Apartment building nears completion

By Dale Wegner

After two months of negotiations between the tenants of the Robert and Patricia Winter Apartment Building, aamicable compromise was reached on the use of the roof. The building is near completion, and there is hope that it will open for occupancy soon.

The Winter Apartment Building, located at 123 Main Street, was originally scheduled to be completed by June 1989, but it was delayed due to unforeseen circumstances. The tenants, who have been living in temporary housing, are eager to move into their new home.

According to Robert Winter, the developer of the building, the delay was due to the need for additional funding. The building is expected to be completed in the next few weeks.

Aquino vows to crush mutineers

By Chris Traynor

Manila, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino vowed to crush mutineers in the South Philippines Area, saying that she was ready to use every resource of the government to deal with the crisis.

"The mutineers are a threat to the stability of the government," Aquino said. "We will not allow them to disrupt our efforts to establish peace and order." Aquino said that she had already ordered the military to prepare for any contingency.

Aquino also said that she would be increased the number of police and military personnel in the area to ensure that the peace process continues.

LSAT revised again; Law school dean not pleased

By Will Pepper

The Law School Admission Test (LSAT), a test used by law schools to evaluate applicants, has been revised again, this time by the Law School Admission Council, an organization that administers the test.

The new version of the LSAT, which is expected to be used in 1990, will include a new section on legal reasoning. The test is used by law schools to evaluate applicants, and the new section is intended to assess a candidate's ability to reason about legal principles.

The Law School Admission Council said that the new section was designed to assess a candidate's ability to think critically about legal issues, and that it was intended to be a fair and objective measure of a candidate's ability to reason about legal principles.

The new version of the LSAT is expected to be administered in 1990, and the Law School Admission Council said that it would be used by law schools to evaluate applicants starting in 1991.
Acquittal doesn't close book on pornography

The Associated Press

The acquittal of a Des Moines television newscaster and the manager of an adult bookstore in Des Moines on July 21 in the case of United States v. Pournoury has cast a cloud over the legal implications of the sale of pornographic materials in the state of Iowa. The case has now gone to the state's Supreme Court for review.

According to Marion County's District Attorney, Mark Queen, the prosecution in the case was prompted by the issuance of a new obscenity law. The law was enacted by the Iowa Legislature in 1981 and made it a crime to distribute or display sexually explicit material without a license from the state.

Queen said that the case was brought against Pournoury, who prosecutes cases against business owners who violate the new obscenity law. Queen also noted that the case has been closed and the prosecution has no plans to bring charges against another adult bookstore in the county.

"The state has already reached a resolution in the case," Queen said.

The case is significant because it is the first time the state has taken a case to trial on the issue of obscenity. The state's Supreme Court has not yet decided whether to hear the case.

Queen said that the case has been ongoing since 1981, when the state's District Attorney's office began investigating the business. The case has been delayed several times due to the state's legal system and the lack of a trial date.

The case is being heard by a jury of six men and six women from Marion County. The jury began hearing evidence on July 21 and is expected to reach a decision by the end of the month.

"We are confident that the state has presented a strong case against Pournoury," Queen said.

The end of the case is expected to bring some relief to the state's legal system, which has been under criticism for its handling of the case.

Queen said that the case has been ongoing for too long and that the state needs to take action to resolve the matter.

"We need to take action to ensure that our legal system is functioning properly," Queen said.

Queen said that the state has been waiting for a decision for too long and that the case has been a burden on the state's legal system.

Chicano association gathering for annual meeting

By Raul Gonzalez
Special to The Daily

Hispanics from all over the Midwest and from Iowa will converge on Iowa City this weekend in the Midwest Chicano/Latino Conference, sponsored by the Chicano Studies Program at the University of Iowa. The conference will be held Tuesday, October 9 through Friday, October 11.

The conference theme this year is "ECONOMIC EXPERTISE IN THE MIDWEST," and it will feature workshops on higher education, political activism, and Chicano/Latino culture. The conference will be held at the Iowa Memorial Union and is open to everyone, regardless of race or ethnicity.

The conference will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day, with keynote presentations at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. The conference will also include a panel discussion on the impact of the Chicano movement on local communities.

The conference will conclude with a banquet on Saturday, October 12, at 6 p.m. The banquet will feature keynote speakers and a dance, and tickets can be purchased at the conference website.

The conference is sponsored by the Chicano Studies Program at the University of Iowa, the Iowa City Public Library, and the Iowa City Community College. For more information, please visit the conference website.
Conferece to study Iowa, Third World ties

By Wendy Atchison

The question of Iowa's role in the post-Cold War era is one that is currently being explored by a group of students and faculty members at the University of Iowa. The group, led by Professor Thomas Tisdale, is working to answer the question of how Iowa can contribute to the world beyond the Cold War era.

Tisdale's speech, "The Lost Decade: Iowa's Role in Third World Development," will focus on the role of the United States in Third World development. Tisdale will discuss the impact of the Cold War on Third World development and the role of Iowa in this process.

"Iowa has played a significant role in Third World development," Tisdale said. "The state has a strong history of assistance to the Third World, and we need to continue this tradition in the post-Cold War era."
Bush jubilant over tentative accord with Soviets to cut non-nuclear arms

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Thursday hailed a tentative accord, signed by the Soviet Union, with the United States that would sharply reduce the size of their ground forces and could eventually lead to a mutual agreement to remove all non-nuclear weapons from Europe.

The agreement followed months of intensive negotiations and was signed by the leaders of the two countries at a summit meeting in Paris last week.

By the end of 1990, each country would agree to reduce their forces to about 10,000 tanks, 600,000 soldiers and 4,000 vehicles in Europe, according to a statement issued by the Reagan administration.

The agreement also includes a provision that the two sides will work toward the eventual elimination of all non-nuclear weapons from Europe.

In exchange, the United States would agree to reduce its conventional forces in Europe to about 10,000 soldiers, 300,000 vehicles and 2,000 helicopters.

The agreement would also allow for the joint use of certain bases and facilities by the two nations.

Governor reviews gas hikes

Friday, he will reject any extension of the temporary financing legislation that is due to expire soon on a major issue facing the Hispanic community. The deadline comes as the Bush administration seeks to persuade Congress to pass a temporary funding bill to keep the government running through March.

In a statement released Friday night, the administration pleaded with Congress to act now to prevent a potential government shutdown. The administration has vowed to continue working to resolve the funding issue, saying it will not accept a partial funding solution.

"While the government is open, we will continue to work towards a comprehensive solution," the administration said.

The administration has been pressing Congress to pass a temporary funding bill to avoid a government shutdown. The administration has said it will not accept a temporary funding bill that does not provide funding for all government operations.

The administration has also said it will not accept a temporary funding bill that does not provide funding for all government operations beyond March.

The administration has been warning that a government shutdown could have serious consequences for the American people, including the loss of critical services and the potential closure of federal agencies.

The administration has been pushing Congress to pass a permanent budget deal to avoid a government shutdown.

The administration has also been pushing Congress to pass a measure to prevent the Supreme Court from considering cases that may be resolved in the meantime.

H e can have many names: the one we tend to use most often, however, is your mother. And for those of your parents' generation, that might mean: “I will never stand up my child in a red school bus like my mom did to me,” you may have said to yourself. Or, “I’ll never tell you,” I told you not to.”

But the issue of parents even in a "healthy" relationship, goes beyond clothes. "I think our generation, my generation, and your generation," says Peter Sparling, UI faculty member, "are thirsting for new answers and new knowledge. Which industry? That is the question we have to be ready to answer," Sparling says. "What is to become of our training? We're known for both. What is the commercial arts about? Bring it on, bring it on. And please do it now!"

Parents’ influence analyzed in dance

By Beth Corning
The Daily Iowan

A nyone who has worked in entertainment, MVTV or the latest "Twin Peaks" is aware that initiation is becoming increasingly popular. But for Beth Corning, a UI School of the Arts Chairwoman of Dance, the recent trend is not just another throwback to the '60s. "This is the next generation of the Broadway musical. You could say it is the musical wave of the world," Corning says.

The Quay, twice from Philadelphia, who live and work together in Sweden, have been guests choreographers at the school. "We've had a very interesting experience and I think that the students have enjoyed working with them," says Corning. They are most interested in the quasidocumentary world of animation. "It is our sense the Quay brothers are looking at animation in a new way," Corning says. "Most people have a preconceived notion of animation, but this is more like an art form."

"There are a lot of differences between animation and real life," Corning says. "I think it is important for the students to learn where they are going with this new form of dance," she says. "It's a dance form, it's not just images. There's a lot of movement."

Corning is searching for a stable independence, which deals with the political, the personal, the professional. "I think that the animation is something that is very important," she says. "I think that it is going to become a very important part of our culture."

"It is the same detached fascination and a deal of sympathy," Corning says. "It is to the single still dreaming hair of the woman, who is pregnant with an unquenchable desire for something new, something better."

Symposium scans modern art trends

By Lindsey Alan Park

As the academic year begins, and the fall season is upon us, the Department of Art and Art History at the University of Iowa will host a symposium that will be of interest to enthusiasts of modernist art. The symposium, titled "The Quest for Empowerment: Artistic Discourse to a Postmodern Era," will be held on October 6th and 7th. The theme of the symposium is "The British pop revolution: 1959-60," and it will focus on the role of art and artistic movements in the context of the political, social, and cultural revolution that occurred in Great Britain in the late 1950s.

The symposium will feature a number of speakers, including Andreas Kramer, who will discuss the British pop art movement and its influence on modernist art. Other speakers will include Ul's John Ciofalo, who will speak about the role of art in the political revolution of the 1960s, and Ul's Stephanie Munster, who will present a paper on the British graphic portrait and its role in the postmodern era.

The symposium will be held in the Cameo Auditorium at 2 p.m. on Saturday, October 6th, and will be followed by a reception at the UI's Union. Attendees may choose between their own area of expertise, faculty, students, and staff. The symposium is open to the public, and tickets can be purchased at the UI's Union for $12.50 for UI students and $20 for non-UI students.ählt die Idadeub

DRUG LEGALIZATION RALLY
Wrong approach

It doesn't require a genius to realize that effective language and a tendency to become distorted by airbrushed narratives. These two factors are not mutually exclusive. Their yes-men are, however, the components of too many drug prohibition protests. Unfortunately, the marijuana legalization rally in Iowa this week was no exception.

Proponents of marijuana legalization and their advisers use a narrative that can be summed up briefly. It goes something like this: The transfer of Capitol Hill. A grassroots movement, the number of poor and blacks given the death penalty. They cite black market violence, the introduction of a prisoner as a counter-ideology, and the progression of the legalization alternative toward the table of prohibition protests. Unfortunately, the marijuana legalization arguments always deserve better.

Iowans The arguments for legalization of marijuana is usually published by N.O.R.M. L., is usually based on ideological approaches, and is usually written by Iowan. It's a fact that has often been brought to the attention of the next local legalization organizer. It's a fact that proves one thing: You aren't a scholar, a lawyer, or you wouldn't ask foolish questions.

The university as a discourse community is much like a political movement. The organizers of the next local legalization appeal to the same arguments: the same slogans, the same figures. And of those who have a few too many, there is a chance that they may be taken advantage of.

Rwandan forces stop rebels

By Richard Caufield

CONCORD, N.H. — David Souter said Thursday that some were skeptical of the prospects for a diplomatic solution to the conflict in Rwanda and that the possibility of a cease-fire was "extremely remote." But he said of the other justices, "they have believed for some time that, if anything, the situation has been improving." He called on the U.S. 11th Circuit Court of Appeals, which is located in Atlanta, to take the case.

"Some day — I may have to do it with a paper bag over my head — I'm going to do some of those touristy things," said Souter, who is sort of there to make one of the first orders of business.

The diplomat said from Rwanda's capital, Kigali, Wednesday and Thursday near Paris, that some prospects over the weekend. Tourists were some things I have come at the show were "tough, brutal, somber images," he said. "The pictures were from the gallery could be an important photographer and that the work." Will Miami haunt or help Iowa?

Iowa lose to Miami in coral. For the fourth straight season, the Hawkeyes looked as if they might lose.

And they did.

"It's like a coach. We have to be just as prepared, if not more so, against Miami as we are against any other opponent," said Belinda Brown, Iowa's head coach.

The game ended in a tie.

"I don't know how it happened," said Brown. "We had the ball rolling on the field for a few minutes, but it just didn't work out.

The Michigan State series has been the closest of all," Pry said. "The level of intensity at which they play and the way Michigan State's defense is applied is what I really respect. We haven't defeated them in the Pry era, and they haven't defeated us up there. As a defensive coordinator, we try to figure out the way to stop the offenses."

The problem stems from the fact that Michigan State has never been able to put together a solid offensive line in recent years.

Nelson says Iowa getting it together

By Brian Gaul

The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeye volleyball team, which Nelson is slowly shaping into a 2009 NCAAourney squad, finds itself in the midst of an overall 13-match winning streak to Iowa City after winning the Bradley (Ill.) Invitational last weekend. The team has lost just one set in the last 37 games.

Junior Anna Doo, a middle blocker, hitting a team-high .571 with 2.3 kills and a .219 hitting percentage, said the team can get better as the season progresses.

"The last three weeks we just went against Illinois and Purdue," Nelson said. "We're not fully prepared for these matches, but we will be.

Volleyball

Nelson guided the Hawkeyes to their first NCAA tournament appearance and a 23-10 overall record last season. The 2009 season will be just a "long training session" and "a game that we're not going to expect to win," Nelson said. "There's some unfinished business that we want to take care of.

"We played with a lot of intensity," Nelson said. "There will be a lot more good games and a lot more work to do. We have a lot of things to worry about. We have to start taking the necessary steps to improve.

The Hawkeyes are taking a break before competing in the Big Ten Challenge today against Michigan and Nebraska.

"The team is so ready now that we can play our best matches," Nelson said. "There is no one team that we are scared of."

The Daily Iowan

After a weekend of holding back, the No. 14-ranked Iowa women's cross-country team should be ready to go all out Saturday against Marquette in the Iowa Open, right?

We're not to take a break (from Big Ten play)," Nelson said. "It's important to see new faces and play different opponents. We want to see who the good servers and hitters are. Tourney just know each other better.

"The priority of replacement is good for us because we need to get stability in the lineup," Nelson said.

Junior Dixie Schenkbeck and Nicole Drobnicki are two new faces in the lineup, allowing Nelson and the Hawkeyes to make some changes.

"We're a better team with Dixie and Nicole," Nelson said. "They add people step up at middle blocker." The Hawkeyes have six seniors in 2009, which is a lot for Nelson and the Hawkeyes.

"We're a better team with stuff of all colors," Nelson said. "They are people who can step up at middle blocker.

Iowa face tough task at Ball State

By David Taylor

The Iowa men's tennis team will travel to Muncie, Ind., today to face Ball State in the first of nine matches scheduled for this weekend in the midwest.

The Hawkeyes face the second ranked team in the conference in the form of the Talons. Ball State has had the upper hand over Iowa in recent years.

Aside from Iowa and host Ball State, the other matches in the conference this weekend will be hosted by Purdue and Wisconsin. Iowa will be close, along with Wisconsin.

M.Tennis

Michigan, Muncie, of Ohio, and nationally-ranked Kentucky.

"The team has been very consistent," said head coach Don Sizemore. "The team has been very consistent, and that's good."

Sizemore said the team has been in a slump lately, and that they have been struggling to find consistency.

The loss of leading singles player Brian Gaul this season has taken a toll on the team, but Sizemore said the team is still playing well.

"We're playing well, we're just not playing well enough," said Sizemore. "We're playing well, we're just not playing well enough."

NFL scoring leader finds trouble again

The Associated Press

San Diego Chargers running back Derrick Fenner, who was expected to carry the ground game for the Chargers this season, reportedly suffered a season-ending injury in a practice on Thursday.

Fenner was supposed to be the lead back for the Chargers, but he was ruled out with a soft tissue injury to the knee. The injury is reportedly season-ending.

The Chargers are scheduled to open the season at home against the Arizona Cardinals on September 7.

Expos believe Raines ready to be replaced

The Montreal Expos believe that shortstop Tim Raines is ready to be replaced in the lineup.

"I think he's ready to go," said Expos manager Jimy Williams. "It's time for a change."

Raines, who has been on the disabled list for the past few weeks, has been cleared to play by the team's medical staff. The Expos believe that Raines is ready to play in the lineup.

The Expos are looking for a new shortstop to replace Raines, and they have several options available.

The Expos believe that Raines is ready to go, and they are ready to make the change.
