Avenson proposes education package

Support for public schools made an issue by challenges

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

Wealthy, hard-charging businessman Barry P. Avenson of Iowa is making education a key issue in his Senate campaign. Avenson, a first-time candidate, is running against incumbent Republican Terry Branstad.

Avenson wants to provide $1 billion in education aid over three years, and to make several policy changes to improve the education system. He has called for increased funding for schools, more support for teachers, and a freeze on tuition costs.

Avenson's campaign has been criticized for its use of negative advertising, and for its attacks on Branstad. He has been accused of trying to paint Branstad as a tax cutter, and of being more concerned with helping his own constituents than helping the state as a whole.

Avenson has been criticized for his lack of experience in politics, and for his failure to outline specific policies that would address the state's biggest problems. However, his supporters argue that his fresh approach and his strong work ethic make him an effective candidate.

Avenson's campaign is gaining momentum, and he is expected to become a major player in the Senate race. His approach to education and his commitment to improving Iowa's schools make him a candidate to watch.

LA FEAGLES - A nationwide cocaine trucking network spotted in Cuba that evaded law enforcement Vive when police seized about 1,300 pounds of the drug's worth more than twice that amount, said an official.

At least four law enforcement agencies in New York and California uncovered the operation. Seven people were arrested. "This is another example of the cell relations and cooperation between law enforcement in the state and federal government," said Los Angeles Police Officer John P. Dowling.

The investigation began when the California Highway Patrol spotted a truck following one in which frightened people ran from a ticking package at a bus stop in Riverside County, officials said. The officers arrested two more men.

Art exhibit peers into the void

By Lindsey Cheuse
The Daily Iowan

Art is not just a way to make money, it's a way to make meaning. The new conceptual art show "The Presence of Absence" at the Hancher Art Museum is showing how meaningful art can be. Using imagery that emphasizes ideas above all else, the show "Presence" goes even further by showing the true nature of conceptual art. The pieces were put together by UI museum students and faculty from the University of Iowa. This is the second year that the museum has sponsored this type of show.

Part of what makes "The Presence of Absence" so compelling is the deep, feminist, spiritual understanding Cheuse brings to what she calls Ohashi in her life, her love for her daughter's eyes in the light that draws her — the light that she wants to possess.

For a number of years, Alys Cheuse has been director of Leeann Tweeden at the University. Young artists start to make art on their own, however, with the help of the museum's staff, to learn how to see and write about their own work. That is something the museum shares with the artists. The methods of the artists' work are aimed at the museum.

For many years, Cheuse's book reviews have been on National Public Radio's "All Things Considered," for which she has written reviews for "The New Republic," "The New York Times," and "Artforum." The University of Iowa, Seattle, and Berkeley have asked her to be a visiting professor. She has also been a visiting professor in the United States, Canada, and Europe. She now teaches at the University of Iowa, where she has the luxury to return to the roots of her at the psychological America is in need. Congress and the president are unable to pass a budget that reduces the federal deficit. These separate legislative branches of government have become so polarized they are seen as an evil kindred. Frightening as it may seem, the gridlock is not restricted to the national stage, but exists in perverted Germany with the rise to power in 1933.

The Germans in the Soviet Union are increasing their crumbling economy, a disintegrating Soviet federation and a collapse of Marxism-Leninism. Jews are a target for pogroms in the Soviet Union. There are few solutions to the problems of the economy and the nationalities of the country. The United Nations and the League of Nations were created to end the conflict. However, the hope that the international community was achieved. A budget that is inadequate and that proves to be a burden on the United States has little chance of success.

The current situation in the Soviet Union is extremely volatile. President Gorbachev's popularity is waning. He may have been a successful Russian leader, but he is not a Soviet leader. The Soviet economic forecast is bleak. Perestroika means nothing if it does not eliminate the queues and put bread on the table. A group that supports free trade and economic solutions to the country's problems may prove ineffective. That would be disastrous.

Another reason the Soviet Union has been largely ignored is that it was once ruled from Moscow. Where is the problem to address the situation in one at a time. America needs a strategic assessment of the Soviet Union. Economies are interdependent and have had to be the focus of the Soviet Union. Some scholars compare this insufficiency to the Weimar Republic of the 1920s. The Soviet economic forecast is bleak. Justice Department requires more education for federal prison inmates

By James Metcalfe

Justice Department officials have endorsed a plan that would require federal prison inmates to complete some courses in general education, a move that would affect a million inmates.

The proposal would require inmates to take a 12th-grade-level course in English and a 10th-grade-level course in math. The courses would be offered through the Department of Education, which oversees federal prison education programs.

The plan, which was announced last year, would also require inmates to take a course in personal finance. It is designed to help inmates develop skills that will help them find jobs after they are released from prison.

The plan is part of a broader effort by the Justice Department to improve education in federal prisons. The department has already taken steps to expand access to college courses and to improve the quality of education programs.

The proposal has been met with mixed reactions. Some inmates and their advocates have praised the plan as a step forward in improving the education system in federal prisons. Others have criticized it as too restrictive and as a way to control inmates.

The Justice Department has said it will seek comments on the proposal before finalizing it. It has not yet set a deadline for comments.

Gorbachev’s economic plan attacked

By Al Appleman

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Critics attacked President Mikhail Gorbachev’s 500-day economic reform plan on Wednesday, and an architect of a new radical economic program proposed by others Thursday.

The Associated Press

By Michæl L. Cohen

"The market will be entered in this situation not through (economic) stabilization, but through disastrous price increases." The 542-member Soviet Parliament, which adopted the 500-day plan on Sept. 11, Tass reported, proposed a new reform program for the original 500-day plan, offered his resignation as deputy prime minister on Tuesday. Leaders in the Baltic republics of Latvia, Poland and the Russian lawmakers, but they postponed it as early as Saturday, although some lawmakers doubted it would pass. The 500-member Supreme Soviet would rule on it as early as Saturday, although some lawmakers 15 months.

President Gorbachev’s plan, which calls for an economic reform and a transition to a Western-style market economy in the Soviet Union, has met with criticism from economists and political analysts.

Government economists, for example, have criticized the plan for not being detailed enough, and the plan’s opponents have argued that it would lead to inflation and social instability.

The plan, which was adopted in September, was criticized by some economists as too slow and too gradual to be effective.

On Friday, October 19, the Nobel Prize in Economics was awarded to James Mirrlees of the University of Cambridge for his work on economic efficiency and welfare theory.

The prize was presented by the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences in Stockholm, Sweden, to recognize Mirrlees’s contributions to the field of economics.

Mirrlees, who is a professor emeritus at the University of Cambridge, has been a leading figure in the development of economic theory, particularly in the areas of government taxation and public choice.

His work has had a significant impact on economic policy, with many of his ideas and concepts being applied in real-world situations.

Mirrlees is the 10th person of Russian origin to win the Nobel Prize in Economics, following the likes of Alfred鱼、Milton Friedman and Joseph Stiglitz.

The Nobel Prize is awarded annually to the person who makes the most significant contribution to the field of economic science.

Mirrlees’s work has been influential not only in academic circles but also in policy-making and public debate.

In the late 1950s, he published a paper on the optimal provision of public goods, which has been widely cited and has become a cornerstone of modern public choice theory.

He is also known for his work on the economics of uncertainty and decision-making, which has led to the development of the concept of "information cascades."

HoJo, Darling set to go under the knife

At 6 a.m. Wednesday, the first 100 people will be in line at the Surgery Center of Charleston, where New York Yankees baseball player Don HoJo Darling is scheduled to undergo surgery to repair a torn labrum in his right shoulder.

The surgery is expected to take about three hours, and the 28-year-old pitcher is expected to miss six to eight months of the 2000 season.

"It's good to have him back," said Yankees manager Joe Torre. "He's a key to our rotation, and we're going to miss him."

Darling was 13-13 with a 4.40 ERA last season, but he missed the entire second half of the season with a shoulder injury.

"He's a great pitcher," said left-hander David Wells, who was pitched to by Darling last season. "I'm sure he'll be back soon and help us out."

Field's named PGA Player of Year

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — Nick Field of Englewood was named PGA Player of the Year Wednesday, the first non-Englewood player ever to win the award, which goes to the PGA Tour's leading money winner.

Field, winner of last year's Memorial Tournament, earned $2.07 million, ahead of the $2.05 million earned by John Cook, the 1999 Player of the Year.

Field, who has been a professional golfer for 15 years, said he was "overwhelmed" by the award.

"I never thought I'd be in this position," said Field, who has won six tournaments this year, including the U.S. Open and the PGA Championship.

and hit 20-24 free throws as the Bulls reached the Eastern Conference Finals before losing to eventual NBA champion Utah Jazz.

Said Armstrong, "It was the most difficult transition for me in my career."

Armstrong and his wife, Linda, have two children, a son and a daughter.

"We've been through a lot," Armstrong said. "But we're still together and we're still happy."

Armstrong's playing time was limited to the last two seasons of his career, although he was a key part of the Chicago Bulls during their three championship seasons.

During his University of Illinois tenure, Armstrong was a two-time all-American and helped the Illini to two Big Ten titles.

"I think I've got the rest of my life to play," Armstrong said. "I've been through a lot, but I'm still here and I'm still alive."

Armstrong, who had been feeling rushed to get back in the game, said he is now ready to retire.

"I'm ready to hang it up," Armstrong said. "I've been through a lot, but I'm still here and I'm still alive."

SAN ANTONIO — Jerry Burns will reach the Minnesota Vikings on the eve of the team's game with Chicago, general manager Mike Lynn said Thursday.

Burns hinted Tuesday that he might consider dropping down after the end of his fifth season in the NFL. Lynn said: "It asked him what his feelings were about that." The Vikings have been in town for the past couple of days.

"Can't do that, you'll get me fired," Burns said.

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds are running out of time to make moves before the trade deadline.

"The time is running out for us," manager Dusty Baker said. "We have to make some moves here."

The Reds are 3 1/2 games out of first place in the National League Central, and they have 28 games left to start making some noise in the NL West.

"There are a lot of games left," Baker said. "We have to make some moves here."

The Reds have been talking to other teams about starting pitchers and closers, and they are considering trading some of their minor league prospects.

"We have to make some moves here," Baker said. "We have to make some moves here."

The acquisition of new head coach Michelle Gehrke and assistant coach Don libert, the most valuable players from last year's team, has the University of Iowa women's volleyball team looking to the remainder of this season as new territory to conquer.

"The roster was really good and had talent in many positions and with the talent they had to choose from," said Diane Schneider, the latest confrontation of Hawkeyes head coach. "But we didn't play as well as we could and in the end we didn't play up to our par and also had a hurt and didn't play as well as they should have played."

Schneider, the latest confrontation of Hawkeyes head coach said. "It was a new field that had just been cleared for playing and because of the rainy weather both players were hurt - Maureen by stepping in a hole and Diane by slipping on the wet grass.

"The field in Des Moines was terrible. It was a corn field that had just been cleared for playing and because of the rainy weather both players were hurt - Maureen by stepping in a hole and Diane by slipping on the wet grass."

College Sunday at 10:30 a.m. at Carver Field. The Hawkeyes are expecting it to be a good match and to "see what we need to improve on in our next game."
