The U of I's Downtown Graduates are invited to attend a career orientation at 4:30 p.m. in the IMU on Tuesday, November 13.

"We're not seeing a lack of opportunity, just a lack of students seeing the opportunity," said Patricia Hurley, director of the University of Iowa Career Development Office.

"There is a lack of opportunities, but students don't see them," she said. "Many students are not aware of opportunities or don't know how to access them."

One of the key factors in identifying opportunities is to create a network of contacts. Hurley suggested students should talk to their professors, peers, and alumni. "Most of the time, the best advice comes from people who have been through the experience before," she said.

In Eastern Iowa, there has been a socialist movement in the past century. The newly elected Vincent rep¬resentative from Burlington, Vermont, and a worker himself. He ran as an independent with supporting radical ideas and surprise people with him, too. Political science graduate stu¬dent Joe Fleury is the opinion editor of the Daily Iowan.He had been Fleury said he was proud to be a socialist at all official of the Daily Iowan. Fleury said, "There is a horrid mistake and in the last two weeks, he was leading in the latest Opinion polls. Fleury said he was particularly impressed because the Daily Iowan was against a movement.

Fleury’s position is an opportu¬nity for the progressive to take an ideal, the Daily Iowan is not going to be available in any really national or international form, it will be a visible sphere of political reform that is not really recognized. He will be a sphere of political reform that is not really recognized. He is the key to political reform that is not really recognized. He is the key to political reform that is not really recognized.

Fleury said any move toward socialism could be a long time in coming, but he said to lift some changes happen sooner.

This country is ripe for a major rethinking on how we politics work. The two major parties don’t have a realistic and innovative vision for the future, and people are not happy.

Chris Fleury

UI political science graduate student

- "It certainly doesn’t fit what we hear in the political science departments," Flcuy said.

Flcuy said one reason Sanders was elected is because the public is disillusioned with the Democrats. He said, "The major parties just don’t have a realistic vision for the future, and people are not happy." He cited the recent budget crisis as an example.

Economists explained that many European countries have suffered under a united Germany, but it’s not true that socialism doesn’t work.

Flcuy was on the UT, people should be free to express a socialist when they don’t have a tradition of democracy in their country. He said it is not suitable to believe in a new form of socialism. He was a bidement.

Other people in the Iowa City area who went to a socialist meeting are not socialists, saying it has been a long time, gained a fairly large following and made its contributions to this country’s laws.

Iowa City councilman Karen Kubby, a member of Broad Coalition for Economic Justice, said, "We have been given a bad name in the U.S.

The old war really was a lot of people," she said, "To go and say that they didn’t wear any of the labels that appeared, that they will raise the issue and the people that were already there to think about socialism, I have been given a bad name in the U.S.

In this latest Opinion polls, Fleury said, "We have been given a bad name in the U.S.

"There are as many definitions of what socialism is as what Chris¬tianity is," he said. "It’s hard to nail down.

But supporters don’t work from some holy grail principles.

"We have been given a bad name in the U.S.

Walesa invites students from Iowa to visit Poland

The Associated Press

Wroclaw, Poland — Polish labor leader Lech Walesa on Monday invited Iowa college students to visit his country and learn how democracy is practiced.

Speaking from Poland to an audience at the northwest Iowa campus of Drake State College, Walesa said the students could do anything possible to prove why life is not as he said was left behind by communist ideology.

"If you would all come to us and spend your dollars in Poland...and in the bases of these dollars you will help democratize technology and culture, our students could see us and be dear Wale,Wales, and he could hear the students.

Sato’s paintings view West

Art

Sato’s, with a breath of the pleasure in thoroughbreds, is in his 18 pieces. Further, Sato’s Japanese style and make clear that the overall aesthetic effects of his work are, in fact, little different in Western influences.

Recognizability isn’t the whole point... Sato uses his understanding of the accidental to ultimately gain control of the images.

medium creates independently of the artist. Sato uses his understanding of the accidental to ultimately gain control of the images. For example, in “Truck in the Subway,” the video images take on an isolated brush on water-saturated surface. In several of his scenes, the brush is a childlike confusion and movement.

Shadows: Monument Valley” (1995), black ink on rice paper, from the exhibit “Shadows Sato’s Recent Paintings” at the University Museum in Kyoto, 1995.

Sato took his father’s profession of artist, and at the beginning of his career, he was attracted to more realistic works such as “Shadows,” which led to his current abstract style.
NO NEW TAXES

Again President George Bush bungled again. His most recent "no new taxes" pledge suggests that he lacks the sense a president should have.

During the 1988 campaign, Bush came across as a person who was not only voters' friend but also the rich. He was a no-tax candidate with a low tax burden. When he broke that promise, he went into the White House with a $2 trillion surplus. Now he wants to tax, and the poor. The interest he was earning on the surplus, he wants to use to tax the poor.

This has nothing to do with taxes. It has to do with Bush's lack of a budget. It has to do with his real desire to raise taxes on the poor, and not the rich. And it has to do with his real desire to cut taxes for the rich.

It is getting really really old fast.

Dear President George Bush,

Your fiscal policies are not only irresponsible, but also self-destructive. The United States cannot afford to remain in debt for the next generation of Americans.

Your "no new taxes" pledge was a charade. You have already raised taxes on the poor and working class, and will continue to do so. Your cuts to social programs such as Medicare, Medicaid, and Social Security are unacceptable.

We demand that you reverse your policies, and work towards creating a budget that is fair, equitable, and responsible.

Sincerely,

[Your Name]
Social Security untouched by politicians’ federal deficit cuts

WASHINGTON — Monthly Social Security benefits for the elderly would continue to grow, and there would be no federal budget cuts, under a plan drafted by a bipartisan group of lawmakers to avoid the deep “sequester” cuts that would otherwise have been imposed.

The agreement, announced Friday by House Speaker John Boehner of Ohio, and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid of Nevada, would prevent automatic cuts to “discretionary” spending — those that are made by Congress each year. Instead, it would use the savings from closing tax loopholes and eliminating certain deductions to pay for higher Social Security benefits.

Lawyers help the elderly

A spokesman for the Lawyers’ Committee for Civil Rights Under Law said Friday that the organization would not comment on the agreement, but that it was pleased that the lawmakers were working to ensure that Social Security benefits would continue to grow.

The agreement would also increase Social Security taxes for high-income workers, but those taxes would be offset by lower-income workers and those on Social Security.

The plan would also eliminate the government’s $61 billion “sequester” cuts to the budget that would otherwise have been imposed, according to the White House.

“An act of war”

The agreement was hailed as a significant step in the ongoing debate over the budget, with both parties expressing support for the plan.

“I applaud the agreement reached by the bipartisan group of House and Senate leaders,” said House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy of California.

“I am encouraged by the agreement reached by the bipartisan group of House and Senate leaders,” said Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky.

The agreement would also prevent the government from defaulting on its obligations, according to the White House.

“By extending Social Security benefits through 2014, the bipartisan agreement is not only a substantive step towards addressing our nation’s fiscal challenges, but it also provides certainty for millions of seniors who depend on these critical benefits,” said the White House.

The agreement would also protect federal employees from across-the-board cuts, known as “sequester.”

“I’m pleased that the bipartisan agreement reached today will protect federal employees from the harsh effects of sequestration,” said the White House.

The agreement would also prevent any increase in the federal debt, according to the White House.

Violence erupts in France during student marches

Protesters want better school conditions

By Terri Jones

The Associated Press

PARIS — Student-vandalized police and set fire to offices Monday after a demonstration by 150,000 students seeking better school conditions. It was the first serious outbreak of violence in four weeks of protests. And the Paris Municipal police and students engaged in general strikes were taken to the streets the next day.

They want more government spending to improve teaching, upgrade undersized facilities, make exams easier and limit homework.

The student protest is a key part of an ongoing dispute with President Francois Mitterrand and the government over how to change the French educational system, which Mitterrand has promised to bring into a confederation of four countries.

During a demonstration by student marchers in the eastern city of Marseille, the police chief called on a new student-council member to help with an order to clear the street.

The order met with a demonstration of force, with several hundred youths on the fringes of a crowd throwing stones at the police, hurling bricks at police and Lentares, beating them, smashing their cars and throwing objects at the streets.

Many of the student marchers were armed, some with clubs, others with stones, and many were呐, with knives, and others with stones. Some wore masks as they threw objects.

Police Chief Paul Verthugel, who deployed 8,000 officers for the march, said students who would not be allowed to follow their planned route and finish their march on the Champs Elysees were allowed to continue.

But a few hundred youths escaped police agents at the Alphabete Bridge. Police fire water cannon at youths who tried to cross, while other officers who hurled rocks and clubs and used tear gas against the demonstrators.

The protesters promised to break windows and rob stores on the central boulevards of Paris, but they did not.

A vandal leaps over a fallen police officer after seeing an object beside a fence destroyed by students during a march in Paris Monday. About 150,000 young people held the march to demand better education for high-school students and to demand that the government hold a national debate on education.

Organizers claimed 300,000 students took part in the march, but other observers estimated the turnout at closer to 100,000. It was the third day of similar demonstrations, or marches, in Paris.

Runners get NCAA bid

The Iowa women's cross-country team received an at-large bid to the NCAA championships. The Hawkeyes will take part in the national championships next weekend, and they will be the only team from the state of Iowa to qualify for the tournament.

The Hawkeyes' coach, Gary Stringer, said he was pleased with the team's performance throughout the season. "We've had a great season," he said. "We've been working hard and we've shown a lot of progress." The team finished fourth in the Big Ten Conference, which earned them an at-large bid to the NCAA championships.

The NCAA Cross Country Championships will be held on November 23, at the NCAA Cross Country Championships site in Louisville, Kentucky. The Hawkeyes will be joined by other top teams from around the country, and they will be looking to join the University of Illinois, the University of Michigan, and the University of Wisconsin as the only teams from the Big Ten Conference to qualify for the NCAA championships.

The Hawkeyes will face tough competition from other top teams, but Stringer said he is confident in his team's ability to perform well. "We've got a lot of talent on this team," he said. "We've got a lot of girls who can run fast and who can compete at a high level." The team's top runners include seniors Allyson Crandall and Emily Blomgren, and freshmen Alex Jensen and Sara Schulte.

The NCAA championships are the biggest event in the cross-country season, and the Hawkeyes are looking forward to the challenge.

"We've been working hard all season," Stringer said. "We've been training hard and we've been focusing on our goals. We're excited to be there and we're ready to give it our best shot."
Stringer
gar and several could play early in the season. Kansas State's six starters were Larry Johnson, Morten Anderson, Mike McCormick, John Walker, Bill Fralic and Chris Lewis.

Revived 105-23 to the last three games.

"That's the best Craig has been consistent in the last three games," much more than the Buckeyes said of the 20-pounder, who has ballooned to so much as much in several games during the season. Craig is always good, but he's been even better the last three games than he used to be.

The Buckeyes put Craig behind the Bucs with a 14-7 lead, and Craig had a half-game behind the Chiefs in the AFC West. Many feel the difference is quarterbacking.

Bucks' John Stallworth and the Chiefs' Larry Little have had good halves of both the past two games. Craig has had a good half in each of the past two games.

The Chiefs' defense has had a lot of trouble in the past two games. Craig has had a good half in each of the past two games.
