UI alumna: African-Americans should maximize opportunities

By Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

There is a fine line between the success and failure of African-Americans in higher education, says a UI alumna, and American universities need to give students enough opportunities to ensure that line is not crossed.

Returning to the university that she said gave her the opportunity she needed to earn her doctorate almost 40 years ago, Jewel Prestage spoke Thursday evening on the "African-American and the American Educational System: An American Crisis."

"The harsh reality is that at all stages and levels in American education today, African-Americans are disproportionately represented in the negative statistics column," Prestage said. Among other studies, she cited a 1988 American Council on Education report stating that, while the percentage of African-Americans graduating from high school had increased since 1982, the proportion of those attending college had decreased.

Prestage, who at the age of 22 became the first black woman to earn a doctorate in political science in America, said a large part of this crisis is caused by the lack of chances for African-Americans.

"Opportunity is elusive in the case of African-Americans," she said. "However you look at the African-Americans in the American educational system, there's a problem."

The under-representation of black faculty makes this crisis even more severe, she said, explaining that African-American faculty in traditionally white universities hold lower rankings, and therefore receive less pay and prestige.

But Prestage, who has served on countless education councils — including being appointed by then-President Jimmy Carter to the National Advisory Council on Women's Educational Programs — offered suggestions to help solve the crisis.

"If the number of African-Americans pursuing and receiving graduate degrees is to increase, then there must be a more supportive total environment for African-American students ... and creating this environment must be made a serious agenda item," she said.

To do this, school administrations should speak and act authoritatively when incidents of racial harassment occur, Prestage said.

"A second thing ... is to try to capitalize on the experiences of historically black institutions," she continued.

Other solutions include understanding the experiences of black students on campus and making sure they have adequate financial aid.

Jewel Prestage

"Don't be afraid to take those steps — to experiment," Prestage said, "because with the statistics being what they are, it is highly unlikely that whatever you do will be more wrong than what you are doing right now."

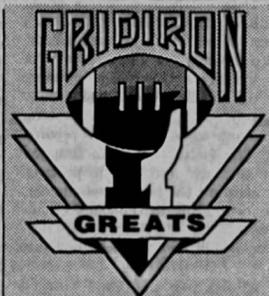

Prestage said institutions shouldn't be discouraged that increasing the number of African-Americans enrolled is difficult.

"If African-Americans are successful in bringing to American higher education the kind of diversity that is envisioned ... then all of us will be better for it," she said.

Prestage also thanked the UI for first giving her the opportunity she needed to attend graduate school, an option not open to her in her home state of Louisiana. She encouraged students at the UI now to keep the tradition of excellence alive.

"Don't let them let (the tradition of excellence) die," she said. "Insist on things that will make your education complete."

UI cancels research park ceremony because of expected demonstration

By Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

Today's opening ceremony for the Oakdale Research Park has been canceled by the UI to "avoid a disruption" of activities at the park.

Members of the UI Environmental Coalition planned to demonstrate at the park's site, which is less than 1000 yards from the controversial Oakdale radioactive waste incinerator.

UIEC spokeswoman Janelle Hare said Wednesday that the group planned to hand out information sheets and ask questions about the incinerator at the 2 p.m. ceremony.

But in a statement released Wednesday, the UI announced the cancellation of the ceremony, which was to be hosted by UI President Hunter Rawlings and Gov. Terry Branstad.

"Contrary to our expectations, it appeared that the research park opening would not be a celebration because some individuals were likely to disrupt it," said W. Bruce Wheaton, spokesman for the research park.

Wheaton said the development of the 40-acre Phase I of the project is proceeding on schedule, and the cancellation of the ceremony is unrelated to the park's development.

The idea to create an affiliated research park was born in April 1988, Wheaton said. When Rawlings came to the UI in August of that year, he actively consulted with state and industry leaders to formalize the idea. The goal of the project is to attract major corporations to the area and to enhance local economic growth and research opportunities for UI students and faculty.

Key funding for the park has come from the City of Coralville, the Iowa Department of Transportation, Norwest Banks of Des Moines and Cedar Rapids, and lottery proceeds allocated by the Iowa General Assembly.

Kit Gregorich, a UIEC spokeswoman, said the environmental group will meet on the Pentacrest at noon to distribute leaflets and answer questions.

Hazardous chemical leak leads to evacuation of army reserve

By Sonja West
The Daily Iowan

A leak of a decontamination chemical used on equipment involved in chemical warfare was reported Thursday at the U.S. Army Reserve, 1913 S. Riverside Drive.

The leak was reported by the reserve at 4:55 p.m. The hazardous materials team arrived at the building and evacuated the five people inside immediately, according to Capt. Andy Rocca of the Iowa City Fire Department.

Six one-quart containers of Diethylenetriamine (DS2), a decontamination chemical, were found leaking in a storage room. The chemical had been stored in the building for several years unknown to army personnel, Rocca said.

Thirty people were called to the scene from nine different fire, police and ambulance departments before the containers were removed safely.

Local artist wants stolen work returned

By Aaron A. Dolan
The Daily Iowan

"I'm a poor starving artist with debts to pay and I just want my painting back." These were the words of Eric Bacca, a local artist, whose painting was stolen on Saturday, Oct. 20, from Mama's, a local bar on 5 S. Dubuque St. On the same night, Mama's was given an order by the city to close permanently for serving alcohol to minors. Bacca's painting, valued at more than $250, hung on a wall in the bar, where it was posted for sale. Bacca told the Iowa City police that he saw a woman with short blonde hair, about 5 feet 3 inches tall, 130-135 pounds, walking out of Mama's with the painting that night. He thought she had purchased the artwork. But as he walked into the bar, Bacca discovered that it had been stolen. The owner said he didn't even see the painting leave the bar. Bacca went to the police the following Tuesday. "I didn't want to file charges. I just wanted to get my painting back," Bacca commented. The painting is of a colorful bird called a trogon. The particular trogon in the painting is known as the Ketzl Bird, revered by the Mayans and other Central American Indian tribes who believed it represented the sun. The bird is iridescent green with a crimson throat and outer tail feathers that are two feet long. The trogon is also the national emblem of Guatemala. Captain Donald Strand, in charge of the Iowa City Police Department's Planning and Research Division, said police are investigating the case. "Essentially what we would do is to determine if there is anybody who can identify the suspect," Strand said. "If there are no witnesses, or if a photo or print of the painting isn't available, then the police have no clues on which to proceed and the case is put on inactive status, he described. Strand said he believes the painting probably wouldn't be sold to a pawn shop but added "it could turn up in a flea market or a yard sale." "I'm hoping on the basis of this story that someone will come forward with some information," Strand said. Bacca said that if the suspected art thief would like to return his painting, he or she can take it to the following places with "no questions asked": The Daily Iowan, 201N Communications Center; the Wesley Foundation, 120 N. Dubuque St.; the Unitarian Church, 10 S. Gilbert St.; or the Gloria Dei Lutheran Church, on the corner of Dubuque and Market streets.

Courts

By Brenda Mobile
The Daily Iowan

■ A Tiffin, Iowa, woman changed her plea to guilty Wednesday on a charge of assault causing injury. According to Johnson County District Court records, Kimberly K. Olson, 24, of Tiffin, Iowa, struck the victim, whose name is being withheld, around July 9 at Lot 9, Clear Creek Mobile Home Court, Tiffin, Iowa. Olson allegedly struck the victim on the cheek, causing her to fall and then "drug her by the hair on the asphalt causing abrasions to both knees," records say. The victim was then dragged over to a car and, in the process, her head hit the bumper of the car, causing bumps to the back of her head. Olson will be sentenced on Nov. 30. ■ An Iowa City man was charged early Thursday morning with assault causing injury after a dispute in a local bar. According to Johnson County District Court records, Christopher J. Salomon, 20, of the 900 block of East College Street, was involved in a dispute at R.T. Grunts, 826 S. Clinton St. Salomon, a bouncer at R.T.'s, was accused of pushing the victim, who was on his way out of the bar, to the ground following a dispute, causing "abrasions and contusions on his face," records say. Salomon was released from custody on his own recognizance, records say. A preliminary hearing is set for Nov. 13. ■ An Iowa City man was charged Thursday with assault causing injury following an argument with his girlfriend. According to Johnson County District Court records, Larry J. Slocum, 20, of the 400 block of South Linn Street, was engaged in a verbal argument with his girlfriend at an apartment at 725 Emerald St. Slocum allegedly pushed his girlfriend, causing her to strike her mouth against a waterbed. Slocum was released from custody on his own recognizance, records say. A preliminary hearing is set for Nov. 13. ■ A Texas man was found guilty Wednesday of charges of operating a vehicle without the owner's consent. According to Johnson County District Court records, Samuel T. Garris, 22, of San Antonio, stole an ignition key to a 1983 Datsun ZX from the owner's jewelry box around July 8 at a house where he was temporarily residing. It was discovered that the car was stolen during an investigation of the circumstances of a hit and run incident. Garris was placed on two years' probation and was fined restitution to the victim in the amount of $2,982.30. ■ An Iowa City man was charged with forgery Wednesday after using a check not belonging to him as payment for clothes. According to Johnson County District Court records, Steven W. Elliott, 20, of the 300 block of North Dubuque Street, wrote and presented a check for $399.36 to Bremers Clothing, 120 E. Washington St. Elliott was found wearing shoes purchased with the check and admitted to writing the check. Elliott was placed in custody of the 6th Judicial District Department of Corrections, and a preliminary hearing has been set for Nov. 13.

Fraternity sponsors roundup for 'mom'

31 years of service honored

By Amy Davoux
The Daily Iowan

After 31 years in a fraternity house, Ida Mae Bendt will celebrate her own special homecoming this weekend.

As the first and only housemother for the UI chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, Bendt, fondly known as Mom B. to her "boys," will have the chance to welcome home some of her former sons.

Current fraternity members and alumni are hosting "Mom B.'s Roundup" at the Lambda Chi house to celebrate her years of loyalty to the chapter, said Byron Bork, an alumnus of Lambda Chi who assisted in planning the event.

"Mom B. has been a big influence on a lot of people over the years, and we have invited the first 100 members of the fraternity back as a tribute to her," Bork said.

Bork said there has been a "good response" from alumni, and the roundup will bring together such fraternity members as Scott Davis and Dale Jansen, the first and second members of the UI Iota Chi Zeta chapter of Lambda Chi, and George Spasyk, the executive director of Lambda Chi's national chapter.

Kevin Dibel, an active member of Lambda Chi, said, "It's both a celebration for Mom B. and a uniting of the brotherhood."

Dibel added that although Mom B. often seems to be more of a grandmother figure, she can be just like a mom to the fraternity members under her care.

"She's someone we can go to talk to, someone to eat dinner with ...

someone who will improve our table manners," Dibel said.

Bendt said beyond improving table manners, her duties over the years have included teaching social graces, providing cultural opportunities, assisting with academic problems, sewing on buttons and even just giving advice.

"Mom B. has always been someone the boys in the house can go to talk to about any problem," Bork said. "She has a tremendous amount of interest in people and a lot of wisdom to share."

"It's both a celebration for Mom B. and a uniting of the brotherhood."

Kevin Dibel
Lambda Chi Alpha active

Bork added that Bendt has earned the Outstanding Housemother Award from the Lambda Chi National Chapter three times during her 31 years for her dedication to the fraternity.

Bendt suffered a heart attack over Labor Day weekend and is staying in a local convalescent home. But she intends to return to the house this weekend for the party and will move in again permanently around Dec. 1.

"It's just going to be great to have some of these guys come back for the roundup," she said. "I bought a real western outfit in California for the event — I want to look the part." Bendt has been with the fraternity since it originated at the UI in 1959 following the death of her husband.

"I was left a widow in 1958, and for me the fraternity house became the beginning of a new life," Bendt said. "It's been very rewarding.

I've met a lot of nice people, made a lot of friends and made a new home for myself."

Weekend events for Mom B.'s Roundup include a party Friday for the alumni, a tailgate before the game, and a dinner and dance Saturday.

UI Vietnam Film Project will relate untold story

By David Sims
The Daily Iowan

"Full Metal Jacket," "Platoon," "Apocalypse Now" — These are just a few of the many brutal wide-screen images that have brought the Vietnam War home to Americans. But 15 years after the war's end, the other side of the story remains largely untold.

In an effort to tell the untold story, The Vietnam Film Project will screen six Vietnamese films this weekend and next week.

The series, "Vietnam's Vietnam War," highlights the cinematic achievements of seven native directors focusing on the war and contemporary Vietnamese society. All but one of the films were shot in the post-war era.

"All American films, whatever attitude expressed about the war, has the Vietnamese — whether enemy, ally or civilian — as never really the subject," said Stephen Vlastos, a UI professor of history. "They are an invisible or barely visible presence against which the Americans are acting."

Vlastos, who began teaching courses on the history of the Vietnam War in 1981, said one of his main interests is how the war is being remembered in film and literature. The film series is part of a class he is teaching on the history and narrative of the era.

"This is a rare opportunity to see how the Vietnamese represent themselves in their war," he said.

The series opens this afternoon with a 1964 documentary on the Vietnamese victory at Dien Ben Phu in 1954, which led to the withdrawal of the French from southeast Asia. It continues tonight with a 1986 satire film, "Quiet Little Town," about a competition between neighboring towns to care for an injured government minister.

Next week's films, which deal directly with the Vietnam War, will be complemented by two speakers. Rick Berg, a Vietnam veteran, will discuss "Vietnam War Narratives." John McAuliffe, who is director of the U.S.-Indochina Reconciliation Project in Washington, will speak on "Vietnam Today: Fifteen Years After Reunification." McAuliffe's project oversees all cultural exchanges between the United States and Vietnam.

The series coincides with the recent renewal of diplomatic contacts between Vietnam and the United States. Since its evacuation in 1975, the United States has sought to exclude the southeast Asian nation from participation in international political and economic affairs.

But recently, Secretary of State James Baker met with high-ranking Vietnamese officials as part of an effort to form a lasting peace in neighboring Cambodia.

"It appears that the United States and Vietnam are moving towards a normalization of relations," Vlastos said. "I don't think it's something that's going to happen overnight, but it's clearly something that's going to happen."

All of the films are subtitled except for the Dien Ben Phu documentary, which will be narrated by Vlastos.

The films and symposium, which are free and open to the public, will be held in Room 101, Communication Studies Building. For more information call Vlastos at 335-2221 or Michael Koch at 335-1348.

The series is co-sponsored by The Institute for Cinema and Culture and The Center for Asian and Pacific Studies.

Database added to OASIS system makes searches easier

By Myron Wright
Special to The Daily Iowan

Users of the UI Main Library can now enlist the OASIS system to make detailed electronic searches for articles in a large number of scholarly periodicals.

The addition of the Wilsonline database (WILS) enables the user to perform a sophisticated computerized search for information with OASIS's user-friendly commands: author, title, subject and keyword.

According to several librarians, WILS, which went on-line Sept. 25, represents an improvement over Infotrac, the library's previous system for searching for periodicals. The ability to delineate searches in a very specific manner allows the user to save time over Infotrac, which only allows for "subject" searches and forces the user to wade through lists of unwanted references.

Wilsonline references English-language journal articles and book reviews from five H.W. Wilson Indexes. This database includes articles from:

- Applied Science and Technology Index, covering 335 journals from November 1983 to present.

- Business Periodicals Index, covering 275 journals from November 1982 to present.

- General Science Index, covering 111 journals from May 1984 to present.

- Humanities Index, covering 295 journals from March 1984 to present.

- Social Sciences Index, covering 300 journals from February 1983 to present.

intermediate-level scholarly journals," said John Schacht, reference librarian and chairman of the OASIS Task Force. He added, however, that anyone looking for articles in more popular periodicals should still consult Infotrac or The Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature.

Journals not in the collection are available to graduate students through the library loan program.

Mandate will give disabled chance to be 'true' citizens

By Wendy Alesch
The Daily Iowan

The newly mandated American Disabilities Act will give disabled people a chance to become true citizens, rights activist Bob Williams said Thursday.

Williams and Tim Cook, an attorney who specializes in rights for disabled people, were the featured speakers in a panel discussion held at the Boyd Law Building to address the implications of the ADA for Iowa City and the UI.

The speakers engaged in a forum about the history of Americans with disabilities and the role that the act, passed in July 1990, will play for the future of disabled people.

Specifically, the ADA mandates that all new facilities, private or public, be accessible to people with disabilities.

For the UI, the changes will deal primarily with transportation and telecommunications. For example, any Cambuses purchased in the future must have wheelchair lifts, and provisions must be made to provide more telecommunications on campus phone lines for those who are deaf or who have severe speech impediments.

Both Cook and Williams are actively involved in the disability civil rights movement. Cook has successfully litigated cases upholding the rights of Americans with disabilities through a public interest law center in Washington, D.C. Williams, who has multiple disabilities, has written and spoken widely on the same topic and recently played a key role in the passage of the ADA.

"The act doesn't talk about the impossible or the impractical," Williams said. "You won't see massive litigation over the impossible. What you will see (as a result of the ADA) is more disabled people getting out and getting jobs and paying taxes like all others."

Cook said disabled people often aren't thought of as a group that gets discriminated against. But he compared the fight for disabled people's rights to the civil rights movement.

"The ADA is the first major civil rights act to cross President Bush's desk," he said.

Iowa's jobless rate declines slightly

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa's jobless rate edged downward to 3.9 percent during September as schools kicked off the new year and some factories reopened after planned summer shutdowns, officials said Thursday.

The rate is down slightly from the 4 percent jobless rate in August, and the 4.2 percent rate in September of last year, Department of Employment Services head Cynthia Eisenhauer said.

There were 58,300 Iowans without work during the month, down from 59,400 the previous month. In September of last year, there were 63,500 unemployed Iowans.

Stronger farm income and resumption of the school year have coupled to offset declines in manufacturing "concentrated in the durable goods industries," Eisenhauer said.

The major gainers were the construction industry, retail sales and the service sector.

The report marks the fifth consecutive month that unemployment in the state has remained relatively stable, with the number of jobless Iowans hovering around 60,000. "The boost in farm income has lessened the effects of a softening national economy," Eisenhauer said.

There were mixed signals for the economy in the unemployment report. Statewide employment posted a slight loss during the month, dipping to 1,418,900. That compares to 1,424,700 in August.

At the same time, payroll enrollment grew by 17,900 over the month and non-farm employment was up 20,800.

The nation's unemployment rate was 5.7 percent during September.

College students blame unbalanced diet on time constraints, need for convenience

By Heidi Pederson
The Daily Iowan

When students leave home for college, missing Mom's cooking isn't something they usually worry about. Yet according to many UI students, a decent meal is one thing they really miss about home.

For these students, eating habits at school are often a radical change — usually not for the better.

"I live on Rocky's pizza," said one UI sophomore. "That and Spaghetti-O's. It's the only decent food I can get. The dorm food is awful."

To combat hunger, this Hillcrest resident stocks plenty of quick-fix food such as ravioli, Ramen noodles, peanut butter and jelly, and microwave popcorn.

This student's eating habits are typical, according to Ann Shetler, a registered dietitian at Student Health. And the typical college student diet can stand improvement, she added.

Shetler said her biggest concern is the inconsistency of the eating habits, such as skipping meals and substituting snack foods for more nutritious ones.

She said that although an occasional meal of such quick-fix food as Ramen noodles or Spaghetti-O's is OK, it isn't wise to make it a habit.

Hope Thomas, a UI junior who said she is guilty of such behavior, said her biggest obstacle to a balanced diet is a lack of time.

"I try to eat healthy foods, except when I'm in a hurry," she said. "There are times when I eat a lot of junk food. It's easier, it's quicker, less work — you name it. I don't like my residence hall cafeterias give students no control over what they are eating.

Thomas also thinks that moving out of the residence halls has improved her diet. "Dorm food sucks! They're so chintzy with everything, and it's the worst as far as variety," she said. "It's hit and miss. They need more alternatives."

According to Steve Bowers, residence hall food service director, UI food service tries to address student complaints by experimenting with additional entrees or alternative meals.

Of the approximately 5,800 students the residence halls serve nightly, Bowers said the majority do get a balanced diet.

"It's actually easier to eat a balanced meal in the residence halls because of all the choices," he said. "It's just adjusting to the freedom and selecting a balanced diet."

However, Thomas said most students seem to have eating habits similar to hers.

"Our schedules are so tight," she said. "You never know when you can get a meal in. When you get home you're tired and starved, so you grab what's closest and fastest."

Shetler said there are ways to improve eating habits, even on a tight schedule.

"Plan ahead," she stressed. "Put down on paper some menu ideas and shopping lists, so you don't just grab food at the store without thinking. Do extra cooking on weekends and freeze it for later in the week."

The key, she said is "making food a priority."

Man barred from meals; several protest action

By Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Several people demonstrated in front of the Iowa City Senior Center Thursday to protest the barring of an 86-year-old man from the congregate meal program because he is "unclean."

The group of protesters, including a congregate meals worker and Johnson County SEATS drivers, rallied in support of Iowa City resident Frank Bock's right to have meals at the center regardless of his personal hygiene habits.

Jo Hiner, a picket and congregate meals worker, said the center had no right to bar Bock.

"It's beside the point that he's dirty. He should just get fed," she said. "Nobody has to sit at the table with him."

Hiner said that Bock, who recently injured his foot, has been receiving meals at home. But she added that social interaction is part of the purpose of the congregate meal program.

"I feel like a great injustice is being done to Frank," said Lori Ransdell, another demonstrator.

Ransdell said she has heard other senior citizens say they are reluctant to come to the meals now because "they feel they aren't good enough."

Bock was first barred from the center about one month ago, after complaints about his cleanliness became excessive, said Bette Meisel, director of the Senior Center.

She said Bock came to the center dressed in filthy clothes, smelled and was almost black from an accumulation of dirt.

"Participants (in the meals) feel they have a right to a healthy environment," she said.

Meisel said Bock had been coming to the meals since the center was first opened about nine years ago, but there had never been many complaints until recently.

Meisel decided that Bock could be turned away until he "bathed and changed regularly," and the Senior Center Commission agreed. Many senior citizens signed a petition to keep Bock out.

"I should have (turned him away) nine years ago," Meisel said.

Bock has been banned from several other businesses in Iowa City, she added.

Meisel said she believes that Bock has the right to be dirty, but said the rights of the other participants in the meals should come first.

"Everybody is big on people's rights, but soon the people that come here will have no rights," she said.

Have you ever seen a moose on the loose?

The Associated Press

OCHHEYEDAN, Iowa — Sightseers and well-wishers apparently are preventing a moose from continuing his wanderings southward through Iowa.

"There's so much obstruction, whenever he goes to move, all the cars go down there and sort of head him back," Osceola County conservation director Ron Spengler said Thursday.

"There are so many curiosity seekers. There's quite a crowd," he said. "Yesterday, there must have been 15 vehicles down there."

Spengler said the animal is in an area bordering the Ocheyedan River several miles south of Ocheyedan. The animal was first spotted in Iowa near Ocheyedan on Tuesday and has been near the town ever since.

"They're calling it the Centennial Moose, since we're holding our centennial celebration next year. But I don't think they're going to change their logo," Spengler said. "Everybody is taking a real affectionate attitude toward it."

The conservation officer said the animal apparently wants to travel the river south and east into O'Brien and Clay counties.

More U.S. hostages freed; French allowed to leave

The Associated Press

Five freed Americans enjoyed a homecoming that was overshadowed by fears for colleagues still held captive in Iraq, and nine more former U.S. hostages were flying to the United States today.

In Washington, CIA director William Webster said Thursday the Middle East will never be secure as long as Saddam Hussein remains in power — unless the Iraqi president's weapons are destroyed.

Regarding the French hostages, Western diplomatic sources in Baghdad said French citizens given permission this week to depart Iraq will begin leaving on Saturday. More than 300 French citizens are among the thousands of foreigners who were trapped in Iraq after the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

France has said it would not make any concessions in exchange for the freeing of its nationals, but the Iraqi government-run daily newspaper Al-Jumhuriya said today that France would withdraw some of its forces from the Persian Gulf region. It cited unidentified, official sources in Paris.

France has about 5,000 troops in Saudi Arabia, plus an estimated 2,000 sailors aboard 14 ships in the region as part of the predominantly American multinational force.

U.S. military strength in the gulf region, now totaling about 220,000 troops, could grow substantially in coming weeks, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said today.

"We're not at the point yet where we want to stop adding forces," Cheney said on "CBS This Morning." Asked if adding 100,000 troops was possible, he said, "It's conceivable that we'll end up with that big an increase."

Congressional sources said Cheney and Secretary of State James Baker had disclosed an offer by Iraq to free Canadian and German hostages in return for high-level diplomatic visits from those countries.

The sources said Cheney and Baker briefed lawmakers in a closed-door meeting on Wednesday. Saddam invited the Canadian and German foreign ministers to visit his country and held out the prospect that some of their nationals could be released if they did so, House members were told.

Rep. Mel Levine, D-Calif., said the reported entreaties to U.S. allies "are viewed by our guys as cynical (and) exploitative of the hostages, and I think Congress agrees with that assessment."

Israel wants to redirect world attention to gulf

By G.G. LaBelle
The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Foreign Minister David Levy on Thursday rejected the latest U.N. Security Council censure of Israel and urged the world to focus on enforcing U.N. demands that Iraq withdraw from Kuwait.

Levy's comments came one day after the Security Council rebuked Israel for not cooperating with a U.N. investigation into the killing Oct. 8 of 19 Palestinians on Jerusalem's Temple Mount.

Israeli soldiers, meanwhile, blocked the 1.7 million Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza Strip from entering Israel for a second day Thursday in an effort to stem Arab-Jewish violence.

Defense Minister Moshe Arens ordered the ban on Palestinians entering after five people were killed and 11 wounded this week in several revenge attacks by Arabs and Jews that date to the Temple Mount deaths.

In the West Bank city of Nablus, the local branch of PLO chief Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction distributed a leaflet condemning attacks on Jews and saying that Jewish and Arab blood should not be spilled.

"Blood is blood, with the same color, and there is no difference in religions," it said. The leaflet was apparently meant to counter calls from Muslim fundamentalist groups for attacks on Israelis.

Levy made his comment in a talk with diplomats, including U.S. Ambassador William Brown. The session was private, but a Levy aide later quoted and summarized his statements.

According to the aide, Levy told the ambassadors that Israel could not agree to a U.N. mission coming to investigate the killings because the resolution that ordered the inquiry was biased.

"It is prejudging Israel's guilt, ascertaining at the outset that Jerusalem is an occupied area and that ways should be found to protect the Palestinians. We cannot agree to that," he was quoted as saying.

Levy emphasized the world's main task should be enforcing Security Council resolutions on the Persian Gulf and not trying to link Israel to the Iraqi problem in Kuwait, said the aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Yossi Ben Aharon, director-general of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's office, also said Israel would ignore the latest U.N. rebuke.

Aharon told Israel army radio he hoped criticism of Israel could be quieted by its own investigation of the Temple Mount deaths. News reports said results of the Israeli inquiry may be issued today and will blame senior police officials.

State-owned television reported "rumors abound that serious conclusions will be drawn and of heads rolling," after the Temple Mount investigation report is published today.

Police Minister Roni Milo was quoted by the television as promising all recommendations of the commission would be carried out.

Avi Pazner, Shamir's spokesman, said the government was disappointed with the Washington vote for the U.N. resolution.

"We are sorry because this helps (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein to distract the attention from what is happening in the gulf ... to what is happening in Jerusalem," he told reporters.

Faisal Husseini, the leading PLO supporter in Jerusalem, compared Israel's response to Iraq's similar disregard for U.N. resolutions. He said the two U.N. votes against Israel were part of a new direction by the world body.

Bhutto will not accept defeat, will take case to court instead

By Sharon Herbaugh
The Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — A right-wing coalition scored a landslide victory over ousted Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto and urged her to be a good loser and accept defeat. Bhutto said she'll go to court.

Bhutto, ejected from office Aug. 6 on corruption and mismanagement charges, refused to concede Wednesday's parliamentary election and accused the army-backed caretaker government of massive vote-rigging.

A group of 40 international poll watchers refused to comment on the allegations but was expected to discuss its preliminary findings Friday in Karachi.

The group's assessment could affect hundreds of millions of dollars in U.S. aid to Pakistan. The United States and other Western countries have threatened to cut off aid if the elections were rigged.

"I can assure you the election has not been rigged," caretaker Prime Minister Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi told a news conference.

'Handmaid's Tale' foretells establishment of oppression

By Henry Olson
The Daily Iowan

"Once upon a time, In the recent future, A country went wrong. The country was called The Republic of Gilead."

So begins "The Handmaid's Tale," Volker Schlöndorff's futuristic film about North American democracy gone awry. "The Handmaid's Tale," coming to the Bijou this weekend, is based on Margaret Atwood's disturbing novel about the increasingly plausible fusion of church and state.

War and pollution provoke Gilead's theocracy. Because of acid rain and other chemicals in the environment, only one woman out of 100 can bear children. Consequently the Old Testament becomes the republic's constitution, sex becomes a passionless state institution, the barren women are more or less forced into slavery and homosexuality becomes punishable by exile.

Also because of the war and pollution, men are a self-proclaimed scarce commodity. Each man has three types of wives: his matrimonial wife, who performs all the traditional functions of a spouse; the handmaid, who bears the children; and the "Martha," who serves as a maid. The matrimonial wife wears only the blue of the Madonna while the handmaid is draped in scarlet.

At the Bijou

Kate, played by Natasha Richardson, tries to escape from Gilead and is imprisoned as a handmaid. During the impregnation ritual Kate is forced to lie between the legs of the wife (Faye Dunaway) while the commander (Robert Duvall) engages in sexual intercourse with her.

Schlöndorff effectively reveals the degradation that each party must endure during the act. Serena Joy, the commander's wife, endures not only her infertility, but must also watch as her husband copulates with a stranger.

The commander falls for Kate and arranges clandestine meetings with the handmaid. Surprisingly it is not for sex that he is starved but for companionship. Over the course of the film a sort of friendship develops between the two.

At no point, however, does Kate forget that though the commander may be likable, he is evil. Similarly, though the commander shows affection for Kate, he does not let her forget that his sole objective is the subjugation of women.

Adultery, on the part of a handmaid in Gilead, is punishable by death. The execution packs more of a punch because it is performed by her sisters. Similarly, the handmaids all join together to rip to pieces a dissident who has been declared a rapist.

One of the most disturbing facts about "The Handmaid's Tale" is that many of the film's ideas are echoed in the current political environment. Abortion is rapidly becoming punishable by law. Contraceptives are not in the hands of those who need them most. As Aunt Lydia, Kate's captor, tells her future handmaids, "There is more than one kind of freedom. In the days of anarchy, you were given freedom to. Now you're given freedom from. Don't underestimate it." We won't, Aunt Lydia, we won't.

"The Handmaid's Tale" will be shown at the Bijou on Friday at 9:30 p.m., Saturday at 5:45 p.m. and 7:45 p.m. and Sunday at 5:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Local bands play Wheelroom

The Daily Iowan

The Dangtrippers, Big Citizen and Chicago import The Gravity Beavers will launch Homecoming Weekend during an evening of new music at The Wheelroom in the Union, Friday, Oct. 26, from 8:30 p.m. to midnight. The performances are sponsored by the Union and The Union Board, and there will be no cover.

The Dangtrippers have been called "the cream of a very fertile crop of Iowa City bands." They will be performing original songs from their debut album, "Days Between Stations," on the Athens, Ga.-based Dog Gone label, as well as material from a soon-to-be-released new album.

After showcasing at new music festivals in both Austin, Texas, and New York, The Dangtrippers were signed by Jefferson Holt, manager of R.E.M. They are now receiving both national and international attention for their blend of experimental off-rhythms and popular harmonies. Billboard called "Days Between Stations" "a tastefully catchy, memorably jangly debut," and Spin saluted their "sunny vocal harmonies and ringing guitars."

Though influenced by some of the same groups as The Dangtrippers, Big Citizen offers its own unique blend of alternative and pop stylings. The regional music magazine Neo called Big Citizen "a band with its head on straight and its aim at a music future" and characterized its music as "both mesmerizing and melodic... with a steel wool texture."

Big Citizen's set will feature new material it has been developing during recent studio sessions at both Catamount Recording in Iowa City band The Dangtrippers, who will perform tonight with Big Citizen and The Gravity Beavers in the Union Wheelroom.

Cedar Falls and Minstrel Studios in Iowa City.

Making their Iowa City debut Oct. 26 will be The Gravity Beavers, a new Chicago-based band that opened recently for Del Amitri and shares with the band a strong pop sensibility.

Dallas covers up nude statues

The Associated Press

DALLAS — Art lovers are not amused by the action of city officials to cover some tiny statues of nude women on display at Dallas City Hall with fig leaves.

The statues by sculptor Future Akins of Lubbock were displayed as part of a national art competition sponsored by the Dallas chapter of the Women's Caucus for Art. The exhibit, titled "Getting Better Ain't Always Easy," is to be judged

Nov. 2.

Yvonne Washington, assistant director of the Park and Recreation Department, said city officials acted on their own instincts, not as a result of any complaints or public outcry.

"I think there was possibly too much shock value," she said. "I'm trying to be sensitive to the whole community."

"Personally, I think it's time for Dallas to wake up," said Bonnie Wilber, president of the Dallas chapter of the women's art group. "Bodies are bodies. To me, this is censorship."

"I think it was overreacting and silly and kind of sad," Akins said Wednesday. "I can't imagine in my wildest imagination how these pieces would be offensive to anybody."

"I thought we were over this censorship thing," she added. "Maybe Dallas doesn't read the papers."

HUMAN RIGHTS POLICY

Unacceptable direction

It seems the administration is having a bad year. The latest flap involves the resignation of Faculty Representative Ozzie Diaz-Duque from the Human Rights Committee in protest of perceived administrative indifference toward gays and lesbians.

Diaz-Duque's resignation follows the controversy over the Bart Simpson AIDS poster and the committee's alleged mismanagement of Brett Beemyn's complaint. Several university community members feel the poster was in violation of UI policy because it threatened violence against a protected group. Furthermore, reports have indicated the complainant was not afforded due respect in his appeal.

But Diaz-Duque resigned to protest administrative apathy in general, citing a widespread "lack of commitment to the entire university for all minorities, specifically lesbians and gays." Sources say the administration has been unwilling to establish a dialogue with the gay and lesbian community. Specifically, that President Rawlings discouraged an effort by a subcommittee of the Council on the Status of Women to establish a Gay and Lesbian Task force, which would have examined the gap between the human rights policy (revised in 1985 to protect gays and lesbians) and actual existing procedure. Rawlings said the task force was not necessary, saying it would be redundant with the efforts of the Human Rights Committee. Ironically, such an examination may have circumvented the current discord.

Rawlings also declined an offer to meet with representatives of the gay and lesbian community to discuss their concerns.

The charter of the Human Rights Committee states that, in accordance with general university policy, "in no aspect of its programs shall there be differences in the treatment of persons because of race, creed, ... (or) affectional or associational preference."

It is frightening that a committee stands accused of compromising the very reason for its being. That human rights violations may occur in a committee devoted to maintaining those rights is a serious charge.

It is also distressing that the president's office seems inattentive to the needs of the estimated 3,000 gays and lesbians in the UI community.

To his credit, President Rawlings has allowed a dialogue through Vice President Peter Nathan, who spoke during Gay and Lesbian Pride Week this summer. But the president's voice should be heard, and he will have to speak loudly to be audible above the current din of discontent.

Recent administrative bumbles have shown that ignoring a problem won't make it go away. Diaz-Duque is an able and devoted human rights advocate. His resignation should not be accepted. Instead, administrators should re-evaluate their commitment to the human rights policy.

RAPE PREVENTION

SAR's efforts

Reality, like comedy, is not always pretty. For instance, the fact that a woman cannot walk alone at night without fearing for her safety is an ugly truth indeed. So is the fact that Students Against Rape has encountered so much opposition from local women's groups.

First, and most ridiculous, is the claim that SAR "is not concerned with violence against women but is solely profit-motivated." Although SAR is in the business of selling SABRE (tear gas canisters similar to mace), members say that their profits will be donated to local rape-prevention centers. But even if the profits were pocketed, what difference would it make? Does the fact that dead-bolt locks and car seats for infants are sold for profit somehow mean that their producers are unconcerned about burglaries and car accidents? One need not choose to be a full-time philanthropist in order to perform important services or to provide society with necessary products. In fact, societies that are not profit-motivated tend to have glaring shortages and absences of worthwhile products such as soap and food.

Second, Tracy Van Quathem of Women Take Back the Night suggests that if SAR "wanted to make their energy more useful, they should be teaching other men about rape rather than selling SABRE." While educating men about rape is an important component of rape prevention and may help prevent date rape, it is not likely to have any effect on the rapists who lurk around alleys after dark. It is hard to imagine that sort of person attending a sensitivity seminar.

Van Quathem also said she is "angry" about SAR's fliers because they contain the appeal: "Men, make sure your girlfriends are safe." She feels that this "reinforces the idea of women being dependent on men," and says "this is how women get set up as such easy targets in the first place."

To say that a man concerned about a woman's safety somehow perpetuates the danger she faces is ludicrous. Rape is not an issue that men face directly very often, so they may need to be reminded of the danger it poses to their friends. Women are not "dependent" on men, but at night they do need protection. That may mean a ride from the WTA, a girlfriend or boyfriend to walk with, or a can of SABRE. The fact that women are more prone to violent attacks has nothing to do with a perceived dependence on the opposite sex, but rather with relative physical vulnerability.

That is unfortunate. It is not convenient and it is not pretty, but it is a reality that is not likely to disappear. And any organization that attempts to make that reality a little less threatening should be commended.

That poll thing keeps us on course

Members of Congress had a lot of gall telling President Bush that they wanted a big say in whether we go to war with Iraq.

They don't seem to understand that despite what the Constitution says about Congress declaring wars, we're in a fast-moving, high-tech era of conflict. Military choices must be made quickly. The commander-in-chief can't spend weeks, days, hours or even minutes discussing his plans with a flock of senators. He must be ready to make split-second decisions.

That's why a modern president, such as Bush, must base his decisions on what the most recent polls show.

Of course, it's doubtful that there would be anything to rival the size and the intensity of the Vietnam anti-war movement, which was led by college students.

That's because the long-haired students of that day were more deeply involved in social issues and had more sensitive consciences than today's students. And also because we still had a draft and they were terrified they might be called and would get their butts shot off.

But now, with an all-volunteer military, draft-immune students are more concerned with ecological threats to their favorite beaches.

Nevertheless, peace rallies and marches are being planned in many cities. They are being organized by disgruntled taxpayers, the jobless, veterans with unhappy memories, habitual peaceniks and even people who have genuine concerns about the propriety of blowing up women and children, even if they are of the Arab persuasion.

That's why we need polls. The president must have up-to-date information on how many Americans are aware that the ruling Kuwaitis are still unbelievably wealthy, even though they have been chased from their Kuwait mansions into luxury suites in Saudi Arabia.

Unlike traditional war refugees, Kuwait's rulers are still managing a worldwide investment portfolio with an estimated value of $100 billion.

If that number confuses you, think of it this way: Invested conservatively, it would earn a yearly income of about $7 billion. As an economist once said, "When you got $100 billion to play with, the bucks can really pile up."

So the emir of Kuwait and his chums aren't exactly your typical boat people. They have enough money right now so that they could probably go out and buy themselves a new country that would be nicer than Kuwait.

This is something the budding peace movement will surely bandy about. They'll ask whether we should be going to war to restore the comforts of those who already have enough money to fill the Grand Canyon.

Sure, they will say, Saddam is a nasty fellow for mugging a small neighbor. But do we send out troops when China bullies little Tibet, jailing and torturing its religious leaders? No,

The president must have up-to-date information on how many Americans are aware that the ruling Kuwaitis are still unbelievably wealthy, even though they have been chased from their Kuwait mansions into luxury suites in Saudi Arabia.

we give China a special deal for its imports. Of course, Tibet doesn't pump oil, so it has only itself to blame.

Anyway, all of these factors, and many more, must be quickly weighed by a president, and he can't do it by schmoozing with congressmen. He must go directly to the key source of the wisdom — the ABC-New York Times-CBS-Washington Post-NBC-USA Today-Poll.

It could be disastrous if Bush ordered a surprise blast at Iraq only to be told moments later that the latest polls showed that only 49.99 percent favored an attack while 50.01 percent opposed it.

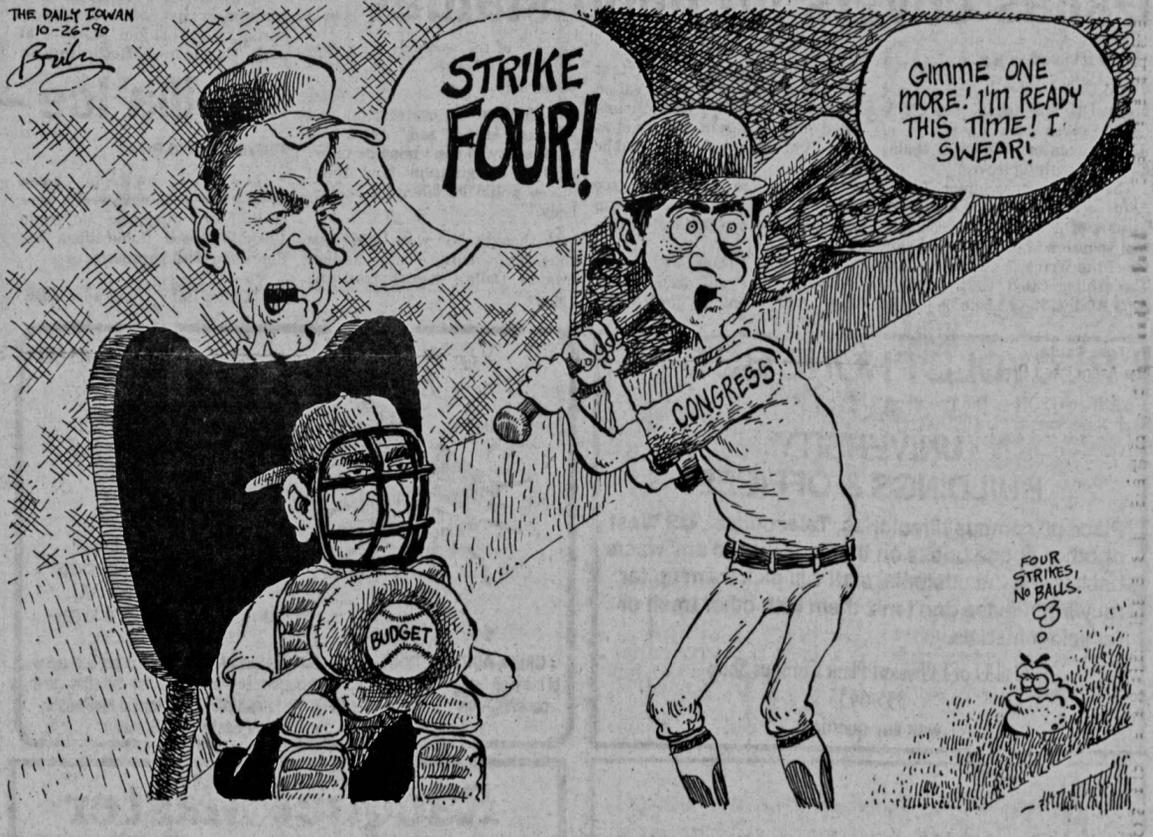

He'd have to say, "Damn, if pencils have erasers, why can't missiles?"

Do the polls show that the troop buildup can affect the outcome of November's congressional races? Is there a mathematical relationship between gas pump prices and an acceptable body count? Can a president be re-elected if he first declares that a Saddam Hussein is a Hitler-like monster and a threat to the entire civilized world, but then he doesn't go in there and kill the villain?

And most importantly, do the polls show that there could be a dreaded peace movement stirring in America? There are signs that such a movement is taking shape. Although it isn't big or widespread yet, all that it would take is a few shots of marchers on prime-time TV and it could spread. Especially now that the World Series is over and people have more time on their hands.

Trite and trivial

To the Editor:
For those of you who present yourselves as pseudo band critics, it's a shame that you have to stoop to the level of a jerk and make something out of nothing. In comparing the Hawkeye Marching Band to the Wisconsin Marching (?) Band, it is obvious to me and a lot of other people that your taste in music is a bit deprived.

Is the HMB bad because it did not march around on the field with no degree of poise or horn position (that means standing up straight with pride and playing to the audience, not the ground); have members jump on each others' backs and play the "beer song" (which, by the way, the band is asked not to play by those in very high positions, but does so anyway because you, the fans, like it); have members stop playing in the middle of a song to look around on the field to see if they were in the right position (funny, I always thought the goal in a marching band was play and march); play so obnoxiously that it demeaned the music?

The HMB shows more class. While the HMB tries to remain a support group to the team and fans during the game, it also provides entertainment to "Joe Fan" and challenges the band members with intricate drills and music. In regard to the Wisconsin game, you critics seem to be more pleased with the trite and trivial than with substance.

The John Philip Sousa Foundation recognized the high performance quality of the HMB and chose it from more than 70 other bands to receive the Sudler Trophy this year. Way to go!

Experience

To the Editor:
The state of Iowa needs public officials with experience in the private sector — more than ever right now, with the onslaught of another period of hard economic times.

We need public officials like Burt Day who are in touch with reality and Iowa's "grass roots," and who know how to support common people when it comes to controlling state spending and keeping taxes down. We need public officials who through innovation and imagination can help breathe new life into Iowa's flat and dry economy.

Iowa needs a state treasurer like Burt Day who understands and has experience in small business — which is the foundation of Iowa's economy — and someone who understands the impact of government and how it affects business and personal lives.

Because of his background as a banker, I know that Burt Day understands Iowa's small communities and businesses. He has the best interest of the people of Iowa at heart.

We need Burt Day in the Iowa State Treasurer's Office. I urge everyone who wants a person of leadership, ability and innovation in the treasurer's office to vote for him.

Good story

To the Editor:
I don't live in Iowa City, but I pass through frequently and over the years I have read several newspaper articles about the Jean Jew case. Frankly, I had never understood why the case possessed so much intensity and heat and staying power until I read Andy Brownstein's fine story in the Oct. 22 edition of The Daily Iowan ["UI harassment case has deep, colorful history"].

Also, I want to congratulate Brownstein for using real words, English as it is spoken, uncensored and unadorned. This decision was a service to the reader and went a long way toward explaining to me why this controversy has lasted so long and why it has generated so much heat and passion and bitterness.

None for me

To the Editor:
I was at a party recently when my ears were assaulted by "music" with words to the effect of beating up women, breaking women's backs and shoving inanimate objects in their vaginas. Nasty stuff. Very nasty stuff, indeed. I was filled with anger and hatred at the people responsible for the lyrics. I was able to get the CD changed without resorting to violence (an effort of considerable restraint on my part) and I noticed the label: It was 2 Live Crew.

Later, when I was alone, I cried in despair that a group of people could breed so much violence, and that they would even want to. Music and dancing are supposed to bring joy and happiness into our tumultuous world, not more tumult.

I loathe what 2 Live Crew members have to say, but I would fight to the death for their right to say it.

Just don't make me listen.

Congress expected to pass budget deal

Lawmakers count on Bush's support

By Alan Fram
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bargainers wrestled with lingering disputes over benefit cuts and tax breaks Thursday, but congressional leaders predicted passage for the broad deficit-reduction bill supported by President Bush.

None of the outstanding differences was seen as a deal-killer for the $250-billion collection of tax increases and spending reductions. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Bush liked the emerging bill, and that seemed to stamp out the possibility of any last-minute setback.

"With the White House optimistic, one would guess it would be hard to shipwreck the thing," said Rep. Bill Frenzel of Minnesota, ranking Republican on the House Budget Committee.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said he expected the House to approve the measure today. And little trouble was expected in the Senate later.

The package would boost the 9-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax by about a nickel and would increase levies on alcohol, tobacco and fancy cars as well.

It would raise — from 28 percent to 31 percent — the income-tax rate on the richest Americans but would drop the rate paid by the upper-middle class from 33 percent to 31 percent. The measure also would reduce the deductions available to people earning more than $100,000 yearly by 3 percent and would phase out their $2,050 personal exemptions.

It also aims cuts at Medicare, farm aid and other benefit programs.

A chief remaining disagreement involved the Medicare program for the elderly and handicapped. The program's projected growth over the next five years was expected to be trimmed by about $42 billion, with more than one-fourth of that coming from beneficiaries. But the precise figures remained undecided.

Bargainers had not agreed

Key Issues

Here are some of them, according to a proposed compromise deficit-reduction bill incorporating elements from both parties' plans. Exact figures could change in the final agreement.

RATES:
The 28 percent top income tax rate on the wealthiest 600,000 Americans likely would be raised to 31 percent; they would get a tax increase. Effective rates could even be higher, depending on exemptions and deductions. About 4 million couples and individuals who now pay a top rate of 33 percent would pay a maximum 31 percent and get a tax cut.

CAPITAL GAINS:
The maximum tax rate on capital gains, which are profits from the sale of assets such as investments, would be 28 percent, even though wages and other income would be taxed as high as 31 percent. This would benefit those who pay a top 33 percent rate on income, including capital gains, under present law.

ALCOHOL:
Negotiators already have settled on higher taxes on alcoholic beverages, tobacco, airplane tickets, furs and jewelry and expensive cars.

EXEMPTIONS:

Benefits from the $2,050 personal exemption allowed each taxpayer and dependent would be reduced as taxable income exceeds $100,000 for single people and $150,000 for childless couples filing a joint return. The exemption would be fully lost once income tops $225,000 for single individuals or $275,000 for a couple filing jointly.

Each exemption lost would raise the effective marginal tax rate by one-half percentage point; the bigger the family, the higher their marginal rate. Thus, a couple with two children would pay a top rate of 34 percent on part of their income: the regular 31 percent rate plus 1 percentage point because of the limit on deductions and 2 points by losing their exemptions.

GASOLINE:
The 9-cent-a-gallon tax would be increased by 5 or 6 cents.

DEDUCTIONS:
A couple or individual could write off only 97 percent of otherwise allowable itemized deductions on any portion of adjusted gross income exceeding $100,000. Thus, a high-income taxpayer would lose $300 in deductions for each $10,000 of income above $100,000. This has the effect of raising the top marginal tax rate on those people to 32 percent.

whether the $75 annual deductible that beneficiaries pay for doctors' bills would be increased to $100, $150 or somewhere in between. Disputes also remained over how cuts in reimbursements to hospitals would be split between urban and rural hospitals.

Negotiators worked on other disputes involving:

■ Medicaid, which helps the poor pay their medical bills. Although the program will be cut, liberals wanted to provide an additional $2.9 billion for low-income elderly people. The Bush administration was trying to reduce that figure.

■ Tax breaks for the oil and gas industry totaling $3.5 billion over five years. They are championed by Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, but opposed by the House.

■ Tax advantages for a wide range of business activities, including research, and for individuals, including educational benefits received from employers. These items, sought by the Senate, would cost $5.6 billion.

"We're still working," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine.

Bush, asked how he felt about the package, said as he passed reporters on a morning jog, "Feel good about it." He turned away efforts to get him to be more specific as he appeared with Republican congressional leaders later.

Some lawmakers emphasized the remaining differences.

"There's nothing the president has signed off on yet. It's not just one issue. There must be two dozen important issues that haven't been resolved," Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said after an afternoon White House meeting.

Still, the deal seemed solid. Fatigued after a year of relentless budget combat, most lawmakers seemed to have abandoned their desire to fight much further.

Instead, they appeared ready to end Congress' long election-year session and return home for the remaining 12 days of the campaign season.

"The timetable is telling us we won't get as much equity in the package as we'd like," said Rep. Dale Kildee, D-Mich., who, like many liberals, would have preferred to shift more of the burden to the wealthy.

And many lawmakers were displeased with items they believed would hurt their states.

For Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., the problem was a provision forcing state and local government workers to begin paying the 1.45 percent Medicare payroll tax. Government employees in Illinois and several other states are now exempt from that levy.

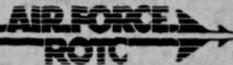

"I want to vote for it, but that's the killer for me," he said.

Bush's approval rating falls over budget deal

By Tom Raum
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Did President Bush squander a rare 80 percent approval rating in a series of missteps and errors on taxes and the budget?

Critics suggest he did. But you wouldn't know it from listening to White House officials. They say the president is bruised but undaunted and knew all along his ratings in the polls would plunge.

Before the ink was even applied to the new budget agreement, the White House was trying Thursday to mend fences and to salvage what it could of Bush's sagging popularity.

"Speaking for myself, I want to see this budget matter behind us," Bush said at a hastily assembled group photograph in the Rose Garden orchestrated to telegraph a GOP unity that in reality doesn't exist.

Tired of fighting with other Republicans, the president is prepared to hit the campaign trail again to beat up on Democrats.

That was the strategy the White House was trying to sell Thursday as Bush prepared to leave town for a four-day trip to speak for Republican candidates. Forget about the budget, focus on other areas where Republicans don't agree with Democrats, the message went out.

And the charge was led by Bush himself.

"We've been bludgeoned by a bunch of demagogic attacks by the Democrats for months, and I've been relatively sanguine in the face of that because we've been trying to get something done," Bush said at the Rose Garden event.

George Bush

"But as soon as we get this done, finished, I will then be free — as will everybody here that's been working on this — to have our say," Bush declared.

But the picture of GOP unity that the White House carefully sought to paint didn't take long to smear.

By the time Rep. Newt Gingrich walked the 100 yards from the Rose Garden to the battery of microphones in the White House driveway, he was again airing his differences with the president on the budget.

Who needs all the bad news?

Have you looked at the front section of the paper yet? Probably not. But don't worry, it's the same old tragic, unnecessary stuff. There are still stories filled with murders, rapes, wars, racism and lottery numbers, just like every other day of the week. Nothing ever changes in the front section of a newspaper. The lies and actions are the same, it's the names that change.

But the sports section — the clump of paper you hold so fondly in your hands every morning — is what real life is about. Only on the sports page do things change everyday, taking one's mind away from the cruelty in this world. College football rankings shuffle around like M.C. Hammer every week, upsets occur just when you KNOW who is going to win, and championship teams only a year ago wind up in their division cellar the next season.

And if you've accidentally glanced at the front page lately, times aren't so good. But sports, like always, has compensated for the times by tossing even more change-ups than usual.

Who would have believed that the mighty Oakland Athletics, the best baseball team in the last half-century, would lose to the surprising Cincinnati Reds?

No one, and I mean NO ONE, expected the series to go past six games — in the A's favor.

But the sports section — the clump of paper you hold so fondly in your hands every morning — is what real life is about.

Meanwhile, gas prices rose again while President Bush bruised his achilles tendon during a round of golf.

And how about this James "Buster" Douglas fellow? You know, the nobody who turned the invincible heavy-weight champion Mike Tyson into Jell-O last fall. People were so sure of this fight that the majority of viewers were watching the NBA Slam-Dunk competition on TBS instead of the Douglas-Tyson dual. Michael Jordan could hang in the air longer than the fight was going to last.

Or so we thought. But in the end, it was a drooling Tyson, frantically searching for his mouthpiece after being knocked down. Douglas, as stunned as the rest of us, raised his arms triumphantly, his eyes staring amazedly at the fallen Tyson.

Meanwhile, 17 passengers were shot and killed in the nation's subways over a one-month period. Also, first-lady Barbara Bush decided to get her hair permed again.

Closer to home, how about this Big Ten football season?

Defending champion Michigan, good enough to earn the nation's top ranking just three weeks ago, has lost back-to-back conference games, assuring themselves of nothing.

And how about Minnesota and Illinois, both undefeated in Big Ten play?

Of course, we can't forget Iowa. At the beginning of the season, coach Hayden Fry's Hawkeyes were incapable of properly executing the team's high-step drills. But now, five wins and only a single loss later, Iowa is skillful and swift enough to "Hokey Pokey" after big victories without falling on their faces.

And meanwhile, on the front section of the paper, drug trafficking is rising once again, while the President's dog, Millie, has just released a novel, entitled "It's a Doggie, Dog World, but at least I live in the White House."

Thank goodness for sports. Mike Polisky's column appears in the DI on Mondays and Fridays.

Hawkeyes look for homecoming win

Fry's Hawks taking nothing for granted

By Erica Weiland
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Hayden Fry will be the first one to say that his team should defeat the Northwestern Wildcats Saturday.

But he and his Hawkeyes aren't taking that for granted.

"They're not the strongest team we're gonna play, but I know the motivation Northwestern has against us each year," the Iowa coach said. "I don't know if they dislike us, or what. We've had some pretty good numbers against them through the years, and I think they resent that."

The Wildcats have extra incentive when they face the Hawkeyes Saturday at 1:05 p.m. at Kinnick Stadium because it's Iowa's homecoming.

"No telling what's going to happen before it's over," Fry said. "Northwestern could roll in here and put a knot on our head. If we can do it after 23 homecomings at Michigan, Northwestern can dang sure do it to us here at our homecoming."

The Hawkeyes defeated the Wolverines 24-23 last weekend at their homecoming, putting them in a three-way tie for the Big Ten lead with Illinois and Minnesota.

With a conference showdown against the Illini next weekend, Iowa could easily overlook Northwestern. But Fry said they are guarding against that.

"The thing we have to do is keep improving this week and not become overconfident with all the nice things that are being said about us and written about us and all the bowl possibilities," Fry said. "It remains to be seen if we can do that, I think that we will."

"Yesterday (Coach Fry) came up to me and Matt Ruhland and just said 'Northwestern's gonna be a pretty good team, they have a real good offense and we can't get complacent,'" senior linebacker Melvin Foster said. "I think what See Football, Page 2B

Welch, Browning to try free agency

By Ronald Blum
 The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Bob Welch of the Oakland Athletics, the first 27-game winner in the major leagues since Steve Carlton 18 years ago, filed for free agency Thursday along with eight other players.

Pitchers Tom Browning and Rick Mahler of the World Series champion Cincinnati Reds also filed as the total of free agents reached 59.

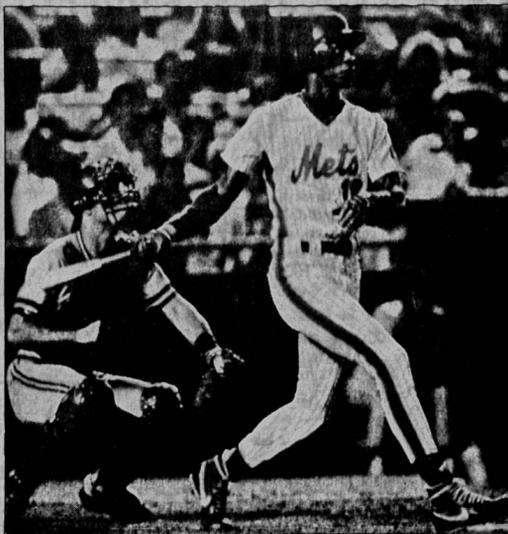

The San Diego Padres prevented first baseman Jack Clark from becoming a free agent by offering him salary arbitration. Several other players were waiting for Thursday's midnight deadline to find out if their teams would offer arbitration or allow them to go free.

Among those waiting to hear were second basemen Willie Randolph of Oakland, Tom Herr of the New York Mets and Wally Backman of Pittsburgh; pitcher Tom Niedenfuer of St. Louis and outfielder-first baseman Ken Griffey Sr. of Seattle.

Under the new collective bargaining agreement, teams have to decide within five days of the end of the World Series whether to offer arbitration to these players, who are covered by the restriction against repeat free agency within five years. Under the old contract, the decision did not have to be made until January.

New York Mets outfielder Darryl Strawberry professed a definite desire to return home and become a Los Angeles Dodger after enduring a turbulent season in New York.

Strawberry serious about Dodgers talk

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Darryl Strawberry says his first choice is to go home and play for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"If the Dodgers are really, really, really interested in me, I'll be here," the free agent outfielder said Tuesday night in an interview with KABC. "That would be my No. 1 choice."

"I'm very determined to play here at home and if things can work out between myself and my agent and the Los Angeles Dodgers, I would love to be here at home and play. I mean, that's a dream that you always think about."

Strawberry, a native of Los Angeles, is reportedly seeking a contract similar to the five-year, $23.5 million deal that Jose Canseco signed with the Oakland Athletics last summer.

Until Nov. 5, the New York Mets are the only team permitted to talk money with Strawberry, who led them with 37 home runs and 108 runs batted in last season.

Strawberry's agent, Eric Goldschmidt, didn't return several phone calls on Thursday.

Al Harazin, the Mets' senior vice president, said he wasn't surprised with Strawberry's comments.

"I've heard those comments like that before; we've all heard them," Harazin said. "Harken back to the first game of the playoffs in 1988, See Strawberry, Page 2B

Buster floored in 3rd

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
 The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Evander Holyfield knocked Buster Douglas unconscious with a single right hand to the jaw in the third round and became the undisputed heavyweight champion of the world Thursday night.

The stunning ending also ended the reign of Douglas, which began when he shocked the sports world with a 10th-round knockout of Mike Tyson last Feb. 11.

Douglas had just thrown a right uppercut that missed when Holyfield crashed home a right that dropped the 246-pound champion flat on his back, where he was counted out by referee Mills Lane. Douglas remained on the canvas for several seconds before being helped to a stool where he was examined by a ringside physician.

The fight was devoid of any real action for the first two rounds, and the third round was following the same pattern. Suddenly, it ended as a crowd of 16,000 outdoors roared to its feet, as though sensing Douglas wouldn't get up.

The end came at 1:10 of the third round. Douglas went into the ring a 7-5 underdog, making him the 11th heavyweight champion to be an underdog in a defense. He also became the 17th heavyweight champion to lose the title in his first defense.

Much had been made of Douglas' weight, 14½ pounds more than when he took the title from Tyson, with many observers wondering if he would have the stamina for 12 tough rounds.

The question was never answered. Holyfield, who weighed 208, had clear edges in the first two rounds, although he wasn't the attacker he had been in earlier fights. He chose to box with Douglas, who appeared to be looking to counter-punch.

Holyfield now has a 25-0 record with 21 knockouts. Douglas is 30-5-1 with 20 knockouts.

Douglas was missing badly. In the second round, Holyfield was again busier, landing with left hooks and hard shots to the body. Douglas was warned twice by the referee for hitting and holding.

Holyfield appears headed now for a big-money defense against 42-year-old George Foreman, who was heavyweight champion in 1974. Promoter Don King says that the IBF, WBC and WBA have stated that the winner of this fight would have to defend against Tyson, but Dan Duva, Holyfield's promoter, said his man had signed to fight Foreman win or lose.

It had to be a crushing loss for Douglas, who was given no chance against Tyson in Tokyo but who dominated Iron Mike except for late in the eighth round, when he was knocked down.

There was controversy whether Douglas benefited from a long count in Tokyo, but a long count wouldn't have helped Thursday night. After he crashed down on his back, he barely moved a muscle.

"It's been an honor," Douglas said of holding the title a few days before the fight. "It's been a goal of mine for years."

Now the 30-year-old Douglas is clearly at a crossroads in a career marked by spotty performances.

Holyfield, 28, of Atlanta, now is at the top of the boxing world, a position reserved only for the undisputed heavyweight championship. The former cruiserweight champion threw charges that he was a manufactured heavyweight back into the faces of his critics.

The victory, which came when Holyfield's right bounced off Douglas' nose, might change training methods for fighters all over the world. Besides boxing trainer George Benton, Holyfield had two See Douglas, Page 2B

Change of pace good for Iowa

By Brian Gaul
 The Daily Iowan

For most teams, moving to a new practice location would be considered an inconvenience, maybe a distraction. But Iowa volleyball coach Ruth Nelson said the opposite has happened to her team.

For the past two years, Nelson's teams have vacated their usual practice facility, Carver-Hawkeye Arena, during the final weeks of the season to make room for men's and women's basketball practice.

They moved to the North Gym of the Fieldhouse both years, and Nelson said the result has been an improved level of play.

"I really think it's practicing in the North Gym (which has helped the Hawkeyes improve)," Nelson said. "In the North Gym, there are no distractions. The same thing happened last year. We started winning the close matches, the five-game matches, after we moved practice there."

The Hawkeyes will need that progress as they open the second half of the Big Ten season this weekend in West Lafayette, Ind., and Champaign, Ill. Iowa takes on Purdue at 6 p.m. tonight and Illinois at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Big Ten matches.

The Hawkeyes moved their practices to the Fieldhouse's North Gym two weeks ago, and Nelson said the move has allowed her players to spend more practice time on individual skills and "looking closer at why we're not effective with our offense."

"We are able to specialize here," the Iowa coach said. "The players can practice more individual things. We're looking at skills they may have forgotten and trying to emphasize them and develop them into habits."

In particular, the Iowa coach is looking for improvement in her team's serving and hitting. Nelson said they will need to play better in both areas to compete with the Illini and Boilermakers, who both defeated the Hawkeyes, 3-1, in Iowa City during the first half of the Big Ten season.

The Illini, ranked No. 11 in the nation in the latest Volleyball Monthly poll, could receive a boost from the return of Laura Bush, a 1989 second-team all-American, at middle blocker.

Volleyball

Bush had been sidelined for several weeks because of a separated shoulder, but Nelson said she is expected to play this weekend.

And though Bush led the Illini with 16 kills and 18 digs in their 15-11, 13-15, 16-14, 15-10 victory over Iowa Sept. 28, Nelson said she would prefer seeing the senior in the lineup.

"That's good news for us," the Iowa coach said. "To me, I like to play against the best possible team, so I want teams to be healthy when we play them. When they aren't, too many things can happen."

Nelson said those "things" include upsets, like Illinois' win against Ohio State last Saturday. The win allowed the Illini to move into a tie for third-place in the Big Ten, at 6-3 in league play and 14-6 overall.

They are tied with the Boilermakers, who have been one of the conference surprises. Purdue has compiled a 15-7 overall record after being picked to finish in the bottom division of the Big Ten.

The Boilermakers are a senior-laden team, featuring four fourth- or fifth-year players in their starting six. Setter Kelly Niedbalski and hitters Amber Douglas, Monica Ball, Jill Whiteman are the heart of the Purdue team.

Niedbalski is third in the Big Ten in assists after the first half of league play, while Douglas lead the Boilermakers with 225 kills and a .307 attack percentage.

In Purdue's 15-6, 15-8, 8-15, 15-5 win in Carver-Hawkeye Arena Sept. 30, Douglas hit .567 and recorded 20 kills. Ball was also effective, hitting .550 with 14 kills, as the Boilermakers hit .387 as a team.

That loss was the last of five straight defeats for Iowa before the Hawkeyes went on a seven-match winning streak. League-leading Wisconsin broke that string with a five-game victory last Saturday, leaving the Hawkeyes with a 9-10 overall record and 4-5 Big Ten mark.

The Wisconsin loss has made winning both matches this weekend important, Nelson said, if the Hawkeyes hope to contend in the Big Ten or reach the NCAA tournament.

"I want to win both matches," Nelson said. "That's important to us. In order to do that, we have to take one match at a time — take Purdue first and Illinois after that."

strength coaches, a conditioning coach and a flexibility coach.
 Boxing gyms might never be the same. Douglas earned $19.9 million, while Holyfield's purse was $8.2 million.
 Only one heavyweight ever entered the ring as champion both heavier and taller than the 6-foot-4 Douglas. That was 6-5 Primo Carnera, who made two successful defenses at 250 and 270 before being beaten at 263.

It was the second loss in three title fights for Douglas.
 On May 30, 1987, he lost a bid for the vacant IBF title when he quit in the 10th round against Tony Tucker at Las Vegas.
 That loss caused many to question Douglas' desire. Then came Douglas' big victory over Tyson. Now the question will be whether that one was a fluke, the result of an off-day by Tyson.

Repeat foes to challenge Iowa

By Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

It seems like only yesterday that the Iowa field hockey team played Michigan.

Actually, it was just last Sunday, but it isn't often that two teams will play each other back-to-back. And that's what the Hawkeyes will be doing when they travel to Ann Arbor, Mich., today for a rematch with the Wolverines. Iowa also takes on Northern Illinois Saturday in Ann Arbor, after playing the Huskies just two weeks ago.

F. Hockey

The Hawkeyes knocked Michigan out of the Top 20 with a 3-1 win at the Hawkeye Field Hockey Field on Oct. 21 but despite outshooting the Wolverines 39-6 and out penalty-cornering them 18-5, Coach Beth Beglin expects a tougher contest today.

"It's a disadvantage to us to play them back-to-back," Beglin said. "It is very difficult to beat a team and turn around and beat 'em again the next week. It's just a quirk of the schedule that it worked out like that, but it makes our job a lot more difficult."

Against Michigan, Iowa was led by junior forward Kris Fillat (two goals) sophomore midfielder Kristy Gleason (one goal and one assist) and sophomore Jamie Rofano and junior Kerry Horgan, who had two assists each. And according to Fillat, the second time around with Michigan won't cause a lapse in the team's concentration.

"It's not monotonous," Fillat said of the consecutive games versus the Wolverines. "I'm excited to play Michigan again. I think they're a good team."

Saturday, Northern Illinois will try to avenge a 2-0 home loss to the Hawkeyes on Oct. 11. That game marked the first, and so far only, time all season that the Hawkeyes won a game while being out-cornered. The Huskies came away with a 13-11 advantage, including 8-2 in the second half, but Iowa left Huskie Stadium with a 2-0 shutout.

Tomorrow's game leads to Iowa's showdown with top-ranked Northwestern at home on Nov. 3, but Beglin warned that bad things will happen if the Hawkeyes try to claim the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow just yet.

"The team is very much aware of the fact that we have three games remaining to the season," she said, "and that if we want to make it to the (NCAA) tournament, that we have to take care of business in all three games. We cannot look ahead to Northwestern because a loss to any one of those two teams (this weekend) will put us out of the tournament."

Despite Iowa's success the last time out against the Huskies, the Hawkeyes would never play them again if Fillat had her way.

"I'll say it straight out...I hate playing 'em," Fillat said. "In a way we get up for them because they're so dirty. I'm not excited to play Northern Illinois because I just don't like that type of hockey."

"It's your typical image of 'Oh, a bunch of girls running around in skirts and slashing each other sticks.' That's what people who never hear hockey think of it like that, and (the Huskies) play it. I'm glad we only play them twice a year. I feel like we're playing a bad high school team."

Trojan QB skips one class too many

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Southern California quarterback Todd Marinovich had a severe ear infection and would have missed Saturday's game at Arizona State even before he was suspended for skipping classes.

Coach Larry Smith said Wednesday that Marinovich had complained of the earache at practice Monday and received permission to seek treatment.

Smith said he asked Marinovich, "Is your earache so severe that you don't think you can practice?" He said the player told him: "I don't think I can."

The Trojans were upset by Arizona last Saturday. Smith said he informed the players prior to this week's practices that he required a total effort from each of them, and anyone not fully involved would not start Saturday's game against the Sun Devils.

"I went over to the offense and said, 'We've got our first guy (out). Most Likely Shane (Foley) will start this week. Todd is sick and you know what I told you all, and I'm sticking to it."

Marv Marinovich, the player's father, also said his son was suffering from an ear infection that had caused some loss of equilibrium.

The ear infection apparently started with a staph infection in his son's throwing hand, the father said. "The doctors believe he scratched his ear ... and infected it."

Smith announced on Tuesday that Marinovich was suspended for one game. The coach said he received a report that Marinovich had skipped several classes last week, which was grounds for suspension under an agreement Smith made with Marinovich and his parents.

Marinovich's father, a former USC lineman, supported the suspension.

"I go along with it 100 percent. Hopefully Todd will learn from it and grow from it," he said.

Both father and son had a meeting with Smith earlier in the season on the subject of missing classes.

"When we had our meeting with coach Smith, he (Todd) had an agreement not to skip a class, and he broke it. So he's got to pay the price," Marv Marinovich said.

The quarterback skipped an early morning art lab because of a housing problem.

Norman tops at Nabisco tournament

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — A slide that started on a July Saturday in St. Andrews turned around on Thursday in Texas.

Greg Norman stopped it in typical Norman fashion, dominating the par-5 holes in a 5-under-par 66 that gave him a share of the first-round lead with Tim Simpson in golf's richest tournament, the Nabisco Championships.

"I became complacent; didn't want to play or practice. You can't do that," Norman said after he had halted the summer-long skid that began when he was crushed in a head-to-head confrontation with Nick Faldo in the third round of the British Open.

"I knew my game was solid coming in," Norman said. "Two weeks ago it was not. It wasn't very good in the Dunhill Cup. I knew it wasn't very good."

So he brought his long-time teacher, Charley Earp, from Australia to Florida, and "got my swing back in the right plane. "I know I'm solid now. My confidence is on the rise. My putting is much better. I feel I'm back where I was before that Saturday in St. Andrews."

Simpson had seven birdies in his trek over the Cypress Creek course at Champions, a course he called "the longest booger I've ever seen. It's 7,400 yards if it's an inch," he said of the par-71 layout that is listed at 7,187 yards.

"It's a good course for the bombers, Greg, Freddie (Couples) and Davis (Love III)," he said.

But it wasn't a very good course this windy day for Payne Stewart. His 77 put him at the back of elite field of the top 30 money-winners this season.

They're chasing $3.5 million in individual prize money in the last official event on the PGA Tour schedule. The purse includes $2.5 million (with $450,000 to the winner) for the tournament and another $1 million (with $175,000 to the winner) in a season-long bonus pool.

Nick Price overcame a double-bogey 6 on the extremely difficult 11th hole and was tied for third at 68 with Jodie Mudd.

"I got away with murder," said Mudd, who did not make a bogey but was in near-constant trouble. He hit only six fairways and 12 greens and "had the longest putt I've ever had playing golf."

That was on the 11th where he two-putted from 120 feet.

Billy Mayfair and Chip Beck were next at 69. Love and Peter Jacobsen, at 70, were the only others to break par on the tough old course that served as the site of the 1969 U.S. Open.

The current Open champion, Hale Irwin, could do no better than a 75. PGA title-holder Wayne Grady shot 72, and defending Nabisco champion Tom Kite was at 73.

Norman, who holds the money-winning lead at $907,977, played the three par-5 holes four under. He held a 40-yard sand shot for eagle-3 on the fifth and birdied the other two.

He was two in front of the field after 13 holes, but bogeyed the 15th with a drive into the trees and the 16th with a 3-putt.

Simpson, a winner last week in the Disney, briefly went in front alone with a 7-iron to two feet on the 17th hole, but Norman regained a tie with a 15-footer on the same hole moments later.

NOTES: Mark Calcavecchia is the only player to finish in the top 10 in all three previous Nabisco Championships. . . . The $270,000 prize for the Nabisco runner-up is larger than the winner's purse in all but one other event on the 1990 tour. . . . Last place in this tournament is worth $40,000, $10,000 more than Orville Moody collected when he won the 1969 U.S. Open on same course. . . . The American team for the Four Tours Championship in Japan Nov. 1-4 will be made up of Calcavecchia, Payne Stewart, Fred Couples, Wayne Levi, Tim Simpson and Jodie Mudd.

Greg Norman eagles the fifth hole out of this sandtrap at the Nabisco Championships in Houston, Tx. Norman grabbed a share of the lead with a 5-under par 66.

Cub's Girardi tries to embarrass staff

The Daily Iowan

Well, this god-awful hell known as On The Line is finally near the end. Torturous though it is, we bring it to you, our cherished readers, with one thing in mind: Knowing that we are allowed to mock you in print.

The mockery will have to wait a moment, however, as we take this time to praise UI President Hunter Rawlings. Rawlings deserves recognition for sweeping the OTL staff and celebrity field last week. It wasn't a pretty showing, 6-4 is nothing to brag about in most circles, but it was enough to pummel the staff pickers into forecasting oblivion. "Tree" Rawlings is still king, top dog, BMOC and fearless leader wrapped into one slight 6'7" frame.

Chicago Cubs catcher Joe Girardi was brave/nice enough to bedazzle us with his picks this week. Some of you out there not familiar with the Cubs probably don't know Mr. Girardi attended Northwestern and studied mechanical engineering.

The odds are pretty high that Mr. Girardi will best our suffering staff of prognosticators, three of whom finished below .500 last week opening the door for Erica "Dark Star" Weiland to finally top the staff with a rockin' 5-5 record. Yeah, 5-5 won.

John "I Have a Friend Named George" Shipley, Mike "I'm Not Bernie Lincicome, but I play one on T.V." and Jamie "Too Hot to Handle, Too Cold to Hold" Butters all bottomed out last week like Burt Reynolds' movie career. They all clocked in at 4-6.

The fortunate winner of this week's prize can have a $25 gift certificate to Iowa Book and Supply and a box of old chew spit. No, the chew spit goes to this week's staff loser. Probably Butters.

Hawks ready to start season

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

Under the direction of nine-year head coach Peter Kennedy, the 18th-ranked Iowa women's swimming and diving team will open the 1990-91 season today and Saturday at the Fieldhouse Pool.

Coach Kennedy realizes that this weekend's matchups, against Wisconsin and Indiana, will be the first real test for a young team which was ranked 16th at the end of last season, but graduated two of its top swimmers.

"This spring we lost Becky Anderson, who holds (school) sprint records in the 50-yard freestyle and 220-free relay, and Louise Keogh, who owns the school record in the 100 and 200 breaststroke," Kennedy said.

"It's a young team, mostly sophomores and freshmen. From the signs during practice, this year promises to be a strong, unified team. As a young team, it's important that they avoid making mistakes. If they can do this then they will be successful."

The Hawkeyes total only seven returning juniors and seniors to go with the 11 sophomores and eight freshmen on the swimming roster. The diving line-up is a little more evenly diversified, with four of the five spots held by upperclassmen.

For leadership, the younger Hawkeyes can turn to returning senior freestyle swimmers Colleen Thome and Deb Lynch as well as senior diver Debbie Wirth. In last season's Big Ten Championship meet, Thome became Iowa's first Big Ten champion since 1986 by bringing home the 50 freestyle title. She also swam on the record-breaking 200-medley relay and 200-freestyle relay teams that contributed to the Hawkeyes' seventh place finish in the Big Ten Conference.

W. Swimming

Lynch received honors as a member of last spring's 1990 Academic all-Big Ten team and Wirth was honored as a 1990 NCAA championship qualifier in zone diving.

Also returning for the Hawkeyes is sophomore Chrissy Eck, voted last year team co-MVP as a freshman. In her debut season for the Hawkeyes, Eck took second in the 200 breaststroke at both the Nebraska Invitational and Illini Classic as well as setting school records in both the 200- and 400-meter individual medleys at the Big Ten Championships.

Junior diver Katy Ketoff, who captured the one-meter diving title at last year's Nebraska Invitational and bested her own 10-meter diving record at the Big Ten Championships, also returns. Ketoff also qualified for the 10-meter competition last August at the U.S. Diving Championships.

Kennedy credits his staff for the Hawkeyes' success, stressing the confidence it gives him as a head coach.

"We have an excellent coaching staff this season," Kennedy said. "When you have good assistants to pass assignments to, you know they are done right and that takes a lot of the pressure off of me."

This year's staff includes diving coach Bob Rydze, twice named Big Ten Conference Diving Coach of the Year ('85 & '86) during his 13 year tenure at Iowa; first-year assistant coach Alison Lloyd, a former all-American member of the 1987 Hawkeye 200 yard freestyle relay team and current holder of the 100 yard UI butterfly record, which has stood since 1985; and graduate assistants Lisl Prater and Erin Hurley.

"This looks like an exciting year," Kennedy said. "But we need the upperclass to come through and the freshmen to do their job. There is good leadership at this point — as a coach, I can sense they are coming together."

Hawkeyes challenge for Big Ten title

By Scott Garringer
The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's cross country coach Jerry Hassard has been planning his team's season carefully to come down to these final four weeks. Unfortunately for them, the rest of the Big Ten has been doing some planning of its own.

The Big Ten Championships are this Saturday and are shaping up to be an epic battle, both the individual race and the team title.

The No. 15 Hawkeyes will head to Minneapolis, Minn., to take on one of the strongest conferences in the country, as four of the nine Big Ten teams are ranked. Absent will be Northwestern, which dropped its women's program.

An all too familiar foe to Hassard's squad is the No. 5 Indiana Hoosiers, who are favored to repeat as champions. The Hawkeyes ran against Indiana twice already this season, dropping both meets.

W.C.C.

Indiana is led by reigning Big Ten champ and former national champion Michelle Dekkers. The 13-ranked Wisconsin Badgers will counter with Suzy Favor, who holds more Big Ten track and cross country titles than anyone else in league history.

This will be the first clash of these two stars this season.

Also promising to provide tough competition is No. 11 Michigan, whom Iowa has yet to face this season.

Hassard sees his team surrounded by conference giants and is trying to narrow the gap.

"We've really toned things down," Hassard said. "We've reduced mileage to rest and prepare. Competition, not training, has become our emphasis."

Iowa is coming off a good meet, placing fifth in the Tennessee Invitational, the largest meet of the season so far. The Hawkeyes placed three runners in the top 20, a feat Hassard would like to top Saturday.

"I would like us to place five in the top 25 and three in the top ten," Hassard said. "My dream would be to have three all-Big Ten runners. We just missed that last year."

Trying to oblige will be sophomore Tracy Dahl, junior Jennifer Brower, and senior Tami Hoskins. Hoskins placed fifth last year to earn all-Big Ten honors along with Jeanne Kruckeberg, who placed second. Kruckeberg has been sidelined this season by injuries. Dahl just missed all conference honors, placing eighth, one shy of the top seven.

Hoskins, running in her third Big Ten meet, likes what she sees from her teammates in training for the season's final stretch.

"Practice has been going really well," said the senior.

Young Iowa runners face Big Ten meet

By Scott Garringer
The Daily Iowan

Iowa cross country coach Larry Wiecezorek will be running a young team this Saturday at the Big Ten Championships in Minneapolis, but you wouldn't know that from his and the team's optimism.

The runners and Wiecezorek all believe in their chances for a good showing Saturday, despite the presence of No. 3 Wisconsin and powerful squads such as Illinois, Michigan State, and Michigan.

"Those four will fight it out for the top four places, but after that it will be a free-for-all for the upper division," Wiecezorek said. "We've got as good a shot as anyone else."

M.C.C.

The Hawkeyes have had two weeks off since a triangular meet with Illinois and Nebraska on a very flat Illinois course. Minnesota's layout, however, is hilly and challenging, much more to the liking of the Iowa squad. The Hawkeyes have been training on the slopes of Finkbine Golf Course, also one of the more challenging layouts in Big Ten cross country.

According to senior runner David Brown, these workouts have been better than could be hoped for.

"Training has been going great," said the senior from Madison, Wis. "We're running courses significantly faster than we were before, the younger guys especially."

Those "younger guys" are going to be looked to heavily this weekend, as Brown and L.J. Albrecht will be the only two seniors in the lineup. Also running will be sophomores Kevin Herd, Steve Morrissey and Doug Koon. Freshman David Wood and red-shirt freshman Garry Roseman will also join the Hawkeyes.

"Five of the seven are sophomore or younger and three (Morrissey, Roseman and Wood) are running in their first Big Ten meet," Wiecezorek said. "It looks very good for the future, and will be interesting to see what happens Saturday."

But don't get the impression Wiecezorek is already looking ahead to next season.

"We have had our best practices all year and all of the candidates for the important 4th and 5th spots look very good. All indications point toward a good meet."

The 4th and 5th spots will be very important if Iowa is to finish in the upper division.

Predictable conformity mars sparsely attended concert

By Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

Go Hawks!
My initial reaction on seeing the puny crowd at the Smithereens concert in Carver-Hawkeye Arena Wednesday night was: Well, there you have it. This should have been at Gabe's. From the looks of things, considerably less than half of the (artificially constricted) seating was occupied.

As it turned out, though, the band's slavish conformity to arena rock gestures made the nine-tenths empty echo cavern the only appropriate venue.

The concert's kickoff gimmick was a recording of AC/DC's "For Those About to Rock," played at mind-shattering volume as a smoke machine behind the drum set was pushed into overdrive. This was the most pleasantly ironic, self-aware moment of the evening — a roundabout acknowledgement, perhaps, of The Smithereens' own scaled-down pop approach.

After taking the stage the band launched into "Blues Before and After" — a logical opening choice, but one that nevertheless robbed it of an opportunity to take early command with its one truly classic power-chord anthem, "A Girl Like You."

The band members were genial, if overeager in their attempts to get the crowd riled up. "What's happening in Iowa City, baby?" singer Pat DiNizio roared amiably. "We are the f---in' Smithereens, baby!" Meanwhile, bassist Mike Mesaros (whose newly sprouted beard made him resemble Kenny Loggins) was a little too frisky, leaping and fro-licking pointlessly about the stage. Take a cue from Bill Wyman, Mike — bass players are supposed to stand still.

The band's slavish conformity to arena rock gestures made the nine-tenths empty echo cavern the only appropriate venue.

In a move that must have made SCOPE operatives gasp for joy, DiNizio urged audience members early on to "Come on down front here and sing along!" The fans on the floor moved en masse to the foot of the stage, but the possibility of mob violence was readily extinguished as the band began playing the decidedly non-riot-inciting "Room Without a View."

And so it went. Throughout the show the band indulged in, and encouraged, modes of behavior more suited to a Bon Jovi show than a concert by a reasonably respected rock band. DiNizio has several great songs to his credit, and they were suitably rendered, but the range of distracting gestures was stunning: During "Cigarette" there was much unfortunate syncopated arm waving down front; "Only a Memory" featured a self-indulgent blues break; "Blue Period" included a bass solo, during which DiNizio nodded approvingly; "The House We Used to Live In" featured the (by then) inevitable drum solo; "Groovy Tuesday" had a strobe light. Things were momentarily livened up by a couple of rogue stage divers (the second of whom appeared not to be caught).

Otherwise, the show's most notable aspect was its rather murky sound; in fact, when the band's soundman (name: Andy) was introduced, he was roundly booed.

Perhaps the most egregious moment came after the first encore, when Mike Mesaros, fist-a-pumpin', shouted "Go Hawks!" into the mike. It was only appropriate. These guys sure know how to play ball.

Taylor to play Coe College

The Daily Iowan

The legendary Koko Taylor, "Queen of Chicago Blues," will perform Saturday, Oct. 27, at 8 p.m. in Sinclair Auditorium on the Coe College Campus in Cedar Rapids.

Often called "the hardest-working lady in show business today," Taylor makes about 200 live appearances every year. She has won more awards than any other female blues artist — including a 1984 Grammy and 10 receptions of the blues' highest honor, the W.C. Handy Award.

Taylor has been singing the blues for nearly 30 years. She was born on a farm near Memphis, Tenn., and developed her vocal style from a potent mixture of blues and gospel music. For her Baptist parents, blues was "the devil's music," but this did not stop her and her brothers from singing and playing the music on their home-made instruments.

When Taylor was 18 years old she followed her husband, Robert, to

Koko Taylor

Chicago. She worked as a housekeeper during the day and performed the blues on the South Side of Chicago at night and on weekends. Here she met musical greats like Muddy Waters, Buddy Guy, Junior Wells and Magic Sam.

Taylor's first national hit was "Wang Dang Doodle," which became a million-seller in 1964. After years of singing with Chicago's blues legends, Taylor formed her own group, The Blue Machine, in 1972.

Taylor recently took a four-year hiatus from singing, but now has returned with a new album, "Jump For Joy," on Chicago-based Alligator Records. The album includes the songs "Can't Let Go," "Tired Of That," "Hey Baby," "Stop Watching Your Enemies" and "Time Will Tell," a tune dedicated to Taylor's husband, who died last year.

Throughout her long career Taylor has not limited herself to recordings and concerts. She's also performed on TV and at the White House. Earlier this year, she hit the silver screen with a cameo appearance in David Lynch's "Wild at Heart." The movie's soundtrack features two songs by Taylor.

Koko Taylor's concert at Coe College is sponsored by the Student Activities Council. Tickets are $7 and can be reserved by calling 399-8609.

'Peaks' revelation around corner

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Peaks freaks, rejoice. On Nov. 10, the identity of Bob will be revealed, thereby finally unveiling the killer of teen queen Laura Palmer.

Or so said ABC Entertainment President Bob Iger on Thursday. ABC has promised before to identify the murderer in its downright confusing "Twin Peaks" series. So far, the network hasn't made good on that promise.

The network's programming chief talked about his troubled series during an informal news conference at the network's West Coast headquarters.

Asked if "Twin Peaks" was ever going to resolve the six-month-old Palmer murder, Iger replied that episodes this season made it very clear to viewers that "Bob" is the killer.

Problem is, it's entirely unclear just who or what "Bob" is. A demon? A person? A distant cousin of Freddy Krueger?

"On Nov. 10, you will know who Bob is," Iger said.

Hawkeyes Heard on the Street

The Hokey Pokey and other Iowa celebrations

"After the big games we always do the Hokey Pokey, and it was just like did against the Michigan State team," senior linebacker Melvin Foster said after the Hawkeyes defeated Michigan. "My ankle is still killing me, but I was able to do the hokey pokey on both legs."

"(Now) we're going to celebrate with the people who believed in us, and I can read fake people. All the people that didn't believe in us, please don't get in my face because I have nothing to say to you."

Iowa football coach Hayden Fry after the Michigan game: "We're just a little bit better at the Hokey Pokey. Can you believe two times in Michigan the same year? Who-eee! First time ever. First time an Iowa football team has ever beaten both Michigan State and Michigan on the road."

"Both Michigan State and Michigan are quality football teams and to beat them at their place with what we've got is just incredible. I'm sure the man upstairs had a lot of do with it."

Fry on the Hawkeyes driving 85 yards in nine plays to beat the Wolverines in the last four minutes of the game: "The last drive was fantastic. We scored a little quicker than we wanted to but we'll take it."

Iowa noseguard Rod Davis about how he felt after beating Michigan: "I was just dazed. Then after awhile it hit me and I started jumping around like everybody else, waving a towel around."

Foster, when asked if he thought people in Iowa City were doing the Hokey Pokey after the Michigan game: "They're probably in the bars right now doing it. They heard about it so they're probably right in the middle of the floor doing it right now."

Foster about the improvement from the 1989 season: "What makes us motivated is the fact that we got our ass kicked last year. And if you get embarrassed like we did last year and you don't want to do something about it, something's wrong with you. That's why we're so close; that's why we want to get closer and closer together. Because people are still doubting us."

Hawkeye noseguard Mike Wells on Michigan recruiting him: "They told me not to visit here at Iowa; they wanted me to commit before Jan. 20, that was the date I came here. The weekend after I came here they called me and said, 'What did you do this weekend?' and I said 'I visited Iowa.' And they said, 'Well, we just called to tell you that our last defensive line scholarship was just given away.'

"I hope to have some of my best games against Michigan."

Fry after a reporter suggested that Iowa's game against Michigan could be big in the Big Ten race: "I just think it's another ball game. I think there's going to be so many what my grandad used to call lollipops this year that you don't know which one to lick."

Fry on an interception that Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers threw in the game against Wisconsin: "When he threw that backhanded shovel pass, there wasn't anybody in the stadium more surprised than I was. I had to walk to the other end of the field and swallow my bubble gum."

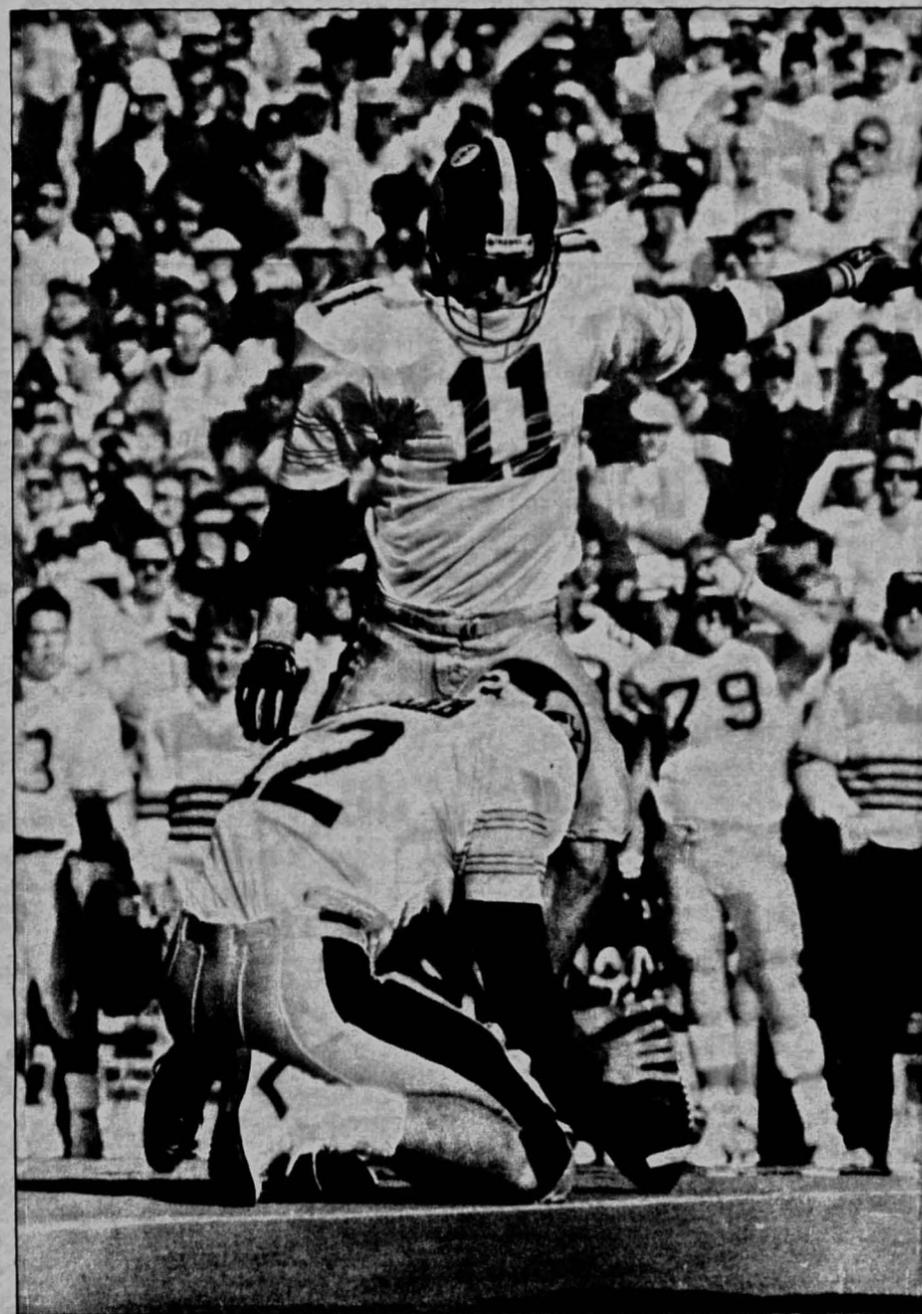

Foster about how Iowa beat Wisconsin: "I think it was a matter of what we didn't do against Iowa State when we were able to try to put the nail in the coffin. Eventually we did, we put the nail in the coffin against Wisconsin."

Hawkeye running back Nick Bell about his injuries during the Badgers game: "(It was) stuff that you're going to have doing the course of a football game. If you play football, you expect to get hurt. You have to expect it. If you don't then you shouldn't even be out there. I expect to get hurt, and when I do get hurt, I suck it up and come back out."

Iowa fullback and Wisconsin native Paul Kujawa about how it would feel to defeat the Badgers: "Some of the kids weren't even recruited by Wisconsin and that makes it even more special because growing up in Wisconsin, everyone kind of wanted to play for the Badgers. And if they didn't get recruited, it's extra sweet when we beat them."

Fry about the Detroit press hardly covering the Hawkeyes: "I loved it. I loved it . . . As all of you know in the State of Iowa, we don't have a lot of great, great things going for us that we can beat our drums about. And by golly if we win, we'd like to be recognized. Those folks up in Michigan didn't want to do that."

Hawkeye Profile: Matt Rodgers

Rodgers doesn't want image of 'big-game QB'

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

When he has a game like against Michigan last weekend, everyone loves Matt Rodgers.

As soon as he throws an interception, they want his head.

But Rodgers says he doesn't mind the inconsistency of the fans, just the inconsistency of his play.

"People don't like when you throw interceptions," said the junior from Walpole, Mass. "I can understand that. I don't like it. Fans are fans. They can't be satisfied with someone who throws interceptions, but that happens in college football and it happens in every football.

"I have to start playing consistently. I have to make every game like last week. I don't want to be known as a big-game quarterback. I want to be known as just a great quarterback all around, and that's what I have to start doing is start getting it going in every game."

After a down week of throwing for 78 yards against Wisconsin, Rodgers hit the Wolverines with his best form yet this season. He completed 27 of 37 passes for 276 yards. He also led an 85-yard touchdown drive in the final four minutes to give a 24-23 win over Michigan.

"Matt Rodgers was throwing the ball as well as he has ever thrown the ball," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "That last drive was fantastic."

"Sometimes I was open and I'd come back to the huddle and I'd say,

'Matt, I was open,'" sophomore wide receiver Danan Hughes said. "But then when I saw the film, I said, 'Well, he was more open than me.'

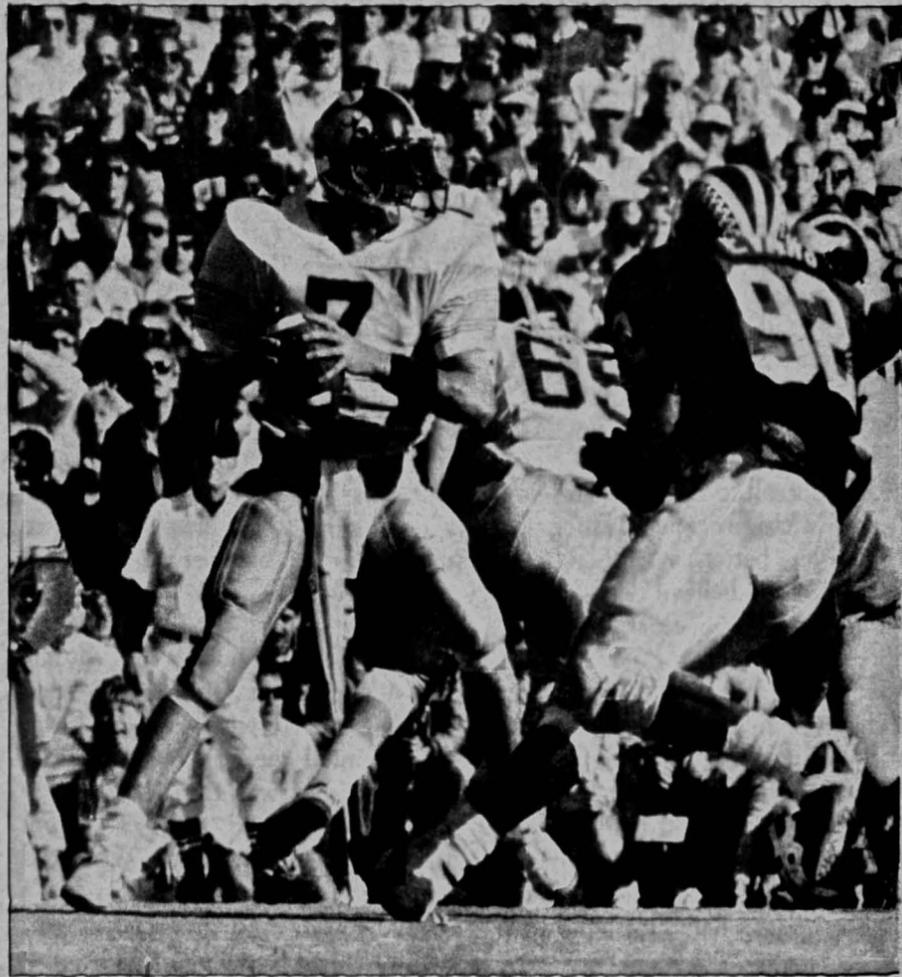

"For him to be a second year starter and to be able to see who's more open, who can get more yardage. I might be open for 10 yards, might be able to turn up and get 12. But there might be someone open for 12 who can turn up and get 20. For him to be able to see that and watch the pass rush and everything, that's incredible."

The win kept the Hawkeyes undefeated in Big Ten play, tied with Illinois and Minnesota for the conference lead.

"It's just the fact that we can score in three minutes and go 85 yards and do that just adds tremendous confidence," Rodgers said. "Not just with myself but with my teammates and knowing that they can get open and clutch play. That's what it's all about. And that's a very comforting feeling to have, knowing that we can do that, we can accomplish it against a great team like Michigan."

When Rodgers became Iowa first-string quarterback in the second game last season, he had big shoes to fill.

His predecessor, Chuck Hartlieb, had passed for 6,934 yards and 37 touchdowns during the years 1986-88. And the Hawkeyes signal caller before that, Chuck Long, tops the school's career passing list with 10,461 yards and 74 TDs.

Andy Scott/The Daily Iowan

Preparing for flight

Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers looks for open receivers during the Hawkeyes' win over Michigan last Saturday. The junior from Walpole, Mass., was named Big Ten Offensive Player of the Week after completing 27 of 37 for 276 yards and one touchdown against the Wolverines.

When Rodgers began starting last year, fans were projecting him to be another Chuck.

"I think they (the fans) are getting to be a little bit more patient with me," Rodgers said. "Last year they expected me to be first-team all-Big Ten, and who knows, maybe I'll be able to do that this year. That's one of my goals."

With numerous center snap fumbles and interceptions last year, Rodgers didn't live up to the fans' expectations.

But he did make a name for himself in the Hawkeye annuals by passing for 2,222 yards in the 1989 season. Rodgers was only the second sophomore in Iowa history to throw for over 2,000 yards as a sophomore.

Rodgers isn't a stranger to having an image to live up to. Before he was known as the Iowa quarterback, the 6-foot-4, 205-pounder had a different identity — the son of Boston Celtics coach Jimmy Rodgers.

"In about high school people started saying, 'That's Jimmy Rodgers' son,'" Matt said. "It was hard at first because I'd never faced that before. But now I'm used to it, I love it. I'd rather them say that than anything else."

Jimmy, who was fired by the Celtics last year, was a four-year letterwinner in basketball at Iowa.

But despite his fondness for Iowa City, he didn't push Matt to go to Iowa.

"The only influence I had was when Iowa recruited him and he didn't know much about Iowa," Jimmy said in September when he was in Iowa City for the Farm Scholarship basketball game. "He went out and wanted to take a look. I asked him if he wasn't going to play football, what school would he want to attend. And without hesitation he said Iowa."

"He influenced me to come out here and take a visit," Matt said. "He wanted me to go out and see Iowa because he'd been through four years here and he loved it. But the actual decision was mine."

Since being let go by Boston, Jimmy has spent his weekends watching the Hawkeyes' games. According to Matt, that is his father's biggest concern.

"He doesn't have anything to worry about anymore," Matt said. "He's very relaxed and the only thing he really has to worry about is whether the Hawkeyes win or lose. He's a Hawk at heart and he's loving every minute of it."

Andy Scott/The Daily Iowan

1990 Hawkeye Homecoming

Iowa City readies for another Homecoming

By David Taylor
The Daily Iowan

As autumn sweeps over the campus and a goodbye to 70-degree days is imminent, there is a special anticipation in the air as Iowa City prepares for one of the few remaining home football games.

Homecoming.

The events leading up to Saturday's football contest might accurately be compared to the ingredients for an explosion, but just what is it about homecoming that so loudly and automatically proclaims "party time?" Is it the parade on Friday? The flood of alumni descending into town? Could it be the Hawkeyes' 5-1 record (3-0 in Big Ten)? The homecoming queen maybe?

Homecoming is a combination of all those things. It is that one weekend where the university seems to collectively throw down the books in eager expectancy of a great game and a wild weekend.

"The game has more tradition, and there are a lot of other activities going on around the campus, so it's good for the university," said Iowa athletic director Bump Elliott. "More people are here that aren't normally, and it becomes a rallying point for the school."

It may seem that the object is to get a win and satisfy everyone, but that is not necessarily the case, according to Elliott.

"There is no special formula for deciding the game," Elliott said. "It is picked to be compatible with the season, and about three or four years in advance. We always try to schedule a competitive game."

"We also have to fit it in the middle of the season, and we try to change it around from time to time so we don't end up playing the same team every year."

Elliott also said that although there is more going on around the time of the game, it is a "regular" game and "certainly as important as any other game."

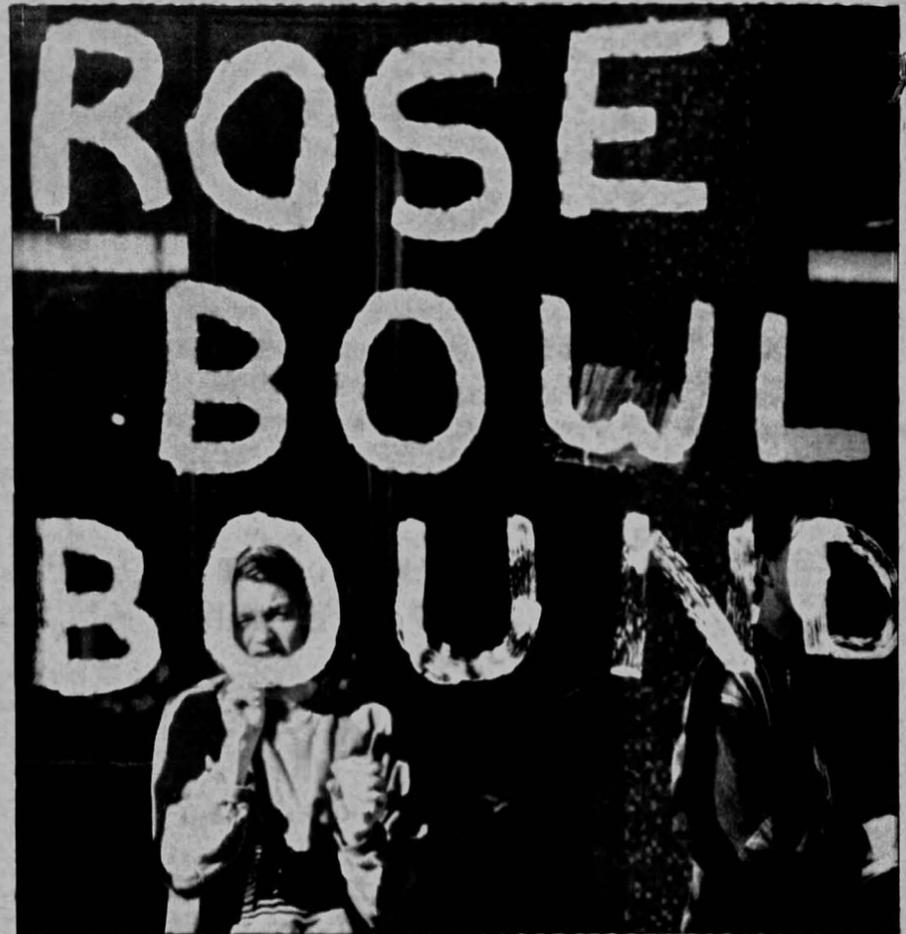

The former students coming back to Iowa City this weekend have their own reasons for returning, many having less to do with football and more to do with socializing.

"It's a chance for me to come back and see my old friends that are still in school, and also the ones that are coming back for the weekend," said 1989 Iowa graduate Brian Schaeperkoetter. "It's not even so much the game, but the fact that everyone is in town to have a good time."

"I plan on going to the game, but I'll be here mainly to see people."

The game also takes on added importance to fans this year, due to the phoenix-like rise of the Hawkeyes from last year's disappointing season. A win Saturday would put the Hawkeyes one step closer to the scent of roses.

"I'm going to the game hoping for a big blow-out, not just a win," said junior Dave Ketchmark. "The Hawks should win by a lot because they are a much better team this year than last, and I'll be surprised if they don't win easily.

"But anything besides a loss is fine."

An impressive victory seems possible, even likely, considering that the opponents are the Northwestern Wildcats, who haven't beaten Iowa since 1973 and have not won in Kinnick Stadium since 1971. The

"There is no special formula for deciding the game . . . We always try to schedule a competitive game."

Bump Elliott

1971 contest was also a homecoming game for Iowa, but to put statistical minds at ease, the last time Northwestern came here for a homecoming in 1983, they were thrashed 61-21.

The game takes most of the media spotlight this week, but homecoming is not without added entertainment, especially for the inexperienced freshman used to meaningless high school pep rallies squeezed into filthy gymnasiums. For the uneducated, a college homecoming could come as shocking.

"I'm very anxious to experience homecoming here," said freshman

Deb Geier. "It's cool to go to the games, and everyone is happy about the Hawks this year."

"It definitely should be more fun than high school."

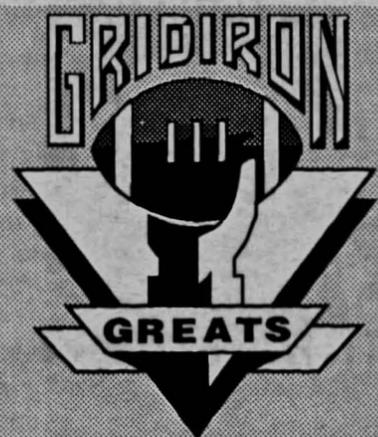

Homecoming here is not celebrated with a bonfire attended by 20 people, nor is it reminiscent to those wild high school dances where Mom and Dad monitor a plastic punchbowl, surrounded by dozens of lusting teenagers in cheap suits. People here actually go to the game, and they have a good time when they are there.

Perhaps the most illustrative example is the homecoming king and queen, who are elected by scholarship, leadership and service, not by how good they look to teenagers in the midst of puberty. They are more of a representation of the university student body, and their showing constitutes part of the homecoming tradition.

"Homecoming is a time for students and alumni to show their school spirit, and it gets people more involved with school activities," said 1990 queen BethAnne Terry. "There is so much tradition involved, but there are also a lot of new things at the same time."

"Overall, I think it reminds everyone that they are here to learn, but to also have fun."

Three new ways to survive college.

With Apple's introduction of three new Macintosh® computers, meeting the challenges of college life just got a whole lot easier. Because now, everybody can afford a Macintosh.

The Macintosh Classic is our most affordable model, yet it comes with everything you need—including a hard disk drive. The Macintosh LC combines color capabilities with affordability. And the Macintosh IIx is perfect for students who need a computer with extra power and expandability.

No matter which Macintosh you choose, you'll have a computer that lightens your work load without giving you another tough subject to learn. Every Macintosh computer is easy to set up and even easier to master. And when you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. That's because thousands of available programs all work in the same, consistent manner. You can even share information with someone who uses a different type of computer—thanks to Apple's versatile SuperDrive™, which reads from and writes to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS/2, and Apple® II floppy disks.

See the new Macintosh computers for yourself, and find out how surviving college just got a whole lot easier.

Classic® orders can be picked up NOW at the PCSC. If your order included memory installation or is a department order please wait until you are called before coming.

Iowa punter rebuilds confidence, average

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

For any athlete in a pressure situation — whether it be a gymnast performing on the balance beam or a pitcher needing that third strike — confidence plays a natural, instinctive role in deciding the outcome of the situation. For Iowa punter Jim Hujsak, the scenario is no different and neither are the circumstances.

At the beginning of the 1990 football season, the Nashua, N.H., native was feeling about as much pressure as a player can experience. In the first three games against Cincinnati, Iowa State and Miami, Hujsak averaged 34.3 yards per punt — nearly four yards less than his season average so far this year.

His performance was subpar of what he was accomplishing during practice and what he knew he was capable of.

Jim Hujsak

Hometown: Nashua, N.H.

Position: Punter

Height: 6-0

Weight: 200

Class: Sophomore

Personal: Started for the Hawkeyes as a freshman

"You like to come out at the beginning of the season and do really well and get your confidence," Hujsak said. "I feel like I should have come in and started well, and I wasn't kicking the ball like I'd like to.

"I got off to a rough start this year, but I feel that I should overcome that now for the rest of the season."

Starting as a true freshman in 1989 for the Hawkeyes, the 6-foot-0, 200-pound standout from Nashua High School punted 50 times for a 38.6-yard average per punt, landing 18 kicks inside the 20 yard line.

He was named special teams MVP

Punt	No.	Yds.	Avg.	Bk	Lg
1989	50	1,928	38.6	0	67
1990	29	1,101	38.0	1	63
Career	79	3,029	38.3	1	67

in the games against Tulsa, Michigan and Illinois in 1989, and was noted as such this season, along with kicker Jeff Skillett, in the upset win against Michigan.

Earlier this season in the loss to Miami, the USA Today honorable mention high school all-American punted a career-high nine times, surpassing his previous best of seven against Purdue last season.

But even with all the accolades and statistics, Hujsak's most noticeable achievement so far in his college career has been his ability to adapt and mature amidst all the pressure involved with being starting punter for a Big Ten school.

"Jim has shown incredible growth in his maturity since starting last year as a freshman," Coach Hayden Fry said. "He has shown great improvement. Last week against Michigan he had to punt into the wind several times, and yet, they had minus-1 and -2 yards on the return. He is maturing and becoming a consistent punter."

Even with all of the excitement about the victory over Michigan, one factor stands out in Hujsak's mind: The blocked punt returned for a touchdown in the third quarter that could have meant a loss for the Hawkeyes.

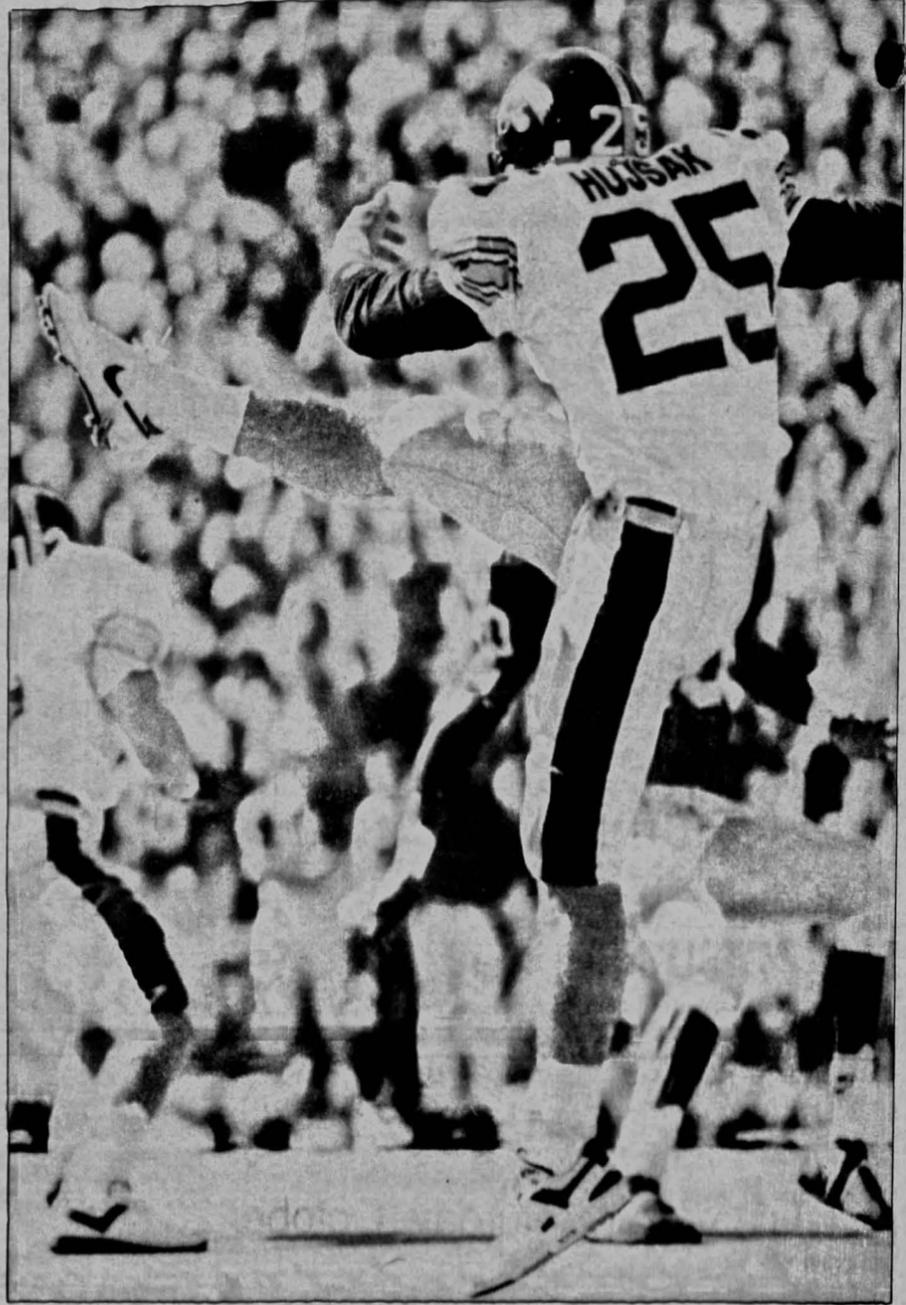

"He (Dave Ritter) came through scott-free. There wasn't too much I could have done except maybe I could have gone a little faster. But that's an 'if,'" Hujsak said. "I knew I was going to get a lot of pressure, but I didn't think he was going to be that close. I was surprised he got there that fast.

"I had one blocked last year against Purdue that was a surprise, too. When they come clean, they come quick. Michigan did a good job in returning the ball all game. I think they surprised everyone with the block because their return man Tripp Welbourne is one of the tops in the nation."

During his high school days, Hujsak was active in other sports aside from his involvement with the football team. He played on both the basketball and baseball team but never had the same feeling for either sport as he did for football.

"I loved both sports," Hujsak said. "I dedicated myself to them when I was playing, but, obviously, my chance for success was in football, so I concentrated on that. I always thought I had a chance to play as a punter and kicker.

"To me, punting was a little more challenging than place-kicking. I started punting in the eighth grade. I played soccer, and they asked me if I could kick a ball. I thought I could. I always had more fun punting. I would have loved to play another position, but coming to a major college, my size or ability didn't help out in another position."

In high school, Hujsak was a two-to three-step punter, giving himself more time to prepare for his delivery. This practice paid off as he averaged 43 and 44 yards per punt his junior and senior years, respectively.

Since coming to Iowa, however, he has altered his motion a bit, replacing the extra third step with a frequent stutter step in order to meet the aggressive college rush.

Although Hujsak's success in the early part of this season may not reflect this adaptive method, his statistics over the last three Big Ten games (Michigan State, Wisconsin and Michigan) have, putting him eighth in the Big Ten punting standings. His 38.0 average is just shy of the fourth-place 39.7 by Michigan State's Josh Burland.

"Coach Fry has always been a believer in if you do something right, keep on doing it," Hujsak said. "But, so far, this way has been working out pretty well."

Because he was a "punter" coming out of high school rather than a running back or linebacker, the three-time first-team all-state honoree's choices were limited.

"Coming out of high school as a punter is a different situation than a regular position," Hujsak said. "Not too many people recruit a punter. You either have had to just come off a good year or at a time when punters are scarce.

"I chose Iowa because of the football opportunities I had here. I

Hawkeye Profile: Jason Olejniczak

Olejniczaks make football a family affair

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

It's safe to say that Iowa strong safety Jason Olejniczak is well-coached. He not only has Hayden Fry's Iowa coaching staff instructing him, but he has coaches in the stands as well.

Jason's father, Dennis Olejniczak, is a football and baseball coach at Decorah, Iowa, high school. The school has won three consecutive Class 3A titles and is currently the top-ranked 3A team in the state.

And his brother, Lon Olejniczak, is familiar with the Iowa system after playing for the Hawkeyes from 1979-1983.

Both brother and father attend all of Jason's games with the Hawkeyes, and neither is shy about giving him advice and pointers after the game.

"I try to make suggestions more than coach," said Lon, who is currently working in an economic development program at Kirkwood Community College in Cedar Rapids.

"I don't say anything unless he looks like he's struggling," he continued. "He's a grown man. He can make his own decisions."

Jason's father, an assistant coach for the Decorah team, finds it even harder to contain his coaching instincts.

"You know, I feel he's getting excellent coaching," Dennis Olejniczak said. "But I look out and see if he's in position according to how we coach (at Decorah)."

"I don't always know for sure where he's supposed to be, so I have to be careful. But if it's basic fundamentals, where I've seen something he could have done better, I'll remind him."

"He thinks he can see it all from up there (in the stands)," Jason said of his father. "Most of the time he's right. Having my dad and my bother in the stands, I'm getting it from all sides."

"But I guess the coaches I have are good ones: The Iowa staff, Dad and Lon."

Iowa Sports Information

Help on the way

Iowa redshirt freshman Jason Olejniczak (13) brings down one of the Hawkeyes' opponents earlier this season at Kinnick Stadium while Merton Hanks (45), Leroy Smith (8) and Melvin Foster (66) approach. Olejniczak comes from a football family with a father who coached at Decorah (Iowa) High School and a brother who played for Iowa.

Jason's emergence this season as a backup strong safety for the Iowa team completes a family trio of collegiate football players.

Dennis Olejniczak played collegiate football for Northern Iowa. He was a defensive back for two years before a head injury ended his football career.

Lon followed a similar path at Iowa; in some ways, too similar. He played one year at defensive back for the Hawkeyes before moving to offense, playing tight end and wing-back during his sophomore and junior years.

But his football career was cut short when he broke his leg in the third game of his junior season. He never fully recovered during his stay at Iowa.

But his accomplishments were not lost on an admiring younger brother. Jason and his parents attended almost every game Lon played for Iowa.

"I can remember coming to almost every game, including the away games," Jason said. "I was a proud little kid, only nine or 10 years old.

He was my idol when he was here, and that gave me something to shoot for."

If his dream was to emulate his brother as a regular player for the Hawkeyes, it's something he has already accomplished. After redshirting in 1989, he is currently Brian Wise's backup at strong safety and is taking about one-half of the snaps at that position.

In his first six games with the Hawkeyes, Olejniczak has shown the ability to make the big play. His first was an interception on Oct. 6 which set up Iowa's first field goal in a 12-7 upset of then-No. 18 Michigan State in East Lansing, Mich.

One week later, in Oct. 13 contest with Wisconsin, the 6-foot, 195-pound redshirt freshman again turned in a pivotal play. In the fourth quarter, Olejniczak grabbed a tipped pass from Badger signal caller Tony Lowery and raced 34 yards downfield for a touchdown, giving the Hawkeyes a 27-10 cushion.

Olejniczak said the touchdown was a thrill, but it left him in an awkward position.

"It had been so long since I had been in the end zone, I didn't know what to do," Olejniczak said.

Actually, it had only been two years. Olejniczak was a two-way player for Decorah High School, playing quarterback as well as safety.

As a roll-out, running quarterback, he guided the Decorah team to Class 3A state titles during his final two years. That's two more championships than his brother earned as a drop-back passer for the school in the 1970s.

And Lon said Jason won't let him forget it.

"He reminds me of it all the time," Lon said.

With both brothers following similar paths to the same college, comparisons between the two were inevitable. But other than their competitiveness, Jason said there are few similarities between himself and his brother.

"We're completely different people," Jason said. "I think Lon is more personable, more outgoing. I like to be myself and stay out of the

Through the Years

Iowa Sports Information

1980 — Second-year Iowa football coach Hayden Fry led the Hawkeyes to a fourth-place finish in the Big Ten with a 4-4 league record (4-7 overall). That position in the conference was Iowa's best in 10 years.

Iowa Sports Information

1982 — After directing the Hawkeyes to their first Rose Bowl since 1959 (a 28-0 beating by Washington after the 1981 season), Fry led his squad to a 28-22 defeat of Tennessee in the Peach Bowl in 1982.

Iowa Sports Information

1985 — Iowa assistant coach Barry Alvarez, left, and Fry talk to linebacker George Davis during one of the Hawkeyes' games during the 1985 season. Fry's 1985 squad finished in the 10th in the country in The Associated Press poll.

1985 — Fry and Hawkeye quarterback Chuck Long meet with the media after winning the conference title and thus becoming the Big Ten's representative in the 1986 Rose Bowl. That year was the second in Fry's seven-year tenure at Iowa for the Hawkeyes to go to the Rose Bowl.

Iowa Sports Information

1986 — Fry's 1986 squad finished third in the Big Ten and went on to a 39-38 triumph over San Diego State in the Holiday Bowl. With the loss of quarterback Chuck Long, fifth-year senior Mark Vlasic took over the signal calling and led the team to a 9-3-0 overall record (5-3 in the conference).

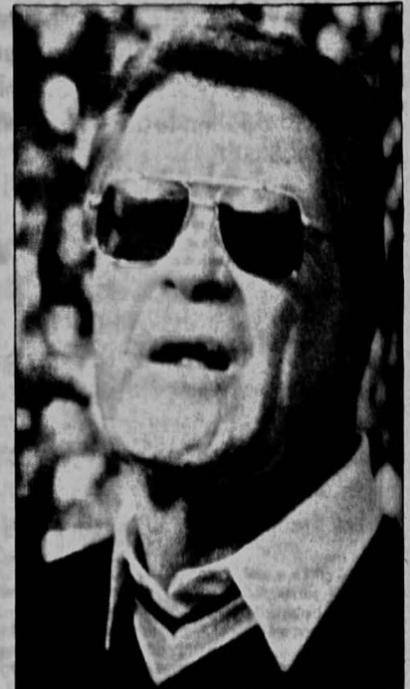

Iowa Sports Information

1987 — Fry talks to ABC commentator Keith Jackson and another representative from the network before the Kickoff Classic Aug. 30, 1987, in East Rutherford, N.J. The Hawkeyes finished 10-3-0 in 1987 and defeated Wyoming 20-19 in the Holiday Bowl.

Northwestern Style

On offense, the Wildcats feature senior running back Bob Christian, the only returning starter in the backfield. Christian anchored the Wildcat offense, rushing for 1,291 yards and earning second-team all-Big Ten honor.

On defense, Northwestern's strength seems to be its linebacker. All Big-Ten inside linebacker Thomas Homco leads the young group, punctuated by only one senior in the two-deep.

Coach Francis Peay's group is coming off a 44-34 win over Wisconsin last Saturday.

Big 10

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO (AP) — The possibility of fifth-ranked Illinois being the sleeper in the race for the national championship might not be that far-fetched.

Parity in college football could make it a reality, some Big Ten coaches said Tuesday in their weekly teleconference.

"Whoever wins the Big Ten will look at a pretty good national ranking," said Illinois coach John Mackovic. "The Pac-10, too. Whether or not it will be a showcase remains to be seen."

The winner of the Big Ten will meet the winner of the Pac-10 in the Rose Bowl. No. 7 Washington currently is the favorite in the Pac-10.

Michigan State has played and lost to Illinois, No. 3 Notre Dame and No. 15 Iowa. The Spartans defeated No. 20 Michigan when the Wolverines were ranked No. 1.

Michigan State's George Parles said, "It is difficult to compare and rate but it wouldn't surprise me if Illinois wins the rest of its games. Michigan is a fine team, Illinois is a fine team, Notre Dame is a fine team. You can throw them all in a pot and shake one out. I'm just glad they're all behind us."

Purdue lost to both Notre Dame and Illinois. Coach Fred Akers said Illinois is in the same class with Notre Dame.

"Neither team is fun to play," he said. Notre Dame has the most talent. In my estimation, Notre Dame would have the edge in overall football talent."

Michigan has three losses on the season, having been defeated 24-23 by Iowa last weekend. The Wolverines also lost by a point to Michigan State aside from its opening 28-24 defeat to Notre Dame.

Michigan was attempting to win an unprecedented third straight undisputed Big Ten championship.

"Anytime a defending champion is picked to win, it's not easy," said Michigan's Gary Moeller. "Everytime we go out, we get everyone's best punch. Iowa is a good team. The thing going for them is they're playing well as a group and improving each week."

Minnesota seems to be the odd-team out in the rankings although tied for first place in the Big Ten.

"Not at all," said Minnesota's John Gutekunst when asked if being unrated bothered him. A last-second loss to Utah and a 56-0 drubbing by No. 4 Nebraska has left the Gophers on the outside.

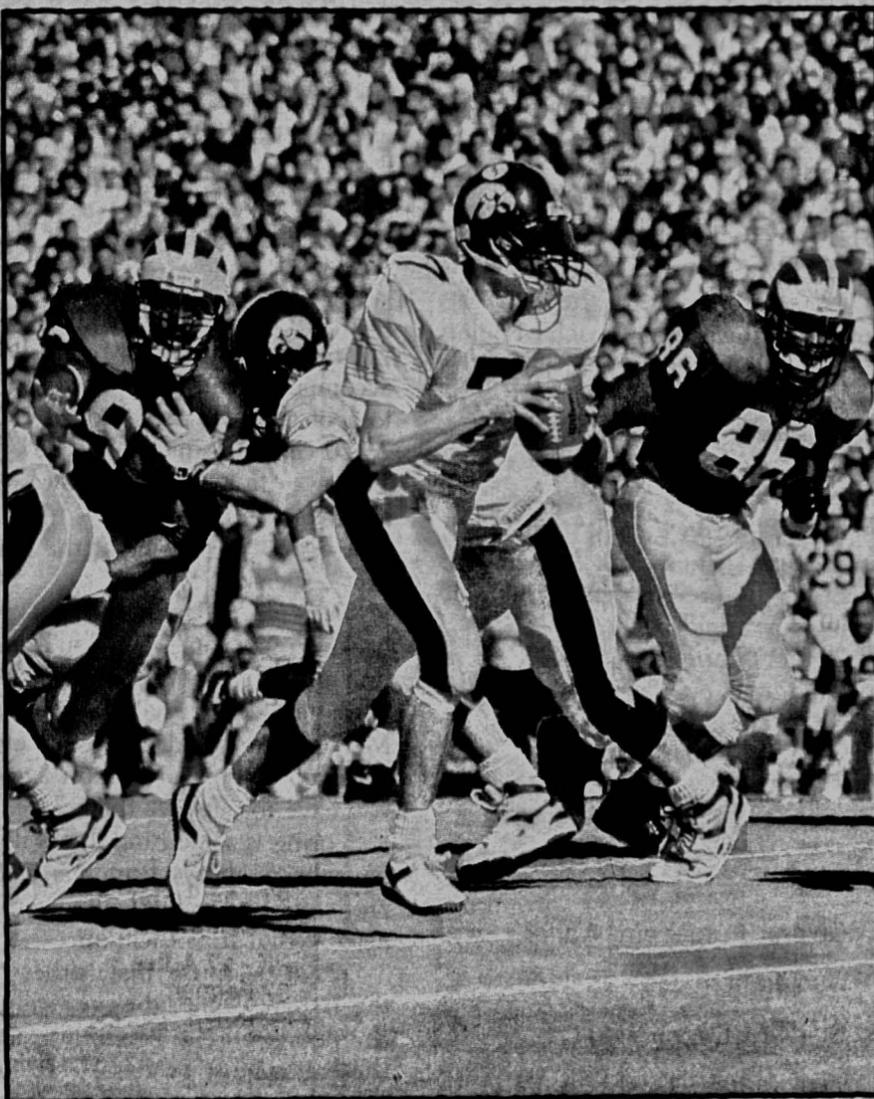

"We went back to fundamentals after the Nebraska game," said Gutekunst. "We have dedicated players and got good results."

One of which was a 12-0 victory over previously-ranked Indiana last week.

Homecoming Game Preview

What a difference one year can make

By John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

It was only one year ago that Michigan pulled away in the second half to beat Iowa at its homecoming game, 26-12. But after the Hawkeyes traveled to Ann Arbor last weekend to return the favor (handing the Wolverines their first homecoming loss in 23 years, 28-27), last year's homecoming seems eons away.

Last year at this time Iowa was 3-3 overall and 1-2 in the Big Ten. The Hawkeyes would win only two more games in 1989 and fail to win a bowl berth for the first time in nine years.

What a difference a year can make.

In the seventh week of their 1990 campaign, the Iowa Hawkeyes stand as the No. 15 football team in the nation, 5-1 overall and knotted in a three-way tie with Minnesota and Illinois for first in the Big Ten with a 3-0 conference record.

The Hawkeyes have beaten both Michigan and Michigan State on the road for the first time in Iowa history and their only loss on the season is a 48-21 defeat to No. 8 Miami at the Orange Bowl.

So on the surface, tomorrow's Homecoming Game against Northwestern doesn't exactly appear to be a threat to the Hawkeyes' resurgent Rose Bowl hopes. Northwestern hasn't beaten an Iowa team since a 31-15 decision at Dyche Stadium in 1973. Iowa coach Hayden Fry sports a 12-0 record versus the Wildcats and Northwestern coach Francis Peay is 0-4 against the Hawkeyes.

Last year the Hawkeyes opened up a 21-0 lead in Evanston before holding on to win 35-22, and Iowa holds a 36-14-3 series advantage against Northwestern, which is particularly impressive when one remembers some of the pre-Hayden Fry football teams Iowa fielded.

In fact, until they beat Northern Illinois in September, the Wildcats hadn't claimed a victory since November of 1988 — a span of 14 games. It sounds cruel, but for most of the Big Ten in recent years, the Northwestern game seems to have amounted to a bye.

But don't tell that to the Hawkeyes.

"Every game counts as a win or a loss," senior Iowa cornerback Merton Hanks said. "I can say defensively, we will have no problem getting up for Northwestern because of their offense — their schemes are excellent."

And don't tell Fry, either. He has similar concerns.

"Northwestern is scoring too many points," said Fry, who in his 12th year at Iowa is now the dean of Big Ten coaches. "They scored 44 against Wisconsin last week. They have three, truly outstanding players on offense."

Fry is speaking of Wildcat quarterback Len Williams, wide receiver Richard Buchanan and running back Bob Christian — the three leaders of this year's version of the always formidable offensive attack of a Francis Peay-coached team.

"The quarterback Williams, is very, very good," Fry said. "Very underrated. Extremely tough. Good passer, good scrambler, good runner."

"The wide receiver Buchanan was all-Big Ten last year. I think he probably leads the world in receiving now."

"And Bob Christian, the running back, is probably the most consistent running back in the Big Ten. He's without question the most underrated football player in the Big Ten."

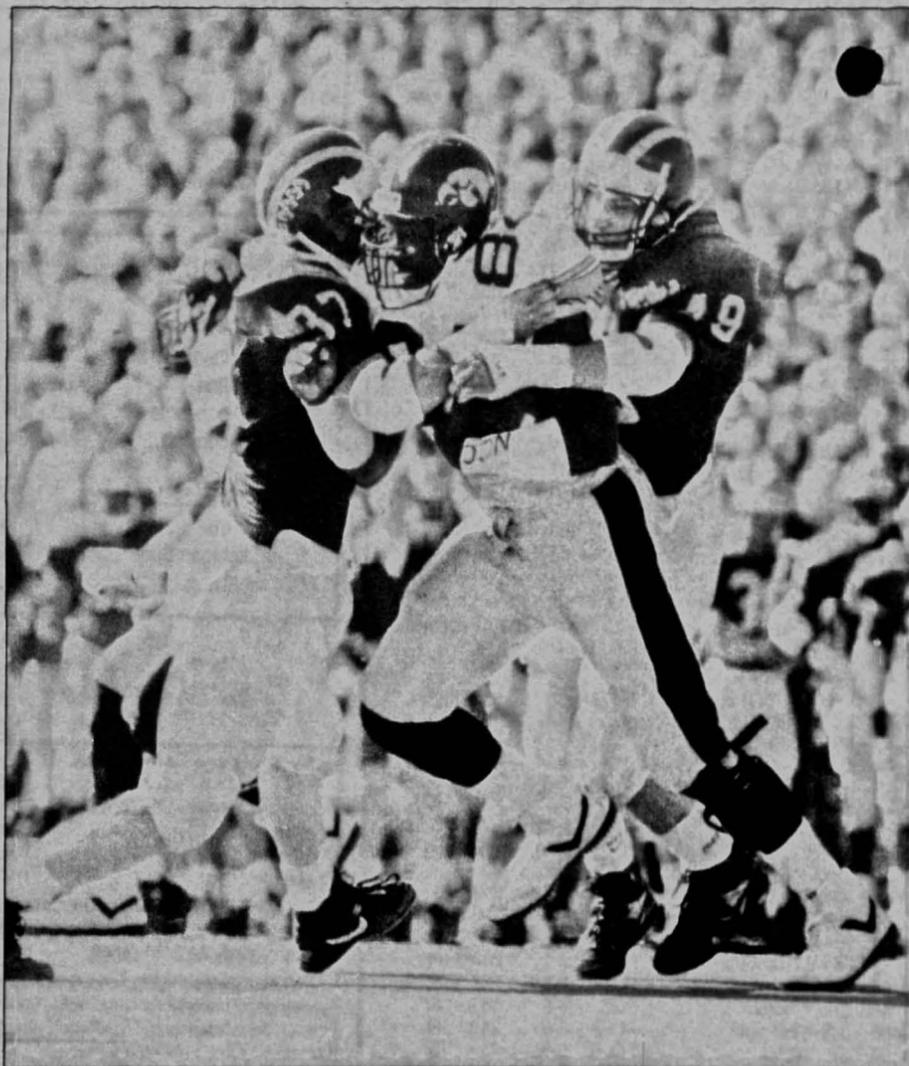

Underrated or not, Christian's accomplishments are not entirely lost of this Hawkeye squad. With 2,320 career rushing yards, he's only 145 away from tying Northwestern's all-time rushing record — 145 yards that could easily come at the Hawkeyes' expense.

"I've played against some great backs in my time but you'll never find anybody that runs as hard as this Christian kid," senior linebacker Melvin Foster said. "It seems every-time you go up against Northwestern you have to outscore them."

Scoring is something the Wildcats have been always been particularly proficient in; it's usually been the defense that trips them up.

"It's no surprise that, other than the Indiana game, they've really put the points on the board and moved the ball against everyone," Fry said. "Obviously we're very concerned, because of the fact that they scored that many points against Wisconsin last week."

And as if the Hawkeyes need

Going my way

another reason not to overlook the Wildcats in their quest for the Roses, a quick look at their own success this year might sober them up a little. The Hawkeyes are a good team, but nobody really expected them to beat Michigan — formerly ranked No. 1 in the country — or previously-ranked Michigan State.

If there's one thing Fry and his Hawkeyes should be sure of this season, it's the fact that no game is won before the kickoff. They just have to ask Michigan.

"We should win the ball game. We know that, but that's what we have to guard against," Fry said. "No telling what's going to happen before

"I can say defensively, we will have no problem getting up for Northwestern."

Merton Hanks

And Iowa's isn't the only upset story of the season. How about Stanford taking out Notre Dame, at home? Or Alabama beating Tennessee? Or Division I-AA Citadel beating South Carolina for the first time in 40 years? Not to mention James "Buster" Douglas and the Cincinnati Reds.

"Maybe this truly is the year of the upset," Fry said. "The guys that weren't projected up there to be that good are the ones that are winning. That's the way the Big Ten race looks to me."

it's over. Northwestern could roll in here and put a knot on our head. If we can do it after 23 homecomings at Michigan, Northwestern can dang sure do it to us here at our homecoming."

Whatever happens, this Saturday or next week against Illinois or in whichever bowl the Hawkeyes are chosen to represent, we'll all know soon enough.

"Season's going by in a hurry," Fry said. "When you're having fun, time flies."

Basketball Action at Iowa

Jordan, Armstrong light up Carver-Hawkeye

By Erica Weiland

(Michael Jordan) is God in basketball shoes. — Larry Bird

Flashbulbs blazed like wild electric sparks throughout Carver-Hawkeye Arena as He was introduced.

His Nike Air Jordans were in place as He took the court next to his teammates — Scottie Pippen, Stacey King, Bill Cartwright and John Paxson — in the starting lineup. And the crowd exploded into applause.

Michael Jordan was here.

And when Jordan, with his tongue characteristically hanging out, made a break-away dunk with 4:02 left in the first quarter, the crowd knew it was for real.

The Chicago Bulls also proved that they're for real as they cruised to an easy 119-84 win over the Washington Bullets in preseason NBA action Oct. 16 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Bullets were hampered by the loss of starter Bernard King, who was ill, as well as guards Darrell Walker and Ledell Eackles and forward John Williams.

Jordan said that made a big difference.

"It wasn't the test that we wanted," Jordan said. "They missed some key players. If anything about this game, we learned more about ourselves than about them because they certainly weren't the team that we're going to face the second game of the season."

Jordan led the Bulls in scoring with 16 points, but he shared the role of crowd favorite with former Hawkeye B.J. Armstrong.

Armstrong, who received a standing ovation when he entered the game at the 8:08 mark in the first quarter, ended the contest with 13 points and five assists.

"It's really wonderful that the fans appreciate what I tried to accomplish here," Armstrong said. "Iowa has some of the best fans in the country and I just get a real nice reception. It makes me want to go out there and work harder and do my best."

"It's always special to go back and play at home," Jordan said of Armstrong's return. "It's great for the fans to see what their respect and your dedication have done."

Field Hockey team defeats Michigan rivals

By Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

The No. 9 Iowa Field Hockey team raised its record to 14-3, 6-1 in the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference, by taking care of Michigan State 6-0 and Michigan 3-1, at the Hawkeye Field Hockey Field last weekend.

Iowa outshot the Spartans 16-12 and out penalty-cornered them 7-6 in the 6-0 rout. Ironically, when Iowa had traveled to Michigan State on Sept. 14th, the Hawkeyes dominated the Spartans in the shot department (25-2) and in the corner department (18-0), but scored half as many goals in a 3-0 win.

Sophomore Jamie Rofrano and junior Kerry Horgan collected three assists, with Horgan claiming the team lead with a total of 22 in the process.

"The first four times we were down in their end, we scored," Coach Beth Beglin said. "I was real happy with that and I was really happy with the effectiveness of our corners."

A much tougher opponent, the No. 20 Michigan Wolverines, were the next to fall to Iowa, 3-1. The largest crowd of the season, 289, watched junior Kris Fillat score two goals — one on a penalty stroke — and sophomore Kristy Gleason pick up a goal and an assist. Rofrano and Horgan also had two assists each.

The Hawkeyes outshot Michigan 39-6 and out-cornered them 18-5, but will have to do it all over again if they hope to maintain pace in the MCFHC with top-ranked Northwestern.

Iowa travels to Ann Arbor, Mich., today for a rematch with the Wolverines, as well as another encounter with Northern Illinois Saturday. The Hawkeyes shut out the Huskies on the road, 2-0, on Oct. 11th.

Volleyball

Seven proved to be a lucky number for Coach Ruth Nelson's Hawkeyes, when they defeated Northwestern for their seventh consecutive win. But it was their eighth match that did them in, as Iowa lost an 11-15, 15-7, 15-12, 10-15, 16-14 heartbreaker at home to co-Big Ten leader Wisconsin.

Against the Wildcats, senior Ginger Lorentson paced Iowa with a .615 hitting percentage in the 15-5, 15-11, 17-15 victory. Not only was the win Iowa's seventh straight, but the 17-15 game was also their 21st consecutive game victory. The match also marked their sixth three-game sweep in a row.

That all came to an end versus the Badgers, however, but Iowa did not go down without a fight. Hawkeye Jenny Rees recorded 25 kills, 29 digs, and five blocks, while three of her teammates were also in double digits in kills — senior Barb Willis (25), junior Trista Schoenbeck (18) and freshman Christy Janssen (11).

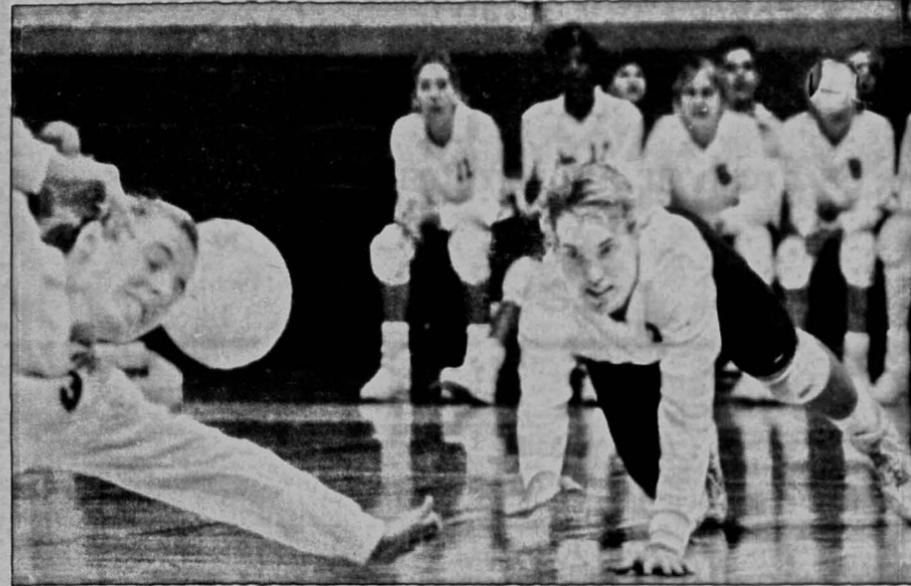

"We played a great match," Nelson said after the loss. "It would have changed the whole attitude of our season if we had won."

Iowa, now with a 9-10, 4-5 record, takes to the road tonight and Saturday night in an effort to avenge earlier losses to Purdue and Illinois.

Men's Cross Country

After losing a triangular meet to Illinois and Nebraska, the Hawkeyes will see how much having this past week off will help them, as they travel to Minnesota for the 1990 Big Ten Championships Saturday.

Iowa suffered a 31-44-52 tri-meet loss to the host Fighting Illini and the Cornhuskers on Oct. 15th, but turned in some good performances in the process.

David Brown paced Iowa with a third-place time of 24 minutes, 35 seconds, while Aurora, Co., native Kevin Herd took fourth with a clocking of 24:52. They were followed by L.J. Albrecht, who finished ninth in 25:15.

"We are entering the championship part of our season, so we need to keep setting goals for 'ourselves,'" Coach Larry Wiczorek said. "I think David's performance showed the improvement we are capable of."

Student section knows how to throw a ball

By Jamie Butters
The Daily Iowan

Where can you find bodies passed, botas thrown and fevers pitched? The student section, of course.

The southwest corner of Kinnick Stadium doesn't really seat students — it stands them.

"Everybody's into it (in the student section,)" said Ursula Patiwael of Iowa City. "Most students are fired up."

Patiwael, who's been going to Iowa football games for five years, said she likes the student section, but there is one drawback.

"The only bad part is standing the whole time," she said. "When we sit in other seats, we sit down sometimes. Sitting is nice."

This year's opening game against Cincinnati broke the Hawkeyes' streak of 58 sellout games. Some of the reason for that was the high cost of tickets and student apathy.

Football ticket prices rose to $18 a game for the general public and prompted Iowa head coach Hayden Fry to espouse his theories on the cost of living.

But student sales fell sharply, perhaps because of the decline in enrollment, relatively high ticket prices in the face of tuition increases or just the continuing trend of falling ticket sales in less-than-promising preseason predictions — for football and basketball.

"Student spirit is pathetic (compared to past years)," said Jordan Flatt, a UI senior from West Des Moines.

But perhaps this year, as the team is rebounding from last year's 5-6 record, the student section may be making a comeback.

"You get into the Hawks more when they're doing well, like this year," said Patiwael. "Last year it was like, well, if I could get a ticket cheap, then, OK."

One of the most distinctive characteristics of the student section is its energy — even if it sometimes gets out of hand.

"Starting the wave is fun, it gets people out of their seats," said Patiwael. "I don't think it's really a distraction."

But as for the legendary "Less filling; tastes great" shouting matches, she said it's not the student section's fault.

"I think the band starts it," she said. But she added "I love the band; they're great."

However, sometimes the crowd gets out of hand.

Jay Weber, a 22 year-old UI senior from Iowa City, used to sit in the student section, but hasn't had season tickets for a while. This year he went to the Wisconsin game, but he sat behind the student section.

"I was sitting with my dad and some guy threw a full beer can and hit some old guy in the back of the head," Weber said.

"I mean, you expect that in the student section, but not when you're sitting with adults."

Weber also noted that after the game he saw empty whiskey bottles scattered about the student section.

Pop and food vendors also note a less-than-respectful atmosphere in the student section.

"If I go to the student section they treat me like shit," said hot dog vendor Darin Duffin, 16.

Iowa City boy scout Josh Smith said students could be annoying customers "when they ask you if (the cokes) are spiked" and "when they ask you about child labor laws."

Those students sure are social activists.

Speaking of social activities, Hawkeye fans — especially in the student section — have a tradition of shaking their keys during kickoffs. But why?

"I don't know why, but I do it," said Patiwael.

Students also bellow Lew Montgomery's first name when he scores a touchdown — scored, that is, since Montgomery is out with a separated shoulder. But not everyone agrees it's such a good idea.

"I think it's stupid that just because a guy's name rhymes with 'boo' you have to yell his name every time he does something," said Doug Droll of Iowa City.

But Patiwael pointed out one thing that all fans are aware of, "Hawkeye football is a big deal."

Other Sports

Crown from Minneapolis Saturday. Coach Jerry Hassard's team should be geared up for the meet after a fine showing in the Tennessee Invitational two weeks ago.

Iowa, ranked 20th in the nation, finished fifth in the season's largest invitational in Knoxville, as they defeated No. 9 Northern Arizona, No. 19 Penn State and No. 22 Auburn. The Hawkeyes scored 145 points to lose to No. 10 Clemson, No. 6 Tennessee, No. 5 Brigham Young and top-ranked Villanova, who won the meet with 46 points.

The Hawkeyes were led by sophomore Tracy Dahl (11th place, 17:27.2), junior Jennifer Brower (16th, 17:33.8) and senior Tami Hoskins (20th, 17:40.3).

"I am very pleased with a top five finish," Hassard said. "If we continue to improve, we will play a very major role in nationals."

Women's Swimming

After recently being cited as one of the nation's best athletic teams in the area of academics for the second consecutive year, the Hawkeyes will look for more success this weekend — in the pool.

Iowa was one of 31 Division I schools to be recognized by the College Swimming Coaches Association of America, as they accumulated a 3.03 team GPA. And today, swimming coach Peter Kennedy and diving coach Bob Rydze's Hawkeyes will kick off their 1990-91 season at 4:00 p.m., when they host Wisconsin at the Fieldhouse. Saturday, Iowa hosts Indiana and Minnesota at 10:30 a.m.

The Hawkeyes will look to improve on last season's national ranking of 16th and a seventh-place conference finish.

Olejniczak

limelight."

"Lon was more even-tempered, not as temperamental as Jason," their father said from his unique point-of-view. "Jason is a little more high-strung. He likes being out where the action is. That's why Lon, his mother and I thought the defensive side of the ball fit more to Jason's strengths."

But Iowa coach Hayden Fry saw at least one similarity in the two brothers when he recruited Jason as a defensive back.

"(Jason Olejniczak) is exactly like his brother, an all-American boy," the Iowa coach said. "If you had 11 Olejniczaks on offense and 11 of them on defense, you would challenge the world."

Most players would worry about the pressure created by statements like that, but Olejniczak said he is accustomed to it.

"To be an Olejniczak, to me, is great," Jason said. "Everyone knows you. You've got to live up to some expectations, but that's what being here (at Iowa) is all about. You don't want to disappoint people."

And that includes the members of his family that watch from the stands.

"It's good to have their support, to look up in the stands and see them," Olejniczak said. "You know they are out there, and you don't want to disappoint the people you care for."

Hujzak

loved the trip here and the people are great. They're always out to help you."

Now that the disappointments that plagued his confidence and output early in the season appear to be over, the rest of the season looks to be "coming up roses" for Hujzak and the Hawkeyes.

But the first-team punter said he realizes that complacency down the stretch has to be avoided, particularly when Iowa meets the Wildcats at home this weekend before facing co-Big Ten leader Illinois next weekend.

"We've started out well because of our commitment to hard work," Hujzak said. "Right now we need to focus on the game this weekend with Northwestern. As far as Illinois is concerned, we'll worry about that when the time comes."
