Bush 'fed up' with Saddam's treatment of U.S. hostages

By Lisa Genasci
The Associated Press

President Bush said Wednesday he was fed up with Saddam Hussein's harsh treatment of U.S. hostages. Iraq later said it would allow American families to visit the captives for the holidays. Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and a British commander meanwhile warned the likelihood of war in the region was increasing.

But Iraq's ambassador to the United States, Mohamed al-Mashat, said he sought to avoid bloodshed and reiterated Iraq's offer to negotiate — if other Middle East conflicts were included on the agenda. The United States has rejected such linkage. Mubarak said the Persian Gulf crisis has become so dangerous it "could explode at any time." And he urged "our brothers in Iraq" to realize the danger their Aug. 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait has caused.

The commander of British forces in the Gulf warned that an attack against Iraq is increasingly likely. Air Chief Marshal Sir Paddy Hine said a joint team culled from the Royal Air Force, Royal Navy and Army is developing plans for military strikes. "Saddam Hussein seems reluctant at the moment to accept the judgment of world opinion," he said. "It is looking increasingly unlikely that Saddam Hussein will withdraw unconditionally from Kuwait."

Bush said his patience was wearing thin with Saddam over the 1,000 American hostages in Iraq and Kuwait. "The embassy is being starved," Bush said of the besieged U.S. mission in occupied Kuwait. "The people out there are not being resupplied. Do you think I'm concerned about it? You're darn right I am. And what I'm going to do about it — let's just wait and see, because I have had it with that kind of treatment of Americans," Bush said.

Later Wednesday, an Information Ministry spokesman in Baghdad said the Iraqi government is prepared to allow families of Americans in Iraq to visit during the Christmas and New Year's holidays. No other details were available, and there was no immediate reaction from the State Department. The offer to American relatives appears to be part of an overall Iraqi offer to all relatives of its "foreign guests" to visit. See Gulf, Page 7A

Why Recycle?

It takes a half million trees to make the newspapers Americans read in one Sunday.

Recycling one ton of paper saves 17 trees.

Trees can be placed around a house to serve as insulation and protection and cutting household energy consumption.

Seventeen trees can save 4100 kilowatt hours — the amount of energy a house uses in six months.

Seventeen trees can also absorb 221 pounds of carbon dioxide, which is the amount of carbon dioxide produced by driving a car 442,000 miles.

One ton of paper that's not recycled takes up three cubic yards of landfill space.

UI embarks on recycling plan

Director outlines new 5-year project

By Aziz Gökdemir
The Daily Iowan

In an effort dubbed the world's most extraordinary cleanup, climbers from the U.S., Soviet Union and China roamed the slopes of Mount Everest this spring to clean up the junk that had accumulated during numerous expeditions since 1921. They came back with 4,000 pounds of garbage.

Yet in a single day, the UI creates an estimated 6,000 pounds of paper waste alone. Recycling paper is the starting point of the UI's new waste management program, as paper waste makes up 40 percent of all solid waste by volume generated in the U.S. Plastics follow with 25 percent.

Contrary to popular belief, recycling is not a new idea. Inhabitants of China were recycling paper as early as A.D. 105. During World War II Americans recycled one-third of their paper because of shortage.

Recycling is making a comeback now because of another shortage — the earth's natural resources.

Recycling causes 74 percent less air pollution and 35 percent less water pollution than production methods that start from scratch. Incineration, an alternative method of waste management, is controversial and poses environmental concerns.

Waste disposal through landfills is limited — it is estimated that by 1991, half of the existing landfill sites in the U.S. will be closed.

Faced with these figures, the state of Iowa has outlined its recycling and degradable product milestones for the 1990s. The state aims to recycle 90 percent of paper waste by the year 2000.

The UI began to take steps to comply with the state mandate last spring with the appointment of a waste management coordinator, Carol Casey. In addition to paper recycling, the state also calls for the recycling of foam, glass and plastic waste.

Casey said Iowa's waste management laws are very progressive.

When the UI establishes a successful paper recycling program, it will move on to the others, said Casey. "There are kinks in logistics, but we are now moving faster," she said.

Casey has presented the recycling program to 2000 of the 12,000 UI employees since she took office in May and has spoken to student groups such as the UI Environmental Coalition.

Casey outlined two major goals for the next five years — compiling information for a waste audit of the UI and setting an agenda to follow the state mandates for waste management.

A 1989 audit of the University of California-Los Angeles will be used as a guide for the UI's own audit.

The UI aims to reduce the amount of waste going to landfill by 25 percent in 1994 and by 50 percent in 2000.

The year 1990 marks the start of extensive paper recycling at the

RECYCLING

This is the first in a two-part series examining recycling at the UI.

UI. In 1991, the goals will be "reduction and reuse." In 1992 the progress in waste reduction will be evaluated.

The UI Custodial Services suffered a big budget cut this year, and Casey said this cut is not helping the Waste Management Committee, which has to rely on custodians for the collection and transportation of recyclable wastes.

"The program has to be user-friendly," she said. "We have to do what we can to make (the custodians') job easier."

UISA to offer travel funds to students

By Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

UI students who need to travel for research purposes will finally get some financial help from the UI Student Assembly.

After several weeks of failed compromises between the three bodies of the student government, the UISA established a committee Tuesday night designed to allocate travel funds to students performing research.

But it wasn't easy. Similar legislation had been proposed and voted on by the separate bodies of the UISA, but these bills, due primarily to a conflict between the Undergraduate Activities Senate and the Graduate and Professional Student Senate, had never been debated by the complete assembly.

Several UAS senators felt that there should be equal representation from each body on the committee. But because more than 90 percent of the funds will be allocated to graduate students, the GPSS felt it should have more representatives on the committee.

In order to open up a dialogue between the three assembly bodies, GPSS Sen. Al Beardsley met informally with UAS executive officer Troy Raper and Undergraduate Collegiate Senate executive officer Thomas Lunde prior to Tuesday's meeting.

"I met with Troy and Tom, specifically Troy, and we talked about some of the things his body had problems with, I told him what the GPSS was concerned about and from that we worked out a compromise," Beardsley said.

GPSS executive officer Nancy Mortensen and UCS Sen. Jennifer Kelly joined with Beardsley, Lunde and Raper to author the legislation. The committee will consist of five members from the GPSS, three from the UCS and two from the UAS.

"It was a matter of just sitting down and realizing what everybody wanted," Raper said. "It was surprisingly simple."

However, getting the legislation passed on the UISA floor was not as simple. The bill's passage was threatened by debate concerning the process of electing a chairperson on the committee and the maximum funding levels the committee could allocate to an individual.

"We sit here and bitch, bitch, bitch — and never get anything accomplished," Raper said. "We have this powerful motion and we must deal with it. It needs to be passed tonight so that we can get the graduates their money."

Raper then held the UISA floor for 15 minutes reading to the UISA senators the chapters "How to Lay it on the Table" and "How to Deal with the Main Motion" from "Robert's Rules of Order."

"I wanted to stop a debate that was going to go on forever and allow time for the assembly to vote on the legislation," Raper said.

Several senators, primarily from the GPSS, became angered at Raper's mini-filibuster and asked Raper to yield the floor. During Raper's speech, one GPSS member referred to Raper's actions as childish.

"His actions were a bit excessive," Beardsley said. "He has every right to state his case, but he could have done so in a way that didn't infuriate people."

After Raper finally yielded the floor, GPSS executive officer Nancy Mortensen stood and endorsed the legislation and asked the assembly to do so as well.

"I support this legislation," Mortensen said. See UISA, Page 7A

69 graduate schools to participate in fair

By William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

Choosing a graduate or professional school is not easy for many juniors and seniors. But the Graduate and Professional Schools Fair held today in the Union may make the decision a little easier.

Representatives from 69 health/medical, business and law schools as well as general and specialized graduate schools across the country will participate in the fair. The schools will answer questions about admission requirements and will present descriptions of available coursework.

Various graduate schools at the UI will also be represented, including the UI Colleges of Dentistry, Law, Education and Medicine.

Don Moffett, associate director of the Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office, said that students should be "open to discovery" because going to graduate school is becoming a popular option for students.

Moffett said people typically apply to 15 or 20 graduate schools and added that the fair can help students decide where they want to apply.

Students should attend the fair even if a particular school of interest to them is not represented, said Wendy Mahle, a graduate assistant helping to organize the event. She said students will still be able to learn about the basic entrance requirements for different types of schools.

She also suggests students "have some ideas of questions they'd like to ask."

Career Information Services, Business and Liberal Arts Placement, the Engineering Placement Office and the Residence Services Education Program are sponsoring the fair in the Main Lounge of the Union from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

New SAT format includes more math

By Tony Rogers
The Associated Press

BOSTON — College Board trustees announced Wednesday the most sweeping changes ever in the Scholastic Aptitude Test, adding some math questions that aren't multiple choice and introducing optional essay questions.

Board officials rejected suggestions that charges of cultural bias prompted the revisions in the test used heavily in deciding who gets into what college.

The new Scholastic Aptitude Test, called SAT-I, will be introduced in the spring of 1994, said College Board President Donald Stewart.

In the language section, emphasis on reading comprehension will be increased. Students will be allowed to use calculators in the math section.

The revisions are aimed in part at reducing students' reliance on test coaches, Stewart said at the board's annual meeting.

Critics have long charged that the SAT — the most widely used college entrance exam — was biased, particularly against women and minorities.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," Stewart said. "The SAT has been in almost continual evolution. It has never been set in concrete. . .

"The new SAT will combine the high, academically demanding standards of the current tests with revisions that increase their educational relevance and quality for all college-bound students."

The old SAT had 85 verbal and 60 math questions. The SAT-I will have 75-85 verbal and 55-60 math questions.

The new math questions requiring students to produce an answer rather than choose one from a list will make up about 20 percent of the math section.

The changes also include the introduction of the optional SAT-II, an expansion of the achievement tests that some schools presently give in addition to the SAT to help gain admission to some colleges.

SAT-II will include a written essay section, language proficiency tests for native speakers of Japanese and Chinese, and proficiency tests for non-native English speakers.

Observers had predicted the essay would be included in the main SAT. But Gregory Anrig, president of the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., which administers the test, said field trials showed an essay would make the exam too long.

Bob Schaeffer, a spokesman for the group FairTest and co-author of the book "Standing up to the SAT," said the changes fail to solve the problem of the test's bias.

"The new SAT amounts to little more than rearranging the deck chairs on an educational Titanic," Schaeffer said. "The SAT should be optional and it should be comprehensively overhauled to address its problems."

FairTest and other critics have claimed that the SAT tends to cover subjects that white male and affluent test-takers are more likely to be familiar with.

Often-cited examples in the test include the question "Dividends are to stockholders as . . ." with the answer being "royalties are to writers," and the use of words such as "regatta" and "aria" in the vocabulary section.

Whites as a group have outperformed minority students, and males have fared better than females.

In 1988, the National Organization for Women filed a lawsuit that forced the New York State Education Department to stop using the SAT exclusively to award merit scholarships. The department now uses high-school grades as well.

The SAT, administered by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., was first given to 8,040 students in 1926. Now about 1 million college-bound students take it annually.

3 interested parties bid on Holiday Inn

By Cynthia Taylor
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City's downtown Holiday Inn may be saved from foreclosure thanks to bids from three prospective buyers Tuesday.

The hotel's owner, Harry Johnson, has until the end of this week to sign a sale agreement before federal government foreclosure proceedings will begin, said City Manager Stephen Atkins.

The hotel was taken over by the Resolution Trust Corporation, a federal government bailout firm, when the original lender, Midwest Federal Savings, filed bankruptcy during the savings and loan crisis in early 1989.

Johnson, along with the hotel's manager, Pineapple Management, also went bankrupt last year. Johnson, Pineapple Management and Midwest Federal Savings are all based out of Minneapolis.

Fred Katter, president of Pineapple Management, said no information on the pending sale agreements will be available until Friday or Monday.

An interim management firm, American General Hospitality Inc. of Dallas, will be appointed this week by the Resolution Trust Corporation to allow the hotel to stay in business.

The city lent Johnson $2 million in an Urban Development Action Grant in 1984 for the construction of the hotel complex. Johnson made six payments of $19,000 each on the note before filing for bankruptcy in April 1989, said City Attorney Linda Gentry.

She said the city hopes to be at least partially repaid from a resale.

However, whether the hotel is foreclosed and sold to a new owner, Gentry said she is doubtful the loan from the city will be repaid in full.

Gentry attributes the hotel's inability to make loan payments to its failing food and beverage operations. She added that the room rents appear to be steady at 80 percent occupancy.

New lipid disorder center at UI

By Greg Smith
The Associated Press

IOWA CITY — Too many Americans have high blood cholesterol levels, but that could change in the next few years, the director of a new Lipid Disorder Training Center in Iowa said Wednesday.

Helmut Schrott, associate professor of preventive medicine and environmental health at the UI College of Medicine, said the center will train about 270 doctors to specialize in the detection and management of lipid disorders.

"Maybe 200,000 or 300,000 (heart) bypass operations are performed every year. Our goal in getting cholesterol down is to put those guys out of business," Schrott said.

Lipids are fatty substances in the blood that have been linked to heart and blood vessel disease.

Iowa is one of six national training centers that will operate the three-year program coordinated by the American Heart Association with support from Bristol-Myers Squibb Pharmaceutical Group.

About 1,500 doctors will be trained in the diagnosis and management of lipid disorders. Other centers are located at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston; Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore; the University of California at San Francisco, Berkeley, Calif.; the University of Washington; and Washington University in St. Louis.

Squibb-United States Pharmaceutical Group has contributed a $3 million grant for the training centers. Each lipid center will receive $140,000 a year for the next three years.

Tuition for the program will be free, although trainees must pay their own travel and housing costs.

During the program, doctors will study a wide range of disorders and will receive specialized training in nutrition, diet counseling and lab procedures.

"About 60 million Americans have got a cholesterol level that's too high — over 240," Schrott said.

"If your cholesterol level is 300, your risk of having a heart attack is four times the individual whose level is at 200. If your cholesterol level is at 150, your risk is 30 percent less than a person who is at 200," he said. "These risks have a meaning with heart disease."

Iowa's training center will begin in January, Schrott said.

"Physicians will be called clinical lipid specialists," Schrott said. "They will have an opportunity to be experts in their local community. We think this is very important."

"One, it will upgrade the quality of clinical measurement in that community," he said. "The second thing it will do — besides building their practice, perhaps — is have them act as a consultant to their other colleagues in the community so that when cholesterol problems arise, they can be the person who is the local expert."

Avenson, Nagle plan new Iowa highways

By Kevin Boot
The Daily Iowan

Democratic gubernatorial challenger Don Avenson and House of Representatives incumbent Dave Nagle announced Tuesday their plans to build four major highways across Iowa within the next 10 years.

During a local press conference to discuss their transportation proposals, Nagle said that he and Avenson, along with Sen. Tom Harkin, are "committed as a Democratic team to seeing that four major road construction projects are done within this decade" if they are elected.

The news conference, held at the Iowa City Public Library, was the sixth of the eight the three candidates planned for the day. However, Harkin was not present in Iowa City after reportedly falling sick in Mason City earlier Tuesday.

Nagle said the new major highway projects would include the following:

■ The Avenue of the Saints, which will run from St. Louis to Minneapolis and will pass through Iowa City and Coralville. This will include the expansion and rerouting of Highway 218.

■ Highway 63, which will run from Waterloo to Rochester, Minn.

■ A new highway connecting Des Moines and Burlington, Iowa.

■ Highway 520, which will run across the northern part of the state from Sioux City to Dubuque.

Nagle said that it was through his and Harkin's efforts that initial federal funding for the Avenue of the Saints was obtained. He added that these transportation pledges show the commitment of the Democratic candidates to remedying the state's ailing economy.

"We feel that with a modern transportation system, and with a modern communications system as a second prong of the attack, there is reason... the 1990s could be a halt of the historical migration of this state, and a decade of the greatest growth of this state," he said.

He added that other factors — such as the low cost of housing, "relatively crime-free atmosphere" and the educational system — could also contribute to an economic rebound.

But Nagle stressed that these transportation initiatives must be coupled with gubernatorial support.

And Avenson, who is challenging incumbent Gov. Terry Branstad, backed up Nagle's statements by saying that, as governor, he would accomplish all four of the projects in 10 years.

"I think it very important that Iowa have the infrastructure to make development possible," Avenson said. "I think it's more important than the level of grants or loans that you give to individual businesses."

Avenson's proposals for implementing the transportation projects included holding a Midwest summit to coordinate the efforts of all surrounding states.

He also expressed interest in seeing an additional highway built to run from the Quad Cities through Illinois to St. Louis.

School board adopts strategic new model

Planning model will have 2 phases

By Heidi Pederson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School Board has adopted a strategic planning model that will allow "everyone to march in the same direction."

At a Tuesday meeting, the board voted to adopt the planning model presented to the board by Bill Cook of Cambridge Management Group Inc.

The motion includes a district commitment of $27,000 for the program. The price tag includes the services of an outside consultant in Phase I of the planning, which will focus on setting goals. Phase II, the "action phase," will be handled by an inside facilitator trained by the Cambridge group.

Strategic planning is designed to help the district determine and prioritize its future goals while taking into consideration such factors as the community and changing demographics.

And board members say they're excited about the plan's abilities to focus these goals.

"I've been very frustrated as a board member at times," said Betsy Hawtrey. "It's been hit or miss with some things."

In the decision to use an outside consultant for Phase I of the program, the board considered the benefits of having a neutral guide in goal-setting, as well as the current shortage of district staff members.

Board member Sally Staley said, "Being the new kid on the block, I would have liked to have seen us use someone inside the system, but I am aware of the lack of depth in our staff right now."

Hiring this consultant will be the board's next challenge. A three-member board has been chosen to make the decision.

Superintendent Barbara Grohe said no specific timetable for the hiring has been set.

"It will involve the choice of who the facilitator will be," she said. "We will have to work with their schedule."

Grohe said the first phase of the plan would begin in mid-January.

UI students get hands-on training with externship sponsors

By Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Would you like to find out more about a certain career? Are you interested in getting some hands-on experience in the profession or field of your choice, without having to devote a semester or more to an internship?

If so, a UI Career Information Network externship may be just what you are looking for.

According to Todd Johnson, program representative for CIN, the externships are designed to provide students with the chance to work with UI alumni sponsors at their careers for a week.

"(The program) is basically there to enhance students' academic preparedness," Johnson said.

Externships are offered during both winter and spring breaks, and about 100 sponsors participate in the program. Of these, about half are located in Iowa. Not all sponsors are able to participate during both periods, but 74 positions are open this winter.

There is a wide variety of sponsors and career areas that participate in the program, Johnson said. Sponsors include business owners, government workers, social workers, attorneys and corporation employees — and most are UI alumni.

During the externships, students are given the chance to experience aspects of a potential career not traditionally presented in the classroom. Some externships consist of research work or hands-on experience, while others simply involve following a sponsor through his or her work day.

CIN has received favorable responses from students who participated in the program, Johnson said.

"They said they learned more from the externship experience than from the classroom experience, because the externship is hands-on," he said. "In some cases, it has helped solidify decisions to enter a field."

Johnson said that some students have received recommendations from their sponsors, and others have even been offered jobs.

"The relationship depends on the enthusiasm of the student," he said.

Lynn Evertowski, a UI student who participated in an externship with a social worker in Illinois, said she learned a lot through her experience.

"It made me see whether I wanted to go into the area or not," Evertowski said.

The program has also been a good experience for the sponsors, said Eliot Keller, general manager of KRNA radio.

Keller supervises students who have externships at the radio station.

"We've really had some excellent people over the years," he said. "Overall, it's been a very positive experience. It's also been exciting for us to see the enthusiasm of youth."

He said that the externships gave students a good opportunity to learn more about a business than just the classroom side.

"Some (students) are shocked by the differences; others thrive on them," Keller said.

The externship program isn't the only service offered by the CIN. Other services include Telephone Tips, Hawkeye Hosts and AlumNet.

Telephone Tips allows a student to contact an alumnus by phone and ask questions regarding a career, while AlumNet is a career-networking system newly implemented last year.

Hawkeye Hosts is an area information service for students who are relocating from the UI campus. It consists of a network of UI alumni from across the country who can provide students with information about different regions.

Johnson said students interested in applying for an externship should stop by the CIN office, Room 286 of the Union. There students can examine the types of internships offered and can fill out applications.

A committee will review each application submitted and will choose externs of the basis of career goals, educational backgrounds and relevant experiences or activities. After students are selected, they must attend a mandatory orientation meeting and then must contact their sponsors.

The deadline for the externship applications is Nov. 14.

Baxter highlights registration

By Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Democratic incumbent Elaine Baxter, who is running for a second term as Iowa's secretary of state, said she has made it easier for Iowans to vote.

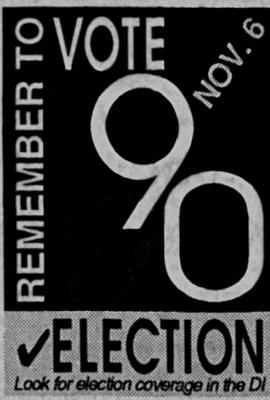

"I worked with the Legislature to improve the voter registration process," said Baxter. "There were three major efforts to increase voter registration." She said these were:

- Placing voter registration post cards in every state office in Iowa.
- Enclosing two voter registration post cards in all income tax booklets.
- Changing Iowa driver's licenses to include a voter registration form.

"Having a registration form included in the driver's license form is very convenient for new Iowans," Baxter said.

Baxter also started the first program in the nation to get voter registration cards put into telephone books.

"It was a real breakthrough."

Look for election coverage in the DI

Baxter said. "My hope is that it will spread to other states."

Baxter is a member of the Executive Council and the Voter Registration Commission. She also serves as chairwoman of the State Records Commission and the State Insurance Committee.

Baxter served, from 1979 to 1981, as senior liaison officer in the Office of Legislation and Congressional Relations, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, Washington, D.C. More recently, she has worked as an economic development consultant and taught history at Burlington High School.

Attorney general race focuses on crime

Kelly: 'Crack down on violent crime, ensure the 'victim's bill of rights'

By Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Ed Kelly, the Republican candidate for attorney general, stated that experience is the issue in this campaign: "Iowans deserve a professional prosecutor as their attorney general, not a partisan politician."

Kelly said he is committed to making Iowa the safest state in the nation.

"I will focus the attorney general's office on Iowa's drug and crime problem, crack down on violent and habitual criminals and ensure the 'victim's bill of rights' for every victim of crime in Iowa," Kelly said.

Kelly is also in favor of strictly enforcing laws requiring that those who commit a violent crime with a gun be subject to tough mandatory sentencing.

"I will work to establish additional prison space for criminals, at both minimum and maximum security facilities," he said.

Kelly has plans to deter people from situations in which alcohol is abused. "I will ensure strict enforcement of laws against operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol," he said.

In addition to the above plans, Kelly also aims to:

- Establish regional offices of the attorney general throughout the state.
- Help implement and strengthen drug awareness programs across Iowa.
- Re-establish the Anti-Trust Division to enforce the Iowa Competition Laws.

Kelly received a degree from Wayne State College in Wayne, Neb., in 1968 and obtained a law degree from the UI in 1971.

He was a member of the Iowa Crime Commission Project to Develop Standards and Goals for Courts, as well as the Iowa State Bar Association's Special Committee on Criminal Law.

Kelly, his wife and three children live in Fairfield, Iowa.

Kelly has been a Jefferson County attorney for 12 years and a trial attorney in Fairfield since 1971.

Campbell sees disparity in prison terms, proposes 'Truth in Sentencing' plan

By Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Bonnie Campbell, Democratic candidate for attorney general, said most criminal offenders serve barely a 10th of their actual sentences.

To combat this, Campbell is proposing a "Truth in Sentencing" plan.

Campbell said her sentencing proposal is particularly important in light of the recent upsurge of violent crime cases in Des Moines and Davenport.

"There is a huge disparity between a criminal's sentence and the time he or she actually spends in prison," Campbell said. "That undermines the system. We lose the deterrent effect on potential criminals and we lose public confidence."

She said that people sentenced to 25-year prison terms serve an average of only six years and added that most criminals sentenced to 10 to 15 years serve only about 15 months in prison.

"We need a sentencing structure that says what it means and means what it says," Campbell said.

Campbell's "Truth in Sentencing" plan includes:

- Replacing the present indeterminate sentencing system with structured sentencing.
- Requiring regular, accurate prison population projections of how many beds are needed.
- Providing additional prison facilities as needed.

"We need to review and overhaul the state's sentencing structure and provide enough prison space," Campbell said. "Last year, over a third of the 1,725 prisoners who were paroled were considered a poor or very poor safety risk, and that's another reason for improving the system."

Campbell said the biggest benefit of her proposal would be to "restore respect to the criminal justice system and reclaim its own integrity."

Campbell is the former chairwoman of the Iowa Democratic Party.

Anderson: 'I can do better' with Iowa's state budget

By Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Beverly Anderson, the Republican candidate for secretary of state, said she can get Iowans more for their money.

Anderson said incumbent Elaine Baxter has "tried to increase the secretary of state's budget more than 53 percent over the past four years, and that is a waste of your tax dollars; I can do better."

Anderson said her experience will help her to do a better job with Iowans' tax dollars than Baxter has done.

"I will be part of a working, responsible government and I have got the experience to do the job right."

Anderson said she will also work to improve voter registration.

"I'd like to see more educational information given to the potential voters," she said. "We should educate them so we can demand more responsibility from our voters."

"Iowa's voter registration has been 2.9 percent lower than the national average in the past four years," according to Anderson.

"I want to review Baxter's ideas, improve them and obtain a higher voter registration turnout," she said.

Anderson lives in Cherokee, Iowa, and attended the University of South Dakota. She is on a National Health and Education Steering Committee and a Taxation and Finance Committee.

She was the past president of the Iowa State Association of Counties and past president of the Iowa State Auditors Association. Anderson is presently on a Homemaker Health Advisory Board and is a county auditor and election commissioner.

Open door of speeding car knocks down trick-or-treater

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Des Moines police charged five teen-agers with assault after a 12-year-old trick-or-treater was knocked down Tuesday by the door of a speeding car.

Police Sgt. James O'Donnell said witnesses told police the hit-and-run "was not an accident. They intentionally did it."

Police said Jeremy Mohler was struck by the door of a speeding car about 7:30 p.m. as he stood near the curb of a Des Moines street with a group of trick-or-treaters.

O'Donnell said witnesses told police that a two-door yellow Ford swerved toward the group. The front seat passenger opened the door, knocked the boy to the pavement and sped away, O'Donnell said.

Jerry and Shelley Mohler, the boy's parents, said Jeremy has a hairline fracture in his shoulder and several bruises.

1963 bombing dramatized in Cloud's 'The Stick Wife'

By Staci Sturrock
The Daily Iowan

Just as the children's Sunday school was about to begin, a bomb went off in the 16th St. Baptist Church in Birmingham, Ala. Four black girls were killed in the bombing. The year was 1963. Members of the Ku Klux Klan were suspected of the crime, but no one was arrested for 14 years.

This true story is the basis of UI graduate Darrah Cloud's "The Stick Wife," to be performed by the Riverside Theatre beginning Friday, Nov. 2. "The Stick Wife" is Cloud's attempt to understand Klan members through their dominating relationships with their wives.

Cloud says, "I had a theory about racism and sexism — that it comes from the same place within ourselves."

Guest director Meredith Alexander says that it is rare to find a contemporary play with such an ear for language and dialogue and

Kirov is polished but flawed

By Kathleen Hurley
The Daily Iowan

A standing ovation welcomed the Kirov Ballet to Iowa City Monday night for its performance of "Giselle" at Hancher Auditorium. However, the evening presented a performance of paradoxes with distasteful faux pas occurring side by side with stunning perfection.

The story of "Giselle" centers upon a beautiful peasant girl who, with a great affinity for dancing, attracts the affection of Count Albrecht. However, upon the discovery of Bathilde, Albrecht's fiancée, Giselle flies into an intense despair leading to tragic suicide. Later as one of the ghostly Wilis, maidens who died disappointed in love, Giselle reluctantly entices Albrecht into dance to cause death by exhaustion. However, upon the approach of morning, the Wilis fade away and the curtain closes on the mournful Albrecht clinging hopelessly to Giselle's tombstone.

The beauty of the story, however, was not always reflected in the performance — especially during the first act. After having arrived in Iowa City around 6 p.m. with the performance at 8 p.m., the entire company understandably looked a bit shaken in the first act. However, such unfortunate circumstances can often occur for companies traveling on extensive tours. Although the dancer portraying Albrecht presented a countenance akin to a powerful buck, some corps members appeared somewhat discombobulated with clunky turns and yelled cues on stage. Violating the standards of professionalism, company members wore bright fingernail polish, loose pointed shoe ribbons, and personal jewelry. Disappointingly, they ignored the details so important to the perfection of classical ballet.

However, the true test of a professional is to amend a mistake in progress and continue with full gusto. The company redeemed itself with a second act stunning in both drama and purity of line. As a most elusive Wilis, Giselle enticed Albrecht to join her in dance in the custom of revenge upon the man who caused disappointed love. Consciously, dancers do not search for passion while on stage just as tigers do not search for courage while prowling in the darkness. The dancer portraying Giselle emanated this passion — springing from beyond her exquisite arched feet, soaring leaps and fluid footwork. Even her spectacular tour jetes landed with her leg nearly hitting the back of her head.

The Kirov performed the classical favorite with laudable gallantry and staunch purpose, though at times looking uninspired as if performing stale and dated choreography. In contrast, the electric energy between Giselle and Albrecht and the piercing presence of Hans created insatiable intensity that followed the moody music of Adolphe Adam.

real, whole characters. Although the play is set in the South, Alexander feels the subject should have relevance for Midwest audiences.

"The KKK is very big in the Midwest. There is no lack of members," she says. "Our hope is that the audience would not dismiss this as belonging to the South. We always have to be vigilant about independent responsibility for one's own power. . . . It's a never-ending issue."

The play begins early Sunday morning at the home of Ed Bliss. As he is dressing to leave, his wife, Jessie, fearfully asks where he is going. His refusal to answer and the secretive nature of his activities with "the club" reawaken in Jessie the nagging fear that has clearly become a part of her life and reveals the helplessness to which she has been reduced.

Jessie tries to forget her fears by hanging out her wash, a seemingly bottomless basket of white sheets, and by talking around the subject with her friends Marguerite and Betty — whose husbands have also "gone out" for the morning. Tension mounts as news of the bombing, and of the deaths of four young girls, reaches the women.

Alexander says that although the play is about a very serious topic, it contains a lot of humor. "In the end, it is positive. One person can make a difference. It gets the message across without heavy-handedness, without being obvious."

On Nov. 10, the Riverside Theatre will host a pre-performance discussion of "The Stick Wife" that will focus on the play's historic background. Frank Moorer, who teaches in the UI African-American Studies Department, and director Meredith Alexander will lead the discussion, which will be free and open to the public.

Darrah Cloud's "The Stick Wife" opens Nov. 2, with performances at 8 p.m. Nov. 2-3, 7-10, and 14-17, and a 2 p.m. matinee on Nov. 4. Riverside Theatre is at 213 N. Gilbert St. Tickets can be purchased in advance at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., or can be reserved by calling Riverside Theatre at 338-7672. Tickets will be sold at the door as available. Cost for evening performances is $10 for general admission and $8 for senior citizens and students. Matinees are $8 and $6.

The Institute for Cinema and Culture

THURSDAY, November 1

7:00 p.m.: THE ABANDONED FIELD - FREE FIRE ZONE (1979)

Directed by Nguyen Hong Sen. One of the first Vietnamese films to receive international recognition, this film explores how the war intrudes into everyday life. As a young couple with a baby work as liasons for the Viet Cong, American helicopters sweep marshes in an unrelenting search for guerillas. This film provides an unprecedented look at guerilla warfare and the effect of the war on Vietnamese citizens. 35 mm, 90 min.

Discussion: Rick Berg.

FRIDAY, November 2

1:30 p.m.: "Vietnam Today: Fifteen Years Afer Unification"

5:00 p.m.: Reception for Rick Berg and John McAuliff

7:00 p.m.: WHEN THE TENTH MOON COMES (1984)

Directed by Dang Nhat Minh. A film of great visual poetry in which a young Vietnamese woman conceals her husband's death at the front from her in-laws. To aid her deception, she persuades the village schoolteacher to fabricate letters supposedly sent by her husband. The film throws a powerful light on the problems of mourning and reconciliation, of private grief and national purpose. 35mm, 90 min. Discussion: John McAuliff

SATURDAY, November 3

9:00 a.m.: BROTHERS AND RELATIONS (1986)

Directed by Tran Vu and Nguyen Huu Luyen. This film invites many comparisons with the problems of American Vietnam veterans. A Vietnamese soldier returns from the war and tries to adjust to a society anxious to forget the war and get on with their lives. 35mm, 90 min. Discussion: Rick Berg.

All sessions will take place in 101 CSB.

This symposium is sponsored by the Institute for Cinema at the University of Iowa, with additional support from the University's Center for Asian and Pacific Studies, the Global Studies Program, and the Department of History.

Living up to Lincoln's legacy

ELECTION 1990

The Grand Finale

Nov. 6 is less than five days away and many Americans will be actively participating in the democratic process. For those who care nothing about voting, Election Day is just another day. Election results are usually measured in terms of the number of seats gained by the parties and winners and losers. However, the biggest loser in this year's election will be a man whose name does not appear on the ballot: President George Bush.

The first Tuesday after the first Monday in November will be an interesting one this year even though this is not an "executive election." The outcome will be a true gauge of Americans' approval or disapproval of their elected public officials. No doubt the budget issue will be a key concern of those few informed Americans who care to vote.

Much to their credit, the Democrats played the budget issue like a Stradivarius. When Bush had his tax conversion in July, the lip reading was over. This is what Democrats were waiting for. In an overture to the budget negotiations in October, Capitol Hill Democrats seized the moment to politicize the tax talks. When the talks stalled on tax rates on the upper bracket of society, Democrats inserted the theme of "fairness." The results: a minuscule $40 billion cut in the deficit and a plunge for Bush in the opinion polls.

One of the longest presidential honeymoons is finally over. Now the American voter must decide where to place the blame. And it appears, much to the chagrin of GOP challengers and incumbents, that their party — the party of the president — will bear responsibility. At this stage the GOP is in retreat. To avoid a pummeling at the polls, Ed Rollins, co-chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee, has suggested that GOP House members dissociate themselves from the president. Bush has received cool receptions around the country from Republican candidates. He now finds himself being opposed by Democrats and Republicans alike. The Bush brand of lip reading has fallen on deaf ears.

Viewed as almost invincible, at least through the scope of opinion polls, George Herbert Walker Bush is again human. There is even talk of a serious Democratic challenge to Bush in 1992. New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley's name often surfaces as a possible contender. But one name that is being overlooked is that of Democratic Majority Leader George Mitchell. In all probability Mitchell is the most powerful Democrat on the Hill. He is the concertmaster who has orchestrated a symphony of discontent with the president. It has been Mitchell's strong will that has brought President Bush to his knees.

Nov. 6 will be an indicator of how well the Democrats have played the tax issue. Most likely, the Democrats will gain two seats in the Senate, bringing them to a 57-43 advantage. Firm control of both houses will be detrimental to President Bush. Predicting the presidential situation in 1992 is conjecture. However, there can be no question that Tuesday's elections will have overtones for 1992. The Democrats are conducting a masterpiece in party politics. The grand finale — control of the White House — is in the works.

Many Republican officeholders throughout the nation and in Iowa have been backpedaling like mad on the issue of abortion. Lee Atwater advertises the GOP as a "big tent" — one big enough to include both pro-choice and pro-life opinions. Gov. Branstad essentially has said that he thinks abortion is irrelevant to Iowa state government.

All this is intended to portray the Republican Party as an inclusive party: Since abortion is a divisive issue, the thought goes, the GOP should eschew enforcing its candidates to toe the line on the matter.

Yet however unfashionable the idea may be that political parties ought to stand for enduring principles, the GOP was founded on the idea that there are some principles upon which no compromise could be had. It advanced the opinion that there are, in fact, Republican principles, and that party candidates should embrace these principles.

If we look to the genesis of Republican principles we see that abortion, far from being a tertiary matter to these principles, lies at the very core of those issues addressed by Republicanism.

These principles are best found in the life and work of the Republican master, Abraham Lincoln — the man who articulated Republican principles par excellence.

It is here that we find that legalized abortion cannot be a matter of indifference to Republicans. Rather, the essential character of Republican principles requires opposition to legalized abortion. An opposition not characterized by shrill denunciation, hate and imprudent action, but one birthed by good reason, a love of justice and mercy, and a commitment to the fundamental principles of the American project.

The Republican Party was founded, Lincoln said in his seventh debate with Stephen Douglas in 1858, in order to right "a moral, social and political wrong." That is, "The sentiment that contemplates the institution of slavery in this country as a wrong is the sentiment of the Republican Party. It is the sentiment around which all their actions — all their arguments — circle, from which all their propositions radiate."

This sentiment, however, was not innovative and ad hoc. Rather, "this chief and real purpose of the Republican Party," Lincoln said in an 1859 Ohio speech, "is eminently conservative." That is, Lincoln and the Republican Party "proposed nothing" but "to restore this government" to its original principles.

Lincoln never grew tired of citing the principal commitment of the Republican Party to the central truths identified in the Declaration of Independence; that is, to the essential core of the American regime: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness."

In asserting this proposition, Lincoln argued, the American Founders "meant to set up a standard maxim for free society which should be familiar to all: constantly looked to, constantly labored for, and even, though never perfectly attained, constantly approximated, and thereby constantly spreading and deepening its influence and augmenting the happiness and value of life to all people, of all colors, everywhere."

Indifference to the choice of "a moral, social and political wrong," as Douglas counseled with his "don't care" position on slavery, was inconsistent with Republican principles. Lincoln hated slavery not only because it was a "monstrous injustice," but also because it "forces so many really good men . . . into an open war with the very fundamental principles of civil liberty — criticizing the Declaration of Independence and insisting that there is no right principle of action but self-interest."

It was upon the truth recognized in the declaration, no less, that Lincoln founded the essential principles of the Republican Party. Principles that the Democrats repudiated in their "don't care" position on slavery.

Today, again, the Republican Party affirms the truths of the declaration in the party's principled opposition to abortion. The right to life, as the declaration affirms, is an inalienable right — one standing on equal ground with the right to liberty. And history also repeats itself with the Democrats embracing indifference toward legal respect for the inalienable right to life of all humans.

Lincoln rejected the pro-choice sentiment of the Democratic party: Only a craven self-centeredness, the 19th-century equivalent of the "Me Generation," could cause people to be indifferent toward an unjust choice.

What else could be at the root of the Democrats' pro-choice principle, Lincoln mused to the cheers and laughter of his audiences: "It is, as a principle, no other than that, if one man chooses to make a slave of another man, neither that other man nor anybody else has a right to object." And "I suppose the institution of slavery really looks small to (Judge Douglas). He is so put up by nature that a lash on his back would hurt him, but a lash upon anybody else's back does not hurt him."

How can we hold otherwise, if we are indifferent to abortion, but the incongruity that if we were cut out of our mother's womb we would have been hurt, but that anybody else being cut out does not hurt them? The point is childishly simple; it is, after all, the well-known children's book, "Horton Hears a Who," that affirms the obvious: "A person is a person no matter how small."

Electoral victory is a natural goal for a political party, but victory ought to mean something. Lincoln argued that to reject principle in order to secure victory in the short run was both craven and, in the long run, counterproductive: "If we shall adopt a platform that fails to recognize or express our purpose, or elect a man that declares himself inimical to our purpose, we not only take nothing by our success, but we tacitly admit that we act upon no other principles than a desire to have 'the loaves and fishes,' by which, in the end our apparent success is really an injury to us."

We must recall that Lincoln lost his 1858 Senate bid because of his desire to extend the rights recognized in the declaration to all humans, and Lincoln assumed the presidency without winning a majority of the popular vote in 1860. But by forgoing early majorities for principle, Lincoln forged a Republican Party that remained dominant for the next 70 years.

In the face of opposition to fundamental Republican principles Lincoln counseled steadfastness. His counsel stands in stark contrast to that of Lee Atwater and other Republican pundits.

Lincoln counseled that the Republican Party of 1859 resist the temptation of eschew principle for short-run electoral gain, and the lesson is relevant today: "If we do not allow ourselves to be allured from the strict path of our duty by such a device as shifting our ground and throwing ourselves into the rear of a leader, who denies our first principle . . . then the future of the Republican cause is safe and victory assured."

Those good ol' days of 'Homeweening'

I do not know which bureaucratic enclave is responsible for scheduling Homecoming, but I stand in awe of its ironic sense of humor. It scheduled Homecoming right next to Halloween.

Perfect. The similarities are such that these last two weeks should have been called Homeweening. The two festivals involve people dressed in strange costumes indulging in lots of role-playing and generally making fools of themselves. Especially Homeweening.

"Me? Are you funnin' me, Bob? Could I afford a bumblebee jumper of this size and quality if I wasn't livin' high on the hog? Workin' on 100 percent commission is FANTASTIC. Keeps you on your toes. I'm tellin' you, Bob, you gotta get with it, janitorial supply is the wave of the future."

Both holidays pay tribute to the historic past. With Halloween you might dress up like Napoleon. During Homecoming, you might sit back and pray at the altar of St. Elmo. With the possible exception of that parade of broken flesh known as the NBA Old-Timers' Game, there are no greater testaments to the mortality of Homo sapienkind than the Hawkeye Alumni Marching Band?

How bad is it in the netherworld of post-academia? I have invented a new drinking game. It is called Name the College Degree of Your Waiter or Waitress.

Bets are placed before your order is taken. Winner pays for the first round. One needn't take the easy way out and ask the major of the person in question. Look for revealing clues instead. For instance, pretend your waiter is trying to stiff you. Say: "I gave you a 10 and you only gave me $3.50 back." If your waiter defends himself by saying, "How do you know that the 10 is really here? How do you know you're really here? Couldn't you simply be a brain floating in a vat of chemicals making all of this up?" He obviously has a degree in philosophy. As we all know, a degree in philosophy is only good for being annoying at parties and as mixologist school preparatory.

As another example, ask your waitress why she deserves a big tip. If she tells you that inventory is up as indexed in Standard & Poor's List of Obscenely Wealthy Guys and that grassroots spending is needed to reverse a gradual softening trend, you know she has one of those highly uneconomical economics degrees.

It is a fun, painful game for me. I am coming to the end of a brilliant college career. I have bitten deeply from the kumquat of knowledge. The future appears bleak before me.

I keep thinking about the poor sap who ran the Denny's near my high school. He looked about 40 and had the sort of career that left him buying shoes with "GASS" (Great American Shoe Store) written on the soles. He was frazzled and embittered from having one too many cocaine addicts for a hostess. His entire vocabulary consisted of the phrase, "Hey, all you damn high-school kids, get the hell outta my place." At the time, I hated the old fart. But now at the mere mention of the phrase "job fair," my complexion turns the color of the undead. I am plagued with the knowledge that in the soul of every college graduate lurks Willie Loman. So, in retrospect, I am surprised and even thankful that the Denny's Guy didn't waste every last one of us.

You see, I used to feel superior to the Denny's Guy, and everyone else who had reason to prefer the past. Now I fear him. Because it's like Bruce Springsteen said, back before he got fame on the brain: "When I get older I hope I don't sit around talking about it, but I probably will. Yeah, just sitting back trying to recapture a little of the glory of, but time slips away and leaves you with nothing, mister, but boring stories of . . . glory days."

around with an old buddy and talk about the time when you got really really drunk, I mean so drunk you peed your pants and everybody else who was also really really drunk, like these guys were just wrecked, they just — get this — started laughing and laughing really really loud.

What these holidays are actually about, however, is fear. All Hallow's Eve playfully remembers those old superstitions. Every bank and savings and loan in the world is wallpapered with crepe paper ghosts and goblins. With Homecoming, on the other hand, the ghosts and goblins that haunt you are real. Which made last weekend as scary as a Stephen King novel is and a Stephen King movie isn't.

As I walked around downtown this past weekend observing the visitors, I kept saying to myself, "Oh God. Oh Holy Yahweh. OhGodohGodohGodohGodohGod oohGod ohwoeho God. Please, let there be life after college. Please give me a sign that I have more to look forward to than a minivan, a video club with a fabulous selection and scoring the occasional suck-up points with the Old Man at the company picnic." I can't help thinking that as I descend from the stage with a diploma in one hand and some dean's palm sweat in the other, I'm going to instantaneously turn into a middle-aged pumpkin.

You know things must be bad out "there," the way our alumni come ties. It is a structure that is designed by an engineering student and is constructed by the members of the Associated Students of Engineering.

Once again, this year some people felt the need to destroy our monument. Not only did they totally demolish all of the hard work, time and money put into the first monument — but once the structure was "reconstructed" (nowhere near its original form) it was once again vandalized.

It is a sad world we live in where a creation such as the Corn Monument — which is not offensive to anyone's beliefs or morals — is torn down "just for fun."

This university should be ashamed and embarrassed about this occurrence and incidents similar to this. I realize that this was done by a small minority of the total university population, but the point is it doesn't matter how many people were involved; it still did happen.

I would just like the people responsible for this vandalism to know that their actions reflect on the university as a whole. And if you are a happy student at a university that has no concept of respect, integrity, conscience or school spirit, I really pity you. I am afraid for the future if it continues to consist of people who are as irresponsible and disrespectful as you. I hope someday you will realize the consequences of your actions, and will feel the same as all of the people you have affected.

Nice veto

To the Editor:
Michael Lorenger's endorsement of Terry Branstad ("Election 1990:

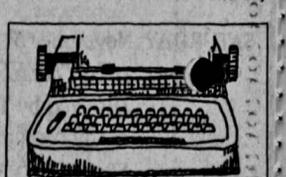

Does Terry Branstad deserve another term as governor?" Oct. 22, DI) cites the governor's willingness to "veto legislative pork." What he failed to mention is that the governor's definition of legislative pork includes the UI Libraries.

Between 1984 and 1989 the UI Libraries fell from 27th in the nation to 38th in the rankings of the Association of Research Libraries. In 1989 Don Avenson and the Democratic leadership in the legislature sent to the governor a budget that included a million dollars in additional money for regents libraries in order to try to stop this deterioration in quality. Among all the many items of legislative pork in the budget, Terry Branstad singled out our libraries for one of his line-item vetoes.

Our library is still reeling from this veto, which is making it very difficult to improve our national ranking.

Political context

To the Editor:

Although Jim Rogers' Oct. 18 column ["Jefferson's 'useless' freedoms," DI] correctly identifies Thomas Jefferson's reliance on individual virtue within the polity, he needs to place the example of the Kentucky Resolutions within the proper political context. Jefferson clandestinely penned the resolution in response to the Federalist Party's attempts to limit free expression through the Alien and Sedition Acts. By nullifying federal jurisdiction on the matter of seditious libel, Jefferson sought to guard First Amendment rights against unwarranted intrusion by government. Since he assumed that the States would naturally reflect the republican desires of the people, the Kentucky Resolutions reflect a reaffirmation in faith of individual sovereignty more than an attempt to regulate free speech.

Protecting freedom of expression was also Jefferson's goal in supporting the prosecution of an editor of a Federalist paper for seditious libel in 1804. Rabid Federalist leaders, he argued, were now seeking to destroy liberty "by pushing its licentiousness and its lying to such a degree as to deprive it of all credit." State libel laws, enforced sparingly, would suffice to restore the integrity of the press. Jefferson did not intend the declaration to serve as a heckler's veto of free speech, however. The marketplace of ideas would flourish only if dissent stands "undisturbed as monuments of the safety with which error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it." Granted, virtue and morality are integral aspects of the free society, but Jefferson believed these checks must come from within — and not be imposed by the state.

Balance

To the Editor:

In the state election campaign under way the Democrats are working hard to elect Avenson governor so that they will have complete control of the legislative process. I admire their zeal but not their wisdom. History has shown rather conclusively that when either party, Democrat or Republican, becomes dominant the taxpayers suffer from that imbalance. A party that dominates tends to take the state or the nation to one extreme or the other. We should not trust any individual or group with too much power. They are likely to abuse it.

Undoubtedly the Democrats will maintain their lead in state and national legislative offices. Friends, we'd better have a Republican Branstad or Bush to counter that imbalance.

Our founding fathers strove for balance in their design for our government, a resounding bit of common sense. We would do well to maintain that balance in all our elections to this day.

Troops fire on Hindu fundamentalists in India; at least 24 dead

By Vijay Joshi
The Associated Press

AYODHYA, India — Thousands of Hindu fundamentalists failed in a new attempt Wednesday to storm an ancient shrine claimed by Muslims, and at least 24 more people died in violence sparked by the dispute.

A government minister resigned protesting Prime Minister V.P. Singh's attempts to block construction of a Hindu temple on the disputed site, deepening the crisis in his beleaguered coalition.

Armed paramilitary troops blocked about 5,000 Hindus from attempting to re-enter the mosque in Ayodhya, which has been the center of a decades-old dispute between India's Hindu majority and Muslim minority.

Hindu fundamentalists broke through police cordons on Tuesday and chipped away bricks and bits of plaster from the one-story mosque, which they want to replace with a temple.

At least five Hindus were killed and 20 injured when police opened fire to throw back the rioters. At least two of the injured died Wednesday, doctors said.

Press Trust of India said at least 22 other people were killed in street battles between Hindus and Muslims in four widely separated cities.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the administration is "very distressed by the violence and loss of life and we hope that this crisis can be averted without further bloodshed."

The dispute has killed at least 170 people in the past eight days and has pushed Singh's 11-month-old government to the verge of collapse. The Hindu fundamentalist Bharatiya Janata Party withdrew support from the governing coalition last month to protest government policy on the temple project.

The desertion left Singh without a majority in Parliament, but he has said he will win a vote of confidence scheduled for Nov. 7.

Singh's attempts to ride the religious and political crisis received another setback Wednesday, when the deputy minister for sports, Bhakta Charan Das, resigned in protest of the police action at Ayodhya.

Das, a Hindu, accused Singh in his resignation letter of "lack of foresightedness" in tackling the crisis.

The dispute also triggered violence in neighboring Bangladesh, an Islamic nation, where Muslim mobs attacked temples and Hindu shops and homes after hearing of the situation in Ayodhya.

Experts praise change in budget law

By Alan Fram
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress and the White House have once again postponed the date by which the federal deficit must be eliminated.

But in their latest change in the budget law, they have included something new that is drawing raves from some fiscal experts: tight spending controls.

"We never before have had effective expenditure controls," Carol Cox, president of the watchdog Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget, said Wednesday. "That is incredible progress."

Under the original 1985 version of the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law, the federal shortfall was supposed to be eliminated this year. When the law was changed in 1987, the target date was pushed back to fiscal 1993.

Neither goal is attainable. The deficit for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30 was $220.4 billion, the second highest total ever. This year's gap is projected to exceed $250 billion — a record — even with the giant deficit-reduction bill Congress passed last Saturday.

But that same measure contained extensive changes in the budget process that de-emphasizes the law's focus on reaching specified deficit targets.

Instead, it groups many kinds of federal spending into three separate categories — domestic, defense and foreign affairs — and puts a spending cap on each of them.

If the cap is exceeded, most programs in that category would be slashed by an amount equal to the excess spending — a powerful incentive to not go beyond the limit.

The creation of the three separate categories is important for another reason: It prevents lawmakers from increasing domestic spending by cutting military programs. This satisfies the Bush administration, which has been eager to prevent the Democratic-controlled Congress from slashing the Pentagon's budget so it could beef up social programs.

"They know... we're not going to cut money in one area and switch it to another," said House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo.

The three categories will be combined into one in 1994.

Other controls have been put on the fastest-growing category of spending, benefit programs such as Medicare and Social Security. These programs will be allowed to grow with inflation and as the population increases, but any expansion in benefits would have to be balanced by an equal cut somewhere else.

Some critics of the new law have argued that it shifts congressional budget power to the White House.

Arsonists celebrate in Detroit

By William S. Bergstrom
The Associated Press

DETROIT — John Holtyn moved in with his daughter Wednesday, a day after his tidy home burned in a Devil's Night arson fire. Francine Smith watched her garage burn after saving the family cars.

The Holtyns and Smith believe they were among the victims of arsonists who celebrated the illegal holiday tradition known as Devil's Night by setting scattered blazes citywide.

Associated Press

Detroit firefighters struggle to get the first stream of water going as flames completely engulf two houses on Detroit's east side Tuesday night, known as Devil's Night, when arson becomes common.

The worst Devil's Night came in 1984, when 810 fires were set over three days.

This year's fires left a haze over some commuter routes and cut visibility to six miles at the city airport late Tuesday.

"On the surface it's very, very clear that we still have a Devil's Night problem," Young said Wednesday. "But those problems are much more under control today than they were."

The Holtyns moved to their daughter's house on Wednesday. Holtyn said vandals torched the vacant house next door, and the flames spread to his home.

"We just saw a flame next door — something blew and it just started burning," said John Holtyn, 65.

Smith clutched her nightgown as she watched flames she believed to be intentionally set destroy her garage and spread to another next door. "What's wrong with people, anyway?" she asked Wednesday.

Patrol organizer Wright said he saw only one small fire in his neighborhood, down from six area blazes the same night a year ago.

"We're trying to really go for zero tolerance for any kind of incidents like that. We'll be out again tonight," he said Wednesday.

Wright said his patrol group seized one youth and took him to the police station. "He was pouring gas. He was trying to set a garage on fire," he said.

Block-watchers in some neighborhoods reported no vandalism. "In this area we had none, not one brush fire," said patrol captain Sims Charlemagne, whose group represents 20,000 residents living near the city's western border.

In southwest and northwest Detroit, "we have now buried Devil's Night," said Alberta Blackburn, a mayoral aide who coordinated citizen patrols.

Edie Albion, who handles claims on hundreds of Detroit properties for Arlan's Insurance Center, reported just one fire claim Wednesday. She speculated that the Devil's Night fires involved mostly vacant, uninsured properties.

In nearby Flint, 144 fires were reported Tuesday night, down from 194 the same night the year before, said Assistant Fire Chief Ron Downing.

Sentences reduced for Israeli soldiers in connection with military brutality

By Sergei Shargordonsky
The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — An Israeli soldier was sentenced Wednesday to two months in prison for participating in the beatings of two Palestinian brothers, one of whom later died.

Three other soldiers were given suspended sentences by the military court. All four — who could have faced a maximum of 20 years in prison each — were demoted in rank.

The soldiers maintained throughout the trial they were only following orders from top officers to beat Palestinian riot suspects. The order has since been changed.

Also Wednesday, a spokesman for Defense Minister Moshe Arens said the minister proposed limiting the number of Palestinians working in Israel. The plan would reverse Israeli policy begun in 1967, when Israel captured the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Last month, Israeli authorities closed off the occupied lands for four days following a wave of violence between Palestinians and Jews.

The case of the four soldiers was seen as a test of the army's willingness to punish troops convicted of brutality in suppressing the 34-month-old Palestinian uprising.

The three-judge court earlier this month found the defendants guilty of the Feb. 7, 1988, Gaza Strip beating of brothers Khaled and Eyad Akkal. Eyad died within hours at Shifa Hospital in Gaza City.

They were charged with aggravated assault because prosecutors found no direct connection between the beating and the death.

Israel army radio also quoted the judges as saying the defendants "violated basic norms of an advanced society... (and) operated under the distorted concept that everything is justifiable for the sake of a military mission."

1st Lt. Ofer Reshef was ordered to serve two months in prison, given a six-month suspended sentence and reduced in rank to sergeant.

Maj. Yitzak Levitt, 32, received a three-month suspended sentence and was demoted to 1st lieutenant. The panel said he was not directly involved in the beatings but was responsible for them.

Staff Sgt. Eli Shukrun and Sgt. Gad Zinbar were each given a five-month suspended term and reduced in rank to private.

Earlier this month, the chief army prosecutor ordered an investigation of Col. Effie Fein, who was commander of the soldiers' unit at the time of the beatings.

In the early months of the uprising, officers said they were ordered to beat people caught rioting, but not to strike those in custody. But many soldiers said the orders were not clear. The army has since banned beatings as punishment.

Arens's proposal to limit the Palestinian work force in Israel was made Tuesday before Parliament's Foreign Affairs and Defense Committee, said spokesman Dan Naveh.

Meanwhile, Israel is under pressure to find jobs for tens of thousands of Soviet Jewish immigrants in a country with an unemployment rate above 10 percent.

The four-day closure of the borders was taken after Arab-Jewish street violence left five dead following the Oct. 8 Temple Mount killings of 20 Palestinians. It kept about 110,000 Arabs off from their jobs in Israel.

A three-man commission appointed by Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to look into the Temple Mount shootings released its findings Friday, stating that Palestinians had caused the violence by throwing stones at police and that police were justified in using gunfire because their lives were in danger.

The circus blew into town via the local print and broadcast media on Tuesday. It's not a very big circus, but the clowns and freaks involved put on a pretty good show.

What time is it?
 It's not going to be Boom-Time anymore. KGAN-TV Sports Director John Baer had the proverbial rug pulled out from under him by Iowa Athletic Director Chalmers "Bump" Elliott and the NCAA, and nearly broke out in tears during the 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. newscasts on Tuesday.

All that was missing from the Boom-Time Funeral was a red, foam-rubber nose, a technicolor fright-wig and the bleary-eyed makeup. But what transpired was nearly as funny.

Baer, angered by an article that appeared in the Cedar Rapids Gazette on Tuesday, launched into a spiel that lasted the entire sportscast. He called the Boom-Time T-shirt scandal a "non-issue" several times, for the entire sports-cast, and defended himself against the Gazette article.

Marc Morehouse

Now wait. A "non-issue"? Then why piss and moan about it? Why drag coach Hayden Fry into it? Baer was obviously a desperate man on Tuesday, and he did nothing to conceal this fact. He flailed about the sportscast like a drowning swimmer going down for the third and final time. By taking his own advice and treating this petty quagmire like a "non-issue" he might not have sounded like a grieving mother.

The sports department at the Gazette probably danced around the newsroom in glee after Baer held up the their sports section. Baer shouldn't have chided the newspaper with his sickly whining, after all, didn't the Gazette simply do its job by reporting on a controversial topic salient to its readers? It's not swimming lessons for happy, little tots at the municipal pool, but it is news.

"It's going to take more than one headline to get rid of me," Baer said. This may be true, but if he devotes the precious 3 1/2 minutes delegated to the sportscast for a reaction to some negative publicity he received then he may just eliminate himself. This is probably something the Gazette staff didn't even consider.

"Coach Fry, are you mad at us?" Baer asked. Hmmm... what has been discussed in the Iowa sports media this week? Oh yeah, Iowa is playing Illinois this week for first place in the Big Ten. There was some other stuff about Iowa high school football playoffs in the news, but according to the actions of Baer these are the real "non-issues."

There was another clown lurking around the circus, one who was sporting a sneer. He was the kind of clown that scared you when you were little, the kind you struggled to get away from when your mom made you kiss him on the mouth. He used words like "infuriates," "ineligible" and "upset."

This clown, of course was Bump Elliott. Why was he so angry at Baer? Can you say "ineligible players?" This is definitely a good reason. The real question here is why Elliott didn't act on the situation sooner. Boom-Times has been a weekly occurrence, has usually involved Hawkeye players and has had all the subtlety of an insurance salesman. This is not exactly an obscure event.

Elliott must have known about Boom-Times. He should have already questioned whether it was legal under NCAA rules to give student-athletes T-shirts and parade them around in commercials promoting a local television sports broadcast. He should have admitted he made a mistake by not looking into Boom-Times further.

The real reason for this freak show is the greedheads at the NCAA. Does a $7 T-shirt gift really constitute a rules violation? This falls under the "Why are you giving me a parking ticket when someone is being murdered across the street" axiom.

Illinois, the Don Corleone of the Big Ten, is skirting some rough water with the NCAA at the moment. It has something to do with cars and money offered to a recruit. Yet Iowa players get squeezed for Boom-Time T-shirts and are ordered to return them to

Iowa scares Minnesota with big win

By Brian Gaul
 The Daily Iowan

Tricking and treating were the themes of the night when the Iowa volleyball team faced Big Ten rival Minnesota in a Halloween match at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Wednesday.

The Hawkeyes played a trick on the Gophers in game two, scoring 12 unanswered points to rally from a 14-4 deficit and shock coach Stephanie Schlueder's team, 16-14.

And the treat was a 15-5, 16-14, 15-11 victory that allowed the Hawkeyes to keep Garfield of Dinkytown, a stuffed cat which is awarded to the winner of the Iowa-Minnesota volleyball series each year.

Garfield remained in the hands of the Hawkeyes for a second consecutive year as Iowa swept the series for the first time since 1984. The Hawkeyes edged the Gophers, 13-15, 13-15, 15-11, 15-12, 15-6 in Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 3.

Despite the sweep, Iowa coach Ruth Nelson said her team's performance Wednesday was "like night and day" compared to its three-game sweep of No. 13 Illinois Saturday.

"We weren't clicking tonight like we did against Illinois," said senior Ruth Spethman, who hit .393 with 14 kills and a team-leading 16 digs in the match.

"Tonight we were hesitant and forced things," she explained. "But the big thing was we got Garfield."

"It's like I just told my players, the most important thing is that you win," Nelson said. "Sometimes it's pretty and sometimes it's not so pretty. You just have to accept it."

The victory allowed the Hawkeyes to even both their overall record (11-11) and their conference mark (6-6). Minnesota fell to 6-20 and 1-11.

In the first game, the Hawkeyes broke open a close 6-4 contest with eight straight points. Spethman was the catalyst, contributing two kills and one block as Iowa build a 14-4 lead and won, 15-5.

The Gophers returned the favor in game two, scoring nine straight points to turn a 5-4 lead into a 14-4 advantage.

But the lead wasn't big enough. The Hawkeyes survived six game-points and scored 12 straight points to escape with a 16-14 win.

Spethman capped the rally with a game-winning kill, and seniors Jenny Rees and Barb Willis each had two kills during the stretch.

"It's like I just told my players, the most important thing is that you win."

"That broke our backs," Minnesota coach Stephanie Schlueder said after the match. "Morale-wise, it deflated us... that was the turning point. I thought we had played well up until that point."

"I saw the panic in their eyes after Iowa got to 11 points," Schlueder continued. "Iowa had a great comeback... but with a lead like that, we should have been able to score one point."

The Gophers again gained the upper hand in game three, 7-4, but Iowa used a 4-1 spurt to draw even at eight. The Hawkeyes later pulled out of an 11-11 deadlock with four straight points, three of them on kills by Willis, to seal the victory.

Willis led the Hawkeyes hit .256 with a game-high 18 kills, 15 digs and four blocks in the match. Rees also reached double digits in kills, with 12, and hit .344. She also recorded 16 digs.

The Hawkeyes next action will be a home contest with Northern Iowa on Nov. 6. The Panthers were 21-1 entering the week.

"We need to work hard in practice this week," Spethman said of Iowa's six-day layoff before the Northern Iowa match. "Every game is so important at this time of year."

Suns visit land of rising sun

The Associated Press

Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons wants to make sure his Phoenix Suns aren't burned out Friday night when they open the season against Utah in Tokyo.

"I want to make sure this team is sharp," Fitzsimmons said before the Suns flew to Japan for the first regular-season NBA game outside North America. "If we happen to get beat by a very good Utah team, I don't want anybody saying it was because of a tough trip."

To a certain extent, it's already been a rough trip. To get his team acclimated to the 16-hour time difference, Fitzsimmons held practice at 3 a.m. both Monday and Tuesday before flying to Japan for games Friday and Saturday.

Elsewhere Friday night, it will be Orlando at Atlanta, Cleveland at Boston, New York at Charlotte, New Jersey at Indiana, Washington at Miami, Milwaukee at Detroit, Philadelphia at Chicago, Dallas at Minnesota, Golden State at Denver, Sacramento at the Los Angeles Clippers and Houston at Portland.

The Los Angeles Lakers open Saturday at San Antonio while Houston is at Seattle to start the SuperSonics' season.

Fitzsimmons can't be blamed for trying to maintain momentum. The Suns, picked by many to reach the NBA Finals and possibly win the first title in their 23-year history, were 7-1 in the preseason.

"We've improved the last two years and we want to improve some more this year," Fitzsimmons said. "Once you reach a certain plateau, though, I find it's harder to get improvement."

Phoenix reached the Western Conference finals for the second straight time last season, but was beaten in six games by Portland.

"I think the biggest thing we got from preseason is that we all now realize we should win the Pacific Division," guard Kevin Johnson said. "We got off to slow starts the last two years."

Eastern Conference
 Detroit is trying to become the first team in 24 years — when Boston won the last of eight straight league titles — to win three seasons in a row.

The Pistons, built around guard Isiah Thomas and a supporting cast that includes defensive aces Joe Dumars and Dennis Rodman, figure to be pressed in the Central Division by the Michael Jordan-led Chicago Bulls.

"We match them in the first unit..." Chicago coach Phil Jackson said while conceding Detroit's great depth.

While the Pistons have virtually the same team, the Bulls made some moves. They added guard Dennis Hopson and forward Cliff Levingston.

Royals, Wilson bid an indifferent adieu

By Doug Tucker
 The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Willie Wilson's career with the Kansas City Royals came to a close Wednesday, ending 13 years of headline-making highs and lows that included a World Series championship, a batting title and a drug conviction.

The Royals, as expected, announced they are not offering the 35-year-old outfielder a contract for next season.

"He has been a tremendous asset to this ballclub for 13 years," general manager Herk Robinson said. "He helped us into two World Series and provided tremendous excitement for the fans of Kansas City. We'll miss him and we wish him well. He was a great ballplayer."

Wilson, a .290 lifetime hitter who hit .332 to win the 1982 batting title, could not be reached immediately for comment.

The Royals have at least four centerfielder candidates for next year, including Bo Jackson and Brian McRae, who played well when brought up from the minor leagues in August.

"I don't know that he was greatly surprised by our decision," Robinson said. "But Willie took our notification, if you will, as a true professional."

Wilson, who filed for free agency last week, is the third veteran to be cut from the roster. The club earlier notified longtime second baseman Frank White, 40, and catcher Bob Boone, 42, that they would not be offered 1991 contracts.

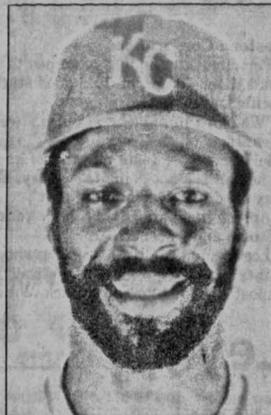

Wilson was supplanted as the everyday center fielder last season but played in 115 games and hit .290. He led the Royals in stolen bases with 24.

Wilson said after the season that he did not expect to return to the Royals.

When the Royals called him up as a rookie in 1978, Wilson was widely acknowledged as the fastest man in the major leagues. As the No. 1 running back prospect in the nation, he was heavily recruited out of high school in Summit, N.J., and signed a letter-of-intent to play football at Maryland.

The next season he led the league with 83 stolen bases, then hit his full stride in 1980 and helped thrust the Royals into their first World Series.

He finished with a team-record

Willie Wilson

230 hits, scored a club-record 133 runs and shared the league lead with 15 triples in one of the most productive seasons any player enjoyed during the entire decade. He also became only the second player in major league history to log 100 hits from each side of the plate, and broke Mickey Mantle's switch-hitting record with 133 runs.

From July 20-Sept. 30, 1980 he set an American League record with 32 consecutive stolen bases.

In 1982, Wilson became the second Royal in two years to win the AL batting title, barely edging Milwaukee's Robin Yount.

But the following November, Wilson and four other members of the Royals became ensnared in a drug investigation in the metropolitan area. He eventually pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of attempting to possess cocaine and served a three-month sentence at a minimum-security facility.

He was suspended for one year but was reinstated the following May 15, maintaining that he was not a user but was trying to purchase the drug at the request of a friend.

Also sentenced in the probe were pitcher Vida Blue, first baseman Willie Aikens and outfielder Jerry Martin.

"Willie Wilson's style of play brought a lot of excitement to the Royals' organization," Robinson said.

Wilson has indicated he does not believe his career is over.

"I think Willie would like to continue playing. We would certainly wish him well," Robinson said.

Leyland is named NL top skipper

By Ben Walker
 The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Jim Leyland, who turned the Pittsburgh Pirates into contenders and guided them through the pressure of a pennant race, was selected the National League manager of the year on Wednesday.

Leyland took a team that went 74-88 and was fifth in the NL East in 1989 and molded it into a division champion at 95-67. The Pirates overcame the New York Mets and all the odds in the stretch to finish with the second-best record in baseball.

The Pirates had Barry Bonds and Bobby Bonilla for offense, but did not have a set starting rotation or a relief ace. Leyland juggled his staff and wound up with 18 different pitchers getting victories.

Leyland got 17 of the 24 first-place votes and finished with 99 points. Lou Piniella, who led Cincinnati to the World Series championship in his first season with the Reds, got three first-place votes and was second with 49 points.

Montreal's Buck Rodgers also got three first-place votes and was tied for third with 32 points with Los Angeles' Tom Lasorda, who got the other first-place vote. San Francisco's Roger Craig and New York's Bud Harrelson tied for fourth with two points each.

No manager was named on all 24 ballots. Two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America in each NL city vote, and voting was completed before the start of the playoffs, in which Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh in six games.

Jeff Torborg of the Chicago White Sox was selected the American League manager of the year on Tuesday.

Leyland, 45, won in his fifth season with Pittsburgh. He was a career minor league manager before that, playing seven seasons as a catcher in the Detroit organization and then managing for 11 years in the Tigers' system.

He joined the White Sox as a coach in 1982 and studied under manager Tony La Russa, who remains one of Leyland's closest friends, and was finally hired to manage in the title just yet.

 "Can we sustain what we've done for three years?" coach Chuck Daly asked. "We have to stay injury free."
 That already is a problem for Detroit. Rodman has a recurring ankle injury. Also injured during the preseason were Thomas and Bill Laimbeer, although both appear ready to go.
 The Atlantic Division — where defending champion Philadelphia, Boston and New York figure to slug it out — looks more competitive.
 The 76ers are led by Charles Barkley, whose averages of 25.2 points and 11.5 rebounds per game and 148 steals for the season make him one of the best forwards ever to play the game. He had off-season surgery on an arthritic shoulder.
 Philadelphia has emerging star Hersey Hawkins in its backcourt and tough guy Rick Mahorn up front. The 76ers also added shot-blocking Manute Bol.
 The big question in Boston is how much longer can the big three of 33-year-old Larry Bird, Kevin McHale (32) and Robert Parish (37) continue to defy age. The Celtics also are trying to adjust to new coach Chris Ford.
 Patrick Ewing, who averaged 28.6 points, 10.9 rebounds and 4.0 blocks last season, is probably the game's best center. But the Knicks have failed to surround him with enough scorers to take the next step.

the outstanding rebounders of his era and guard Terry Porter an outstanding playmaker and scorer.
 It will be strange to see the Lakers without Coach of the Decade Pat Riley, under whom they won four league titles. Mike Dunleavy is his replacement on the bench.
 The Lakers added Sam Perkins and Terry Teagle to the likes of Magic Johnson and James Worthy. Los Angeles, which took the Pacific title last season, figures to battle Portland and Phoenix to the wire.
 Sacramento (23-59 last season) probably won't be a factor, but the Kings should be interesting with four first-round draft picks. Two of them, Lionel Simmons and Travis Mays, may start.
 Defending champion San Antonio and Utah figure to wage war in the Midwest Division, but Denver's offense and lack of defense could result in some records. Former Lakers coach Paul Westhead has come aboard from Loyola Marymount.
 NBA coaches are wondering who would be the first team to score 200 points in a game. It's a good bet the Nuggets will be involved.
 "We should be up in the 150s and above in most games," Westhead said. "Obviously, on some days the opposition will be right up there with us."
 The record for one game is 186 points in triple overtime. In regulation, it is 173.
 "We shouldn't have any problem reaching that," Westhead said when informed that the NBA record scoring average is 126.5, set by the Nuggets in 1981-82.
 Utah, already loaded with all-league forward Karl Malone and assist champion John Stockton, has added 24-point scorer Jeff Malone to its ranks.
 San Antonio, imposing with center David Robinson and forward Terry Cummings, certainly is a team to be reckoned with. But coach Larry Brown doesn't necessarily see the Midwest race as a two-team affair.
 "Everyone assumes that because we won 56 games and we're a young team that we'll be better..." he said. "But so many teams have improved that it doesn't mean we'll have as much success."

Western Conference

Portland, a loser in five games to Detroit in the finals, hopes to get off to a good start in the tough Pacific Division.
 "We can win anywhere, but... we'd like to take advantage of the schedule..." said coach Rick Adelman, whose team plays 10 of its first 13 games at home. "It's not going to be easy. There are some very good teams coming in here."
 Among them are Detroit, New York, Chicago, San Antonio and Phoenix.
 Led by guard Clyde Drexler, who averaged 26.4 points in the finals loss to Detroit, Portland is an imposing team. Forward Buck Williams is one of Pittsburgh improved the first three years under Leyland, going 85-75 in 1988 and challenging the Mets for most of the season. But in 1989, the Pirates slipped far back and they were given little chance this season of competing with the Mets, the defending champion Chicago Cubs or St. Louis.

expected him to become more nervous, he did not.
 Instead, he kept the Pirates in front by skillfully sticking with whoever was the hot reliever, be it Stan Belinda, Vincente Palacios or Bill Landrum. Leyland also had the benefit of Doug Drabek, who emerged as one of baseball's best starters, plus the Killer Bs — Bonds and Bonilla, along with Sid Bream, Wally Backman and Jay Bell.
 "We had a conversation with the Dodgers," DeMarco said. "They're going to look at all their options and Fernando's going to do the same."
 "There's a time when you have to look at all your options. So far, the Dodgers and looking at theirs and we're going to look at ours. We're going to talk to anybody and everybody. Anything can happen. The possibility of Fernando going somewhere else is greater than ever at this time."
 Valenzuela, who turns 30 on Thursday, was 13-13 with a 4.59 ERA. He made 33 starts, completing five, and pitched 204 innings. He allowed 223 hits while walking 77 and striking out 115.
Boxos' Harris comes to terms
BOSTON — Greg Harris, who was eligible to file for free agency, agreed Wednesday with the Boston Red Sox on a two-year contract for a guaranteed $2.8 million.
 Harris, who turns 35 on Friday, was 13-9 with a 4.00 ERA in 1990 in 34 games, including 30 starts. He will get $1.3 million next season and $1.4 million in 1992. Boston has an option for 1993 at $1.5 million and must pay a $100,000 buyout if it is not exercised.
 The Red Sox signed Harris on Aug. 7, 1989, after he was released by the Philadelphia Phillies.

Illinois' Gardner is Lombardi finalist

DI wire services
HOUSTON — Moe Gardner of Illinois, Russell Maryland of Miami, David Rucker of Auburn and Chris Zorich of Notre Dame on Wednesday were named finalists for the Lombardi Award, given to the nation's top lineman.
 All four are defensive players, although offensive linemen also are eligible for the award.
 Twelve players were nominated before the season. That list was narrowed to four finalists — all seniors — by a nationwide committee of college coaches, sports writers and sportscasters.
Sportsbriefs
 The winner will be announced Dec. 6.
 Gardner was an All-Big Ten selection as a sophomore and junior. Rucker, whose brother Tracy won the Lombardi Award in 1988, anchors Auburn's highly rated defense.
 Maryland, who had a career-high 20 tackles against Notre Dame two weeks ago, has 64 tackles this season with six sacks.
 Zorich, who was a Lombardi finalist last year, dislocated his kneecap last Saturday and will miss this week's game against Navy. The injury could force Zorich to miss the rest of the season.

Sanders charged with assault
HOUSTON — Washington Redskins receiver Ricky Sanders will be tried on aggravated assault charges on Dec. 17 in a Houston courtroom.
 State District Judge Donald Shipley set the date Wednesday in an effort to resolve the case stemming from a May 1 incident before football season ends.
 Sanders appeared before Shipley Tuesday for pretrial motions and the judge ordered prosecutors and defense attorneys to decide on a date by Wednesday.
 Team representatives and Sanders' attorneys negotiated Tuesday to schedule the trial so it would not interfere with the Redskins schedule.
 The Redskins will be on the road the week before and week after the date for Saturday games.
Valenzuela may bolt from Dodgers
LOS ANGELES — Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Fernando Valenzuela filed for free agency Wednesday and his agent, Tony DeMarco, said there's an excellent chance Valenzuela will play for another team next season.

the Pirates finished four games ahead of the Mets. Many had thought the division would be decided by a three-game, season-ending series against New York at Three Rivers Stadium, but by the time the Mets came to town, Pittsburgh already had won its first division title since 1979.
 Oakland, at 103-59, was the only team in the majors to finish with a better record than the Pirates.

No players penalized in LSU fray

The Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Louisiana State University announced Wednesday that it won't suspend any players involved in the bench-clearing brawl at the Florida State football game last Saturday, in spite of a longstanding policy against fighting.

The university disciplined no one for the fight, which cleared the benches after what was perceived as a late hit on the final play of the lopsided game, won by Florida State, 42-3.

"Fault cannot be attributed to just one team or to particular individuals," LSU said in a statement.

The statement, issued after Athletic Director Joe Dean met with football coach Mike Archer and basketball coach Dale Brown, warned that players "who flagrantly and deliberately initiate or escalate a fighting incident" can be suspended.

The fight at Florida State was the first melee for LSU since a 1984 game against Tulane.

This one came as the game ended and was shown several times on national television.

Free agency claims one player, lose one

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Outfielder George Bell of the Toronto Blue Jays filed for free agency Wednesday while pitcher Greg Harris, who was eligible to file, re-signed with the Boston Red Sox for $2.8 million over two years.

Meanwhile, Cincinnati declined to exercise its 1991 option on second baseman Ron Oester and Pittsburgh declined to exercise its option on pitcher Ted Power.

Oester and Power immediately filed for free agency, as did Bell, Los Angeles pitcher Fernando Valenzuela and Pirates first baseman Sid Bream.

A total of 89 players have filed and nine more are eligible to submit their names by Sunday's midnight deadline.

Bell, the 1987 American League MVP, batted .269 this season with 21 homers and 86 RBIs. Alan Hendricks, Bell's agent, said the outfielder was prepared to leave Toronto.

"We're exploring all options," Hendricks said. "I already talked to several teams and we plan to talk to all of them."

Asked if Bell could return to Toronto, where he has clashed with management, Hendricks said, "There's always a chance, sure. But he's a free agent and everyone's on a level playing field."

Harris, who will be 35 on Friday, was 13-9 with a 4.00 ERA and made $615,000. He will get $1.3 million next season and $1.4 million in 1992. Boston has an option for 1993 at $1.5 million and must pay a $100,000 buyout if it is not exercised.

Oester, 34, was the longest-tenured Reds player and batted .299 in 154 at-bats with no homers and 13 RBIs. He made $650,000 and the Reds had an option at the same salary. Instead, they are giving him a $100,000 buyout and hope to sign him at a lower salary.

Power and Bream give the Pirates 10 free agents, the most of any team. Power, 35, signed with Pittsburgh as a free agent and was 1-3 with a 3.66 ERA and seven saves in seven opportunities. He made $620,000, including $270,000 in bonuses, and would have made $660,000 under the option. Instead, he also gets a $100,000 buyout.

Valenzuela re-signed with the Dodgers last year after filing for free agency. He was 13-13 with a 4.59 ERA and made $2.2 million, including $200,000 in bonuses.

Tyson is found guilty of fondling, only fined $100

By Vera Haller
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A jury on Wednesday decided that former heavyweight champion Mike Tyson fondled a woman at a Manhattan dance club in 1988 and awarded the woman $100 in compensatory damages.

The five-women, one-man jury will return to Manhattan's federal court on Thursday to hear testimony on Tyson's financial status before ruling on punitive damages.

The woman, Sandra Miller, asked for up to $2.5 million in punitive damages in her civil lawsuit.

The jury deliberated about 4½ hours before finding that Tyson, the former heavyweight champion, grabbed Miller's breasts and buttocks after she refused his advances at Bentley's Disco on Dec. 10, 1988.

Tyson, who had denied that the incident ever took place, showed no outward emotion as U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey read the verdict, which found the fighter had committed battery but not assault.

In his instructions on the law, the judge had explained that assault required no finding of contact but must be a threat. A finding of battery requires actual contact, he said.

Tyson said he was not disappointed with the verdict. "If they thought it was serious, they would have given her more than 100 bucks," he said.

When asked how she felt, Miller, a 26-year-old computer operator from Queens, said, "Great that they know that he did it."

Tyson, who testified during the three-day trial, acknowledged that he was at Bentley's Disco that night but denied knowing or ever touching Miller.

Before deciding punitive damages, the jury will get a copy of Tyson's financial statement. Miller's attorneys said they also plan to call another woman who has sued Tyson for a similar incident that allegedly happened the same night at Bentley's.

The second woman's testimony will be presented to show that Tyson engaged in a pattern of abusive activity. Tyson is expected to testify again on Thursday to dispute those claims.

"If they thought it was serious, they would have given her more than 100 bucks."

Mike Tyson
Boxer

In closing arguments earlier Wednesday, Tyson's attorney, Robert Hirth, told the jury that Miller had concocted the allegations to obtain money from Tyson.

"You should send a message that if Sandra Miller wants to engage in a get-rich-quick scheme she should buy a lottery ticket," Hirth said.

He belittled Miller's credibility by pointing to discrepancies in her trial testimony and a sworn statement she gave earlier.

"Her story has gotten better the closer she got to the courtroom and appeared before you," Hirth said. "Sandra Miller has come here to collect her announced goal — to get money from Mike Tyson."

Her lawyer, however, urged jurors to believe her version of events because she had the "courage and guts" to take on the former world heavyweight champion.

"Any touching that is unwanted is offensive and should not be permitted," Miller's attorney.

Reluctant nominees on list for hoops hall

By Trudy Tynan
The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Bob Knight and Larry O'Brien, the former NBA commissioner who died last month, were among 12 candidates nominated Tuesday for election to the basketball Hall of Fame — even though they had said they wanted no part of it.

Hall of Fame president Bob Kurland said the trustees decided that "if an individual is worthy of nomination to this prestigious honor that person's name and qualifications will be submitted to the 24-member honors committee."

"The guts of it is that history should be reported in its true form," Kurland said. "Both these guys are deserving of being recognized under the standards of the Basketball Hall of Fame. I don't know how they are going to come out in the voting by the honors committee, but they are certainly deserving to be nominated. You can't deny history."

To be elected to the hall, nominees need 18 votes from the honors committee in its balloting next spring. Enshrinement ceremonies are scheduled for May 13 in this city, where the game began nearly 100 years ago.

O'Brien, who died on Sept. 27, withdrew his name from consideration last year in protest of the hall's secret elections.

Knight, the Indiana coach, asked that he not be considered for renomination after he failed to be elected in 1987. At the time, he called it a "slap in the face."

Knight said through a spokesman that he was unaware he was being nominated again and would have no comment.

Renominated as players were Nate Archibald, Dave Cowens, Bob Lanier, John Kerr, Calvin Murphy and Nera White, a women's Amateur Athletic Union star.

In addition to Knight, Jack Hartman, the winningest coach in Kansas State history, was nominated for the fourth time and Jack Ramsay, one of the most successful coaches in NBA history, for a second time.

The late Larry Fleisher, who founded the NBA players association in 1962, was the only new name on the list. In addition to O'Brien, the late Carol Eckman, who organized the first national college tournament for women in 1969, was also nominated.

The names were announced at halftime of the NBA's Hall of Fame exhibition game between Detroit and Houston.

O'Brien, whose long political career included being an adviser to President Kennedy and national Democratic Party chairman, said before his death that he had tried unsuccessfully to make the election process public during his two terms as Hall of Fame president.

"I have no quarrel with the Hall of Fame and would consider election a high honor, but I'm a guy who believes in the Democratic process," O'Brien had said.

Kurland said Hall of Fame trustees decided to make some changes in the Hall of Fame voting at their meetings Tuesday, but the names of the honors committee and its vote will remain secret.

"That will never change," he said.

O'Brien and Knight have been the only nominees who tried to withdraw their names. But they are not the first to express their dissatisfaction. Bill Russell, the first black player to be elected to the Hall of Fame, refused to come to his 1974 induction to protest the lack of blacks.

Since Russell was enshrined in absentia, 16 black players, including Elvin Hayes, Earl Monroe and Dave Bing, who were installed this

The Houston Rockets' (34) Akeem Olajuwon dunks a shot during Tuesday's Hall of Fame game against the Detroit Pistons at the Springfield Civic Center in Mass. Isiah Thomas looks on in the background.

May, and two coaches, John McLendon and Clarence Gaines, have been inducted. The New York Renaissance, the most famous of the early black teams, was installed in 1963.

Currently there are 169 men, three women and four teams enshrined in the hall. Last year, when none of the nominees got the needed votes on the first ballot, trustees called for a second vote over the objections of president Bob Cousy, who quit in protest.

On Tuesday, trustees voted to require that a minimum of three people be selected by the honors committee each year even if it takes more than one vote, Kurland said.

Phillies' Daulton says no to free agent fray

By Ralph Bernstein
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Catcher Darren Daulton, who had declared free agency, changed his mind and returned to the Philadelphia Phillies Wednesday, signing a three-year contract worth $6.75 million.

Both Daulton and the Phillies said the key to their agreement was Daulton's right to test the free-agent market at the expiration of his new contract.

Phillies president Bill Giles, who personally negotiated the contract, said that if Daulton, 28, had signed with any other team he couldn't become a free agent again for five years.

Daulton, a .206 lifetime hitter until this year, hit .268 in 1990 and set career highs in almost every offensive department, including games played (139), home runs (12), doubles (30), RBIs (57) and walks (72).

General manager Lee Thomas said Daulton had agreed to a $500,000 signing bonus, a salary next season of $1.75 million and $2.25 million in 1992 and '93.

"We're glad to have him before he goes into the so-called mine field (free agency)," Thomas said. "Once you get out there you don't know what can happen. You want to keep your own and that's what we did."

Daulton, who was visiting with his parents in Kansas, said by telephone that he and his agent talked to some teams and they were interested, "but in my heart I wanted to stay in Philadelphia, and I wanted to keep my free-agency status at the end of the contract."

The Phillies were anxious to sign Daulton because he had developed into one of the top defensive catchers in the NL. He threw out 39 percent of opposition base stealers and effectively handled a young pitching staff that won 10 more games and helped the club out of the East Division cellar.

Daulton said the New York Mets, San Francisco Giants and some American League teams had expressed interest in him. He made it clear that no contract terms were discussed since that was illegal until after Nov. 5.

Daulton said he really didn't know what turned him around as a hitter in the last half of the 1990 season. He hit .297 in the second half.

"Maybe it was being moved up in the order," he said. He had been the eighth-place hitter in the lineup and was elevated to batting second, where he saw a lot more fastballs. He is known as a good fastball hitter.

"I really had a fun year," said Daulton, whose career nearly ended in June 1986 with a severe knee injury. "And I think we are headed in the right direction. If we can acquire a quality pitcher we can win."

Daulton said that despite the reconstructive knee surgery that handicapped him for more than two seasons, "I always thought in my heart and mind I'd reach this level of play. And I'm going to do a lot better."

Giles said he always had admired Daulton because "he's a workaholic. I like people who show extra effort and dedication."

Daulton had been seeking a four- or even five-year contract, but changed his direction when the subject of retaining his free-agency rights after three years instead of five was put on the table.

Giles said he had told Daulton's agent that the club president was going on vacation as of Wednesday night, and that if they didn't reach agreement by then, it wouldn't be before free-agent negotiations began. That meant the catcher would lose the three-year free agency rights.

The Phillies also announced the signing of Johnny Podres, 58, as pitching coach to succeed Darold Knowles, who was released after last season.

Denver Nuggets rookie Chris Jackson, shown in this recent photo at the team's training camp, will miss at least the first 10 days of the NBA season due to side effects of the medication Jackson takes for Tourette's Syndrome.

Medicine slows Nuggets' rookie

The Associated Press

DENVER — A change in medication for Denver Nuggets rookie Chris Jackson to control Tourette's Syndrome is working and he should be back within two weeks.

Jackson, the third player chosen in the NBA draft, was placed on the injured reserve list on Monday and will miss the first five games of the regular season.

Jackson, a high-scoring guard from LSU, was hospitalized on Sunday while doctors ran several tests to determine why he was so sluggish on the court.

Team physician Dr. Allan Schreiber concluded that Jackson's play was being slowed "dramatically" by one of two prescription drugs he has been taking to combat Tourette's Syndrome, a neurological disorder characterized by involuntary muscle movements, uncontrollable vocal sounds and inappropriate words.

Jackson is said to have a mild case of the multiple-tic disorder, and team physicians said they did not believe it would hinder him when the Nuggets selected him in the draft.

Schreiber, in consultation with Jackson's personal doctors, took Jackson off one of the medicines and substituted another drug he has taken in the past without incident.

After changing medications, Jackson performed better in Tuesday's practice, Coach Paul Westhead said.

"I think the bright side is that Chris has now kind of turned the corner physically," Westhead said. "It probably was his best practice since he's been here."

Westhead said Jackson, who was late reporting to training camp because of a contract dispute, can use the next 10 days "as his personal training period, the time he probably needed in the first place."

Jackson had been taking two prescription drugs — Proloxin and Anafronil.

Schreiber said Jackson has been taking Proloxin for years without trouble. But he said a Houston specialist put him on Anafronil just four months ago and recently increased the dosage to help suppress the symptoms more. That drug, Schreiber said, caused Jackson problems — such as sluggish play, difficulty in concentrating, dizziness, headaches and poor appetite.

Jackson discontinued taking Anafronil on Sunday and began taking Prozac the next day, Schreiber said.

"I am willing to go on record and say that a significant percentage of his atypical play was due to the side effects of this medicine," Schreiber said. "I have every reason to think that readjustment of his medication will make a noticeable difference in his play, and it should not take very long to become apparent."

Jackson, however, was taking a wait-and-see attitude. "I can only trust what the doctors say," he said. "I believe they may be right, but I'm just saying for as long as I've been taking it, I haven't had any problems with it. Maybe now I may have one. But it may not be the medicine."

Jackson said his confidence has suffered as he struggled physically in trying to make the adjustment to Westhead's fast-paced offense.

"Confidence is going to come," he said. "It's just going to take time. I'm going to use the time to get back in shape and work on my game and work on weights and hit the pool and the court every hour on the hour. While they're gone, I'm going to be in the gym. I'm going to stay positive."

Jackson never missed any playing time during his two years at LSU because of reaction to the medication he was taking.

Cavs hope to live up to No. 1 ranking on Sat. against Tech

By Rick Warner
The Associated Press

All season, college football fans have been wondering if Virginia is for real. On Saturday, they'll find out.

The top-ranked Cavaliers host No. 16 Georgia Tech in an Atlantic Coast Conference showdown that will also have a major impact on the national championship.

The winner will remain unbeaten (Virginia is 7-0, Georgia Tech 6-0-1) and virtually lock up the ACC title. But for Virginia, the stakes are even higher.

A victory by the Cavaliers would give them an excellent chance to finish the regular season undefeated and play for the national title on New Year's Day — possibly against Notre Dame in the Citrus Bowl.

A win also might convert skeptics who feel Virginia has thrived against a weak schedule. The Cavaliers have played only one ranked team so far, beating Clemson 20-7 in their second game.

But Georgia Tech should provide a tough test for the Cavaliers, who lead the nation in total offense (545 yards per game) and scoring (48 points per game).

The Yellow Jackets have one of the top defenses in the country, holding opponents to 13 points and 252 yards per game. However, their defense may not be at full strength on Saturday because standout safety Ken Swilling is still hobbled by a sprained ankle. He is listed as questionable, but is expected to play.

Both teams are on a roll. Virginia has won 13 straight regular-season games, while Georgia Tech has an 11-game unbeaten streak.

Edberg wins in Paris

By Natasha Carleton
The Associated Press

PARIS — Stefan Edberg, Boris Becker and Ivan Lendl continued their battle for the No. 1 ranking in the world Wednesday by winning their second-round matches at the $2 million Paris Indoor tournament.

However, John McEnroe double-faulted at match point in the third set tiebreaker to lose to Jakob Hlasek, 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-5).

McEnroe survived a point penalty in the second set and came from a break down in the third to force a tiebreaker. But his 10th double fault knocked the No. 7 seed out of the tournament.

Edberg, the world's No. 1 player, opened the third day of the tournament and needed only an hour to beat Andrei Cherkasov of the Soviet Union, 6-2, 6-3.

Becker had an uncertain start before eliminating American Richey Reneberg 4-6, 6-3, 6-2 for the fourth tournament in a row. Lendl whipped another American, Kevin Curren, 6-3, 6-4, in a routine match with a service break in each game.

Also, American Brad Gilbert avenged a loss to Amos Mansdorf of Israel in the 1988 final with a 6-3, 7-6 (10-8) victory. French Open champion Andre Gomez, fifth-seeded, lost to Sergi Bruguera of Spain 7-6 (7-4), 4-6, 6-1.

Two Frenchmen also qualified for the third round. Guillaume Raoux beat Guillermo Perez-Roldan, the No. 13 seed, 7-5, 6-4 and 12th-seeded Guy Forget downed Ronald Agener of Haiti, 7-6 (7-5), 6-2.

Edberg had an easy time, dominating Cherkasov with his serve and strong net play. But Becker, who's trying to overtake Edberg for the No. 1 spot, had a harder time in beating Reneberg again. "It is difficult because he knows my game by now, that's really the most difficult part," Becker said.

After splitting the first two sets, Becker won five of the last six games to end the 1-hour, 58-minute match. Reneberg faced Becker, the defending champion in Paris, first in Sydney, then in Tokyo and Stockholm.

Becker routed Edberg in the finals at Sydney and Stockholm and knows he might be able to pass him by winning this week.

"It's a little bit in my mind, of course, but it's such a long way to make it to the final and win the whole thing," Becker said.

Lendl, who's trying to regain the No. 1 spot, beat Becker to win in Tokyo three weeks ago.

"There's not much difference for me to be the number one, two or three," Lendl said. "But it goes hand in hand when you win tournaments you go higher in the ranking."

But Edberg is determined to keep his No. 1 ranking. If he reaches the quarterfinals in Paris he's assured to keep his top spot no matter what happens.

"I'll try to keep my place for the rest of the year, that's still my aim," Edberg said. "I am going to try and play well in the last two tournaments and work very hard."

Both players meet Americans in the third round. Becker faces Jim Courier and Edberg meets Aaron Krickstein.

Courier routed 16th-seeded Juan Aguilera of Spain 6-1, 6-2 in 55 minutes and Krickstein disappointed the French crowd by knocking out Yannick Noah, 6-3, 6-2.

Lendl takes on Jonas Svensson of Sweden in the third round.

Pele struts stuff again

By Piero Valsecchi
The Associated Press

MILAN, Italy — Pele, the most famous player in soccer history, made an emotional one-night comeback in an exhibition match at San Siro Stadium to celebrate his 50th birthday.

Wearing the No. 10 jersey he made famous with the Brazilian national team, Pele played the first 40 minutes of a game against a group of world all-stars Wednesday night, showing that age has slowed him but left his magic touch intact.

Pele made some beautiful passes for his young teammates, unsuccessfully tried a shot from the long distance and led a fast counter-attack by a Brazilian team before surrendering to fatigue and emotion.

His Brazilian teammates, players of the rival team and Italian referee Tullio Lanese applauded the retired Brazilian superstar as he walked off the field while a crowd of 20,000 shouted his name.

The player who led Brazil to three World Cup titles appeared moved as he confessed to television interviewers, while walking to the dressing rooms, that Wednesday night's appearance possibly was his last on a soccer field.

Pele came out of retirement several times since his last official game in October 1977. Prior to the kickoff, he was honored with a birthday celebration that included a four-story-high styrofoam cake with 50 electric candles.

Some of the world's most renowned players, including Spaniards Michel and Rafael Martin Vasquez, Dutch striker Marco Van Basten, Colombian goalie Rene Higuita, Uruguayan Enzo Francescoli and Cameroon striker Roger Milla, played on a so-called Rest of the World selection to honor Pele.

Ailing Argentine star Diego Maradona did not show up while Dutch ace Ruud Gullit applauded Pele from the stands.

The exhibition, marking the first European appearance of the Brazilian team under the direction of newly-appointed coach Paulo Roberto Falcao, was played at slow motion in the first half, with Pele and most players just displaying their talent.

It was faster and tougher in the second half as the Rest of the World team won 2-1.

"It would have been nice if Pele had scored," commented Roberto Aliprandi, one of the many boys under 15 of age who were admitted free to the stadium and who saw Pele in action for the first time.

Cats From Ubhadiya members Matt Hyde, Nan Schwarz and Jarryd Lowder. The band, which also includes Julie Holst, will perform tonight at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St.

Cats transcend folkie genre

By Brian Jones
The Daily Iowan

The most remarkable thing about the Cats From Ubhadiya is that they're not really lousy. Really, really lousy.

Any band lineup that's not guitar-guitar-bass-drums is just begging for trouble (consult They Might Be Giants or Depeche Mode for instant verification). The Cats — are just another folk-rock-country-baroque band from Iowa City.

Hyde's reason for starting the band was that "most people here want to be in the Cure or Depeche Mode. People think they're so original in this town, but few people get out and really do anything original." Pretty good description of a town whose musical landscape often seems made up entirely of recombinant pop combos and noise merchants, no?

And the Cats are original. There is no "typical" Cats From Ubhadiya song. Seguing easily from Appalachia-derived folk song to sensitive singer/songwriter thing to rock workout (albeit with violin and stand-up bass) to horror movie soundtrack music, these Cats defy easy description.

Compounding the problem is the band's lyrics, which veer from Hyde's "confessional Dylan things" to "That Happy Christ Family." The once-religious Hyde wrote the song after waking one morning in a cold sweat, "wondering what would happen if they found out the Bible was a hoax. Then Jesus and God wouldn't have jobs anymore."

Representative lyrics: "There's Jesus and Betty and their dad God and their mom, Mother Nature or something/Jesus, when he's not on tour, likes to visit his seldom-mentioned sister Betty/She lives in a condo near the beach and talks of all the times she's seen Tom Petty, at the mall." On the page, it just looks dumb. But live, with Schwarz's beautiful vocals atop Hyde's earnest warbling, it's a wonderful joke, one almost capable of redeeming the whole "joke rock" axis.

But it's important to note that the Cats aren't a joke band. In fact, said Hyde, "it's probably about 66 to 33 (percent) serious to wacky." Still, Lowder does sometimes play mandolin with a slide. That's just weird.

"People think they're so original in this town, but few people get out and really do anything original."

Matt Hyde
of Cats From Ubhadiya

Music

Julie Holst, Matt Hyde, Jarryd Lowder and Nan Schwarz — play, in various permutations and combinations, acoustic and electric guitars, mandolin, violin, stand-up bass, and percussion. The violin presence alone should stimulate listeners' wince response.

But it doesn't, because unlike They Might Be Giants (who continue to believe that being clever puds is enough) and Depeche Mode (who mysteriously continue to draw breath), the Cats don't have any master plan.

According to guitarist/vocalist Hyde, he didn't set out to have a band including a classically trained violinist with a beautiful, crystalline voice. And he didn't envision a band necessitating a multitude of hyphens for descriptive purposes, as in, "The Cats From Ubhadiya

Sometimes, he said, the lyrics just happen that way. "I don't just write, 'Baby, you were really good last night.' If I did, I'd mean it, though."

So, finally, what does it all mean? Decide for yourself tonight, when the Cats From Ubhadiya play Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St. The Willie Wisely Trio, a darned fine rock-sorta jazz band from Minneapolis, plays too.

Modern works well-rendered

By Chris Sagers
The Daily Iowan

The Oct. 28 performance of the Composer's Workshop was a delightful trip into the hearts and minds of some of the School of Music's brightest young innovators. Four electronic pieces and an acoustic work provided an evening of enjoyable diversion.

The concert began with "Studies from Stanford," written by senior Craig MacMillan, a piece that used an ingenious computer randomizing system that controlled virtually every parameter of the composition. Even the order and nature of the musical events were controlled mathematically by the computer. The sounds created were then transferred to electronic tape to produce a lush sonic landscape full of somber washes and soothing counterpoint.

The only work for traditional instruments, Steven Hoffman's "Interpretations" for flute and piano, included a jolting keyboard background in juxtaposition with a meditative flute that hovered around certain long notes and teetered off on expressive tangents. The piece, short but sweet, played an interesting trick with little music and a lot of music stands on stage.

Robert Fuller's "Untitled" was a considerably more bombastic effort than the evening's first tape piece. It was a lengthy exploration of complex, static sounds with periodic little windows that let us see, perhaps, the work's internal wiring. The performance was quite loud and could be described as non-stop, for better or worse.

"Men at Work" was David Rogers' piece for two-channel electronic tape. It was a rather humorous collection of motion picture soundtracks and some other sound effects. While audience members didn't seem to know how to react, I found the outtakes of what I believed to be Curly from the three stooges to be most comical.

There were, however, obviously serious elements to the composition. Rogers didn't just present these sounds haphazardly — except for some unfortunate extraneous noise from the tape machine, I found the performance very entertaining.

The concert ended with an impromptu performance by MacMillan and UI junior Matt Burrier, titled appropriately "Improv." MacMillan played electric bass and Burrier, in a visual parody of the other instrument, played a small echo/reverb device on a large guitar strap.

The sounds were a very pleasant examination of feedback and sounded not unlike MacMillan's other work. The performance was quite evidently experimental, however, and lacked the organized development needed to make it an involving effort.

This year's Composer's Workshop series, if in alignment with its two performances so far, promises to be a highly entertaining one. Kudos to the new director, John Ross, who has helped make the concerts varied and fruitful — in no small way by the addition of his own music to the programs.
