Letters from American guests 'in Kuwait paint bleak picture

The company is still trying to determine soluble replacements for plastic cutlery and the plastic cup which reflects the same type of waste. McDonald's is testing various alternatives, including disposable cups made of paper and cardboard, and plastic cups made of reusable materials. Environmentalists praise the decision, but a spokesman for the packaging industry said it was not enough to solve the problem of plastic waste. The decision was made in response to pressure from environmental groups and consumers who have been calling for a reduction in plastic waste.

deposited a fatal crash in a critical area of a terminal deck. The plane, United Flight 232, missed the main runway when trying to land and crashed, killing 112 of the 290 aboard. The investigation was made by General Electric Aircraft Engines, responsible for the design and construction of the aircraft's hydraulic expansion. The flight crew, unaware of the hydraulic expansion, cleared the deck. United, an associate of the drug dealing, rejected the flight crews' claim, saying there were no signs of the fire having been started when the past was launched in the terminal deck. The plane was last inspected in April 1984.

Bob Dot, United's vice president for West Coast operations, who is a quality assurance, got the airframe's structure to the terminal. He said United had fully cooperated with the safety board's investigation and said the board's staff did not understand the relationship between the airframe's inspectors for each airline, and the fact that United used to hire a safety agency to look over the points, seeing if it was able to inspect the terminal deck. United is still not sure it was able to inspect the terminal deck used in the Sioux City crash.

Russian instructor's courses innovative

by Susan Depew

Martha Parrott

When Martha Parrott is in class, she is more than an instructor. She is a role model.

"I'm a role model," Parrott stated recently. "I have been a role model in my academic career."

Parrott, who is finishing her second year at the University of Iowa, wants to enhance her classes significantly this year, and she has done just that. She is teaching Russian courses that are innovative and culturally relevant.

"I do want to enhance my classes," Parrott said. "I want to make my classes more relevant to the students."

Parrott is an example of the hard work and dedication that students strive for. She is a talented student who is an asset to the University of Iowa.

"I'm the best teaching unit on the UI campus," Parrott said. "I work hard to make my classes relevant to the students."

Parrott's innovative changes in her courses have been well-received by her students. They have been impressed with her commitment to cultural competence and her ability to provide a learning environment that is relevant to the students.

"She is a stellar undergraduate," Parrott's advisor said. "She is one of the top two recipients of the UI's Outstanding Undergraduate Award."

The UI Student Association voted this week to end an almost two-year boycott of local bookstores by UI Book & Supply Co., because of the lack of accessibility by physically disabled people.

This May, the store, 832 Clinton St., installed an elevator to provide disabled students access to the textbook area on the lower floor. Prior to the installation, the only way to get to this area was by stairs.

The UI student government and other campus groups have been trying to end the boycott to protest the lack of accessibility by physically disabled people in the textbook area. In a December 1988 resolution calling for the boycott, the Collegiate Association Council, the former academic branch of student government, and Iowa Book’s inaccessibility “denied disabled students education.” The CGC legislation had professors sit in, but no one had been allowed in.

Previously, students unable to use the stairs held no more than 20 copies of their textbooks for them and didn’t have an opportunity to replace textbooks, said UI Sen. Al Beardley, who controlled the legislation to end the boycott.

Beardley said he came across the boycott legislation and approached UI Senate President Rick Epperson about canceling the protest in response to the installation of the elevator. The two senators then co-authored the legislation.

“Putting an elevator in was an important thing to do for the handicapped,” said Iowa Book & Supply Co. owner Pete Vanderholt.

Vanderholt added that he heard about the boycott but didn’t think it had affected business much.

The legislation commended the store for “its commitment to end action on the concerns of the student body. We wanted to acknowledge what they did,” Beardley said.

New "Skin" marked by jarring detours

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

"A" rown the line, I'll say at the time, but I don't think I'd advise you not to think about the play either." Kathlyn Albion, in Thornton Wilder's "Skin of Our Teeth," has never been more prophetic. The 1942 Pulitzer Prize-winning play, which is the University Theatre's annual presentation, is a three-week run scheduled to have its opening performance
Nov. 3 and 14, at 8 p.m., and at 3 p.m. Nov.
4 and 15. The play is being held in the old 2 and 10 performances, at 7:30 p.m. in Theatre B. The show's director, Bob Woodruff, has shifted the play's place in the season, and the set and costumes have been added, as have the actors' roles in the story. The play is divided into two acts, with the first act being the more jarring and the second being more subtle. The play is based on the true story of the Gilman family, who were the first family to be involved in the Skokie Clinic controversy in the 1960s. The play is about the effects of the controversy on the family and its community, and the ways in which the family deals with the controversy.

The cast is comprised of University of Iowa students, and the play is directed by Bob Woodruff. The University Theatre is located in the Old Capitol Center, and the play is scheduled to run from Nov. 3 through Nov. 15, with performances at 8 p.m. and 3 p.m. on those dates. Dangerous course William Blake once said something, "The road of least resistance is often the path of duty." I do not subscribe to such a statement with which a rational person would tend to agree. In fact, the path of least resistance is often the road of least resistance. The road of greatest resistance is often the road of greatest resistance. The road of greatest resistance is often the road of least resistance. The road of least resistance is often the road of least resistance. The road of least resistance is often the road of greatest resistance.

I am about to punch the button because there is nothing more bearable than being the only one who presses the button. Obviously that is a somewhat absurd statement because if I let someone else do it, "Let him do the talking." "Don't argue with him, men like to be right." "Avoid the central issues of the day." But the central issues of the day are, "Why do we have these referents? Why do we have these referents? Why do we have these referents?" etc... made understandable in the notion that women were not included in those referents.

As I walked through the doorway, I surveyed the room. It contained several chairs, a table, and some papers. A sign on the table read, "Our fruit is not once evil — sexual discrimination.

Concerning issues that are not directly connected to action policies served a very legitimate and necessary function. When women were denied access to these referents, it was often used as a way to show that they were not qualified. This was often practiced, without the realization that such actions were not only illegal but also unethical.

It comes to women. The cage was never designed for the women. It was meant to hold them, to contain them, to force them to be silent and serve. It is the logic of our public policy.

Next came an elderly gent who favored a white linen shirt and white slacks. "Why don't you have the patience to sit with peace to eat, etc. and be on your way? But you can. You can be on your way if you have no rights, no guarantees of peace."

To argue with him, men like to continue to be right. When women argue, they will hear one hint of negotiations, you've heard it. They have few, if any, means of escape. They are branded as "pathetic referees." No male should tolerate for one second the disservice.

We have never been given the chance to show the world what we can do. The world can see what we can do. We have not been given the chance to be heard. It is the logic of our public policy.

Mistaken is one of the   to women. They have the patience to sit with peace to eat, etc. and be on their way. But you can. You can be on your way if you have no rights, no guarantees of peace.

Many predict low voter turnout

By Donald M. Rottluff

WASHINGTON—The safest predictions about the 1990 election is that the Most Americans won't vote.

Turnout generally hovers near 50% for presidential elections, lower for midterm races, but this year is shaping up as an election in which fewer than a third of registered voters will go to the polls.

The last time a third or less of the regis-terd voting-age population cast ballots was 1942.

To be sure, some strategist and political analysts say that the election is not going to be as low as 1942 and that the vote could approach the 38% to 40% range that was reached in some midterm elections of the 1980s.

But overall, the picture is one of discrimination and disenfranchisement at the polls. The 30% figure reflects a broad range of factors: in creasingly, the most politically active Americans are leaning toward voting, while the least politically active Americans are leaning toward not voting.

What do the polls suggest about the voter turnout? The lateober 1989 poll
by the New York Times/Washington Post, cited in the Washington Post, showed that 38% of registered voters intended to vote in the November 1990 election.

The poll also showed that 22% of registered voters were leaning toward not voting, while 15% were leaning toward voting. The remaining 35% were un-

New depth has Bulls optimistic

By Joe McDonnell

CHICAGO — Take Mike Jordan. Add bench depth, an ingredient waiting in recent seasons, and — at least in the eyes of Chicago's Big Eight opponents — you've got a team capable of winning the NCAA title.

The 6-foot-2 Jordan, who wasphenomenal in the 1982 NCAA finals, comes into the season looking for his second NCAA title.

Jordan is the main reason the Chicago Bulls have a shot at the title. The Bulls have a 75-2 record under coach Chuck Noll, and Jordan has been the main reason for their success.

Mike Jordan has been the main reason the Bulls have a shot at the title. The Bulls have a 75-2 record under coach Chuck Noll, and Jordan has been the main reason for their success.

Jordan's play has been a key to the Bulls' success. He has scored over 2,000 points in his career, and his ability to score at any level makes him a threat to any team.

Jordan's teammates have also stepped up, with players like Scotty Pippen and Horace Grant providing valuable support.

The Bulls have a good mix of veterans and young talent, and they will be a force to be reckoned with in the NCAA tournament.

But the biggest reason for the Bulls' success is Jordan. He is a great player, and he has been a key to the Bulls' success. He has led the Bulls to two NCAA titles, and he will be looking to lead them to another one this year.

Hawkeyes relaxed for opening meet

By Michael Webke

The Daily Iowan

With his Hawkeyes opening the 1990-91 season tonight against East Tennessee State in the Mid-American Classic, head coach Glenn Patton might be a little concerned about how his team will fare on the road so early in the season. "We expect from other teams," Patton said, "that the team this weekend is going to be a relaxing way to begin the rest of the year."

"He views the season with a bit of a talent and breaststroke relays. So early in the season we don't know what to meet," Patton added. "The best recruiting classes in swimming roster this year are about this season. Joining to the Big Ten swimming powers Michigan and Iowa, this year's team will be strong in freestyle and senior all-American after last year's outstanding Big Ten meet qualifier from Iowa, Wodjat and teammate Torrence Greenwalt, both natives of Iowa, and UCLA transfer Mark Johnson, Eric North and senior all-American lanamichanek who owns the world." Patton continued, "We're concerned about how his assistants don't have to worry about the team this weekend. "It's a different way to start the season." Patton said. Parton, "It's a different level of competition with only nine swimming and six is a great way to start the season."

With a real good presence in the relay, Iowa is a great place to start the season. "We are very strong in freestyle, backstroke, and breaststroke and in the sprint events we don't know what to expect from other teams," Patton added. "With what he terms "one of the best recruiting classes in years," Patton went on to say, "the season we don't know what to meet, but we don't know what to expect from other teams." Patton added.

Money ends Ireland tilt

The Associated Press

MUNICH, Ind. — A football game planned by Killary, Ireland, between Ball State and Ohio University has been moved to a site outside Killary for an additional $100,000, the Mid-American Conference and Thursday.

The Nov. 17 game will be played instead at Ball State as originally scheduled. "It's unfortunate that our game occurred so early last fall and this game will not be played in Ireland," MAC Commissioner Kurt Benson said. "Both university cities looked forward to the trip, it's a great opportunity for the student-athletes and fans. Obviously everyone is disappointed," Benson added.

The Group of Port Lahorpe, NZ, notified the two universities in a letter on Monday that it wanted to renegotiate the contract. Ball State and Ohio rejected the request, the league said.

About 200 people from each university planned to make the trip to Ireland.

Tyson will not pay damages

By Vera Hollar
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson won a unanimous decision Thursday when a jury decided he should not pay damages to a woman who claimed he tried to fondle her in a Manhattan disco.

The jury of six women and six men deliberated less than an hour before returning a verdict. The decision cleared the way for Tyson to pay $220 in compensatory damages for the incident. The jurors proved that he did it. "It was the principle," she said. "He knew he did it. He knew he was doing it. The jury proved that he did it." But she said the $220 Award was miniscule compared to the $100 million she had sought.

Testimony Thursday showed Tyson had reached under her dress as she was dancing at Bentley's. She said it dawned on her that it was Mike Tyson.

She Tyson, right, and promoters Don King leave a New York Federal Court Thursday after a jury decided the ex-champ should not pay punitive damages for landing a woman in a discreet.

Tyson has acknowledged that he was at Bentley's that night, but he denied grabbing another woman's breasts.

The second woman, Lori Davis, who claimed theheavyweight had reached under her dress as she was dancing at Bentley's, also avoided grabbing another woman's breasts that same night at a club.

In a decock, Tyson also denied grabbing another woman's breasts that same night. During Friday's testimony, Tyson also denied grabbing another woman's breasts that same night.

The juror ruled Wednesday that Tyson grabbed Miller's breasts and listened to testimony from another woman who claimed the boxer had reached under her dress on the same night as the Miller incident.

Tyson has acknowledged that he was at Bentley's that night, but he denied grabbing another woman's breasts. He denied knowledge of or even looking at Miller.

$180 million at the box office does not a philosophy make

We're a dead man's party, who crashed out for nothing and left our body and soul at the door.

I swear to God I wasn't anticipating to write saws silly holiday tunes on two days late, but the phenomenon reaching the screen that has the New York Times buzzing at the box office is not the year's biggest hit, nor the year's worst disaster. It was the summer's biggest, the Indiana Jones to the joy of the great masses.

But is the starry-eyed enthusiasm justified? Is it worth the high ticket price? Do you really believe this crap and allow yourself to be burned to believing in the afterlife?

The answer is no. It's a very psychologically ugly film. Deny grief, it says. Shuck the second-depart will one day be repairs. (For more on that big pile of bodies are the top starry-eyed enthusiasm.

Dee-Lite moves ever closer to the top. RUN FOR THE MONEY.
