently stresses that she alone is responsible for the book.

"I had a job to do, and I did it," she says. "It was a tricky situation at first. I wanted to keep my career different from his."

What was the directive from Lynch-Frost Productions when she sat down to write the book?

"Be Laura Palmer," she answers. "I had to basically become her. Laura was a very troubled, very dark girl."

And while the TV series alluded to Laura's darker side, permeated by sex, violence and drugs, there is nothing equivocal in her diary. If it were made into a movie, "The Secret Life of Laura Palmer" would carry an X rating.

Beginning with her 12th birthday and ending days before her death at age 16, the diary chronicles a young girl's descent into cocaine addiction, orgies, prostitution and near insanity.

But sex, drugs and murder clues aside, the book also manages to capture the mindset of a teen-age girl caught in the netherworld of puberty.

Laura alternately worships her mother and thinks her uncool, worries about the onset of menstruation and, with a heartfelt conviction available only to teenagers, believes she is the world's sole possessor of such confusing feelings.

"This is about some of the dreams, hopes and fears of any young girl's life," says Jennifer Lynch. "We've all been there. We've all been 12."

But Lynch stresses that the book is not an autobiography, although having David Lynch as a father did make for a somewhat untraditional childhood.

Her parents were divorced when she was a youngster, but she spent much time with her father, who once had a paper route in between making early films such as "Eraserhead."

"I used to have very few people who liked me because my father was strange and we were poor and we lived the art life," Lynch says.
