Students comment on their legal, not-so-legitimate pets in residence halls

Amy Davison

That's the issue.

I asked: What can only be owned by university students? The answer: an education hall pet. The Woodward campus is one of the only ones who would even let me into their cage.

Dean: Pet rats. I've ever owned two pet rats - Leona and Tofu. They didn't come with her down the hall to James residence hall. She was wearing a male beta fish named Ron. She confessed she hadn't been able to keep plants alive.

Ron: I talk to him every day. He's good company - I talk to him every day.

The Woodward campus is one of the only ones who would even let me into their cage.

UI Teaching Council proposes resource center for faculty, TAs

By Jessica Davidson

In another bid to improve UI undergraduate education, a teaching resource center for teaching assistants was approved by the UI Council on Teaching.

The proposed Center for Teaching Excellence would be part of a larger effort to improve undergraduate education and make the campus a leader in that area in regard to teaching quality, according to UI Vice President of Academic Affairs Peter Nelson.

"It would be a place where teaching assistants and professors could go to meet with each other, to discuss teaching and the learning process," Nelson said. "The center would be located in the UI Center for Academic Affairs, off the main library and will be open to students and faculty alike."

Computer users may risk health

Warning! Using a computer can be hazardous to your health. Although we probably won't work you to death, problems can arise. The computer, there is evidence that it can cause stress, fatigue, and other health risks. Fortunately, simple steps can be taken to prevent problems.

User face dangers from the monitor

In addition to viewing the display, users may be at risk from other sources. A recent article in the New Scientist, vol. 127 (1982), pp. 25-28, points out that working at a computer can cause stress, fatigue, and other health problems. Classical music may help

In addition to classic music, there are other solutions to these problems. One solution is to have short breaks from the computer. The University of Iowa has a program called the "Mayflower" program to help with this problem. The program involves having short breaks from the computer. Senator race close; Branstad lead grows

The Associated Press

Iowa Secretary of State Bob Graham on Monday began a two-day tour of the state, seeking to solidify his lead in the tight race against Democratic Sen. Tom Harken.

Graham said he was confident of winning re-election, but acknowledged that the race was tight. He added that he expected Harken to make a strong showing on Election Day.

Harken, who is seeking his third term, has been trailing Graham in recent polls. The race is considered one of the most competitive in the nation.

In the previous Iowa Senate race in 1986, Harken led Graham by a wide margin. In the 1990 race, however, Harken and Graham have been neck-and-neck for much of the campaign.

Graham, who is seeking his fourth term, said he was confident of winning re-election, but acknowledged that the race was tight. He added that he expected Harken to make a strong showing on Election Day.

CORNING, Iowa -- The annual Thanksgiving dinner for students and faculty of the University of Iowa community has become a victim of the uncertainty that sur­ rounding the Gulf crisis.

The organiser of the event for the past 10 years, Annie Baker of Des Moines, has called off the event because of the continued lack of information at the UN headquarters in New York as to when the United Nations would be able to help in the Gulf crisis.

"I just can't take that chance," said Baker. "If I had to do it today, I wouldn't know what to do."

The event has attracted some 2,000 people each year, including the governor. Corin and her school and other officials on the Gulf crisis.

Iowan's work to help relative held in Kuwait

The Associated Press

Kuwaiti officials have launched a letter-writing campaign seeking medical help as well as the release of a relative seized in Kuwait City last week by Iraq.

Dees Bade of Des Moines, 17, was arrested Thursday. She said she had been notified by the State Department, that the US would provide details of the former program. Corin, was a worker in the Gulf region.

"I think the Iraqi officials have been very cooperative about everything," she said. "It's been a real help to know that she's safe and that she's being taken care of."

Baker says U.S. allies have 'host of options'

By John Pres
The Associated Press

Washington — Secretary of State James Baker played down the possibility of war in the Persian Gulf Sunday, saying the United States and its allies would not forge a "whole boat" of military options to use against Iraq.

But Baker said the Bush administration would review an "appropriate response" to any Iraqi action that seemed to be "hostile to the United States.

The Pentagon on Sunday was getting ready to present Congress with a revised war plan that would show how many U.S. forces would be needed to invade Iraq.

Baker, in an interview on ABC's "This Week," said the Pentagon had prepared a revised plan for approval of Congress. The plan is expected to be presented to Congress for approval by late this week or early next week.

Baker said the United States would ultimately want to consider a "redress" for Kuwait and possibly for other countries that had been treated "wrongly by Iraq." He said the United States would consider "meeting in an attempt to force Iraq to normalize its relations with the United Nations," but declined to say how quickly the meeting might take place.

Baker said the revised plan was being considered because of a "need for flexibility" on Iraq. He said the revised plan would "show how many U.S. forces would be needed to invade Iraq in the event of war."

"The revised plan will describe the numbers, the logistics, and the support that will be needed to support the logistics," he said. "And it will describe the time frame within which those forces must be made available.

Baker said the revised plan was being prepared to show Congress how many forces would be needed to "implement a resolution that would be passed by the United Nations to force Iraq to normalize its relations with the United Nations."

Filipinos against U.S. bases despite surveys showing support

T he film has not yet been tired to disinterested U.S. audiences. Gene Wilder, not since 1980's "Silver" has the box office responded to financial success. The new version, "Funny About Love," should be very well received, certainly if the current reception in Europe is any indication. It's a very enjoyable film, and one that will likely stand the test of time.

"I'm not saying that the film is perfect, but I'm saying that I think it's a very good film," said Leonard Nimoy, who stars as the film's protagonist, a middle-aged man named Stuart Bergman.

The film is about a man who, after the death of his wife, takes a job as a medical consultant at a large hospital. He begins to fall in love with a young female patient, played by Christine Lahti, who is recovering from a serious injury.

"I think the film is very touching," said Nimoy. "It's about love and loss, and it's very well done."
Has the Campus Review pushed its rights to free speech too far?

o what are we really talking about here? It is just another case of Campus Review over-reaction? Is there a conflict of interest here? Is it possible Russian propaganda is affecting the Campus Review? Is this just a part of the smear campaign against the BBSU administration? What is the decision-making process of the Campus Review? Is this a matter of free speech or censorship?

First, let there be no question of my personal opinion of the Campus Review's display. I felt the cartoon and poster as offensive as anyone who read it. The Review made this decision without considering the constitutional rights of others. It is difficult to depict the First Amendment rights of the U.S. and its citizens.

The policy that the Review made is that the display can be removed from the campus. However, the review has a policy saying that the Review making a judgment based on personal preference. But it is true "treatment" indeed! No, there is no action. The display represents the importance of the freedom of speech, which is a constitutional right. The decision to remove the display is not at issue here. The display is not a trumped-up issue. The display's purpose is to make people think about the issue.

What is the current mass movement of the people, other political groups are not shown in this issue. Young Americans for Freedom, for example, seems more concerned about every issue, but it does not undertake countermeasures. OK, the Display of the U.S. war in the Philippines was fine, but college life is different. However, the freedom of speech is the same as the freedom of the press. All Americans should have the freedom to express their views. This is the First Amendment right to free speech.

What is the freedom of speech? Freedom of speech includes the right to speak out regardless of public opinion. However, this freedom of speech is not unlimited. It is important to note that the freedom of speech is not an absolute right. It is subject to certain limitations. The limitations on freedom of speech are generally related to the time, place, and manner of speech. The limitations on freedom of speech are necessary to protect the rights of others and to maintain order and safety.

The first limitation on freedom of speech is that speech that is likely to incite imminent lawless action is not protected. The second limitation is that speech that is not likely to incite imminent lawless action but is likely to have a clear incendiary effect on a substantially large number of persons is not protected.

The third limitation is that speech that is likely to disturb the peace is not protected. The fourth limitation is that speech that is likely to cause substantial disruption of public order is not protected. The fifth limitation is that speech that is likely to cause substantial disruption of public order by the use of force or by the threat of force is not protected.

The limitations on freedom of speech are not absolute. The government has a greater interest in preventing certain types of speech than in preventing other types of speech. The government has a greater interest in preventing speech that is likely to cause substantial disruption of public order than in preventing speech that is likely to cause discomfort to a small number of persons.

In conclusion, the freedom of speech is a fundamental right guaranteed by the First Amendment. It is important to protect this right, but at the same time, we must also protect the rights of others and maintain order and safety. The limitations on freedom of speech are necessary to achieve this balance.

Primary win questions voters' poll honesty

By John Draind

Boston - Democrat John Bellotti, running to the right in Massachusetts' gubernatorial race, told a news conference Sunday, said his campaign had evidence of significant numbers of voters lying to pollsters.

"I don't think there's any question about it," Bellotti said. "It is fairly obvious to anyone who has been around voting for Bellotti." He said his campaign had unusually large numbers of voters reporting they were undecided or planning to vote for Bellotti.

Other factors also contributed to Bellotti's victory, said the candidate, alluding to the effort of Bellotti's political opponents, including the destruction of Bellotti's reputation by independent voters.

"We're close to the primary," said Bellotti. "It was by no means an easy victory for Bellotti, by no means were the results a fait accompli."

The primary win questions voters' pollsters. Bellotti's campaign had evidence of a growing anti-media sentiment, according to campaign polls. According to the Iowa City, Iowa, newspaper, more than 40 percent of the votes cast in the primary were from independents, many of whom were uncommitted voters.

"I don't believe that people lied in the telephone interview process," said Bellotti. "I have to get out of the polling business and get a new one."
