Rose Bowl bound

Despite loss, Hawks will go to Pasadena

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa football players saw their dreams come true Saturday as Big Ten Commissioner Jim Delany and a Rose Bowl representative awarded the conference's Rose Bowl berth to them.

But after a 31-24 defeat by Minnesota, no cheers could be heard in the locker room.

"After the presentation, we gave one clap to the Rose Bowl people and one clap to the commissioner," Hawkeye coach Hayden Fry said. "No Hokey Pokey or anything like that."

"I was in the training room (after the game), but I didn't hear too many cheers or anything," said defensive back Eddie Polly, who suffered an injured rib on a punt block in the fourth quarter. "We're happy to go. But everybody's still a little bit down from this loss."

Earning a trip to Pasadena was what the team had been working for, but losing its last regular-season game to Minnesota was not in the Hawkeyes' plans.

Iowa struggled against the Gophers Saturday at the Metrodome in Minneapolis and found itself on the bottom of a 31-24 score.

The highlight of the game for the thousands of Iowa fans seemed to come when the words "Michigan 16, Ohio State 13" flashed on the scoreboard.

That Wolverine win clinched the Rose Bowl berth for the Hawkeyes regardless of who won the Iowa-Minnesota game. If the Buckeyes had beaten Michigan, Iowa would have had to defeat Minnesota to earn a trip to Pasadena.

The loss to the Gophers left the Hawkeyes in a four-way tie for first place in the league with Michigan, Michigan State and Illinois. Because Iowa had beaten all three of those teams earlier in the season, however, the Hawkeyes were given the Rose Bowl invitation.

Airline competition lowers fares; Iowans frantically buying tickets

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Airlines trying to outdo each other with two-for-one ticket specials this week have Iowans — especially Rose Bowl-bound Hawkeye fans — buying tickets at a hectic pace.

"They're going absolutely crazy," Karen Eade, a travel agent at Ficke Travel Agency in Davenport, said Friday. "So am I. Unfortunately, we expected it to be calm. Everybody should be out shopping."

The two-for-one sale is the result of airlines trying to offer the best deal. American Airlines started by offering its frequent fliers $50 companion tickets. United Airlines countered with $25 companion tickets to its frequent fliers. Then, Northwest Airlines topped them all by offering free companion tickets to any passenger. The rest soon followed.

"Between this and the Rose Bowl package, it's made all my agents work very hard," said Mike Trosky of Travel and Transport Inc. in Cedar Rapids.

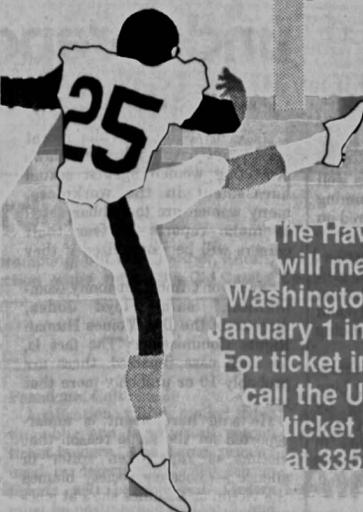

Lottie Magill, owner of Travel Agents International in Des Moines, said, "One person was just elated, like I was some kind of magic maker."

She said the airlines haven't publicized the fares widely.

"I don't know why the airlines are doing this and not telling anybody," she said. "It's been a well-kept secret, but word is spreading like wildfire."

Restrictions apply. The tickets must be bought before next Friday, See Airfares, Page 3A

Environmental activist speaks on incineration

Twenty-nine-year-old Charlie Cray is one of the thousands of men and women around the world committed to doing the legwork of Greenpeace. For the past 2½ years he has been touring American towns, campaigning on environmental issues and taking part in Greenpeace actions. On Nov. 8, he stopped in Iowa City for a night to talk about waste management, particularly incineration. Daily Iowan reporter Aziz Gokdemir interviewed Cray before his speech.

Daily Iowan: What have you been doing since you started working for Greenpeace?

Charlie Cray: Organizing, going from door to door, fund raising. We don't get any corporate funding; all the money comes from public donations. With an average 20 people in our 25 offices around the country, we have 500 people going out every night.

DI: Do you want to stay in this position or do you want to move up?

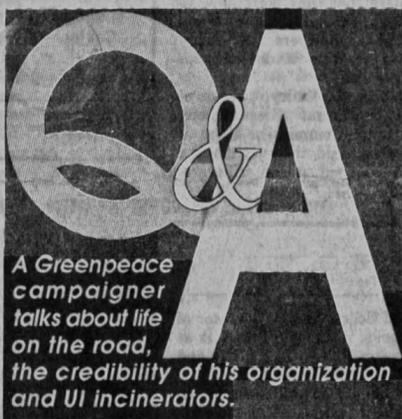

Cray: No, I want to stay in this for a while. There's a lot to be done.

DI: Michael Lorenger, our viewpoints editor, wrote: "Environmental groups have traditionally used public demonstrations and protests to spread their messages. While sometimes warranted, such actions usually do little more than annoy most of the public" (DI, Nov. 6). He was praising the Environmental Defense Fund for cooperating with McDonald's on their packaging issue.

Cray: I don't agree with that. There are times when you try to be reasonable, you don't get anywhere. The pressure on McDonald's was put on by many environmental groups. EDF sat down to work out an environmental agenda with (McDonald's). I think they would have taken a tremendous amount of heat if they did not recommend McDonald's to get rid of polystyrene. McDonald's had said they were going to recycle polystyrene. Recycling doesn't deal with the issue. It's toxic. From the beginning of the production stage, to the use, the disposal.

To get back to your question, Greenpeace is one of the most famous organizations for using direct actions. We work with the system as much as we can, and often times you reach a point when you really can't achieve environmental justice within the system, and you have to take that message to the public, so that everybody recognizes that things are not working. A good example of that here was with incineration.

What we're saying here is: You don't know all the toxic pollutants that are coming out. And you limit your calculations. They don't calculate the bioaccumulation effect. Around here, that's important to think about because many chemicals will magnify with the food chain.

DI: Do you specialize in this field?

Cray: I've read. I'm not a chemist or a physical engineer. I know more about organizing politics than I do about chemistry.

DI: It seems that Greenpeace has changed in the past few years. In 1988, you were not accepting any partial solutions, nothing less than doing away with incineration completely. You wanted to cut waste from the source.

Cray: That's what we are saying here, too.

DI: But you are here to talk about solutions for Oakdale now.

Cray: Yeah, well, you have to do that eventually. What we are saying about incineration is, you rely on incineration and you don't get to the source.

DI: Do you support the argument that incineration is being picked because it's cheaper than other methods?

Cray: I don't know that it's cheaper. The problem here is that the people who are using radioactive isotopes are responsible. If they'd thought of that when the experiments began, they would have considered alternative ways to prove their points.

You've already got barrels there labeled, "Leak." Who knows what's going to come out of that stack? They don't know. They're not monitoring it. They say, the gentleman there —

DI: Bill Twaler (director of the Health Protection Office)?

Cray: Yeah. He says that dioxins are going to be eliminated if they're burned in a second chamber. That's not true of dioxins if there is a chlorine source. And I'm not sure that dioxins are going to be the No. 1 problem. I think you've got to consider radioactivity first. And I don't know with radiation that there is any safe level. This whole concept has been promoted to a regulatory concern recently, like "disposal capacity for 'low-level' radioactive waste."

Walesa winning in Poland's 1st ever popular election

By John Daniszewski
The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland — Lech Walesa, who united Poles in their struggle against communism, won the initial round in Poland's first popular presidential election Sunday but appeared headed for a runoff, according to state TV exit polls.

In a surprising development, Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki was in a close race against Stanislaw Tyminski for the No. 2 spot. Tyminski, a political unknown until recently, is a businessman who returned to his homeland only this fall after 21 years in Canada and Peru.

The second-place finisher will enter a Dec. 9 runoff if the winner fails to gain an outright majority in the first round.

Walesa, the head of Solidarity, had 41 percent of the vote, a 2-to-1 lead over Mazowiecki and Tyminski, according to the polls. The polls indicated Mazowiecki and Tyminski each had 20.5 percent of the vote, far ahead of the remaining three candidates. But early official returns from 270 polling stations, or about 1 percent of the vote nationwide, said Walesa led with 39.1 percent, followed by Tyminski with 23.4 percent and Mazowiecki at 20 percent.

It was a stunning setback for Mazowiecki, a former Walesa ally who instituted unpopular economic austerity measures after taking command of Poland's first postwar non-Communist government.

IC Guard unit departure accompanied by protest

By Jessica Davidson
The Daily Iowan

More than 50 people marched from the Downtown Pedestrian Mall to the local armory Nov. 21 to protest President Bush's policies in the Middle East.

As family members said goodbye to the 133 soldiers in the 209th Medical Company leaving for Fort McCoy, Wis., the protesters chanted and carried signs.

"We weren't there against the troops," said one protester, Scotty Hayward. "We were there to show our protest against the U.S.'s policy in the Middle East."

It is still unknown whether the soldiers will remain in the United States or be sent to the Persian Gulf after completing training at Fort McCoy.

Paul Adams, a member of the steering committee for Operation U.S. Out and associate professor of social work at the UI, said the crowd was there not only to protest U.S. involvement, but also to support the troops being sent over.

"It's important for the soldiers who are questioning the reasons for this involvement to know there are people who oppose their going," he said.

"It must be very depressing to see the orchestrated flag-wavers and war-mongers who are so anxious to see them fight and die to sustain oil we don't own," he added.

Hayward said he thought at least some of the soldiers leaving the armory were glad to see the protesters out there.

"Some didn't like to see us. We got the finger from some guys," Hayward said. "But some gave us the other finger — thumbs up and the peace sign."

Kristi Nelson, a member of Operation U.S. Out, also said some soldiers reacted favorably.

"As the trucks and buses were pulling out, some of the soldiers were giving us peace signs," she said. "They obviously weren't enthusiastic about defending oil prices."

Nelson said protesting "absolutely" has an effect on the public conscience.

"You can't look at the history of Vietnam without knowing it does," she said.

On the other side of the street, a small group of people with American flags supported Bush's policies and U.S. involvement.

Lyle Seydel watched the protest from his office at Dick Davin Real Estate, 914 S. Dubuque St. A retired Army lieutenant colonel who served in the Korean and Vietnam wars, Seydel said the group picked "the wrong place and the wrong time" to protest.

"The government called (the Guard) to duty; they had nothing to do with it. If those people wanted to protest, they should have been protesting down at city hall or at the capital in Washington," he said. "They should have been showing their support for the company."

"It's a subversive act to be against our government," Seydel went on, "because people elect the government."

Margaret Thatcher

Heseltine confident of replacing departing Thatcher

By Maureen Johnson
The Associated Press

LONDON — Michael Heseltine, who precipitated Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's downfall, said Sunday he was confident of getting the necessary votes to win the leadership of his party and country this week.

But he admitted that some Conservative Party loyalists are deeply angry at him for his role in forcing out Thatcher, who last week agreed to step down as prime minister.

"Mrs. Thatcher and I have that characteristic of independence — some people call it guts."

Michael Heseltine

Heseltine, 57, and treasury chief John Major, 47, a right-winger who is reportedly supported by Thatcher, appeared to be locked in a close contest in the race to succeed Thatcher, with Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd trailing.

London bookmakers ranked Heseltine and Major as even favorites to win in Tuesday's ballot among the 372 Conservative Party legislators. Hurd was a long shot at around 10-1.

A series of opinion polls in Sunday's newspapers indicated the party would win elections with him or Major as leader, but lose under Hurd.

But Hurd, 60, argued that he had the best chance of unifying the traumatized Conservative Party. He said Heseltine was handicapped by deep anger among some legislators and party activists over Thatcher's departure.

"There is a danger of a polarized result with the right wing clustering around (Major) ... and the left wing clustering around Michael Heseltine," said Hurd. "If that were to happen, then I think there would be a danger of the quarrelling continuing."

Heseltine, in a series of radio and television interviews Sunday, argued that he has shown the same steely nerve that Thatcher displayed in 1975 when she ousted Edward Heath as party leader. The Tories were then in opposition.

"Mrs. Thatcher and I have that characteristic of independence — some people call it guts," said Heseltine. "When you believe something is right you do it."

Certificate opens door on world business

By Susan Potkay
Special to the Daily Iowan

Students interested in studying international business do not need to be enrolled in the UI College of Business to receive the benefits of an International Business Certificate.

In 1987, the UI College of Business and the College of Liberal Arts began the IBC program to encourage students of all majors to explore international business opportunities.

The IBC is intended to give students an "overview of business differences around the world and a taste of the international market," according to Mike Lankford, an academic adviser in the business school.

The program requires students to complete 44 semester hours in four areas of study. Students must take five business courses, two courses in international relations; complete a foreign language series; and study the culture and history related to that language.

"(IBC) students learn about the art, culture and history of a country — not only the business practices," said Mary Starck, coordinator of undergraduate programs in the College of Business.

Although other Big Ten schools have international business programs for graduate students, the UI offers the only undergraduate international business program.

Bill Albrecht, then associate dean of undergraduate programs in business, started the IBC program with a 1986 grant from the U.S. Department of Education. His goal was to incorporate international aspects into the business curriculum and begin an international business program at the UI.

The result was the formation of two international business courses and the International Business Certificate.

Currently about 125 students, mostly juniors and seniors, are enrolled in the IBC program. About 65 percent are liberal arts majors, and the rest are in the business school.

"It is a misconception that students must be accepted into the business school to be involved in the program," said Starck.

Many students who participate choose Spanish as their foreign language, but Starck said many students study more than one foreign language.

Studying the European countries is the most popular choice among IBC students, which Starck said is disappointing.

"Students are missing out," she said. "The European markets are harder (for U.S. businesses) to break into. Now most developing is in the Third World countries. That's where the money is."

The IBC program is still expanding. In July 1988, only 55 students were involved, but by December of that year, the number of students nearly doubled.

Starck said participating in the program is a big commitment.

"Many students declare but don't finish," she said. "People start too late."

"The best time to start is as early as your freshman year. There are less hassles by planning ahead."

Nancy Piehl, a senior majoring in French and business administration, began the IBC program in her sophomore year.

"I believe it is a worthwhile program; it puts us apart from other students," she said. "It is not a fluke that we spent time to learn about (international business). It shows that we have a commitment to it."

But Piehl said she wishes the program offered the status of a major instead of just a certificate.

Starck is a strong advocate of the program and said that learning about and understanding other cultures is very important, especially in light of recent global developments.

Lankford said the IBC program was designed with a progressive future world in mind.

"I think this program is an indication of how the college places itself for changes in the 20th century," he said. "U.S. business means international partners."

Cedar Rapids man accused of kidnapping

The Daily Iowan

A Cedar Rapids man has been charged with kidnapping as well as attempted murder stemming from an incident that occurred on Oct. 20.

Patrick S. McAmis, 26, is accused of kidnapping a 21-year-old woman in Cedar Rapids, driving her to rural Johnson County and sexually assaulting and stabbing her repeatedly.

A first-degree kidnapping charge was filed against McAmis in Linn County Tuesday morning by Cedar Rapids Police. He was arrested in El Paso County in Texas the night of Nov. 16 and returned to Iowa City on Monday, Nov. 19.

The victim was discovered in a ditch in rural Johnson County near Solon, where she had been stabbed eight times, perforating her lungs. She was taken to a Cedar Rapids hospital and has been released.

The maximum penalties for attempted murder and kidnapping are 25 years and life in prison.

Sexual harassment of women under-reported due to anxiety

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — While recent court cases have underscored laws protecting women against sexual harassment in the workplace, many women are too embarrassed to make reports or fear their careers will be jeopardized if they do.

"You won't find that many (complaints)," said Floyd Jones, director of the Des Moines Human Rights Commission. "The fact is, for each case reported, there are probably 10 or probably more that aren't."

He said harassment is under-reported for the same reason that victims of rape often suffer in silence — because society blames the victim or assumes she's at least partly at fault.

"It's an emotional issue," he said. "In many cases, it's a power play, and the women feel powerless to do anything about it. I have dealt with everything from a glare to what amounts to rape, and in so many cases it is hard to get the victim to follow through with the complaint."

Sexual harassment complaints have been fairly stable — about 4 percent of job-related complaints — since 1986, when the Iowa Civil Rights Commission began keeping such statistics. There were 63 complaints in 1986, 104 in 1987, 102 in 1988 and 81 last year.

Des Moines lawyer Roxanne Conlin, who has handled dozens of harassment cases, said supervisors often don't take the complaint seriously.

"They treat it as a joke: 'Can't she take a joke?' And that makes the situation even worse for the woman who complained," Conlin said.

But several recent cases have shown that those who complain can win. The most publicized case this year involved Dr. Jean Jew, a member of the UI College of Anatomy.

Court records show Jew was subjected to continuous harassment and

Have you ever wondered...

Why anyone would start a "diet" during the holidays?

This time of year is known for its parties, family gatherings and rich food. This is the time that many people put on an extra 5-10 pounds that have to be dealt with after the first of the year. The best thing would be to get some help to learn how to eat sensibly during this season. Learn how to eat the traditional meal in controlled portions. Learn how to attend parties, eat what is served and enjoy yourself. No, this is not the time to "diet" and feel deprived. Yes, this is the time to learn how to handle these situations without gaining and maybe losing a little weight. Call for more information.

Van Allen testifies before space committee

James Van Allen, UI professor emeritus of physics and astronomy, testified before the Advisory Committee on the Future of the U.S. Space Program on Nov. 19 at George Washington University in Washington, D.C.

The purpose of the committee is to recommend long-term goals for NASA to Vice President Dan Quayle, acting in his role as chairman of the National Space Council.

Van Allen offered a variety of suggestions for improving the space agency that included:

- Using unmanned spacecraft in place of human crews for almost all scientific and utilitarian purposes because they are cheaper and more efficient.
- Reducing the scale of the planned U.S.-international space station to make it more useful.
- Developing an incremental program to improve our understanding of the Earth's environment on a global scale.

Van Allen, who last year received the Crafoord Prize — the equivalent for space explorers of the Nobel Prize — from the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences, noted that the public has a right to expect NASA to be run in the efficient and economical manner that a return to reliance on unmanned flight would encourage.

"I'm trying to take a 30-year perspective in looking at the future of space exploration," he said. "Almost all the important space research and scientific contributions to human welfare have been accomplished by unmanned spacecraft, but the manned program has used about two-thirds of the financial resources.

"I'm not objecting, in principle, to manned space flight, which may be a worthy cultural objective in its own right," he said. "But I am objecting to the shift in emphasis from unmanned to manned exploration."

Vice President Jones to serve on higher education commission

Philip Jones, UI associate vice president of academic affairs and dean of students, has been chosen to serve as a consultant-evaluator with the Commission on Institutes of Higher Education of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.

The NCA, founded in 1895, is a voluntary membership organization devoted to improving education through evaluation and accreditation of educational institutes in a 19-state region that includes Iowa. The Commission on Higher Education also accredits post-secondary institutions.

Jones, who participated in a special professional development program for new consultant-evaluators, is one of 64 evaluators chosen to serve on the 750-member Commission's Corp. The consultant-evaluators make up visiting teams that obtain information from institutions that is used to make from one to three institutional visits a year.

Library to open Edgar Allan Poe show

An opening reception for the latest exhibition at the UI Libraries, "Edgar Allan Poe: The Haunted Imagination," will be from 4:30-6 p.m. Tuesday in the north lobby of the Main Library.

David Schoonover, UI curator of rare books, will give a brief talk at 5 p.m. on "Why Poe, Here and Now?"

The exhibition will feature an extensive collection of Poe's works, including multiple editions, translations and literary criticism. Many of the works were donated to the UI special collections department by the widow of noted Poe scholar Thomas Olive Mabbott.

The exhibition, sponsored by the Friends of the UI Libraries, will be on display throughout January. It was prepared by staff members Rijn Templeton, Judith Macy and Lucia Marino.

Attorney group names White as president-elect

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White took office as president-elect of the Iowa County Attorneys Association at the organization's fall conference in Ames earlier this month.

Global events strongly affect UI international community

Adviser works to ensure education

By Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

Global events such as the Iranian hostage situation, Tiananmen Square and the current gulf crisis have had significant effects on the large international community at the UI.

UI foreign student adviser Gary Althen is charged with ensuring that UI students who come from countries involved in these situations are able to continue their education successfully despite the turmoil.

"The disruption in Iran (the hostage crisis of the late 1970s) was a major one here at the university because at that time we had between 160 to 180 students from Iran going here," Althen said.

"The disruption in China also had a major impact on us and what we had to learn and do," Althen added.

Althen's job entails working as a mediator between the UI, foreign students and the governments of their countries in an effort to provide foreign students with a pleasant educational experience at the UI.

But when a crisis occurs in a country and the UI has students registered from that country, Althen is forced to wade through rumors and gossip in an effort to help the students continue their education while their country and its government are disrupted.

"The first thing we do is find out what's going on through the student's own communication system. What some call rumors and gossip were often more accurate than the media accounts," he said.

Althen said the next step is to find out what the U.S. response will be, and then several university officials must develop an institutional response regarding the position of the foreign students.

"If you have 180 Iranian students, and the money stops, what are you going to do?" Althen asked.

Although the response has differed in the past, Althen said generally the UI has allowed the students from an affected country to continue their education, encouraged them to get jobs and sometimes provided them with short-term loans.

Althen said there are currently two or three Kuwaiti students at the UI whose tuition is being paid through money the Kuwaiti government removed from its embassy prior to the Iraqi invasion.

encounter many problems when they first arrive — including how to locate housing, how to register for classes, how classes are taught and even understanding current college slang.

"People who arrive in January usually think they are arriving in near fatal situations," Althen said. "You get off the plane at the Cedar Rapids airport, and the wind chill is 45 degrees below zero and you are convinced you have made the biggest mistake of your life."

Althen said while he was unaware of a general trend of mistrust and

"The first thing we do is find out what's going on through the students' own communication system. What some call rumors and gossip were often more accurate than the media accounts."

Gary Althen

"But that doesn't benefit the students who aren't (originally) from Kuwait, but their families (currently) live in Kuwait. We have a few people who fit that description here," Althen said.

He added that Iraqi financial support for its students has also stopped.

Althen studied the social sciences and has worked at the UI since 1972. Passing through his office each year are approximately 430 students in the fall, 150 students in the spring and 30 students in the summer from various countries.

The nations represented range from Taiwan, China and Korea to India and Malaysia — a total of about 90 different countries. This diverse population is part of what makes his job interesting, according to Althen.

"I enjoy many things about my job, including the variety of people I work with and the variety of tasks I do," Althen said. "It's very satisfying. There's always something new, and you never know what's going to happen next."

Althen said students new to the U.S. have many questions and racism between foreign students and their American counterparts, sometimes miscommunication can confuse a foreign student.

"I have the impression (racism) is not common, but a lot of things that happen in an interaction with people are ambiguous," he said.

"Students have to get used to the natives' behavior. They see what they perceive as militant individualism and an obsession with preciseness and time consciousness," Althen said.

Althen said it is sometimes difficult for foreign students to adjust to the informality and equality that exists in American society.

"Another aspect is the general condescending stance the natives take. Many Americans think they are a superior group, and all others are inferior," he said.

But Althen said he has received the impression from foreign students that Iowa City has less of a problem with racism than other cities in America.

"Foreign students who transfer here from other U.S. schools often say Iowa City is a place with an overall understanding social atmosphere."

Rose Bowl

Washington will be the third trip to the Rose Bowl in 10 years for Iowa. In 1982, the Hawkeyes lost 28-0 to the Washington Huskies and in 1986 they were defeated 45-28 by UCLA.

"This team has nothing to hold their head down about," Polly said. "We wanted to beat Minnesota as bad as we did Michigan, Michigan State, Ohio State, Illinois. We've got to hold our head up because there aren't many teams that can lose on their last day and still go to the Rose Bowl."

Rose Bowl tickets available

This is the information for Iowa fans interested in purchasing tickets for the Jan. 1 Rose Bowl game between Iowa and the Huskies in Pasadena, Calif.

Applications will be mailed today to public and faculty/staff season ticket-holders. The same priority used in determining 1990 season tickets will be followed. Orders must be postmarked by Dec. 5, and only mail orders are accepted.

UI students may place orders at the athletic ticket office in Carver-Hawkeye Arena from Dec. 3 to Dec. 7.

Students may order one ticket, which must be picked up at the Rose Bowl. A lottery will be used for 1990 season ticket holders.

If tickets remain from the student allotment, a general lottery will be held. All tickets are $43 apiece. For more information, contact the Iowa Athletic Ticket Office at (319) 335-9309.

Airfares

Continued from page 1A and passengers must travel before Feb. 28. Certain days around Christmas and New Year's have been blocked out. Other restrictions apply to the days passengers can travel and the grade of ticket they can buy.

Only a limited number of seats are available. Travel agents said few seats are left for travel around the holidays, but plenty of seats are available for late January and February.

results are, we created a basis for a broader democratic movement in Poland," Mazowiecki told supporters at a students' club in Warsaw. "We will continue the struggle for a democracy as we want it."

He added later on television that he was waiting for "real results, and not just some estimates."

Pollsters questioned every 20th voter at 404 polling places around the country, or up to 15,000 people. The poll indicated that farmers, who represent 40 percent of Polish society, deserted Mazowiecki en masse.

Mazowiecki also did poorly among workers, according to the poll.

They're trying to find a way to reclassify that waste, and say that it's not anybody's concern; let's put it into regular landfills, incinerate them and even recycle them.

DI: Let's get back to Greenpeace. Do you think some of your actions in the past have alienated the public?

Cray: I think that at some point things have to be accelerated in terms of solutions. Look at what we've got in the planet right now. We've got an ozone hole. Drastic problems require drastic actions. Greenpeace actions do not put people at risk. We never had anybody die. We act on the principle of non-violent direct actions.

DI: You mean risking nobody except yourselves.

Cray: No, nobody. One person has ever died.

DI: The photographer (Fernando Pereira)?

Cray: Yes, that was when the French (Secret Service agents) blew up our own ship (in Auckland, New Zealand, July 10, 1985). Hardly something that was provoked by us.

DI: But isn't that what you're trying to do? You're risking yourselves, when you get in between the whales and the harpoon, for example.

Cray: That's right. But you evaluate the situation. Who in their right mind would throw a harpoon at somebody?

DI: In the past, I remember (French) commandos boarding your ship and beating the captain (Moruroa Atoll in the Pacific, 1973). People can act out of turn.

Cray: I see your point.

DI: All I'm saying is that you are risking your lives at some point.

Cray: When you do an action, one of the things to make sure is to document it. And if you're documenting it, these people will think twice about acting irrationally in reaction to a non-violent action.

DI: Do you think getting help from rock stars and the like might look too flashy at times?

Cray: I think you get the message to a broader audience that way. Rock stars might be careful about how they articulate the issue. Radical entertainers support radical activists.

DI: There's this feeling that Greenpeace sometimes gets caught in its own wind, provoking the response, "Oh, it's those guys again."

Cray: I work with a lot of grassroots organizations. I think there's more of a sense of collaboration now. If we're going to do an action, it's because the local group wants to do an action. We go in with them.

DI: Is this a lesson learned, cooperating with local groups?

Cray: (Pause) Yes. It's an evolution of the movement itself. There weren't many groups 10 years ago. With students, too, the awareness is growing. There were 7,000 kids at the environmental conference in Champaign-Urbana (Oct. 5-7). When I was in college there wasn't any of that.

DI: How many days a year do you spend on the road?

Cray: Half my time. You've got to get out there and see what's going on.

DI: I know that you're being paid low salaries.

Cray: Yeah, probably the highest-paid person in Greenpeace makes less than $35,000.

DI: What do you do to keep yourself alive?

Cray: To keep myself alive, I relax, listen to music and have an occasional beer. I put in a lot of 12-hour days.

DI: I meant money-wise...

Cray: I live in a pretty down-and-out neighborhood in Chicago. I can pay my rent, buy shoes and clothes.

DI: How long do you want to keep doing this?

Cray: For a few years. Now is not the time to stop.

DI: And afterward, do you want to seek a profession?

Cray: I think there's something very culturally wrong with seeking out professions. Twenty people out of my graduating class went to Harvard Law School. Most of them are happier than I am, earn twice as much as I do. In 10 years, they will be making 10 times as much. But they're going to be tied down with a lot of responsibilities and ambitions.

Thatcher

But he acknowledged, "There are people who are cross with me, and I understand that."

Thatcher, prime minister for 11½ years, withdrew Thursday after she failed to get a big enough majority to stop Heseltine's challenge. With her husband, Denis, she spent the weekend for the last time at the prime minister's country residence outside London.

A clutch of well-wishers cheered the 65-year-old prime minister as she left the local church after a morning service.

She has not publicly endorsed any candidate. But London's Sunday Times, quoting "friends" of Thatcher, reported she will vote for Major, with Hurd as second choice.

If none of the three candidates receives a simple majority Tuesday, a third ballot will be held Thursday. Major and Heseltine both say they believe they are rolling up the 187 votes needed.

"They must be getting worried," Major said Sunday after Heseltine's campaign manager, legislator Neil McFarlane, said claims of majority support by Major's camp were bogus.

Heseltine challenged Thatcher after her deputy prime minister, Sir Geoffrey Howe, resigned and delivered a scathing attack on her combative stance with Britain's European Community partners.

Thatcher was already in trouble over the economy and an unpopular new local government tax, the poll tax, which Heseltine has pledged to review. He has the advantage of being the only one in the Cabinet not associated with the tax.

The polls in Sunday's newspapers suggested the Conservative Party, which had trailed the Labor Party for the last 16 months of Thatcher's leadership, would be up to 13 points ahead under Heseltine and about 4-6 points ahead under Major in elections.

"I've brought about a transformation in the Conservative Party's fortunes," Heseltine declared Sunday.

It brings out the best in all of us.

Concert by UI choral groups celebrates Yuletide season

The Daily Iowan

The UI Symphony Orchestra and choirs at the UI School of Music will mark the holiday season in a free concert of "Music for Celebration" at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 28, in Hancher Auditorium on the UI campus.

The concert, conducted by UI Director of Choral Activities William Hatcher, will feature works from the early baroque period through the 20th century, including a group of festival works for multiple choirs. Works for solo singers, for chorus with a small orchestra and for combined choirs with the full University Symphony will be included.

Choruses from the UI School of Music participating in the concert are the University Choir, the Camerata Singers, the Women's Chorale and Kantorei, the school's premier vocal ensemble.

The concert will begin with a collection of festival music for multiple choirs, two works each from the 17th and 20th centuries. German baroque music will be represented by "In Dulci Jubilo," composed by Samuel Scheidt in 1620, and "Hodie Christus Natus est," composed by Heinrich Schuetz between 1640 and 1650.

Two 20th-century British works will complete the first portion of the program — "The Rose," a contemporary work by John Paynter, and the "Gloria" from the "Mass in G minor" of Ralph Vaughan Williams.

First performed in 1923, the "Mass" is an unaccompanied, polyphonic work for double choir and soloists. It was intended for liturgical use in Latin or English, although the first performance took place in a concert hall and not a church.

British commentator Simona Pakenham described the "Gloria" movement in vivid terms: "The 'Gloria' dances with an unearthly radiance, restrained though it be. . . . The swaying chords, high in the register of the soprano's line, drift sweetly down like snowflakes on each repetition of the word 'Sanctus.'"

The second portion of the program will be devoted to a single work, "Cantata No. 63" by J.S. Bach. This cantata for Christmas day, "Christen, aetzet diesen Tag" ("Christians, mark this day"), will be performed by Kantorei and the University Chamber Orchestra, with student soloists from the School of Music — Dawn Bach, soprano; Heidi Best and Amy Butler, altos; Wayne Barrett, tenor; and David Meyer, bass.

"Cantata No. 63" was performed at Christmas 1723, during Bach's first year in Leipzig. As a newcomer in his position, Bach wanted to make a particularly splendid impression. Several works were performed that day, including the cantata, the familiar "Magnificat" and other works.

The third portion of the concert will again be devoted to a single work, the "Hymn of Jesus" by 20th-century British composer Gustav Holst. A large work for two mixed choruses, a semi-chorus and full orchestra, it will be performed by the combined UI choirs and the full University Symphony.

Composed in 1917, the "Hymn of Jesus" was dedicated to Holst's contemporary, Ralph Vaughan Williams. The first performance was given by the Royal Philharmonic Society and Choir on March 25, 1920. Although less well-known than the "Planets," the "Hymn" is considered one of Holst's most strikingly original works. It has a particularly mystical quality, due to Holst's musical techniques.

Two chant melodies give a timeless and other-worldly quality to the opening, for example. Elsewhere, dance elements recall early religious ceremonies that may have incorporated physical movement, and use of the spoken word adds emphasis to the most solemn texts. Unexpected harmonic dissonances are also used to emphasize important words in a striking manner.

William Hatcher came to the UI in 1988 from UCLA, where he taught choral conducting and music education, and conducted the UCLA Concert Choir, Women's Chorus and Collegiate Chorus. He was also coordinator and assistant director of the 1000-voice Olympic Honor Chorus, which sang for the opening and closing ceremonies of the 1984 Summer Games in Los Angeles.

Auditions held for '91 productions

The Daily Iowan

The UI Theatres will hold public auditions for two spring mainstage productions from 5-9 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 27 and 28, in the UI Theatre Building.

Auditions will be held for "The Rivers and Ravines" by Heather McDonald, which will be performed Feb. 21 through March 10, and Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," which will be performed April 11-21.

"The Rivers and Ravines," which depicts the effect of the farm crisis on rural individuals, families and society, calls for seven male and six female principal characters ranging in age from 8 to early 50s.

Auditions for "The Rivers and Ravines" will be held in room 170 of the Theatre Building. Auditioners will be expected to deliver a two- or three-minute personal monologue.

Shakespeare's bawdy comedy "Twelfth Night" uses a cast of 15-20 characters. Auditions will be held in room 172 of the Theatre Building. Auditioners should be prepared to deliver a memorized two-minute verse monologue or soliloquy from a Shakespeare or other classical play.

The auditions are open to anyone, and no affiliation with the UI is required.

'Chocolate Factory' author dies

The Associated Press

OXFORD, England — Roald Dahl, the British author of macabre short stories and light-hearted children's tales such as "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" and "James and the Giant Peach," died Friday, his agent said. He was 74.

Dahl died at John Radcliffe Hospital, where he was admitted on Nov. 12 with an undisclosed infection, his agent Murray Pollinger said.

Dahl wrote nine books of short stories, including "Kiss, Kiss," three novels, 19 children's books and numerous screenplays and scripts for television. Last year, his total paperback sales in Britain topped 2.3 million copies.

His 1964 "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" was adapted for film as "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory." Dahl also wrote the screenplays for Ian Fleming's "Chitty-Chitty-Bang-Bang" and Fleming's James Bond thriller "You Only Live Twice."

Dahl married American actress Patricia Neal in 1953 and helped her recover from a series of strokes in the mid-1960s that threatened her ability to speak. They were divorced in 1983 and he married Felicity Ann Crosland.

Dahl said his secret in his children's tales was that he entered a conspiracy with children against adults.

"It's the path to their affections," he said in an interview earlier this year with The Independent newspaper. "It may be simplistic but it is the way. Parents and schoolteachers are the enemy.

"The adult is the enemy of the child because of the awful process of civilizing this thing that when it is born is an animal with no manners, no moral sense at all."

Dahl was also known for his unnerving short stories.

One critic with the Times Literary Supplement said Dahl "knows how to steer an unwavering course along the hairline where the gruesome and the comic meet and mingle."

Reviews of "Kiss, Kiss" in 1960 saw in his "caricature of human weakness" signs of a "social satirist and moralist at work behind the entertaining fantast."

He has been compared to Angus Wilson as well as to Saki and Salvador Dali.

THATCHER RESIGNS

Don't worry

Maggie is gone. In a shocking chain of events in British politics, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was challenged for her post, vowed a tough fight, and then conceded in a matter of two weeks. Her resignation caused a stir on both sides of the Atlantic, but it need not have.

True, Thatcher has been a good friend and supporter of the United States and its policies. Her strong rhetoric in support of Bush's Persian Gulf policies, misguided though they are, has lent much needed credence to his stand. But with Thatcher gone, where does this leave the U.S. in this time of crisis?

Sitting pretty. Thatcher's three potential successors are more than qualified to step into her shoes. They are strong leaders with good backgrounds for the job. In addition, all have the same views as Thatcher toward the gulf. Nothing need change in gulf strategy because of the change in power.

The front-runner at this point, Michael Heseltine, is a former defense minister who has been a leader in the ruling Conservative Party. His success in last week's election against Thatcher shows he has major support within the British Parliament. He has vowed to keep British foreign policy toward the gulf consistent with its current course. He went so far as to vocally support Thatcher's final actions in the crisis as prime minister.

A second candidate, Douglas Hurd, should be familiar to those who have followed the gulf crisis. As foreign secretary, he has been responsible for implementing much of Britain's policy toward the gulf. While he is seen as a long shot according to British polls, he still would be a leader the U.S. could readily support.

The third candidate, Treasury Chief John Major, is not as well-known outside of Britain. He is considered to be a formidable challenger to Heseltine, as he also has major support within the British Parliament.

Granted, the gulf crisis should not be the sole measuring stick by which to judge these candidates. It is first and foremost in the minds of many, but it is only one of many issues with which the new prime minister will be faced. However, all three candidates seem to be strong in other areas, and should be able to step in and immediately take control. This is what Britain needs, and it is certainly what is needed in the global arena.

The real reason Bush sent troops

Lately a great deal has been written about why U.S. troops are deployed in Saudi Arabia. Most of the explanations offered rely on fun terms such as "naked aggression" or "cheap oil," which are fast becoming clichés rather than explanations.

Are American troops deployed to deter naked aggression? Not unless the government has had a sudden change of heart. The U.S. did not object, much less send troops, when China invaded and annexed Tibet or when Indonesia did the same to East Timor. Kuwait is just the latest in a long line of victims.

Guest Opinion

Eric Strahorn

So what makes Kuwait so special? The desire for cheap oil? Of course not. The invasion of Kuwait was never intended by Saddam Hussein to restrict the supply of oil. To have done so was to counter his own vested interests. Saddam had intended to sell Kuwaiti oil to help revitalize Iraq's war-damaged economy. The price of oil went up only when the United States and its allies placed economic sanctions on Iraq.

The real issue is one of power. For Bush, the problem is not with the attack on a small, weak country, but with the nature of the aggressor. It is proper for big countries such as the United States or China to invade weak countries (Panama and Tibet, respectively). Iraq, however, is an upstart. In the current geopolitical world order, Iraq is supposed to be one of the small countries open to manipulation from the big countries. It was, after all, a client state of the Soviet Union. Saddam changed all this with the invasion because he declared that Iraq was really one of the big countries. This is why Iraq has worked so hard to obtain chemical and nuclear weapons — the weapons of the big countries.

President Bush is unwilling to suffer a hostile rival in the gulf region, and he is willing to go to war to prevent it. It is quite possible that the current crisis will be resolved without war, but the basic issues will remain. Bush will still be faced with a dangerous rival who will need to be removed. That is why he has called Saddam "Hitler revisited." Iraq's power will have to be broken and Saddam removed from power if the president is to be satisfied. For Bush, Iraq must be put back in its proper place.

Bush has refused to directly negotiate with Saddam because such an action would mean Bush was treating the Iraqi leader like an equal. This is what Saddam so clearly desires and why many of the hostages of Germany, Japan and England have been released. Former prime ministers from each of these countries have visited Saddam, treated him as their equal, and returned home with freed hostages. Saddam will not obey Bush's demands to leave Kuwait, but he may be willing to negotiate his way out. But this cannot happen as long as Bush seeks to humiliate Saddam and weaken Iraq.

However, to accomplish this goal will cost thousands of American lives. The most recent estimates point to a possible 30,000 American deaths. That is about the size of the U.S. student population. Many policy-makers in Washington talk about a possible war in abstract. They somehow forget to mention body bags. They forget because their sons and daughters are not in Saudi Arabia.

Is it worth thousands of American lives to remove Saddam from Kuwait? No, the price is too high. The United States has nothing to gain from defeating Iraq. The oil will be available regardless of who rules Kuwait. Saddam would love to sell the U.S. all the oil it wants in order to prosper on the profits squeezed from gas-guzzling Americans who are addicted to oil.

There are many aggressive countries in the world today that forcefully meddle with their neighbors. China, Syria, Indonesia, the United States, the Soviet Union, Libya, Israel, India, Iraq is supposed to be one of the small countries open to manipulation from the big countries. Saddam changed all this with the invasion because he declared that Iraq was really one of the big countries.

South Africa and Vietnam have in the past few decades either conquered or militarily intervened in the affairs of their weaker neighbors. The U.S. is objecting to acts that have been committed by its allies as well as itself. Bush can not have it both ways. If aggression against small countries by their larger neighbors is wrong in the Persian Gulf, it is wrong in Latin America. If the U.S. were opposed to all naked aggression, as Bush's rhetoric suggests, not only would we have to go to war with many countries throughout the world, we would have to deal with the strongest aggressor of all: ourselves.

To the Editor: I'm sure once in a while we think about our future. We try to figure out what we have done wrong, and we imagine our future without those mistakes. A wonderful wife or husband, fancy car and adorable children. Then if it does not satisfy us, we add more things to our plan for the future. A large house, expensive furniture, more cars. We are never satisfied with what we have right now. We want more things, better things, and more things. And we always compare ourselves with those people who are wealthier than we are, so we may encourage ourselves to collect more money. We hardly ever compare ourselves to those people who are homeless or those people who are living in Ethiopia and dying from hunger. It is all right that we push ourselves to be the best we can be, but we sometimes need to realize that what we have may be enough for us. Compared to some unfortunate people, we may have more than enough. Not many of us realize how lucky we are living in a wealthy country, and not many of us know how hard it is to live without the necessities of life.

I was born in South Korea and lived there for 15 years. I experienced and suffered from poverty, which I didn't realize at the time because I was so young and didn't know how other people were living. My family didn't have a television or a telephone. In fact, we didn't have many other things we have now. Of course a car was unattainable. Not only that, we didn't have a shower, refrigerator or many other things. I didn't have a single toy to play with all my life. At one time I had to skip a meal because we didn't have food. Now these are all in the past, yet I still can feel what we had to go through. My family came to America in 1985 when I was 15 years old. I thank God that we came to the United States, which gave me so many chances, and I thank God that now South Korea is a much better place to live than it was decades ago.

Every day, we benefit from the society we live in. The U.S. has the highest gross national product, which means that we are living in the richest nation in terms of GNP.

Also, we have a mandatory high-school system that allows us to have a basic education at least. College education is more widely available here than in any other country. If we commit ourselves to education, there are plenty of chances for us to go ahead and get college educations. Financial aid for colleges is there if you need it and loans are available also. The U.S. has many opportunities for the ones who seek education. We are so lucky to have all these opportunities. Many people in other countries don't have the luck we have.

Right now, we are students and there aren't many things we can do to help unfortunate people. What we can do is learn more about those people who need our help and realize that we are so lucky to be in this society. We need to re-contribute to the society, not just take from the society. Moreover, we may plan our future not only for what we can have but for what we can give back to this society. And maybe we can donate some of our time to figure out what we can do for those Third World countries. Somehow we should draw a line between enough and excess, so we may help others with that excess.

The Daily Iowan distorts racial forum

I attended the forum concerning relations between African-Americans and Jews on Nov. 14 and was somewhat shocked when I opened The Daily Iowan the next morning and read the incredibly inflated headline and thoroughly fatuous story by reporter Susan Stapleton that followed "Forum between African-Americans and Jews erupts in disagreements," Nov. 15).

First of all, a forum that is designed to explore the disagreements between two groups of people can not accurately be said to "erupt in disagreements." How could we discuss our disagreements without first expressing them? Of course some anger was expressed; of course we raised our voices. This is because those of us who were attendees (with the exception of Ms. Stapleton, for whom it was apparently just a gig), are passionately concerned about the issues involved. (By the way, my head-count was greater than 25 people. This figure must have come to

Marc Weber

Ms. Stapleton when my friend, Tony Currin, said that he had to ask 25 Jewish people to come to the forum before one [me] finally did.)

I personally asked several questions and interjected many comments, all of which I felt were courteously received and sincerely heard by the panel and audience. As a Jew, I felt that African-American members of the panel were making a real effort to understand what Jewishness is all about. As for myself, I came away with a deeper understanding of the way many African-Americans see themselves and their culture within the context of the 1990s. Specifically, I think that I have a better grasp of the Rev. Farrakhan's importance to the African-American community in terms of cultural pride and heritage. I have come to realize that he is not consciously anti-Semitic, but merely reflects in his discourse some basic misconceptions and stereotypes about Jews that exist in the minds of many African-Americans and which are due to a lack of contact with the Jewish people — hence, the need for a forum such as ours. We must get to know each other better before we can even begin to separate cultural myths from realities.

Second, the statements of the audience member who brought up the question of the "oppressor and the oppressed" should not be summarily dismissed or trivialized. Rather than reducing the argument to these terms, he was getting to the heart of the issue. Much of the resentment that African-Americans feel toward Jews is due to Jewish claims that we are a minority yet we identify ourselves with the ruling class when it suits our needs. This is a valid point — we do have the ability to "pass for white." However, I sincerely hope that this resentment is the result of moral indignation over the very existence of a ruling class and is not merely jealousy. I would hope that no African-American or Jew would be satisfied with a mere reversal of the power structure so that the roles are changed but "the game" remains the same.

Ultimately, it does not matter which culture is "on top" as long as some culture is being subjugated. No culture can consider itself noble and strong and civilized as long as it continues to enslave another culture. Insensitivity to others, narrow-minded bigotry, exploitation of class by class, and avarice and greed are not hallmarks of a great culture and never can be. No culture can justifiably consider itself great unless it strives after ideals and virtues — ultimately toward some level of enlightenment. How can a people grow intellectually, artistically and spiritually through the rape and pillage of another people?

It is for this reason that I believe it is important for Jews everywhere to publicly denounce the subjugation of and brutality toward the Palestinian people by the Israeli government. Whether or not we consider ourselves to be aligned with the state of Israel, we are perceived that way by non-Jews. If we do not speak out against these injustices, others will assume that we support them. It is possible for Jews to support the continued existence of Israel without accepting everything that takes place there. The Palestinian people have a right to a homeland, and we, who have been homeless for thousands of years, ought to understand this better than anyone.

Perhaps what Ms. Stapleton does not understand is that Jews and African-Americans both come from cultures within which it is normal to express one's feelings fervently and emotionally. The old joke among Jews is "two Jews — four opinions." It is part and parcel of Jewish culture and religion to argue passionately (and sometimes loudly) over things one cares about, and my observations of African-American culture convince me that we share a common trait. If I am right, then Jews and African-Americans both face some of the same difficulties when trying to relate to the somewhat cooler, less passionate Anglo-Saxon majority. Never do I feel "less white" than when I alienate one of my WASP friends by becoming too emotional and "coming on too strong." Perhaps this partially accounts for the manner in which the media (now including the DI) always blow our problems way out of proportion.

Yes, it is true that this first forum only touched "the tip of the iceberg," but it was a worthwhile beginning of a dialogue that must continue for a long time before any real good is accomplished. I look forward to the next one.

U.S. wants Jan. 1 deadline Iraq threatens Saudi Arabia with thousands of troops

The Associated Press

U.S. officials said late Sunday they want the United Nations to authorize a force against Iraq if it does not leave Kuwait by Jan. 1, and Baghdad's government threatened to rain missiles on Saudi Arabia if U.S. troops attack.

Iraq also said it was mobilizing tens of thousands of farmers for military service, even though it is struggling to increase food production to offset the effects of U.N. sanctions imposed after the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Iraqi authorities, meanwhile, were taking steps to make sure any shortages caused by the sanctions are felt in Kuwait, which Iraq calls its 19th province. The official Iraqi News Agency said food rationing would begin soon in the conquered emirate.

U.S. officials seeking a U.N. resolution authorizing military force against Iraq said they want a Jan. 1 deadline. An administration official pointed out that Secretary of State James Baker has been talking about an end-of-year deadline during his recent globe-trotting campaign to win their support for a U.N. resolution authorizing force. "We've just kind of formalized that" in the draft resolution given to other permanent members of the U.N. Security Council, said the official on condition of anonymity.

Also Sunday, Kuwait's government-in-exile, citing reports from escapees, said Kuwaiti resistance fighters had recently wounded the Iraqi-appointed governor of Kuwait. The report could not be independently confirmed, but Iraq did announce the appointment of a new governor earlier this month, without saying why the former one was being replaced.

Iraq continued its piecemeal release of foreign hostages, but no Americans were among those freed Sunday. More than 100 German hostages arrived home after nearly four months of captivity, and 10 Greeks returned to Athens. Iraqi officials also said 70 Italians would be freed Tuesday.

Dozens of former government leaders and other dignitaries have traveled to Baghdad to try to win the release of captive foreigners, even though such private trips are discouraged by the U.S. government.

The latest such visitor was boxing legend Muhammad Ali, who had planned to meet with Saddam Hussein on Sunday at the presidential palace. The session was postponed and no new date for the meeting was announced. An earlier, erroneous report had said the two met.

An Ali associate, Arthur Morrison, said the former world heavyweight champion was on a "goodwill mission" and hoped to free some Americans. Morrison spoke to reporters on behalf of Ali, who is suffering from Parkinson's disease and cannot speak.

U.S. officials, meanwhile, were laying the groundwork for what they hope will be a U.N. vote by Thursday on the resolution to authorize use of force against Iraq. The United States is seeking a vote this week because its one-month presidency of the 15-member Security Council ends Friday. Taking over is the Red Sea state of Yemen, which has supported Iraq in the past.

But Bush's national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, said Sunday that American forces could move against Iraq without U.N.

approval. Bush made a similar statement Friday.

Baker spent last week in an intensive round of lobbying for the measure. Malaysia's foreign minister said after meeting with Baker on Saturday that he believed the meeting would take place Thursday.

Canadian External Affairs Minister Joe Clark said Sunday his country supports the resolution and called it a "final attempt" for a peaceful settlement to the gulf crisis.

Bush travels to Mexico to discuss trade relations

By Eloy O. Aguilar
The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — President Carlos Salinas de Gortari welcomes President Bush to his hometown today for a discussion expected to center on developing closer relations through trade.

The two nations are negotiating a free trade agreement, which Salinas hopes will help Mexico grow out of the Third World into the ranks of developed nations.

Bush will arrive in Monterrey about noon and will travel 55 miles by helicopter to Agualeguas, the Salinas family hometown of 5,000 people, where they will attend a rodeo and meet privately for two hours. They plan to return to Monterrey afterward.

Another private meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, and Bush will speak to businessmen in Monterrey, the country's industrial capital.

A Mexican bishop was quoted recently as saying "it is like dealing with sharks" to negotiate a free trade arrangement with the United States, but a government official said, "Bishops don't know much about economy."

The official, speaking anonymously, said the Salinas government feels it can strike a satisfactory deal with the United States.

Otto Granados, the presidential press spokesman, said, "We think that within a year we can have the basis of the agreement."

Salinas hopes Mexican industrialists can produce more and better products to compete with an expected flood of U.S. goods and also find markets in the United States. Years of hiding behind high tariff walls has hurt the competitive ability of some Mexican companies.

Since Salinas took office in December 1988, Mexico has lowered tariffs and joined the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs, which his predecessors had sworn the country would never do. U.S. products, from beer to cars, now can be imported by those who can pay the lower duties.

Sikhs kill at least 20 in India

By Deepak Sharma
The Associated Press

AMRITSAR, India — Sikh gunmen on Sunday raided a shopping center and a residential district in a Punjab city, killing at least 16 people and wounding 18, police said. A senior police officer blamed separatist Sikhs for the slayings.

Elsewhere in the state, Sikh gunmen killed four others in separate attacks.

Police, battling the separatists, killed nine suspected militants in separate incidents, the United News of India reported.

Sikh radicals have killed an average of 16 people a day in Punjab in the last two weeks in ambushes, bombings and bus attacks, according to police officials.

Since Jan. 1, the militants have killed 2,955 people in the rich farming state where they want to establish an independent nation for members of their faith.

Among the dead in the city of Jalandhar on Sunday were two vacationing Hindu soldiers. Also, a physician and three patients were killed when the gunmen sprayed bullets at the shopping center where the clinic is located.

"It is really tragic; innocent people were killed," said the city's deputy inspector-general of police, D.R. Bhatti. Police said at least 18 people were wounded in the Jalandhar attacks.

Bhatti said about six gunmen hijacked a car and fired indiscriminately at a shopping center. Their next target was a residential district. The group later abandoned the first car and hijacked another one to escape, Bhatti said.

"They opened fire at least at six places," Bhatti said.

Jalandhar, a city of 1.7 million people, is about 60 miles east of Amritsar.

Sikhs have a slight majority over Hindus in Punjab, which adjoins Haryana on the east and Pakistan on the west.

Bush's civil rights stand questioned

By James Rowley
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Civil rights advocates are questioning President Bush's commitment to fighting discrimination despite the administration's aggressive prosecution of some ground-breaking voting rights and housing bias cases.

They cite Bush's veto of the Civil Rights Act of 1990, which would have made it easier for victims of discrimination to sue their employers.

"That fallout is going to take some time to clear," said Drew Days, who ran the civil rights division under President Carter.

Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, had a harsher assessment. "Once again, we have an administration defying the bipartisan consensus that exists on civil rights," he said.

Still, civil rights leaders acknowledge there are bright spots in the Bush administration's record.

Bush actively courted black voters during the 1988 campaign, invited Coretta Scott King to the Republican National Convention and spoke about healing racial divisions. He is credited with appointing more blacks to political jobs than his predecessor, Ronald Reagan.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh tried to re-establish ties with civil rights leaders that were left badly frayed by conservative William Bradford Reynolds, who ran the Justice Department's civil rights division under President Reagan.

He also played a major role in ensuring passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act, which bars discrimination against people with mental and physical handicaps.

The Justice Department also has made enforcement a priority, adding lawyers to bring cases under a new statute that expands the government's authority to counter housing discrimination.

It has forced municipalities to drop restrictions against group homes for mentally retarded people. The agency recently won a jury verdict against a landlord for refusing to rent apartments to a drug program to house recovering addicts.

The Justice Department filed suit to force the all-male Virginia Military Institute to admit women cadets. It moved to overturn Georgia's election system, which it says discriminates against black office-seekers.

"When I came here it was with the understanding with the attorney general that I would be responsible for the vigorous and the complete enforcement of the civil rights laws," said John Dunne, who was named assistant attorney general for civil rights after the Senate Judiciary Committee blocked Bush's first nominee, William Lucas.

"No matter what the subject area, we have been extremely aggressive," Dunne said.

Civil rights advocates want more.

"They are going to have to make a record across the board; it's not going to be sufficient to carve out enclaves where they are vigorous and leaving others untouched and uncared for," Days said.

Lone gunman kills 4 in Israeli bus ambush

By Arieh O'Sullivan
The Associated Press

EILAT, Israel — A lone gunman slipped across the Egyptian border Sunday and ambushed a bus and three military vehicles, killing four Israelis and wounding 27, the army said.

The attack was the third from Arab territory in two days. At least four Palestinian guerrillas were killed and two Israeli soldiers injured in incidents in Israel's self-declared security zone in southern Lebanon and off the Mediterranean coast.

The dead in the border attack, three soldiers and a civilian bus driver, were shot on a road running along the Israeli-Egyptian border about 15 miles northwest of the Israeli Red Sea resort of Eilat, the army said. It said most of the wounded were civilian workers at an Israeli air base.

The gunman, who used an automatic rifle and was described as wearing a uniform, escaped back into Egypt. He was shot by an Israeli security guard and was trailing blood, the army said.

An Israeli army patrol chased him, firing, but did not pursue him across the frontier, the army said.

A senior Egyptian security source in Cairo said an Egyptian border policeman stationed in the area had been arrested as the suspected assailant.

Israel army radio said the assailant's blood-stained flak jacket with "Allah" written on it was found in the area. It said the attack was claimed by the Muslim fundamentalist group Islamic Holy War-Jerusalem in a statement issued in Amman, Jordan.

Israeli and Egyptian reports said the attacker was armed with the Soviet-designed Kalashnikov assault rifle.

Karen Golan, 12, who was on the bus, said, "I was sitting next to my father, near the back door. Suddenly we saw a bus half on the road, half in the wadi, and an army van."

"A man came out as though he was flagging us down for help. The driver slowed down and stopped and then the man opened fire."

"My father grabbed me and told me to put my hands around my head and get on the floor."

She was slightly injured above the eye by fragments. Her father was unhurt.

Israel television showed a woman named Rachel Fishbein telling a relative on the telephone that she had seen a passenger's fingers blown off by bullets. "We just lay there. Don't ask what happened," she sobbed.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir called on Egypt to capture and punish the assailant and prevent further attacks.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid called the attack "very regrettable" and said he hoped it would not affect relations between the two countries.

Egypt and Israel have been at peace since 1979, and the border is less heavily defended than other Israeli frontiers.

April 13 Could Be The Most Important Day of Your Career

Why April 13? Because that's when you can take the Fundamentals of Engineering exam and become qualified as an engineer-in-training... the first step in becoming a Professional Engineer.

If you're an engineering student consider this. P.E. registration allows more career flexibility and choice. Professional Engineers aren't locked out of a career path; jobs are theirs for the choosing in government, industry, construction and private practice. Many employers require registration for advancement to senior engineering positions.

It will never be easier to take the exam than now, while courses are still fresh in your mind. The test will be administered on April 13 at sites selected by the Engineering and Land Surveying Examining Board. The cut-off date for exam applications is February 1. For more information, call the state board at (515) 281-5602.

Hawkeyes heading to Pasadena

Backing in okay after big season

Eight wins, three losses and a Rose Bowl berth. Ask every Hawkeye fan prior to this remarkable season, and it's almost guaranteed that each would have signed their soul away in blood for those numbers.

Eight and 3 sure looks better than 5 and 6. And it's better on the ulcers.

But even after posting such numbers in the wildest and wooliest of college football seasons, Iowa's New Year's Day matchup against Pac-10 champ Washington will be bittersweet.

Sort of like watching a porno without nudity. It just doesn't have the same "Oomph!"

I think it's because the state of Iowa was temporarily filled with visions of grandeur. We got spoiled. It was hard not to after last season.

Not only did Iowa come out of the gate with a flourish — winning their first two games before falling to Miami — the Hawkeyes did the unthinkable, defeating Michigan State, Michigan and Illinois on the road over the next five weeks.

Coach Hayden Fry's team stood at 7-1. The Associated Press ranked them at No. 6. Out of nowhere, the Iowa Hawkeyes had gone from state of Iowa chumps to national championship candidates.

It was hard not to get excited. It was hard not to make reservations for Pasadena. And it was exceedingly hard to refrain from mocking high-school buddies who attend not-so-fortunate athletic, er, academic institutions.

But then, it was hard to believe what ensued.

Needing just two wins in their remaining three games to clinch the conference title, the Hawks lost a game to Ohio State they should have won. The 27-26 loss jabbed the thorns in Iowa's upstart national championship hopes while rejuvenating the Rose Bowl chances of the Big Ten's perennial top dogs.

The following week, however, put the air back into Iowa's sails. The Hawkeyes won, and impressively so, against Purdue in their final home game of the season. But Ohio State, Michigan, Illinois and Michigan State all kept pace. The run for the roses would come down to the final week of the season.

Which brings us back to the present.

Iowa needed either a victory at Minnesota or an Ohio State loss to Michigan to clinch the title. As it turned out, Michigan place-kicker J.D. Carlson kicked the game-winning field goal with just three seconds remaining, gently boosting the Hawkeyes to the top of the Big Ten standings. Remember him in your prayers tonight. For if it weren't for Carlson, Iowa would be 'bawling elsewhere, and ILLINOIS would have represented the Big Ten at the Rose Bowl. I hate the taste of bile in my mouth, don't you?

So until New Year's Day, the final chapter of Iowa's season has yet been told. The Gophers handed Iowa only their third loss of the season, 31-24 at the Metrodome last Saturday. An unfortunate loss, indeed, forcing Fry's squad to quietly and auspiciously lumber into a safe berth from behind.

Ah yes, "behind." For the next month, the majority of talk surrounding Iowa's championship will be of their hapless entrance. "Back door," "from the rear," and a multitude of other condescending variations will be used to describe Iowa's season.

It's too bad, really, considering the spectacular turnaround from last season. But in sports, the credo is not "Thanks for the memories." Instead, it's "What have you done for me lately?"

Perhaps it will be a Rose Bowl victory.

Michigan rescues flat Rose Bowlers

By Jamie Butters
 The Daily Iowan

MINNEAPOLIS — Three big plays, two questionable calls and a surprising offensive performance keyed the Minnesota Gophers to a 31-24 upset of the 13th-ranked Iowa Hawkeyes Saturday.

"I really thought our kids rose to the challenge today, by forcing two turnovers and getting a blocked kick," said Minnesota coach John Gutekunst. "That was basically the game."

In spite of the loss, the Hawkeyes will go to Pasadena to face Washington in the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day. The Hawkeyes finished the Big Ten season in a four-way tie with Michigan, Illinois and Michigan State and earned the Rose Bowl bid because they defeated all of those teams in direct competition.

Iowa received the automatic berth when Michigan's J.D. Carlson kicked a last-second field goal to beat Ohio State 16-13 in Columbus, Ohio.

Minnesota came up with three big plays and capitalized on two of them.

Late in the first half, Minnesota freshman Omar Douglas blocked a Jim Hujzak punt and it was recovered by junior Keswic Joiner in the end zone. Following the touchdown, Joiner bowed to the crowd and the Gophers' 21-10 lead which they took with them to the locker room at halftime.

In the second half, the Hawkeyes came out looking to comeback, but it was not to be. On the first play from scrimmage senior tailback Tony Stewart lost three yards and the ball. Minnesota took over at the Iowa 20.

The Hawkeye defense stopped them on three plays, but Minnesota's Brent Berglund kicked a 33-yard field goal to pad the lead to 24-10.

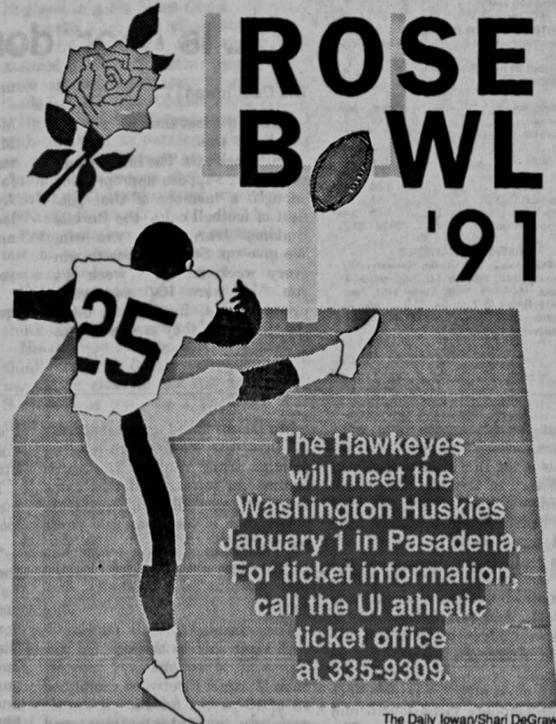

Stewart came into the game needing 50 yards to break Owen Gill's record as the school's all-time leading rusher. He finished with 34 yards. But he will still be able to break the record at the Rose Bowl.

The Hawkeyes were in the game until the Gophers' final score which came on an 83-yard, 14-play drive which included two calls that upset the 30,000-plus Iowa fans who were at the game.

"I'm not going to comment of the refs, but I tell you what, I wasn't pleased with the way a lot of calls went," said senior cornerback Eddie Polly.

In the third quarter Minnesota led 24-17 and faced a third down with 14 yards to go. Polly tipped a Marquel Fleetwood pass and the Iowa going West, pig staying put

By Erica Weiland
 The Daily Iowan

MINNEAPOLIS — When the Iowa football players walked through the Metrodome tunnel to the locker room Saturday, they didn't act like a team that had just gotten a berth to the Rose Bowl.

The Hawkeyes' stunned and somber faces reflected their fresh 31-24 loss to Minnesota. And that reaction didn't change when Big Ten Commissioner Jim Delany and Rose Bowl representatives extended an invitation to the "Granddaddy of Bowl Games" to the Iowa squad.

"I have mixed feelings," Iowa quarterback Matt Rodgers said. "I don't know how to feel. I feel terrible about the pig but good about going to the Rose Bowl. I'm happy but I'm not happy."

The Hawkeyes' goals going into Saturday's matchup were to win the Big Ten title outright and to claim Floyd of Rosedale, the bronze pig given annually to the winner of the Iowa-Minnesota game.

Iowa had owned Floyd for four years before losing 43-7 to the Gophers last year at Kinnick Stadium.

But Saturday in Minneapolis, the Hawkeyes claim 5th Classic title

By Brian Gaul
 The Daily Iowan

The faces may have been different, but the story was much the same as the Iowa women's basketball team captured its fifth Amana-Hawkeye Classic title in six years with a 73-65 overtime victory over No. 19 Louisiana State in Carver-Hawkeye Arena Sunday.

Using a tenacious half-court pressure defense that has been a trademark of Coach C. Vivian Stringer's teams, the Hawkeyes cruised past UCLA, 81-52, Saturday and nipped the Tigers Sunday on their way to their fourth straight Classic championship trophy.

"This helps tremendously with the confidence level," Stringer said of the two weekend wins. "This team has worked hard, but we haven't scrimmaged anyone except for ourselves. I can't say that I was extremely confident or sure of how we would play when we faced other opponents. But I thought this team handled itself extremely well."

In Sunday's championship game, Stringer's team forced 18 turnovers and held LSU to 37 percent shooting from the field. They also outrebounded the Tigers, 49-35.

"Any time you get outrebounded by 14, chances are you're not going to win the basketball game," LSU coach Sue Gunter said. "In fact, I think it's rather phenomenal that we made it to overtime when we were getting outrebounded as bad as we were."

"I'm so impressed with their athletes. It's frightening how good I think they're going to be."

But Stringer was most impressed with the poise with which her young team played.

The present Iowa team, which includes only two seniors and seven freshmen, may be the youngest of Stringer's eight-year tenure, but it played like a veteran unit Sunday. The Hawkeyes took control in overtime after losing a lead late in regulation play.

"I think today, under pressure throughout the entire game, they all played like veterans," Stringer said. "That happened first of all because starters Toni (Foster), Trisha (Waugh), (Felicia Hall), Steph (Schueler) and (LaTonya) Tate established the tone."

"The players that reported in had nothing to do but to follow. As they did, they were showing poise and were under control the whole time."

"I thought it looked like Iowa had the experienced people and LSU had the freshmen," Gunter agreed. Gunter started three seniors and two juniors.

The Hawkeyes grabbed the lead midway through the second half Sunday and held on to a 61-59 edge with 16 seconds to play in regulation. But Tiger forward Barbara Henderson rebounded a missed jumper and hit a layup as time expired to force the overtime.

After the teams traded baskets early in the overtime, the Hawkeyes regained the lead midway through the extra period when junior forward Waugh took a inside pass from sophomore Foster and hit a layup for a 67-65 lead.

Iowa held the Tigers scoreless for the remainder of the game and senior guard Stephanie Schueler hit six straight free throws in the final two minutes to give the Hawkeyes the final eight-point margin.

"The good teams find a way to win (in close games)," Stringer said. "What's remarkable about this team is these are babies. There's not a lot of seniors nor juniors on this team. It has a lot of youth."

Foster was named the tournament MVP after a 19-point, 7-rebound performance in the championship game. The 6-foot-1 forward from Chicago, also led the Hawkeyes with 16 points Saturday.

Hawks hoping split will impress WIVC

By Brian Gaul
 The Daily Iowan

When the Iowa volleyball team took the floor of Carver-Hawkeye Arena for their match against Indiana Saturday night, earning a postseason tournament bid or gaining vengeance for a past defeat could have been motivators for Coach Ruth Nelson's team.

But those things obviously weren't uppermost in the minds of the players.

What they really cared about became apparent when five sets of parents walked on to the floor, presenting roses to their daughters before the match. And it was crystal clear when the five seniors and their coach exchanged hugs and tears after the contest.

The occasion was senior night, the home finale for five Iowa seniors, and they celebrated it with a 15-10, 10-15, 15-12, 15-6 win over the Hoosiers in their final regular season match.

"They were high on it," Nelson said of her seniors' final home match. "They knew this was their last chance to play here."

Iowa lost to 15th-ranked Ohio State, 15-5, 12-15, 11-15, 12-15 in a home match Friday night.

Iowa's five seniors — Ginger Lorentson, Janet Moylan, Jenny Rees, Ruth Spethman and Barb Willis — contributed 59 of 84 kills, 75 of 110 digs, 73 of 76 assists and eight of ten blocks in the four-game win Saturday.

Rees led the Hawkeyes with 20 kills and 26 digs in her final match. Willis was second in kills with 16, including her milestone 1,677th career spike.

Her fourth kill of the match gave her that total, making her Iowa's all-time kills leader. Kari Hamel, a member of last year's team, was the previous leader with 1,676 kills.

Moylan contributed 10 kills, 59 assists and 18 digs in her final match. She is second all-time in NCAA digging and eighth in NCAA all-time assists.

Lorentson chipped in with a season-high 13 kills and added 15 digs in her final home match, while Spethman finished with three digs in limited duty. The senior from Lincoln, Neb., missed practice last week and much of Saturday's match with a knee injury.

Three freshmen also played important roles in the victory. Courtney Gillis tied her career-high with eight kills on 438 hitting and set another career-best with 19 digs.

"I saw some things from Courtney that I hadn't seen before," Nelson said, "and Erin (Weaver) came in and cranked on the ball a few times."

Another freshman, Christy Jansen, recorded 14 kills and 14 digs, and Weaver rounded out the trio of rookies with three kills, two digs and one block.

"Tonight being the seniors' last match hit us because we're on our own next year," Gillis said, speaking for the freshmen. "They have supported us so much, we wanted to win it for them."

While the players may not have been thinking of a postseason tournament bid or a taste of revenge, Nelson's team likely earned both of those things with the victory.

The win not only let the Hawkeyes forget a three-game loss to the Hoosiers in Bloomington, Ind., in their Big Ten opener, but it also gave them sole possession of fifth-place in the final league standings.

The Hawkeyes and Hoosiers entered the contest with identical 9-8 Big Ten records and the winner was expected to receive a bid to the Women's Intercollegiate Volleyball Championship in Knoxville, Tenn., next weekend.

The top three teams in the league appear bound for the NCAA Tour-namment, and fourth-place Illinois may also garner an NCAA bid. If they do not, however, the Illini have decided not to accept an invitation to the WIVC.

That makes the fifth-place Hawkeyes the Big Ten's leading contender for a bid to the WIVC. The bids were announced late last night.

An invitation to the WIVC would help the Hawkeyes salvage a season in which they expected to contend for the Big Ten title but started 2-9 overall and 0-4 in league play.

The Hawkeyes went 14-5 the rest of the season to finish at 16-14 overall and 10-8 in the league, and Nelson said the her team was playing its best volleyball at the end of the regular season.

"I wish we had another month," Nelson said. "I wish we had November over again. With all the changes we've made, that would have been enough."

Minnesota

ball was scooped up by freshman safety Jason Olejniczak — but Polly was called for pass interference. The penalty gave Minnesota 15 yards and an automatic first down. They went on to score the winning touchdown alter in the drive.
 "On that play, I made an excellent play for the ball," Polly said. "And the ref couldn't even explain to me what the pass interference was."
 That particular play was a long time coming as the officials had to stop the game due to crowd noise — the Iowa crowd noise.
 The ceiling echoed the roar of the crowd so much it could have reminded Iowa fans of the old Field House. The officials called timeout twice and the public address announcer told the crowd that under NCAA rules, if the players can not hear the quarterback, the defensive team will be assessed a timeout.

Then the Minnesota fans went bonkers.
 "This is the first time probably in the history of the Big Ten where the officials had to stop the fans from the visiting team on the crowd noise," said Fry.
 "It's really ironic, though. After I went out on the field our people slowed down but the noise was still real high. And (we) came to see it was the student section and the band of Minnesota trying to get us a penalty."
 Three plays after the interference call the Gophers faced fourth and one at Iowa's 46 yard line. The 25-second clock apparently ran out, but Fleetwood was able to get a timeout called instead of a delay of game penalty.
 "(The referees) never did explain to me what happened," said Fry. "It was obvious the clock had run out, and they awarded them a time out on fourth down. But that's the way it goes."

Minnesota found unusual success against the conference-leading defense. They ran for 165 yards against an Iowa squad that came into the game allowing opponents an average of less than 100 yards per game.
 "They just did a good job blocking and running the football," said Fry.
 They also surprised the Hawkeyes with their success through the air. Minnesota's sophomore quarterback Marquel Fleetwood completed 13 of 19 passes for 159 yards. He gave up no interceptions and tossed 28 yard touchdown pass to Joiner to put the Gophers ahead 31-17 in the fourth quarter. Joiner celebrated his score by performing his own version of the Nестea plunge in the end zone.
 "We went into the game hoping to shut down the run and make them pass and we didn't really expect them to pass that well on us," said

 Polly. "It's just one of those things and we should have responded a little better."
 The players and coaches tried to make the best of the defeat and look to the positive.
 "This team has nothing to hold their heads down about," said Polly. "We put ourselves in a position to lose at the end of the year and still go to the Rose Bowl. We wanted to beat Minnesota as bad as (we wanted to beat) Michigan, Michigan State, Ohio State and Illinois. We happened to lose, but this team has to hold their head heads up because there weren't too many teams (that) could lose on their last day and still go to the Rose Bowl."
 "So we got a lot to prove when we go out to Pasadena and play Washington because we're going to come out there to play ball."
 "And we don't expect to lose any more this year."

Hoops

"It feels great because I know I wasn't the only one who deserved it," Foster said of the award. "I thought that the whole team played very well. Why I really feel good is because we won in a tight situation. That's the most important thing."
 Schueler was also an all-tournament selection after scoring 15 points, grabbing five rebounds and dishing out four assists in a head-to-head matchup with LSU's Dana Chatman, a preseason all-American.

 Chatman, also a member of the all-tournament team, scored 17 points to lead the Tigers. The Tigers' two starting forwards, Henderson and Annette Jackson-Lowery, each added 15 points.

Waugh led Iowa in rebounding in both games, hauling in 10 boards Sunday after a 13-rebound effort Saturday. Henderson was the Tigers' leading rebounder with nine boards against the Hawkeyes.
 Two freshmen, Nicole Tunnil and Tia Jackson, played big roles coming off the Iowa bench. Tunnil was the Hawkeyes' third-leading scorer with 12 points and Jackson was fourth with seven points.

 Tunnil and Jackson were two of 11 players Stringers used Sunday. The Iowa coach gave 13 different Hawkeyes playing experience Saturday.
 "That's something we'll probably do quite a lot this year," Stringer said. "We may use 13 or 14 players in some games."

Rose Bowl

Hawkeyes failed to do either one. "I'm very disappointed in losing the game," defensive end Jason Dumont said. "But we've got to keep our heads up. We're still going to the Rose Bowl, and we earned that. But it's very disappointing losing to Minnesota up here."
 "It's kind of bittersweet that we had to end the Big Ten season like this."
 Iowa finished its conference schedule at 6-2 (8-3 overall), tied for first place with Illinois, Michigan and Michigan State.

The consolation for the loss, however, was still earning the berth to the 1991 Rose Bowl where they will face Washington. Because the Hawkeyes had defeated all three of their conference co-champions, they will be headed for Pasadena.
 "All the other teams we tied with for the Big Ten championship and we still get to represent the Big Ten in the Rose Bowl," Iowa coach Hayden Fry said. "In my opinion that's the only way it should be since we defeated every one of those teams head up."
 "We're disappointed (in the loss), but we're extremely proud that for the third time in nine or 10 years the University of Iowa is going to the Rose Bowl."

 Since the Hawkeyes have rebounded from losses to Miami (Fla.) and Ohio State earlier this season, Dumont said he doesn't think the team will have any problems coming back from this loss.
 "This team's been rebounding all year," Dumont said. "We've got a couple weeks off now. We just have to keep our heads up, collect our thoughts and come back, get in some good practices for the Rose Bowl and go out there and have a good time."

 "I think this team has a lot of character," said defensive back Eddie Polly. "I don't think it'll be very hard to rebound at all. We have to redeem ourselves. We have to go out to Washington and show everybody that (beating) Michigan, Illinois, Michigan State wasn't a fluke."
 "We've got a lot of prove when we go out to Pasadena and play Washington because we're going out there to play ball. And we don't expect to lose any more this year."

Hawkeyes break Big Ten rushing marks

DI wire services
 IOWA CITY — Iowa's football team set three offensive records this season in addition to sharing the Big Ten Conference championship.
 The Hawkeyes set season marks for rushing yardage (2,560), rushing touchdowns (34) and first downs (285). The old records were 2,554 yards rushing in 1958, 32 rushing touchdowns in 1968 and 294 first downs in 1985.

only 39 percent of their shots Sunday, including just seven of 27 3-point attempts.
 Dale Turner led the Panthers with 18 points and Cedrick McCullough scored 17. Troy Muilenberg, Northern Iowa's top returning scorer, was 2-for-9 from the field and scored only seven points.
 Northern Iowa ended up in the seventh-place game after losing to Bucknell 71-57 on Saturday. The Panthers shot only 36 percent in that game, which was stopped with 17 seconds left because of a slippery floor.
 The tournament was played in an open-air gym and the hot, humid conditions made the court slick.

Home boy wins PGA's Australian
 SYDNEY, Australia — Brett Ogle of Australia shot a 2-under-par 69 Sunday and won the $385,000 Australian PGA championship by five strokes.
 Ogle was the only player to have four sub-par rounds over the par-71, 6,979-yard Riverside Oaks course.
 He finished at 11-under 273 and won $70,200. U.S. PGA champion Wayne Grady of Australia tied for second place with compatriot Rodger Davis at 278. Grady had a final round 67 and Davis a 70.
 American Lee Carter finished fourth at 279 after a final-round 72.
 "What do I expect of myself?" Ogle said. "I expect to be number one."
 "I'm not in this game to putter around and be happy — you want to beat the best in the world."
 Ogle had led four previous tournaments at Riverside Oaks and failed to win any of them.
 "But I was so determined to win by getting out in front and staying there," he said. "I wasn't going to let them get me."

Sportsbriefs

Quarterback Matt Rodgers became the third Iowa player to throw for more than 2,000 yards in consecutive seasons, joining Chuck Long and Chuck Hartlieb. Rodgers has completed 172 of 276 passes for 2,032 yards and 14 touchdowns.
 Last year, Rodgers passed for 2,222 yards.

 American defeated Northern Iowa 93-75 Sunday in the seventh-place game of the San Juan Shootout, the host team's first victory in its four-year-old tournament.
 John Cotte scored 27 points to lead the way as the winners shot 62 percent from the field. Javier Rolon added 21 points.
 Northern Iowa, coming off a 23-9 season, went 0-8 in the tournament. The Panthers made

Vukovich dies after crash
 BAKERSFIELD, Calif. — Bill Vukovich III, a third-generation race car driver and rookie of the year in the 1988 Indianapolis 500, died Sunday following a crash at Mesa Marin Speedway, a racing official said.
 The 27-year-old Vukovich had just completed a few practice laps when his sprint car slammed into a wall at about 11:30 a.m. PST, said Frank Lewis, president of the California Racing Association.
 "Basically he went into the turn, took his foot off the gas and went to hit the brakes to slow the car down," Lewis said. "The car locked up and he went straight into the wall."
 "He hit his head against the wall and that's what killed him," Lewis said.
 Vukovich, who was practicing for an afternoon race, was taken to Kern Medical Center where he died a short time later, Lewis said.
 Vukovich, who lived in Fresno, Calif., raced in Vukovich was the 1986 West Super Modified champion with six victories. The next year he reigned as the U.S. Auto Club Super Modified Champion, winning 12 of 17 races, including a record-tying seven straight.

Philadelphia's Calvin Williams, left, and Fred Barnett celebrate Williams' fourth quarter touchdown during the Eagles' 31-13 win over the previously unbeaten New York Giants.

Super Bowl 24½ put on hold as unbeaten get clobbered

The Associated Press

The Philadelphia Eagles and Los Angeles Rams happily ruined next week's battle of the unbeaten.

In one of the most anticipated non-playoff games in NFL history, the New York Giants and San Francisco 49ers were expected to meet on Dec. 3 in the first game ever between 11-0 teams.

But neither team made it to 11-0 on Sunday as the Eagles defeated the Giants 31-13 and the Rams forced six turnovers in a 28-17 victory that snapped San Francisco's record-tying 18-game winning streak.

"The Rams have a bad record, but they're not a bad football team, for whatever reason," 49ers linebacker Matt Millen said. "... I don't think we were looking ahead."

Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham threw TD passes of 49 yards to Fred Barnett and 6 yards to Calvin Williams. He also jumped in from a yard out for another score at the end of a drive of over 9 minutes as the Eagles, leading by just a point at halftime, scored twice in 22 seconds early in the fourth quarter to break the game open.

It was Philadelphia's fifth straight victory and improved its record to 7-4.

"We knew we could beat them. They knew we could beat them. We just didn't know how," Cunningham said.

The Giants lost for the first time in 14 regular-season games dating back to last Dec. 3, when the Eagles beat them 24-17. A victory would have clinched the NFC East title.

"It's a long year," coach Bill Parcells said. "I didn't think we could go through it without a couple of rough spots."

Chiefs 27, Raiders 24
Steve DeBerg threw three touchdown passes, two to Bill Jones, as Kansas City beat Los Angeles and moved into a tie for first place in the AFC West.

Both are 7-4 with five games remaining, but the Chiefs will win the division title if the teams finish with the same record because they swept the Raiders, having beaten them 9-7 at Arrowhead Stadium on Nov. 4.

The loss was the second in a row at home for the Raiders, who had won their 10 previous games at the Los

Pat Terrell and Vince Newsome

Los Angeles Coliseum.

The game was tied 17-17 before the Chiefs took control with Nick Lowery's 36-yard field goal and DeBerg's 11-yard pass to Jones, capping a 73-yard drive.

Vikings 41, Bears 13
Rich Gannon finished the first half with nine straight completions and three touchdowns, Herschel Walker had 176 total yards and Mike Merriweather led a dominant Minnesota defense to its fourth straight victory.

Walker returned the opening kickoff 64 yards and Minnesota (5-6) scored on all six first-half possessions.

The Bears (9-2) will have to wait at least another week to clinch their sixth NFC Central title in seven years.

Colts 34, Bengals 20
Rookie Jeff George threw for three touchdowns in his best day as a pro and Eric Dickerson rushed for 143 yards in Indianapolis' victory over Cincinnati, which fell into a tie with Pittsburgh for the AFC Central lead.

For the Colts (5-6), George completed 21 of 31 passes for 251 yards, throwing touchdown passes to Jessie Hester, Bill Brooks and Stanley Morgan. Dickerson, averaging 3.2 yards a carry since resolving his contract dispute six games ago, carried 22 times for one touchdown.

The Colts (5-6) led 31-6 before Cincinnati (6-5) rallied for two late touchdown passes by Boomer Esiason.

Packers 20, Buccaneers 10

Anthony Dilweg, filling in for the injured Don Majkowski, threw two touchdown passes as Green Bay handed Tampa Bay its sixth straight loss.

The Packers (6-5) won their third straight and surpassed the .500 mark for the first time since defeating the Los Angeles Rams in the season opener.

The Buccaneers (4-8), winless since beating the Packers in mid-October, could not sustain their offense despite Vinny Testaverde's 281 yards passing and no interceptions in 49 attempts.

Dolphins 30, Browns 13

Dan Marino threw touchdown passes on Miami's first two possessions and reached 30,000 career passing yards faster than anyone in NFL history as Cleveland lost its sixth consecutive game.

Marino, needing 146 yards passing to become the 11th NFL quarterback to reach 30,000, reached the milestone with a 13-yarder to Jim Jensen, which set up Sammie Smith's 4-yard touchdown run in the second quarter. Marino has played 114th games, 17 fewer than Dan Fouts when he reached 30,000.

Saints 10, Falcons 7

Steve Walsh completed a 6-yard touchdown pass to Eric Martin with 2:10 left, giving New Orleans a victory over Atlanta.

Chris Miller gave the Falcons their only lead of the day when he connected with seldom-used receiver George Thomas on a 51-yard touchdown pass with 7:06 remaining. But the advantage lasted less than two minutes as Walsh brought the Saints back on an 86-yard drive.

Steelers 24, Jets 7

Bobby Brister threw two short touchdown passes and Pittsburgh continued its mastery of New York, beating the Jets for the 11th time in 12 meetings.

The Steelers (6-5) scored 17 consecutive points in the second half and moved into a tie with Cincinnati atop the AFC Central.

Cardinals 34, Patriots 14

Timm Rosenbach threw for 188 yards and scored the first two rushing touchdowns of his NFL career.

Strange tips Faldo for a Skins victory

By Bob Green
The Associated Press

LA QUINTA, Calif. — Nick Faldo got wet. Jack Nicklaus got antsy. And, finally, Curtis Strange got a victory.

"It's always great to beat the best player in the world," Strange said after he'd gone four extra holes Sunday to subdue Nick Faldo of England in golf's Skins Game.

Strange, whose last official victory came in the 1989 U.S. Open, assured himself of another appearance in the four-man, two-day, made-for-television 18-hole event.

He defended his Skins Game title with $220,000 in earnings, almost as much as Strange made in a slump-ridden season that had him finishing a distant 53rd on the 1990 money-winning list.

Perhaps more important, he came out of a six-month slump with some of his best golf of the year.

"Now I can relax, get ready for '91 and have something positive to think about," Strange said.

He also has some good fortune to think about: a fairway shot that nestled in close to the flag while Strange was scolding a photographer for snapping his camera during the golfer's backswing; a bare-foot shot from the rocks that set up a critical birdie; and in the end, Faldo's mistake on the fourth playoff hole.

With $70,000 at stake and Nicklaus and Norman eliminated from the playoff, Faldo hit a 6-iron second shot in the water on the 18th hole.

That set it up for Strange to play safely to the middle of the green and two-putt from long range for a winning par.

Norman, like Faldo making his first appearance in this event, won a total of four skins and $90,000.

Nicklaus, the only man to play in all eight Skins Games, was shut out in Saturday's first nine holes. He won two skins and $70,000 with a 2-putt par on the 14th hole when Strange missed a 6-footer for par.

"I played a little better, but nothing stellar," Nicklaus said. "I won when the other guys messed up."

He also had a chance to pick up another $35,000 with a 4-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole. But Nicklaus backed away from the putt when an ant crawled on his ball, marked it, removed the insect and then missed the putt.

Faldo, winner of the Masters and British Open this season, won $70,000 Saturday but did not win a skin over the last day's play. He said he had stomach flu overnight.

Norman opened up birdie-birdie Sunday, winning $25,000 with a 10-foot putt on the 10th hole. His birdie on the 11th was matched by Strange and the $25,000 prize was carried over to the 12th.

Strange won there, collecting $50,000 with an 8-foot birdie putt.

Nicklaus was the next winner, on the 14th.

Strange won the next hole with a 12-foot putt and Norman won the next with a 15-footer.

The 17th and 18th were tied, setting up the playoff, and Strange's adventures in and on the rocks.

His drive on the next hole came to rest among some boulders fronting the water on the left.

"I thought it was all over," he said.

But he took off his shoes and socks for better footing on the rocks, and got a wedge shot up and out from 125 yards away. The ball rolled some 6 feet from the flag.

After Faldo had made a 12-footer for birdie, Strange put his in and extended the playoff. Nicklaus and Norman were eliminated at that point.

Faldo and Strange both birdied the next hole, and both parred the next, Strange getting up and down from a greenside bunker.

Then Faldo hit into the water.

"It's over and done," he said as the water rippled.

gentle Communicators, it's time to review spelling again. As an exciting feature, today's column is trifold; the information presented is in three separate, coherent parts.

Part I Basic spelling hints

Barbecue has no q. In fact, "Bar-B-Q," "B-B-Q," and all other mutations of the word are mindless, lazy manifestations of a conspicuous lack of education. Don't use them. Pretend you're intelligent. Spell barbecue with a c.

Cemetery has three e's. To help you remember this, think that when you get scared in a cemetery, you shout something to the effect of ceek!

Consensus has one c followed by three s's. Think of consent. Today's bonus lesson: A consensus is a general agreement, so general consensus is redundant.

License is spelled with the two s-sounding letters in alphabetical order (c before s). Today's second bonus lesson: The Associated Press recommends the singular possessive construction for driver's license.

Memento has two e's followed by one o. Though a memento helps you remember a moment, think of it as an aid to your memory to help you spell it.

Minuscule has one i followed by two u's. Do not think of mini to remember how to spell it (though that does make sense, doesn't it?); think of minus.

Missile has two i's. Like projectile, it ends with the letters ile. Separate has two a's sandwiched between two e's. Remember that if you separate sep and e, you will always find a rat (I don't know what it means either, but it helped me learn how to spell separate).

Vacuum has one c and two u's. It's one of my favorite words to spell.

Withdrawal has two a's. It has nothing to do with drawl, which is speech with drawn-out vowels.

Part II
Words with suffixes that cause spellers to wonder, "To e or not to e?" (with apologies to William Shakespeare)

Involve and manage, both two-syllable words, retain their e's when they take most suffixes: involvement, manageable.

Judge, like and size have one syllable apiece and generally do not retain their e's: judgment, likable, sizable.

Part III
Words with at least two sets of double letters

Variations of commit and occur require an extra letter between the root and a suffix that begins with a vowel: committed, committing (but: commitment); occurred, occurrence, occurring.

The following words simply have lots of double letters: accommodate, aggression, bookkeeper, committee, embarrassment, possession.

Until next time, happy communicating.

Hopper laments wasted years

By Bob Thomas
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The years between his landmark movie "Easy Rider" and his recent return to film prominence were a waste, says Dennis Hopper.

"The drugs and alcohol that I was involved with stopped me from working, stopped me from being creative. The problem with being an alcoholic and a drug addict is that you don't think it's happening. You don't know that you're addicted and don't admit that you're addicted. It's always somebody else's fault that you're not working," he said.

"Those were wasted years. I've directed six movies now. I should have directed 20. It's unfortunate, because all that was ever important to me was the work. I justified my own addictions because I was an artist," and all the great artists, of course, were drug addicts and alcoholics. Because of that stupidity, I don't yet have a body of work that I consider important."

Hopper is striving to make up for lost time. His sixth film as a director, "The Hot Spot," starring Don Johnson, has been released to hot and cold reviews and so-so business.

While not in the Scorsese-Spielberg-Pollack range of directors, he has no trouble finding employment, particularly for hard-textured works such as his sensation-causing "Colors" (which was blamed for scattered theater violence) and the current film, a study of sex and crime in a small Texas town.

"This is a departure for me," he said. "I actually used a novel by Charles Williams. You might say we were of like mind. He wrote the book in 1951 and it was published in 1952. Then in 1962, he wrote a screenplay with Nona Tyson; it was intended for Robert Mitchum."

"I found that script and updated it to now. It's about an amoral drifter (Johnson) who comes to a small town in Texas and sells cars. ... It's a throwback to the film-noir dark movie, a pulp novel. It's fun. I like it."

Johnson finds himself caught between two women, an oversexed schemer (Virginia Madsen) and an innocent young beauty (Jennifer Connelly) who is also manipulative. He also gets involved in bank robbing, blackmail and murder — "all the good stuff."

Hopper considered other stars before deciding on Johnson, late of "Miami Vice."

"I edited the movie for a year, and now I can't imagine anyone else playing the role," said the director. "People should really look at him as a force to be dealt with in movies. He could be a major star. There's a place there for him."

He found Madsen while watching television via a satellite dish during the filming of "Flashback," in which he acted but did not direct. He saw her as a throwback to Lana

Turner, perfect for the femme fatale role. He remembered Jennifer Connelly from her role as a 12-year-old ballet dancer in "Once Upon a Time in America." He considers her "more beautiful than Elizabeth Taylor and a better actress."

Hopper talked about the notices for "The Hot Spot," and said, "It's getting some good stuff and some bad stuff. But I think that runs with the territory. It's a hot movie. But then, I've always gotten widely divergent reviews, starting with 'Easy Rider.' 'Colors,' 'Out of the Blue,' also. It sort of follows me around like a pet snake."

Nothing in Hopper's background provided any hint of his later notoriety. He was born in Kansas in 1936 and spent much of his youth on his grandparents' farm five miles from Dodge City. His parents moved to San Diego, where Hopper won a scholarship to the Old Globe theater. A taste of Shakespeare emboldened him to try Hollywood, and he landed a seven-year contract at Warner Bros.

Hopper appeared in some impressive films: "Rebel Without a Cause," "Giant," "True Grit" and "The Sons of Katie Elder." After a few low-budget biker films with Peter Fonda, the pair combined their forces in "Easy Rider." The film's gritty realism revolutionized the industry. Its success also contributed to Hopper's 15-year tailspin.

Dennis Hopper

Hopper savors his new life: "I'm married (to dancer Katherine LaNasa, 31 years his junior), I have a new son, Henry Lee, born in September. I have two daughters. The 17-year-old just entered college; my 28-year-old is involved in film development here. I couldn't be happier."

Dennis Hopper probably will never shed his reputation as a world-class hellraiser of the '60s and '70s. Just recently a New York tabloid captioned a photograph, "Bad boy actor-director Dennis Hopper..."

Is he a bad boy?

"No, I don't think so," said the filmmaker, who resembled a stockbroker in his expensively tailored suit. "Maybe a bad gentleman."

Insight, B-movie tactics propel 'Shock Corridor'

By Kimberly Chun
The Daily Iowan

B-movie director Sam Fuller originally intended his 1963 post-noir-period noir "Shock Corridor" as an expose of the conditions in American mental institutions. The film instead reels down the twisted path of the American psyche, unraveling the American state of mind — post-Eisenhower rigidity, pre-Vietnam, pre-high '60s carnival.

Pulitzer-hungry reporter Johnny Barratt (Peter Breck) feigns an incestuous obsession with his sister in order to be committed to an asylum and to solve the murder of one of its inmates. He's been befitting his stint as a crime reporter, turns to its traditionally "sensationalistic" subjects in "Shock Corridor." Fuller works the naturalistic material with an inclusive enthusiasm that kicks out a Euripides quote at the film's start and close, and edits in home-movie footage from Japan and Africa.

Fuller's original and intense visual style, which won him a cult following and reverence from French auteurs such as Godard, is admirably on display in "Shock Corridor." The camera climbs up a stripper's length of leg to rest on a phallic tower feather boa, a hallucination clears the hospital corridors with torrential rain climaxing with a lightning bolt striking a man's head, Constance Towers capers like a femlin-ish devil on Johnny's shoulder, and "nymphomaniacs" rip away at men while singing nursery rhymes.

Some film theorists have accused Fuller of sexism and "right-wing" politics; yet his portrayals of the insane and the outcast are consistently sympathetic, and his female characters are textured, confident and complex. Authority figures range from the vaguely questionable to the outright slimy, and the protagonist himself appears less savory than the deranged inmates or savvy girlfriend.

Much has been written of Fuller's preoccupation with insanity. The all-American, 20th-century nightmare he found as a crime reporter, and the madness of modern warfare he discovered as a soldier in WWII, finds its most strikingly bizarre, campy yet incisive expression in "Shock Corridor."

"Shock Corridor" will be shown at the Bijou Monday at 8:45 p.m. and on Tuesday at 7 p.m.

At the Bijou

"conditioned for a whole year to ride a crazy horse" but his stripper girlfriend Cathy (Constance Towers in "Naked Kiss," and at one time Fuller's wife) resists the charade and her part in the scenario as his victimized sister. Cathy doubts Johnny and their relationship will emerge unscathed. "Hamlet was made for Freud, not you," she argues in some of Fuller's snappiest and gut-busting lines ever.

Doctors diagnose Johnny as being on a "sexual power kick," yet his contrived disease segues nicely into his real power trip. He's in the trap for the dinero, the Pulitzer and directing the psychoanalytic authorities' drama. En route to discovering the killer, however, Johnny encounters the real victims of larger, societal and political control forces — a Southern soldier wrecked on a dream of the confederacy, a black prodigy who imagines himself as the Grand Wizard of the KKK, a nuclear physicist with the mind of a six-year old — and in the confusion, Johnny struggles to retain his identity and single-minded intent.

Fuller's frankly unflinching eye,

Idol's charmed life continues with ill-timed injury to eye

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Rock singer Billy Idol, on a comeback tour after a serious motorcycle accident, was briefly sidelined in Europe by a contact lens injury.

Idol, in the second week of his "Charmed Life" European tour, canceled four shows after his corneas were lacerated by grit that got under his lenses, spokeswoman Sharon Chevin said Friday in London.

The injury occurred during an outdoor show in Oslo, Norway, on Saturday, said another spokeswoman, Sarah McMullin, in Houston. Idol has a home in Los Angeles.

The painful injury forced Idol to cancel concerts earlier this week in Gothenberg, Sweden; Copenhagen, Denmark; and Brussels, Belgium, his spokeswomen said.

He planned to perform as scheduled Friday night in Frankfurt, Germany, Chevin said. To protect his eyes from damage under the bright stage lights, Idol was to wear sunglasses, with a patch over his more badly injured right eye.

The Brussels concert has been rescheduled for Saturday, and Idol intended to try to reset the other canceled shows, Chevin said. The European tour started Nov. 14 in Helsinki, Finland.
