Iraq would rather fight 'dangerous war' than give up Kuwait

By Laura King
The Associated Press

In a new outburst of belligerence, Iraq said Sunday it was ready to fight a "dangerous war" rather than ever give up Kuwait. One European official warned that divisions over the hostage issue are endangering the anti-Iraq alliance.

"Iraq is not going to negotiate on Kuwait," Iraq's information minister, Latif Jassim, told a news conference in Baghdad. He insisted Iraq's annexation of Kuwait, which it overran three months ago, would stand.

"We are going to defend our 19th province on any condition, even if we have to fight a dangerous war," he said, referring to Kuwait.

Iraq also said it was recalling an unspecified number of retired army officers to active duty.

Secretary of State James Baker visited U.S. troops in the Saudi desert earlier Sunday and said it was hard to say whether they would be called into combat.

The presidents of Egypt and France expressed hopes that economic pressure rather than military might could force Iraq out of Kuwait.

Meanwhile, four American ex-hostages were on their way home a day after being freed, and fifteen Europeans arrived in Jordan after being released by the Iraqis. They were among thousands of foreigners trapped in Iraq and Kuwait when Saddam Hussein's troops took over the emirate Aug. 2.

The first POWs of the Persian Gulf crisis

— three French soldiers — had a homecoming of their own in Paris on Sunday, but it wasn't exactly a hero's welcome. French officials have said the soldiers, who were captured last week, might have strayed into Iraqi territory, and that they probably face punishment for their carelessness.

The new Iraqi vow to keep Kuwait at all costs came only hours after a former Japanese prime minister, Yasuhiro Nakasone, met with Saddam — and said the Iraqi president had demonstrated "great earnestness and seriousness" about seeking peace.

Nakasone's visit, aimed at winning the release of Japanese hostages, comes as Japanese lawmakers are considering a plan to send troops to the gulf to join the multinational force arrayed against Saddam.

The troop-deployment proposal has drawn strong criticism from those who say it would violate Japan's postwar peace constitution.

Rosebowl bound?

5-0 Big Ten start
best since 1958

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — While the Hawkeyes are in the driver's seat for the Rose Bowl after a 54-28 pounding of Illinois Saturday, they aren't taking anything for granted.

"I think the approach that we have to take is that we need three wins to go to the Rose Bowl," Iowa backup quarterback Jim Hartlieb said. "Obviously we only need two of the three mathematically, but if we take that kind of approach, we might not have momentum going into the Rose Bowl. So we just have to come out each week and play like it's do or die for the Rose Bowl."

Iowa leads the Big Ten with a 5-0 record, its best conference start since 1958. Illinois, which was tied with the Hawkeyes for the top spot in the league, now shares second place with Minnesota at 4-1 each.

The standards for the Rose Bowl are 1) conference record, 2) head-to-head competition, 3) overall winning percentage and 4) elimination of the team most recently representing the conference at the Rose Bowl.

If the Hawkeyes win two of their three remaining games — Ohio State, Purdue and Minnesota — they will be virtually assured of representing the Big Ten in the Rose Bowl.

Washington, which clinched the Pac-10 with a victory over Arizona Saturday, will face the Big Ten winner in Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1, 1991.

Iowa's next test will be Saturday when it hosts the Buckeyes. But Illinois coach John Mackovic said he doesn't think the Hawkeyes will have any problems.

"Certainly they have a couple of tough games ahead of them as we do as well," Mackovic said. "But if they play this well, it will be difficult for anyone to beat them. They were sharp today. The only one who has a chance (to go to the Rose Bowl) perhaps is Ohio State because they could play them head-to-head and perhaps beat them next week and then they would have the tiebreaker advantage."

Iowa receiver Mike Saunders catches a 5-yard touchdown pass Saturday from quarterback Matt Rodgers to give the Hawkeyes a 7-0 lead over Illinois at the 14:43 mark in the first quarter. Iowa went on to give the Illini a 54-28 stomping and keeps the lead in the run for the roses.

Review editor denied service by Sanctuary

Renander, friends turned away for position on homosexuality

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

The editor of a local conservative publication, long the source of attacks against homosexuals, is filing a complaint against a local restaurant that denied him service because of his philosophical beliefs.

Jeff Renander, editor of the Campus Review, said a waiter at the Sanctuary Restaurant and Pub, 405 S. Gilbert St., denied service to him and four friends Tuesday night because of their "moral position" on "sexual orientation."

Renander said he would file a complaint with the Iowa City Human Rights Commission this morning, and might eventually file a civil suit. He said the restaurant violated a federal law that prohibits refusal of service to individuals because of their creed or sexual preference.

But the owner of the restaurant dismissed Renander's claims as "groundless."

Daryl Woodson, who also manages the Sanctuary, said only classes of people, rather than individuals, are protected under federal civil rights laws.

Woodson said he learned of the incident from several waiters and bartenders and said the action had the restaurant's full support. He attributed Renander's actions to "his usual attention-seeking."

"I do not order my staff to serve people who they feel have harassed them," he said. "I wouldn't, for instance, order a black person to serve David Duke."

Woodson added, "I don't think Renander falls into a protected class of people."

The restaurant's action follows an unprecedented amount of media attention the Review has received in recent months. In addition to a front-page feature in The New York Times on the rise of conservative publications, Renander has also been quoted in a front-page Des Moines Register story on homophobia.

Perhaps most publicized is the Review's legal battle with 20th Century Fox over the use of Fox's copyrighted cartoon character Bart Simpson. A Review cartoon showed Bart holding a loaded slingshot with the caption, "Back off faggot!"

But Renander rejects the notion that the Sanctuary incident is the price he pays for his newfound publicity.

"To me this is a surprise," Renander said. "I've grown accustomed to stickers and graffiti on my door and bricks being thrown through the windows — but all this happened under the cover of darkness."

"Being denied service by a restaurant is such 'in your face' discrimination," he said. "It wasn't subtle at all. I was shocked."

Renander and four other people, including one other Review staff writer, were at the Sanctuary Tuesday night when they were informed that all of the Sanctuary waiters and bartenders had decided not to serve them. Renander said a waiter told them the reason for the refusal was Renander's "moral position" on "sexual orientation."

Renander said he left with his brother and girlfriend shortly afterward to see if the others would be served. Review staff writer Barry Johnson and his girlfriend, Natalie Dale, were still refused service.

"This community has always prided itself on being liberal, open-minded and tolerant," Renander said. "The implications of this are very serious. A bar could decide to keep all gays out or a pro-life restaurant owner could decide to

Another Burge sighting; 'proowler' incidents total 7

By Stacy Williamson
The Daily Iowan

The UI residence hall "proowler" appears to have struck again in Burge early Friday morning, bringing the number of such incidents up to seven.

A resident of Burge reportedly saw a man exit and flee from a female resident's room about 4 a.m. Friday.

Burge coordinator Cheryl Hoogerwerf said the witness reported the incident to the UI Department of Public Safety. However, Public Safety Director William Fuhrmeister said Sunday he had been on vacation Friday and was unable to confirm whether an official report on the incident had been filed. Chief Don Hogan was unavailable for comment Sunday.

It is further unclear whether the witness saw the man leaving her room as she was returning to it, or if he was exiting from another resident's room.

The witness reportedly saw the suspect closely, and described him as a black male, about 5 feet 7 inches tall and wearing a blue tank top.

This is similar to the description released earlier by the Department of Public Safety based on reports from the six previous incidents, which describe the suspect as a black man between 5 feet 10 inches and 6 feet tall.

Between Aug. 24 and Sept. 14, six incidents of a male entering a female's residence hall room during the early morning — five in Burge and one in Currier — were reported to the Department of

Candidates run final campaign crunch

By David Espo
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Candidates in Tuesday's congressional and gubernatorial elections hurtled through a final weekend of campaigning Sunday while party leaders posted rival predictions of success.

Republicans were heartened by a string of public opinion polls tending in their favor and expressed optimism about the California governor's race, the biggest prize of the midterm campaign.

Democrats remained confident of solid gains in both Congress and the statehouses.

In California, Republican gubernatorial candidate Pete Wilson shuttled to a series of public rallies, while Democrat Dianne Feinstein visited churches in poor and minority areas of San Francisco.

Feinstein told parishioners it was Wilson who "broke the back of the 1990 Civil Rights Bill" with his Senate vote sustaining President Bush's veto of that bill two weeks ago.

Wilson, buoyed by recent polls giving him a slight lead in the race, condemned Feinstein for "pathetic" campaign tactics designed to divide the state on racial and class lines.

In the nation's most closely watched Senate race, GOP Sen. Jesse Helms passed up church services in favor of extra rest. Democratic rival Harvey Gantt attended services and scheduled an evening rally.

Not surprisingly, officials in both parties predicted success when the votes are counted — and defined the term to their advantage.

Ron Brown, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said his party would "pick up governor seats. We're going to pick up in the Senate, and we're going to pick up in the House."

White House chief of staff John

Look for election coverage in the DI

Sununu conceded Democrats would retain control of both the House and Senate in the 102nd Congress, and perhaps would pad their majorities in both houses.

But he quickly added, "What we have set as a goal is to be significantly better than the average result in an off-year election. And if we do that, it will be a success."

Historically, the party controlling the White House loses roughly two dozen House seats in the election midway through the president's first term.

A nationwide New York Times-CBS survey depicted an electorate pessimistic about the economy and unhappy with its government, and the pundits said they were wary of

Solidarity vigil members decry domestic violence

By Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

Thirty people gathered Friday night at College Green Park — commonly known as Rape Park — to speak out against domestic violence and incest.

Participants, including domestic violence and incest survivors, sat in a candle-lit circle and informally discussed the devastation caused by abuse, the pain of silence and ways to change the cycle of violence.

"We wanted to provide a space where survivors could be heard," said Jenny Prichard, of Women Take Back the Night, sponsor of the event.

"A lot of times (domestic violence and incest) are supposed to be a secret," said Prichard. "But the more public we make it the less shame we have to deal with personally."

Catherine Moore, also of WTNB, said the informal atmosphere made it easier for people to express their feelings.

"I think the communication flowed really well," she said.

Moore said it's important for survivors of domestic abuse and incest to know they're not alone and to be aware of others in the area who have suffered the same abuse.

"You need to share your feelings; you need to ask for help," agreed Barbara McKenna, an incest survivor advocate. "You're completely alone. You're isolated from your family."

Prichard said it's necessary for people other than victims to be aware of the effects of abuse.

"It's a society problem," she said. "It's not an individual problem."

WTNB has scheduled a roundtable discussion for Dec. 2 called "Diversity, Understanding, Culture and Knowledge" to educate students about the gender patterns that promote violent behavior, especially sexual violence.

Survivors of domestic violence or incest are urged to seek counseling and can contact the Rape Victim Advocacy Program for help.

Council Bluffs considers tribal casino

The Associated Press

COUNCIL BLUFFS — A show-down is looming on a proposed $67 million casino and convention center for Council Bluffs.

A suggested contract for the project, which would increase the city's proposed share of gaming receipts, was submitted last week to a City Council study group and is to be discussed at Monday's council meeting.

A vote on the proposal would be the first major test of the project being developed by the Santee Sioux Indians of Nebraska, in partnership with Harvey's Resort Hotel-Casino of Stateline, Nev.

The development would include a casino and convention center on a 55-acre tract east of the Bluffs Run greyhound track.

A lawyer working with a task force named by Mayor Thomas Hanafan submitted the contract proposal Thursday to a City Council study group.

It suggests setting Council Bluffs' share of the gross gaming receipts at 5 percent rather than the 4 percent proposed in an earlier

"This contract incorporates virtually every concern that has been raised about this project except what we can't address — whether gambling is, per se, immoral."

Jack Ruesch
Council Bluffs councilman

study by a Nevada gambling consultant.

It would give an additional 1 percent of the gross gaming revenues to charitable organizations. The percentage that would be paid to Pottawattamie County and the state of Iowa would be subject to negotiations with those governing bodies.

Councilman Jack Ruesch said that while the council has not gone on record on the project, its sentiment appears to favor the plan.

"I think it's fairly obvious, since we've hired a lawyer and gone through this (contract proposal), the council may come up with a resolution that lets this project go forward," Ruesch said.

To date, only Councilmen Sam

Irwin and Stanley Grote have indicated their position on the casino. Irwin opposes the casino and last month cast the only vote against hiring lawyer Ross Swimmer of Tulsa, Okla., to assist in drawing up a casino contract proposal. Grote has said he favors the project. The other members are Ruesch, Charles Gross and Philip Meyer.

"This contract incorporates virtually every concern that has been raised about this project except what we can't address — whether gambling is, per se, immoral," said Ruesch, who serves on a fact-finding team named by Hanafan earlier this year to study the casino proposal.

Hanafan, who has yet to make a recommendation on the proposal, said the contract "protects our interests as best we can."

"This (document) very specifically says, 'This deal doesn't work if these conditions aren't met,'" Hanafan said.

But Ruesch was careful to say that the agreement, even if eventually approved by the council, would not assure the casino project would become a reality.

Developers must still gain approval from the federal secretary of the interior and the governor of Iowa, who would also be charged with negotiating a compact governing operation of the casino with the Santee tribe.

"This was prepared to protect our interests so if this project moves forward, all parties would be enjoined from doing anything that would be detrimental to Council Bluffs. This is a binding agreement," Ruesch said.

Mark Ramsey, whose Omaha public relations firm represents the casino developers, said Harvey's "is very comfortable with paying out 11 percent of its gross gaming revenue" in lieu of taxes.

Courts

An Iowa City man was charged with five counts of indecent contact with a child Thursday.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Frank Trevino, 36, 308 S. Gilbert St., No. 1128, danced with several girls between the ages of 10 and 11 around Oct. 27. While dancing with the girls, the defendant touched the girls over and under their clothing, records state.

Bail was set at $25,000, and a preliminary hearing is set for Nov. 12.

A man was charged with first-degree theft after allegedly stealing property valued at over $5,000, records state.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Michael L. Santos, also known as Joe Martinez and Frank Ladonia, 31, address unknown, was found in Austin, Texas, and charged Oct. 17 with the crime. The owner of the defendant's summer residence reported missing a diamond ring after the defendant departed for Austin, records state. The defendant lived with the victim over the summer and was a summer employee in Iowa City, records state.

Bail was set at $10,000, and a preliminary hearing is scheduled for Nov. 12.

An Iowa City man changed his plea to guilty Thursday to charges of second-degree burglary. According to Johnson County District Court records, Daniel J. Boeding, 21, 531 Oliver St., was charged Aug. 13 after an officer found him taking boxes out of vehicles parked in a lot located on the 10 block of West Court Street. The defendant admitted that the vehicle in question did not belong to him and he "admitted that he had gone through several unlocked vehicles in the lot," records state.

Final judgment and sentencing is set for Dec. 14 at 9 a.m.

A Cedar Rapids man changed his plea to guilty to assault causing injury Wednesday and was immediately sentenced to 120 days in jail, records state.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Joe Tamayo, 44, 5505 Sixth St. SW, Cedar Rapids, was charged with the crime July 4 after he became involved in a verbal altercation with the victim while heading north on Highway 965. The defendant stopped the car and attempted to remove the victim from the car, records state. During this process, the victim received bruises to both upper arms, the neck and the left side of the chin, records state.

In addition to the jail sentence, the defendant was also placed on probation for one year and ordered to complete programs in substance abuse and counseling for batterers.

A Waterloo man was found guilty Thursday of forgery after changing his plea to guilty, records state.

According to Johnson County District Court records, William D. Hertz, 20, 3605 Canterbury Court, Apt. 8, Waterloo, passed a stolen and forged check at the Heartland Inn, 87 Second St., in exchange for a room. The defendant was identified in a photographic line-up, records state. The check was among other things stolen during a recent burglary in another jurisdiction, records state.

The defendant was sentenced to five years' probation and must reside in Waterloo for nine months. The defendant must also pay restitution to the court and the victim.

Gifted students from innovative inner-city program come to UI

By Heidi Pederson
The Daily Iowan

Joyce Oatman is an educational pioneer. For the past four years, she has been mining a previously undiscovered source of academic accomplishment and future leaders — Chicago's inner-city high-school students.

Aiding this endeavor is the UI's Connie Belin National Center For Gifted Education, which routinely brings Oatman's gifted students to Iowa City for academic opportunities. This was the case last Thursday and Friday, when several of Oatman's pupils visited the UI to learn about career planning.

Oatman's program at Tilden High School in Chicago involves enrolling promising inner-city high-school students in advanced academic and college-prep courses. In addition, she exposes them to cultural experiences — such as trips to operas and museums — that many wouldn't have otherwise.

Oatman, who has been teaching for more than 15 years, hasn't had an easy time setting up an inner-city gifted-and-talented program. Her battle began, she said, with getting blacks themselves to believe they can be gifted.

"Most black people do not believe we can be gifted," Oatman said in an interview Friday. "They'll say, 'My child is very smart, but don't call him gifted. I don't want him called that, because we're not gifted. They are gifted.' And when they say 'they,' they're talking about mainstream America — usually white, male, middle-class."

Oatman said that when blacks think of "gifted" they picture "the college kid on 'Jeopardy.'"

"Major systems in the country do not want to spend money on these kids," she said, "and their schools are two to four years behind national norms."

Oatman was confronted with this problem at Chicago's Crane High School, where she originated her program four years ago. Crane's principal canceled the program after one year, Oatman said, because he didn't believe poor, black students could excel.

This prompted Oatman's move to Tilden High School, where her program has begun to flourish. This is in great part, she said, to Principal Hazel Steward's funding efforts.

Funding is a major problem for programs like Oatman's because of the many already existing deficiencies in inner-city school systems. The students themselves often come from poor families, and scraping together bus fare to get to school in the morning can be an obstacle.

Furthermore, the funding dilemma is that dollars given to a program for "gifted" students might be otherwise spent helping students with more basic needs, such as those with fundamental reading deficiencies.

"It's a double-edged sword," she said. "The system is going to have to bend a little."

Oatman's appearances on "The Oprah Winfrey Show" and "Today" have brought attention to her efforts, including the attention of Belin Center Director Nick Colangelo.

Paula Christiansen, a program coordinator at the center, said the center was very impressed with Oatman's efforts and wanted to find a way to help.

"We help (the students) to focus in and think about the possibilities open to them that they might not have thought of," she said.

The university also benefits. A general information session about the UI is presented to the visiting students, with the hope that some will choose to attend college here.

Kimberly Rollins, one of Oatman's students, said such information can be valuable.

"These trips have taught us about the different universities," she said. "They've taught us to look at the programs the school offers and if (the school) can help us in our field."

And Oatman's students give her entire program high marks.

"It's given me the knowledge that I am gifted," said Nicole Filpot, who has been in the program for two months. "It's given me a positive view of education."

Filpot said that inner-city school students lack respect for education and what it can do for them. In some cases, Oatman's pupils have been threatened by fellow students because of their participation in her program. Others have had to be pulled out of street gangs in order to participate.

And many more students need to be reached, Oatman said.

"We want to make 'inner-city gifted' a household word," she said. "Not in mainstream America, but in the inner city."

Oatman said this attitude toward inner-city students has begun to change, but that such changes come slowly.

"Chicago school principals have a lot more autonomy than they used to," she said. "If they want to spend money on this, they may."

Oatman credits the UI's assistance with gaining national respect for her program.

"Having this kind of an institution validate what we're doing, we can go to the rest of the country and say, 'Look what we have,'" she said. "It's a very good strategy."

Professor: Movies perpetuate American myths about Vietnam

By David Sims
The Daily Iowan

In the 1979 Vietnamese film "The Abandoned Field — Free Fire Zone," an American military helicopter sweeps over a rice paddy in the Mekong Delta searching for Viet Cong soldiers. Neither the pilot or the gunner can spot the VC, who are hiding among the reeds and trees.

"Those damn VC," the pilot says. "They're like ghosts! You can never see them."

This comment pokes fun at the American myth of the North Vietnamese as "an invisible enemy," according to Rick Berg, a professor of literature at Scripps College, Claremont, Calif.

Berg, who specializes in the Vietnam narrative, spoke at the UI last Friday as part of the Vietnam Film Project. The project was a two-week series of six Vietnamese films shown in conjunction with a UI class on the Vietnam narrative. He said most American films and literature about the war portray the Vietnamese as unseen or faceless. This attitude reflects Americans' refusal to look at the Vietnamese as people, during the war and after.

Berg considers his work a way of advocating politics of intervention. "If it works, then I've introduced a whole lot of people to things they may never have thought of," he said. "Things that might not have much to do with the actual event of Vietnam, but more with the idea of Vietnam."

Berg criticized American war films like "Born on the Fourth of July" and "Platoon" for resurrecting the myth of the warrior common to the narratives of Tolstoy, Crane, Hemingway and countless others. This theme, he said, "has reduced all the politics and issues to 'It was a terrible war and I either grew up or I didn't.'"

History and a context for the war are missing from most of American narratives, according to Berg. These stories focus on the technology of equipment but usually tell nothing of the history of Indochina. American films also reduce the Vietnamese to stereotypes — portraying them as sadistic, single-minded enemies or backward peasants. Berg said this reflects a societal attitude held by many Americans about poverty.

"Poor in money doesn't mean poor mentally," he said.

Berg views the Vietnam war as a class conflict on two levels: the middle class of the United States using the lower class to do its fighting, and the larger international perspective of a powerful nation waging war on the less-developed Third World.

For Americans, the war is a heroic and horrific adventure, he said. To many Vietnamese, it was an invasion and an interruption to normal life, a point that many American narratives miss.

"The Abandoned Field," one of the six films shown, portrayed the war as an intrusion in the life of a young Vietnamese couple with a baby, and reversed the perspective of many American films by placing the viewer among the hunted rather than flying above with the hunters, Berg said.

"Everyone involved in that war had better things they could have done with their time," he said. The film used the analogy of a silk parachute that a mother found and used to make clothes for her baby.

"You could do a whole lot of better things with that silk than use it to drop flares from the sky to blow people away," Berg said.

One of the reasons the Vietnamese remain invisible in narratives of the war is the fact that America has not completely faced up to losing the war and has subsequently enforced the isolation of Vietnam for the past 15 years, he said.

Berg contrasted this to the relatively quick redemption of American enemies in both world wars — for example, the sympathetic portrayal of a German soldier in "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Despite his criticism of war films, Berg said it would be impossible to make a film that accurately portrayed war. He quoted a film producer who said, "If you really want to make a realistic war movie, as soon as the lights go down you have someone in the back firing a .45 over the heads of the audience." Berg was drafted into the Marines and toured Vietnam in 1968. He resisted answering questions from the audience about details of his combat experience.

"If you're asking what happened, people shot at me," he said. "I want to get away from all the patriarchal war stories about how many campaigns in the north you saw and how deep the mud was."

Berg said his Marine training included "programming," but said there is a misconception about combat training as portrayed in films like "Full Metal Jacket." An audience member asked if it was true that recruits are taught to think of the enemy as targets, not people.

"It's not necessary to dehumanize someone to kill them," Berg said. "The killing is not the hard part. It's the not killing that becomes the hard part. ... The temptation to say, 'If it's dead, it's VC.' And that to me is part of the thrill and the horror of it all."

ICAN works to educate Iowa consumers

Information converts electorate

By Susan Stapleton
The Daily Iowan

The savings and loan bailout, national health-care programs and 59 million pounds of toxins released into Iowa's environment may not bring voters out tomorrow. But the Iowa Citizen Action Network is trying to change that.

The organization is trying to convert voters by informing them of the candidates' political priorities.

ICAN works as a non-profit corporation that educates Iowa's consumers on issues including fair taxes, national health care, insurance, economic development and the environment.

"We're basically a grassroots organization — we go put it to the people," said field canvass director Jim McWeeny.

ICAN, located at 1476 S. First Ave., is part of a national citizen action network that encourages people to realize that they do have a reason for voting. The network's focus is to empower, educate and motivate people.

"I used to feel impotent about politics," McWeeny said. "The elite can do what they want. But when you get together with your friends and your neighbors and those who think like you — then you can make people listen."

"When you get organized, legislators have to listen to you. They need your vote," he added.

ICAN has been successful in gathering support for its causes in the Iowa Legislature. For example, partially through ICAN's efforts, utility companies can no longer turn off the power when people can't pay their bills in the middle of winter. And landfills are now protected from waste that will affect groundwater.

Currently, ICAN is working hard on endorsing a state-level health-care plan and, last July, the group launched its environmental project that may rid Iowa of dangerous toxins emitted by industries.

McWeeny also feels ICAN has earned the respect of the Legislature with its ability to inform the electorate.

"I can safely say that we've played a significant role in hundreds of elections," he said. "Simply educating people on the standpoints of candidates gives the public a sense of what the election's all about."

Although ICAN offers no financial support for political candidates, the groups does recommend voting for those who support the ICAN agenda.

"We support candidates who have the environment and health care at the top of their agenda," McWeeny said. "Then we get people out to vote for them."

"We're basically a mom-and-pop organization. We're not wealthy," he added. "Even if we could donate money to candidates, we wouldn't want to. There's a potential conflict of interest."

McWeeny knows from his involvement in the '60s political movements that there will always be frustrating moments.

"The '60s fell apart because we didn't think about tomorrow and today," he said. "You have to ensure yourself that there will be a chance tomorrow."

"This is an organization that will be here for a long time," McWeeny said. "There will always be issues that need exposure tomorrow."

Grassley: Reach out to undecided voters

By Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

Bad weather and a busy itinerary forced U.S. Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, to cut short a scheduled campaign appearance at Iowa City Republican headquarters Saturday at 11:30 a.m.

About 40 people gathered to hear Grassley thank them for their efforts in the election and urge them to continue drumming up support for Tom Tauke, the Republican challenger in the Senate race.

"There's a big undecided vote out there, so there's still a lot of work to be done," Grassley said. "I don't recall ever seeing such a large group of undecided in a long time."

In responding to questions from the audience, Grassley said he doubted the Republican Party would lose support from the American public due to the problems surrounding the national budget. But he added that the budget issue will probably lead to a decline in the number of people voting on election day.

"There won't be a strong backlash against the Republican Party, but people will probably be turned off and stay home," Grassley said.

Grassley added he also felt the crisis in the Middle East wouldn't be an important factor in determining how voters will vote.

"The crisis in the Middle East won't affect us at all," Grassley said. "And I say that on the basis that as I go around the state of Iowa, it doesn't come up much regarding how people will vote."

Corning, Zimmerman vie for lt. governor

Republican focuses on education

By Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Joy Corning, the Republican candidate for lieutenant governor and running mate of Gov. Terry Branstad, has a pro-choice stance on abortion while the governor describes himself as pro-life.

"People have different views," said Corning. "I don't see this topic as being a party issue."

The 1990 gubernatorial race is the first race in several terms to present voters the gubernatorial candidate and the lieutenant governor candidate as a team.

Brandstad said he did not choose Corning as his running mate based on her stand on abortion.

"I chose Joy Corning because we agree on the way we think the state should be run and because of her qualifications for the job," he said.

Corning said one program she advocates is local control of school systems.

"Parents, teachers and school boards know and monitor — better than anyone — what their children need," Corning said. "The state can set the guidelines, but it is up to the individual systems to implement them to fit the situations."

Democratic incumbent suggests state league to work for change

By Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Jo Ann Zimmerman, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, will be on the ticket with the Democratic gubernatorial challenger Don Avenson.

Zimmerman advocates the forming of a statewide alliance made up of educators, business people, laborers, parents and other community members. The alliance would work to alleviate communication problems and work for change in problem areas.

"Natural tension is generated when outside forces place pressure for change upon a system. The turf-owners often resist input because they believe they are doing the correct and best job," Zimmerman said. "This is true in education, business and labor — the forces which would play on the changes."

Zimmerman also takes a pro-choice stance on abortion.

"I do not believe we should restrict options in reproductive choices," she said. "The choice of what a woman does to become pregnant or to limit her pregnancies is a private decision of that woman."

She also said that public funding for abortions should not be limited. "Health care should not be limited to one's ability to pay; poor women should not be forced to continue an unwanted pregnancy any more than a rich woman," she said.

Zimmerman said she is not in favor of requiring parental consent for minors who seek abortions, as this would limit accessibility to abortion.

Zimmerman said the only restriction she might put on abortion would be limiting medical intervention inducing an abortion during the seventh or eighth month of pregnancy.

She also addressed the issue of sex education in schools.

"It is inconsistent that we allow students to opt out of health education classes because the units on human sexuality are disliked by some parents," she said. "The more we know about ourselves, the better we can prepare ourselves to remain healthy — this includes the use of contraceptives."

Zimmerman serves as the vice chairwoman of the Human Services Committee.

Auditor Johnson stands by achievements

By Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Richard Johnson, incumbent Republican candidate for state auditor, says people should "compare the qualifications" when they decide who to vote for in the election.

Johnson said during his term he has "assembled a staff, increasing the number of Certified Public Accountants on staff from three to 73."

"I implemented the use of computers to improve the quality and efficiency of audits," he said. "I participated in the Iowa Society of CPAs and jointly conducted a series of training courses on Iowa local government auditing."

Johnson has been state auditor since 1979 and was the first CPA to serve in the position. He was a member of Iowa Executive Council and State Appeal Board and a member of the Oversight Committee for the State of Iowa Comprehensive Annual Financial Report.

Dickerson: I'll tighten controls as auditor

By Jennifer Glynn
The Daily Iowan

Beverly Dickerson, Democratic candidate for state auditor, says that her 25 years' experience in a county position will enable her to effectively fill the post for the state of Iowa.

Tightening internal controls is one of Dickerson's objectives. She said this would "eliminate the theft of funds that has been going on for the past few years."

According to Dickerson, the auditor's office needs the addition of both city and school expertise to its staff.

"I would bring someone in who has worked with the school government for several years, and someone who has done a good deal of work with the city — either a mayor or a city clerk," said Dickerson.

Dickerson has served as county auditor in Warren County for 25 years. She has been president and treasurer of the Iowa State Association of County Auditors.

Violence rises in Soviet republics as Kremlin's authority falls

Guerrillas defend Armenia

By Bryan Brumley
The Associated Press

ERASKH, U.S.S.R. — Edik Badalian, a fatigue-clad guerrilla in the mountains of Armenia, raised his 1905 vintage carbine and squeezed off a shot at an imaginary invader from the neighboring Soviet republic of Azerbaijan.

"We usually carry hunting rifles. But we have what we need," said Badalian, who also wore a pistol. Members of his eight-man unit showed off a handmade mortar and rocket-propelled grenade launchers and said they had automatic weapons hidden in the hills.

"We station ourselves around farms and settlements to protect them against Azerbaijanis," said Badalian, who works as a construction engineer by day and patrols by night.

A few miles away, Soviet troops did sentry duty on the rugged border between Armenia and Azerbaijan, the scene of ethnic clashes for two years.

The sealed frontier between the two republics symbolizes the political violence that is rising in distant corners of the Soviet Union as the Kremlin's political authority falls.

Last week, two Armenian shepherds were killed on the border and Armenian guerrillas briefly took four Soviet soldiers hostage in retaliation for the detention of several local residents in the embattled enclave of Nagorno-Karabakh.

At least three separatists were killed Friday in ethnic strife in the southeastern republic of Moldavia.

In the Caucasian republic of Georgia, a politician was shot in the arm two days before balloting on Oct. 28.

Over the past 18 months, violence also has struck along the border between Uzbekistan and Kirgizia, the Fergana Valley of Uzbekistan.

Moldavia suffers ethnic unrest

By Alan Cooperman
The Associated Press

KISHINEV, U.S.S.R. — Moldavia's president appealed Sunday for an end to street demonstrations and urged his Parliament to reconsider laws that have stirred ethnic unrest and violence in the republic.

The speech by President Mircha Snegur marked the first time the ethnic Moldavian leadership accepted blame for separatist movements in the Turkish-Christian Gagauz region of southern Moldavia and in the predominantly Russian and Ukrainian Dniester area in the east, lawmakers said.

His speech came one day after a meeting in Moscow with President Mikhail Gorbachev in which Snegur and representatives of the separatist groups agreed to a moratorium on acts that led to the ethnic crisis in the republic of 4.3 million people on the Romanian border.

Details of the moratorium have not been worked out. Lawmakers said it probably would mean the Gagauz and Dniester regions would suspend their declarations of autonomy and planned elections.

In return, the republic's government would soften a language law that made Moldavian the national language and required people in dozens of jobs, ranging from doctors to hairdressers, to pass tests in Moldavian by 1995. The Moldavian republic is pressing its own campaign of autonomy in central authorities in Moscow.

The language law stirred resentment among Russian speakers and the Gagauz, who speak a Turkic language and are descendants of Christians who fled to Moldavia from persecution in Bulgaria.

Both the Gagauz and Dniester separatists claim discrimination by Moldavians, who themselves want independence from the Soviet Union. Moldavia borders Romania.

In Romania, thousands of demonstrators on Sunday demanded reunification with their ethnic kin in Moldavia.

About 2,000 Romanians marched to the Soviet Embassy in Bucharest, shouting "We want Bessarabia back!" Bessarabia is another name for Moldavia.

About 4,000 Romanians in the Transylvanian city of Sibiu, about 160 miles north of Bucharest, voiced similar demands.

Soviet soldiers moved into Moldavia 50 years ago under the pact by which Stalin and Hitler divided Eastern Europe into spheres of influence before the two dictators became World War II adversaries.

Scientists say global warming trend needs immediate action

The Associated Press

GENEVA — Scientists from about 100 countries said policymakers should take immediate action against global warming and that no nation has economic or technical problems that prevent it from contributing to the effort.

The panel of about 700 experts, meeting for a U.N. climate conference, unanimously said that over the past decade a "clear scientific consensus has emerged" on global warming expected to occur in the next century.

The report is intended to be used by policymakers. It set few targets, but environmentalists said its conclusions provide another spur for the United States to act.

Washington says more research is needed before targets can be agreed for cutting emissions of heat-trapping "greenhouse gases."

The conference report, finished late Saturday, will be forwarded to a landmark meeting of ministers in Geneva from today to Wednesday. Heads of government due to attend include prime ministers Margaret Thatcher of Britain and Michel Rocard of France. King Hussein of Jordan is also expected.

The ministers are due to give formal blessing to the launching of global negotiations on warming, scheduled for February.

Daniel Becker of the Washington-based Sierra Club said environmental groups welcomed the "very strong statement by the scientists," but that the draft ministerial declaration remained under a cloud.

Officials drafting the declaration Sunday remained locked in sharp differences of approach, mainly between Washington and the European Community, which urges quick action. The EC wants to stabilize carbon dioxide output at current levels by the year 2000 and a commitment to reductions after that.

The scientific panel included members from the United States and the Soviet Union, the two biggest contributors of man-made carbon dioxide.

The gas, much of which is released by burning fossil fuels, is believed to account for more than half of the heat-trapping "greenhouse effect" that causes global warming.

"Countries are urged to take immediate actions to control the risks of climate change with initial emphasis on actions that would be economically and socially beneficial for other reasons as well," the report said.

It said "technically feasible and cost-effective opportunities exist to reduce carbon dioxide emissions in all countries."

More research is needed but remaining uncertainties should not delay action, the report said.

The final version of the report said "many industrialized countries" can reduce their carbon dioxide output by at least 20 percent by 2005. Soviet scientists objected to an earlier draft that said "most" instead of "many."

Drawing on numerous published studies, the experts again outlined the climate upheaval that global warming could cause. These include flooding of vast coastal areas and islands as sea levels rise.

Apart from carbon dioxide, the report cites chlorofluorocarbons and methane as major greenhouse contributors.

President George Bush prepares to make a random phone call to Mary Johnson in Houston Sunday to encourage her to vote.

Bush phones for peace, votes

By Tom Raum
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — President Bush worked the telephones hard Sunday, calling British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, five Republican candidates around the country and a Houston woman whose name he picked from the phone book on a dare.

"You won't believe this, but this is the president of the United States," he told a woman he identified as Mary Johnson of Houston. "I'm just doing a little work at the polls, trying to get people out to vote."

Bush told the woman he hoped she would vote for Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams as well as for other Republicans.

"Will you?" he asked in apparent, albeit misplaced, delight at her response.

The woman told reporters later that she was a registered Democrat, had voted for Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis in 1988 and planned to

"You won't believe this, but this is the president of the United States. I'm just doing a little work at the polls."

George Bush

vote for Democratic Texas gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards.

"I just told him I was going to vote," Johnson told The Associated Press. "I didn't tell him who I was going to vote for."

Bush made the call as he spent a low-key day pursuing both diplomacy and politics by telephone in his adopted hometown, where he will vote on Tuesday.

In the morning, he phoned Thatcher for what White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said was a discussion of Persian Gulf strategy.

He also made pep talks by phone to separate rallies for two GOP candidates in Nebraska and one each in Utah, Maryland and Alaska.

But his most unusual call of the day came as he and Williams attended a GOP get-out-the-vote center, and Bush joined volunteers in manning a phone bank.

After calling a half-dozen voters from a list of Republicans given to him by party workers, a reporter suggested that Bush pick a number at random.

Bush grabbed the book, picking out a name and saying, "This may be tough. . . . This is risky."

"Needless to say, I'd appreciate it if you could vote for our full ticket," Bush told the woman. "I hate to call you on Sunday, but I was just out here believing in, participating in, the political process. I don't know if you're registered, but if you are I hope you'll go to the polls and I hope you'll vote for our ticket," he said.

He told the woman, "They dared me to open the book and just pick out a number, and you're up at the top of the page. . . . And so, thank you. I hope I didn't impose on your family."

Bush was less talkative when it came to reporters' questions.

"No questions today. It's Sunday. Been to church. . . . I can't do it. Too tired today," Bush said when reporters persisted.

"Dealing with a Congress completely controlled by Democrats is not an easy assignment," the president said in an audio linkup with a rally in Plattsmouth, Neb., for Republican Senate candidate Hal Daub.

Earlier, Bush took Williams to services at St. Martin's Episcopal Church with him on Sunday morning. He also planned to campaign for Williams in three Texas cities today: here, Tyler and Waco, Richards' hometown.

The president made short, upbeat remarks in a succession of afternoon phone calls to campaign workers at rallies across the nation

Republicans hope to avoid heavy losses in House race

By Jim Drinkard
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Republicans are spooked by recent negative polls for their House candidates and hope to capitalize on the unpopularity of Congress to avoid heavy losses on Tuesday.

"Praise the president, and bash the Democrat Congress," said Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, summarizing his party's message for the final days of the campaign.

"There is a ferocious anti-Congress hostility out there," said Vander Jagt, who is chairman of the House GOP campaign organization. "It's a prairie fire. And it doesn't take too much to shift (the feeling) from against Congress to against those who run Congress."

But party strategists concede that they will have a hard time fully recovering from the decline Republican candidates have suffered in recent polls.

Those losses have been based largely on a perception that the party, and President Bush in particular, sought to defend the wealthy against tax increases and then endorsed a package that imposes higher taxes on nearly everyone.

"You've got a big challenge if you want to overcome in 10 days what was three years of an opposite message," said Vander Jagt, R-Mich.

Bush has been on the hustings peddling the message that the spending cuts in his budget deal with Congress are his, and the new taxes belong solely to the Democrats. Whether that will sell with voters remains to be seen.

"That message, that the devil made me do it, just is not credible," said Larry Sabato, a political analyst at the University of Virginia.

Polls show that after a precipitous drop three weeks ago, Republican candidates have mostly regained their footing. But there continues to be slippage, particularly in the 29 races for seats where no incumbent is seeking re-election.

The open seats are where Democrats have their highest hopes for making gains.

Two are virtually certain to move to the Democratic column, and both represent comebacks for former House members. In Arkansas'

The party now holds a 258 to 175 majority in the House, with two vacancies. A 10-seat shift would give Democrats their largest House advantage in more than a decade.

But along with the Republicans' partial recovery have come two other phenomena: a day-to-day instability in poll numbers and a marked erosion of support for incumbents in both parties.

"The numbers are jumping all over the place," said one Republi-

2nd District, Ray Thornton is considered a shoo-in, and in Hawaii's 1st District, liberal Neil Abercrombie is expected to win.

The party is straining to hold on to previously Democratic open seats in Maine, Florida, New Jersey, Ohio and Texas. But it has a good shot at picking up Republican seats in Connecticut, Iowa, Idaho and Rhode Island.

Democratic gains in the polls have been particularly strong among senior citizens and women, leading analysts to conclude that the party's economic fairness message is bringing core Democrats home.

Sabato said the net pickup for Democrats may well be 10 or more seats, about twice the shift analysts in both parties had predicted around Labor Day. "There's a definite drift toward the Democrats," he said.

can operative, citing swings of 10 to 15 points for some candidates. "The charts look like a seismograph after an earthquake."

Vander Jagt has told Republican colleagues to keep their guard up if they won with less than 65 percent of the vote in 1988, or if they have an opponent this year who has raised more than $100,000.

Incumbents who are used to winning handily may be in for squeakers, and those without a cushion may lose, say analysts in both parties.

The Republicans considered most likely to lose are Oregon's Denny Smith, tainted by the savings-and-loan scandal, and Minnesota's Arlan Stangeland, hurt by ethics charges. Also on the endangered list are Charles Pashayan of Cali-

Senate campaign funding sets record

By Steven Komarow
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Senate candidates have spent more than ever for each vote this year even though there are only a handful of competitive races. And whatever they finally spend, they'd like to have had more.

"In this business, you never have enough money," said Rick Shelby, political director of the National Republican Senatorial Committee.

North Carolina's Senate race, one of the closest contests in the nation, also is shaping up as the most expensive.

Republican Sen. Jesse Helms had raised and spent nearly $11 million through Oct. 17, while Democrat Harvey Gantt had raised $5.8 million and spent most of it.

The financial ledgers were less lopsided in another tight Senate contest. GOP Sen. Mark Hatfield of Oregon, surprised by an unexpectedly strong challenge, raised and spent $1.3 million, while Democrat Harry Lonsdale took in $1.2 million and spent nearly as much.

According to the Federal Election Commission, Senate candidates spent $134 million through Oct. 17 and had $17 million left in the bank. And they were still raising money.

The figures are down slightly from 1988. But that doesn't take into account the fact that four of the 31 incumbents on Tuesday's ballot have no major party opposition. Nor does it factor in the relatively small voter population that candidates are addressing this year. If state voting-age population is taken into account, $1.33 per voter was spent through Oct. 17, compared with $1.04 in the similar period two years ago. The figures were developed by Common Cause, a group that supports public financing of elections.

In a few cases, incumbents had bankrolls for the final days before Tuesday's election that would be nearly impossible to unload.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, had more than $5.2 million left to spend defending his seat against underdog Democrat Hugh Parmer, who was practically broke.

But in most cases, there's always that new television spot, another mailing, another get-out-the-vote program to launch before time runs out.

Shelby called it the search for the "silver bullet" to put an opponent away forever. Without money, it can't be delivered.

Fortunately for Republicans, "most of the Democratic candidates are confronted with the self-same dilemma," he said.

Sen. John Breaux, D-La., chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, maintained the Republicans have no dilemma at all. Democrats have "a tremendous disadvantage financially," he said.

Federal data show Republicans with a big fund-raising edge in their national organizations.

However, the biggest imbalance is between incumbents of either party and their challengers.

Hawaii's neck-and-neck race is one of only two Senate contests on Tuesday's ballot in which challengers have raised more money than incumbents. Rep. Pat Saiki collected $1.7 million compared with $1.3 million for Democrat Daniel Akaka, who was appointed to the Senate earlier this year.

In Maine, underdog Democrat Neil Rolde just barely outraised GOP Sen. William Cohen — but only by investing $1.3 million of his own money.

Minnesota's Senate race has defied the odds — it's close in the polls despite lopsided campaign finances. GOP Sen. Rudy Boschwitz is in a tight race even though he had collected $5.6 million for his campaign, nearly seven times what had been raised by Democrat Paul Wellstone.

In most cases, incumbents appear to be using their money advantage effectively. Polls show all 31 incumbents seeking re-election leading in their races, with the possible exceptions of Akaka and Helms.

A 32nd incumbent, Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La., was re-elected in his state's unusual runoff system and is not on Tuesday's ballot.

While Gantt was being outspent by a 2-to-1 margin in North Carolina, he was relatively well-financed compared to many challengers.

In Delaware, incumbent Sen. Joseph Biden had a 10-1 money advantage over Republican Jane Brady.

making predictions.

"Definitely a Yogi Berra year, which is 'it isn't over till it's over,'" Democratic pollster Peter Hart said on Cable News Network's "Newsmaker" Sunday.

One thing was for certain: It was almost over.

At stake in Tuesday's balloting are 34 Senate seats, a new 435-member House and 36 governorships. More than 6,100 legislative races are on the ballot, and voters in 43 states and the District of Columbia will decide the fate of hundreds of ballot initiatives.

Adding spice to the mix was increased interest in the state legislative races. An estimated 19 House seats will move from northern and midwestern industrial states to the Sun Belt before 1992, and millions have been spent to maximize each party's strength in the state legislatures that will redraw the House district boundaries.

Florida's gubernatorial candidates campaigned on network television.

"We're saying no new taxes next year," said Republican Gov. Bob Martinez, appearing on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley." "And that's where Lawton Chiles says we need them."

Countered Chiles, the leader in one late pre-election poll, "Well, I think that I don't agree right now that you have to have new revenue."

Fresh polls pointed to a Republican trend in close races to pick governors in Kansas and Ohio, and even Massachusetts, where a survey showed William Weld in a tightening race with Democrat John Silber.

Minnesota Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, counted as among the GOP's endangered incumbents, held an apparently widening edge over Democrat Paul Wellstone according to a survey of voters in their state.

But a new survey in Texas suggested Democrat Ann Richards was gaining on Republican oilman Clayton Williams.

Bush spent the day in Houston, where he attended church with Williams and arranged to speak by phone to rallies in Alaska, Utah, Nebraska and Maryland.

"The election could be won or lost depending on who gets out to the polls," Bush said in an audio link with a rally for GOP Senate candidate Hal Daub in Nebraska. Daub is seeking to unseat Democratic Sen. James Exon, who leads in the polls.

"I need more support" from Congress, Bush said. His standard campaign message is that if Republicans could wrest control of Congress from Democrats "we would control the agenda — we wouldn't be playing on the defense."

After raising $85 million for Republican candidates in Tuesday's elections, the president's travel schedule has been curtailed in recent days. Some Republicans disagree with his decision to embrace higher taxes as part of a deficit-reduction agreement.

The politicians and the pundits made the rounds of the Sunday's network interview programs, generally agreeing that Democrats would retain control of the Senate and House and emerge from Tuesday's elections with more governorships than the Republicans.

But beyond there, there was little consensus.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri predicted on NBC's "Meet the Press" that Democrats would pick up six or seven House seats, and two or three in the Senate.

Flight delayed by passenger's note

CEDAR RAPIDS — A note written by a disturbed passenger delayed a United Airlines flight for two hours while the jet was evacuated so FBI agents and bomb-sniffing dogs could search the plane, officials said.

Thirty passengers were evacuated Friday from the Chicago-bound plane after the note was mistakenly interpreted as a bomb threat.

"It wasn't a threat," said Art Kollias, airport operations manager. "If anything, it was a misunderstanding."

Kollias said an elderly immigrant with a history of mental illness wrote the note to the flight crew to express a concern for his personal safety.

The note was written in broken English and included the word "sabotage," so the crew thought it was a threat, he said.

Authorities did not identify the man or release the full contents of the letter. The flight originated in Cedar Rapids.

The other 28 passengers flew to Chicago after the plane was checked, and no bombs were found. The passenger and his companion were questioned by the FBI and later released.

Eddie of 'Munsters' charged in robbery

CHICAGO — Patrick Allan Lilley, known as Butch Patrick when he played Eddie in the 1960s television series "The Munsters," was arrested on a charge of stealing $130 from a limousine driver, police said.

Lilley, 37, of Austin, Texas, was arrested Friday, police said. Police provided few details but said Lilley was a passenger with another man in the limousine and no weapons were involved.

"Lilley contends that the driver was less than cordial and he kept getting them lost," said Nicholas Kerkeles, who defended Lilley at his arraignment. "A fight began and Munster, er, Mr. Lilley, apparently took the wallet, claiming that the driver shouldn't have been paid in the first place."

The actor, who played the werewolf-like son of Herman and Lily Munster on the show, and John Patrick Sullivan, 33, of Chicago, were charged with robbery of the driver at a gasoline station in suburban Glen Ellyn.

Lilley was released on $1,000 bail. He told DuPage County Judge Bonnie Wheaton he makes a living attending conventions and making personal appearances as his former television character.

Marijuana magazine closing after decade

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Sinsemilla Tips, the magazine for marijuana growers, is going out of business after 10 years because of the nation's anti-drug climate, its publisher says.

"Drug hysteria and paranoia" in the United States led to circulation declines for the quarterly magazine, publisher Tom Alexander of Corvallis said recently. The last issue of the periodical named for a potent strain of pot will be released this month.

"Ten months ago, our circulation was 20,000," he said of the quarterly printed in Portland. "Now, it's 4,000."

Alexander's store in Corvallis, Full Moon, also was hit during a nationwide series of raids on stores alleged to be selling equipment used for marijuana cultivation.

First published in May 1980, Sinsemilla Tips was printed in Eugene until about 1986, then was printed in Portland. Labeling itself as a "domestic marijuana journal," the magazine featured a variety of marijuana-related news, features and advice columns, as well as analysis of drug issues.

The publication's circulation reached its peak of 20,000 in 1987 and maintained that level until last year, when the stepped-up government action against marijuana cultivation began to cut its magazine sales, he said.

Woodson said the restaurant's actions should be viewed as a response to Renander's public statements on homosexuality. He added that the human rights complaint against the restaurant is another attempt to gain publicity.

"Personally, I feel he is out to get attention any way he can," Woodson said. "He does a pretty good job of it."

Woodson said the restaurant will fight the complaint if it goes to court.

In at least two of these incidents, the suspect allegedly made physical contact with the victims, which Furhmeister said would be classified as a third-degree sexual abuse, a class C felony.

Since the initial six episodes, Furhmeister said he has also been notified about three more possible incidents in west-side residence halls, two in Quadrangle and one in Slater. However, no official reports about these three incidents have been made to the Department of Public Safety.

Hoogerwerf said she was notified of the incident by the Public Safety Department about 25 minutes after it reportedly occurred. But she added that she knew no details about the latest episode.

Hoogerwerf said she sent her staff on a "door-to-door campaign" Friday to notify residents that another incident had occurred, and to remind them to keep their doors locked at all times.

Burge residents had criticized officials earlier for not alerting them to the incidents as soon as they occurred.

"strong, swift" response should limit the political damage to his campaign.

Opponent Republican Jim Nussle said, "It's an unfortunate situation. I don't know if it's going to have an impact or not. We'll wait and see."

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said on Sunday that he had called for "an investigation of possible voter irregularities and fraud in Iowa" in letters to United States attorneys in Cedar Rapids and Des Moines.

The letters to Charles Larson and Gene Shepard said that the Hildebrandt incident had made him very concerned that it might not be an isolated case.

Hildebrandt admitted in a resignation letter to having registered his parents and sister to vote by absentee ballot in Linn County in the 2nd District.

D'Amboise: Art, life inseparable

The Daily Iowan

Jacques d'Amboise, the former star of the New York City Ballet who has come to be known as the "Pied Piper of Dance," will visit the UI Nov. 5 as a Distinguished Guest Artist. D'Amboise will share his conviction that "The Arts Set the Stage for Life" at 7:30 p.m. in Mabie Theatre of the UI Theatre Building.

His presentation is free and the public — particularly people who care about arts and education — is invited to attend.

It has been said that the job of a ballet dancer is to make the impossible seem effortless. As a principal dancer with the New York City Ballet, performing works created for him by George Balanchine, d'Amboise was a virtuoso in the arts of defying gravity and ignoring the limitations of the human anatomy. Since the end of his performing career d'Amboise has focused his energy and enthusiasm on an activity that might seem even more impossible in times of budget cuts and arts funding controversies: He has become an advocate for the importance of arts in education.

Jacques d'Amboise, former star of the New York City Ballet, will speak at the UI Theatre Building Monday, Nov. 5.

In 1974, while still with the New York City Ballet, d'Amboise founded the National Dance Institute, which has taught dance to thousands of underprivileged New York children, and he has become an international spokesman for the arts.

He argues that the arts play a crucial role in the growth and development of children and are at the core of an individual's lifelong learning process. "Art in education is incorrectly stated," he asserts. "Art is education! The arts and sciences are human beings' highest achievements. Reading, writing and arithmetic are tools that enable one to discover the arts and sciences.

"It is so important that young people have quality in their lives, not junk. If you give children junk, then they'll be junk and they'll give junk."

Now his influence extends worldwide, as he travels the globe to enrich lives with what he calls "the good stuff."

"An excellent definition of success: When there is no division between one's work and one's play, one is truly successful."

'Peter Pan' actress dead at 76

The Associated Press

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Mary Martin, the spunky actress who flew across the Broadway stage and the nation's television screens as Peter Pan, has died of cancer. She was 76.

Martin died Saturday at her Rancho Mirage home, near Palm Springs, publicist Richard Grant said Sunday. Grant represents Martin's son, actor Larry Hagman.

Martin, who captivated audiences with her ebullient personality and joyous singing in such musicals as "South Pacific," "The Sound of Music," "I Do! I Do!" and "One Touch of Venus," was one of the New York theater's leading ladies for more than 30 years.

"I'm going to spend the rest of my life missing her. There's nobody like her. She's a great lady and a great presence on the stage," said actress Carol Channing, who co-starred in Martin's last play, "Legends!" Channing visited with Martin hours before her death.

Martin is perhaps best remembered for her portrayal on stage and television of Peter Pan, the boy who never wanted to grow up.

"All my life, I wanted to be Peter Pan," Martin once said. "My poor mother never knew what I was going to do next. I don't think anything ever surprised my parents. I was always doing something strange — like at 5, jumping off the garage. I wanted to fly, and all I did was break my collarbone."

Martin, who was born Dec. 1, 1913, made her first stage appearance singing at a fireman's ball in her hometown of Weatherford, Texas. Her father was a lawyer and her mother a violin teacher.

After a year at the University of Texas, Martin married Benjamin Hagman in 1930. They divorced the following year after the birth of her son Larry, best known for his role as J.R. Ewing on television's "Dallas."

Martin left Texas to pursue a singing career in California and made her professional debut as a nightclub vocalist at the Trocadero in Hollywood. It was there she was seen by producer Charles Schwab, who put her in Cole Porter's "Leave It to Me."

The musical, which opened on Broadway in 1938, made the unknown performer a star. Each night she stopped the show by doing a coy striptease while singing the musical's best-known song, "My Heart Belongs to Daddy."

Martin journeyed to California for a series of less-than-memorable movie musicals and married story editor Richard Halliday in 1940. He later became her manager.

In 1943, Martin returned to New York to play the title character in "One Touch of Venus," a musical fantasy that had music by Kurt Weill and lyrics by Ogden Nash. In the show, Martin was a statue of Venus that comes to life. She charmed audiences by singing the show's big hit, "Speak Low."

After touring as Annie Oakley in the national company of "Annie Get Your Gun," Martin was chosen in 1949 by Joshua Logan, Rodgers and Hammerstein to star opposite Ezio Pinza in their musical "South Pacific."

As Nellie Forbush, the naive Army nurse from Little Rock, Ark., Martin sang some of Rodgers and Hammerstein's most buoyant and warm-hearted songs.

INTERESTED IN REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT?

Consider a career in planning. The Graduate Program in Urban & Regional Planning is a two-year master's degree program offering a specialization in regional development. The startling changes that have occurred in local, regional and national economies—the crisis in manufacturing, the entry of women into the labor force, the rise of the Sunbelt, the internationalization of the economy—are the focus of this area of planning. We examine the role of public policy in shaping the structure and performance of regional economies, and we look at a range of responses by non-governmental institutions, as well.

The Graduate Program in Urban and Regional Planning is sponsored a Visitor's Day for interested students on Tuesday, November 13. This is a special opportunity to learn about the field of planning in general, and the Iowa program in particular.

Gaza Strip curfews ordered

By Allyn Fisher
The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Troops wounded dozens of Palestinians Sunday and ordered curfews across the Gaza Strip. Government leaders dismissed as "one-sided" the U.N. call for international protection of Arabs under Israeli occupation.

Israel radio said 86 Palestinians were injured in widespread clashes following the death of a jailed Palestinian, while Arab reports said 70 were hurt. The army put the number at 27 and said it was checking the other figures.

A Foreign Ministry statement castigated U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar for his report Thursday in which he suggested broadening the mandate of U.N. institutions in Israel to safeguard the 1.7 million Palestinians under occupation.

The report was produced as a recommendation to the U.N. Security Council in response to the killing Oct. 8 of 20 Palestinians on Jerusalem's Temple Mount by Israeli authorities.

"The world community's continued preoccupation with this subject can only serve those forces who are interested in creating a link between the Arab-Israeli conflict and the gulf crisis," the statement said.

The statement assailed a proposal to convene the signatories of the Fourth Geneva Convention of 1949, which sets out rules for the treatment of civilians in wartime.

"Israel is disappointed at the one-sided approach exhibited in the report," it said. "The recommendations in the report are directed only toward Israel and do not see fit to call for a cessation of violence on the Palestinian side."

Israel has refused to accept a U.N. investigation into the Oct. 8 incident on Temple Mount, a site holy to both Jews and Muslims. Israel says the inquiry would undermine its sovereignty in Jerusalem.

Israel had conducted its own investigation and "extracted the necessary lessons," it said.

A government-appointed panel defended the action by police, saying they faced a threat to their lives. But it also said top officers failed to adequately supervise riot-control troops.

Under the panel's recommendation, the Cabinet set up a permanent seven-member ministerial committee to oversee Temple Mount affairs.

Police Minister Roni Milo upgraded Jerusalem to a full police district Sunday.

Pentagon may train former American enemies

By Ruth Sinai
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon may soon be training military officers from the very countries it once viewed as archenemies.

The administration is considering requests from members of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact — Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Romania — to participate in a program known as International Military Education and Training (IMET), officials say.

While the program probably would cost just several hundred thousand dollars, the symbolic value of such a project would be much higher.

"Who would have believed we would train officers from the very countries that we viewed as our enemies just last year?" said one Defense Department official.

The possible training project is just one of many options under consideration by the Bush administration to help countries that this year discarded more than four decades of communist rule.

"Money will be very tight and we're considering a range of things for Eastern Europe," said a Bush administration official, who, like the other official, asked not to be named. "IMET is one of the things that has been thought about."

"Who would have believed we would train officers from the very countries that we viewed as our enemies just last year?"

Defense Department official

That official said the decision on whether to include any East Europeans in the program would not be made until December, when the State Department puts together its budget request for the fiscal year that begins next Oct. 1.

The program is funded under the foreign aid bill and administered jointly with the Pentagon. The 1990 program totaled $47.2 million. The size of the individual country programs ranges from a low of $15,000, up to $3.38 million for Turkey.

There are more than 800,000 troops in the Warsaw Pact, not counting the Soviet Union. But the alliance is crumbling; it lost one of seven members this year when East Germany merged with West Germany, and Hungary is preparing to leave.

Pact members have planned a summit later this year to discuss the alliance's future, with plans to transform it to a political rather than military grouping.

Meanwhile, its members have begun reducing the size of their Soviet-armed and trained military to save money for the expensive and painful transition from a state-run economy to a free-market system.

The Soviet Union also is trying to save money. Its forces have begun pulling out of Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

There are no Soviet troops stationed in Romania and Bulgaria, and those in Poland and the former territory of East Germany eventually will be withdrawn now that Moscow has decided to bring all its troops home.

The way for cooperation with the United States was paved earlier this year when NATO leaders agreed to set up regular diplomatic contacts with members of the Warsaw Pact.

Since then, diplomats from Eastern Europe have received regular briefings at NATO headquarters in Brussels, mostly about the crisis in the Persian Gulf and about the Soviet Union.

NATO is debating how far to go in sharing information with the East Europeans as long as they are still allied militarily with Moscow. The East Europeans, eager for any contact with the West as they restructure their economies and social systems, want more.

"As we move away from the Warsaw Pact, it's clear we have to diversify our military ties," said one Hungarian official. He said groups of military historians, lawyers and sharpshooters from Hungary and the United States have paid visits to each others' countries.

In September, Poland and Czechoslovakia offered medical facilities for U.S. troops being deployed in Saudi Arabia. Romania offered the troops recreation facilities on the Black Sea, and Bulgaria said it would send troops.

Romania also has asked for U.S. advice on setting up a military chaplain's service — something that was outlawed under the atheist communist regime — and on revamping the military judge advocate's office, the officials said.

But the United States still has concerns about Romania's human rights record, especially after the government — made up of many former communist officials — used club-wielding factory workers to violently suppress anti-government protesters last June.

"Romania still has to correct its image," said one U.S. official. "They've taken some steps in the right direction."

India violence death toll reaches 325; Hindu leaders, officials fail to agree

By Vijay Joshi
The Associated Press

AYODHYA, India — Hindu leaders on Sunday suspended a campaign to seize a mosque after claiming to reach an accord with authorities, but officials said no concessions were made to end the dispute that has left at least 325 dead.

In New Delhi, meanwhile, moves to oust Prime Minister V.P. Singh grew while opponents worked for compromises to prevent new Parliament elections.

Despite the signs of calm in Ayodhya, about 300 miles southeast of New Delhi, violence linked to the mosque flared in neighboring nations. At least two Muslims were killed by a Hindu mob in Nepal, and security around Hindu temples in Pakistan was increased to prevent Muslim attacks.

The Hindu militants said they reached a deal with civil authorities to allow them to visit the disputed holy site on Wednesday.

Ashok Singhal, who was at the forefront of the Hindu assault on the mosque last week, called on thousands of pilgrims in Ayodhya to end the siege and hold a traditional Hindu fire ceremony to mark the end of a significant event.

Singhal said a prayer meeting would start today and conclude Wednesday with a visit to the 460-year-old mosque, which they claim was built atop the birthplace of the Hindu warrior god Rama.

But authorities said they had not yet decided to lift a curfew on Ayodhya that would let the prayer meeting go ahead.

Hindus seek to raze the mosque and erect a Hindu temple on the site.

"This government has forfeited both its moral and political right to continue even for a single day."

Lal Krishna Advani
right-wing Hindu leader

Council, said a public meeting would be held Nov. 11 in New Delhi to decide the future campaign for the temple project.

Sources said the fundamentalists had presented four demands for ending the standoff.

Among the requests is the lifting of a 10-day-old curfew in Ayodhya, allowing Hindu worshippers to visit the disputed shrine, and the release of Hindus arrested while attempting to start construction of the temple.

But sources indicated Hindu leaders were prepared to drop a demand for the suspension of officers who ordered police to open fire on rampaging mobs Tuesday and Friday. At least 22 people were killed in the two incidents, among at least 325 killed nationwide in the dispute.

About 4,000 Hindus from across the country have left Ayodhya in the past few days, ignoring pleas from their leaders to stay until the temple is built. An estimated 10,000 remain.

The dispute was touched off when the leader of a Hindu right-wing party, Lal Krishna Advani, was arrested Oct. 24 while leading a caravan to Ayodhya to help build the proposed temple.

Since the arrest, riots have spread across India and neighboring nations. It has also brought Singh's 11-month-old coalition government to the brink of collapse.

Singh, who faces a confidence vote Wednesday, lost his majority in Parliament when the pro-Hindu Bharatiya Janata Party withdrew support because of the Ayodhya dispute.

Hindus make up 82 percent of India's 880 million people, while Muslims compose 12 percent.

On Sunday, two ministers resigned from the government, raising to five the number in the 38-member Cabinet who deserted Singh in the last two weeks.

Meanwhile, two Singh opponents in his Janata Dal Party said they plan a meeting today with other dissident party members. They hope to dump Singh as party leader and prime minister in hopes of preserving the government and averting parliamentary elections.

But Advani, who was released Sunday, said new elections were the only way out of the political impasse.

"This government has forfeited both its moral and political right to continue even for a single day," he said.

In Nepal, two Muslims who allegedly defiled a Hindu temple were killed Saturday when Hindus stormed a house where they were being held to await authorities. Five people were injured in the incident in Harion, about 50 miles south of Katmandu, the Home Ministry said.

Muslims compose only 3 percent of Nepal's 16 million people. Ninety percent are Hindu.

In mainly Muslim Pakistan, police and army troops increased patrols around Hindu temples Sunday after several attacks.

Hawkeyes turn showdown into laughter

Iowa plays debutante in Illinois

Impatient with the red tape of due process and mad as Joe Don Baker, the Iowa Hawkeyes took matters into their own hands Saturday, walking tall into Memorial Stadium to dish out a little of their own axe-handle justice.

As Illinois waited for the NCAA to hand down a decision on a comprehensive investigation into its athletic program, the Hawkeyes roared into Champaign, pulled down the Illini's pants, turned them over their knee gave them a 54-28 spanking in front of 72,000 fans and a national television audience.

The process was relatively quick. By calling the fake field goal that put his Hawkeyes up 35-7 with 3:37 left in the first half, Iowa coach Hayden Fry effectively bit through the chicken's neck and let the blood run down his chin like a hungry jackal.

The Illini spent the rest of the game running around the field without a head, somehow amassing 21 more points before lying down limply to wait for the NCAA's more potent, but less poetic, justice.

The Hawkeyes have been trouble waiting to happen all season long, and it finally happened to the Illini.

From underdogs to mad dogs. From curiosity to kildoezer. From dancing sideshow freaks to horse-men of the apocalypse.

The only Hokey-Pokeying seen Saturday was the dancing Nick Bell did on unsuspecting Illini faces. Bell walked through the No. 1 defense in the Big Ten like it was so much rusty chicken wire, shucking the Illini's Lilliputian attempts at tackling like a cleated Gulliver.

Those tuning in to ABC's telecast during a Bell run may have thought they were watching a Godzilla movie and expected the army to come in a cut down the misunderstood behemoth. Illinois could've used the help. Before it was over, Bell had rolled up 168 yards, two touchdowns and enough nationally-televised video to make him a first-round draft pick.

Tony Stewart, Bell's fleet-footed sidekick, didn't have a bad day, either, grinding out 101 of his own yards on 22 carries.

Perhaps Ohio State will request that the Hawkeyes play without pads next Saturday, or at least spot them a touchdown, like they were kind enough to do for Cincinnati.

Quarterback Matt Rodgers directed the offensive onslaught, peering stoically from behind his black visor like the headman behind his deathmask, daring his fickle public to even mention anyone named Chuck. Rodgers came of age against Michigan, but Saturday was his coming out party.

Maybe Illinois should never have been ranked No. 5, maybe they got lucky against Colorado, but the fact is Iowa beat the Illini like they were Northwestern. And Northwestern they are not. After Saturday's coltillon, the Hawkeyes can officially walk with college football's bluebloods.

For Fry, the most patient man in Division I, the script couldn't have been any more satisfying. He kept his Hawkeyes under wraps while taking out the Michigan schools. He had his boys dance like hayseeds, milked his drawl and generally played the fool everyone took him for.

And just when it looked as if the Illini would finally dispose of the Iowa nuisance, he went for the jugular. Fry took out the trick plays — his exotics — he had seemingly forsaken after the 5-6 sleep of last season and put on a show worthy of Barnum and Peckinpah at the same time.

After Saturday's pyrotechnics, there will be no more hiding for the Hawkeyes. But after Saturday, it seems the Hawkeyes want it that way.

Rose Bowl looked more like a clinic on offensive football than a showdown of league powers.

And the Hawkeyes were the ones putting on the clinic, as they ran for 335 yards and passed for 205 in a 54-28 thrashing of the Illini in Champaign, Ill.

Iowa moved the ball virtually at will, scoring on their first five possessions and racking up 540 yards of total offense, against a defense previously ranked first in the Big Ten and 15th nationally.

AFC races tighten, NFC gapes

The Associated Press

The AFC Central and West races tightened Sunday as division leaders Cincinnati and the Los Angeles Raiders stumbled offensively, scoring only a touchdown apiece.

The Kansas City Chiefs (5-3) pulled within a game of the Raiders (6-2) Sunday behind three field goals by Nick Lowery and an aggressive defense that used bad weather to its advantage.

"The weather conditions were such that we dropped some passes that we normally would have caught," Raiders coach Art Shell said. "Nobody could open up the offense."

Craig Heyward and Rueben Mayes each rushed for 100 yards as the New Orleans Saints spoiled Cincinnati's long-awaited homecoming with a 21-7 victory.

The Saints (3-5) simply overpowered the Bengals' defense — statistically the second-worst in the NFL — while running them out of their first home game in six weeks. The loss dropped the Bengals into a tie for first in the AFC Central.

49ers 24, Packers 20

Joe Montana rallied San Francisco from a 10-0 deficit with three touchdown passes and the unbeaten 49ers held on to beat Green Bay for the 16th straight victory over two seasons.

The 49ers (8-0) won their 14th straight regular-season road game. Their last loss was a 21-17 setback to the Packers last November at Candlestick Park.

Steelers 21, Falcons 9

Pittsburgh pulled into a tie with Cincinnati as Bubby Brister threw second-half touchdown passes to Louis Lipps and Mike Mularkey.

The Steelers, shut out for a half by the NFL's worst-rated defense, took advantage of three Chris Miller-thrown interceptions to beat Atlanta.

Iowa running back Nick Bell (43) runs past a group of Illinois defenders during the Hawkeyes' 54-28 rout against the Illini. Bell scored two touchdowns and rushed for 168 yards.

"That was just unbelievable," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "I would never in my wildest dreams thought that our offense could go against a great defensive team like Illinois with all those great people returning from last year and the success they'd had so far. We just chopped them up."

The victory gave the Hawkeyes a 5-0 league record for the first time since 1958 and a one-game lead over Illinois and Minnesota in the Big Ten standings.

The Big Ten champion will face No. 7 Washington in the Rose Bowl. The Huskies clinched the Pac-10 conference's automatic bid with a 54-10 victory over Arizona

Saturday.
Iowa, 7-1 overall, would receive the Big Ten's automatic invitation to the Rose Bowl with wins in its final three games against Ohio State, Purdue and Minnesota.

Two victories by Iowa and a loss by Minnesota would also send the Hawkeyes to Pasadena. Minnesota faces Michigan State at home Saturday and Michigan on the road Nov. 17 before hosting the Hawkeyes in the final week of league play.

"This was a big win," Fry said. "It puts us a game and a half out in front... It's a long ways from being over but right now we're in good position."

Saturday's game featured a confrontation between the Hawkeyes' offense, ranked first in the Big Ten, and an Illinois defensive unit anchored by standouts Moe Gardner, Mel Agee and Darrik Brownlow.

But after the game, it was the Iowa offensive line that received most of the attention. Lineman Greg Aegerter, Rob Baxley, Scott Davis, Mike Devlin and Ted Velicer continually forced the Illini several yards off the line of scrimmage and opened wide holes for the running backs.

Blood, sweat and tears.
That was about the only way to describe Saturday's field hockey showdown between No. 1 Northwestern and No. 8 Iowa at the Hawkeye Field Hockey Field.

When all was said and done, the Hawkeyes had come away with a 3-2 overtime victory and a share of the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference Championship.

Hawkeye forward Kris Fillat put home a rebound 2:17 into the 10 minute extra session, past Wildcat freshman goalie Shannon Small, to give Iowa the victory.

F. Hockey

The win raised Iowa's record to 17-3, 9-1 in the MCFHC, while the Wildcats fell from the nation's top spot with a 15-2-1, 9-1 mark. Because of Northwestern's 1-0 win over Iowa on Oct. 13 and Iowa's win on Saturday, the two teams will share the MCFHC crown.

Following the game, a coin flip took place to determine who would receive the automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament. Northwestern won the toss, but it hardly mattered after the final whistle had sounded.

"I really think that from the start of the whistle, everyone just played their hearts out," sophomore Kristy Gleason said. "You pull together and you win as a team and I think that's what we displayed today."

The raucous crowd of 485, easily Iowa's largest this year, had barely gotten into their seats when the Wildcats threatened to make a quick impression upon the Hawkeyes.

In the game's opening minute, Iowa goalie Andrea Wieland was

Fry conjures solid offense and exotics

The Daily Iowan

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Iowa football coach Hayden Fry thought the only way his team could beat Illinois would be using "exotic" plays.

He was wrong. It only took solid, near-error-free football for Fry's squad to win. But he used the plays anyway.

A halfback pass in the first quarter. A fake field goal in the second. And the 13th-ranked Hawkeyes gave No. 5 Illinois a 54-28 spanking.

"We just had so many beautiful plays on offense. All of them were somewhat of a gamble," Fry said. "But I told the team before the game, 'Hey, men, we're going to let it all hang out. We're going for it 'cause it's the only chance we've got against a team like Illinois.' And they responded."

"Coach Fry called a great game from the sidelines and that's the key to the game," Hawkeye reserve quarterback Jim Hartlieb said. "If you're going to get the right plays in there, we're going to execute them."

"To beat the good team, you've got to have something out of the ordinary. And I think today we showed that we do have something out of the ordinary, and we know how to execute it."

Iowa was already up 7-0 with about 4:20 left in the first quarter when quarterback Matt Rodgers pitched the ball to running back Tony Stewart who threw it to receiver Danan Hughes in the end zone.

The play was a success, giving the Hawkeyes a 14-point cushion. But it was also a chance to show that Iowa has a versatile offense.

"All year we haven't been able to really come out and show that different stuff," Hughes said. "I'm glad we were able to come out and execute. You can't be one-dimensional."

"We knew Illinois had a great defense, (and) we hadn't gotten much respect in our offense," Hartlieb said. "But we believed in See Hawkeyes, Page 2B

Miami won its fifth consecutive game, using its ball-control offense and the NFL's top-ranked defense to rout Phoenix.

The winning streak is the Dolphins' longest in five years, and their 7-1 record at the halfway point is their best since 1984, the last time Miami reached the Super Bowl.

NFL

Washington's comeback from a 21-point deficit against Detroit. The field goal followed a 12-play drive from the Redskins 10 to the Detroit 17.

Jets 24, Cowboys 9

Rookie Terance Mathis tied an NFL record with a 98-yard punt return, sparking New York over Dallas.

The Jets (4-5) also benefitted from two personal fouls by the Cowboys (3-6) in winning consecutive games for the first time this season.

Chargers 31, Seahawks 14

Nate Lewis returned a punt 63 yards for a touchdown and Les Miller fell on Dave Krieg's fumble in the end zone as San Diego broke open a close game with a 17-point third quarter against Seattle.

defensive stars," Velicer said of his teammates on the line. "We did. We have faith in the offensive line that we can go out there and dominate anybody."

The run-blocking of Iowa's front line allowed tailbacks Nick Bell and Tony Stewart to ramble for 168 and 101 yards, respectively. Bell had 145 yards at halftime as the Hawkeyes rushed for 221 yards in the first half.

Stewart's rushing total allowed him to move into second place on Iowa's all-time career rushing list. He now has 2,345 yards, trailing only Owen Gill's 2,545-yard career total.

"I think that really set the tone of the game for them," Illini coach John Mackovic said. "They came in and I'm sure they had a feeling in their own mind that they were going to run the ball, run it right at us and see if we could hold up and we did not. And because of that, it gave them great confidence throughout the day."

The offensive line also provided protection for quarterback Matt Rodgers, who was not sacked in the game. The Iowa signal-caller continued a stretch of accurate passing with 11 completions in 16 attempts for 188 yards and two TDs.

In the last three games, Rodgers has completed 48 of 65 passes, a 74 percent completion rate, with no interceptions.

When it was all over, the Hawkeyes had scored 54 points, including seven TDs, against a defense that had allowed 15.3 points per game. The Illini had allowed only one touchdown in the last 15 quarters entering the contest.

The Hawkeyes put a quick end to that streak. Fry's team, which leads the Big Ten in turnover ratio, kicked off to the Illini to start the game but got the ball back when linebacker John Derby recovered a fumble by Illinois tailback Wagner Lester on the second play from scrimmage.

Bell then took Rodgers' first hand-off and rumbled 44 yards down the Iowa sideline. He shook off several Illini defenders before cornerback Henry Jones finally pushed him out of bounds at the Illinois 7.

Three plays later, Rodgers found a wide-open Mike Saunders in the back of the end zone to give the Hawkeyes a 7-0 lead.

The Hawkeyes got the ball back again two minutes later and started a methodical 13-play, 64-yard drive capped by a 13-yard halfback option pass from Stewart to Danan Hughes for a TD.

Bell carried the ball six times for 39 yards on the drive and Stewart added 16 yards on three carries as the Hawkeyes ran on 11 of the 13 plays.

After pinning the Illini on their own 5 on the next possession, the Hawkeyes took the punt at the Illinois 43 and Bell ran it in from there. The 6-foot-3, 255-pounder had carries of two and 15 yards before a 26-yard dash that gave the Hawkeyes a 20-0 lead.

Bell also scored Iowa's fourth TD, a one-yard plunge that capped an 11-play, 67-yard drive. Stewart ran for 34 yards on four carries to set up the score.

Down 28-0, the Illini finally abandoned a running attack that mustered only 15 yards in the first half and 16 yards overall. Coach John Mackovic turned to a no-huddle offense and all-out passing attack led by quarterback Jason Verduzco.

Verduzco led the Illini on a nine-play, 71-yard scoring drive capped by a 20-yard TD pass to split end

Shawn Wax, who finished the day with 136 receiving yards.

The quarterback finished with a career-high 358 yards passing and four TDs. He completed 32 of 52 passes.

"You really have to give Verduzco and those guys credit," Fry said. "He just got teakettled time after time. I'd love to have that little rascal on my football team. He's an inspiration."

But he did little more than keep the final score respectable and keep the Hawkeyes' first unit on the field. Iowa led 35-14 at halftime, and the closest Illini came to the Hawkeyes in the second half was 44-21 early in the fourth quarter.

The Hawkeyes snuffed any rally hopes when Rodgers hit Sean Smith on a 45-yard completion to the Iowa 1. Rodgers' quarterback sneak and the PAT gave the Hawkeyes a 51-21 cushion with 10:44 remaining in the game.

"That was a great win for us," Fry said. "I don't know if you people understand what that means to the state of Iowa and the University of Iowa to win on national television, our third big upset in a row on the road ... it's just gratifying."

ourselves and that's all that counts. And today it showed on the field."

According to Hughes, the play was also something that he and Stewart, who are good friends, have been working on for some time.

"Tony and I have been talking about it for a long time, hoping that we'd get it in the game one day," said the sophomore receiver. "Tony and I are the best of friends, and I'm glad to be able to do something on national TV with him."

"Danan and I are ace buddies, my best friend," said Stewart, who is from Union, N.J. "He's from the East Coast, from Bayonne (N.J.), he was brought up around my way.

He's a great athlete. I have the most respect for Danan and it felt great for me to throw the ball to him for a touchdown."

Fry added the second wrinkle, the fake field goal, with 3:37 left in the first half.

Iowa kicker Jeff Skillett was attempting a 31-yard field goal, when Hartlieb, who was the holder, picked up the ball and threw it to reserve tight end Matt Whitaker in the end zone.

According to Hartlieb, the Illini had been rushing in hard on extra points, leaving some of the Iowa players open deeper. That led Fry to try the fake.

"Coach Fry just called us to the sidelines and said, 'Let's see if they're going to rush it the same way,'" Hartlieb said. "I just had confidence in his call. Jeff Skillett made a good fake, and I spun around and saw three guys converging on our guy in the flat, Paul Kujawa. That left Whitaker open in the end zone."

"I just tried to put it in a spot where nobody else could deflect it. It took a while for it to come down, but he finally caught it."

"Sending two guys out on the pass route with one guy back, it would be awful hard for them to cover both of them," Skillett said. "It worked out perfect. Jimmy threw a nice ball out there and Whitaker made a nice catch."

While fake field goals aren't uncommon, Mackovic said the half-back pass took them by surprise.

"We try to work on a number of those things but you never know when you can use them," Mackovic said. "Certainly they caught us off-guard with the halfback pass down on the goal line. They came out quickly in motion and we were checking from one side to the other."

"The fake field goal is something we work on as a regular basis. I'm not sure whose man it was but someone just let him run right down the field."

"Against a team like this, it was hard to call," Skillett said. "You always have to have those kinds of plays in your arsenal because you never know what's going to work. And today it worked for us."

Ohio State rolls, Minnesota stays close

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Raymont Harris scored twice and Kent Graham came off the bench to throw a pair of touchdown passes as Ohio State defeated Northwestern 48-7 Saturday and send the Wildcats to their 19th straight losing season.

Ohio State, which improved to 5-2-1 overall and 3-1-1 in the Big Ten, won its third game in a row. Northwestern is 2-6 and 1-4 with three games remaining.

Big Ten

Robert Smith rushed for 128 yards on 23 attempts for the Buckeyes, who built a 27-7 lead at the half. Quarterback Greg Frey hit 7 of 10 pass attempts for 100 yards and a touchdown before leaving the game in the third quarter after being hit hard on a sack. Graham came on to complete 5 of 6 attempts for 88 yards and touchdowns of 36 yards to Brian Stablein and 17 yards to Bobby Olive.

The Buckeyes scored on their first six possessions for a 34-7 lead midway through third quarter. Harris caught a 10-yard scoring pass from Frey and added a 1-yard touchdown run. Smith scored on a 1-yard run and Tim Williams added field goals of 26 and 35 yards.

Northwestern's Len Williams completed 7 of 14 pass attempts for 58 yards and one touchdown. Bob Christian led the Wildcats with 52 yards rushing on 13 carries.

The Buckeyes have scored 142 points in victories over Purdue, Minnesota and Northwestern the last three weeks.

The Wildcats have lost their last 12 road games.

No. 20 Michigan 38, Purdue 13
WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue coach Fred Akers and Michigan's Gary Moeller both had a special feeling about Saturday's Big Ten game.

Allen Jefferson scored three touchdowns on short runs, but it was the special teams that took the spotlight as No. 20 Michigan beat Purdue 38-13.

"We've always said and every coach you tell you, you can't overemphasize the importance of special teams," said Moeller, after Dwayne Ware scored once on a blocked punt and recovered a fumble to set up another Michigan score.

Moeller also liked the role of his punting and kickoff units in handing Purdue its sixth consecutive loss.

"They're a good (punt) blocking team," he said. "The fact that we didn't get one blocked kind of gets unnoticed. They (Purdue) put a lot of pressure on you."

"Mistakes in the kicking game in the first half usually are disastrous. Those really were," said Akers after his team dropped to 1-7 overall and 0-5 in the Big Ten.

Michigan St. 45, Indiana 20
EAST LANSING, Mich. — Michigan State tailback Hyland Hickson charged for three second-half touchdowns Saturday as the Spartans overcame a shaky first half for a 45-20 Big Ten win over Indiana.

Fellow tailback Tico Duckett notched one score during the rally as Michigan State mounted a ground attack that tore holes in the Indiana defense. Duckett rushed for 150 yards and Hickson ended with 170.

Michigan State quarterback Dan Enos added two short touchdown runs as Indiana repeatedly fumbled the ball away.

The victory lifted Michigan State's record to 4-3-1 overall and 3-2 in the Big Ten, and kept alive Spartan hopes for a bowl bid. Indiana dropped to 4-3-1 overall and 1-3-1 in the conference.

Minnesota 21, Wisconsin 3
MADISON, Wis. — Tailback Mark Smith ran for two touchdowns and Chuck Rios scored a third Saturday as Minnesota held Wisconsin to 36 yards rushing and beat the Badgers 21-3 to keep its Big Ten championship hopes alive.

Smith, a freshman, rushed for 73 yards on 20 carries and scored on runs of four yards in the first quarter and 16 yards in the final period.

Minnesota, now 5-3 and 4-1 in the Big Ten, limited Wisconsin to 14 yards rushing in the first half in taking a 14-0 lead in the 100th meeting between two of college football's oldest rivals. The Golden Gophers lead the series 55-37-8.

Wisconsin, in its first season under Barry Alvarez, falls to 1-7 and 0-5 in the Big Ten.

Hawkeyes gear up for UCLA tournament

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

According to Iowa women's golf coach Diane Thomason, finishing in the upper half of a tournament field is usually a goal for her team.

W. Golf

But this week's UCLA Invitational is hardly a "usual" tournament. "Usually, I say that I would like to finish in the top half," Thomason said, "but most of the teams in the tournament have been ranked in the top 20 or 25 (in the preseason polls). We could have a good team and still finish last."

Panfil makes name for herself at NY marathon

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — For someone who doesn't speak English, Wanda Panfil is conquering the English-speaking world rather quickly. In April, she won the London Marathon, and on Sunday she won her first New York City Marathon. Panfil took the lead shortly after nine miles and held off a challenge from Kim Martin for a five-second victory in a time of 2 hours, 30 minutes, 45 seconds. "She was thinking win all the way," said Mauricio Gonzalez, Panfil's husband and translator. Panfil, who speaks Polish and Spanish, finished second last year in the London Marathon and sixth in the Chicago Marathon. This year, in addition to winning at London, she won the Nagoya Marathon in Japan and the 10,000 meters at the Goodwill Games. But the 72-degree temperature bothered her on Sunday and almost cost her the race. "Never has she run before in so hot weather, and this is the first time she's drinking water in a race," said Gonzalez, who translated from Spanish to English. "And because of this, she felt some pain in her stomach." During the late stages of the race, Panfil clutched at the right side of her body and appeared to be tiring. She looked over her shoulder every once in a while to see what was going on behind her. "She never knew who was the runner behind her," Gonzalez said. "She was thinking only the win." She said she was heartened by support from Polish fans in the Greenpoint section of Brooklyn and by Mexican fans later along the course. There was some confusion among race organizers over her nationality. She was born in Tomazow, Poland, but computer printouts listed her as Mexican. What nationality was she, someone wanted to know? "She will always be Polish," Gonzalez said.

In that event, senior Stacey Arnold won her third consecutive tournament with a three-round score of 225. The UCLA tournament will provide the toughest test for Arnold since the NCAA Women's Golf Championship last May. The Glen Ellyn, Ill., native finished 73rd in the national tournament, good for honorable mention all-American status, and will see some of the same players this week. Arnold said she expects a better showing against those players this time. "I feel more confident about where I'm at this year," Arnold said. "I feel I can play with them at the same level." According to Thomason, the play of both seniors will be crucial this week. Senior Shirley Trier shot a 230 to finish as the runnerup at the Iowa Invitational. "I'm confident in Stacey," Thomason said. "I'm looking for her to have a good tournament. I also expect Shirley to play well considering how she finished at the Iowa tournament." The key to the tournament, Thomason said, will be the performance of the rest of her lineup. Junior Becky Fugelstad and freshmen Stacy Boville, Mary Jo Rollins and Jodee Albaugh have been inconsistent during the fall season. "We want to get a team effort," Thomason said. "That's what I'm looking for. It will be a good experience for them because the competition will be at a higher level than they've seen so far."

Iowa beats Utah, BYU and altitude

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

Whenever anyone talks about traveling to Central America, they are told not to drink the water. Unfortunately, you can't exactly tell people traveling to Utah not to breathe the air. And that was the situation that the Iowa women's swimming and diving team was in last weekend.

Women's Swimming

"Some (swimmers) seemed to be affected by it — some were not," coach Peter Kennedy said. "It took some time to get used to the higher altitude but most of the kids adjusted and swam really well. If you go out too fast, you can die," Kennedy said. "You'd be fine for about 60 yards or so but eventually you run out of steam. We had to be careful not to come out too fast in such a different altitude." No matter the circumstances of the atmosphere, the Hawkeyes traveled to Provo, Utah, Friday to compete in the Brigham Young Invitational. Amassing 829 teams points over the two-day event, Iowa was never really threatened as they defeated BYU, who finished second with 719 points, and the University of Utah, who came in third with 348 points. Out of those team scores, Iowa also captured the dual meet titles from both teams, 159-135 over BYU and 174-114 over Utah, improving their dual meet record to 3-1-1 on the season. "This was a real team effort, especially in the second day of the invitational," Kennedy said. "After the first meet on Friday we were only winning by 29 points, so the team really came together. Overall, this was a real good weekend with real fast swims. I was very pleased." Sophomore Chrissy Eck captured her specialty events — the 100 and 200 breaststrokes with times of 1:08.05 and 2:26.07, as well as the 400 individual medley in 4:36.61. Eck was also on the winning 400 medley relay team at 4:05.00 with teammates Laura Borgelt, Pam Capin and Colleen Thome. Her 60 points was the overall highest individual score in the meet. "I think that I didn't do my best times," Eck said. "I just wanted to concentrate on my returns and pull-outs and swim really well. I believe the team came together and swam tough — not to mention we had a lot of fun. This was a really good meet for us." Shelley Miyamoto extended her early-season grip on the 100 and 200 freestyle events, winning both with times of 53.89 and 1:55.17, respectively. She was also a member of the third-place 200 freestyle relay team which recorded a time of 1:42.25, and took second in the 500 freestyle. Sprinter Colleen Thome and junior freestyler Pam Capin also had impressive weekends, Thome winning the 50 freestyle in 24.68, and Capin taking the 100 butterfly title and placing third in the 200 freestyle. Thome also swam on the winning 200 freestyle relay team with a time of 1:40.07. Allison Pennington again finished second to Eck in both the 100 and 200 breaststroke events, and Jenny Treado took the 1000 freestyle race in 10:48.09 and placed third in the 500 freestyle. "Both Brigham Young and Utah had good teams, particularly BYU," Kennedy said, "but Utah especially lacked the depth necessary to win."

Hawkeye swimmers live up to high billing

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

The men's swimming and diving team lived up to early-season expectations this weekend in the Big Ten relays, defeating Michigan events they entered.

"I was really pleased with the entire team's overall performance," said coach Glenn Patton. "I was both surprised and pleased with the freshmen swimmers. They did an excellent job in their first real meet of the year." Six team members swam on several winning relays, including Mike Johnson, Eric Kirch and Matt Smith, who were involved in four races. Tom Beer, Dan Stoppenhagen and Rob Leyshon also swam in winning relays. "Mike Johnson and Rob Leyshon both had outstanding relay performances," said assistant coach Rich Draper.

Men's Swimming

UI's premier jazz band plays at Clapp tonight

The Daily Iowan

Johnson County Landmark, the top jazz big band in the UI School of Music, will present a concert at 8 tonight in Clapp Recital Hall.

Johnson County Landmark (JCL) is directed by Steve Grismore, and the Nov. 5 concert will feature guest percussionist Jim Dreier on congas. The concert will be opened by the Mitch Towne Trio, one of the many small jazz ensembles in the School of Music.

The concert will feature several big band styles and will include arrangements of tunes by jazz greats Duke Ellington, Joe Henderson and Charles Mingus. Some of the arrangements on the concert were done by UI students in the jazz program.

Johnson County Landmark has been playing big band jazz at the UI since the 1960s. The group has traveled in the United States and Europe, picking up awards at jazz festivals on both sides of the Atlantic. It was judged the outstanding big band at the Notre Dame Collegiate Jazz Festival, the most important American festival for college bands, four times.

Steve Grismore, who holds a bachelor's degree in composition and a master's degree in music theory from the UI School of Music, is a well-known jazz teacher and guitarist. He taught at Southeast Iowa Community College and Coe College, where he was also an artist in residence, and he teaches private lessons and small group classes through Kirkwood Community College.

He has performed with many jazz bands and rhythm-and-blues groups in the area, and currently leads his own group, the Steve Grismore Trio, and plays guitar with the Happy House jazz quintet, Orquesta de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maiz and the Tom Davis Quintet.

Tonight's Johnson County Landmark performance is free.

That Grammar Guy

By Jake Stigers
The Daily Iowan

Gentle Communicators, Today's column is an addendum to the list of proper pronunciation published last week by fellow DI columnist David Crawford.

Espresso is pronounced the way it is spelled. It has no x. If you have mispronounced it in the past, don't be embarrassed; many food critics, restaurateurs and other self-proclaimed epicures say "expresso" with alarming regularity. In my humble opinion, though, espresso — along with café au lait, cappuccino and other coffee mutations — are vile liquids and should be left out of the language entirely.

Forté, in reference to loud, forceful music, is pronounced for-tay. Something in which a person excels is pronounced, simply, fort, although some dictionaries list for-tay as the second pronunciation.

Mastectomy has more than one t. It is pronounced the way it is spelled.

Often is not pronounced the way it is spelled. Dictionaries rarely list a pronunciation with a t. Say off-en and you will enjoy a life free of angry stares from and cruel torment by educated strangers.

Picture and pitcher are simple to pronounce. The confusion they cause is unfortunate. The vessel of beer you order at a bar is called a pitch-er. The artwork on the wall is called a pick-cher. A baseball thrower who walked every batter for eight straight seasons is called a pitch-er, albeit one whose roster of fans probably comprises followers of rival teams.

Prostate and prostrate are also very simple to pronounce correctly. The gland found in male mammals is pronounced pras-tate. The word describing being close to the ground or lying flat is pronounced pras-trate.

Spayed is the past tense of spay — to excise the ovaries of a female animal. Spayed has one syllable. Never say your pet has been spaded unless she really has been cut with a sturdy digging tool with a heavy, flat iron blade that can be pressed into the ground with the foot. By the way, anybody can be castrated or neutered; only females can be spayed.

Until next time, happy communicating.

Brando's tribulations continue

The Associated Press

PAPEETE, French Polynesia — Actor Marlon Brando's daughter has returned to consciousness from a coma caused by a drug overdose, which her father insists was not a suicide attempt.

A Brando family spokesman, who demanded anonymity, said Cheyenne Brando came out of the coma Saturday but was suffering serious stomach disorders from the tranquilizers and anti-depressants she ingested Thursday.

Brando may fly to the island from Los Angeles in the next few days, depending on the status of the murder trial of Cheyenne's half-brother, Christian Brando.

Christian Brando, 32, is charged with murder in the shooting death of Miss Brando's Tahitian lover, Dag Drollet. He was scheduled to go on trial Monday, but jury selection has been delayed.

Miss Brando left the United States a month after Drollet was slain and gave birth to their child in Tahiti.

The French weekly newspaper Le Journal du Dimanche quoted the 66-year-old actor in its Sunday editions as saying his daughter did not intend to kill herself with the drug overdose.

Steve and I were walking by a copy store today.

There was a 'help wanted' sign in the window, and Steve said he should apply.

We went in to get an application and I decided to fill one out, too.

I wrote down my experience at McDonald's and the book store, but couldn't remember the exact dates I worked there.

The Associated Press

Who's No. 1?
Not Virginia. The top-ranked Cavaliers lost for the first time this season Saturday when a last-second field goal gave visiting No. 16 Georgia Tech a 41-38 victory.

"We were in the national limelight, but with something like this, we're probably just another team again," Virginia safety Keith McMeans said.

Probably Notre Dame. But the second-ranked Irish needed to struggle against unheralded Navy, finally breaking away from a half-time tie to win 52-31.

"This is one of the lowest spots in my career," Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz pout-mouthed. "You can't be a great football team if you can't play great defense."

Not Nebraska. The third-ranked Cornhuskers, playing their first rated opponent of the year, gave up four touchdowns in the fourth quarter and lost at home to No. 9 Colorado 27-12.

Not Auburn, either. The fourth-ranked Tigers, in their worst loss in 40 years, got crunched by No. 15 Florida 48-7.

Certainly not Illinois. The fifth-ranked Illini got spanked 54-28 at home by No. 13 Iowa.

Maybe the best team is Houston—but the sixth-ranked Cougars are on probation and cannot go to a bowl game. Houston, behind seven touchdown passes from David Klingler, won 56-35 even though Texas Christian reserve Matt Vogler passed for an NCAA record 690 yards.

No. 7 Washington 54, Arizona 10

Beno Bryant scored on a 70-yard punt return and a 73-yard run as Washington clinched its first trip to the Rose Bowl since 1981. Mark Brunell passed for two touchdowns and ran for another and Greg Lewis rushed for 100 yards for the ninth time this season.

The Huskies (8-1, 6-0 in the Pac-10) earned the trip to Pasadena when Oregon beat UCLA. Arizona is 6-3.

No. 8 Miami 45, Pittsburgh 0

Craig Erickson passed for 355 yards and two touchdowns and Miami gave Pittsburgh its worst shutout loss since 1968.

The Hurricanes played a Big East team for the first time since joining the league last month.

No. 10 Brigham Young 54, Air Force 7

Ty Detmer passed for 397 yards and connected with Andy Boyce for three touchdowns as Air Force won despite winter conditions at Air Force.

Detmer extended his NCAA record of 300-yard consecutive passing games to 20 and tied Steve Young's record of 22 consecutive 200-plus games. Detmer, a Texas native, had never played in a snowstorm, and the game-time temperature was 27 with a wind-chill factor of zero.

No. 11 Tennessee 41, Temple 20

Roland Poles bulled for three

touchdowns, Tony Thompson ran for 120 yards and two scores and Andy Kelley passed for 264 yards as Tennessee pulled away from Temple.

The Volunteers (5-1-2) led 14-0 midway through the first quarter and drove 96 yards, capped by Poles' short run, for a 21-3 lead in the second period. Quarterback Matt Baker rallied Temple (4-4) within 27-13 before being injured early in the third quarter.

No. 12 Florida State 41, South Carolina 10

Amp Lee ran for touchdowns on Florida State's first possession in the first, second and third quarters as the Seminoles won at South Carolina.

Florida State (6-2) has won six straight against South Carolina (4-4) since 1984, outscoring the Gamecocks by a total of 236-62. Sean Jackson ran for 115 yards for Florida State, while the Seminoles sacked quarterback Bobby Fuller seven times and intercepted two passes.

No. 14 Texas 41, Texas Tech 22

Lance Gunn and Boone Powell returned interceptions for touchdowns in the fourth quarter and Texas won at Texas Tech.

Texas (6-1, 4-0 in the Southwest Conference), which leads the league in defense, held Tech (2-7) to 41 rushing yards and also blocked a field goal attempt.

No. 17 Mississippi 19, LSU 10

Randy Baldwin ran for 89 yards and three touchdowns as Mississippi stayed on top of the Southeastern Conference in its bid for its first Sugar Bowl bid since 1969.

Mississippi (8-1, 4-1 SEC) is tied for the league lead with Florida, which is on probation and cannot win the league title.

No. 18 Clemson, North Carolina 3

Dexter Davis scored on a 17-yard interception return as Clemson, ranked first in the nation in defense, shut down North Carolina. The only TD the Tigers have allowed at home in five games this season came on a kickoff return.

Clemson (8-2) beat the Tar Heels (5-3-1) for the fifth straight time.

Colorado State 17, No. 19 Wyoming 8

Eric Tippeconic returned an interception 37 yards for a touchdown and Robert Christian got three sacks and a safety as Colorado State saddled Wyoming with its first loss of the season.

The Rams (6-3) also blocked a field-goal try and stopped Wyoming (9-1) by recovering a fumble in the end zone.

No. 21 Southern California 31, California 31

Southern Cal held on for a tie at home when California's Robbie Keen was short on a 43-yard field goal try as time ran out.

No. 22 Oregon 28, UCLA 24

Bill Musgrave threw a 16-yard touchdown pass to Vince Ferry with 2:01 remaining and Oregon beat UCLA for the first time at Autzen Stadium. The Ducks finished with their first unbeaten home season since the stadium was built in 1967.

Oregon (7-2) fell behind in the opening minutes and trailed until their final score. Tommy Maddox threw three touchdown passes for the Bruins (4-5).

No. 24 Penn State 31, West Virginia 19

At West Virginia, Penn State (6-2) beat the Mountaineers (3-5) for the 23rd time in 25 games.

Darren Perry intercepted Greg Jones' pass on the second play from scrimmage and returned it 30 yards for a touchdown to put the Nittany Lions ahead.

No. 25 Louisville 41, Cincinnati 16

Anthony Cummings caught a school-record five touchdown passes and Louisville celebrated its first national ranking in 18 years by winning at Cincinnati. Cummings surpassed the team record of three TD catches set by Mark Clayton in 1982. The Division I record is six touchdowns grabs by Tim Delaney for San Diego State in 1969.
