In cynicism war public hearing

By Cynthia Taylor

A mechanical failure during a performance last night at the University of Connecticut resulted in a fire that damaged several choral and dance groups. The event, which was scheduled to begin at 8 p.m., was postponed until 8:30 p.m. due to technical difficulties.

The audience was seated in the university's Center for the Arts, which has a capacity of 1,200 people. The fire started in the center's stage area and quickly spread to the aisles, causing panic among the audience members. Rescue workers were able to evacuate the building safely, and no injuries were reported.

Firefighters from the New Haven Fire Department arrived on the scene within minutes and worked to extinguish the fire. The fire was brought under control at approximately 9:30 p.m., and the center was left in ruins.

The cause of the fire is under investigation, and the center will be closed for repairs for an indefinite period. The university has arranged for alternative venues for the groups affected by the fire, and the center is expected to reopen in the fall.

Hospital translating staff aids non-English speakers

Spanish, Asian languages in demand

What happens if you know 50 or less languages and you don’t speak English? How would you communicate your problem with a hospital staff member in Iowa City?

The UI Hospitals and Clinics have overcome the problem of non-English speaking patients by offering a battery of 100 translators and interpreters who cover a range of 30 different languages.

Maria-Cristi Muntenescu headed the hospital’s interpreter program in 1975, then left in 1979, then returned to Iowa and the job.

“I’ve been here,” said Muntenescu.

“Many of the migrant workers didn’t speak English,” said Muntenescu.

The hospital also offers two training programs in language services.

Those programs include the hospital’s bilingual interpreters program and the hospital’s bilingual and cross-cultural health care.

Greg Jensen, associate director of the hospital’s Department of Social Services, said there was no training program in language services between 1969 and 1969. He said the majority of patients, or about 500, were Spanish-speaking.

“The American Sign Language and Southeast Asian languages are also frequently requested,” Jensen said.

“Seventy-six percent of the time, these language needs are met,” Jensen said.

A state auditor who investigated shows more than $155,000 missing from a state office for the financially strapped school district.

Officials should have contacted state investigators before agreeing to a settlement with the employee.

Many of the migrant workers didn’t speak English, so the hospital started its own interpreter program in 1975. At the time, there were few bilingual interpreters in hospitals.

“By 1989, we heard that our language needs are met,” Jensen said.

“Many of the migrant workers didn’t speak English,” said Muntenescu.

Interpreters/bilingual positions, which are currently held by locally, state, and community members, are open to anyone who is fully bilingual and proficient in health care.

UI named foundation grant recipient to improve race relations, diversity

By Nancy Williamson

The Daily Iowan

The University of Iowa has named a recipient of a $40,000 grant from thedrawer to improve race relations and ethnic diversity on campus.

The grant will be used to help promote awareness and discussion of issues involving racial and ethnic diversity among undergraduate students as well as faculty, staff and teaching assistants.

"We're really excited about this grant," said Peter Snyder, assistant to the vice president for academic affairs. "It is going to allow us to increase the range of diversity on campus." Snyder said the money will strengthen the university's ability to teach undergraduates about diversity issues.

The grant will be used to promote awareness and discussion of diversity issues. Several local bars may provide free non-alcoholic cups for each bar after it receives a grant. The grant will be used to help students to think about diversity issues.

Police, fire departments to hold open house

By Marc Wallace

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Police and Fire departments will hold an open house for the public this weekend, touting their latest innovations in facilities and community policing.

Police Chief R.J. Whalen said improvements in facilities were a first step in accreditation for the department.

"We have a rather highly educated force," said Whalen, and he explained the next steps in the accreditation process. "We have a rather high position in the department."

Banks also may have recorded losses instead of earnings. "The FDIC (Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation) has calculated that the other alternative would be to lower the interest they pay on savings accounts, certificates of deposit and other investments. Under the increased losses, banks would pay the FDIC 19.5 cents in insurance for each $100 in deposits starting next year. Currently, they pay 13 cents for each $100 in deposits.

'If banks passed the 7.5-cent rise on to customers,' said Moody's Investor Service, "the FDIC would be hurting small banks, where revenues at banks are not growing robustly, weaker institutions will benefit disproportionately from the rise in deposits. Analysts believe many banks would be damaged by Monday's automatic cuts. 'The FDIC (Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation) would be damaged by Monday's automatic cuts. Iran, Britain announce restored diplomatic ties

By Peter James Stone
The Associated Press

UNITED NATION - Iran and Britain announced Thursday that they have reached a resolution, the latest of several diplomatic moves in recent years between the two countries. The announcement was made in a joint statement by Tehran and London, which have been engaged in negotiations since last month.

The move comes after months of tension between the two nations, with the United States and the European Union imposing sanctions on Iran's nuclear program. Britain has been a key supporter of the sanctions, and has also been involved in negotiations on a possible nuclear deal with Iran.

The statement said that Iran and Britain agreed to establish a "mechanism for dialogue and cooperation" on a range of issues, including trade, security, and education. It also said that the two countries would work together to address the plight of Iran's Baha'is, who have been targeted by the Islamic Republic.

Britain has been a vocal critic of Iran's human rights record, and has called for the release of political prisoners. Iran has accused the West of interfering in its internal affairs.

The joint statement came after a meeting between British Foreign Secretary William Hague and Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif in New York. It was the latest in a series of meetings between the two countries, which have been attempting to restore diplomatic relations since the breakdown of ties in 2011.

The announcement was welcomed by some analysts, who said it could open the way for a more productive relationship between Iran and the West. Others, however, were more cautious, warning that tensions remain high and that there is still a long way to go before full diplomacy is restored.

British Foreign Secretary William Hague said the joint statement was a "positive step", but that there was "still a lot of work to do". He added that the two countries would continue to work together on a range of issues, including Iran's nuclear program.

Iranian Foreign Minister Mohammad Javad Zarif said the joint statement was a "significant" development, but that there was still a "long road ahead". He added that the two countries would continue to work together on a range of issues, including trade and security.

The announcement was made just days after the United Nations Security Council imposed new sanctions on Iran, following its failure to make progress on its nuclear program. The sanctions are expected to further isolate Iran and make it more difficult for Tehran to engage in diplomatic negotiations.

The joint statement is the latest in a series of diplomatic moves between Iran and the West in recent years. In 2013, Britain and Iran agreed to a deal on Iran's nuclear program, which was later rejected by the United States and other Western countries.

The joint statement is also a sign of growing cooperation between Iran and the West on a range of issues, including trade and security. It comes as Iran is facing increased international pressure to make progress on its nuclear program, and as the United States and other Western countries are trying to find ways to resolve tensions with the Islamic Republic.

The recent controversy surrounding Disease Control's approach to blood-borne infections. Not only does it cause some to overlook the need for primary prevention, but it provides a subtle lesson in humanity as well.

For years the CDC maintained a 24-hour hotline for anyone requiring information on an emergency room nurse when she pressed her charged hands against blood-borne infections. Though such methods are rare, it represents a shifting reality in health care.

Some of the public debate has focused on the deviations of HIV exposure as a result of IV drug use. This argument is not new, and it is often debated. However, it continues to be a hot topic in the current climate. The recent controversy surrounding Disease Control's approach to blood-borne infections. To the Editor: We applaud the efforts of Sonja West and the Daily Iowan for their recent stories about the events surrounding the student protest at the University of Iowa. It is our understanding that these stories include some information that is not entirely accurate.

As the student protest leader, I can state with certainty that the students involved were not only passionate and determined, but also well-informed about the issues at hand. The protest was not only about tuition, but also about the university's role in the community and the rights of students to voice their concerns. The students were aware of the issues and were prepared to take action.

We encourage the university administration to engage in meaningful discussions with the students and to address their concerns. This dialogue is essential for the growth and development of the university and the community it serves.

Sincerely,

Sonja West

No. 6 Iowa to face another Top 20 foe
By Bob Gray
The Daily Iowan

A couple of weeks ago we ventured a top 20 ranking for just about every team in the Big Ten before anyone had played a single game.

But after the NCAA field hockey coaches poll came out earlier this week, it's no surprise Iowa is ranked No. 6 in the Big Ten.

However, this week's dealings between the Hawkeyes and Billikons should do much more to prove the strength of such teams as any poll can.

Iowa hosts St. Louis Saturday at 1 p.m. at a non-conference match against the Atlantic 10 foe.

The regular-season portion of the year and the Big Ten season begins Sept. 15, but if this was the regular-season portion of the year, the Hawkeyes would have a chance to prove they were deserving of their national ranking.

The Big Ten title is still up for grabs, and the Hawkeyes are still considered a threat to the conference crown.

St. Louis is a 10-5 team, and although the Hawkeyes were able to pull out a four-point win over the Billikons earlier this year, the Hawkeyes are much better prepared this year than they were when they played St. Louis last year.

The Hawkeyes are now a Top 10 team with a top-20 record, while St. Louis has a top-20 record and is a Top 25 team.

A win Saturday would give the Hawkeyes a chance to prove they are a Top 10 team.

The Big Ten title will be decided among the Hawkeyes, Minnesota, Ohio State and Illinois.

Any win this weekend will give the Hawkeyes a chance to prove they belong in the national rankings.

Hawkeyes hope home is where wins are

Most experts would rate No. 6 Iowa as a Top 20 foe, but they haven't rated St. Louis.

The Hawkeyes have a history of playing well against Top 20 foes, but most experts didn't rate the Billikons as a Top 20 foe.

It's not a bad thing to consider, as the Hawkeyes are one of the few teams that have had success against Top 20 foes.

Baseball

We did not plan to score for three against this team.

Tommy Greene (3-2) was up for two runs and on his first hit against the Orioles. The game was his second for the final innings for his 14th mound.

Field Hockey

Joe Thieren, Iowa's hard-nosed in the everything in the game, scored his first goal, 20th, with 13 minutes left in the game. He was the first player to reach 10 goals in the Big Ten.

Volleyball

Hard work and good defense, Reed said. "We've always worked hard on doing that. That's my favorite part of the game." Reed said.

"Our assistant coach Pat Dodwell helped me a lot on blocking. Blocking makes me happy because I like to block." Reed said.

Reed was named to the first team All-Big Ten selection in the top 10 of the conference.

Looking back, we see that the tallest guy on the line couldn’t have been more than 14” tall. This was a definite advantage.

Undefeated Hawks face biggest challenge

By Scott Garringer

The Daily Iowan

Less than a month ago, Iowa Coach Larry Wieczorek echoed his sentiments: "The Iowa track team is the winner of the fourth meet of the season and the fifth of the year in the Big Ten meet that was..." Wieczorek was referring to the Hawkeyes' victory over the Illini at the Big Ten meet last weekend, but it also applies to the Hawkeyes' current form. The team is the only undefeated Big Ten team and is seen as a potential national title contender. Wieczorek believes his team has the potential to win the national championship.

Iowa will run 'modified' travel team

By Scott Garringer

The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's cross-country coach Jerry Hassard knows when to hold back and when to let his runners go. Hassard's Hawkeyes will be holding back during the Illini meet this weekend as they prepare for the Big Ten championships. Hassard's concern is for the health and well-being of his runners. He does not want to risk any injuries and burn them out before the big conference meet. Hassard is confident that his team will be ready for the challenge.

W.C.C.

Jill Brink will leave Truckee at home due to minor injuries. Cherice Shalshoury, Tina Blue and Jennifer Adams will make the trip for runners Hassard described as "experienced and talented.

NFL appoints counsel on harassment

BOSTON (AP) - The NFL will appoint a special counsel to review allegations of sexual harassment, according to a source with knowledge of the situation. The source said the league plans to appoint a special counsel to review the allegations made by former New England Patriots employee Colleen Haynes, who was guaranteed a retainer fee of $100,000.

Iowa's No. 1 runner, junior Tracy Dahl, will lead the modified Iowa squad into battle. Dahl, who beat two all-Americans O'Sullivan, a former Penn State team captain, and Rivard, was expected to battle for top honors with Indiana's Michelle Stabb, the Penn State alumnus who was considered by some as the most talented runner in the conference last year.

DEEP DISCOUNTS TEND TO TELL THE PUBLIC THAT YOU'VE FINALLY FIGURED OUT WHAT YOUR PRODUCT IS WORTH.

A while ago, an advertising man came to me and suggested that we raise our product prices so we could give away "discount" coupons and still make money. "No," I said, "that doesn't seem quite honest. I know everyone else has coupons all the time, but I think people would rather have a BETTER PRODUCT WITH MORE CHEESE and fresh QUALITY toppings.

"This is a college town," I continued, "People in Iowa City are smart. I believe they will soon figure out they're not getting 'something for nothing' with coupons. They're getting what they pay for cheap pizza.

So at AL'S PIZZA we still offer no tricks, no gimmicks. JUST GREAT PRODUCT with generous toppings and fast service everyday. NO COUPON NECESSARY!

Taylor sues tabloid over 'boozé' story

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The National Enquirer isn't backing down from its story portraying Elizabeth Taylor as a drinker, the actress' attorney said Wednesday.

The actress was hospitalized with pneumonia four days before publication.

"This is the last word," lawyer Mark L. query said in a statement. "The Enquirer's story is not true. The actress was not hospitalized with pneumonia, nor has she been working on any new projec-

The inside headline read: "She's a drinker, the actress med screamed." It's impossible. How can puppets do that? They're like Ken and Barbie dolls."

The show was titled "Simon Says" and the Center for Puppetry Arts in Atlanta performed it at the Festival last Friday before an audience of 800 people, including children, estimated "approximately five minutes of simulated foreplay between two puppets followed by an exhibit of oral sex acts." Roberton, a 1988 presidential candidate, said his Christian Children's puppet show featuring oral sex allegedly subsidized by the National Endowment for the Arts was never intended "for adult consumption." The lobster with its enemies said in a statement: "The show is intended only for adult consumption."
