

Campus security gears up for game; alcohol remains most common problem

By Chris Priebe
Special to The Daily Iowan

As 70,000 fans prepare to descend on Kinnick Stadium for this Saturday's game, the UI Department of Public Safety is gearing up to handle the crowd.

"We have 27 officers in our force," said Officer Richard Gordon, who handles security for the game. "But that's not going to be enough to handle it."

Gordon said 132 security guards from the Two Star Detective Agency in Cedar Rapids were hired to help with security. Several Iowa City Police officers also help direct traffic at intersections.

The Coralville Police Department will handle traffic in Coralville, and the state patrol will deal with any interstate traffic problems, Gordon said.

"Since the people from Two Star are not sworn officers, they direct traffic in the lots," Gordon said. "They also watch the gates before the game to make sure illegal items are not being brought in."

Gordon said one of the biggest hassles for the department is parking cars, and 30 ROTC students are hired to help with parking.

The cost of the additional security adds up — more than 200 people work game weekends. Gordon said a security officer makes $15 to $20 an hour and the people from Two Star are paid approximately $10 an hour. The total cost is roughly $1,800, but Gordon said the extra expense is necessary.

Before the game, 19 campus security officers remain in the lots to handle any problems there.

"Because they're the sworn officers, they need to remain available to respond to any problems," Gordon said.

During the game, the Two Star security people stay outside in the lots, while the rest of the officers patrol the stadium, Gordon said.

He said many problems arise because students sit in the wrong seats.

"They want to sit together with their friends but don't buy their tickets together — so they get up and move," Gordon said.

But he said most of the problems on game weekends involve alcohol.

"Public intoxication is the most common problem. Crowd control is another," Gordon explained.

Although drinking is almost an institution at the games, Gordon said the problem has improved.

"We used to make eight or nine arrests a game, but I think we've only made one this year," he said.

Gordon said the Safe Saturday program and the no-keg rule have helped curb alcohol problems.

"We no longer will allow large quantities of beer to be brought into the game," he said. "If we can catch somebody bringing a garbage basket full of beer, we confiscate it."

Adela celebrates its cultural heritage, Hispanic festival with traditional flair

By Risa Grudena
The Daily Iowan

Today is Columbus Day, or for Latinos, it is Dia de la Raza — day of the ethnic races.

In Latin America, this day celebrates the arrival of Christopher Columbus in the New World, and the consequent introduction of new races to the prior indigenous population.

"Dia de la Raza celebrates the origin of a multicultural and multiracial reality in Latin America," said Clay Tanner, member of Adela, the Latin American Student Association on campus. Tanner said the day is usually observed through cultural events and parties in Latin America.

Here in Iowa City, Adela has commemorated the holiday by planning a week of events titled "Semana de la Raza," or week of the races.

"A variety of events will be held to give cultural exposure to all the different facets of Latino culture," explained Tanner. Events began last Monday and have included video presentations from Latino students, a peña with Spanish music and poetry, and a forum Thursday night over bilingual and bicultural issues. Today there will be a children's art workshop from 4 to 5 p.m. at the Chicano/Native American Cultural Center on Melrose Avenue.

One of the largest events of the week will be the Pachanga, a Latino dance party, held Saturday from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Union Ballroom. The Pachanga will feature the band "Alto Maiz." No admission will be charged.

A substantial population of Hispanics from all over Latin America lives in Iowa City and the surrounding area.

"This is a week for us to be unified because we have similar roots and language," said Adela Vice President Claudio Pizarro.

Man who fumigated restaurant sues employer

The Associated Press

DAVENPORT — A Davenport man who fumigated an Iowa City restaurant two years ago, accidentally killing another man, is suing his former employer for emotional trauma brought on by the incident.

Stephen Dale Plath is suing the W.B. McCloud exterminator company and four firms that manufacture or market pesticides and extermination supplies.

Plath worked for W.B. McCloud on Oct. 5, 1988, when he fumigated the Village Inn restaurant, 9 Sturgiss Corners Drive. An employee of the restaurant, 19-year-old Terry Schneider, inhaled the pesticide fumes when he came to work the next morning and died as a result.

Plath is suing W.B. McCloud for failing to provide him with adequate training and failing to supervised his work properly.

He is asking for unspecified damages as compensation for severe emotional trauma caused by Schneider's death, the loss of his exterminator's license and resulting income and the damage to his personal reputation.

Woman loses suit against UI professor over home

By Aaron A. Dolan
The Daily Iowan

A woman who was evicted from a house in which she lived with a UI physics professor for 10 years lost her case in small claims court Thursday. She was seeking possession of the property.

Linda Lockridge, 32, who also has a civil suit against Louis Frank, 52, lost possession of the property located at RR 5 where she and Frank lived between 1980 and 1990.

According to the civil suit, filed Aug. 30 in Johnson County District Court, Lockridge lived with Frank and assisted in the upkeep of the house with "his promises ... on multiple occasions, that she could share possession of the home," the suit states.

In 1988, Frank asked Lockridge to assist him in "substantially remodeling and enlarging" his residence in a project that increased in cost from $90,000 to $150,000, according to the suit. Lockridge claims stress from her job at Systems Unlimited and helping direct the remodeling project led to adverse health consequences in July 1989, which required immediate medical attention.

After recuperating, Lockridge quit her job at Systems Unlimited and devoted her full attention to the remodeling project.

When the project was finished, Lockridge bought "expensive" furniture for the house on her own credit in preparation for Frank's return to the house after a year-long hiatus in Coralville, the suit states.

"Without forewarning or just cause" Frank told Lockridge that "she must leave the home immediately" July 4, according to the suit. The Johnson County Sheriff served Lockridge with a 30-day eviction notice when she indicated her desire to stay.

The civil suit — in which Lockridge is seeking compensatory and punitive damages — has not yet gone to trial.

An Israeli army soldier grabs a Palestinian by the shirt on Thursday after he was arrested during a protest march in Jerusalem's old city and taken to a military van.

Police tear-gas marchers at protest in Jerusalem

By Gwen Ackerman
The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Police fired tear gas in Jerusalem's Old City on Thursday to break up a march by about 150 Palestinians to the Temple Mount, where police killed 19 Arabs earlier this week.

The government and Israel's chief rabbis called on Israelis to come to the Western Wall by the thousands Thursday night to reassert control over Judaism's holiest site.

In New York City, the U.N. Security Council held consultations to end the stalemate over criticism of the violence in Jerusalem. But a vote was not expected Thursday.

Thousands of fundamentalist Muslims demonstrated in neighboring Jordan and pledged to avenge Monday's killings, which occurred when police opened fire on rioters stoning Jews praying at the Western Wall below.

Security was heavy at the adjacent Temple Mount, which is revered by both Muslims and Jews. Police also set up checkpoints at the gates to the Temple Mount, known in Arabic as Haram a-Sharif, or "Noble Enclosure."

Hundreds of riot police backed by soldiers patrolled nearby to prevent further clashes between Muslims and Jews. At the gates to Jerusalem's Old City, riot police frisked Palestinians and turned some away.

"We will prevent young inciters from reaching the area," said Jerusalem police Commander Arieh Bibi.

Earlier, during the march, the Palestinians chanted, "World, listen to us! We are people who will never submit!"

They were blocked from entering the Temple Mount compound, but inside, several hundred Arabs marched around the Dome of the Rock Mosque with outlawed Palestinian flags. They chanted the Muslim battle cry "Allahu Akbar," or God is Great.

Christian leaders, including the Greek Catholic patriarch of Jerusalem, Lufti Laham, marched from the Church of the Holy Sepulcher to the Temple Mount to join Muslim clerics in prayer.

Israeli officials called for the Jewish rally at the Western Wall at the end of the eight-day Sukkot festival. On the final day, Jews, often dancing, carry Torah scrolls in a festive procession.

Israel's two chief rabbis, Avraham Shapiro and Mordechai Eliyah, had urged Jews to stage the processions in Jerusalem instead of in their hometowns to erase what they called "the great blasphemy" of Jews being stoned at the Wall.

Full-page newspaper ads from the Religious Affairs Ministry called for mass participation.

Committee approves Bush B-2 request

By Donna Cassata
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate Appropriations Committee approved a $268 billion defense bill Thursday that leaves intact President Bush's 1991 budget request for the B-2 stealth bomber.

By voice vote, the panel adopted the legislation after turning aside an attempt by Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., to stop production of the B-2 at six planes.

"The greatest threat to our national security is not the Soviet Union; it is our spiraling debt," Leahy told his colleagues. The lawmaker also pointed to an Air Force review that found widespread problems with the aircraft's manufacturer, the Northrop Corp.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii and chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee on defense, argued that the measure would result in the United States spending $35 billion on "an unfinished science project."

The bill largely tracks the steps taken in August by the Senate when it approved separate legislation that outlined ceilings on defense spending for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

The committee bill, which would appropriate actual funds, trims about $1 billion from Bush's $4.7 billion budget request for the Strategic Defense Initiative, cuts troop strength by 100,000 and provides $5.1 billion for two B-2 bombers in 1991 and components for more bombers in 1992.

Leahy is expected to bring up the B-2 amendment again when the full Senate takes up the defense spending plan, possibly as early as Friday.

Nevertheless, the panel's action was welcome news to Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and a B-2 proponent.

"That'll help; that'll help. We're hanging on by stealthy fingers," Nunn said of the vote.

Earlier in the day, Air Force Secretary Donald Rice pleaded with Congress not to decide the fate of the B-2 based on the Air Force review.

Congress negotiates NEA deal

By Robert M. Andrews
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House rejected a proposal Thursday to abolish the National Endowment for the Arts and headed for a showdown vote on whether to scrap anti-obscenity curbs on projects that receive federal subsidies.

After three hours of emotional debate, the House overwhelmingly defeated a move by Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., to eliminate the $171 million federal arts agency.

After the 361-64 roll call vote against Crane and his conservative allies, the House took up a tough anti-obscenity measure sponsored by Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, R-Calif.

Supporters predicted eventual passage of a bipartisan compromise bill that would do away with current restrictions on NEA spending and instead penalize grant recipients who are later convicted of violating obscenity laws.

Thursday's floor debate, delayed by wrangling over a budget resolution and efforts to negotiate an NEA compromise, capped months of controversy over public financing of creative works regarded by some as obscene or blasphemous.

The compromise bill, sponsored by Reps. Pat Williams, D-Mont., and E. Thomas Coleman, R-Mo., was denounced by Rep. Ron Marlenee, R-Mont.

"It's a fix... that allows the junkies to continue to peddle their depraved, sadistic wares with impunity," said Marlenee, a conservative who may be fighting the liberal Williams in 1992 for the single Montana House seat expected to emerge from redistricting based on the 1990 census.

"We cannot muzzle artists with loyalty oaths and decency standards," said Rep. Joseph Kennedy, D-Mass.

Secreast brings vision of 'landscape' to stories

By Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

Donald Secreast's rural characters are seemingly anchored to principle; in the beginning, at least, each person's beliefs are unshakable. Heartbreaking revelation, though, is often just around the corner.

The author acknowledges the influence of his style: "I'm a big fan of Flannery O'Connor, and the sort of 'awakening' that often takes place in her stories," he says.

Secreast, a UI faculty member, will read from his short-story collection "The Rat Becomes Light" at 8 p.m. tonight at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. The reading will be broadcast live on WSUI AM 910.

"The Rat Becomes Light" is Secreast's first published work of fiction. The 10 interconnected stories deal with the lives of people living in close proximity, most of them workers at the Chalfant Furniture Factory in Boehm, N.C.

In the story "Summer Help," Wanda is working at the end of the factory's production line, applying decorative paintings to finished pieces. She sees herself as an artist, a perception strengthened by the blithe compliments of the factory owner's son. It's clear, though, that Wanda is deluding herself into believing a romantic image of "artistry" — and by the end of the story, she's forced to deal with the consequences.

Of the predominance of factory workers in his stories, Secreast says, "I'm trying to explore what keeps manual laborers going." His interest in the subject began with his experience working in factories during college: "I wondered what kinds of secrets (the workers) had — what they latched on to, poured all of their energy into."

Though "Southern" fiction has been his style so far, Secreast — who is from North Carolina — sees a danger of patronization in the genre: "It bothers me somewhat that people want to 'write down' to characters. . . . The whole idea of the Southern Grotesque has gotten out of hand. It's something of an anachronism — not that many people have mules anymore, you know?"

Nevertheless, he thinks that the subject offers rich possibilities: "I think really good writers are able to communicate the personality of the landscape — and if you have a distinct Southern landscape, then you're going to have a distinct Southern tone."

Finally, Secreast believes that the key to regional singularity lies in small things — like, for example, food: "To find the differences," he says, "you have to start in the kitchen."

Lois Greenfield

Colleen Stephens, Michele Elliman and Renate Gracedel of the Nina Wiener Dance Company in "Harmonic Landscapes," to be performed at Hancher Auditorium this weekend.

'Organic' movements fuel Wiener's new choreography

By Kathleen Hurley
The Daily Iowan

When you walk down the street, you (presumably) do not premeditate every movement or calculate the number and distance of steps — rather, you instinctively go about the business of life. Such is the dance style of Nina Wiener, whose world premiere performances of "Harmonic Landscapes" will take place Friday, Oct. 12, and Saturday, Oct. 13, at Hancher Auditorium.

"My style is not intellectual, but instinctual," Wiener says.

By moving in ways natural to her, Wiener utilizes an organic talent for rhythm and phrasing within a dynamic counterbalancing style. The Nina Wiener style, she explains, can be recognized by "a counterbalance of the upper and lower body with the center of gravity within the body constantly thrown off balance." The physics of the movement, however, do not need to be analyzed in order to enjoy its organic and earthy quality.

And enjoy you will, if the promising characteristics of "Harmonic Landscapes" are an indication. Commissioned by Hancher, the work was inspired by Bruce Chat-win's book "Songlines," which described the Australian aboriginal concept of "singing the land."

"The book served as a jumping-off point for me," says Wiener. "My piece is very abstract, not a narrative — so don't expect to see any aboriginal dancing."

After immersing herself in Australian culture for six weeks, Wiener choreographed "Harmonic Landscapes" with a primitive, mystical quality simulating the physical and emotional landscapes of Australia. "I let my imagination run wild and came up with a 'travel-book' piece combining imagination and reality."

After performing "Harmonic Landscapes" at Hancher, the seven members of the company will tour to Madison, Wisc., and Los Angeles — and to Amsterdam, Holland, for one week. Their New York season will open at the Joyce Theater.

Formed in 1976, the Nina Wiener Dance Company has wowed audiences in America and Europe and has received numerous awards, including two Bessie Awards and commissions from the Next Wave Festival and the Holland Festival. A 1987 tour to Iowa City led to a project combining UI student dancers and company members in "Enclosed Time."

Monologist tells of trip to Amazon

The Daily Iowan

Faster than Spalding Gray and more powerful than Garrison Keillor, monologist Jim Stowell returns as part of Riverside Theatre's Showcase Series with "The Green Fuse: Journey on the Amazon" on Friday, Oct. 12, and Saturday, Oct. 13.

The raconteur from Minneapolis played to packed houses in Iowa City with "Traveling Light" two seasons ago and promises another evening of colorful characters and rambunctious happenings as he tells tales of life on the river. Performances both evenings will be at 8 p.m. at the new Riverside Theatre space, 213 N. Gilbert St.

"Journey On the Amazon" is Stowell's account of a six-week journey in the Amazon basin of Brazil. His anecdotes range from the sublime to the ridiculous as he journeys through a land in which the culture and language are alien to him. Stowell recounts life in the tropic rain forest where he feasted on fish seven feet long, saw snakes that could swallow a cow and "enough crocodiles to last a lifetime." He also gives us a view of the "other jungle" with its illegal gold, hides, chain saws, mercury poisoning and boom-towns that threaten to swallow one of the most important ecosystems in the world.

Stowell is a core artist at Brass Tacks Theatre and a core member of the Playwrights' Center, both in Minneapolis.

Lonely inspiration at center of 'Opal'

By Staci Sturrock
The Daily Iowan

Most operas are not set in lumber camps. Most operas are not based on the diary of a 7-year-old girl. Most operas do not feature a gaggle of "cornball, macho and workworn" characters.

"Opal," however, is not most operas. Robert Nassif's musical will be performed Sunday, Oct. 14, in Clapp Recital Hall at 2 p.m. Nassif, a Cedar Rapids native and UI graduate, says he never intended "Opal" to be an opera, but discussions with UI Opera Theater Director Beaumont Glass changed the way he saw the production.

"Beaumont feels, and I think rightly so, that it possesses the sweeping sentiment, the drama, the passion of opera — despite the fact that it isn't sung all the way through," he says.

"Opal" is based on the true story of Opal Whitely, an orphan raised in a lumber camp in Oregon just after the turn of the century. Using crayons on brown paper sacks, Opal wrote of her life and kept the record secret from her adoptive family. The diaries were discovered later, when Opal was trying to sell a book of nature lectures for children to the publisher of the Atlantic Monthly.

When the diaries were published in 1920, they created a sensation. The poetic style, the French words scattered through the diary and the references to great figures of literature and art led many to suppose that Opal was actually the daughter of French aristocracy. Opal herself later claimed that she was the illegitimate daughter of a descendant of the last king of France — a claim believed by many familiar with the story, Nassif included.

The diaries are still in print and are available locally at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. Nassif found out about the diaries from a family friend. While reading Opal's story, he says, "I heard music and I knew I had to get the rights." Since then he has met with the real Opal, now in her 90s and living in a hospital near London.

"I heard music."

Composer Robert Nassif, on his reaction to the story of "Opal"

Nassif began working on "Opal" several years ago. Since then it has been his ticket to participation in the New York Shakespeare Festival and the Disney New Harmony Project.

Excerpts from the work were performed in a workshop performance by the UI Opera Theater last fall, and the world premiere was given this past summer by Highland Community College in Freeport, Ill. Sunday's production is the first for Nassif's latest revision.

Nassif, who lives in New York City, says that in recent years he has also learned a lot about the theater business.

"It's really easy for an Iowa boy to get steamrolled by high pressure New Yorkers, and I have been," he says. "It isn't enough to be a writer or an artist. If you want to succeed in this business you also have to be a salesman, a promoter, a PR person. It is part talent, but personal magnetism can make up for a lot."

Nassif apparently has magnetism on his side. He has already attracted the attention of noted stage and opera director Hal Prince and producer/director Joseph Papp. He also has the support of Broadway composer/lyricist Stephen Sondheim, who has called Nassif "an extremely talented composer and lyricist, and a serious artist."

Nassif is similarly complimentary toward Opal and her "masterpiece." He says, "Opal speaks to the child in us all. That was her genius as a child, to articulate childhood feelings that we have all shared but have forgotten. She touches a primal, long-silent chord in us all."

The production will be directed by Beaumont Glass, and David Evans, a professor of music on leave from William Penn College in Oskaloosa, will conduct the performance. Accompaniment will be by pianists Darlene Lawrence, the Opera Theater coach/accompanist, and School of Music graduate student Berthold Schneider.

Tickets for "Opal" are $8 — $5 for UI students, senior citizens and those 18 and under — and are available at Hancher Box Office.

So much to hate, so little time

HIGHER EDUCATION

Setting examples

The UI administration seems to have shifted gears in the last few months, its goals aimed less at education and more at creative public relations.

Two cases in point: the handling of the recently released financial audit of last spring's Student Senate spending fiasco and the scourge of "prowler" incidents in various UI residence halls.

Case one: According to what one hopes is the be-all, end-all, last hurrah of UI audits, State Auditor Richard Johnson declared that a group of former student senators should repay the UI almost $2,000 for fiscal mismanagement.

The scenario was played out something like this: At the request of a group of students, the UI's internal auditor, Pete Husak, examined the spending practices of last year's Student Senate administration and found nothing wrong. Then the state auditor investigated and made a preliminary report that there had, in fact, been wrongdoing. The UI followed up and admitted that there might have been a few problems of oversight. But just to be sure, the administration paid an independent auditing firm $8,000 to investigate the spending. It determined the UI should seek $59 in repayments from last year's Student Senate president. Again, the UI said it was nothing serious. And now, Johnson releases his final report calling for $2,000 in repayments. Five audits in all.

And throughout it all, the administration has never admitted that it might, possibly, have screwed up. That oversight procedures were wholly inadequate, that certain UI officials gave the green light to unbridled student spending, that the administration continued to approve unnecessary expenditures even after the problem was exposed and initial audits had begun — all clearly indicate that the UI was afraid to admit its mistakes.

Case two: UI freshman Dawn Wiegall reported an "unauthorized entry" into her Burge residence hall room on Aug. 24. Officers from the UI Department of Public Safety told her to "not tell anyone." Pam Boersig, assistant director of residence services, said that she didn't want to make the students "paranoid." Thus, no warning was issued to students for three weeks afterward, during which time more reports of similar break-ins were made. It happened that the incidents were kept quiet until after Parents' Weekend, when hundreds of parents traveled to Iowa City to see how their kids were getting along. Of course no one wanted to admit to security problems while the parents were in town. It could tarnish the "image."

Conventional wisdom holds that learning involves two processes: education through instruction and education through experience. The UI, to its credit, has the former down. But the latter needs a bit of work. Students are getting the signal that it's best to refuse to admit your mistakes, even if you've obviously erred. Instead, obscure the facts, hush things up and wait until things blow over. That's leading by example.

RACIAL AWARENESS

Opportunity knocks

The University of Michigan this week approved a plan to include in its liberal arts education a required course on issues of racial and ethnic intolerance. This comes on the heels of a similar program at the University of Wisconsin. The UI need look no further for the next progressive measure in promoting equality on campus.

Students at the UM will be required to choose from several courses examining the meaning of race, ethnicity and racism. This initiative results from three years of discussion and compromise.

Opponents argued that the requirement would further generalize undergraduate education, and that it would only serve to indoctrinate students. Another requirement only impinges on students' freedom of choice, they said.

The measure was hotly contested. It passed by a 139-90 vote, indicating broad support for opponents' concerns.

Yet the premise must be accepted at a glance. Racial and ethnic disparity are real. And education is the great equalizer.

It is past time for such initiatives at the UI. Our institution is integrated only on paper. The greek system continues to separate by race — black and white houses even hold formal rush at different times. Tables in the residence hall lunch rooms are still blotches of color. Descriptions of the recent "prowler" as black prompted cries of racism from the BSU. American Indian students perceive an unjust attitude of "tolerance" from the UI community. Matters of ethnicity and race are either ignored or passed about like hot potatoes.

The bottom line is that an understanding of diversity is only gained through an examination of differences. The UM's progressive measure will force students to examine their world and themselves. Contrary to opponents' reservations, open evaluation of individual biases and societal forces serves to liberate. And only through liberation can diversity be understood and equality realized.

It is irresponsible to ignore these problems any longer. Certainly we cannot continue to stand around watching our toes to see if they get stepped on. An additional course requirement is the logical step. Administrative action, or better yet, a grassroots initiative — by the greek system or BSU or LASA or any faculty member or student — is in order. This opportunity to truly promote an understanding of racial and ethnic diversity must not be wasted.

Editorial Writer

Opinions expressed on the Viewpoints page of The Daily Iowan are those of the signed author. The Daily Iowan, as a non-profit corporation, does not express opinions on these matters.

Although the shooting hasn't begun yet, I've been trying to work up a healthy hatred for Iraq. It seems like the patriotic thing to do. And I've always believed that if people go through the bother of killing each other, they shouldn't be impersonal about it. After all, it is a very intimate act.

Although I haven't reached the point of gnashing my teeth at the thought of an Iraqi, I'm sure it will come because I've had so much experience at this sort of thing.

The first time I developed a patriotic hatred was in 1939, when newsboys came through the neighborhood at night, waving special editions and shouting, "Extra, extra, Germany invades Poland."

Although I was just a kid, within a couple of years I dutifully hated Germans, Japanese and Italians. (I didn't hate Italians very long, though, because they surrendered as soon as it was convenient.)

At the same time, I loved and admired the brave Russians and Chinese because they had joined us in hating the evil Germans, Japanese and Italians.

But as soon as World War II ended, and I could stop hating the evil Germans and Japanese because they weren't evil anymore, I had to start hating the brave Russians and Chinese, because they weren't brave anymore, but had become evil.

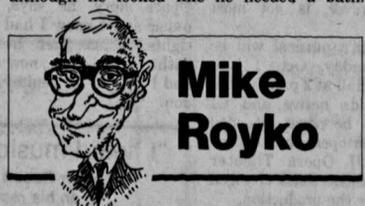

While I was adjusting to that, along came the North Koreans. Even though I didn't know a North Korean from a South Korean, or any Korean from a chipmunk, I went along and hated them. The North Koreans.

Not long after that, I discovered that I could still hate some Germans. Not West Germans, because they had become good and even gave us some of their ex-Nazi scientists to help us build rockets. But East Germans had become evil commies and were to be hated.

However, this created some confusion, since

Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and other countries had become commie, too, so I felt a responsibility to hate them. But I was told that they didn't really want to be commies: The Russians made them do it. So I didn't have to hate them as much as I hated the Russians and Chinese.

Then came Cuba. I had never paid much attention to Cuba because I didn't smoke cigars. But when a heroic Fidel Castro overthrew an evil, corrupt regime, I was urged to admire the heroic Castro, which I did, although he looked like he needed a bath.

Then, almost overnight, Castro became an evil commie, and I had to start hating Cuba. My hatred reached the boiling point when we had the Cuban missile crisis. But in recent years, it's been reduced to a simmer.

Naturally, I joined in really hating North Vietnam. And some Cambodians, although I'm still not certain which Cambodians I was supposed to hate. It's possible that in the confusion I was hating Cambodians that I should have been liking, in which case I apologize.

The 1960s may have been one of my hate-peaks, second only to the 1940s. I found myself hating the Russians, Chinese, North Vietnam and Cuba — while still nursing an intense dislike for North Korea and not thinking highly of Albania. There were a few other countries that I occasionally cursed, but their names slip my mind. Shortly thereafter, though, President Nixon said I didn't have to hate the Chinese anymore, although I wasn't expected to hug them. And I haven't hated them since, except for that recent month or two when I could again hate them because of the way they kicked around their students. But that seems to have calmed down, and President Bush says it's OK not to hate them, so I don't.

In fact, I don't have to hate the Russians — or hardly anyone in Europe — because we've become pals, and they're all eager to eat Quarter Pounders with cheese like decent folk do.

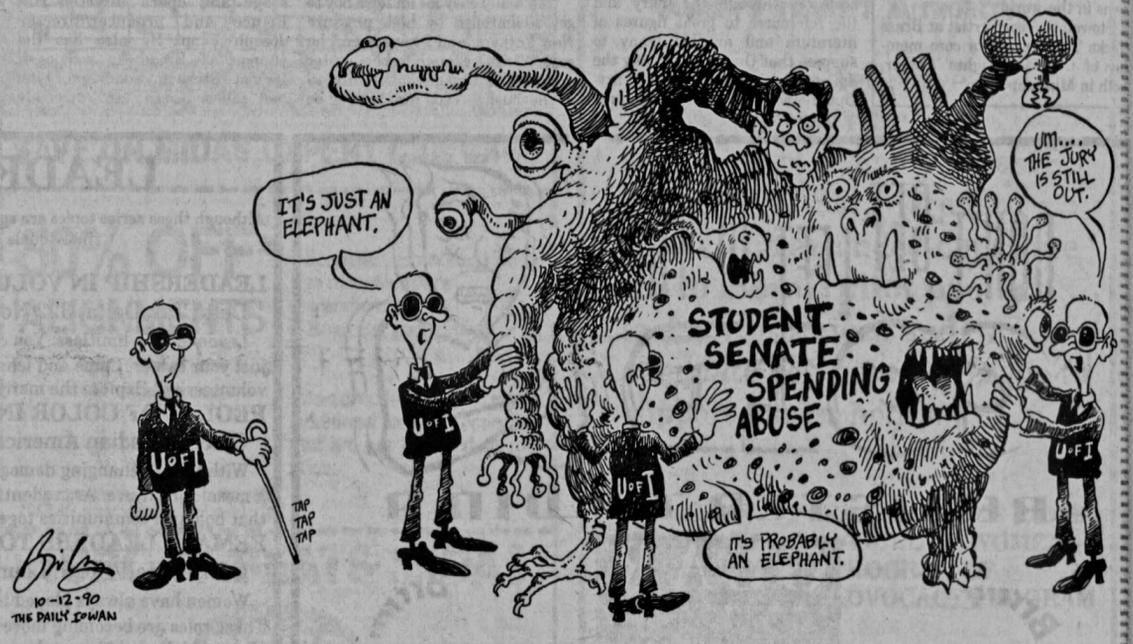

And it couldn't have happened at a better time, because of the need to hate Iraq. I can be vicious, but I have only so much hatred to spread around.

Actually, it isn't that hard to hate Iraq. It's simply a matter of shifting my hatred a few miles. Until recently, I hated Iran and kind of liked Iraq because it was fighting with Iran. But now that it's time to hate Iraq, it's not necessary to hate Iran. Unless Iran cuts a friendly deal with Iraq, in which case I'll have to hate it again. Iran, I mean.

Fortunately, there is less pressure to hate some of the other Arab nations, which I formerly hated because they went in for terrorism. But now they say they hate Iraq, too, which means that I can like them. At least for the time being. Things can change quickly and I might have to start hating them once more, so I'm not going to like them a lot just in case.

I wonder if there will come a time when there isn't anyone I have to hate. Nah. Not as long as there are New York Mets.

Teacher Talk

U.S. shrouds itself in cloak of ignorance

One of Spain's greatest contemporary writers is Juan Goytisolo. In novels such as "Count Julian" and "Juan the Landless," written in the early to mid-1970s, Goytisolo seeks to give narrative voice to his hatred for the imperialist values of the West. He does so by inventing techniques and plots that dissolve the unquestioned authority of his own Spanish culture at the same time that they facilitate an understanding of Arabic culture as having its own living values and history.

The narrator of "Count Julian" ardently desires the end of such myths as that of the Christian knight always ready to defend faith against war. This myth persists especially in the view that Spanish national identity is based on the military rout and conquest of Islam. From before Ferdinand and Isabella until well into the 1970s, many ruling class Spaniards were obsessively preoccupied with defeating the "Moor" — and, of course, with seizing Arabs' wealth for themselves. In "Juan the Landless," the narrator thus self-consciously abandons written Spanish for Hispanicized Arabic and, later on, for an Arabic written in Roman transliteration. A final shift to a fully Arabic script drives home the novel's central message that, as one critic puts it, the very distinction between the world from which one narrates and the world of which one narrates can and must be challenged.

In an important and accessible book, also from the 1970s, Edward Said rightly tears apart the entire tradition of Western images of the Orient, especially images of the Middle East. His "Orientalism" convincingly documents how even the most well-intentioned of Western representations of the Middle East end up placing the Westerner "in a whole series of possible relationships with the Orient without ever losing him the relative upper hand." Said's caution against the fallacy of seeking to explain one society and culture solely by means of the categories of another society and culture is never more to the point than when the explanation is based on the perspective of a dominant world imperialism, such as that exercised by the United States and the West at large today.

It would be wrong, however, to interpret Said's warning against Western writers' distorted representations of Arab realities as reason for denying a basis for solidarity between the majority of Arabs and the majority of Americans in a united front against exploitation at home and imperialism abroad.

It is deeply disturbing to witness the racist characterizations of Arabs and of Iraqi president Saddam Hussein that daily spew out of the U.S. media. Judging from many reports, one would never know that Saddam had been a "friend" at the time the U.S. government egged him on and cheered him on in the slaughter of Iranians, or as it closed its eyes to his gassing of Iraqi Kurds. Equally hypocritical is most Americans' conditioned ignorance about the level of support Saddam receives throughout the Middle East. Palestinians and Jordanians in particular, but also Arab masses in Algeria, Tunisia, Libya, Syria and even Saudi Arabia itself, stand behind Saddam against the U.S. Unlike most Americans, the majority of Arabs remember that President Nasser of Egypt also was portrayed as a "Hitler" by the U.S. government and media when he sought to assert control over the Suez Canal in 1956.

More recently than 1956, one well might ask why General Manuel Noriega was said to be a "Hitler" when it was Bush, the conqueror of Panama, who reimposed the rule of his own wealthy friends on the canal. It couldn't be just that Noriega was a "drug dealer," since Bush's involvement in the Iran-Contra affair has gone unappealed in at least one decisive court case, and Bush's involvement as a CIA operative in the illegal and drug-financed Laotian war is now a matter of historical record. Could it be that Noriega's skin color and facial features — like those of Saddam — make possible each one's portrayal as "Hitlers" in a racist Western press?

In the current gulf crisis, no hope is to be sought in the United Nations. As Goytisolo's novel shows, the regional problems have their root in economic and cultural imperialism. On the few occasions in which the U.N. has been able to act effectively as a peacekeeping force in the world, it has been because imperialist powers east and west — notably U.N. Security Council members China, France, Britain, the U.S. and the Soviet Union — have been of one mind. On the much more numerous occasions in which the U.N. has watched helplessly as one or more imperialist powers have ignored its resolutions — as, say, when the U.S. thumbed its nose at U.N. rulings against the "covert" war against Nicaragua — its powerlessness to act except as a lackey of world imperialism has been confirmed.

Goytisolo's novels go far in articulating the reality of what some have called a "colonizing" of the mind. Here the reference is to the way individuals are first deceived by and later internalize racist, sexist and imperialistic representations. I believe that it is fair to say that we are being subjected in the United States today to an especially intense bombardment of such representations around the issue of the impending war with Iraq.

In another book, Said writes that the study of literature entails a nexus between the world, the text and the critic. I think we ought to take him seriously when he argues that "criticism is worldly and in the world as long as it opposes monocentrism, a concept . . . which licenses a culture to cloak itself in the particular authority of certain values over others." In the context of U.S. intervention and of the subordination of U.N. forces to world capitalist interests, I believe that Said's statement means that we must support Iraq in its efforts to get U.S. imperialist forces out of the gulf.

Catholic school revises pledge, upsets students

By Kristi Umbreit
The Associated Press

LORAIN, Ohio — A Roman Catholic school revised the Pledge of Allegiance to say "with liberty and justice for the born and unborn," angering some students who said the issue has no place in a patriotic oath.

"It's like changing the Constitution," Angela Martinez, a Lorain Catholic High School junior, said Thursday.

Robert Garcia, a senior, also said the change, which began this week, was a bad idea.

"I feel the 'born and unborn' shouldn't be added. The pledge is a pledge to your country. . . . The pledge deals with patriotism," he said.

munications for the Cleveland Catholic Diocese, said references to the unborn in the pledge is not policy for Catholic schools in northeast Ohio.

Principal Joanne Miller was said to be in a faculty meeting on Thursday and not available to comment.

Reporters trying to interview students were told to leave school grounds.

In an interview published Thursday with The Lorain Journal, Miller defended the change as appropriate.

"We are a Catholic school and therefore our philosophy is one of pro-life," she said. "The pledge change" was suggested to us. It does not go against our philosophy.

"I did not realize there was a difficulty with this until (Tuesday) morning. I was wondering if the students concerned would come talk with me. They have not," she said.

The Chronicle Telegram in nearby Elyria reported Thursday the phrase was added at the request of the Knights of Columbus.

Tom Laubenthal, a trustee with the Elyria K of C Council, said the organization regularly uses the phrase at its meetings "just because of our stance on abortion."

This week has been designated by U.S. Catholic schools as "respect for life" week, said Robert Kealey, executive director for the Washington, D.C.-based National Catholic Education Association. Students are being urged to reflect on the issues of abortion, euthanasia, the homeless and poverty.

Kealey, whose association represents most Catholic secondary and elementary schools in the country, said he had not heard of any other school altering the Pledge of Allegiance.

Appeal

Jew. However, Chalmers said Thursday that she had not been contacted by the UI or the attorney general's office since the Sept. 21 meeting.

Peter Shane, a past UI faculty senate president, confirmed that the UI appealed the case, adding that he hoped the UI would still try to make a settlement.

But Shane, a professor in the UI College of Law whose specialty is constitutional law, said he saw little chance that the UI could successfully appeal.

"What is odd to me is the following: Vietor's decision is based partly on findings of fact," he said. "A court of appeals can only reverse these findings of fact. The appeals court would have to find erroneous error in order to rule in the university's favor."

"The other question is: Did Judge Vietor misrepresent the law? But, in my view, he was pretty careful in handling several recent Supreme Court cases on these matters. So it seems their chance of winning is very slight."

Another professor who has followed the case very closely noted that there could be several legal interpretations in Vietor's ruling that could have a "chilling effect" on UI faculty. Jew said Vietor's unusual step to reverse a UI faculty vote that denied Dr. Jew a promotion and the issue of free speech are both topics some UI faculty are worried about.

But the professor, who asked not to be identified, said these issues were "so flim-flammed in the anatomy department that they're not even issues."

"Oh God, what a mistake," the professor said of the UI's decision. "There's no way they can win. The university should have given their pound of flesh and left this case behind them forever."

He added that the appeal will also have a "horrible effect" on the UI's ability to recruit women faculty, several of whom, in his view, will disregard the UI entirely because of the decision.

Shane also challenged Deputy General Gordon Allen's defense that the ruling violates the UI's academic freedom, and the rights of professors to free speech. "My opinion as a constitutional lawyer is that the First Amendment point is weak," he said.

The case will probably reach the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals before the end of the year.

Britain declares force will be used if Iraq doesn't withdraw from Kuwait

By Lisa Genasci
The Associated Press

Britain's foreign secretary said Thursday that Saddam Hussein must be told force will be used if Iraq doesn't withdraw from Kuwait.

The Air Force, meanwhile, grounded all training flights in the Persian Gulf region for 24 hours from midday Wednesday until midday Thursday to discuss air safety with pilots. The order followed separate accidents this week in which 12 U.S. servicemen died.

A group of 321 Western evacuees from Iraq and Kuwait landed in Britain on Thursday in the first such flight in nearly three weeks. Most of the passengers were Americans, and many were children.

The Americans and Canadians on the flight were to leave Friday for Raleigh-Durham International Airport in North Carolina, said Andrew Varney, Gatwick airport's director of public affairs.

While Westerners continued to flee occupied Kuwait with tales of low food supplies and looting by Iraqi troops, international pressure grew against Saddam to withdraw from the oil-rich emirate he invaded and annexed.

Speaking at the annual conference of the governing Conservative Party in Bournemouth, England, British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd urged the world to remain united against Iraq's occupation.

"If it does not (hold), then despite the coalition, despite the leadership of the United States, despite the cooperation of the Soviet Union — then we shall be back in a world of anarchy punctuated by explosions of force," Hurd said.

"The clouds would have extinguished the light. We cannot allow this to happen."

Hurd also said Saddam should know that force will be used if Iraq does not pull out of Kuwait, which his troops invaded on Aug. 2.

"Day by day we must build in the minds of the Iraqis the certainty that they have to leave Kuwait — if not peacefully, then forced out by military action," Hurd said.

Monday's killing by Israeli police of 19 Arabs during a riot in Jerusalem brought international outcry and united Arab nations against Israel, a close ally of the United States. There was concern that the Israeli action might weaken Arab support for the multinational military presence in the gulf.

The U.N. Security Council is considering means of censuring Israel that would satisfy outraged Arab nations and also Israel's allies.

Oil prices rose $1.73 a barrel in New York Thursday to close at $40.43 on unfounded rumors that a Palestine terrorist group lobbed missiles into the Israeli-occupied West Bank, land taken from the Arabs in the 1967 war. Stocks in New York again fell, down 42.82 points to an 18-month low at 2,365.10.

More than 170,000 U.S. troops are deployed in the gulf region.

Deja Vu

Men's cross country returns to Illinois for second straight meet. Page 4B

Easy wins help Iowa prepare for Michigan roadtrip

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Last weekend gave Iowa volleyball coach Ruth Nelson a chance to experiment. This weekend, she will see if it paid off.

Nelson's Iowa club swept three 3-0 matches in the Hawkeye Challenge Friday through Sunday, and the easy victories gave the coach an opportunity to try some new plays and give valuable playing time to the reserves on her squad.

The experience, Nelson said, should benefit her team as it travels to the state of Michigan for weekend meetings with Michigan and Michigan State.

"I think if you had to point to one thing we're doing better it would be the emotion and the hustle and all the things that go with it," Nelson said. "The timing between the hitters and the setter was different, and we're working the middle with our fast attack much better."

"We tried to get everyone in there and to get people in the offense quickly," setter Janet Moylan explained. "It's harder to be risky when you're playing in the Big Ten. It was a good tournament because we got a lot of chances to do things we wouldn't normally do."

According to Nelson, the Hawkeyes will need to keep that offensive diversity as they return to Big Ten play this weekend.

"We tended to get into a system where we call the same play and the same rotation to the same players," Nelson said, explaining one of the causes of the team's five-match losing streak which was broken Oct. 3 against Minnesota.

To correct that habit, the Hawkeyes have been focusing on varying the speed and type sets given to their hitters. Nelson calls one of the new plays a "fast attack," and Moylan said the strategy worked well over the weekend.

"We've been working on the transition (from defense to offense)," Moylan said. "The quick set worked every time. The defense has no time to think and we've put the ball down."

"We forced a couple of them just to see how they would work. I thought that would be a good chance to try it."

The Hawkeyes have also been emphasizing serving in recent practices, and that has also paid dividends. Iowa recorded a season-high 13 aces against Minnesota Oct. 3 and totaled 22 in the three matches last weekend.

Iowa also continues to dominate the Big Ten's digging statistics as three Iowa players are ranked in the top seven in digs per game.

Senior Jenny Rees leads the league in that category, with an average of 5.19, and fellow Chicagoan Moylan is second with 4.19 digs per game. Barb Willis checks in at seventh with a 3.43 average.

The Hawkeyes, who are currently seventh in the Big Ten standings, will face tenth-place Michigan Friday and eighth-place Michigan State Sunday. Nelson said both matches are vital if they hope to move up in the league standings.

"We need to win both matches," Nelson said. "They need a win just like we do. Actually, Michigan needs a win more than Michigan State."

Brett wins title, loses credibility

George Brett, the 37 year old Kansas City Royals first baseman, became the first player in Major League Baseball history to win batting titles in three different decades.

The aging veteran, who won batting championships in 1976 and 1980, defied the critics and his weathered body by battling back from an early season slump to record a .329 average, narrowly edging the .325 slugged by the Oakland Athletics' Rickey Henderson.

Yes, Brett captured a share of baseball history with his mystifying performance. And he most likely earned himself a trip to Cooperstown and the Baseball Hall of Fame.

But in Brett's personal season of miracles, he still lost big. A batting title was won, but the respect of the fans and his peers may be gone forever.

You see, Brett practically sat out the Royals' final series with California, batting only twice. He sat out and watched, at .329, content to let his average stand while Henderson played a cat-and-mouse game, without the cat. On the final day of the season, Henderson needed to go 3-for-3 or 4-for-5 to catch Brett. He wound up 1-for-3, and a little bit bitter.

"I think he should have been playing in California," Henderson said. "I have great respect for him as a ballplayer. You have to take your hat off to him. But he did it differently than I thought he would."

"I would have played. I think you should win it out there playing. But he knew the situation and he decided to do it this way."

The wrong way. It's hard to define a champion, especially without the statistics. Brett is the champion on paper, but he's the chump in my mind. If he needs some brushing up on how true champions act, the 1941 baseball annals might be good reading.

That was the year Hall-of-Famer Ted Williams accomplished the unimaginable, besting the unthinkable hitting milestone of .400 with a .406 average.

Although it may never be reached again, the truly incredible part of Williams' record is what occurred on the last day of the '41 season.

Williams was sitting right at .400 on the final day. The pennant race was not in question, and everyone involved with the Boston Red Sox

Hawks take conference road win

The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeye field hockey team achieved a first-for-the-year last night, as they defeated their opponent despite being out penalty-cornered.

Iowa improved their record to 12-2 and 4-0 in the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference by defeating Northern Illinois on the road, 2-0. Sophomore Kristy Gleason scored her 17th and 18th goals of the year, with senior Lisa Sweeney picking up her team-leading 19th assist and junior Kerry Horgan recording her 16th and 17th assists.

Gleason scored off a penalty corner at 25:27 of the first half, and then again 2:56 later, to give Iowa a 2-0 halftime cushion. In the second half, Northern Illinois out-cornered the Hawkeyes 8-2 (13-11 for the game), but Hawkeye senior goalie Andrea Wieland held off the Huskie charge in recording four saves for her fourth shutout in five victories.

The Hawkeyes, ranked eighth in the nation, travel to No. 5 Northwestern Saturday in a game that could determine the MCFHC Champion.

Hawkeyes Melvin Foster, top, and LeRoy Smith combine to stop Michigan State flanker Brian Smolinski during Iowa's 12-7 win over the Spartans in East Lansing, Mich., Saturday.

Hawkeyes are way of familiar Badgers

By Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

For the first time since 1987 when it went 10-3-0 and defeated Wyoming 20-19 in the Holiday Bowl, the Iowa football team is 3-1.

Now Coach Hayden Fry just needs to make sure his Hawkeyes keep their feet on the ground when they face Wisconsin at 1:05 Saturday in Kinnick Stadium.

"I think they feel pretty good about themselves right now," Fry said. "The thing I have to guard against this week is that they don't feel too good about themselves. Wisconsin traditionally gives us a real tough, physical football game."

"Our players still have to learn how to handle success. You don't talk about it, you just do it. So we're very concerned about the ball game this week."

For the Hawkeyes, who upset Michigan State 12-7 last Saturday, this weekend seems easy.

But Fry said he thinks the Badgers are dangerous.

"They're running an awful lot of one-back stuff, a whole lot like Miami," Fry said. "A lot of motion, using two wide receivers sometimes four wide receivers in a game. And sometimes they'll have two tight ends."

"(Quarterback Steve Lowery) has a really strong arm. It's his first year to really learn how to read coverages. But he throws the ball well. He's dangerous because he's an ex-option quarterback so he's a very good runner and a very good scrambler. We're going to have to be very careful on our pass rush not to let him just take off."

The Hawkeyes, however, have their own stars.

Junior quarterback Matt Rodgers has passed for 803 yards so far, averaging 200 yards per game. Rodgers' top receivers so far this year have been Jon Filloon, nine catches for 135 yards, and Nick Bell, eight receptions for 141 yards.

And with the Bell-Tony Stewart tandem at running back, the Hawkeyes have an effective rush. Stewart is averaging 64 yards per game on the ground, while Bell is right behind at 62.

But it was the Iowa defensive unit — led by Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week Melvin Foster — that shut down the Spartans, never allowing them to take possession of the ball in Hawkeye territory.

"Five times we stopped those folks with a yard or a yard and a half or less to go for a first down," Fry said. "Three of them on fourth down situations, some on third down. And against Michigan State's offense, which ate up a lot of grass out in the middle of the field, when they got in a critical situation or down close to the goal line, our defense was just about as tough as any defense we've had here."

But injuries are also a problem for Fry's squad, although the coach said he thinks almost all the players will be able to play Saturday.

"We've had an awful lot of injuries to our wide receivers this year," Fry said. "(Sophomore) Danan Hughes didn't work out a play last week in practice, and

Big Ten basketball tips off in Chicago

Heathcote's Spartans consensus to repeat

By Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

CHICAGO — The Big Ten may consist of 11 teams, but as far as its basketball coaches are concerned, the 1990-91 campaign will boil down to what they label the Big Three — Michigan State, Ohio State and Indiana.

The second annual tipoff luncheon signaled the start of the season here Thursday, as 10 of the conference's coaches joined together to discuss their expectations for the conference season.

Illinois Coach Lou Henson was the only coach absent, due to the severe illness of his father, according to Big Ten assistant commissioner Mark Rudner.

As far as the coaches' outlook for the conference race, the general consensus was that Jud Heathcote's Michigan State Spartans would successfully defend their crown. And according to the Spartans' leader, being picked for the top has its pros and cons.

"I think that anytime expectations are high, there's added pressure on the players," Heathcote said. "And yet, our players would be very disappointed if they weren't picked to finish high because they have the confidence that they are going to be a very good basketball team. As coaches, we'd like to be picked 295th in the country. But in reality, there's a sense of pride with us too to be picked high."

The main reason the Spartans are favored is the return of 6-6 senior guard Steve Smith, a projected all-American and Big Ten Player of the Year. Smith led the Big Ten last year with a 20.2 scoring average.

"We'll take advantage of his size, versatility and skills," Heathcote said of Smith. "We'll use him inside as well (as at guard)."

Perhaps the most resurgent team of the conference is the Buckeyes, who will be led by Big Ten Freshman of the Year Jimmy Jackson, a 6-6 forward. Jackson averaged 18.1 points per game last season and led the conference with an 87.5 free-throw percentage.

But second-year Coach Randy Ayers' club is not a one-man team, as evidenced by the return of 6-8 senior center Perry Carter, who led the Big Ten with 7.8 rebounds per game and 6-7 junior power forward Chris Jent, who started all of Ohio State's 30 games a year ago.

"It'll be a big challenge for us to get back where we were at the end of last year," Ayers said of his team that won eight of their last 11 regular-season games and advanced to the second round of the NCAA Tournament before bowing to eventual champion UNLV, 76-65.

"I'm probably more nervous than I was last year," confessed Ayers who at 34, is the youngest coach in the Big Ten. "We're not where we want to be as a program right now, on and off the court. From a coach's standpoint, we're not satisfied with what we did last year.

Jud Heathcote

"That's one of the challenges of coaching — putting a good team on the court every year. There's no guarantee just because we have everybody coming back that we're going to be successful this year. We have to go out and make it happen."

"I think you have to really look at Michigan State because of Jud Heathcote and Steve Smith," Ayers said of his pick for the favorite in the Big Ten. "I think Smith's the premiere player in the conference."

Rounding out the top dogs in the conference are Bob Knight's Indiana Hoosiers, who are expected to show a vast improvement.

Penn State's Parkhill happy with affiliation

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

CHICAGO — For Penn State basketball coach Bruce Parkhill, the school's admission into the Big Ten Conference was sudden and unexpected. But in the end, it fit perfectly with the coach's plans.

"I was shocked at how quickly it happened and how it happened," Parkhill said. "From a personal point of view, I had mixed feelings because we've really worked hard to get Penn State where we are."

"But objectively, in the long run it will be the best thing for Penn State basketball."

During his eight-year tenure at the school, Parkhill has built the Nittany Lions into an Atlantic Ten Conference contender. Penn State finished 5-22 in his first season, 1983-84, but Parkhill's teams have improved steadily since then.

In the last two years, the Nittany Lions have recorded consecutive 20-victory campaigns, including a school-record 25 wins last season. Parkhill's club finished second in the Atlantic-10 last year and took third in the postseason National Invitational Tournament.

The future looks even brighter for Penn State basketball, as the Nittany Lions return four starters and 14 lettermen from last year's record-breaking team, including leading scorer and all-conference center Ed Fogel.

The success of the basketball program has not gone unnoticed. Penn State, a school known nationally primarily as a football powerhouse, will be building a new basketball arena with the help of a $33 million grant from the state of Pennsylvania.

Add the increased television exposure and other recruiting advantages of playing in the Big Ten to an improving program and new modern facility, and it's not difficult to understand why Parkhill is excited and optimistic about joining the conference.

"I think the Big Ten is the best league in the country year in and year out," Parkhill said. "Once we're in place in the Big Ten and the arena is built, (the move) will be a great thing."

The Nittany Lions will begin competing for the Big Ten title in 1993. Until then, the school will play in the Atlantic-10 this year and then become an independent for two years.

During that three-year period, Parkhill said scheduling Big Ten teams was important to prepare his team for the transition into the conference. The Nittany Lions will play host to Illinois Dec. 5 in their then he made two really key catches in the ball game.

 "Jon Filloon, it's just been hit and miss with Jon. He's not even going to play this week. Then we have other guys that are wounded that are going to be able to play. (The doctors) have (had) to hold them out so the swelling can go down in their knees or ankles or shoulders or neck."

 "Something else that might work against the Iowa squad is the presence of the Wisconsin coaches.
 Head coach Barry Alvarez and assistant coaches Dan McCarney and Bernie Wyatt were all assistants to Fry at Iowa. Alvarez took the job at Wisconsin via Notre Dame and hired the other two off of Fry's staff.

 But despite their knowledge of the Iowa program, Fry said the Badgers should stick to basics.
 "They have our playbooks and our audible system, they know what we like to feature in certain situations defensively and offensively," Fry said. "But they've been around me a long time, they know that I'm the kind of guy, I'll try to take advantage of that. Sometimes knowledge can be a detriment in a lot of situations.

 "If they don't come in here and just try to play good sound hard-nosed football, we're going to burn them."

organization felt that Williams should sit out the doubleheader, ensuring his 400 average.
 But Williams would hear nothing of the sort. If he was going to hit over .400, he would do it through the entire season. There were two games left and Williams penciled his name onto the line-up cards.

 At day's end, Williams raise his average to .406, with a 6-for-8 hitting display. He just as easily could have lost it. But that's what champions are made of.
 And this is what George is made of:

"The talk shows, newspapers, TV media were suggesting I might be over the hill," Brett said. "You hear the same thing every day, you start to believe it. Somebody tells you every day that you're ugly, I'm going to start believing I'm ugly.
 "Eighty games and I'm still hitting .240. To have a second half like I did — it's been a good lesson for me. A lot of people gave up on me, and I didn't give up."

 Well, not in his mind. It could be a lonely trip to Cooperstown.

only contest against a Big Ten opponent this season.
 "We need to recruit the highest caliber of team as possible," Parkhill said, "and, even as an independent, we need to play as many teams as we can from the Big Ten. It's good to have them as opponents to know them a little bit better.
 "As far as recruiting, I think it's going to be an attractive situation for kids who want to play in the Big Ten."
 But the transition won't come without a price to the East Coast school. Penn State will likely be forced to drop several of their traditional geographic rivals in order to join the Big Ten.

 "There are some rivalries we value," Parkhill said. "We may be able to salvage some of them through a tournament. But when you go through a significant change, sometimes you have to bite the bullet a little bit."
 But Parkhill realizes that, in the end, becoming a Big Ten school will help him to make Penn State a national power.
 "Right now we're in an interim period and having won 45 games in the last two years, you don't want to be in that," Parkhill said. "But down the road, it will be the best thing for Penn State."

of years), Purdue, Illinois, Michigan and Minnesota find themselves in the untraditional roles of finishing in the middle.
 "When you lose Stephen Scheffler and Tony Jones, who's going to replace them?" Boilermaker Coach Gene Keady asked about his center that averaged 16.8 ppg and guard who scored 14.6 ppg. "We're going to miss Tony's defense because he put pressure on the ball. Leadership, ball pressure and defense are my three biggest concerns."
 Keady added that Purdue's success last season (22-8 overall, 13-5 Big Ten), would deter his team's focus for the upcoming season.
 "You're always less motivated when you win big," he said.
 For the first time in several years, the Wolverines, Fighting Illini and Golden Gophers are not expected to contend for the title.
 Michigan will try to recover from the losses of forwards Sean Higgins and Terry Mills, center Loy Vaught and guard Rumeal Robinson, all of whom went to the NBA.

 The Illini also lost guard Kendall Gill and center Marcus Liberty to the NBA draft, as well as the services of Big Ten Defensive Player of the Year Stephen Bardo. And Minnesota will be rebuilding this year as well, according to Coach Clem Haskins.
 "We lost two outstanding players in (four-year starters) Willie Burton and Richard Coffey," Haskins said. "It's a new group coming in."
 Despite the overall feeling that the Spartans will win the conference crown again, some coaches said they knew what it would take to be the cream of the crop in 1990.
 "Our goal is to win all of our home games and half of the road games," Keady said. "If you win 13 or 14 games, you're in the race."
 "Last year, I said that 13-5 would get us a tie and low and behold, we were 15-3," Heathcote said. "So I'm not going to change my philosophy."

ment from last season's 8-10 conference record and first-round exit from the NCAA Tourney.
 Knight is counting on big seasons from what many consider to be the best forward tandem in the league — 6-9 junior Eric Anderson and 6-6 sophomore Calbert Cheaney. Anderson was the team's leading rebounder while Cheaney was tops on the Hoosiers in scoring as a freshman.
 "Anderson has to learn to play hard and practice hard," Knight said. "I have not been particularly satisfied with his approach to basketball and I hope this year that I will be. Cheaney, I couldn't ask for any more in terms of his desire to develop his abilities."
 Indiana also boasts the Big Ten's top recruit in 6-3, 180 pound guard Damon Bailey, the state's only four-time all-State selection and a preseason second-team all-conference pick. However, Knight refuses to let the cat out of the bag when it comes to Bailey's ability.

 "I don't know what to expect from him because I haven't seen him play (in a game this year)," Knight said. "We brought him here as a student and everybody has to understand that when you play a kid like that, that is given a disproportionate amount of attention in comparison to other players, that there's a point where he has to become a student and I'll see that that happens."
 Like Ayers, Knight, who's son Patrick is another Hoosier recruit, feels the Spartans are the legitimate preseason favorites in the conference.
 "I really like Michigan State and the way they put their team together last year. I've always thought Steve Smith was a talented player. He might very well be the best player in the country."
 As for the remaining seven teams (Penn State does not begin conference competition for another couple of years), Purdue, Illinois, Michigan and Minnesota find themselves in the untraditional roles of finishing in the middle.

 "When you lose Stephen Scheffler and Tony Jones, who's going to replace them?" Boilermaker Coach Gene Keady asked about his center that averaged 16.8 ppg and guard who scored 14.6 ppg. Cincinnati's Wyche bailed out by fans

CINCINNATI — Bengals fans are chipping in to help coach Sam Wyche pay the estimated $27,500 fine imposed by the NFL for his refusal to let a female writer into the team's locker room.
 It's been a lively topic on radio talk shows, and now a window replacement company that uses Wyche as a spokesman has placed an ad in Cincinnati's two daily newspapers asking the public to contribute to the "Sam Wyche Fine Fund."

Thursday and three other coaches were rehired.
 Dobson replaces Frank Funk, who was let go by Manager John Wathan at the end of the season. The Royals have not named a replacement for batting coach John Mayberry, who also was fired.
 An announcement Thursday by Wathan and Herk Robinson, the Royals' new general manager, said third base coach Adrian Garrett, first base coach Bob Schaefer and bullpen coach Glenn Ezell would return. The returning coaches and Dobson were given one-year contracts.
 "We feel Dobson is one of the best pitching coaches in baseball, and we are happy the Padres allowed him to look into other job opportunities," Wathan said. "We are pleased the Royals are his top choice."

Coach steps down for game
 REDFIELD, Iowa — A high school football coach accused of abusing his players will voluntarily sit out his team's next game, the school said.
 Redfield Dexfield school officials said they will not discipline Coach Paul Toppliff, but they said he has agreed to turn over the coaching duties to his assistants for Friday night's game with Van Meter.
 "Coach Toppliff will resume all head coaching duties on Monday, Oct. 15," Dexfield Superintendent Robert Templeton said.
 Parents and players had complained earlier in the week that Toppliff was abusive after the team lost its last game. Players said Toppliff prohibited them from attending some homecoming activities, including the homecoming coronation at halftime of Friday's game.
 Toppliff is in his fourth season at Redfield. He also coaches girls softball and teaches physical education.

 Toppliff has been involved in controversy before. While coaching at Evely in 1970, he circulated reports that he moonlighted as a kick return specialist for the Miami Dolphins. After the Des Moines Register did a profile on him, Toppliff admitted he had made up the story and had no connection with the Dolphins.

Briefs

"It's just an idea I had after watching the game and seeing the controversy," said Mike Donovan, general manager of Nu Sash's Cincinnati office.
 "We're big fans of Sam and wanted to show our support. We think Sam made a stance and we ought to support him."
 Thursday was the first day the two-inch by two-column ad appeared in The Cincinnati Enquirer and The Cincinnati Post.
 "If you're a Bengals fan, show you care," the ad said.
 "We've already gotten a few calls," Donovan said. "A few didn't like the idea, but several did."
 Donovan said he had not talked with Wyche about the ad, but was coordinating the collection with someone in Wyche's office.

Clemens ejection fuels controversy

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Roger Clemens' ejection set up another big dispute with umpires Thursday and even sparked debate in Congress, where a representative from Massachusetts called Terry Cooney "looney."

One day after Clemens became the first active player to be tossed from a playoff game for arguing, the issue of an umpire's authority — already a hot topic this season — heated up even more.

"The attitude is what needs to be changed. This situation is a great example of how stupid it is to throw out a player for what Clemens did," Philadelphia Phillies president Bill Giles said. "I sure hope in the negotiations there's some sort of written clause or understanding that the players are what the fans come to see, not the umpires."

Baseball already was prepared for a major fight at the end of the season when the umpires' contract expires. Union president Richie Phillips agreed Thursday that there are several issues to talk about, including the possibility of adding a fifth umpire to each crew, but said authority is not one of them.

"That's certainly not a point that should come up in the collective bargaining agreement. Giles is so far off base when he says something like that, it's absurd," Phillips said. "The umpires don't think for one second that the fans come to see umpires umpire. But when Giles talks about putting something in writing, there IS something in writing — the official baseball rules. And those say a player cannot be abusive to an umpire."

Clemens said he did not verbally assault Cooney in Game 4 of the American League playoffs, although anyone with any degree of lip-reading proficiency might not agree. Still to be sorted out is exactly what happened.

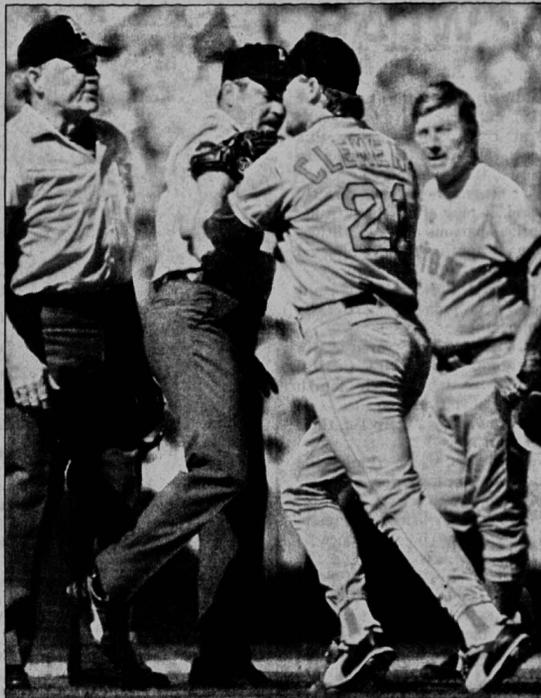

In Washington, where Operation Desert Shield and the recession are the major topics, Massachusetts Rep. Silvio Conte brought the Clemens controversy to the House floor. Conte wasn't happy that Boston got swept by Oakland and was especially unhappy with the way Cooney treated the Red Sox pitching star.

Cooney "ran against the written rule of 'let 'em play' when Roger Clemens said 'read my lips' from the mound," Conte said.

The umpire acted, "without warning, without the understanding Clemens was caught up in the heat of battle," Conte said. "Terry 'Looney' Cooney — read my lips!"

American League president Bobby Brown, who was at the game, will review tapes and read Cooney's report of the incident before deciding whether Clemens should be fined or suspended.

Brown and baseball commissioner Fay Vincent left Oakland early Thursday and were unavailable for comment. After being ejected, Clemens shoved umpire crew chief Jim Evans while trying to get at Cooney. Evans, however, did not seem to think Clemens should be punished for that part of it. "You have to decide at the time what the intent was," Evans said.

"It was an aggressive action on his part, but I don't consider that it was directed at me personally."

Clemens and Boston reserve Marty Barrett were ejected during the second-inning incident, which came with the Red Sox trailing 1-0. Oakland eventually won 3-1 and advanced to the World Series

Hawkeyes to face Nebraska, Illinois

By Scott Garringer
The Daily Iowan

Coach Larry Wieczorek and the Iowa men's cross country team will experience a deep sense of déjà vu this weekend.

Two weeks ago, the Hawkeyes placed fourth at Illinois' Savoy Golf Course at the Central Collegiate/Illinois Invitational and will return Saturday to take on national powers Illinois and Nebraska.

M.C.C.

Illinois took second to Wisconsin in the same meet and boasts some standout individuals. Nebraska, eighth at the NCAA meet last year, runs a young squad that looks to be a contender again this year.

Running the same course two meets in a row may seem monotonous, but Wieczorek sees it as a definite advantage.

"Having run Savoy recently, it will be fresh in our minds, so it will be an advantage in that regard," Wieczorek said. "Running the same course will give us the chance to achieve some goals we set two weeks ago and didn't reach."

The Illini boast three top individuals to test the Iowa squad. Len Sitko, Mark Scheirer, and Troy Maddux all finished in the top ten in the Central Collegiate Meet. According to Wieczorek, Sitko, who placed first, is the one to watch.

"Sitko is a very strong runner and with him in the lineup, I think Illinois is one of the top 10-15 teams in the nation," said Wieczorek.

Expected to keep pace with Sitko are Nebraska's Joe Kirby and Iowa's Kevin Herd. Herd was 20 seconds behind Sitko in their last meeting, and sees an opportunity this time.

"I think I'll be able to stay with them for a while," said the sophomore from Aurora, Colo. "I want to be there at the end when the final move is made."

A familiar theme running through the season is the development of a fourth and fifth runner to complement Herd and seniors David Brown and L.J. Albrecht. Again this would seem to be an important question. Hopefully, says Wieczorek, it will be answered this week.

"Last meet we set goals of having three men under 25:00 and the other two under 26:00," Wieczorek said. "Kevin and David were under 25 minutes and L.J. was at 25:02, so basically that goal was achieved."

"But our next two runners didn't run as well as hoped for. Hopefully, we can make up for that this time."

Patriots players attracting more trouble

By Howard Ulman
The Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — With Patriot-bashing widespread even before two players were hurt in a fight outside a nightclub, New England general manager Patrick Sullivan said they should know enough to avoid being provoked.

Starting wide receivers Hart Lee Dykes and Irving Fryar were injured early Wednesday outside the Club Shalimar in Providence, R.I. Fryar's attorney, Peter DiBiase, said a witness told police that before the fight someone was "needling Dykes about how poorly the team was doing."

The Patriots are 1-4. They also are being investigated by an NFL special counsel after a female reporter alleged she was sexually harassed by four or five New England players on Sept. 17.

"When a team is in a position that we're in ... under a lot of national scrutiny about the behavior of the team," Sullivan said Thursday,

"people have to have enough sense not to be involved in situations where they could be compromised."

"The problem is really exacerbated today because players go out on the street and people are not very kind to the situation right now," he added. Players "are going to be put in situations when they're out in the public, whether they're out at six o'clock at night or whether they're at the grocery store in the afternoon or whether they're out at one in the morning and they need to understand that and they need to be able to face that."

"There was also the situation where guys were putting their careers on the line for what? So that they can win an argument in a bar?"

Capt. Bernard Gannon said Thursday Dykes probably was hit with a crutch, but that hasn't been confirmed. He said it was "more than likely" someone would be charged in the assault, although no suspects had been taken into custody. Sullivan said he would talk to Fryar and Dykes. He said any fines levied by the team would not be announced.

But he noted that his players were the people who were attacked. Fryar, 28, needed eight stitches to close a gash on the back of his head. Dykes, 24, was hospitalized for an eye injury and released Thursday.

Both are expected to play in the team's next game next Thursday at Miami. The Patriots are idle Sunday.

"One witness said Irving had gotten hit on the back of the head with a baseball bat," Sullivan said. Fryar told police he saw Dykes on the ground being beaten, ran to his car, grabbed a handgun, put it in his boot and returned to the scene.

The police report said he pointed the gun at people who "scattered and fled in all directions."

Fryar said that was not true. He was charged with carrying a handgun without a permit. He had a permit to carry the 9mm Smith & Wesson in Massachusetts, but not in Rhode Island.

Fryar was released on $10,000 personal recognizance after a court appearance Wednesday and told to appear in court on Dec. 12 for another hearing. He faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison if convicted of the felony, said Maj. Milton Wilson.

"One of the stranger aspects of NFL players is that a lot of guys have guns," Sullivan said. "A lot of guys feel they need guns because of the personal protection issue and the fact that they do feel challenged a lot" by the public.

He said he shares coach Rod Rust's desire to stay out of players' personal lives as long as they don't hurt the team.

"But," Sullivan said, "I think we need to emphasize with the team that they're in a business in which the actions that take place in their personal lives can affect anybody on the team."

On the same day Dykes was leaving the hospital, NFL counsel Philip Heymann was scheduled to question 16 or 17 players, the only players he hadn't talked with, about the sexual harassment claim of Boston Herald reporter Lisa Olson, Sullivan added.

All the players had Thursday off from preparing to turn their season around with a win in Miami. Sullivan said a growing national image of the Patriots as a laughingstock of the NFL "bothers me a lot. I'm not immune from that type of thing."

"Given the set of circumstances that exist here, I'd be hard-pressed to be able to argue with people that we didn't deserve that type of criticism."

Lynn leaves Vikings for WLAF

By Mike Nadel
The Associated Press

MINNETONKA, Minn. — Mike Lynn has controlled almost every aspect of the Minnesota Vikings for the last six years, making him perhaps the NFL's most powerful general manager. So when he leaves soon to run the NFL's new international spring league, it would seem to signal a complete restructuring of the Vikings.

But Lynn said Thursday he would do everything within his considerable power to ensure a smooth transition and that includes the status of coach Jerry Burns, whom Lynn promised would be retained as his successor.

Lynn, who also holds the title of executive vice president and who controls two-thirds of the Vikings' voting stock, told a news conference he wasn't sure exactly when he would leave Minnesota to concentrate on the World League of American Football.

It was announced Wednesday that Lynn would replace Tex Schramm as WLAF president. Schramm, long-time Dallas Cowboys president and general manager, was fired Tuesday.

"I'm not going to put a timetable on anything here," Lynn said. "I would like to move as rapidly as possible to have a smooth transition and unravel everything that needs to be unraveled. I would like for that to occur very quickly. That's my goal."

"I've never been through anything like this before. And I really don't know how long it's going to take. The same question was asked by various members of the board of the World League and that's exactly the way I answered it. I really don't know."

Lynn, whose Minnesota contract expires Dec. 31, said he has the authority to hire his successor immediately.

"But I don't want to do that," he said. "I think that would upset a number of people."

Lynn has been the central figure in a five-year power struggle over control of the team. He has been with the Vikings since 1974 and was named GM the next year. But it wasn't until 1984, when he maneuvered to force team founder Max Winter out of the picture, that he gained control.

Carl Pohlad, a Minneapolis banker and owner of the Minnesota Twins baseball team, and Minneapolis businessman Irwin Jacobs have bought Winter's one-third voting stock. They also own more than half of the non-voting stock. They have been trying to take control of the team and have Lynn ousted, but Lynn is backed by owners of the other two-thirds, John Sko-glund and the Bill Boyer estate.

Lynn said he hoped his exit would lead to settlement of the ownership struggle, a sentiment echoed by team president Wheelock Whitney, a Lynn ally.

"My hope is that Mike's moving on would make it possible to get some kind of peaceful resolution of the ownership issues that have come up," Whitney said. "But, of course,

I don't know that."

Said Jerry Simon, the attorney for Pohlad and Jacobs: "It's too soon to tell at this point whether this change will make it possible to dispose of the litigation."

"The litigation is not directly affected. It may affect the attitude of various persons about the litigation, as it appears to have affected Mr. Whitney."

Lynn said the most important thing was keeping the heart of the team together.

The Vikings were favored to win their second straight NFC Central title and to make their fourth straight playoff appearance this season. Instead, they are 1-4, their worst start since 1967.

Nevertheless, Lynn thinks the foundation is there for a Super Bowl team.

"When you go before the team, and one of the biggest concerns was that my successor would fire the head coach, that's the type of thing I'm going to avoid," said Lynn, who met with the players Thursday morning.

"I told the team that it isn't going to happen. If that's the case, if that could happen, then I'm not going to leave. There's not going to be any shakeup once I leave."

Asked how he could possibly guarantee that a new general manager wouldn't fire Burns and make mass changes, Lynn said, "I can't guarantee that that's not going to happen. But in my own mind I would be satisfied that it wasn't going to happen."

"I think it would be very, very disruptive for my successor to terminate Jerry Burns.

"I think they're a team that can win it and continue to win it for years to come. The important thing is that whoever succeeds me keeps this team together."

Lynn said his leaving had nothing to do with the Vikings' poor start, the team's 8-8 record since last year's trade for Herschel Walker, the absence of any high draft choices until 1993 because of that trade, or the ownership battle.

"I'm not bailing out. It had nothing to do with the team at all," Lynn said. "My first love is the Minnesota Vikings. My second love is the expansion of American football internationally. I've been running my first love for 17 years and have talked about the possibility of changing and doing something new and different. Seventeen years is a long time. I happen to have the longest tenure of any general manager."

McCarver nabs Piniella

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Lou Piniella made the wrong move and Tim McCarver was right on top of it in Game 5 of the National League playoffs.

It happened in the bottom of the eighth inning Wednesday night, when Piniella brought in pitcher Scott Scudder and catcher Jeff Reed. The Cincinnati manager made the change straight up, putting Reed in the No. 7 spot in the batting order and Scudder at No. 9. Reed was scheduled to be the fifth hitter in the ninth, but would have been the seventh hitter with the flip.

"Instead of using a pinch-hitter for him, you should put Reed in the nine hole and Scudder in the seven hole," McCarver said on the CBS broadcast. "But he didn't do that. Reed's the only other catcher that Lou Piniella has. You have a left-hander in the bullpen. What are you going to do if they bring a left-hander in?"

Reed grounded into a game-ending double play with the bases loaded. "Tim, you called it," play-by-play man Jack Buck said.

"You got to think ahead," McCarver said.

Jim picks On The Line and we feel fine

The Daily Iowan

It's another okay week of OTL and we all feel fine as the sparsely-drawn and middle of the road caricature Jim, of Jim's Journal cartoon fame, joins us to help the sparsely successful sports staff maybe nail a few this time out.

Jim is the property of Scott Dikkers, a freelance cartoonist based in Madison, Wis., — home of the lowly BAD-gers. Jim was chosen because he represents the typical cheese-head, while appealing to the cosmopolitan Iowan taste. Jim appears daily in the DI.

Jim, in characteristic melancholy fashion, summed up the On The Line experience. "Today the DI asked me to be the guest picker, and I don't know anything about football," Jim said placidly. "So, I had some fun picking some random numbers," he added pensively.

Jim proved himself right — he knows nothing about football. But, oh well, Jim is a cartoon character, he usually lines the inside of a bird cage by the end of the day, or for the environmentally conscious, is recycled. Our staff pickers, on the other hand, have thus far escaped such fate.

Let us begin with Jamie "Football Schmootball" Butters, our managing editor. He once again is using that time-tested formula — "the home team usually has some kind of advantage because of all the cheering and stuff" — to make his picks. That or he's just lazy. He claims to be more fond of hallucinogens than football forecasting anyway.

As a note of contrast, Jim predicted most of the games would end in a tie. A bold move, but if he's right, we'll crown him genius superior of the universe or something.

Staff ranking should be shaken up quite a bit this week, so place your bets wisely. The good money is on Sports Editor Erica "Dark Star" Weiland, she's the boss, she's gotta win sometime.

There were 638 participants in this week's OTL, a definite season record, and the sports dudes will be spending the weekend researching past years for the all-time record. We are elated that so many of you decided to play, it makes us feel really warm inside, and... Hey! Wait a minute. Uh oh. There weren't 638 of you that played — more like 400 and some.

For the winner, a $25 gift certificate from Eby's Athletic Company awaits. Maybe a Butkus Buddy will win and get Dick a monogrammed jock strap.

Film depicts post-war Japan

By Kimberly Chun
The Daily Iowan

Ironically, two films with the title "Black Rain" were released last year within a few months of each other — one by acclaimed Japanese director Shohei Imamura, the other by ex-Chanel commercial hack Ridley Scott. The Hollywood "Black Rain" looked sleek and rang dumb, a Michael Douglas action vehicle in which Scott's inclination toward maximum aesthetic effect only served to mask a xenophobic take on Japanese culture. Imamura, however, deals in an intrinsically Japanese manner with another clash between America and Japan — literally and devastatingly, with the bombing of Hiroshima.

make their way through the city's ruins, they are exposed to radiation fallout, embodied in the condensation that mixed with radioactive ash to form "black rain." In a primarily documentary style and with a luminous stock reminiscent of the period's films, Imamura depicts the pivotal moments after the explosion in the scattershot way that only memory can be visualized. Imamura withdrew the documentary footage he considered using because it was "cleaned up and prettified" and used blast-burnt scenes of Hiroshima instead with explicit (rather than sensationalistic) horror.

However, Imamura's primary interests lie in the bomb's lingering effects, the cultural aftershock, the quiet and slow deaths of the survivors who gradually succumb to radiation sickness, and the society that both whitewashes the event in deference to the occupying forces and scapegoats the hibakusha in fear of the bomb's legacy.

In spite of her uncle's medical documents certifying her health — and his power as a landowner — Yasuko is rejected by her fiancé and their families because of her exposure to the black rain. The villagers ostracize those tainted by the bomb in the same way they deny the real upheaval in Japanese traditional society, generated with the blast and reverberating over decades of American occupation and influence.

In spite of the position of Yasuko's family as "respectable," upper-middle-class landowners, they cannot buy nor inveigle themselves a marriage that would represent societal acceptance. They are locked into a black and white world that permits no other color of hope, and a frame that is as dignifying and entrapping as any family drama director Yasujiro Ozu has created.

Yasuko finally falls into empathy and love with a shell-shocked, lower-class sculptor who expresses his war experience in primitive idols resembling the charred victims of the bomb and in throwing himself beneath the wheels of passing cars and trucks. Those who have experienced the destruction of war form a "community bound by the bomb," irrespective of the traditional Japanese class structures. Imamura, ironically, appears to capture the "essence" of the Japanese as their tradition is ruptured by foreign encroachment. The subtlety and reverence in his direction lie only partly in the subject of nuclear destruction — rather, perhaps, it befits a people who faced this century's global nightmare and tried to survive.

"Black Rain" will be shown at the Bijou Friday at 9 p.m. and Sunday at 6:45 p.m.

At the Bijou

Imamura's films find their impetus in the conflicts within the "real" Japanese culture. His interests in anthropology and documentary filmmaking contrast with his search for the "essence" of Japanese character. Mythology and folk tale complement Imamura's focus on the "messy, really human, unsettling" aspects of Japanese culture; his films ordinarily brim with bawdy, amoral and darkly comic characters sprung full-flung from the lower classes, complete with some of the most gritty and indomitable portrayals of women in Japanese film.

In "Black Rain," however, Imamura brings his outrageous characterizations down to a low simmer — the subject matter proves, perhaps, outrageous enough in itself. The film revolves around a family of hibakusha (bomb survivors) — Yasuko, a young girl on the brink of marriage, and her aunt and uncle. Caught near Hiroshima after the explosion and fire and forced to

MSU-Michigan game takes on added weight

By John Nelson
The Associated Press

Michigan State coach George Perles wants his Spartans to understand that each day brings a new challenge — an old rival, maybe, but a new challenge.

Michigan State (1-2-1) travels to Ann Arbor to meet No. 1 Michigan (3-1) on Saturday in a game with renewed importance.

The Wolverines are playing for a Rose Bowl bid and possible national championship. Failing to live up to high expectations, the Spartans fell out of the rankings with losses to Notre Dame and Iowa, and now are struggling to stay in the Big Ten chase.

"The first thing we have to do is go back to basics and fundamentals," Perles said. "You have to make sure you're doing those things well and then just get into your game plan. . . understanding that every Saturday is a new challenge."

Michigan State's biggest challenge may be to stop the running of Jon Vaughn, who has 672 yards and six touchdowns and averages 168.8 yards per game.

Michigan averages 481 yards per game, 304 of them on the ground. The Spartans average 376 yards in total offense, 202 on the ground.

"Our line has had some time together," Wolverines blocking back Jarrod Bunch said. "That extra year is what's made them so good right now. But anytime we play Michigan State it's always been a hard-hitting game. I think it's going to be a real tough game Saturday."

Tico Duckett has rushed for 489 yards and two touchdowns for Michigan State.

The Wolverines won their last national title in 1948. Michigan is trying to become the first team to win three straight Big Ten titles outright and the first to play in three straight Rose Bowl games since the Wolverines did it after the 1977, '78 and '79 seasons.

NBA to expand international boundaries

By Rob Gloster
The Associated Press

BARCELONA, Spain — The NBA champion will face top teams from other nations in a world club championship that could begin as early as 1993, NBA commissioner David Stern and international officials said Thursday.

The tournament, which would be held during the NBA preseason, eventually could include up to 16 teams that have won national titles in Europe, South America, Australia and the United States.

Stern and Boris Stankovic, head of the international basketball association (FIBA), said the tournament could grow out of the four-nation McDonald's Open.

"I think in 1993 you will see the beginning of expansion of the McDonald's Open to where it would develop into the world championship of clubs," Stern said at a news conference.

The details of such a championship have not yet been worked out, but Stankovic said he hopes it could begin in 1993 — the year after NBA players are eligible for the first time to play in the Olympics.

"We are still discussing the date, but we will try to do everything possible to start that year," Stankovic said. "Before that is too early, and after that is too late."

The club tournaments now involving 28 European nations could be used as qualifying events for the world club championships, Stankovic said, and similar qualifying tournaments could be held in other countries.

Stern said the international role of the NBA will grow, with more preseason games outside the United States and the possibility of more regular-season games on foreign soil as well.

The Phoenix Suns and Utah Jazz will open this season with two games in Japan, making the NBA the first major American sports league to play regular-season games overseas.

"It is our expectation that, certainly following the Olympics, we will have exhibition games in several countries including Europe," Stern said.

Polls, bowls meaningless to a country boy

"Polls!" Iowa football coach Hayden Fry asked. "You know I'm an old country boy. When I think of polls, I think of fishing, (or) two poles instead of one, that's something a kicker's supposed to kick a field goal or extra point between. I think of telephone lines being connected up to them, think of politicians. I think a lot of things about poles but certainly not a ranking."

Bowled over

Fry on representatives from the Copper, Florida Citrus, Independence and Sun bowls visiting Kinnick Stadium this weekend: "All coaches, we sound like a chamber of commerce when we talk about the other team about the opponents, how good they are. And then we sound like we're reading from a script when we try to downplay the bowl games. The only accurate statement I can make is it's just way too early."

"I guess they eat good food and visit with nice people on their trip. They get to escape their hometown environment, the bullets are flying, business is not going good, so they take a trip up here to the Midwest and see how the corn's coming along and if the leaves are changing color."

"I could care less whether I see them or not. They're all real nice people but when I want to see them is when we get into the ninth or 10th game of the season. It's a tribute that they'd come up here but it doesn't mean a thing except they've got to turn in an expense report."

The real reason

Fry about why the Hawkeyes played Miami: "Frankly, we wanted to start recruiting in Florida. We thought by playing against Miami, that will give us an opportunity to go down there and for them to come up here. And maybe that would get us the recognition and exposure in Florida that we need to recruit, because a lot of people in Florida, unless they're retired, don't know where Iowa is located."

Class act

Iowa linebacker Melvin Foster on the Miami fans at the Orange Bowl: "The fans, like when we were walking in and having ice thrown on us, that's no class. I don't think our fans back in Iowa would treat the Hurricanes that way. For us to be treated in that sense, that was no class."

"I was wondering why didn't they have campus security or some kind of security to stop that from happening. But those are petty things. As far as the big intimidation factor of the Orange Bowl and all that, that wasn't there. We weren't (intimidated) by Miami."

Bombs away

Fry about Miami: "We might play well in this ballgame and still get blown out of the tub by these people."

A little runaway

Fry on Matt Rodgers being an option quarterback: "He's improving on his running now. Used to be, he would throw the ball regardless. Now then, he's taking the option to run and he's a good runner. And he's kind of surprised, he's happy with himself that he's found out that he can run the ball."

"You know, I've been in his ear for two years — if you've got an opportunity to run the ball rather than throw it in a crowd, for gosh sakes, run the ball. He's learning that now and he's taking pride in it."

All-pro intimidation

Fry about Miami's intimidation tactics: "They remind me of the way the Bears were about four years ago when they just dominated professional football. Walking 11 guys up on the line of scrimmage and daring you to throw the ball."

"And if you ran, they had eight guys in on the tackle and then they'd stand and look at you and all that stuff. A lot teams have gone into the Orange Bowl, and they've lost before the opening kickoff."

Not what she used to be

Foster on Miami's domination of teams: "The Miami of old, when I used to watch them on television, used to intimidate people, used to shut people down, the Oklahomas, the Nebraskas, all those teams. I don't know why they weren't able to do that to us."

Circus time

Fry on the Miami announcer: "I couldn't believe they let that P.A. announcer make all that noise every time we go into the huddle. That's the loudest microphone and amplifier deal I've ever heard in my life."

"I'll tell you, that's one week when they do come up here I'm not going to be a nice guy and tell our fans — like I normally do — 'Don't holler and yell.'"

All the right moves

Foster on Miami's offense: "They got really all their points, they didn't do like Big Ten — an Ohio State or Michigan State: Line up on the 10 yard line on the opposite side and drive. They got down there on big plays."

"That hurt us (against Miami), and that hurt us against Iowa State. We've got to eliminate the big plays. Our motto in the past used to be: Bend but don't break. We've got to buckle down and stop breaking."

Taking a dive

Foster about Miami quarterback Craig Erickson: "We as the defense . . . weren't able to get a quarterback sack. Several times I got close to him; it's just that he gets rid of the ball. He won't take a sack. Good quarterbacks are like that."

"I've seen the BYU quarterback (Ty Detmer), and I like him a lot better. Due to the fact that he's more spunkier, he'll take a lick and he'll keep ticking. Everytime we got a chance to hit (Erickson), he took a dive. If you want to last the whole season, take that dive. But we bust our behinds so hard to try to get there, and he takes a dive, that kind of frustrates the defense."

Talking the talk

Foster on Miami's talking at their opponents: "The talking was almost nil at the end of the game, just the wide receivers. For some reason that's their style, they love to do it. The rest of the people they hushed up. . . . Some of the guys do have class on their team."

Crazy little something

Fry on how to beat Michigan State: "Our guys have played extremely hard, and we've kept mistakes to a minimum (in the past). We've had to gamble normally with our kicking game. They normally block at least one punt. We've had to quick kick certain years, so they didn't get the great punt rush or the great punt return."

"About the only way we've only scored against Michigan State down close is with some crazy something they've never seen before. We've always had to do something unusual against Michigan State to move the ball with any consistency."

Put your left foot in . . .

Fry on his team doing the hokey-pokey in the locker room after beating Michigan State: "It's been a long, long time since we've done the hokey-pokey in the dressing room. We don't do it after every win, only after special ones. This was a nationally-ranked team that deserved to be undefeated coming into this game."

Alter ego

Foster on his interception and 15-yard return against the Spartans: "The ball was tipped by one of my teammates (Jeff Nelson) at the line, and I was fortunate to be in the right place at the right time. I tried to act like (Iowa running back) Nick Bell and ran with the ball."

Spartan sweet home

Iowa kicker Jeff Skillett about kicking two field goals this year at Michigan State after a controversial call at Spartan Stadium in 1988:

Hawkeye Profile: Tony Stewart

Opportunity breeds success for Stewart

By Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

Opportunity has been knocking at Tony Stewart's door for a long time. And fortunately for the Hawkeye tailback, it hasn't stopped.

Stewart, the sixth leading rusher in Iowa history, is perhaps best known for becoming the first sophomore in the school's history to rush for over 1,000 yards in a season when he ran for 1,036 yards on 215 carries and eight touchdowns two years ago.

And this week versus Wisconsin, the 6-foot-1 inch, 209-pound senior has the opportunity to reach the 2,000-yard milestone for his career. He only needs 27 more yards to achieve that goal.

"I didn't realize how close I was," Stewart said of the 2,000 mark. "It would be nice to break 2,000, but right now I'm just wanting to get out there and help our team win, whether it be by catching the ball, running the ball or blocking."

Stewart did all that and more at Union High School in Union, N.J., rushing for 1,715 yards and 29 touchdowns for the undefeated state-champion team.

He was also the state's leading scorer with 211 points, which included Stewart doubling as running back and kicker. He hit on 32 out of 34 extra points and added a 41-yard field goal.

Stewart was named all-American by USA Today, Parade, Bally, and Street & Smith's, as well as New Jersey's Player of the Year.

But after all the glory of his high school career, Stewart did an about-face — by announcing that he was through playing the sport of football.

"Being so young, you really don't know what's going to go on in your life," Stewart explained. "I always wanted to play professional football, but it seemed so far away back then that I was willing to go out after high school and get a job, not realizing that football can pay for my college education and help me get another step closer to my dream.

"At that time, I was willing to give it up. But I'm glad that my high school coach (Lou Rettino) talked me out of it and it's worked out for the best."

After Stewart's rejuvenation for football took effect, the next step was to decide where the Union native was going to continue pursuing his dream. And that's when the knocking hit a door marked Iowa.

"Opportunity," Stewart said of the main factor in his becoming a Hawkeye. "My high school coach really educated me well as far as looking at teams and how to pick out whether or not you're going to play. You look on the roster at the tailbacks coming back, you've got two tailbacks who are going to be seniors.

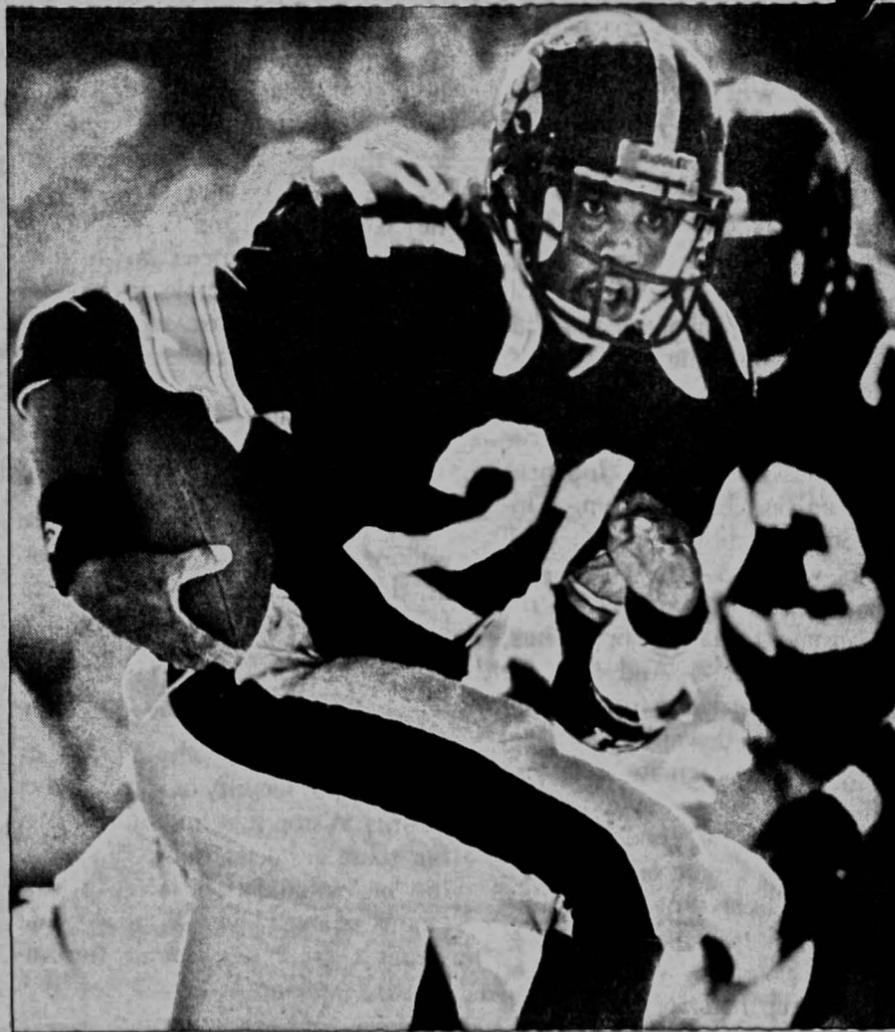

"So I figured if I came here, I would only have to sit a whole year to even get on the field and play a little bit. I may have even started because (Iowa) hadn't recruited any other tailbacks before I came here. Not only could I get a Big Ten degree, which holds a lot of weight, but also play Big Ten football right away. Basically, opportunity brought me here."

And once he came, Stewart immediately began making an impact on Iowa's program. As a freshman, the general studies major was the Hawkeyes' leading rusher in conference play with 294 yards and a team-best 4.8 average. He also had a game-high 102 yards versus the Badgers in his first collegiate start.

The following year, Stewart showed that he was not about to fall victim to the infamous "sophomore jinx," as he put his name in the record books by rushing for 1,036 yards. Only Astroturf prevented Stewart from getting more, as he missed the final two games of the year after injuring his knee against Ohio State.

"After it happened, I wanted to play so bad it didn't matter how much pain I was in," the senior said of his rehabilitation period. "After my surgery, I tried to walk on it with my crutches, but to no avail. I couldn't put pressure on it but I started healing so fast that before long, I was jogging and doing a lot of things that convinced me that I did have a chance to get back to my old self again."

And return to form is just what Stewart did, when he rushed 92 times for 356 yards and four touchdowns in 10 games last season. Stewart also earned offensive MVP honors in the Hawkeyes' 30-22 win over Tulsa, when he rushed for touchdowns of 14 and 18 yards.

But Stewart may remember that year for something even more special that took place off the field — his marriage to his wife Rasheedah and the birth of their daughter Bianca Ashley, who is now two months old.

because he's had a couple of untimely fumbles," Fry said. "He's been tremendously depressed, but I think it's going to motivate Tony and I would predict that in the next two or three ballgames, Tony will be the big gun for us."

Despite the early rough going, the senior has rushed 41 times for 255 yards, including a personal-best 69-yard touchdown gallop in the opening game versus Cincinnati.

Badger Profile: Coaching Staff

New Badger coaches return to homeland

By Marc Morehouse
The Daily Iowan

There will be no animosity creeping onto the field during Saturday's Iowa-Wisconsin match-up. Because an Iowa-flavored Wisconsin Badger football squad is treating this Big Ten battle like a regular-league game, not a tearful homecoming.

Iowa-flavored means four members of the Wisconsin coaching staff and two athletic administrators have direct ties to the Iowa Hawkeye football program.

First-year Wisconsin head coach Barry Alvarez was an assistant coach at Iowa from 1979-86 with his primary responsibility being the line-backer position. Iowa coach Hayden Fry recruited Alvarez away from a successful high-school program at Mason City, Iowa, to aid him in rebuilding the Hawkeyes ailing defense.

"I'm indebted to coach Fry," Alvarez said during a phone interview on Tuesday. "He gave me the opportunity to get into coaching at the collegiate level."

Alvarez's two top aides — defensive coordinator Dan McCarney and recruiting coordinator Bernie Wyatt — combined for 29 years of coaching experience at the Iowa before moving on to Madison, Wis. Another Badger assistant, Jay Norvell, played defensive back at Iowa from 1982 to '85.

Also included in the Iowa-Wisconsin football pipeline are administrative assistant, John Chadima, and Wisconsin sports information director Steve Malchow.

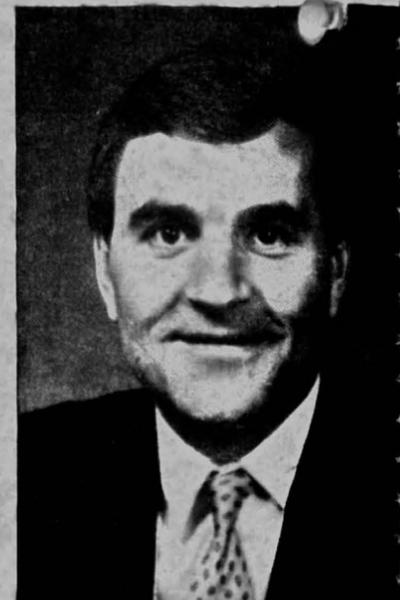

Chadima, a 1988 UI graduate, served as a graduate and administrative assistant under Fry from 1987-89. Malchow was an assistant in the Hawkeyes' sports information office.

"Iowa has a real solid and prosperous athletic tradition," Malchow said. "We hope to become as prosperous as Iowa. In the past Wisconsin athletics wasn't run like a business, we hope to get back on track."

Alvarez's biggest coup, however, was enticing long-time Hawkeye assistants McCarney and Wyatt to leave the comfort of an established, successful program and face the struggles of rebuilding a sagging Wisconsin football tradition.

"Wisconsin's program is very different from the present Iowa program," Wyatt said. "I remember the early days before Hayden (Fry) . . . we need a little patience."

Wyatt worked at Iowa for 16 seasons starting in 1974 as defensive ends coach under former Hawkeye coach Bob Commings. He was named Iowa's first full-time recruiting coordinator in 1979 and remained a defensive assistant when Fry took charge in 1980.

Wyatt's history at Iowa wasn't only as a coach. He also lettered in football and track and was named the Hawkeyes' most valuable football player in 1960 before graduating in 1962.

"The two schools are mostly similar," Wyatt said. "Madison is just a bigger Iowa City. It is a great place to live."

"I'm a Big Ten guy at heart," Wyatt added. "You can't go wrong coaching at any Big Ten school."

Playing the Hawkeyes for the first time as a Wisconsin coach and coming down the visitor's tunnel at Kinnick Stadium doesn't give this game any special significance, according to Wyatt.

"It will be a little different coming from the visiting coaches locker room," Wyatt said. "It's just another Big Ten football game."

"The only difference is that it just so happens some of us used to coach at Iowa."

This could give the suffering Iowa-Wisconsin rivalry a much-needed boost after it has endured a 13-0-1 Hawkeye streak of dominance since 1976. All the Badgers have been able to muster is a 10-10 tie in

Days gone by

Iowa City during the 1984 season.

"They know everything from audibles to our snap counts, philosophy on offense and defense and the things we've been emphasizing," Fry said. "That's a little extra advantage going for them this week in their preparation."

Alvarez's other top assistant McCarney, spent 13 years at Iowa as a defensive assistant. Like Wyatt, is also a former Hawkeye gridiron star and was elected as team captain in 1974. McCarney was also brought to Iowa by Commings in 1977, and found a home coaching the defensive line during the Fry era.

Because of the amount of experience as Hawkeyes, it will be difficult to envision the three coaches entering Kinnick Stadium through the opposite tunnel.

"I never even got into the visitors' locker room to see the pink wall," Alvarez said. Fry had the visitors' locker room painted pink as a psychological plot to lull opposing squads into a state of non-aggression. Pink is considered a color that invokes a mellow state of mind.

Hawkeye Profile: John Derby

Brother in pros gives Iowa's Derby edge

By Erica Weiland

The Daily Iowan

John Derby has an edge over many of his opponents. And he has since he was in high school.

At 6-foot-2, 226-pounds, he's not necessarily bigger than his competitors. And being a junior this year, he's not necessarily older or more experienced.

John Derby just has something most of his opponents do not — an older brother who plays in the National Football League.

"We talk about twice a week, right after games and Thursday nights," said Glenn Derby, who is four years older than John and plays for the New Orleans Saints. "I consider John one of my best friends."

Glenn was drafted by the Saints in 1988 after playing college ball at Wisconsin. He was released by the team but then signed as a free agent.

Although Glenn is an offensive lineman and his brother is on defense, John says the advice is always helpful.

The influence is also one that John's linebacker partner, senior Melvin Foster, has noticed.

"I think it does help (to have a brother in the NFL) because he can call back and get notes on what to do and what not to do," Foster said. "Even though his brother plays offensive line and he plays linebacker, I think it just helps to talk to him and keep his head up."

Being four years apart, John and Glenn never played on the same team. Glenn says he rarely even has the chance to see his brother play, but has been able to give helpful hints.

"I've probably seen him play a total of three times, but I hear about how he's doing all the time," Glenn said. "When he was in high school, I didn't see him much, but I knew he'd be good. I gave him hints and taught him some college techniques. Now that I'm in the pros, I can teach him some things I know from the NFL."

"He gives me a lot of insight, which way to go and keep working here, do this, do that," John said. "It's not really pressure, he's given me a lot of good hints. It's really nice to have someone up there."

The closest they came to being teammates was when John was starting college. At the time, Glenn was a fifth-year senior at Wisconsin.

"We almost had a chance (to play together)," Glenn said. "But it was a good decision for John at the time. Iowa has a good program and a good staff. They're real solid. The Wisconsin program was struggling at the time."

Personal: Brother Glenn plays for the New Orleans Saints.

Glenn also said it was tough when John was being recruited because he wanted his brother to become a Badger. But he told John that he would back up whatever he decided to do.

"I was leaning so heavily toward Wisconsin," Glenn said. "But I told him, 'It's your life. I'll be supportive no matter what.' I understand why he didn't want to go to Wisconsin."

"I thought about going there, but it was right between all the coaching changes," John said. "(I) came here because Iowa was winning, and it just looked like a better place to come at that time."

John's decision has paid off. At least for the Hawkeyes.

Although he had shoulder surgery last spring and didn't participate in spring football, Derby has stepped to the forefront this fall.

Starting off slow, he recorded only 12 total tackles in the Hawkeyes' first two games of the season.

He added nine more against Miami Sept. 29, and has been progressing since then.

"I felt I did better than the first two games and that's one thing I wanted to do was play a better game," Derby said after the game against the Hurricanes. "They were running to the strong side, and they were running a lot of the same offense that Iowa State did.

"I wasn't real happy with myself against Iowa State. I missed a lot of tackles, and I wanted to come back and improve my tackling and make big plays against Miami."

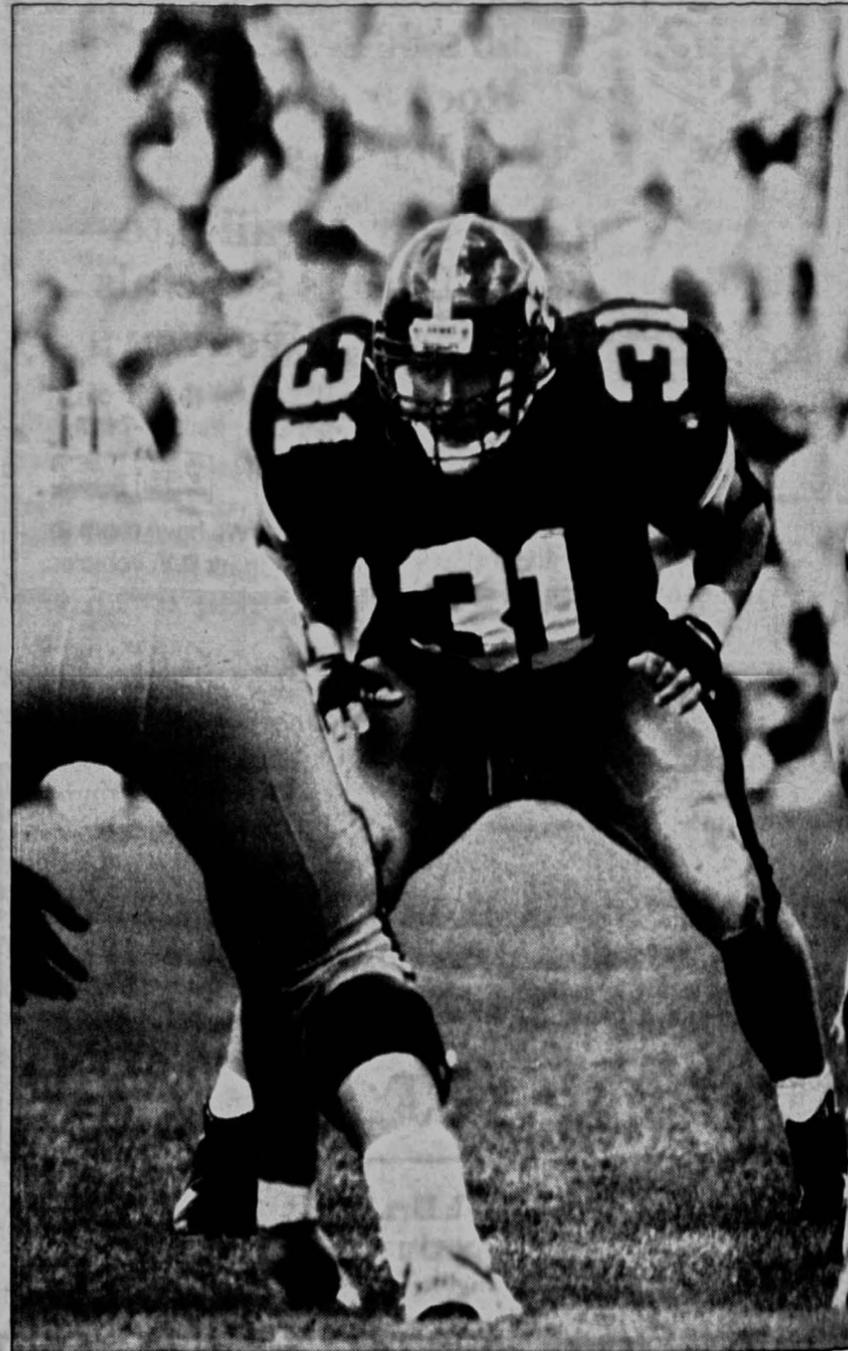

His improved performance also drew praise from Fry. But Derby said that was something for which he didn't want to be commended.

"I didn't want that to happen because I wanted to come in and accounted for 11 take downs. He and Foster combined 31 total tackles.

While Foster has been getting most of the attention, he is quick to credit Derby for a lot of the linebackers' success.

"I have all the respect in the world for John Derby," Foster said. "I want people to know that he's a start playing good right away," said the Oconomowoc, Wis., native. "But I wasn't playing that good right away so it just happened to be that way."

"It's a good compliment from Hayden Fry, but I would have rather just come in and started doing good the first three games."

good as people think I am. It's been unfortunate that, probably because I'm a senior, he's getting overshadowed. But by far John Derby's presence has been just as significant to the defensive unit as mine has been.

"I think we make a good team. We love each other. We work together. And he loves to hit just as much as I do, so that makes it even better."

Hawkeye Profile: Mike Devlin

Hawkeye center not playing for the glory

By Michael Watkins

The Daily Iowan

Usually, the only time anyone hears an offensive lineman's name is when he gets called for holding or for allowing a quarterback sack. He doesn't make breathtaking catches or spectacular runs for the endzone.

But that's all right with Iowa center Mike Devlin.

"My greatest satisfaction from this game is when the receivers and backs score touchdowns," said Devlin. "Because when they are successful then I know that I am doing my job. Team victory is much more important than individual statistics."

Returning after a shaky freshman year during which he started seven midseason games, Devlin has one major goal which stands out in his mind for this year: "No more fumbled snaps!"

"I was so nervous at times last season that I hurried the snap, especially in my debut against Tulsa," Devlin said. "I would walk up to the line, get in my stance, and suddenly, I'd feel like I couldn't breathe."

"Finally, in last year's game against Illinois, I told myself to stop being afraid. This game was pivotal for me because I realized that I could play in the Big Ten. Now that I have more experience, I take my time."

A standout at Cherokee High School in Marlton, N.J., Devlin was an honorable mention all-America by USA Today, Bally's Scholastic Coach, The Sporting News, and the National High School Coaches Association. He was also named 1987 state lineman of the year, scholastic all-America and runner-up for New Jersey Scholar-Athlete of the Year as a senior.

Because of his impressive high school play, recruiters from schools such as Kentucky, N.C. State and Auburn came to talk to Devlin about playing for them.

But Devlin chose Iowa.

"The University of Iowa has some of the nicest people of any campus I've ever been to," Devlin said. "Everyone treated me like I was special and that made me feel important, not to mention they also have an impressive winning tradition and are almost always in a bowl game."

At this particular juncture in his life and career, Devlin doesn't view the impact of football as being the cornerstone of his world. But if the option to play professionally were to arise, he would not by-pass it.

"Football isn't the most important

Front and center

Iowa center Mike Devlin (60) defends quarterback Matt Rodgers (7) against Cincinnati defenders in the Hawkeyes'

63-10 win over the Bearcats Sept. 15. Offensive linemen don't get much publicity, but Devlin says that's not why he plays.

thing in my life right now. My family and religious beliefs come first, then football," Devlin said. "My family has always been there to support me and I don't want to forget that. However, if I have the opportunity to turn pro, I will definitely do it. If not, then I want to continue in the sport as a coach. I just don't want to stop abruptly."

While things are currently going well for Devlin, at various times in his career he said there were moments when he thought he'd never be able to play another down. Numerous injuries during high school and his freshman year in college often caused him to think of life without football.

"During my freshman year in high school, I had hand surgery; then, I had to have surgery done on my left shoulder as a junior, and on top of that, I had to have surgery done on my right shoulder as a freshman in college," the 6-foot-3, 275 pounder said. "At first I couldn't imagine life without football. I love this game so much. That's when I looked to my family and found out the importance of their support."

Growing up throughout the U.S. due to his father's nomadic work as a head coach, Devlin now calls New Orleans home while his father, Joe Devlin, serves as head coach of Tulane University.

It was his father, who introduced football to the Iowa center, although he was surrounded by football his entire life. Both of his brothers received football scholarships, and with his dad's occupation directly linked to football, it seemed almost inevitable that he would take part in the game.

"Although I grew up in a football family, neither my father nor my brothers forced me or pushed me into the game," the New Jersey native said. "I've always loved football and knew that eventually it would be an important part of my life."

"My life, however, does not revolve around football. I have other interests that I enjoy doing as well."

In addition to his achievements in football, Devlin played first base on the Cherokee High baseball team, but was never as serious with it as he was about football. He also enjoys a good game of pool and a night out on the town with his teammates, particularly his "brothers" on the offensive line.

"We do everything together," Devlin said. "We are all best friends and our friendship makes us stronger as a group. We see ourselves not as individuals but as a unit. Because we are so close, we all feel that if we each do our respective jobs, we will be successful.

"The Michigan State game was a perfect example of our dedication to teamwork. On our pass-blocking schemes, we were almost impenetrable. The guards did their jobs, the tackles did theirs, and I lived up to mine. I believe that the center is only as good as the people who surround him. So, if I'm successful, then that means the entire line was as well."

Wisconsin Style

On offense the Badgers will show some flexibility to accommodate Coach Barry Alvarez's "take what they give you" offense.

Starting QB Tony Lowery, who led the Badgers in passing in 1987 and 1988, is protected by a big offensive line with two starters over 320 pounds.

On defense, Wisconsin returns eight starters to a team that Alvarez promises will be physical. Defensive end Don Davey and linebacker Malvin Hunter - both all-Big Ten choices in 1989 - anchor a strong front line for the Badgers.

The Daily Iowan

Ohio State coach John Cooper praised Tuesday the surging Indiana Hoosier football team and gave special mention to their "explosive" offense.

"We're very impressed," Cooper said. "They've (Indiana) blown everyone they have played off the field." Indiana averages 45 points per game on offense, and at 4-0 is the only undefeated team in the Big Ten going into the second week of conference action.

The Buckeyes take a 2-2 record into Bloomington, Ind., on Saturday. They are coming off an 0-2 homestand at Columbus, Ohio, which included losses to 16th-ranked Southern Cal and last week's controversial loss to 11th-ranked Illinois. Ohio State kicker Tim Williams had a fourth-quarter field goal attempt blocked and recovered by Illini defender Mike Poloskey, who then illegally pitched the ball to Quintin Parker. Parker ran the pitch 45 yards for a score and essentially iced the game for the Illini.

"That is a dead issue now," Cooper said. "Sometimes you just don't get the breaks."

"It's homecoming weekend in Bloomington and we're coming off two losses. So I'm sure Indiana is looking forward to playing us," Cooper said. "There's a lot of balance in the Big Ten this season top to bottom. People will be knocked-off."

Indiana coach Bill Mallory echoed Cooper's thoughts about Saturday's match-up.

"We have a tough game coming up on Saturday," Mallory said. "We will have to play very well."

Skeptics have questioned Indiana's fast start contending that the competition the Hoosier's have faced has been sub-par. Mallory, however, defended his squad's pre-Big Ten schedule.

"The people we've played were good at the time, even though their record may not show it," Mallory said. "I know we'll see tougher, but I think we've had good tests each Saturday."

It's grudge-match time in the state of Michigan tomorrow as Michigan and Michigan State battle for state bragging rights.

Foster Day

Senior linebacker Melvin Foster had a banner day for the Hawkeyes last Saturday against Michigan State. Foster recorded 20 tackles on the day like above where he takes down Spartan running back Hyland Hickson. Foster also had one interception, below, and returned the ball 15 yards with Spartan running back Tico Duckett in hot pursuit.

Iowa coach Hayden Fry on Melvin Foster and his performance against Michigan State which won him Big Ten defensive player of the week honors this past week: "I've tried to search my mind, and the closest thing I could think of to be accurate in describing Melvin's performance was that it was a Larry Station-type performance. Larry having been an All-American a couple times for us and a great football player. Melvin, with the 20 tackles, rather than taking on the blockers and what we call 'shuck' the blocker and then get to the ball carrier, he actually destroyed the blockers and got the tackle on many, many occasions. It was an exceptional performance.

"And then to get the interception and running 15 yards, looking for someone to lateral the ball to, added a little color to his performance.

"He's become a great leader on our football team, also. Pregame, in the locker room, the night before, Melvin has really started to enjoy his leadership ability. He's always been a real good talker. Now he's getting the stats to back it up. I think he's a legitimate All-American candidate at this stage. He hasn't had anywhere near an average game; all his games have been outstanding."

Iowa vs. Wisconsin Preview

14 years of futility on the line at Kinnick

By John Shipley

The Daily Iowan

The last time the Wisconsin Badgers beat the Iowa Hawkeyes in a game of football the country was still giddy over its bicentennial birthday celebration, Farah Fawcett-Majors was shilling for a new shoe called Nike and Jimmy Carter was about to become our 39th president.

True, there was a tie in 1984 (10-10 at Iowa City), but the fact remains, Wisconsin hasn't claimed an honest-to-goodness victory over Iowa since "Three's Company" shocked the nation. And that's a long time.

So it may surprise many that the Badgers (1-3, 0-1) actually hold a 34-31-2 series lead over Iowa, despite the fact that Hayden Fry has never lost to a Wisconsin team (10-0-1).

But that doesn't mean Fry is taking this game lightly.

"Wisconsin traditionally gives us a real tough physical football game," the 12th-year Iowa coach said. "I remember last year we had it 24 to zip with about a minute and a half to play (in the first half), and they got two touchdowns right before the half. They came on and tied the game later on and we had to have a 70-something-yard drive to pull it out.

"So we're not underestimating Wisconsin at all from a coaching standpoint."

But that was then and this is now. The Hawkeyes (3-1, 1-0) are hot off a 12-7 win at Michigan State that Fry is calling "one of the top 15 or 20 in my lifetime."

Iowa, always tough under Fry at East Lansing (6-0-1), brought in a defense that completely dominated then-No. 18 Michigan State for 55 minutes, not allowing the Spartans on the scoreboard until the final four minutes of play.

The Hawkeyes' defensive effort last Saturday wasn't lost on Wisconsin head coach Barry Alvarez, who ought to know something about Iowa defense — he spent seven years as a defensive coach under Fry before leaving to coach Notre Dame's linebackers in 1987.

"I was really impressed with the job the Iowa defense did against Michigan State," the first-year Badger coach said. "We're thinking about not showing that (Michigan St.-Iowa) film to our offense."

But for a team that gave up 41 points to Michigan in its Big Ten opener last week, Alvarez also has to be concerned with an Iowa offense that has rolled up 141 points in its first four games.

"I'm sure they'll try to be balanced against us," Alvarez said. "Coach Fry knows that to win and to win consistently you have to be able to run the ball and they've established a good running game.

"But they can always come back and throw."

Coach Fry knows he has a good football team on his hands. The Hawkeyes haven't been 3-1 since 1987, when they finished the season 10-3-0 and beat Wyoming in the Holiday Bowl 20-19. But he also knows his team could have a let-down after last week's big win, especially with No. 1 Michigan looming over the Wisconsin horizon.

"Our players still have to learn how to handle success," Fry said. "We're very concerned about the ball game this week."

Most of this week's pregame talk has centered in on the Iowa hue this year's Wisconsin coaching

Gaining ground

Sophomore fullback Paul Kujawa will get his first start Saturday when the Hawkeyes take on the Wisconsin Badgers at Kinnick Stadium. Kujawa saw considerable playing time in Iowa's matchup with Michigan State last Saturday after starting fullback Lew Montgomery suffered a separated shoulder.

staff has acquired. In addition to Alvarez, the Badger staff also boasts former Iowa assistants Dan McCarney and Bernie Wyatt; former Iowa defensive back Jay Norvell; and administrative support staff Steve Malchow and John Chadima.

The big question: Will the knowledge of Iowa's operation help the Badgers prepare to beat Iowa for the first time since 1976?

"I really don't think so," Alvarez said. "Iowa is capable of doing so many things that are so fundamentally sound, and structure-wise, and technique-wise with the players, that they make you play. And you can know as much about them as you want but you still have to execute and play."

Coach Fry is a little more realistic about the possibility, but he issued a pretty fair warning to Wisconsin about relying too much on its Hawkeye history.

"They have our playbooks and our audible system, they know what we like to feature in certain situations defensively and offensively," said Fry, the dean of Big Ten coaches. "We have to take all that into consideration this week. But they've been around me a long time, they know that I'm the kind of guy, I'll try to take advantage of that. Sometimes knowledge can be a detriment in a lot of situations.

"We're checking out real quick how much they're playing our audibles and things of that nature and if they do, if they don't come in here and just try to play good sound hard-nosed football, we're going to burn them."

Good, sound, hard-nosed football was what got the Hawkeyes their win at MSU. It's also what got the Hawkeyes into a bit of injury trouble. Starting fullback Lew Montgomery sustained a separated shoulder against the Spartans, while starting wide-out John Filloon re-injured a knee Saturday.

"Montgomery's out. Filloon's out," Fry said. "They're definitely out. It was a really tough ball game, very physical."

Montgomery's injury is somewhat of a boon to second-string fullback Paul Kujawa — an Iowa walk-on and Cudahy, Wis., native who will get his first Big Ten start against a Wisconsin team that failed to offer him a scholarship.

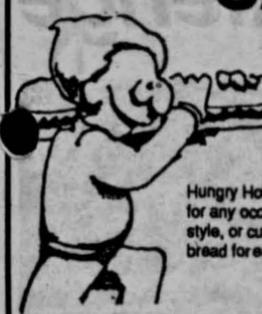

"They (Wisconsin) weren't going to offer me a scholarship," said the sophomore out of Cudahy High. "It was pretty certain I would've been walking on there, too.

"I should have close to 30 friends and relatives at the game coming in from the Milwaukee area."

Kujawa isn't the only Wisconsin native playing for the Hawkeyes. Linebacker John Derby hails from Oconomowoc and his brother, Glenn Derby of the New Orleans Saints, played for the Badgers.

"It's just a real exciting game for all of the Wisconsin players," said Derby, a two-time first-team all-state captain during his high school career. "My brother played at Wisconsin and I've always been a Badger fan when I was growing up."

Volleyball team wins 3 in Hawkeye Challenge

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

With three wins by the Iowa volleyball team, two by the field hockey squad and a dual meet win by the women's cross country team — as well as strong performances by men's tennis, men's golf and one member of the women's golf team — last weekend was a banner one in the Iowa fall sports schedule.

The following is a composite of those results and what to look for this weekend.

Volleyball

The Hawkeye Challenge volleyball tournament wasn't very challenging for Coach Ruth Nelson's Iowa club as the Hawkeyes swept three 3-0 matches on their way to the championship.

In the tournament opener Friday, Iowa cruised to a 15-1, 15-6, 15-8 victory behind strong hitting performances from seniors Barb Willis and Jenny Rees. Willis hit .455 with 17 kills and Rees hit .367 with 13 kills as the Hawkeyes hit .368 as a team.

Saturday, Nebraska-Omaha entered the match against Iowa as the No. 16 team in the latest AVCA Division II poll. But Iowa disposed of the Lady Mavs 15-8, 16-14, 15-4. The Hawkeyes hit .321 in game one and .400 in game two to win handily, but struggled with the Lady Mavs before winning the second game.

Iowa capped the undefeated weekend with a 15-13, 15-8, 15-11 victory over the College of St. Francis, which was ranked second in the latest NAIA poll. Nelson's team rallied from a 12-3 deficit in the first game, scoring the last eight points of the game to secure the victory.

Iowa won game two 15-8, then survived another scare by the Saints in game three. After having an 10-6 lead chipped down to 12-11, Iowa scored the final three points to win their 11th consecutive game and fourth straight match.

Willis was named the tournament's MVP after hitting .322 and recording 43 kills, 31 digs, 11 blocks and five service aces in the three matches. Senior setter Janet Moylan was also an all-tournament selection.

"I think right now (the Hawkeyes) are building confidence," Nelson said after her team improved to 6-9 overall. "We're playing consistently better than before. If we continue to do that, it will build into a habit."

The Hawkeyes, 6-9 overall, will take a four-match winning streak to Michigan today and Saturday as they return to Big Ten play. Iowa will be trying to improve on a 1-4 conference mark against Michigan (1-11 overall, 0-6 in the league) today and Michigan State (5-11, 1-5) Saturday.

Field Hockey

Coach Beth Beglin's field hockey team tuned up for its upcoming Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference battles against Northern Illinois and No. 3 Northwestern with dual shutouts against James Madison and Cal-Berkely last weekend.

Kristy Gleason, a sophomore from Amesbury, Mass., sat out the Friday matchup with Berkeley but came back strong Sunday. Gleason recorded a hat trick, accounting for all the Hawkeye goals and increasing her team-leading total to 16 goals.

The Hawkeyes were in a scoreless deadlock with the Dukes at halftime Sunday, but Gleason and goalie Eileen Moyer, who improved to 7-0 and recorded her fifth shutout, led Iowa in the second half.

Friday, freshman Heather Bryant notched Iowa's first hat trick of the weekend with a three-goal performance against Cal-Berkeley. Kris Fillat added two goals in the Iowa rout.

View to a kill

Iowa volleyball players Trista Schoenbeck and Jenny Rees (in white) watch as Purdue's Amber Douglas (12) and Sarah Hopkins (5) miss a block during the Hawkeyes' loss to the Boilermakers Sept. 30.

Senior Andrea Wieland recorded her third shutout of the year and raised her record to 4-2 overall.

"Overall, I was happy," Beglin said. "I felt James Madison plays a lot like Northern Illinois. The first period was pretty even and we dominated the second. Our players did a good job of keeping their poise, even when it was 0-0 at halftime."

The Hawkeyes, 3-0 in the MCFHC and 11-2 overall, met Northern Illinois in DeKalb, Ill., last night and will face conference power Northwestern Saturday in Evanston, Ill.

Hawkeye Epicure

Aid to epicureans: Youth vendors deliver hot dogs, popcorn and ice cold pop

By Jamie Butters
The Daily Iowan

They arrive three hours before gametime. They strain their backs to keep the stacks, and work their digits to make the change. They walk up and down stairs all day.

They are an integral part of the epicurean Hawkeye experience, aiding all who pursue eat, drink, and merriment. They are the food vendors.

Students and scouts, earning money for school improvements and for scout camps — and also tips.

"I get some tips," said Darin Duffin, 16. After a pensive pause he added, "from not many people."

Josh Smith, 14, says he does pretty well but admits, "When I was small I got more than I do now."

Yorin Emmett, 13, said tips are his favorite thing about selling pop. How much money did he earn last week?

"$6.25," he said.

Area youths get involved in selling through community groups like schools and the Boy Scouts.

Duffin, a student at Iowa Mennonite high school, said the work he does at Iowa Football games will "raise money for a new gym floor and fences for the baseball field."

When asked about his favorite part, Duffin said flatly, "I don't have one."

Smith, a Boy Scout from Iowa City said his favorite part is the money raised — not for tips — but for his scout troop, "so that you don't have to actually pay out money that your parents earned, that you didn't really earn yourself . . . to go to camps and stuff."

What a guy.

Alas, for every silver lining there is a cloud, and for every good part there is a bad part.

Emmett said that his least favorite part is carrying the trays of 75-cent cokes. He said that "if it's hot out, I get around fifteen (trays), and if it's cool out, I get about 10."

But the sodas must be taken to the customers and Emmett said most of the customers are nice to him.

Duffin concurred for the most part, but said it's not always so nice. "(It) depends where I go," he said.

"If I go to the student section they Vendors say they have trouble with students "when they ask you about child labor laws," and "when they ask you if (the cokes) are spiked."

treat me like shit. But if (I'm not there, customers) treat me OK."

Smith had a similar attitude. "Most of 'em are pretty nice," he said. When asked if any one is ever rude to him he said, "Only some of the students, when they ask you about child labor laws."

Smith also said the students could get annoying "when they ask you if (the cokes) are spiked."

Big Ten

"This is our big game," Michigan coach Gary Moeller said. "... MSU is coming off a loss and will be more fired-up for us."

Michigan, after sustaining a loss to then-No. 2 Notre Dame in its opening game, has replaced the Irish at the top of the collegiate football heap this week. How will the Wolverines respond to the No. 1 ranking?

"Hopefully it will motivate us rather than distract us," Moeller said. "If this was Jan. 2, 1991, we would be the happiest team in the world. We're proud of the fact that we're No. 1, but since this is Michigan State week I don't really think we needed another distraction."

Michigan State coach George Perles expressed displeasure with his squad's performance in the 12-7 loss last week against Iowa, especially with the Spartans' offensive effort.

"We weren't pleased with many things in the Iowa game," Perles said. "I was surprised we didn't get more points on the board."

Perles, however, doesn't flinch at the thought of playing the No. 1 team in the nation. It will be the Spartans' second chance at the top team after narrowly losing 20-19 to then No. 1-ranked Fightin' Irish.

"We're used to it," Perles said. "We are used to playing highly ranked teams."

The 1-3 Purdue Boilermakers, after dropping a 19-7 decision to Minnesota last week, travel to Champaign, Ill., to battle 11th-ranked Illinois. And yes... the Purdue Cannon is up for grabs, which could save this game from being an epic bore.

"I thought we were very average offensively in this game," Akers said. Purdue's offense was equally anemic last year against the Illini when they dropped a 14-2 decision.

Illinois coach John Mackovic had praise for the Purdue defensive line as well as the challenge the "run-and-shoot" offense will provide for his 3-1 squad.

"On defense, their front seven challenge an offense as much as possible," Mackovic said. "They run the popular 'run-and-shoot' offense very well. We have to make sure their quarterback doesn't get good reads."

Mackovic said the Illini will have to overcome some key injuries to have a chance for the win.

Minnesota coach John Gutekunst was very pleased with his team's road win against Purdue last Saturday and will have a definite shot at extending their Big Ten record to 2-0 when the Gophers face veteran conference doormat Northwestern in the Metrodome Saturday.

Northwestern coach Francis Peay, as usual, will be facing a team celebrating their Homecoming. Which gives the coach little reason for optimism especially after coming off a 42-0 loss at the hands of Indiana.

Quotes

"This was the place that I wanted it to happen in if not in Kinnick. Two years ago, it was probably the lowest point of my career, and I came into this same (interview) tent, and I had a lot of people ask me a lot of negative questions. Unconceitedly, I'm real happy to be right here in this same tent getting the opposite kind of questions."

Women's Golf

Although the Iowa women's golf team is in the midst of a four-week layoff from competition, its coach, Diane Thomason, and star player, senior Stacey Arnold, were on the links over the weekend. Thomason coached the United States entry in the World University Golf Championships in Montepellier, France, and Arnold was a member of that team.

The U.S. team finished second in the six-team tournament, shooting 605 in 54-holes of play last Thursday through Sunday. Arnold finished 10th overall and second among the U.S. competitors in the event by carding a 30-over-par 318.

The next action for the women's golf team will be Oct. 20-21, when they host the Hawkeye Invitational at Finkbine Field.

Women's Cross Country

Despite withholding Tracy Dahl and Jennifer Brower from competition, Coach Jerry Hassard's 20th-ranked women's cross country squad inched by Northern Iowa 27-30 Saturday at Finkbine Golf Course.

Iowa's Tami Hoskins won the meet with a time of 18 minutes, 33 seconds and two teammates followed close behind, giving Iowa the top three finishers in the dual meet and assuring a victory.

The Hawkeyes rested several players for the second straight week in order to prepare for the Tennessee Invitational on Monday, Oct. 15.

Men's Tennis

Although team scores weren't kept, the No. 2 doubles team took first place and the Iowa men's tennis team won a majority of their matches in the Ball State Invitational last weekend.

Seniors Paul Buckingham and Tommy Heiting won the No. 2 doubles championship with a 6-1, 6-2 romp over Kentucky's Mike Hopkinson and Mahyar Goodarz.

Iowa's top two singles players were also successful. Freshman Klas Bergstrom, playing at the No. 2 position, took second in his flight while No. 1 Thomas Adler finished third.

The Hawkeyes' next action will be the Colorado Invitational in Boulder, Colo., Oct. 19-21.

Men's Golf

Iowa's Brad Klapprott continued a string of top finishes this fall by nearly missing a first-place finish in the Eastern Kentucky University Colonel Classic last weekend.

The senior carded rounds of 73-69-74—216 to tie for first place after regulation play in the 54-hole tournament but fell lost his chance for a victory on the second hole of a sudden death play-off. The Keokuk, Iowa, native finished third overall.

Klapprott's performance paced Coach Lynn Blevins' Iowa squad to a fourth-place overall finish in the 21-team tournament. The Hawkeyes shot a three-round total of 891 to finish behind Marshall, Eastern Kentucky and Kentucky.

Women's Tennis

After an 18-day hiatus, Coach Micki Schillig's women's tennis team returned to action Wednesday of this week, travelling to Drake for a dual meet. It was their second dual meet of the season, as Schillig's squad defeated Nebraska 6-3 Sept. 21.

Iowa will remain on the road as they continue the fall season with the Marquette tournament in Milwaukee, Wisc., Oct. 19-21.

Men's Cross Country

The Iowa men's cross country team, coming off fourth and seventh place finishes at a combined Central Collegiate meet, will return to action after two weeks off with a triangular against Illinois and Nebraska at Champaign, Ill., this Saturday.

Stewart

"I believe indoor track helped me a lot," Stewart said. "It helped me get my speed back. I don't know if I'm as fast as I used to be, but I know I'm as quick as I used to be. I believe that track started something going for me along with my weight training."

While track may have started something going for Stewart, the senior tailback says a couple of close people have kept the ball rolling.

"My parents have both been really supportive," Stewart said of his mother, Barbara Stewart, and father, Alphonse Leak. "They try to make it to every game and I don't know where I'd be right now without them."

While Stewart is concentrating on returning the No. 25 Hawkeyes to a post-season appearance, the man who wears No. 21 for Iowa still wants to reach stardom in the pros.

"Coming out of high school, I always figured, 'Where would the best running backs in the country go?'" he said. "I believe that the Big Ten has the most powerful, fastest and biggest running backs."

"To play in this league as a running back is extremely tough. You don't get 1,000-yard rushers all the time in the Big Ten. In other conferences, you might have two guys on one team that rush for 1,000 yards, and that's really difficult in the Big Ten."
