Saudi Arabia expels envoys for suspected espionage

By John King
The Associated Press

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Jordanian and Yemeni envoys expelled from Saudi Arabia this week were monitored photographing strategic oil, military and government installations and later meeting with Iraqi diplomats, diplomatic sources said Monday.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Saudi officials believed an attempted break-in at the kingdom's largest oil company two weeks ago was part of the alleged espionage campaign for which the Riyadh government expelled most Iraqi, Yemeni and Jordanian diplomats.

Diplomatic sources said the order affected 14 Iraqis, 56 Yemenis and 10 Jordanian envoys. The expulsions came just after Saudi Arabia said it was ending its practice of allowing unrestricted entry to the kingdom from neighboring Yemen.

U.N. assembly denounces Iraq

By Victoria Graham
The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — French President Francois Mitterrand on Monday denounced Iraq as a warlike state and warned Baghdad the international community would not retreat from its demand that the Iraqis give up Kuwait.

Leaders from Brazil, Argentina, Poland and Indonesia joined the chorus of condemnation that opened the 45th session of the General Assembly, while the Iraqi ambassador watched in silence.

Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati broadened his criticism to include the United States, saying its military buildup was aimed at backing imperial U.S. designs — not defending the nations of the Persian Gulf.

The speakers set the stage for a Security Council vote Tuesday afternoon on extending trade sanctions against Iraq to include an air embargo.

"Let us be clear about this," Mitterrand told the 159-nation General Assembly. "There is no compromise as long as Iraq does not comply with resolutions of the Security Council and withdraw from Kuwait. The sovereignty of that country is not negotiable."

But Mitterrand also held out the possibility of peace if Iraq withdraws its troops from Kuwait and frees the thousands of Westerners it holds captive.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd told reporters they expected the air embargo resolution to be adopted Tuesday.

"We want action. There is no other way," Shevardnadze said through a translator.

Hurd, asked about recent bellicose comments by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, said, "His statements will remain uncompromising until the day he decides to leave Kuwait, or he is thrown out of Kuwait."

On Sunday, Saddam hinted he would make Mideast oil fields and Israel his targets if Iraqis were "strangled" by sanctions.

Shevardnadze called those comments "inadmissible" and added, "Any attacks would unleash a war and that would mean disaster."

The Security Council on Monday adopted a brief resolution calling for aid to about a dozen nations suffering economic hardship as a result of the embargo against Iraq.

Screening begins for obscenity trial jury

By Terry Kinney
The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Potential jurors in an obscenity trial involving Robert Mapplethorpe's sexually explicit photos were asked Monday whether they look at Playboy magazine or attend arts fund-raisers.

Many questioned during the first day of jury selection said they'd seen such adult magazines as Playboy, Penthouse and Hustler, but said they didn't subscribe. None acknowledged having taken an art class or attending a fund-raiser for the arts.

The Contemporary Arts Center and its director, Dennis Barrie, were charged in April with pandering obscenity and displaying nude photos of children. The photographs were from the exhibit "Robert Mapplethorpe: The Perfect Moment."

The seven-week exhibition of photographs by Mapplethorpe, who died of AIDS in March 1989, attracted a record crowd of more than 80,000 people to the gallery last spring.

About 150 gay-rights and anti-censorship demonstrators protested the trial outside the Hamilton County Courthouse from mid-morning through the noon hour

Explosion evacuates UI building

By Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

A small chemical explosion that injured one student at the UI Chemistry-Botany Building Monday could have escalated into a "very dangerous situation," according to the Iowa City Fire Department.

About 275 people were evacuated from the building late Monday morning when an experiment involving two hazardous chemicals in room 311F went awry.

"A chemical reaction got out of hand in one of the research labs," according to Donald Pietrzyk, chairman of the Chemistry Department.

UI graduate student Hou-Jen Tsai, 28, received a minor facial laceration from flying glass when a one-gallon beaker exploded. He was treated at the scene by Johnson County paramedics and released, according to the fire department.

The chemicals involved in the explosion — hydrogen bromide and brominated acetone — are considered very hazardous, according to fire battalion chief Tom Hansen.

"This stuff is very, very bad," Hansen said. "It has the potential to be very dangerous."

The fire department responded to

A bicyclist rides through the Downtown Pedestrian Mall Monday afternoon. Cycling on the mall is prohibited, and Iowa City Police have issued many tickets to surprised cyclists.

City bicycle ordinances ambush unsuspecting wheeled travelers

By Aaron A. Dolan
The Daily Iowan

Have you ever ridden your bike through the downtown business district or the Downtown Pedestrian Mall? Have you ever seen someone else zooming by? Have you ever seen the signs that say it's against the law?

Actually there are two city ordinances prohibiting riding bicycles, skateboards or rollerskates anywhere in the downtown business district or on the mall.

On one day recently, Officer Frank Cummings of the Iowa City Police Department ticketed approximately 37 people for riding bicycles on the sidewalk.

Cummings said the ordinance exists for the safety of both pedestrians and cyclists.

"We just don't want anyone to walk out of a store and get hit by a bicycle," he said. "This ordinance is also to protect the safety of the bicyclists. If they hit somebody, they're going to get injured, too."

And what do the recipients of the tickets think?

"At first I thought (the officer) was joking," said John DeGroot, a UI junior who was ticketed for riding his bicycle on the Downtown Pedestrian Mall.

Another UI junior, Gregory Walczyk, agreed.

"I thought it was ridiculous," Walczyk said.

Both students were angry about the tickets.

"I couldn't believe that I got a $22 ticket right off the bat without even a warning," commented DeGroot. "There should be bigger signs in the area prohibiting bikes."

Despite the grumbling of bicyclists, the police department will continue enforcing the ordinance, said Cummings.

Cummings said it doesn't take much effort to follow the rules.

"It only takes three minutes to walk your bicycle through the downtown or plaza."

Gorbachev allowed increased authority

By Alan Cooperman
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — The Supreme Soviet legislature voted Monday to move toward a Western-style market economy and gave President Mikhail Gorbachev sweeping new powers to make the switch.

Despite warnings by some lawmakers that the special powers would make Gorbachev a virtual monarch, the legislature passed a resolution allowing him to issue decrees on property, wages, prices, the national budget, the financial system, and law and order.

Gorbachev promised to exercise the powers with care.

"It's a responsibility," he told the legislature. "It's not a tea party."

After rancorous debate, the lawmakers were unable to agree on a specific, step-by-step program to move away from the central planning system that they blame for technological backwardness and shortages of housing, food and consumer goods.

Instead of choosing one of the three plans presented in the past two weeks, the Supreme Soviet set up a committee to combine them and report back by Oct. 15.

Despite disagreement on how to make the switch, the Supreme Soviet's vote marked the first time it has committed the country to a market-based system and was a departure from seven decades of Communist economics.

Since the 1920s, ministries in Moscow have kept a tight grip on the economy, issuing detailed five-year plans that told thousands of factories, farms and businesses what to produce, where to sell it and how much to charge.

The most radical reform proposal, written by economist Stanislav Shatalin, calls for junking the central planning system and moving to a market economy within 500 days by selling factories to private owners and breaking up collective farms.

The most conservative proposal, backed by Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov, would leave the government in control of most of the economy while moving gradually to allow free enterprise.

Gorbachev has backed a compromise that contains many elements of the 500-day plan but would not move as fast. He also wants a national referendum to decide whether to return land to private farmers.

Before and during the Supreme Soviet's meeting, protesters gathered outside the Kremlin and at Pushkin Square in downtown Moscow to condemn the decision to give the president additional powers. They said Gorbachev did not deserve such authority because he was not elected by direct vote of the people.

"The people don't trust Gorbachev!" shouted a group of demonstrators outside the Kremlin's Spassky Gate. They held signs saying, "A President — Not an Emperor" and "All Decrees of the President are Battles Against Democracy."

Gorbachev was elected to a five-year term as president by the Supreme Soviet in March. Previously, his power had come from his position as general secretary of the Communist Party, which he has held since 1985.

The legislature voted 305-46, with 41 abstentions, to allow Gorbachev the special powers until March 31, 1992. The time limit was intended to cover a 500-day economic reform plan, should one be approved.

The action put the Supreme Soviet on a collision course with the parliament of the Russian Federation, the largest of the Soviet Union's 15 constituent republics.

On Saturday, Russian President Boris Yeltsin and other leaders of the Russian parliament declared that Gorbachev's request for additional power was "unacceptable" because it would allow him to infringe on the republic's sovereignty.

Appeal deadline at hand for UI harassment ruling

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

With just two days remaining until deadline, several UI administrators indicated Monday they could go either way in deciding whether to appeal the case of Dr. Jean Jew.

In many ways, more than just Jew's livelihood will be on the line ted it is a complex and frustrating case.

UI Vice President Peter Nathan said "several intricate legal matters are constraining" UI President Hunter Rawlings' decision on the matter. "It's very, very complicated," he said.

Last month, Viator ruled that the UI was "ambivalent" to Jew's claims that she had been sexually harassed by her colleagues in the anatomy department for more than a decade, and that these views kept her from receiving a fair tenure review. Viator ordered the UI to promote Jew to full professor and pay her more than $50,000 in back pay and benefits.

For the UI to appeal the case, it would have to challenge any of three general charges in the judge's ruling: that there was, in fact, sexual harassment in the anatomy department, that this harassment kept Jew from receiving an unbiased review and that this Thursday. Thursday is the UI's deadline for appealing last month's ruling that found it liable for harassment against Jew, an associate anatomy professor.

The UI's credibility, its commitment to battling sexism and racism, and most importantly, the justice of U.S. District Court Judge Harold Viator's ruling are no doubt now being weighed.

IC man convicted of sexual assault charges

By Aaron A. Dolan
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man was sentenced to 25 years in prison Friday after being convicted of two counts of third-degree sexual abuse and one count of sexual exploitation of a minor.

According to Johnson County District Court records, 37-year-old Douglas D. Thompson, No. 4 Hilltop Trailer Court, was charged May 25 with sexual exploitation of a minor in connection with pornographic photos that depicted a 12- to 14-year-old boy "in the nude in sexually suggestive poses or engaging in anal or oral sexual acts."

The interior of Thompson's residence matched the background of some of the photographs, records state. Thompson received a 10-year sentence in connection with this charge.

Thompson was also charged June 6 with two counts of third-degree sexual abuse after an investigation into the sexual abuse of a 17-year-old boy, records state. On two occasions, April 30 and May 2, Thompson "lured the boy into his home and threatened the youth with bodily harm if he wouldn't perform oral sex, records state.

Thompson received concurrent sentences of 15 years for the count of third-degree sexual abuse as a habitual offender and 10 years for the count of third-degree sexual abuse.

Sentences for the sexual abuse charges are to be served consecutively with the charge of sexual exploitation of a minor, records state. Thompson has been given 118 days credit for time already served.

38th Farm Progress Show begins today

By Steven P. Rosenfeld
The Associated Press

AMANA, Iowa — The "Wheel of Misfortune" got a few test spins Monday as exhibitors prepared for Tuesday's start of the 38th Farm Progress Show.

Implement dealers spent the day washing windows of combines and touching up paint on tractors, farm supply businesses ran up company flags, and campers began pulling into the Amana Colonies at 8 a.m.

With near-ideal harvest weather conditions forecast, the three-day show on 1,200 acres of Amana Farms Inc. planned is expected to attract 200,000-250,000 visitors, said show manager Dave Roepke.

The show will be open to the public from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday. Admission and parking are free.

Under the red and white striped Iowa State University Extension Service tent, 12-year-old Nathan Payne of Ogden demonstrated the "Wheel of Misfortune," a device to test reaction time to farm emergencies.

One visiting reporter spun the wheel to the "Belts and Pulleys" category. Payne then instructed the contestant to wait until he heard a buzzer and then push a button. It took the middle-aged reporter 46 hundredths of a second to react.

In that time, Payne said, a moving belt would have moved more than 26 feet, threatening injury if the reporter had caught his arm, leg or clothing in the equipment.

Nearby, Pete Bergstrom, 12, of Ogden, demonstrated tractor accidents using remote control toy farm equipment on a model of a hill.

Experts say nearly four out of 10 fatal farm accidents in Iowa involve tractors.

"I didn't think it was that dangerous," Bergstrom said. Now he tells his father and relatives to shape up if he spots any unsafe practice.

Payne and Bergstrom are members of 4-H units from across the state who will be handling such demonstrations throughout the show.

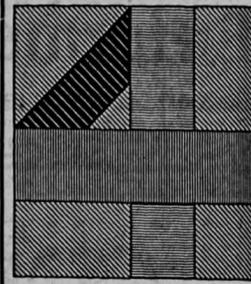

"We hope to build safety awareness with these kids for a lifetime," said Mark Hanna, an extension agricultural engineer at ISU.

Across the 63-acre exhibit, which is covered with brightly striped tents, workers at Deere and Co. spray painted over scratch marks on green and yellow farm implements.

More than 40 pieces of equipment are on Deere's lot. They range from a $5,000 lawn tractor to a $110,000 combine with corn harvesting head.

An Oxford, Iowa, woman was charged Sunday with possession with intent to deliver a Schedule I drug and operating while intoxicated after police found marijuana in her car.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Gloria J. Buckanaga, 40, Oxford, Iowa, was pulled over on the 200 block of East Washington Street Sunday morning at 2:21 a.m. The defendant was pulled over for a broken license plate light and for failing to wear a seat belt, records state.

According to records, the defendant was arrested for OWI after an open bottle of whiskey was observed in open view. Records state the defendant displayed signs of intoxication and failed a field sobriety test. A search of the defendant's vehicle produced four plastic bags of "a green leafy substance believed to be marijuana" and "2 1/2 joints of the same substance," records said.

Buckanaga has been released on her own recognizance, and a preliminary hearing will be held Oct. 11.

minary hearing will be held Oct. 11.

An Iowa City man was found guilty Sept. 21 of assault causing injury and was sentenced to three days in Johnson County Jail.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Angel E. Brumble, 37, 13M Meadow Brook Trailer Court, was charged May 15 for striking a man on the nose and face with the back of his hand after an argument at his residence.

Brumble has been given credit for 18 hours already served in Johnson County Jail, records state.

An Iowa City man was charged Saturday with fourth-degree theft after allegedly stealing a windssock advertisement from a parked Domino's Pizza vehicle.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Louis B. Stoll, 18, 1339 Burge, jumped out of his vehicle and allegedly stole the windssock, valued between $50 and $100.

Records said the defendant was seen committing the act by an officer traveling south on the north end of Byington Road on the west side of Hillcrest Residence Hall. The defendant admitted to the crime, records state.

Bail was set at $500, and a preliminary hearing will be held Oct. 11.

An Iowa City man was charged Saturday with fourth-degree theft after being stopped for operating a bicycle while intoxicated.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Christopher J. Greulich, 21, 409 S. Johnson St., No. 3, allegedly stole a bicycle valued at $70 and was stopped by police at 4:05 a.m.

The defendant has been released on his own recognizance, and a preliminary hearing will be held Oct. 11.

A DeKalb, Ill., man was charged Sunday with fourth-degree theft after stealing a street sign.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Christopher R. Polark, 19, DeKalb, was charged Sunday at 1:16 a.m. at 300 N. Clinton St. after an officer observed the defendant and another man putting an Iowa City street sign into the trunk of their vehicle. They quickly closed the trunk when the officer pulled up behind them, records state, but they opened it again at the officer's request.

The defendant admitted he took the sign and said he had a friend who lived in a town bearing the same name as the sign, records state.

Bail has been set at $500, and a preliminary hearing will be held Oct. 11.

A Homestead, Iowa, woman was charged Friday with fourth-degree theft after trying to steal an item from a local store.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Tammy K. Prevett, 27, Homestead, Iowa, was observed by store security trying to conceal two Nintendo tapes, a book and a sweatshirt in her purse at Target, 2050 Eighth St., Coralville. The defendant left the store without paying for the merchandise, totaling $89.22, and was apprehended by store security, records state.

Prevett has been released on her own recognizance, and a preliminary hearing will be held Oct. 11.

Briefs

Farm Progress Show opens Tuesday

The Iowa Farm Progress Show opens Tuesday west of Amana. The UI will participate in the show with activities promoting health and safety in agriculture.

Six units within the UI will have informational displays to highlight projects such as testing and research on rural water supplies. The show site is west of Amana on Highway 220.

The show will run through Thursday. Admission and parking are free.

Workshop offered for public officials

The UI Institute of Public Affairs will offer a professional development workshop for elected officials and employees of local governments in Iowa on Oct. 3.

Jim Laukes will present the workshop titled "Getting Your Message Across to the Public," designed to help local government officials with a variety of communication tasks.

The workshop will run from 1-8 p.m. and will cost $45 for dinner and Continuing Education Units.

Group criticizes gulf policy, insists U.S. should back off

By Susan Stapleton
The Daily Iowan

Operation U.S. Out wants to wrangle with a different side of the Persian Gulf crisis issue that won't be heard from the Bush administration.

"They vocally oppose U.S. military intervention in the Persian Gulf, calling it 'a war over the price of oil and Western domination over an oil-rich region.'"

"(Operation U.S. Out is) a coalition of different groups and individuals to mobilize and educate people on getting the U.S. troops out of the Persian Gulf," said Paul Adams, a spokesman for the group and UI social work professor.

For the group's first public event, Ahmed Shawki, editor of the Socialist Worker, will discuss the crisis in the Persian Gulf tonight at 7:30 in Shambaugh Auditorium. He is expected to talk about some of the group's fundamental beliefs and deliver an analysis of the U.S. involvement in the Middle East.

"The coalition believes the intervention is not a matter of oil, but U.S. and British imperialism."

"Why is it important for the U.S. to send troops?" said Keith Hutchinson, a coalition member. "To make sure the regimes serve U.S.

interests and get rid of them if they don't. Two years ago Saddam Hussein was considered a good guy.

"It's convenient to label (Saddam) Hitler," Hutchinson added. "Hussein is no hero, but the U.S. has no right to be over there. Bush is petrified because Hussein is going to unify Arabs in an anti-U.S. movement."

Adams doesn't believe that the United States should act as the world's police force.

"Hussein is seen as a bad man invading Kuwait, when he's not. It has to do with the whole history of the Western domination of the Middle East for oil," Adams said.

"It's not right to use Saddam Hussein and the invasion of Kuwait as an excuse to use power," he added.

Furthermore, Operation U.S. Out believes the United States has no right to Middle Eastern oil.

"The U.S. doesn't own the oil and Hussein has not denied it to us. The U.S. blockade, which is an open act of war, has denied us the oil and pushed up prices," Adams said.

The coalition also feels that intervention in the Persian Gulf isn't an act of democracy on the part of the United States.

"There's a hypocrisy in Bush for fighting for democracy," said

Hutchinson. "They're over there to support a king." He added that many citizens of Kuwait are denied democratic rights, such as the right to vote.

Hutchinson sees a larger pattern of the goals of U.S. intervention — cheap raw materials.

"The southern hemisphere has been used as a mining operation to get cheap raw materials," he said. "The materials are manufactured here — that's where the money's made."

Operation U.S. Out, a name patterned after the U.S. military's Operation Desert Shield, plans to involve itself in educational activities, a petition drive and, if necessary, Adams said the group will respond with demonstrations in the event of an escalation in the Persian Gulf crisis.

"By showing resistance against the Persian Gulf involvement across the country, it may have an impact on stopping some sort of invasion," Hutchinson said.

The coalition includes the Central American Solidarity Committee, students against U.S. intervention from City and West high schools, the General Union of Palestinian Students, the Iowa International Socialist Organization, New Wave, and unaffiliated individuals from the campus and community.

Careers Day offers sneak preview

By Lori Lund
Special to The Daily Iowan

The UI's annual Careers Day is approaching, and many UI students are busy writing résumés, researching companies and shopping for interview attire as they prepare to encounter a ballroom full of potential employers.

Representatives and recruiters from businesses, social services and government agencies are also preparing their brochures, trade booths and corporate give-aways. They are hunting for the ideal job candidate, the well-groomed ambitious prospect in a suit or dress who will march right up, stick out his or her hand and say, "Glad to meet you!"

Something like that. Careers Day, which happens this Wednesday in the Union's Main Lounge from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., is an annual event that brings more than 130 companies on campus to meet students.

Pat Hurley, acting director of the UI Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office, an event sponsor, said Careers Day gives students a chance to meet with employers in a less formal setting than a job interview.

"Students can explore the possibilities of entry-level positions, internships, summer jobs and cooperative education programs," Hurley said. "It's a rare chance to meet so many employers in one place at one time."

While most of the students who attend are juniors and seniors hunting for permanent or summer jobs, Hurley also encourages sophomores and freshmen to come.

"The employers can give useful advice about courses of study and extra-curricular activities that enhance career prospects," she said.

Steve Wilson, a senior accounting major, has attended the past two Careers Days. He said employers respond best to students who are confident enough to approach them and introduce themselves.

"Employers... will come right up and talk to you and make an effort to answer any questions you have," he said.

Wilson added that it's important to bring a portfolio or a folder to carry your résumé and to collect promotional materials that the company representatives will hand out.

Toni Friday, a sales manager for Deluxe Check Printers in Des Moines, attended last year's event and will be back again this year. She said it offers her the chance to meet a wide range of students in a different setting than the formal interview.

Friday said she looks for students who are outgoing enough to come up, introduce themselves and ask questions. She suggested students ask what positions are available, so they spend time with the companies that may hire them. Deluxe Check Printers is looking only for sales representatives, she said, and Friday will be accompanied by sales reps who can explain the duties of their jobs to interested students.

Friday also said students should look closely at a job before applying. "The most important thing is for an employee to be happy in their job situation," she said. "If they really aren't prepared to relocate they should not accept (a job requiring relocation), or they could end up unhappy."

Monday. They sometimes disrupted traffic, but there were no arrests.

The charges are both misdemeanors. If convicted, Barrie, 43, faces a possible fine of $1,000 and six months in jail on each count. The gallery could be fined $5,000 on each count.

A panel of eight jurors and two alternates will be chosen to hear the trial in Hamilton County Municipal Court. Jury selection was expected to continue through Tuesday.

Analysis

The UI was negligent in reacting to her concerns.

The attorney general's office, which represented the state in the case, indicated a major point of contention in its review of the ruling would rest on Vietor's treatment of this last issue.

"The judge's opinion failed to recognize the difference between individual thoughts and university policy," said Deputy Attorney General Gordon Allen.

Allen said the ruling challenged the UI's academic freedom and the rights of professors to free speech — charges Vietor said had "no merit." Vietor said the right to free speech does not include the right to slander.

Indeed, there are several clues pointing to the university's negligence in the case: former Vice President Richard Remington's comment that "I never considered it part of my job description to police the bedrooms of Iowa City," for instance, or College of Medicine

Dean John Eckstein's response to Jew's complaints that "nothing could be done and that a single woman has these kind of problems in a small-town, goldfish-bowl environment." Several other administrators were aware of the situation but did nothing to correct it.

Of course, any defense the UI may have to Vietor's charges are unknown as of now. UI administrators have declined to comment until they decide whether to appeal.

Blast

the "medical emergency" at the building at 11:05 a.m. with one engine, but upon arrival, upgraded the incident and called in two more engines, one aerial truck and a battalion chief, according to Acting Lieutenant Roger Jensen.

"There were some very nasty chemicals involved," Jensen said.

Hansen said the fire department did not consider this to be a minor incident.

"We saw the seriousness of the situation and escalated the response," Hansen said. "We treat every situation of this type as a worst-case scenario."

The Iowa City Hazardous Materials team was also called in to investigate the incident and to clean up the chemicals, according to Lieutenant Mike Lang of the UI Department of Public Safety.

Lang reported there was no damage to the building, and it was reopened at 12:50 p.m.

Jew's attorney, meanwhile, said Monday she has no idea what the UI will decide, and added that an appeal wouldn't be surprising.

"They have to come to terms with what has happened," said Carolyn Chalmers, a lawyer with a Minneapolis-based firm. "That's hard to do when you've been avoiding it for so long."

According to federal law, an appeal can be successful only if it proves legal or gross factual error in a case. Possible errors in Vietor's interpretation of legal precedent, rather than mere disagreement with his ruling, are the only grounds for appeal.

In addition to the intricacies of the law, the UI is undoubtedly also studying a mixed bag of credibility factors revolving around the case: the negative credibility of having sexual harassment liability on its record if it doesn't appeal, and the equally dire prospect of perceived insensitivity to faculty discrimination if it does.

In a letter sent to Rawlings and Nathan two weeks ago, close to 100 faculty members urged the UI not to appeal. A similar plea was voiced by Edward Kottick, past UI president of the American Association of University Professors.

But where the UI stands remains a mystery.

"I don't think we'll know until Thursday," said Ann Rhodes, acting director of university relations. "This one is going down to the wire."

Ride Smart, Conserve Smart!

People who ride Iowa City Transit reduce America's foreign oil dependence

America is being black-mailed in the Middle East...

They are betting that our thirst for imported oil and the gasoline it makes will weaken our national resolve. They think we'll give in to our craving for unlimited supplies of gasoline.

So what can individuals do? Simple. Use less gasoline. Conserve. If each car owner burns one less gallon of gasoline a day, that would send a loud clear message.

If enough people eliminate one car trip a day, we lessen our dangerous dependence on foreign oil.

The new Independence Day could be the day you leave the car at home and take an Iowa City Transit bus to work, shop or class.

You'll save money, you'll save gasoline, and you and millions of other transit riders across the country will help settle the confrontation faster. That's the smart way to ride out the storm.

Iowa City Transit welcomes you aboard. People who ride Iowa City Transit are doing something smart for all of us.

Senatorial campaign provides investment opportunity at UI

By Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Buy low, sell high. The conventional wisdom on Wall Street also holds true in the Iowa Political Stock Market. The market creates an opportunity for investors to make money by accurately predicting the outcomes of the Iowa and Illinois Senate elections. The market, which first opened during the 1988 presidential election, was designed and implemented by three economists and a political scientist at the UI. Its purpose is to forecast election results and to track the dynamics of campaigns. UI professors Robert Forsythe and Jack Wright run the market. Shares of stock in Democratic incumbent Tom Harkin and his Republican challenger, Tom Tauke, are being offered in the Iowa race. Stock is also available in the Illinois contest between Democratic incumbent Paul Simon and Republican challenger Lynn Martin.

"The market facilitates greater political awareness."

Wendy Schneider
UI senior

Wright explained that it is difficult to compare the present market to that of 1988 because final election results are needed before analyzing the market's effectiveness can begin.

"We have slightly more people signed up now than we did in 1988, but we haven't had quite the volume of trading," said Wright.

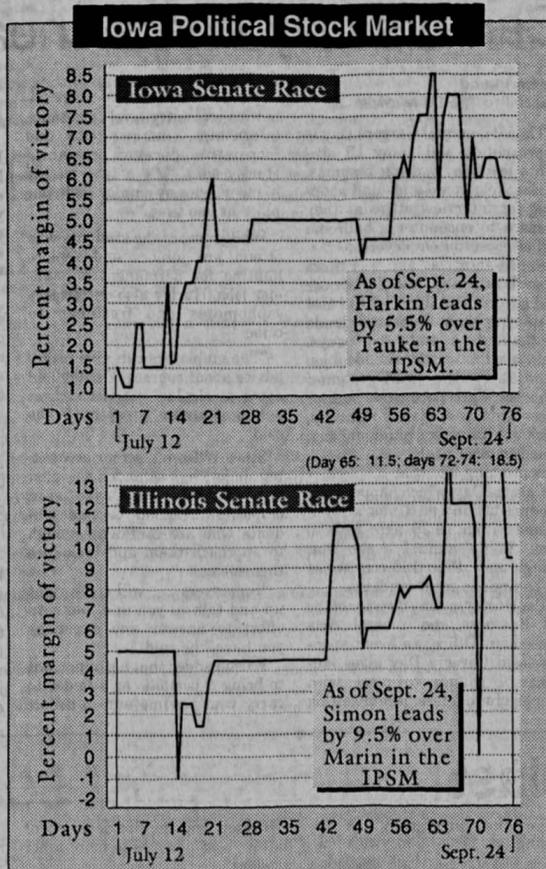

"After the election we will be able to sit down and try to determine how accurate the IPSM was and why," continued Wright. "It will take a great deal of time to complete the analysis."

Forsythe said the IPSM costs the UI very little money, and the professors themselves make no profit.

"We are utilizing our resources, which we do any time we do research," said Forsythe. "The IPSM doesn't prevent any other research from being done, and it costs a minimal amount."

A two-dollar investment buys a trader one portfolio consisting of one share of each candidate in a race.

Investors make money by trading shares to earn capital gains and by holding shares to earn dividend payments. Dividends are paid on the basis of a candidate's share of the two-party vote.

For example, if Harkin wins the Iowa race with 55 percent of the vote, the payment for a share of Harkin stock after the election will be $1.10, or 55 percent of $2. With 45 percent of the total vote, a share of Tauke stock would be worth $0.90.

Wendy Schneider, a senior economics major participating in the market, said she thought the idea was innovative and found it interesting.

"I think that the political stock market has a great deal of potential to someday play a significant national role in future elections."

"The market facilitates greater political awareness," continued Schneider. "The more students that get involved, the better."

The IPSM currently has 193 traders who have invested a total of $1,925. A total of 247 shares have been traded in the Iowa race, and 90 shares have been traded in the Illinois race. The IPSM is fully computerized and open 24 hours a day.

In 1988, the IPSM was predicting a 7.6 percentage point lead for George Bush the day before the election. Bush's actual margin of victory in 1988 was 7.8 percent.

The market operates on a College of Business computer network and can be accessed from any PC or terminal connected to virtually any UI computer network. Remote access using telephone modems is also available. Traders are given an individual computer account from which they can make transactions.

Traders are able to trade shares of the candidates continuously from July 12 through the close of the market, Nov. 7.

The computerized market provides facilities for obtaining information about the trader's account or the market, for buying or selling portfolio blocks, and for issuing offers to buy and sell individual shares.

Trading on the IPSM is restricted to UI students, staff and faculty. Registration is in 550 Phillips Hall.

Candidates prepare for home stretch

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa's U.S. Senate candidates agree their race has boiled down to a six-week sprint to the finish line and both are watching the Midwest situation to assess its political fallout.

Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin and GOP challenger Tom Tauke said they are pleased with their campaigns to date, and both said there's likely to be political fallout from the crisis in the Middle East. Neither is certain how that will play out.

"It's going to be pretty heated in the last four or five weeks," Tauke said. "We both have resources to deliver a message. I assume there will be some movement back and forth."

"I think it's played out pretty well," Harkin said. "I can't think of any real surprises that have come up. I thought, quite frankly, that it would close a lot earlier than it closed up. I thought it would have been a much closer race starting early this summer."

The two have been campaigning full-bore for the better part of two years, but both said they are treating the race as a dead heat. Their comments came during separate tapings of a special program on the Senate race to be aired Tuesday night by Des Moines television station KDSM.

Polls released in the last week have shown the race competitive, ranging from a statistical dead heat to a weak lead for first-term incumbent Harkin.

"There are a lot of people in Iowa who basically haven't paid that much attention yet and now they're going to start focusing on our positions," Harkin said. "The last six are where I can play my strong suit."

Tauke said his polling has shown him steadily increasing while Harkin steadily decreasing. He anticipates that those lines will cross before the election.

He agreed with Harkin's assessment of the race, though he predictably offered a different view of the outcome.

The election is six weeks from Tuesday.

Children of Bali thrill young and old equally

By Lindsay Alan Park
The Daily Iowan

The Children of Bali's lively performance at Hancher Auditorium on Sunday afternoon provided an inspiring example of what young people can do when adults trust them and invest them with responsibility — in this case, to introduce American audiences to the highly disciplined arts of Balinese music, dance and singing.

Through the wide range of facial animations radiated by the elaborately costumed Indonesian children, no feeling shone brighter than their confidence — not only that their country's culture is unique and worthwhile, but that they possessed the talent and skill to do it justice.

Framed by a maped, or processional, down the aisles from the lobby to the stage at the beginning and back to the lobby at the end of the show, the performance consisted of a long piece called a janger, and following an intermission, five shorter pieces, including one instrumental number.

Not surprisingly many in the crowd, which filled three quarters of Hancher, were elementary school-aged children. Though they squirmed a bit in their seats during the second half of the show, even the youngest in the audience seemed mostly attentive and in awe of the performance, which lasted more than an hour and a half.

While the musicians were dressed simply in white jackets with maroon skirts, the boy and girl dancers were adorned with an equal intensity of colors, differing mostly in the styles of headdress and skirt colors, (the girls in pink and green and the boys in indigo).

The dances were a feast of graceful movements performed mostly on bent knees. Most expressive of all, however, were the fluid movements of the dancers' hands, which seemed at moments to have extra joints.

Especially beautiful were the reverent, almost apologetic, hand gestures of 11-year-old Ida Aya Gandayukti as the Doha Princess in the janger at the moment she recognizes the true identity of her frog-prince husband.

Most intense among the musicians was the diminutive 13-year-old lead drummer, I Putu Silayasa, who accented his powerful, commanding playing (he served as conductor for the other musicians) by graceful waves of his hand above his head.

Also outstanding in the "Kebyar Duduk," dance of youth, was 13-year-old Ida Bagus Putra Kenaka Wedana, who demonstrated amazing concentration and coordination as he juggled energetic movements of his eyes, hands, fan and skirt, which he had to hurl outward in order to turn in an athletic squatting dance position.

The mostly percussion instruments of the gamelan musical accompaniment consist of the kendang, a drum played sideways on a cross-legged lap; various gongs, including the reong, a row of small gongs on a red wooden console with gilt ornamentation; the ugal, jegogan and gangs metallophones (consoles with curved metal keys struck by pick-axe-shaped wooden mallets); and flutes.

In a fitting gesture of blessing and good will, the dancers strewed the audience with flower petals from silver bowls during the parting procession.

Trying to think of parallel forms of cultural expression in which American children have demonstrated skill and imagination, I could only come up with "leisure" activities such as playground games and jumping rope, particularly in big cities — play performed peripherally to adults and only rarely recognized as having transcendent value.

In the island culture of Bali, by contrast, children learn their dances, songs and folklore as equal participants along with adults in a Hindu religious ritual that spills over into everyday life.

Album shows outsider's view

By Henry Olson
The Daily Iowan

For musician/dissociated street poet" Quentin Jones, the key to understanding the intricacies of rock music lies not in the lyrics of juvenile popsters but in the compositions of J.S. Bach.

"I don't listen to Top 40 music very much at all because I hate it. It's all money-oriented anyway. If you want to learn about rock, don't listen to pop music. Listen to the classics," says Jones, for whom it's never Hammer time.

Jones, a graduate of the UI Writers' Workshop, got his start performing in Iowa City pubs like The Sanctuary and The Mill. His recently released album, "Hit and Run," is available locally at Discount Records, Record Collector and Real Compact Discs and Records.

Rejection is a recurring theme in "Hit and Run." Whether it be a portrait of the California street scene, as in his song "Painted Thieves," or the tale of one man's failure to communicate with another human being as in "There's Gotta be Some Way," Jones remains on the outside looking in. Jones says most of his songs are autobiographical. "A lot of the songs that I write are inspired by my living for so many years."

And live Jones has; for a few years, he was a self-described transient. "I was just kind of living on the streets. I used my wits to to give up drinking — things like that."

Jones says that his music has several strengths. His past has given him a wealth of experiences that can only serve to provide him with ideas for songs.

At the same time, he is quick to point out the importance of his "Songwriting to me is like a three-minute movie. The lyric has to tell a story."

remain intact: "I'm very much a loner. . . . I'm just kind of an outsider. I don't know if it's a problem or not. Maybe I should see a doctor — maybe not. Maybe I shouldn't be cured. I probably wouldn't be able to perform anymore."

'GoodFellas' star finds post-soap success

By Hillel Italie
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — At one time Ray Liotta would have been perfectly happy to just stay home.

When he decided to study acting at the University of Miami, he wasn't doing it out of a compulsion to entertain or a need for artistic expression. He simply had nothing better to do.

"My parents wanted me to go to college and I didn't want to go," said Liotta, who stars with Robert De Niro and Joe Pesci in "GoodFellas." "And when I got there, I didn't want to do anything."

But he changed. Not right away; Liotta had no great desire to act immediately after graduating. But by 1986, when he hustled his way into a small but memorable role in "Something Wild," the actor was hungry for work.

Now, after "Dominic and Eugene" and "Field of Dreams," the offers come to him. Liotta didn't have to beg for the starring role of "GoodFellas." He wanted the part and director Martin Scorsese wanted him. Even De Niro put in a good word.

The movie runs more than two hours and covers four decades. Liotta is in virtually every scene.

"You have to have a certain amount of confidence to be an actor," Liotta said in an interview. "In this film, I had to show jealousy, rage, happiness, anger . . . everything was there. You want to take that challenge as an actor. It was pretty intense."

"GoodFellas" is based on Nicholas Pileggi's best-selling novel, "Wiseguy." Liotta plays Henry Hill, a half-Irish, half-Sicilian Brooklyn kid drawn to the fast-paced gangster life who eventually hooks up with mobsters De Niro and Pesci.

Liotta began acting in soaps shortly after graduating from college. He worked for three years on "Another World," appreciating the steady work and learning how to feel comfortable in front of a camera. But after appearing in the short-lived TV series "Casablanca" and "Our Family Honor," he struggled to find work.

Having nothing to do wasn't much fun anymore. When Liotta learned there was an opening for a violent ex-con in "Something Wild," he pushed hard, trying unsuccessfully to get an audition and finally calling on his friend, Melanie Griffith, the film's star.

"I said, 'Let me phone Melanie'; she was already cast. (Director Jonathan) Demme was down to three guys and it was the final week of casting. She said, 'Great idea, I'll do that. I wish she had thought of that before. I was just so angry about trying to get in and the part called for an angry guy. I went in angry and luckily it worked out.'

Liotta's passion for his work came during those frustrating times before "Something Wild," when he and fellow unemployed actors Kevin Costner and Andy Garcia would hang out and try to keep their spirits up, like frustrated minor leaguers just begging for the manager to hand them the ball.

"I didn't have any doubts about my ability," Liotta said. "I wasn't wondering when I was going to get a break. I'm not being cocky, it was tough, no question about it. You see these people, and think, 'I can't do that?' I can at least do it as well, and with more commitment."

BUDGET SUMMIT

Man with a plan

With the automatic budget cuts of Gramm-Rudman drawing near, politicians from both sides are beginning to sweat. Oct. 1 is the official date of sequestration, and unless a deficit-reduction plan is approved within the week, most government programs will face indiscriminate cuts in federal appropriations. No one will deny that things look pretty grim. Budget negotiators at the much-heralded "budget summit" have been unable to make any significant progress in four months of intense talks. What would make one believe things will be different in the next six days?

Bob Dole, for one. It seems the stumbling block to formal agreement has been Democratic refusals to accept further spending cuts, and Republican insistence on a capital gains tax cut but no additional increases in other taxes. Republican leaders have been seeking to revive the sagging economy with a cut in capital gains since last year when legislation of that sort was defeated in the Senate. But Democrats refuse to budge on the issue. Led by House Majority Leader Dick Gephardt and his Senate counterpart, George Mitchell, Democrats are opposing a tax break for the rich unless specific luxury taxes that primarily affect the rich are increased to offset the lost revenue. Meanwhile, the Democrats are not consenting to the spending cuts needed to meet the Gramm-Rudman deficit goal, complaining that GOP proposals are too drastic.

And so it goes — politicians play their games of public relations and the economy sinks faster and faster.

Enter Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole. Late last week as summiters again found themselves mired in budget sludge, Dole proposed Republicans drop the capital gains issue from the immediate agenda. He wants to divide the budget deal into two separate packages: one consisting of agreed-upon tax increases and spending cuts necessary to meet Gramm-Rudman, the other containing the provisions each party sees as necessary but can't agree to. Each provision would require a separate vote.

It seems with Dole's plan, the politicians can have their cake and eat it too, which is what they always want but so rarely get. The budget goal can be met on time, and capital gains and certain tax increase proposals will stay on the agenda.

It was quite a concession for the GOP leader; he has taken heat from the ranks of his own party and has suffered a sharp rebuke from budget director Richard Darman. But it illustrates what so many in Washington have known for years — the leading Republican senator is a shrewd politician who knows how to get things done. He's not afraid to cut a deal if it means more gains can be made in the long run.

If others participating in the summit will agree to some final-minute agenda shuffling, if Gephardt and his cronies will take one step toward good government and sacrifice a few key appropriations, and if White House officials will agree to put the capital gains cut on hold, then maybe the ax won't have to fall. If not, we can all look forward to some big headlines on Monday.

What is it about bridal rituals?

I come from a family that would be considered large by anyone living outside Hyannis Port. I have four siblings. The fact that one of my sibs is soon to marry has resulted in my being tossed into the midst of numerous ritual female celebrations conducted in anticipation of the wedding. Today I concern myself with the most peculiar of traditions: The bridal shower.

Recent exposure causes me to wonder what our great intellects would have said about the bridal shower had they taken up the task. How might Margaret Mead explain the significance of the Jell-O mold in preparing bridal shower food? The Jell-O mold, lest you mistake me, is in granulated sugar, as if it weren't already enough to spiral the mild diabetic into a coma. There is also, of course, a cake. And nuts.

Coffee is present in profusion. Although coffee legitimately serves to melt the mints, easing their passage down one's throat, I am convinced it is provided for highly unscrupulous reasons. It is the only explanation for the disturbing enthusiasm women become capable of at showers. Delight over a loved one's discovery of a lifetime companion is perfectly understandable, but do you think it's natural for bath towels to produce such thrills? I'm not sure it's even healthy, though I appreciate a big, thirsty towel as much as the next bather.

Waiting for the guests to arrive, a bride-to-be's mother frequently makes her formidable presence felt. This is often a function of nerves. My mother did several thoroughly astonishing things prior to the arrival of guests. First, you should know that my mother is the mortal enemy of flies everywhere. Second, bear in mind the uglier side of maternal instinct. There happened to be a fly threatening my sister's shower. Several, in fact, were admiring the cake as well as the ice ring. Unable to find a more suitable weapon, mother went after them armed only with a dish towel. Watching my mother attempt to capture flies in a thin cotton cloth was a lot, I think, like watching a Native American spear fish. I marveled at her primitive zeal, the intensity of her pursuit and the fact that she almost nabbed one.

Later, looking for something to dry dishes with, mom refused the hunting towel. "I caught a fly in it." I itched to point out that, while she might have touched a fly, she certainly had not caught one, at least not on tonight's episode of Wild Kingdom. And suppose a fly had landed on all the towels there. Would she disqualify them all? Didn't she find that a bit extreme? I looked into her eyes — not a chance. We went out and bought new towels.

Coffee waits in silver pots to jazz up the guests, whose arrival is the next event. Each guest bears a gift for the bride-to-be. These are arranged on a table, to be opened later. Guest arrival is followed by consumption of coffee and punch. The punch is dipped up through the hole in the middle of the Bundt-shaped ice ring, which is unreasonably admired by all women who have consumed enough to make it seem remarkable.

Delight over a loved one's discovery of a lifetime companion is perfectly understandable, but do you think it's natural for bath towels to produce such thrills? I'm not sure it's even healthy.

The most hated event of any bridal shower are the "games." There must have been a time when women had nothing better to do. Shower games are the proof. One involves passing a box of common kitchen utensils from guest to guest. Each tries to remember all the items and write them down. Other games involve trivia questions pertaining to kitchen and cooking. My sis opted to simply award prizes to three fortunate guests. She knows which traditions to keep, and which to dispense with. I suspect she'll have a lovely marriage.

a ring-shaped contraption into which one pours Jell-O to set. It lends the Jell-O a particular shape. A decorative shape, if you will. It is frequently called into play to form the ice that graces the punch bowl at a bridal shower.

But I get ahead of myself. The first item in shower chronology is the preparation of the chosen site, involving food preparation and seating arrangements. Several foodstuffs predominate at these celebrations, one of which is the mint. Mints are made of solid sugar, in case you've already forgotten your high-school graduation party. Medical texts state that a normal adult can eat one mint at any given event before the eyes obviously cross. Mint-makers typically alternate between wintergreen and peppermint in flavoring their creations. Upon completion, each morsel is dipped

The 'blandness enforcers' lose one

Journalists are often the last to learn what is happening, even after it has happened. The morning after John Silber won the Democratic nomination to be Massachusetts' governor, the Washington Post said, "Silber gave a voice to the more conservative and disaffected Democrats but wounded himself repeatedly through a series of intemperate remarks..."

Right. Wounded himself to victory. "Self-immolation" was a Boston press description of Silber as he rose from a late start, and dead last, to a landslide victory.

Silber, 63 and on leave as Boston University's president, has a mind full of sandpapery opinions and a barbed tongue with which he speaks his mind. His campaign produced many "Silber shockers," statements of the elderly." Silber responded that medical care is always rationed, to some extent, by limitations on resources and by price. And when children are dying of preventable childhood diseases two miles from where millions of dollars are being spent on futile measures for the terminally ill, that, too, is a form of rationing.

Silber's problem, if such it is, is that he, a former professor of philosophy, has the habits of a professor. "Typically, I put forward a statement for examination and then develop evidence and argument toward a conclusion. In the context of a political campaign, I've discovered that the first thing one says — and often it is said to attract attention — is taken as the sound bite and the definitive position of the candidate on the subject. If the candidate makes any effort to enlarge upon that sound bite, he is then accused of having changed his position."

By the way, the "intemperate" Silber got 55 percent of the elderly vote. Silber is a conservative Democrat. Both the adjective and the noun are correct.

As a Democrat he believes in strong, interventionist government. In the context of the enveloping urban crisis, he particularly favors early intervention in the lives of poor children.

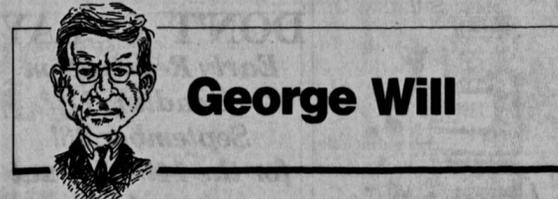

As a conservative he is offended by the policies and vanities that have made Massachusetts a byword for mismanagement. And the intervention he favors — as with public education, particularly for the poor — is a conservative's response to the breakdown of civility and order.

But the importance of his candidacy is not just that he is resuscitating an honorable persuasion that is no longer adequately represented in the Democratic Party. His candidacy is also important in vindicating the practicality of campaigning with an edge, bite and mind.

The effort to enforce blandness in general, and squishy liberal consensus in particular, achieved its greatest success with the Senate's rejection of Robert Bork, a former professor with temperamental as well as ideological similarities to Silber. The recent confirmation hearings for Judge Souter were instructive about the consequences of blandification. Souter, a complex and intellectually subtle man, strove to seem less so than he is, in order that he more closely resemble the members of the Judiciary Committee. Very prudent.

The uncomprehending media are convinced that Silber was "wounded" by the attributes that helped him win. The media probably are unaware that they are making an ideological pronouncement when they describe Silber's (and, it seems the voters') ideas as "intemperate." The public likes much of what he says and, even more, likes a candidate who says things that cause queasiness among blandness-enforcers.

George Will's syndicated column appears Tuesdays on the Viewpoints page. (c)1990, Washington Post Writers Group.

George Will

(such as Massachusetts is a "welfare magnet") that caused pursed lips in liberal circles. Those statements also caused a lot of voting levers to be pulled by people who don't know that their opinions are shocking (and "intemperate").

The most interesting "shocker" was his advocacy of genocide, his call for elderly to get on with dying so government can get on with balancing the budget. Of course he said no such thing, but a lot of people had fun pretending that he did.

During a discussion of health-care financing and terminal illness Silber said, "Shakespeare was right when he said 'Ripeness is all.' When you've had a long life and you're ripe, then it's time to go." His quotation from "King Lear" occurred in the context of facts like these:

In Massachusetts $250,000 or more may be spent on futile medical procedures for someone terminally ill, yet there is insufficient money for detoxification of pregnant women addicted to cocaine or alcohol. (The public cost per affected child: More than $200,000 before kindergarten.) Poor children are contracting polio, whooping cough and measles because there is not enough money for inoculations.

Perhaps, said Silber, society's resources are not being allocated properly, particularly because the low-income elderly might like less of society's finite resources devoted to heroic measures for the terminally ill and more to eyeglasses, hearing aids, dentures and prescription drugs. Silber's opponent said, "Silber wants to ration health care for

Practical proposal

To the Editor:
Sara Langenberg seemed to have missed the rationale behind UISA President Mark Havlicek's counterproposal of a tuition hike of 3.0 percent rather than the Board of Regents' proposed 3.8-4.0 percent ["The final straw," Sep. 19, DI]. It's easy to complain about the increase in tuition and demand for it to be stopped. No student in his or her right mind would actually desire a tuition increase, including members of the UISA and their president. What Langenberg seems to have forgotten is that for the last few years the student body presidents have approached the Board of Regents and have demanded a tuition freeze, only to have the demands flatly refused. The board has consistently proceeded in spite of the students to raise tuition anyway. We've been forced to bear large tuition increases over the last few years. The last time we've seen the Board of Regents actually follow the advice of the student body president was when Steve Grubbs, founder of Students First, was president and brought before the Board of Regents a proposal for a lower tuition increase than the one it was seeking. The board followed Grubbs' plan.

It would have been easy for Havlicek to have demanded a tuition freeze, but very unrealistic. I would like to commend Havlicek and the Iowa State student body president for bringing forward a viable and realistic alternative tuition plan that the Board of Regents would be likely to use.

Although any tuition increase can be considered a burden on the students, it is obvious from the past years that an increase will occur. But the lower the increase, the better.

It's about time for some sensible leadership in the student government, and I'm glad Mark Havlicek is making a concerted effort to help protect the students and their pocketbooks.

Typical Tauke

To the Editor:
Jon Koebnick chose to describe Sen. Harkin's challenge to Congressman Tauke to abstain from negative campaigning in their race for the U.S. Senate as "hypocritical" ["Hypocritical Harkin," Sep. 17, DI]. I think a more accurate alliteration would be "Typical Tauke." Because after all, it's no big surprise that Tauke turned down Harkin's proposal to keep the campaign on the high road.

First, the Tauke camp is getting desperate to make inroads into Harkin's popularity and will resort to personal smears to do so. Second, Tom Tauke is no newcomer to dirty politics. In fact, he rode into Congress back in 1978 by making false accusations against 2nd district incumbent Mike Blouin. Just days before the election, Tauke spread untrue charges about Blouin's campaign finance records. Blouin had too little time to set the record straight, and Tauke won the seat. Only after election day did Tauke apologize for the false accusations.

Iowa voters can expect such sleaze from challenger Tauke this fall — but they are also sophisticated enough to ignore it and re-elect Sen. Harkin.

De Klerk seeks support for a new South Africa

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Monday that South Africa's campaign to abolish white supremacist rule is irreversible and assured President F.W. de Klerk the United States won't impose new conditions for lifting economic sanctions.

"These conditions are clear-cut and are not open to reinterpretation. And I do not believe in moving goalposts," Bush said, referring to requirements South Africa must fulfill before the sanctions will be suspended. The sanctions were imposed in 1986 over then President Reagan's veto.

Bush also said all political groups in South Africa "have a special responsibility to support the process of peaceful transition."

That statement appeared aimed at African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, who refused during a meeting with Bush in June to forswear violence.

De Klerk, the first South African leader to visit the United States since 1945, assured Bush that the process of reform is irreversible, and Bush echoed that sentiment.

"We will not turn back," de Klerk said.

The leaders met at the White House for two hours, first in the Oval Office and again over lunch.

The meeting was a showcase of U.S. political support for de Klerk's efforts to guide South Africa toward a post-apartheid democratic system.

More than 100 anti-apartheid demonstrators marched outside the White House during the visit.

"Bush is an accomplice to a colossal public relations fraud which attempts to portray F.W. de Klerk as a moderate reformer," said Randall Robinson, head of TransAfrica, a private anti-apartheid group.

Robinson said de Klerk's trip "sends a false and dangerous message that South Africa is on its way to change."

Bush praised de Klerk at a farewell ceremony in front of the sun-drenched South Lawn.

"Clearly, the time has come to encourage and assist the emerging new South Africa," Bush said. Behind the leaders, a black Marine held the flag of South Africa; a white Marine held the American flag.

But Bush said that despite "the dramatic progress that we salute here today," South Africa hasn't moved far enough to meet the conditions for removing economic sanctions.

South Africa has not released all political prisoners and has not lifted the state of emergency in the Natal province.

Secretary of State James Baker, left, escorts South African President F.W. de Klerk to a meeting at the State Department in Washington Monday.

IMF lends its support to aid packages

By Martin Crutsinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The International Monetary Fund gave its support Monday to an accelerated effort to supply billions of dollars to poor countries harmed by the Persian Gulf crisis as the Bush administration worked behind the scenes to flesh out details of the assistance package.

The approval by the IMF's policy-making interim committee was announced in a communiqué that stressed the international lending agency would respond on an "expedited basis to present difficulties."

The IMF approval followed promises by World Bank President Barber Conable that his agency stood ready to increase its lending as a result of the Mideast turmoil.

The Bush administration is counting on both the IMF and the World Bank to provide significant support to bolster the trade embargo against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

In addition, President Bush earlier this month dispatched Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady and Secretary of State James Baker on global fund-raising missions seeking pledges of support from individual countries.

"We recognized the urgency of the needs of the people who are affected."

IMF official

So far, the administration has received commitments of $20 billion divided equally between support for the U.S. military buildup in the Mideast and assistance for the so-called front line states of Egypt, Turkey and Jordan.

The administration is concerned that the trade embargo against Iraq will not succeed without significant aid flowing to countries harmed economically either by the loss of export markets or a jump in oil prices.

The IMF communiqué provided no specifics on how much money would be forthcoming but did list a variety of IMF programs that could be tapped for money including a compensatory fund used in the past to aid nations hit by earthquakes and hurricanes.

Canadian Finance Minister Michael Wilson, the chairman of the IMF interim committee, denied that the lack of specifics reflected any dissension among the 22 finance ministers who spent Sunday and early Monday crafting the IMF policy.

"We recognized the urgency of the needs of the people who are affected," Wilson told reporters. "The urgency is stated, the framework is provided and now it is up to the IMF management to respond."

Echoing remarks made by Conable last week, IMF Managing Director Michel Camdessus said he believed the emergency aid could start flowing early in 1991.

The Persian Gulf crisis has become the central focus of the annual meetings of the IMF and World Bank, being attended by representatives of the 152 nations that are members of the two institutions. President Bush was scheduled to address the finance officials on Tuesday. The administration held a series of meetings behind the scenes Monday in an effort to tie up loose ends of the financing packages.

Treasury Department aides were meeting with representatives from Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Canada, Italy, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, South Korea and the 12-nation European Community in an effort to reach agreement on financing details.

These working-group meetings were to be followed on Wednesday with discussions at a higher level led by Treasury Undersecretary David Mulford.

Horst Koehler, an official in the West Germany Finance Ministry, said that the discussions were being held to settle on an exact dollar amount of required assistance. But U.S. officials said the talks were covering a broader range of issues including the mechanisms to be used to funnel the aid to needy countries.

Just three weeks ago, the administration said it wanted to raise $10.5 billion to meet the needs of Egypt, Jordan and Turkey through the end of next year.

matches in the semifinal. Thomas Muster defeated Chang and Andre Agassi beat Skoff on Friday, leaving the series tied at 1-1.

Jim Pugh and Rick Leach won the doubles Saturday to give the United States a 2-1 lead before Muster defeated Agassi in straight sets on Sunday to deadlock the series at 2-2.

Skoff volleyed well and outlasted Chang on several long baseline rallies to claim the first four games of the match Sunday and went on to win the first two sets. But Chang won the third set, forcing the match to be suspended because of darkness.

The American came out with a new serve and more aggressiveness on Monday after telephoning brother

Carl Chang, who stayed up much of the night to watch a replay of the match on U.S. television.

Neither player was sharp Monday when play started 90 minutes late because of rain. Though he was capitalizing on Skoff's weak serve, Chang was having trouble on his own — losing serve four of nine times.

After slamming a service return past Skoff for the victory, Chang hobbled to the net amid an eerie quiet.

"It was kind of tough because usually when you win a match that dramatic, the crowd roars," Chang said. "Here I won the match and everybody was quiet. It was a little strange, a little odd."

Baseball

Oakland, which was shut out on Sunday by Detroit, has an eight-game lead over the idle Chicago White Sox with nine games to play. The A's magic number is still two.

Kansas City's George Brett, the AL batting leader, was 0-for-3 and is hitting .330. Oakland's Rickey Henderson, third in the race, was 1-for-4 and stands at .320.

Royals starter Tom Gordon (12-11) scattered five hits and survived six walks in 6 1/2 innings. Mark Davis went 1 1/2 innings and Jeff Montgomery pitched the ninth. A's starter Curt Young (9-6) was charged with six runs in 4 1/2 innings.

Orioles 6, Yankees 3
 NEW YORK — Cal Ripken led off the 10th inning with his 19th home run of the season and Billy Ripken added a two-run double as the Baltimore Orioles, baseball's best extra-inning team, beat the New York Yankees 6-3 Monday night and extended their winning streak to six games.

The Orioles won in the 10th for the second straight day and are 13-4 in extra innings, the best record in the major leagues. The Houston Astros have won 13 extra-inning games but have lost 11.

Cal Ripken connected on a 2-0 pitch from rookie Alan Mills for only his second home run in 27 games. Mills (1-5) took over to start the 10th after Lee Guetterman, New York's second pitcher, shut the Orioles out for five innings on two hits.

Blue Jays 9, Brewers 5
 MILWAUKEE — The Toronto Blue Jays increased their American League East lead over idle Boston to 1 1/2 games Monday night by defeating the Milwaukee Brewers 9-5 as George Bell broke an 0-for-13 skid by going 5-for-5 — three singles and two doubles.

Rookie Mark Whiten homered and Jimmy Key pitched seven solid innings for the Blue Jays, who are 16-6 in September and have eight games remaining, all on the road. The Red Sox have nine games left, eight at home, including three games with Toronto over the weekend.

Key (12-7) won his third straight decision, yielding three runs and seven hits in seven innings, including Dale Sveum's first home run in two years. Tom Henke went 1 1/2 innings for his 31st save as the Brewers lost their seventh straight.

Wieland tabbed MCFHC Player of Week

DI wire services

Despite two weekend losses, Iowa goalkeeper Andrea Wieland has been named the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference Player of the Week, league officials announced Monday.

Wieland is the second Hawkeye to be honored in the past three weeks. Junior Kris Pillat was the season's first player of the week Sept. 10.

During the weekend, Wieland recorded 33 saves in two contests against the nation's top two teams. The Iowa goalkeeper recorded 25 saves, and stopped two penalty strokes, while

Although the play of Wieland was one of the few bright spots for the Hawkeyes over the weekend, the Atlanta, Ga., native made sure to point out that if it weren't for the efforts of some of her teammates, she may not have been honored in the first place.

"Amy Fowler, our sweeper, is playing very consistently and Jibs (Thorson) is tenacious," Wieland said. "And Kristy (Gleason) had three defensive saves against Old Dominion. Sometimes they don't get the credit that they deserve."

weekend of September 28-30 to the scenic Black River State Forest in Wisconsin.

The trip is available for UI credit through the Leisure Studies Department. Registration has already begun through the Recreational Services Office in Room E216 of the Field House.

The cost of the trip is $60, which includes transportation, camping fees, most meals and instruction. For more information, call the Recreational Services Office at 335-9293 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

holding No. 1 Old Dominion scoreless until 4:36 remained in the second overtime period. Old Dominion upended the No. 8 Hawkeyes 1-0.

"It's an honor and it's the first time I've ever been named player of the week, but I wish I could've done a lot more," the senior goalie said. "It would've been nice to come out with at least a tie against Old Dominion."

Wieland was also impressive against defending NCAA champion North Carolina. She recorded a first-half shutout against the second-ranked Tar Heels and collected eight saves while allowing two goals. North Carolina won, 2-1.

Polly named defensive player of week
 Cornerback Eddie Polly was the Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week after leading Iowa with 14 tackles in Saturday's 45-35 victory against Iowa State. The junior from Oklahoma City also recovered two fumbles and had a quarterback sack. He tackled Iowa State's punter for a 12-yard loss.

Fullback Howard Griffith, who set NCAA records for single-game points and touchdowns in Illinois' 56-21 victory over Southern Illinois, was named Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week on Monday.

Griffith, a senior from Chicago, ran for 208 yards and eight touchdowns Saturday. He leads the nation in scoring.

Hamstring injury to Taylor unnecessary in retrospect

By Tom Canavan
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Lawrence Taylor shouldn't have played the closing minutes of the one-sided game against Miami, Giants coach Bill Parcells said Monday in accepting blame for the hamstring injury that may sideline the All-Pro linebacker.

"The early indications are it's not quite as bad as it looked," Parcells said during his daily news conference, which was dominated by questions about Taylor's status. "He has some strength in the leg and can't. That's good. You can't count him out."

Parcells said it was too early to say whether Taylor would be able to play Sunday against Dallas, a team New York beat 28-7 on Sept. 16.

Taylor wasn't in the locker room Monday during the 30-minute period when the media is allowed access to the players. But as reporters left the room, Taylor was driven on a golf cart to a back door of the locker room and he gingerly stepped off the cart and walked through the door without stopping to answer questions.

The big question was why Taylor was in the game with the Giants ahead 20-3 and less than two minutes to play. By that point, Miami had even removed quarterback Dan Marino.

"With a minute to go you want to get everyone to work," Parcells said. "We got some people in but not everyone we wanted to. I don't know how useful the work is, but because it's him (Taylor) and what happened, in retrospect, I wish it didn't happen."

Parcells said Taylor has no responsibility for taking himself out of games. However, he admitted that Taylor has sometimes taken it upon himself to go back into games that he felt were getting a little too close. That was not the case Sunday, Parcells said.

"I have to take responsibility for that," Parcells said. "My job as coach is to manage the game. It's unfortunate it happened. It could have happened on any play."

The tone of Parcells' comments Monday differed greatly from Sunday when he bristled at questions concerning Taylor's presence in the game and included an expletive when someone asked if he was angry with defensive coordinator Bill Belichick.

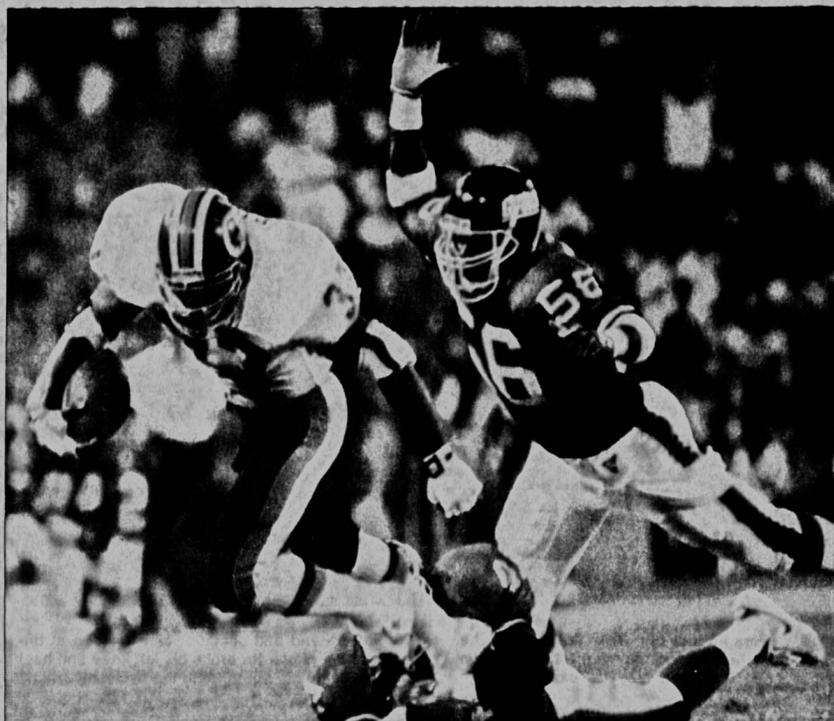

Belichick issued "no comments" Monday to five questions about the injury, which happened on the final play of the game as Taylor, who missed all of training camp because of a contract dispute, rushed on a pass play. About five steps into the rush, he suddenly slowed and began hobbling, obviously favoring his left leg. He was helped off the field by backup center Brian Williams.

"He didn't say anything," Williams said Monday. "I was just helping him off. He was walking under his own power. I didn't have to be there."

None of the Giants players wanted to go on record about the injury, but with a 3-0 record, they were having a good time at Parcells' expense.

"I can't think for everyone," cornerback Mark Collins yelled several times in mimicking one Parcells post-game response shown over and over again on the television broadcasts.

The injury to Taylor may not have come at a better time. New York had little trouble in its first meeting with Dallas and Parcells might consider resting Taylor.

New York Giants' Lawrence Taylor, shown here reaching for Washington Redskins' Gerald Riggs during the Giants-Redskins game last week, suffered an injured hamstring in the last minutes of New York's game against Miami Sunday and may be sidelined.

Lopez savors victory at MBS Classic

The Associated Press

BUENA PARK, Calif. — Nancy Lopez had won 42 events during her career and, at 33, already is in the LPGA's Hall of Fame. But No. 43 was special.

"It's been so long since I won, I forgot what it feels like," Lopez said Sunday after she won her first LPGA tournament in a year by capturing the MBS Classic.

Her last previous victory came in the same tournament, on the same Los Coyotes Country Club course, one year ago.

Lopez, 33, has devoted more time and energy in recent years to her family — husband Ray Knight, a former major leaguer, and two young daughters.

Her golf game has suffered, but she looked like the Nancy Lopez of old on Sunday, as she charged from eight shots off the pace before winning on the first playoff hole.

"I feel like I'm dreaming," Lopez said. "This feeling is so great. It's been a long wait."

Lopez didn't appear to have much of a chance to break her 0-for-1990 streak.

After two holes on Sunday, she was a distant eight shots behind leader Caroline Keegi. But Lopez mounted a charge. Keegi stumbled, then Lopez beat Cathy Gerring in the playoff, sinking a 5-foot birdie putt for the victory.

"When I made that little 3-foot birdie at the 15th hole, I knew I had a chance to win," Lopez said. "Then I saved par at 16 with a 10-footer. Ray whispered to me as I left the 16th that one more birdie would win it."

She was right, although the winning birdie didn't come until the playoff.

Lopez had five birdies and one bogey in her final-round 68 and finished the regulation 72 holes at 7-under 281.

Gerring, who had a final-round 72, missed a 30-foot birdie putt on the playoff hole.

Keegi struggled to a final-round 75 that left her at 282. Nancy Brown and Kim Shipman finished in a tie for fourth at 284 after a 72 and 69, respectively.

"I would liked to have won," said Gerring, a two-time winner already this year. "But it was difficult to play today. My mother was diagnosed last night as a diabetic. Every time I got over a putt today I said 'This is for Mom.'"

Keegi's biggest lead over Gerring was four shots after 11 holes, but Keegi had four bogeys in the final seven holes, missing a 3-foot par putt on the final hole that would have put her into the playoff.

"I'm frustrated, no doubt about it," Keegi said. "But I learned something today. I'll be back. I'm sure of that."

Lopez started her charge with birdies at the third and fourth holes and then again at Nos. 7 and 10. She went to 7-under at the 17th.

Keegi fell back into a three-way tie with a bogey at the same hole and then ended with another bogey.

Team elects to play after player's death

The Associated Press

KIRKSVILLE, Mo. — The Northeast Missouri State football team voted Monday to play their game Saturday against Missouri Southern, one week after linebacker Derringer Cade died after collapsing on the sidelines during a game.

"The players talked at length and they decided this is what Derringer would have wanted them to do," said Bill Cable, sports information director. "They still have a lot of lingering emotion over what happened and they felt they needed a release. But what really sealed their decision was their belief that this is what Derringer would have wanted."

Cade, 20, died in a Bolivar, Mo., hospital about an hour after collapsing on the sidelines in the final minutes of Northeast's game against Southwest Baptist. The cause of death will not be known until autopsy results are available today, Cable said.

Services were scheduled 2 p.m. Wednesday at Soldier's Memorial Chapel at Fort Leonard Wood. Burial will be at Ozark Memorial VFW Cemetery in St. Robert. Smith Cade, the player's father, is a command Sgt. Major at Fort Leonard Wood, the highest NCO rank on the base.

Ironically, Northeast's opponent for its 1:30 p.m. game Saturday went through a similar tragedy last year. One Missouri Southern player was killed and another seriously injured in a traffic accident while returning from watching Oklahoma play Colorado. Killed was a freshman defensive end, Blake Riley. The starting quarterback, Allen Brown, was in a coma for several weeks and is still undergoing rehabilitation.

Clemens given OK ... again

The Associated Press

BOSTON — Boston's Roger Clemens, sidelined with a sore right shoulder since Sept. 4, was given medical clearance to pitch on Friday against the Toronto Blue Jays.

"He plans to throw on Tuesday and he's looking forward to pitching on Friday," Dr. Arthur Pappas, the Red Sox doctor, said Monday at a news conference at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester.

"Roger feels he has pitched through more than this in the past," Pappas said after examining the two-time Cy Young Award winner. "Roger wants to pitch and he feels he can pitch Friday night." Pappas, an orthopedic specialist, emphasized that there is nothing seriously wrong with Clemens' right shoulder.

"There is no problem with his rotator cuff," Pappas said. "There is no structural damage within his shoulder."

Clemens, 20-6 with a 1.98 earned run average, was stricken with severe tendinitis on Sept. 4 when he lasted just 5½ innings and had an eight-game winning streak snapped by Oakland.

After daily medication to reduce inflammation and fluid buildup in the front of the shoulder, he aired out his arm last Tuesday, throwing 80 pitches in the bullpen in Baltimore.

He pronounced himself ready and was given the OK by Pappas on Thursday to return to action against the Yankees on Sunday. However, sensitivity in the back of the shoulder was noted during a rubdown on Friday and his return was put on hold.

Clemens also began warming up during Sunday's game, but quit abruptly.

"He has knots in the back of his shoulder," Pappas said. "There's a twinge and he jumps if somebody touches it, but it's nothing that he hasn't had since July."

Pappas said that there is sensitivity on the back and top of the shoulder. Clemens had a muscle strain in the back of his shoulder after the All-Star Game.

"He has had the problem in the back of the shoulder for six weeks or longer," Pappas said.

Foyt expected to drive again

By Doug Richardson
 The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — A.J. Foyt, the winningest driver in Indy-car history and a four-time winner of the Indianapolis 500, could be back behind the wheel in four to six months, one of his doctors said Monday.

Foyt, who sustained serious leg injuries in Sunday's Texaco-Havoline 200 at Elkhart Lake, Wis., was flown Monday to Methodist Hospital, where he was expected to remain for 10 days to two weeks.

Foyt, who underwent surgery Sunday night in Milwaukee, was scheduled to undergo CAT scans and additional minor surgery Monday night to make sure his wounds were clean, his doctors said.

Dr. Terry Trammell, director of medical services for the Championship Auto Racing Teams, predicted Foyt could be walking within eight weeks and then would have to go through rehabilitation to prepare for next year's racing season.

Trammell said the decision on whether to return to racing will be Foyt's, but he said the 55-year-old driver should be physically able to return.

"I think he'll be able to. He's had other serious injuries in the past to extremities and they never slowed him down much," said Trammell. "He's remarkable in his desire to do what he wants to do, and if he wants to get back in the car, I'm sure he will."

In May, Foyt became the oldest known driver ever to compete in the Indianapolis 500 when he made his 33rd consecutive start and finished sixth.

"We're going to treat him like he's going to drive," Trammell said. "The anticipation is that he'll want to get back in the car and so everything we're going to do is going to be directed at making that possible if that's what he wants to do."

Dr. James Stiehl, an orthopedic surgeon who supervised Foyt's initial 4½-hour operation in Milwaukee, said, "These are not the kind of injuries we feel will end his career. Ultimately, we feel he'll gain a full recovery."

Doctors repaired his left foot and dislocated left knee with a plate and screws, Stiehl said. The broken bone in Foyt's right foot was fixed with a surgical pin, the doctor said.

Foyt's car slid off the main straightaway at the Road America circuit and plowed through an earthen embankment after the car's brakes failed. Trammell, a member of the safety team that helped remove Foyt from the car, said the nose of the car was ripped off and the driver's lower legs were covered by six to eight inches of dirt.

CART safety workers struggled for more than 15 minutes to extricate Foyt before transporting him to Milwaukee by helicopter.

The rescue interrupted the race for about 90 minutes. Michael Andretti eventually won.

Foyt then underwent surgery at the Milwaukee County Medical Complex before being flown to Indianapolis.

Past injuries to Foyt include a broken right arm received during a crash in the 1981 Michigan 500 and a serious concussion from a stock car crash last year at Charlotte, N.C.

But the crash Sunday caused the worst injuries of his career.

Foreman hits London on comeback tour

By Robert Millward
 The Associated Press

LONDON — George Foreman puts on his demolition attire again Tuesday, looking for a quick-fire victory over Terry Anderson that will edge him closer to regaining the world heavyweight boxing title.

While negotiating with Evander Holyfield and James "Buster" Douglas for a world title fight in 1991, the 42-year-old ex-champ has decided to stay in shape by travelling to Europe to take on another American.

British promoter Frank Warren has drawn Foreman and Anderson — a replacement opponent for Argentina's Walter Masseroni — to the London Arena and hopes for a crowd of 11,000.

Foreman, who won the title in 1973 only to lose it to Muhammad Ali 20 months later, is aiming for his 24th comeback victory since he returned to the ring in 1987 after a 10-year retirement. His record is 68-2-0.

Anderson, who said he only heard of the fight two weeks ago when it was announced on TV, says that at least it will give him recognition.

The two fighters met for the first time Monday and, instead of grimacing and growling, they shook hands and smiled. Anderson, 30, said he respected the former champ and Foreman said how nice it was to be in London.

"I feel at home here," Foreman said. "If you're hungry, this is the place to be. Last night I ate roast beef, prime rib, lamb and fish. I've got all those animals rolling around in me."

The former champion was heavy on the public relations aspect of his visit to London.

"Nobody in their right mind, who classes himself a great fighter, can really have a good portfolio without having fought in the city of London," he boomed. "I have finished the whole course. I can truly rise and say I have fought all over the world. London, England — I feel like a real champion now."

With three losses from 22 fights, Anderson's record should not frighten Foreman. Even at 6-foot-2, he is two inches shorter than Foreman and expects to be some 25 pounds lighter than the ex-champ's 265 pounds.

"I respect this man," he said of Foreman. "He has proved himself over time and time again. It is a dream come true for me just to compete with this type of man."

Johnson subdued as suspension ends

The Associated Press

TORONTO — Ben Johnson had a chance to celebrate the end of his two-year suspension Monday. Instead, the undemonstrative Johnson chose to go through his usual workout, just as he has done for the past several months.

"It was just like another day at the office," Ed Futerman, his lawyer, said.

"He's excited about the end of two long years. He's a happy young man. But today is just another day for him."

Johnson may have been excited inside, but showed no emotion during a workout at York University.

"It was training as usual," said a source close to Johnson, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "He's real excited about starting his new career."

Johnson's "old" career ended abruptly Sept. 26, 1988, when he tested positive for the anabolic steroid stanozolol, two days after winning the Olympic 100-meter dash in a world-record 9.79 seconds.

Johnson was stripped of his medal and world record, and suspended for two years by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for track and field.

Johnson at first denied using drugs, but testified last year at a Canadian federal inquiry that he had been on a steroid program since 1981.

That forced the IAAF to strip Johnson of the world record 9.83 he ran in the 1987 World Track and Field Championships at Rome. Johnson passed a drug test after that meet.

On Tuesday, Johnson plans to leave for Tempe, Ariz., where he will train for eight weeks in preparation for his return to competition Jan. 11 in an indoor meet at Hamilton, Ontario.

"There are no problems with his Achilles' tendon, his coach, Loren Seagrave, said. "Reportedly, he had ravaged them in training. But that's not the case."

There also were reports that Johnson had lost a lot of weight since the Seoul Games. But that's not true, either, another source said. This source said Johnson weighs 172 pounds, one pound less than during the Olympics.

"The time has come for the new Ben Johnson," the shy 28-year-old sprinter said Sunday during a four-kilometer charity walk for the United Way.

This month, the federal government accepted a recommendation from Ontario Chief Justice Charles Dubin — who headed an inquiry into the steroid scandal — that Johnson's eligibility to race be determined by sports officials, not politicians.

The Canadian Olympic Association will decide Friday night whether Johnson will be eligible to compete in the Olympics or Pan American Games again.

He already has been declared eligible for the World Championships, the World Cup and the Commonwealth Games.

Futerman has shielded Johnson from lengthy media interviews so as not to disrupt his concentration.

"We want him to focus on his running," Futerman said. "This is a fresh start, and we don't want him looking back."

"He's had the courage and determination to do it all over again and I think that's what people should look at now — the courage."

"He's just started training a bit harder and with more enthusiasm."

"He wants to make it meaningful. His peace of mind will come when he runs well. The most important hurdle will come when he gets back on the track and does well."

Johnson found nothing significant in the end of the suspension.

"The day of celebration was when the announcement was made in late June" that he was cleared to run again as soon as the suspension expired, one source said.

Favored horses given drugs in England

The Associated Press

DONCASTER, England — A doping scandal hit British thoroughbred racing Monday with the disclosure that two favored horses that ran badly this month were given tranquilizers before their races.

The Jockey Club, horse racing's governing body, said that Bravefoot, which finished last in a five-horse field, and Norwich, which finished fourth in a field of ten, were given an identical, fast-acting drug.

The doping was revealed in tests carried out at the Horseracing Forensic Laboratory at Newmarket and is the first officially confirmed case in Britain in 25 years.

The scandal surrounds the three-day Doncaster meet that includes the prestigious $280,000 St. Leger race Sept. 15.

Norwich was 11-4 joint favorite for the Kiverton Park Stakes Sept. 13. After the poor finish, his trainer, Barry Hills, asked for a blood test on the horse.

"I just had a feeling the horse was not right and I was suspicious at the time," Hills said Sunday.

Bravefoot, son of American-bred Dancing Brave, was 11-8 favorite to win the Laurent-Perrier Champagne Stakes Sept. 14.

Observers said he ran listlessly with his tongue hanging out of his mouth. Jockey Walter Swinburn said afterwards he ran a "lifeless" race.

A Jockey Club statement following the tests said preliminary findings indicated both samples contained traces of tranquilizer.

Boggs slumping

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — When you think of Wade Boggs, you think of hits. Lots of them. Streams of slicing singles and decisive doubles. Even a few 'tween-the-outfielders triples.

But the torrent has slowed to a trickle lately. Not bone dry, mind you, but enough to make a difference. Perhaps enough to wither Boston's pennant hopes, and maybe his own drive to match Wee Willie Keeler's record of eight straight seasons with 200 hits.

To catch Keeler, Boggs needs 19 hits in nine games — or 10 games, if Boston and Toronto are forced into a playoff for the American League East title.

"I'm not thinking about that at all," Boggs said Sunday after Boston lost to the New York Yankees 5-4 to fall a game behind the first-place Blue Jays. "When you're in a pennant race, you don't think about personal goals. I'm disappointed I didn't get a hit today in situations I could have helped the team."

Not only did Boggs fail to get a hit in five at-bats, but each of his outs ended innings. His average is down to .305, 20 points beneath his previous season low and 47 under his career average.

And, perhaps more to the point, statistics indicate he's swinging more often. Before the All-Star break, Boggs walked 55 times, or once every 6.6 plate appearances. Since then, his pace has slowed to one walk per 11.1 times up. He has 84 walks this season and probably will finish with his lowest total since he walked 89 times in 1984. Incidentally, it was in 1984 that he batted a career-low .325.

Boston manager Joe Morgan sees no changes in his best hitter. To him, Boggs is still the same.

"I would say now it's going to be very difficult," Morgan said of Boggs' quest for 200. "He's capable of getting hot, but there's not much time left. He's getting a lot of walks lately, which doesn't help."

Keeler, who made the Hall of Fame as the fellow who "hit 'em where they ain't," finished with a .343 career average. He got 200 hits a season for Baltimore and Brooklyn of the National League from 1894 through 1901, but he had a bigger strike zone than Boggs, averaging just 33.5 walks per year.

"The records are something you can look back on and be proud about," Boggs said, "but we play 162 games to finish first as a team."

Boston opens a season-ending homestand on Tuesday and has three games against the Blue Jays this weekend. Roger Clemens is scheduled to start the series opener on Friday in what would be his first appearance since Sept. 4.

"We miss Roger in the rotation because you can count on a 'W' when he's out there," Boggs said. "But he helped put us in a position to win the division and everybody has to do their job. I'm confident in our staff."

—Your determined buddy

P.S. We did it on a dare!

Where BATMAN left off, BATBUFFY and BATCHIP take over! Ever on the look out to fight crime and have a good time, we seek immediate satisfaction (which usually takes much too long for Chip). With days growing longer and colder our thoughts turn to spending Christmas in Sacramento and St. Croix. Until then we anxiously await October 19 for the BIG RELEASE.

BRAT PACK With our lives so hectic, we missed our rendezvous last week. How could we have let that happen? School should never get in the way of good beer. Let's make up for lost time—Let's go back to Fitz's and try out their new brew. 5pm Thursday.

TRANSIT METRO bus ridership increased last year without the Gulf crisis. Ride and find out why.

RISE day AND night for less than 25 cents with your bus pass.

50 YEARS of experience and 100,000 weekly customers is definitely an act to follow. Nobody can ride just once. Try!

Simpsons blues album in the planning stage

By Deborah Hastings
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Enough about Michael Jackson. Pay no attention to those premature reports.

Yes, the Gloved One has been approached about singing with the Animated One. But no, it is not a done deal. Which is why the recent stories about Jackson doing a duet with Bart Simpson have infuriated the folks over at Fox Broadcasting Co.'s hit cartoon show.

Especially perturbed is "Simpsons" creator Matt Groening, who plops down at a West Hollywood recording studio and grants a speedy interview about the latest project to come from America's favorite dysfunctional family.

"Oh, it's so frustrating," says the cartoonist. "I said to a reporter a while ago that I would like to have this happen and it was printed as if it was true."

What Groening wished for was Jackson's participation in "The Simpsons Sing the Blues," an incongruous title for the debut album of an overnight success story. What Groening is afraid of is that all the publicity will send the obsessively media-shy Jackson scurrying from negotiations.

"This may kill it," Groening says. "We have a whole wish list of people we'd like to use on the album. Stevie Ray Vaughan was lined up, then he was killed."

Milling around the recording studio on this day are the actors who provide the voices for "The Simpsons."

There is Julie Kavner, whose scratchy vocals come out of Marge's animated mouth and Dan Castellaneta, who talks for the long-suffering dad, Homer. Sitting nearby is Yeardley Smith, the voice of the high-minded daughter, Lisa. Nancy Cartwright, nursing a cold and chugging Evian water, drops in and out of Bart's unmistakable whining monotone.

The four performers have been working on "The Simpsons Sing the Blues" for about a month. So far, they have completed only two rough cuts in between taping shows for "The Simpsons" fall season, which begins Oct. 13.

Due out in November, the disc contains an eclectic mix of old blues tunes such as Billie Holiday's "God Bless the Child" and original songs such as "Deep, Deep Trouble," produced by rapper D.J. Jazzy Jeff and written by Groening.

Fox has been trying to keep the record under wraps until negotiations with performers like Jackson are nailed down. But word has leaked out, to the great consternation of those involved.

"We all spent a lot of time deciding what the blues was."

Matt Groening
"Simpsons" creator

Jackson's duet was to come on "Do the Bartman," and published reports have said it was penned by Jackson. It wasn't, which prompted producer and filmmaker James Brooks to issue a press release late last week apologizing for any misunderstanding about who actually wrote the tune. The composer is Jackson pal Bryan Loren.

In a marketing blitz highlighted by Simpson T-shirts, Thermoses, watches, and — coming soon to a video arcade near you — a Simpsons pinball machine, why are "The Simpsons" singing?

"James L. Brooks walked into the office one day and said 'The Simpsons Sing the Blues,'" explains Groening. "Then we all spent a lot of time deciding what the blues was."

The final decisions for the album include Chuck Berry's "School Days," sung by Bart; Booker T. Jones' "Born Under a Bad Sign,"

THE SIMPSONS BY MATT GROENING

The Bluesbreakers of the future?

sung by Homer, and the "Moanin' Lisa Blues," sung by — well, you know.

Back at the studio, Fox has organized a media event, pulling in nearly a half-dozen camera crews to interview and tape the would-be recording stars in action.

Problem is, there is no action. The four actors are not laying down tracks for the album. Instead, much time is spent standing around while they pretend they're singing for the benefit of the cameras.

The phenomenal success of "The Simpsons" begets such hype. The animated family with all-too-common frailties has gone beyond being a hit television show. It has become part of pop culture.

This point is not lost on the young Fox network, which made a brash decision this season to put "The Simpsons" up against NBC's top-rated but aging "The Cosby Show."

Some of "The Simpsons" cast think Fox's decision was foolish. Since moving to Thursdays at 8 p.m., the cartoon show that once peaked at No. 4 in the Nielsen ratings has plummeted to 45th place.

"I think it is a mistake," says Kavner. "It's a sweet little show. It belongs on Sunday nights."

Castellaneta is more upbeat. "Nobody's happy about it," says the voice of Homer, "but I don't think it's going to hurt us."

Cartwright, sounding nothing like Bart, added, "It's really like, if it ain't broke don't fix it. We did fine on Sunday nights."

Japan's youth take rock to heart

By Mari Yamaguchi
The Associated Press

TOKYO — Every Saturday night at 12:30 a.m. millions of young Japanese tune their televisions to a rock band contest that has changed the face of pop music in Japan.

In only a year and a half, the show "Ika-su Band Tengoku," or Groovy Band Heaven, has become the hottest late TV program. It has introduced more than 650 amateur bands, from middle-aged office workers to freaks with their hair dyed blond.

Several of the bands — Kabuki Rocks, Norma Jean, Jitterin' Jinn — have moved from the show to the top of the pop hit charts, displacing the naive and cute teen-agers who emerge through the established system of so-called "idol singers."

The program's name is usually abbreviated to "Ika-Ten," which also means fried squid. Last year, the editors of a dictionary of modern Japanese chose Ika-Ten as the most popular new word in the country.

The program has boosted sales of musical instruments and seems to have turned music from something most young people listen to into something they do — or want to do.

There are at least 20,000 amateur rock bands in Tokyo alone and many more nationwide, estimates Akira Nishikawa, former producer of the show and vice president of Tokyo Broadcasting System, the commercial network that started the show in February 1989.

Judges on each show pick a winner from 10 contestants. If the winner repeats for several weeks, the winner gets a chance to make a record for professional release.

But whatever these rockers are saying, it's not the time-honored idea of rebellion and protest.

"We are not playing rock to protest against society or the government. It's been done before, and that's old," said Shinji Wajima, guitarist and vocalist with Ningen-Iso, or Human Seat. "We want to sing about the weakness of an individual, and something about how we can be more human."

"People used to sing folk and rock music for freedom, and that's what music is all about. We are not great, but we are happy to know even we can do it."

His three-man, hard-rock band launched a professional career in July. Until it appeared on the show last year, Ningen-Iso was unknown.

Commentators say few of the amateur bands believe they can turn pro, but they are striving for a taste of stardom while having fun with friends.

The amateur band phenomenon owes something to karaoke, or singing along with a tape or video (popular in Japanese drinking places). It also was influenced by the street in central Tokyo that is given over to rock bands every Sunday afternoon. Dozens of groups perform weekly, demonstrating that some Japanese youth exuberantly break out of the straitjacket and stereotype of study and career.

In those street concerts, "performers and audiences are equal, which reassures them that they are not alone," said Tatsuya Iba, a writer for the magazine Let's Start a Band.

The magazine has seen its circulation grow to 300,000, and every month it runs 30 pages of ads from people looking for band members.

Osamu Nakano, communications professor at Hosei University in Tokyo, says Japanese youth do not know what to protest against or what to demand, and the point of the bands is to have fun with friends.

"Playing brand-name guitars in the spotlight, they are trying to experience superstardom," Nakano says. "But they know that it is not for real."
