Bush calls budget deal distasteful, dubs it 'good medicine'

By Diane Wallace
The Daily Iowan

"We are the job-creating government," said Bush. "I believe that the $1.3 trillion budget deal is good medicine for the economy." But some lawmakers were not so sure. "This deal is a stitch-up," said Senator Jim Webb. "It's a temporary fix that will only cause more problems in the future." The budget deal, which was reached after months of negotiations, included cuts to education and healthcare programs. Many lawmakers and interest groups expressed concern about the long-term effects of the budget cuts, especially on vulnerable populations. But Bush remained optimistic, saying that the deal was a "necessary evil" to get the economy back on track. Meanwhile, the president's popularity ratings remained high, with 65% of Americans expressing confidence in his leadership. However, some polls showed a drop in support for Bush's handling of the Iraq war, with 52% of respondents expressing disapproval. Despite the budget deal and other political developments, the president continued to focus on his agenda, including tax cuts and job creation. But with the midterm elections less than a year away, the president and his team knew that they would need to make progress on key issues if they wanted to retain control of Congress. The road ahead would be challenging, but Bush was determined to overcome any obstacles and lead the country to prosperity. As he looked out over the Capitol Hill, the president thought about the work that still needed to be done. But he knew that with the right leadership and a strong will, anything was possible. And he was ready to take on the challenge.

Temper still boiling over UL incinerators

Environmentalists want more information

Although the UL Department of Anatomy currently has a monitoring system, the crematory operated by funeral homes, which will be to build another storage facility, is also willing to see a new alternative to incineration for the radioactive dog carcasses from the UI Environmental Coalition.

A nonprofit organization that has been joined local efforts by distributing flyers on the Prescott, providing more information.

Most recently, the environmental activists have been joined by members of the UI's employee union. In Oct. 29 letter to President Birnbaum, members of the Union for Experimental Animals have signed a letter against the UL's proposed incinerator, which has been destroying medical waste from UI Hospitals and Clinics.

A recent study has been released that shows the UL's incinerator could be a significant source of air pollution.

The UL has been destroying medical waste from UI Hospitals and Clinics since 1983. The incinerator, which was built in 1984, is designed to handle up to 10 tons of waste per hour.

In addition, Mercy Hospital Executives have joined the opposition to the UL incinerator, saying it is not a viable option for the hospital.

International students learn finer points of U.S. football

By Laura Fortman
The Daily Iowan

A typical football crowd roars and swells in support of its team, but this audience was different. On Sunday morning, those spectators shook their heads in confusion and waved distressingly at every tackle. They were 21 international students gathered at the International Center to learn the fundamentals of American football.

With the end of videotapes of this year’s Iowa-Iowa State game, Mike Kinzel, the UI Division of Recreational Services解释ed the meaning of each word as tackles, down, out-of-bounds and fumbles. The students — who came from all over Asia, Spain and South America — were confused about some aspects of the game, the method of playing and the switching of offensive and defensive players between plays.

Lea Pearson, UI international admission counselor and originally from England, explained that the aerodynamics of throwing a football are very different from throwing a soccer ball and that a “dead duck” called rich because it looks like a dead duck flying through the air.

Kinzel and Pearson-Barter also explained the rigorous exercise and body building required of UI athletes.

“Have you ever held a football player up there?” Kinzel asked. “Their hands were rough.”

Kinzel also explained sports of American culture related to football, such as bonfire traditions, tailgating parties and Harley the Hawk.

Media ignore anti-war protests

First, let me get this out in the open: I do not want to rape your daughter. Nor do I ever want to rape your daughter. And I do believe people who do.

Open a motorcycle, men. The point is this: I say because I hate a tattoo. What's more, I don't want to get another one, I think it's a real bore. I'm not that innocent.

Animal rights activists have been gaining more support recently, but while they deserve to be heard, their messages and actions often are too far.

One of the foremost crimes of perpetrators is the terminal problem of giving death. Animals generally receive very good treatment in most livestock operations. Hogs, cattle, and chickens receive the most attention from human weather and are fed nutritionally balanced diets. When an animal dies, its body is quickly disposed of to prevent a disease from spreading.

Another complaint made by animal rights activists is the medical practice of tattooing. Many who oppose this practice attempt to address the fundamental issues raised by tattooing.

Animal rights activists have always been a source of food for humans. To suggest that it is wrong for people to eat an animal is to suggest that it is wrong for people to eat a dog. If all people became vegetarians, the natural order of the food chain would be disrupted. If humans consumed using animals as a source of food, animal populations would need and many would feed for disease and starvation. People who choose to become vegetarians must have that right to determine their own actions. The idea that all religions should in turn eat meat is not a new one.

One complaint made by animal rights activists is that medical tattooing is inhumane and cruel. This is not the case. Medical tattooing is done in a very ethical manner. In fact, many of the tattoos are given a chance to go home and think through their own actions.

Iraq ends gas rationing; Gorbachev works with France, Iraq for solution

By Daniel J. Wakin

The Associated Press

Iraq, in a surprise move, said Sunday it was halting gasoline rationing imposed as a response to international sanctions. Local reports said that the step was taken to reduce gasoline supplies to U.S.-occupied Kuwait.

The announcement was made by Oil Minister Hasein al-Hasani. He said the new order was necessary because of "security risks" and because daily gasoline thefts had increased to 20 percent of the global production. He did not specify the security risks or thefts.

Iraqi television said the government had been advised by the Ministry of Defense to end rationing. The ministry, it said, believed it was better to reduce gasoline supplies to U.S.-occupied Kuwait than to allow U.S. armed forces to deplete Iraq's own oil supplies.

By Thursday morning, the Vital Gas Station in Baghdad had already run out of gas, local reporters said.

The announcement was made at a press conference held by the government. The Ministry of Defense, which has been responsible for the decision to end rationing, said it was not a response to the international sanctions.

"We have no reason to think that the international sanctions are behind this decision," Ministry of Defense spokesman Aziz al-Singh told reporters. "We have been told by our military that the international sanctions are not the reason for the decision to end rationing."
Focused Iowa dismantles Wildcats

Big Illinois matchup now on front burner

By John Stepney

Daily Iowan

With Illinois looking on the Big Ten throne, there was a lot of discussion over the weekend about the "gaps and "guts" in the Hawkeyes' season. The "gaps" refer to the Wildcats' inability to successfully handle the Big Ten's best running backs. The "guts" refer to the fact that the Hawkeyes' defense is practically outmatched against the conference's top quarterbacks.

The defense is the only team to have shut down Iowa's offense this season, and the Hawkeyes' defense will have another opportunity to do so when they meet in Bloomington Saturday.

The defense was a major reason why the Hawkeyes were able to beat Illinois last year, and the defense will be key again this year.

With the maturation of quarterback Matt Rodgers and running back Nick Bell, a top NFL prospect, Illinois' Big Ten title hopes may be rekindled.

"With the maturation of Rodgers and Bell, a top NFL prospect, Illinois' Big Ten title hopes may be rekindled," Weinfeld said. "Rodgers has improved his passes to his teammates and is playing well, snap from center, far too many times the face of the D."

The pair matched strides-for-strides as they took the lead on the 20th mile from Mexico's Jesus Garcia, who was wearing his first marathon.

In the first 10 miles, Nunnaback took a half-step lead, but Perez caught him, moved ahead and hung forward at the 15-mile mark to win in 2:04:14.

Perez's time was better than Garcia's. Perez's prior personal best was 2:02:25, and he was wearing his first marathon.
