U.N. condones use of force after Jan. 15

China abstains in 12-2 vote; Cuba, Yemen cast dissents

By Victoria Graham
The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — The U.N. Security Council, led by the United States, voted 12-2 Thursday to authorize military action to free Kuwait if Iraq does not withdraw its occupying troops and release all foreign hostages by Jan. 15.

The only other time the council, created 45 years ago to iron out international disputes, in its history has sanctioned force to counter aggression was during the Korean War.

China abstained, while Cuba and Yemen cast dissenting votes in a session arranged by the United States in a show of international solidarity against Iraq.

In an extraordinary meeting of 13 foreign ministers, the council handed Iraqi President Saddam Hussein an ultimatum to vacate the small oil-rich sheikdom that his troops invaded Aug. 2, or risk military conflict with U.S.-led forces.

In Washington, President Bush called the U.N. vote "a very strong and powerful message. It will go around the world loud and clear that this guy's got to get out of there."

"If Iraq does not reverse its course peacefully, then other necessary measures, including the use of force, should be authorized."

James Baker
secretary of state

"Once again, the United Nations, exercising its proper responsibility and its peacekeeping function, made a very powerful statement. Everybody ought to understand how strong it is and how important it is," Bush said minutes after the vote.

"Our aim today must be to convince Saddam Hussein that the just, humane demands of the Council and the international community cannot be ignored," said Secretary of State James Baker, top representative for the United States as president of the council.

"If Iraq does not reverse its course peacefully, then other necessary measures, including the use of force, should be authorized," said Baker. "We must put the choice to Saddam Hussein in unmistakable terms."

"If war is imposed upon us by the United States, this will be our destiny," said Iraqi Ambassador Abdul Amir al-Anbani. "Our people will not kneel, we will rise to this responsibility."

Baker at this juncture appeared to glare at the Iraqi representative and flipped through a copy of the U.N. Charter. British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd twirled his earphone. All the ministers in session wore dark suits and sat somberly around a circular table in the vaulted council chamber.

Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmad al-Jaber, however, was not pacified, saying, "The intransigence of the Iraqi regime is pushing the region to a conflagration that we do not want but which appears to be the only avenue to restore our rights."

Security Council Sanctions Military Force

United Nations Resolution 678, approved today by a vote of twelve to two with one abstention, gives Iraq a final chance to withdraw its troops from Kuwait by Jan. 15. After that, the measure authorizes "all necessary means" to dislodge them.

Bush has no plans for draft

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Thursday the nation's all-volunteer army "is as strong as it can be" and he has no plans to ask Congress to reinstitute the draft.

In an interview at the White House with Univision, the Spanish language network, Bush said he was "definitely not" considering bringing back the draft.

"Because we don't need it. We have an all-volunteer army. It is as strong as it can be," the president said. "We don't need a draft."

Bush also said he wanted to confer further with congressional leaders on the subject of a possible "lame duck" session of Congress to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis. He meets Friday with congressional leaders.

"I am very anxious to know what they think would be productive because it is important that we send a solid signal," Bush said.

The president indicated he was not considering calling Congress back into session and would prefer not to do so.

Study claims 1 in 500 students HIV-positive

By Daniel Q. Haney
The Associated Press

BOSTON — About one in 500 U.S. college students is infected with the AIDS virus, and further spread of the deadly disease is likely on campuses unless students change their sex habits, a study concludes.

Based on the new findings, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control estimates that between 25,000 and 35,000 college students are infected with HIV, the AIDS virus. "Risky behaviors are occurring, and now we know we have the infection. It is cause for concern and appropriate attention," said Dr. Helene Gayle, who directed the study.

The CDC study is the first nationwide attempt to judge the prevalence of HIV on college campuses, said co-author Dr. Richard Keeling of the American College Health Association.

It shows that the virus is probably about as common there as in the public at large.

However, the researchers cautioned that AIDS could still spread dramatically among college students, just as some other sexually transmitted diseases have done.

"I think probably the most important thing from this study is that it shows us the potential," said Keeling. "The combination of a sexually transmitted disease tossed into campus behavior has the potential for very serious consequences in the future. It also shows us we have an opportunity to prevent that."

The study was based on random testing of blood samples drawn from 16,863 students at 19 schools, most of them large state universities. It found that 0.2 percent of the students were infected with the virus.

"This is both good news and bad news," commented Leighton Ku, a public health specialist at the Urban Institute in Washington. "It's good that it's not sky high, as some might have feared. But it's bad that it's there at all."

Among other results of the study, published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine:

■ Overall, the survey found 30 AIDS-infected students. All but two of them were men.

■ The infection rate was 0.5 percent for men and 0.02 percent in women.

■ Those over age 24 were seven times more likely than younger students to be infected.

■ At 10 of the 19 campuses, the survey turned up no AIDS infections at all.

The researchers noted that the risk of AIDS for college students is far lower than among some other groups, such as male homosexuals and drug abusers.

"The potential clearly exists, however, for the further spread of HIV infection in this population, and preventive measures are needed," they wrote.

Keeling said the study underscores the need to persuade college students to use condoms, limit the number of their sexual partners and otherwise reduce their risk of becoming infected.

"Our concern is that now that we

HIV on College Campuses

About one in 500 college students is infected with the AIDS virus.

Other results of the first nationwide attempt to judge the prevalence of HIV on college campuses:

- AIDS-infected students of the 16,863 studied at 19 schools: 30
- Infection rate for men: 0.5%
- For women: 0.02%
- Those over age 24 were seven times more likely than younger students to be infected.
- At ten of the 19 campuses, the survey turned up no AIDS infections at all.

The study was based on random testing of blood samples drawn for other purposes at student health centers. Universities that took part were Central Missouri State, Emory, Mississippi State, Northwestern, Rutgers, San Diego State, Southern Illinois, California at Berkeley, Colorado, Connecticut at Storrs, Georgia, Kansas, Maryland at Baltimore County, Maryland at College Park, Massachusetts at Amherst, New Hampshire, Southern California, Texas at Austin and the University of Washington.

have documented the presence of HIV on college campuses," he said, "it is essentially a reservoir from which the virus can spread to other people if we do not succeed in changing behavior."

Keeling, who also runs the student health service at the University of Virginia, said students often feel as though AIDS is something that does not concern them. Other factors that may enhance the spread of the virus include widespread casual sex, poor skill at negotiating safe sex practices and the frequent combination of sex while drinking, which makes people less cautious.

However, Ku participated in a recent study that found that condom use among teen-agers has doubled during the past decade.

"Young people are aware of AIDS and are doing things to prevent AIDS," Ku said.

Dr. Steven Weinstein of the University of Massachusetts Medical Center recommended more intensive programs by colleges to change students' behavior and attitudes toward sex, drugs and alcohol. "We want to create a new milieu on campus, where safer sex is the in thing, and it is unacceptable to be blitzed out of your mind," he said.

The study was based on testing of blood samples drawn for other purposes at student health centers. Even though the researchers promised not to reveal AIDS rates at individual campuses, Keeling said many schools refused to participate because they feared being labeled as "an AIDS college."

Universities that took part were Central Missouri State, Emory, Mississippi State, Northwestern, Rutgers, San Diego State, Southern Illinois, California at Berkeley, Colorado, Connecticut at Storrs, Georgia, Kansas, Maryland at Baltimore County, Maryland at College Park, Massachusetts at Amherst, New Hampshire, Southern California, Texas at Austin and the University of Washington.

Additional prowler incidents reported

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

The UI Department of Public Safety reported two more residence hall prowler-type incidents Thursday and refuted previous media reports that it is looking for one black male suspect.

Director William Fuhrmeister said Thursday that two women in separate rooms on the 1100 floor of Quadrangle reported a prowler in their rooms about 3 a.m. Nov. 16. The reports bring the number of such incidents this semester to 12, Fuhrmeister said.

In addition, Fuhrmeister said the department is looking for more than one suspect in the 12 cases — possibly three or four — and at least one of the "prowlers" was a white male.

Although the Quadrangle incidents occurred in separate rooms, the women gave similar descriptions of the intruder. They described him as a very tall black male with a shaved head standing about 6 feet 2 inches tall. They said he had a medium build, no facial hair and glasses, Fuhrmeister said.

Previous cases have involved black men with varying hair styles and one involved a "scroungy looking" 5-foot-4-inch brown-haired white male wearing glasses, dirty jeans, a baseball cap and a tan jacket, Fuhrmeister said. He did not say when or where the incident with the white male occurred.

One of the Nov. 16 Quadrangle incidents was classified as an assault case because the man touched the victim's leg. In the other case, the man ran out of the room when the victim woke up. He did not touch the victim, but still faces the charge of criminal trespass, Fuhrmeister said.

Of the 12 reports, Fuhrmeister said most were classified as assault or criminal trespass. One has been classified as third-degree sexual abuse and another as assault with intent to commit sexual abuse.

According to the security department's incident log for Nov. 16, a man may have tried to gain access to a third room in Quadrangle that morning. The log shows that at 3:09 a.m., an unknown subject attempted to enter a room in Quadrangle. There is no further information about that report on the log, except that it has been classified "inactive." The two "active" incidents were reported at 3:08 a.m. and 3:15 a.m.

Because suspect descriptions in the reported incidents vary widely, Fuhrmeister said the department does not believe all of the intrusions — some involving physical contact — are being committed by the same person.

"There may be three or four people doing them. We don't believe it to be the same person."

William Fuhrmeister
director, UI Department of Public Safety

"We have three or four or five different descriptions, so we can't say that the suspect is 5'6" or 6'2", he said. "There may be three or four people doing them. We don't believe it to be the same person."

Fuhrmeister added that these types of incidents are not new to the university. He has been with the UI security department for 29 years, the last five as its director.

"We have some every year," he said. "This has been happening for about the last 10 years — it's not that it just started this year. This year it seems to get more exposure than in the past."

His feelings were echoed by Quadrangle Hall Coordinator Dwayne Thomas, who has been associated with the residence halls for three years. "The number of incidents this year have gotten way more exposure than before," Thomas said.

Thomas said the residence halls have done their part to try to protect the residents.

"There's a number of things that we as hall coordinators are doing," he said. "We've sent out personal letters, offered a number of programs about safety and different issues related to safety, put up displays on bulletin boards which have emergency phone numbers

Student groups unfunded without UISA budget

By Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

The clock continues to tick for the UI Student Assembly, as a formal budget proposal failed to pass at Thursday's special meeting.

As a result, UI student groups' programs continue to remain unfunded.

In a memo addressed to UISA President Mark Havlicek and given to the entire assembly Monday, Dean of Students Phillip Jones said the UISA has until Dec. 7 to come up with an equitable budget proposal. If the UISA fails to do this, Jones said he will give UISA President Mark Havlicek the power to create a budget himself under Jones' guidelines.

The meeting was not a total loss, however. The three bodies of the UISA passed bylaws legislation that will be able to continue to hold meetings. This legislation explains voting procedure and determines the salaries for executives and secretaries.

The legislation was not approved on the floor of the full UISA, however.

After the legislation had been debated for more than an hour and a half on such things as the definition of a regular meeting, the meeting was called due to an insufficient number of senators in attendance.

Each of the three bodies met separately to pass the bylaws legislation. According to the UISA constitution, legislation can either be passed if all three bodies approve it as one group or if they meet separately.

The next UISA meeting is scheduled for Dec. 4.

Farm group: Risk exists for all-out trade war

By Steven P. Rosenfeld
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — The head of Iowa's largest farm group warned Thursday of the rising risk of an all-out trade war.

The comments came at the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation convention in Des Moines. Next week in Belgium, international negotiators will attempt to salvage an agreement on reducing farm support programs and export subsidies.

"At this point, it does not look all that optimistic," said Merlin Plagge of Sheffield, president of the Iowa group, with 154,000 family members.

The head of the American Farm Bureau, Rudd hog farmer Dean Kleckner, is an adviser with the U.S. delegation at the talks under the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

He said government farm supports and export subsidies distort trade, preventing the United States from competing on an equal footing with other agricultural producers and slowing the growth of developing nations.

Courts

By Beth Chacey
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City minor will face charges as an adult for first-degree arson and third-degree criminal mischief after he failed to attend military school, a provision that would have allowed him to be charged as a juvenile.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Richard N. Bedrossian, 17, 504 Kenwood Drive, faces charges in adult court for two separate incidents.

Records state that on Sept. 5 Bedrossian slashed the tires on his parents' van, causing $400 worth of damage. On Sept. 11 he put school books and papers in a pile within 5 feet of his home, doused them with a half-gallon of gas, and threatened to ignite them with a lighter, records state.

A preliminary trial has been set for Dec. 18.

An Iowa City man has been charged with second-degree theft after allegedly helping a woman steal merchandise valued at $611.50 from Sycamore Mall.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Cecil W. Gott, 25, RR 4, Box 5, was working at the Sycamore Mall as a janitor for Midwest Janitorial Inc. between 11 p.m. and 5:30 a.m. on Sept. 23 and 24 when he helped a woman carry a box out of the mall that contained two stuffed bears and five gold chains.

Bail has been set at $5000 and a preliminary trial is scheduled for Dec. 18.

An Iowa City man has been charged with first-degree theft after allegedly stealing personal property.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Robert P. Mahoney, 35, 26C Meadowbrook Estates, took the personal property from 418 E. Benton St. on July 1 after being forced to leave the residence by a court order. Court records did not state the reason for the order.

A preliminary hearing has been set for Dec. 18.

An Iowa City man has been charged with assault causing injury after allegedly striking a man repeatedly in the face.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Andrew Johnson, 32, 42 E. Towncrest Traylor Court, grabbed the victim by the neck, knocked him down and struck him in the face with his fist. Johnson admitted to police that the victim had not struck him but had "swung at" him and missed.

A preliminary trial has been set for Dec. 18.

World AIDS Awareness Day is Saturday

Emphasis to be on women with HIV/AIDS

By Susan Stapleton
The Daily Iowan

Saturday's World AIDS Awareness Day will bring the haunting facts about AIDS a little bit closer to the Iowa City community. The day has been set aside for emphasizing the role of AIDS, particularly in the lives of women.

"The day is held to draw attention to the increase in AIDS victims and to highlight the ongoing programs," said Ellen Van Laere of the Johnson County Health Department.

AIDS, acquired through the Human Immunodeficiency Virus, is a fatal disease spread when an infected person's semen, vaginal fluid or blood enters the bloodstream of another person through oral, vaginal or anal sex. Needles or syringes used and shared by people infected with the virus can also spread the disease.

The World Health Organization, the health agency of the United Nations, now estimates that eight to 10 million people worldwide are infected with HIV. Projections for 1990-91, based on the current number of HIV-infected people, estimate that 500,000 people will develop AIDS, and 200,000 of those will be women. This figure means that the number of women who will contract AIDS over the next two years is expected to be larger than the total number of women infected during the past decade.

The Spread of AIDS

AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) is a fatal disease caused by a virus known as HIV. AIDS can be passed during sex by infected semen, vaginal fluid or blood getting into the bloodstream of another through oral, vaginal or anal sex. AIDS can also be spread through infected needles and syringes or contaminated blood transfusions.

AIDS Information

The National AIDS Hotline provides U.S. Public Health Service information on AIDS. The call is free and you do not have to give your name. The hotline offers 24-hour service to answer questions you may have about the disease, including:

- the location of AIDS counseling and test centers near Iowa City that provide confidential or anonymous services.
- the cost of the HIV antibody test.

"HIV/AIDS is now one of the 10 leading causes of death in women of childbearing age," said Jane Getmell, assistant director of the UI Hospital Hygienic Lab.

"The number of children who will develop AIDS in the next few years will continue to increase even if we manage to curtail the spread of AIDS among women of childbearing age," she added.

Linda Sellers, media coordinator for the UNA-USA Iowa Division, said the state reported no cases of AIDS in 1984. This year, there are 21 cases so far.

Van Laere said 200 Iowans are currently infected with HIV. But she stressed that this figure doesn't adequately represent the actual number of people who carry the AIDS virus, since it can lie dormant in the body while its carriers spread it to their sexual partners.

One of the newest developments in the AIDS epidemic is how it has begun to affect rural Iowa populations.

"The chances of (acquiring) AIDS are seven times greater in rural areas than in urban areas," Sellers said. "People in Iowa just think they're immune because they live in Iowa. The only thing that will change that is if something happens to them or someone who is close to them."

The World Health Organization announced the theme "Women and AIDS" as a reflection of the increasing impact of AIDS on women, both in the increasing numbers of women with the disease and as the role women play in preventing infection and caring for people infected with HIV and AIDS.

Locally, AIDS Awareness Day will be observed by the AIDS Coalition of Johnson County with the topic "Women and AIDS" at its next monthly meeting, which will take place 5:30 p.m. Tuesday at Trinity Place, 320 E. College St.

Speakers who will discuss the issues of women and AIDS include Sellers; Dorothy Paul, executive director of the UNA-USA Iowa Division; and speakers from the Iowa City Emma Goldman Clinic for Women and the UI Women's Resource and Action Center.

Furthermore, the UI Museum of Art will close its doors Saturday in conjunction with the national "Day Without Art" in recognition of the members of the artistic community who have contracted the disease (see related story, page 11A).

The AIDS Coalition and Gay People's Union will also host a speaker Monday from 7-9 p.m. in the English-Philosophy Building, Room 304. Kevin Sitter from the Red Door Clinic in Minneapolis will present a HIM program titled "HIV and the Young Gay Community." The program focuses on "being sexual as gay/bisexual individuals and couples affected by HIV."

The Johnson County Health Department also has held an ongoing, introductory event called "Safer Sex Parties for Women" at the Emma Goldman Clinic.

Area groups organize for holiday charity work

By Wendy Alesch
The Daily Iowan

Area businesses, agencies, churches and services groups are pulling together to assist needy families during the holiday season.

Project Holiday, sponsored by the United Way, is a coordinated effort between local groups to make the season more enjoyable for the less fortunate by providing gifts and food through a variety of different programs.

Gift trees will be placed in local businesses, service groups and churches. Cards representing the wishes of children, disabled adults and low-income elderly will be put on the trees. People can pick the cards off the tree and choose a toy, game or clothing item between $25 and $40.

The gifts are then returned to the place where the tree is located to be matched up for distribution. An estimated 1,200 gifts will be donated through this project.

Gift tree locations include: American College Testing, Iowa City Credit Union, Hills Bank in Coralville, First National Bank, K mart, Mid-America Savings Bank, Hawkeye State Savings Bank, Sycamore Mall, Perpetual Savings, National Computer Systems, Rockwell International and numerous local churches.

In a related program, needy parents can receive gifts through the Ecumenical Consultation of Christian Congregations. Children can pick up various items for their parents at St. Mark's Church Dec. 8. The parent gift program will enable children to give traditional gifts like wallets, scarves and ties to their parents.

Donations for the program are encouraged, and unwrapped presents can be brought to St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 2675 E. Washington St.

Gifts as well as food will be distributed on Dec. 20 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the National Guard Armory. The Crisis Center, 321 E. First St., is accepting donations for food baskets and the 1,000 turkeys and vouchers to purchase turkeys that will be distributed to area families.

The Free Lunch Program will provide a traditional Christmas dinner to be prepared by the Agudas Synagogue.

The Boy Scouts are also participating in the drive against hunger this holiday season. Bags were distributed to surrounding homes earlier this week and will be picked up Dec. 3 filled with food items.

Some of the items the Scouts have requested are stuffing mix, canned fruits and vegetables, assorted pie fillings and cranberry sauce. Other food that will help are canned and boxed prepared items. Food can also be left in Project Holiday drop boxes.

The Iowa City Public Library will also attempt to enrich the minds of children this holiday season. The library is accepting donations of new and used children's books to distribute for Christmas. Books can be dropped off at the library and at Mazzo's Pizza, Lower Muscatine Road, or the ICPL bag at the Old Capitol Center.

People or groups can adopt an agency by donating money or volunteering time, and individual agencies can be contacted to find out what their specific needs are.

Another program taking part outside of Iowa City is the Homeless Children's Trust's Christmas Shopping Party in Cedar Rapids.

In its second year, the project is expected to benefit 250 children from Johnson and five other Iowa counties. The project will allow homeless families to spend $50 on each child to purchase Christmas gifts. The program will include an old-fashioned Christmas party. Interested donors of time or money can call HACAP's Developmental Division at 366-7631.

Layoffs increase Iowa's unemployment rate

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa's unemployment rate was pushed up to 4.1 percent in October by layoffs in construction and manufacturing, a state official said Thursday.

That is up from 4 percent in September but below the 4.2 percent unemployment rate in October of last year, Cynthia Eisenhauer, head of the Department of Employment Services, said.

Eisenhauer said the October increase "reflected an aberration in the usual seasonal trend" that generally sees unemployment slip during the fall as schools open a new year. The last time the jobless rate grew during October was in 1981 as the state headed into a farm-based recession.

During the month, there were 62,400 Iowans without work, up from 58,700 during September. In October 1989, there were 64,600 jobless Iowans.

"Records on claims activities show that layoffs in construction and manufacturing increased in October, contributing to a higher level of unemployment," she said.

UI looks at evaluating student 'learning'

Monitoring results new college trend

By Jessica Davidson
The Daily Iowan

Finding out what students have learned in their four, five or six years in college is the goal of a new program being considered by the UI and the other regent institutions.

Reviewing student performance and monitoring an institute's effectiveness — called student outcomes assessment — has become a trend at universities and colleges, said UI Vice President Peter Nathan.

In a Nov. 13 meeting, Nathan told the Faculty Council that the Board of Regents, state legislators and the governor were requesting the new program to demonstrate "value added" to the students' educations.

"It allows us to document that we've done a lousy job or prove we're doing a good one," he said.

Nathan said he hopes the program will show that the UI is adding significant value to undergraduate education.

"I hope the data will allow us to go to the governor and say 'students leave here better prepared to be better citizens,'" he said.

Several council members expressed concern over any assessment programs.

Pharmacy Associate Professor Bernard Sorofman said he was concerned an assessment program would end up as a single test.

"Then people would start teaching the test and not educating the students," he said.

Even if the program is not just a test, Sorofman said there could be problems because of the extra effort it would require.

"Do people want more work? I think that depends on whether or not it means a better product. And I really don't know if (an assessment program) would mean that for the university," he said.

Elizabeth Burns, associate professor in family practice, said she wondered if the program would be a liability, with students returning after not succeeding and holding the UI responsible.

"One of my concerns was what is this obligating us to do," she said. "Where is the down side? No one is talking about that."

Faculty Council President Steve Collins said there is a "large reservoir of faculty concern" about assessments, but he added the program is still in its very early stages.

A committee of representatives from the UI, the University of Northern Iowa and Iowa State University was formed to look into the student outcomes assessment.

UI Acting Associate Vice President T. Anne Cleary, committee chairwoman, acknowledged that in some cases, there is reason for concern.

One of Cleary's biggest concerns is that schools are using overly simplistic practices, such as minimum competency tests for graduation.

"The public wants a three-hour test to be more informative than years of teachers' records and grades," she said.

This simplistic approach, especially at the college level where studies diverge into different majors, is less accurate and more expensive than other methods.

One such simplistic approach would be to buy an outside organization's test to give to all graduating college students, which Cleary said could cost a fortune.

"As if you could find out from a single score if (students) have learned anything," Cleary said. But she said such a test is probably "not in the cards at all."

Instead, the new assessment program will most likely be a formalization of programs already in place in the different departments. The departments would add the assessment finding to their five-year reviews.

According to a survey distributed by Cleary's committee, all UI departments already have some kind of assessment practices, such as field experiences, graduate school acceptance rates and retention studies.

"All of us are involved in evaluation of what we do. It's a non-stop process," Cleary said. "Those of us who are teachers evaluate in our own minds, every day we teach, how that class went, did the students understand. We give examinations, papers and projects. So we spend a lot of our time evaluating whether students are learning what it is we want them to learn."

The UI Faculty Senate passed a motion Tuesday approving principles on which the new program would probably be based.

These principles, developed by the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges Council (NASULGC) on Academic Affairs, are nationally recognized as a basic starting point for an assessment program.

Cleary said the most important aspects of the NASULGC principles are that it leaves evaluation in the hands of faculty, acknowledges the need for different evaluations for different departments and requires cost effectiveness.

The faculty senates of the UI and the other two regent institutions have all approved the principles as a general, philosophical statement, according to Collins. The vice presidents of the universities now have to work out a program in practice.

An assessment program is now required by the North Central Association, which is in charge of accreditation for several surrounding states, as part of the process of university accreditation.

Cleary said whatever program is created, it is unlikely to mean any major changes for the UI.

"Evaluation is supposed to have an impact on instruction, and I think that is already going on," she said.

She said student assessments, if done right, have a positive role to play in education.

"If you have a licensing exam and you find out no one is passing, you might want to reflect on whether or not you have to change the program. Evaluations feed back, one hopes, into the improvement of instruction. That's what we're all about."

Waterloo reserve unit called to active duty in Persian Gulf

The Associated Press

About 134 U.S. Marine reservists from Iowa City, Dubuque, Cedar Rapids and Waterloo were called to active duty Thursday morning and are headed for the Persian Gulf.

The 2nd Battalion Battery D Marine Reserve unit based in Waterloo will head to Camp LeJune, N.C., on Saturday and will later proceed to the Middle East.

The unit has members from all over Eastern Iowa.

In addition, a Naval reserve medical unit based in the upper Midwest has been identified for possible activation in support of Operation Desert Shield.

Fleet Hospital 23 has more than 900 Naval reservists, most of whom are medical care professionals, assigned to a number of detachments throughout Iowa, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, and Illinois.

Pro urges student athletes to take studies seriously

By Stacy Williamson
The Daily Iowan

Student athletes today are caught in a catch-22, Pat Toomay, a former NFL defensive end, said in a lecture Thursday evening.

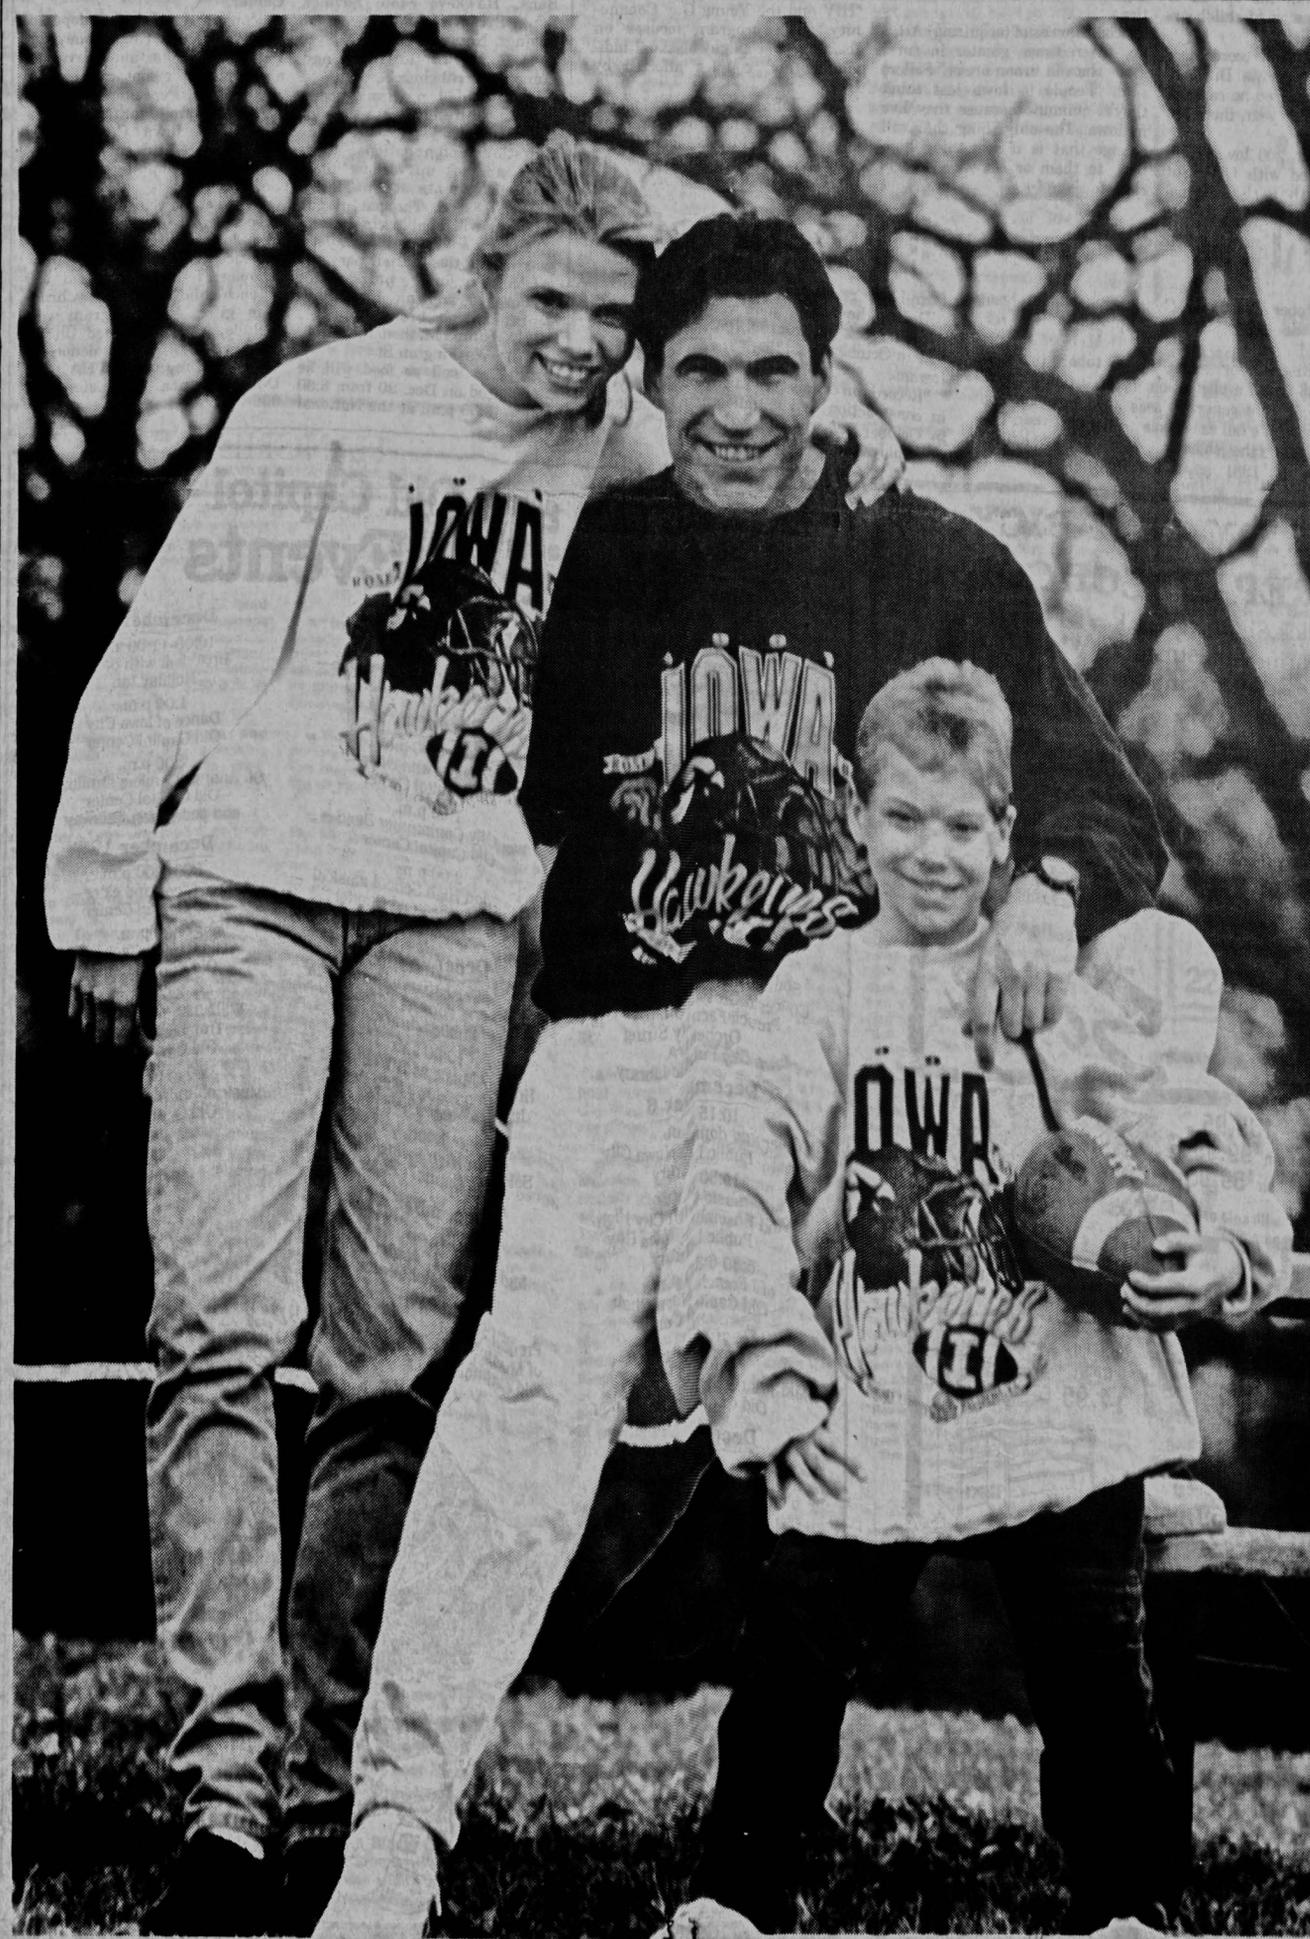

Toomay spoke to an audience composed largely of UI student athletes and coaches. In his speech, he spoke of this "double-bind" in which students often find themselves — they are expected to perform well on the field as well as in the classroom.

Toomay, who also played football for Vanderbilt University, told of the pressures he faced playing for a college team while trying to attend classes.

He said that when he entered the team, his academics took as much time as football, the team had a bad record and community support was low. When a new coach took over and the team became successful in its conference, academics began to take a back seat.

During the team's boom semester, community support grew, as did the "perks" team members received from members of the adoring community, Toomay said. But at the same time, his grade point average sank to a 1.6.

He advised students involved in athletics to watch out for their own best interests in this conflict and not get lost in the glory of the game.

Fired policeman denied jobless benefits

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — A former policeman who threatened a prosecutor and once falsely accused a resident of having AIDS cannot collect jobless benefits, the Iowa Court of Appeals said Thursday.

The court said Jesse Guerra, who had been a police officer in Onawa for about eight years, also had used his flashlight to break lights in a vehicle and had circulated a memo falsely claiming a resident suffered from AIDS.

The court upheld a lower court decision denying jobless benefits to Guerra.

Under unemployment insurance laws, benefits can be denied to fired workers if they are discharged for misconduct, a term that's defined on a case-by-case basis.

In Guerra's case, the court pointed to several incidents.

Guerra was fired after calling a prosecutor and telling him "you sell me out again . . . and you'll be in trouble," court records said.

In a later call, Guerra warned "he would be waiting for the county attorney when he left his office."

The court said that fits the definition of misconduct, particularly when viewed in light of Guerra's earlier troubles.

"On one occasion he intentionally broke the back light of a vehicle with his flashlight," the court said. "On a second occasion, he was responsible for preparing and circulating a memo falsely stating (a man) had AIDS. These two problems are documented and are not challenged."

Court records said Guerra admitted calling the prosecutor but denied threatening him.

"The findings support a determination of misconduct when viewed as the agency did in the context of the two earlier incidents," the court said.

Court upholds triple murder, arson conviction

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa Court of Appeals Thursday upheld triple murder and arson convictions of a man charged with setting a 1983 apartment fire that killed a Mount Pleasant family.

Orville Luke had sought a new trial, saying his lawyers had not raised all the issues he wanted brought out during his trial and on appeal.

"Luke is not entitled to a perfect attorney," the court said. "He is entitled to competent representation ensuring a fair trial."

A March 1983 fire raged through an apartment complex in Mount Pleasant, killing Frank and Shirley Adler and their 8-month-old daughter, Anita. Luke and Terry Vorhies were charged with setting the fire.

Vorhies pleaded guilty to lesser charges and testified against Luke, who was convicted of arson and three counts of murder. Luke was handed three consecutive life terms that he is serving at the Iowa State Penitentiary at Fort Madison.

The Appeals Court already upheld the convictions, but Luke sought a new trial saying his lawyer refused to raise some issues.

Luxury tax takes effect Jan. 1

By Marilyn Hauk Essex
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowans who fancy expensive sports cars might buy before the end of the year to avoid a new federal tax, but there will be little effect on sales of jewels and furs costing at least $10,000, industry experts say.

"I would think if anyone is contemplating a car over $30,000 they would do it right away," said Gary Thomas of the Iowa Automobile Dealers Association. He said sales of cars subject to the luxury tax aren't rare in Iowa.

But for fur and jewels, predictions were different.

"I just don't buy a lot of stuff for $10,000," said Peter Henter, president of the Association of Iowa Merchants. "I don't know a lot of people who do."

"How many people buy that kind of jewelry?" asked Nancy Henter, wife of Peter and president of the Iowa Jewelers and Watchmakers Association. "I don't really see how it will affect sales."

"We're typical of Iowa furriers — we have the better business customer," said Roger Rhomberg, owner of Rhomberg Furs in Dubuque. "Yet, $10,000 is somewhat of a choke level for Iowa."

William Baum of Josephs Jewelry in Des Moines estimated that jewelry subject to the luxury tax would account for 5 percent or less of sales in Iowa.

He said the Des Moines area has more people who buy jewelry in that price range and said he is selling more expensive items to people buying early to avoid the tax.

"I just finished making a sale this morning for $35,000."

Under the deficit-reduction bill signed by President Bush on Nov. 5, a tax of 10 percent is applied to the portion of a retail sale that exceeds $10,000 for furs and jewelry. The threshold is $30,000 for automobiles, $100,000 for private boats and yachts, and $250,000 for private airplanes.

Retailers in some parts of the country have been advertising "Buy now and beat the 'luxury tax.'"

"I haven't seen any advertisements like that in Iowa," Peter Henter said.

Most who would be hurrying expensive purchases to beat the tax deadline would know about the law regardless of advertisements, he said.

Thomas said he didn't know of any dealers making such advertisements but predicted it would "stimulate some new car sales that possibly wouldn't have happened until later in the year in 1991."

"It may push up sales by two or three or six months," he said.

Court decides not to reinstate guard

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa Court of Appeals on Thursday refused to reinstate a Waterloo airport guard who claimed his employers told him to fake security checks to avoid flight delays.

Heinz Hofmann said the city and airlines that employed him decided to fire him to reduce Federal Aviation Administration fines when the agency discovered airport security equipment did not work.

Court records said Hofmann was a security guard at the Waterloo Municipal Airport when the FAA conducted a 1988 security check by sending a simulated pipe bomb in a case through the airport's X-ray gear.

The simulated bomb got through, court records said. Hofmann said his employers knew the equipment did not work but told him to pretend otherwise to avoid delay-ing flights.

Allowing the employers to tell a security guard to fake checks "places the air traveling public at risk," he said.

"We join Hofmann in condemning any airlines that would place concerns of efficiency over passenger safety, but we do not join Hofmann in asserting his discharge violated public policy," the court said. "We fail to find any connection between disallowing Hofmann's discharge and the promotion of air travel safety."

The court said the case would have been stronger had he been fired for refusing to fake the security checks.

"A more analogous situation would have arisen if Hofmann had been discharged for refusing to fake safety searches or for reporting safety irregularities to the FAA," the court said.

Polish candidate advocates nuclear arms

By John Daniszewski
The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland — The businessman challenging Lech Walesa for the presidency advocates arming Poland with 100 medium-range nuclear missiles to ward off aggression and guard the country's sovereignty.

Stanislaw Tyminski makes the argument in "Sacred Dogs," a self-published book that outlines his pro-business, anti-tax and anti-union philosophies.

The 260-page paperback, initially printed in July and distributed by his campaign, appears to contradict denials made during the campaign. In an interview Monday with The Associated Press, Tyminski denied he advocates nuclear weapons for Poland.

Tyminski was not available Thursday to discuss his book. Campaign aide Krzysztof Pawlisz said that only the candidate could comment on the apparent contradiction.

Tyminski also has branded as "lies, lies, lies" published reports that he traveled to Poland at least seven times in the 1980s on visas issued by the Polish consulate in Tripoli, Libya.

However, Polish Interior Minister in September after 21 years in Canada and Peru, came from nowhere in a field of six to reach the second round of the country's first popular presidential election. He obtained 23 percent of the votes Sunday, defeating Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki.

The owner of several computer and communications companies, Tyminski leads the fringe Libertarian Party of Canada and has Polish, Peruvian and Canadian citizenship.

His sharp criticism of alleged government mismanagement and his claims to economic expertise as a self-made millionaire have struck a responsive chord, especially among rural voters and the young.

The rapid rise of his campaign has startled Solidarity leader Walesa, who is trying to decide how best to counter the outsider's unexpected success before the Dec. 9 runoff.

"I can fight against any serious opponent and this man is an amateur. . . I don't know how to react to it," Walesa said Wednesday night.

Walesa on Thursday accused former Communists of mounting a "counterrevolution" by supporting Tyminski, and said a Tyminski victory could lead to "something like a civil war."

In his book, Tyminski devotes a full chapter to the need for nuclear weapons in Poland.

He says the bomb really should be called the Z-bomb.

"Most physicists who worked on the A-bomb were forced to leave Germany by Hitler due to racist policy. . . That is why the 'A' bomb really should be named the 'Z' bomb," he said, alluding to the word "Zyd," Polish for Jew.

Krzysztof Kozlowski said Thursday that Tyminski did make the seven trips via Libya between 1980 and 1989.

Tyminski's book is filled with military imagery, portraying Poland as a country under attack that must battle for its very existence, especially against German economic dominance. The first chapter is titled "I Put a Weapon in Your Hand" and the second is "Go to War!"

Ballard will not confirm that Martinez has accepted the job as the top U.S. drug policy adviser.

Other officials speaking on condition of anonymity said Martinez had accepted the offer. The position is subject to Senate confirmation.

Martinez was accompanied by his wife, Mary Jane. After the appointment is formally announced, he is expected to visit with congressional leaders before returning to Florida for the weekend.

In last month's elections, Martinez, 55, lost a re-election bid for governor to Democrat Lawton Chiles.

Martinez nominated as next U.S. drug czar

The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Gov. Bob Martinez on Thursday flew to Washington to be nominated as the nation's next drug czar.

The appointment, which has been rumored for weeks, will take place Friday morning at the White House, officials with the Martinez and Bush administration said.

Martinez will replace William Bennett, whom President Bush wants as the next chairman of the Republican National Committee.

"The governor is going to overnight tonight in Washington and will be in Washington tomorrow," said Chief of Staff Brian Ballard.

Bush signs bill to allow increase in immigration

By Rita Beamish
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Thursday signed a massive revamp of the nation's immigration law that increases the number of people allowed to immigrate and strikes down exclusion of entry on the basis of sexual orientation and political views.

Bush hailed the first major overhaul of immigration law since 1965 as a "complementary blending of our tradition of family reunification with increased immigration of skilled individuals to meet our economic needs."

It changes the 1950s-era immigration ban against communists and homosexuals, but would still allow the secretary of state discretion to bar legal status to those considered to be terrorist or foreign policy threats.

The bill will increase overall immigration from 540,000 in 1989 to 700,000 people a year for each of the next three years and stabilize the annual total at 675,000 after that.

The bill's three-year total of 2.1 million visas for permanent residence is up from 1.7 million in the previous three-year period.

The changes Bush signed into law were hailed by Irish and other European immigrant interests who stand to benefit from the increase, gay groups, Filipino veterans and Salvadorans fleeing their war-torn country.

The provisions of the new law emphasize reuniting separated families, with immigrants sponsored by family members increasing to 520,000 per year through 1994, and at least 480,000 a year thereafter.

The bill will also:

- Allow more people to immigrate on the basis of desirable employment skills, reserving 140,000 visas for those with at least special skills, up from 54,000 in the past.
- Give special status to wealthy investors, setting aside 10,000 visas for those with at least $500,000 to invest in businesses that create new jobs.
- Eliminate the automatic exclusion of AIDS sufferers from legal status. The legislation leaves it up to the Health and Human Services Department to decide whether to list AIDS as an excludable disease.

■ Earmarks 40,000 visas a year for individuals from Italy, Poland, Ireland and other countries virtually shut off from immigration in the last 20 years because priority was given to people with family here, most of whom were from Asian and Latin countries.

■ Reserves at least 16,000 of those 40,000 visas a year for Irish immigrants, making Ireland the only country with a guaranteed number of visas.

Welfare rolls increase in 49 states in past year

By Mitchell Landsberg
The Associated Press

Welfare rolls increased in 49 states in the past year as the economy slumped and governments tried harder to get food, cash and medical care to the needy.

An Associated Press survey of caseloads in all 50 states found that only Wisconsin had bucked the trend, partly because it has enacted pioneering programs to get people off welfare.

The increases in the benchmark welfare program, Aid to Families with Dependent Children, have come at a time when many states are already struggling to balance their budgets.

There also have been increases in virtually every state in the number of people receiving food stamps and Medicaid.

The biggest increases have come in economically battered New England and in the Southwest. The worst-hit state has been New Hampshire, where the number of families receiving AFDC increased a staggering 46 percent from September 1989 to September 1990, from 6,399 to 9,372.

"Those numbers are startling," said Tom Pryor, an administrator in New Hampshire's Office of Economic Services. "The primary reason that we see for that increase has been the decline in the New England economy."

Elsewhere in New England, AFDC caseloads went up 25 percent in Vermont, 19 percent in Connecticut, 14 percent in Maine and Rhode Island and 10 percent in Massachusetts.

Although the regional recession was the prod that pushed people onto welfare in the Northeast, other reasons were more important in other states. For instance, changes in immigration law allowed more non-citizens onto the welfare rolls, an especially important factor in California and the Southwest.

The AFDC caseload was up 9 percent in California, where nearly 2 million people were receiving benefits in September. It rose 23 percent in Arizona, 17 percent in Texas and 14 percent in New Mexico.

Many states attributed the increase to their own efforts to reach out to poor people and enroll them in welfare programs. Some have adopted a "one-stop shopping" concept for social services, so that poor people seeking one form of public assistance are given access to others.

Delaware has "one-stop shopping," and also has tried to bring its services closer to the needy.

"Now there are basically offices in everybody's neighborhood," said Phyllis Hazel, director of the state Division of Social Service. "We've brought the services closer to the community and frankly we're real proud of that."

Another factor in expanding the welfare rolls has been a federal mandate that makes Medicaid available to more pregnant women and infants. Not only has that caused huge jumps in Medicaid caseloads — they are up 46 percent in Indiana, for instance — but it has caused a spillover into other programs.

"When someone comes in and asks for Medicaid, we don't just check to see if they are eligible for Medicaid, we check to see if they are eligible for more services," said Sherron Heinemann, a spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Human Services.

S&L regulator relates criticism from '5'

By Larry Margasak
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The "Keating Five" senators hit savings and loan examiners with a "full court press" of criticism at a 1987 meeting, and one of the lawmakers pushed for changes in unfavorable findings on an embattled S&L, one of the regulators testified Thursday.

Michael Patriarca told the Senate Ethics Committee, which is investigating the senators' conduct on behalf of Charles Keating and his Lincoln Savings and Loan, that the lawmakers appeared to have decided "that we were in fact harassing Lincoln, that we were incorrect — wrong."

Patriarca said Dennis DeConcini at the April 9, 1987, meeting acted as "master of ceremonies," and added, "It was my impression quite frankly that Sen. DeConcini was negotiating on behalf of Lincoln."

He said the senator was "attempting to get us, the regulators, to change our position on the examination, the examination findings and conclusions to more closely align with the position that Lincoln espoused."

Keating was contending during this period that Lincoln was sound and that regulators were trying to harass the institution, which was seized by the government in April 1989 at a potential cost to taxpayers of more than $2 billion.

The regulators told the five senators at the meeting, according to a transcript, that allegations against Lincoln were so serious that criminal referrals would be made to the Justice Department.

However, Patriarca said, "The tone that the meeting took was that the senators seemed to have made up their minds, on the basis of information acquired before the meeting, that we were in fact harassing Lincoln, that we were incorrect, wrong and basically we got the full court press."

and advice about not leaving doors unlocked, and put fliers on doors about locking doors when you leave or when you come in to your room to sleep.

"I think we've done our part, but we're finding that in a number of the incidents people say 'my roommate was coming home late and I left the door open' or 'I went to the bathroom and forgot to lock it when I came back.'"

The victims' doors have been unlocked in several of the prowler-type incidents, Fuhrmeister said.

Fuhrmeister also said four security officers patrol the UI's 10 residence halls from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. and that the residence halls "have their own people checking who's coming in and out of the dorms."

Former U.S. soldier held without bail

By Todd Richissin
The Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — A former U.S. soldier with relatives in Kuwait and Iraq was ordered held without bail Thursday on charges he plotted to kill President Bush and other government officials and attack military installations.

Jamal Mohamed Warrayat, 32, allegedly discussed a plan to kill Bush, Secretary of State James Baker and members of Congress with an undercover FBI agent.

Court papers also said he conspired, as the leader of a group of seven people, to attack unspecified military installations in North Carolina and Texas.

"At this point in time there is no evidence to show that any foreign government promoted or assisted in this activity," said U.S. Attorney Michael Chertoff. He would not comment further or suggest a possible motive.

Warrayat's attorney, Terence Scott, said his client denies all charges. He said Warrayat was born in Kuwait, came to the United States in the early 1970s and served about four years in the Army until 1979. Scott said his client worked as a taxi driver until recently but was unemployed at the time of his arrest.

Warrayat, from Rutherford, spoke to a special undercover agent of the FBI near the end of August, according to court papers, and allegedly told the agent in Arabic that he and members of his group had weapons and materials to carry out small terrorist operations.

During the conversation, Warrayat said his group was ready to attack the government officials and was looking for help obtaining explosives, money and technical training, according to court papers.

Warrayat said he had several machine guns but needed more weapons.

Consumer spending stagnates

By John D. McClain
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer spending, the driving force behind eight years of U.S. economic expansion, did not budge in October, the government said Thursday in a report analysts contend was further evidence of a recession.

"The consumer has retrenched," said economist Gilbert Benz of the Swiss Bank Corp. in New York. "It clearly supports those who say we're in a recession."

John S. Pappas, an economist with Kemper Financial Services in Chicago, agreed.

"It looks like consumer spending will be negative in the fourth quarter" and the gross national product will decline in both the current quarter and the first three months of next year, he said.

Consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity, was unchanged from September at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.73 trillion, the Commerce Department said. Personal incomes rose just 0.1 percent, to a $4.71 trillion rate.

The marginal increase in incomes failed to match the 0.6 percent increase in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index in October. It also was the smallest gain since incomes were unchanged in August 1989. Spending had posted gains each month since last May, when it was unchanged.

Disposable incomes, or incomes after taxes, also inched ahead 0.1 percent, down from a 0.4 percent gain the previous month. It was the smallest gain since after-tax incomes fell 0.1 percent last April.

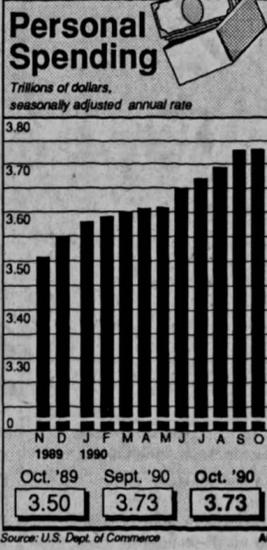

The spending and income figures were not adjusted for inflation. When adjusted, spending actually fell 0.7 percent after a 0.2 percent increase in September. Disposable income dropped 0.5 percent, even more than the 0.4 percent declines in the previous two months.

"Consumer spending can survive a lot of things — temporary shocks, consumer confidence, oil surprises — but three months in a row of negative disposable income suggests that people are going to have to cut back even more," Silvia said.

Indeed, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan on Wednesday noted that shrinking employment and the number of hours worked were causing personal income to decline while rising energy prices "are squeezing many household budgets."

"This drop in real purchasing power, along with plunging consumer sentiment, does not bode well for the near-term trends in consumer demand," he told the House Banking Committee.

Soviet Union faces serious food shortage

By Alan Cooperman
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev Thursday pronounced himself and other Communists "guilty before the working class" in a candid admission of blame for the country's worsening economy and political paralysis.

He told nearly 1,000 delegates to the 28th Moscow City Communist Party Conference that the Soviet Union faced increasing difficulties with food supplies, ethnic conflicts, crime and "a battle of laws that has led to a paralysis of power."

"The reasons," Gorbachev said, were "errors in the actions of central organs, above all in the Central Committee of the Communist Party, and including the actions of the general secretary and president."

Gorbachev, 59, is both the country's president and general-secretary of the 18 million-member party.

In his hourlong speech, he promised immediate steps to increase food supplies, reiterated his determination to hold the restive republics together and urged the delegates to keep the common man in mind.

"We are guilty before the working class, I think, all of us, and I personally take responsibility," he said.

Gulf

The Kuwaiti representative denounced the "wild beasts" from Iraq whom he said were pillaging his country and murdering his people. "The Iraqi aggressor showed no sense of mercy or compassion, indeed, no respect for the divine or human codes of conduct."

Previewing the U.N. vote, Bush said, "I think the main thing that I hope will come out of today's session of the United Nations is that we send perhaps the clearest signal of all to Saddam Hussein that the world is deadly serious about reversing this aggression and this economic oppression that he's wrought on many, many countries that can ill afford it."

Iraq's ambassador accused the council of preparing to let the U.S.-led multinational forces "lynch" his country.

"The council is but a willing tool in the hands of the American administration," al-Anbari said.

"Iraq calls for peace, it desires peace, not for us alone but for the entire Middle East region," he said. He linked Iraq's willingness to cooperate with a broader Mideast peace settlement that would include a homeland for Palestinians.

"Only the ministers of Yemen and the Ivory Coast did not attend the U.N. session."

"This would be the most dangerous resolution ever passed by the Security Council," al-Anbari said before the meeting, "and a violation of the U.N. Charter."

Iraq has said it would defy the resolution, as it has the previous 11 adopted since the invasion.

This latest council resolution strengthens Bush's hand with Congress and the American people in calling for offensive action against Baghdad.

Nine affirmative votes were required for passage. Any of the five permanent council members could have vetoed the measure. Three — the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain — sponsored the brief resolution. The other permanent members are China and France.

The resolution gives Saddam "one final opportunity, as a pause of goodwill," to retreat. He has refused to leave and has defied all previous resolutions condemning the occupation of Kuwait.

Saddam responded defiantly to the developments at the United Nations. He declared he was not afraid of fighting the United States, which he said had been overly influenced by "Rambo" movies.

"The Americans are still influenced by Rambo movies but this is not a Rambo movie. This is something different," he said.

"We do not underestimate American military power, but we scorn their evil intentions," he said in remarks carried by official Baghdad radio.

Saddam said his army had the technology to defeat sophisticated weapons like the Stealth fighter bomber. There have been conflicting reports about whether Saddam might have the ability to detect those weapons.

In other gulf-related developments Thursday:

- Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, who has urged patience in the gulf crisis, shifted his tone and called for "military pressure" to force Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.
- However, he repeated his desire to avoid war, and did not elaborate on what he meant by military pressure. He spoke to a Communist Party organization in Moscow.
- In Washington, there were more appeals for caution in the gulf. James Webb, a former Navy secretary in the Reagan administration, called the buildup of 430,000 troops in the gulf a mistake and said attacking Iraq would compound it.
- The U.N. resolution does not explicitly mention the use of force, but authorizes member states "to use all necessary means" to implement council resolutions that demand Iraq's immediate and unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait.

Musical detective work inspires duo of lutenists

By Jennifer Weglarz
The Daily Iowan

In Iowa City it is a rare occasion when more than one lute player performs publicly. But tonight three lutenists will join forces in a concert of French and English early baroque music at Krapf Organ Studio in the UI Music Building. The 8:30 p.m. performance is free and open to the public.

Guest lutenist August Denhard from Chicago will join Oleg Timofeyev and Philip Blackburn in pieces for voice, lute and viola de gamba. Denhard studied at the Peabody Conservatory and currently teaches at Xavier College. He also plays the tuba professionally. Timofeyev has been a Visiting Artist in Residence at the UI since 1989. Blackburn has assisted in the direction of the UI's early music group, Collegium Musicum, since 1985.

Blackburn, originally from Cambridge, England, and Timofeyev, a native of Moscow, met about a year ago, and their musical relationship has blossomed into the performance group A Musical Summit. The early music duo, which plays music from not only the Western European Renaissance, but also from the 19th-century Russian romantic movement, has performed across Iowa and the Midwest.

The music on tonight's program comes from the 16th-17th century transition of the Late Renaissance into early baroque. At the dawning of the baroque, says Blackburn, a separate bassline became more popular. "A different texture is available. There's a different relationship between the melodic line and the voice, and the bassline foundation of the harmony."

Included in tonight's program are several "Airs de cours," a popular genre from the French early baroque. "Airs de cours" are aristocratic, refined musical settings of poetry about love or death, says Blackburn. One of his favorites — "Enfin la beauté que j'adore" by Etienne Moulinié, a plaintive and dignified piece influenced by the sarabande — is also on tonight's program. Other pieces will come from English late Renaissance/early baroque composers John Wilson and Nicholas Lanier.

The baroque, in music as well as the other fine arts, became famous for ornamentations and affective devices used to symbolize emotions. "People suddenly realized that words could be set to particular kinds of motives that symbolized certain kinds of expressions," says Blackburn. "A rising line might indicate a question or a breath in an unexpected place could be an expressive sigh."

Timofeyev explains that a large and satisfying part of their collaboration is digging out the various rhetorical devices in the pieces. Through this detective work, he says, they are able to "find something about (a piece) that becomes so personal and so intimate."

"Once we're convinced of its musical worth we can transmit it to someone else," continues Blackburn. Playing musical sleuth is where the fascination in the music lies for him, tying in with his interest in composition. "Trying to get behind the ink on the page. There's obviously some kind of expression going on in a language foreign to my own."

Early music manuscripts are available in edited versions, but Timofeyev and Blackburn prefer to go to the original manuscripts and inject their own interpretations. To reach the performance stage, they go through a lot of pieces. "Ironically, almost everything is still readable," says Timofeyev, but "tablature notation only tells where to put your fingers, not how it sounds." After playing a piece only once it isn't always obvious what the musical nuances are, especially since the composers used personal markings on their manuscripts to mean certain things instead of the standard markings provided by composers in modern notation.

This process of ferreting out what the composer may have intended "is one of serendipity," adds Blackburn.

Campy sex comes to Bijou, courtesy of Ebert

By Lindsay Alan Park
The Daily Iowan

Russ Meyer's 1970 film "Beyond the Valley of the Dolls" opens with a disclaimer warning that it is not a sequel to "The Valley of the Dolls," the 1967 bomb based on Jacqueline Susann's blockbuster trash novel. By the end of the film, however, we discover the sleazebag paranoid "Beyond" to be a virtual sequel to "Reefer Madness."

But where the creators of the now uproarious 1936 anti-pot film were dead serious, "Beyond" screenwriter Roger "Thumbs Up" Ebert (yes, the film critic) has said in interviews that he deliberately crafted every laughable, cliché-ridden line of dialogue to fulfill director Meyer's vision of the film as a parody of his own specialty genre, the sexploitation flick.

The story involves Kelly, Casey and Pet, members of an all-girl "rock" band who tire of high-school gigs and want to hit the big time. After performing a dinosaur song on the premises of L.A. (reminiscent of Oliver and Lisa Douglas singing on New York and Hooterville), they move to Babylonian Hollywood, where they are instantly engulfed in a hip cesspool of fame, money, sex and drugs.

Kelly takes up with Lance Rocke, "half actor, half gigolo," and dumps her manager-boyfriend, Harris, who in turn succumbs to the panting, pastily groomed porn queen, Ashley St. Ives.

Pet, meanwhile, glides through a party crowd to take up with Emerson, the first waiter/law student she encounters, and whom she subsequently cheats upon with the first heavyweight boxing champ she meets at the next party.

The stunning Casey, a repressed lesbian with 3-inch eyelashes, withdraws from the others into a pill-induced stupor to await her seduction by an eager fashion designer, Rozanne.

The resulting affairs, breakups, fights, rapes and murders compose the remainder of the film, which could have been titled "Josie and the Pussycats meet Caligula."

Though loaded with breasts, buns and appealing Cinemascope expanses of unblemished skin, the film is ultimately not very erotic. This is partly because of its distracting busyness, but also because of Meyer's narrow vision. "I won't do a sex scene unless it personally turns me on," Meyer said in a 1969 interview.

Another fun character is Ronnie "Z-Man" Barzell, the party-throwing agent who introduces his guests to Kelly as though he were reading out loud from the book jacket of one of Miss Susann's novels. Ronnie's sexual advances toward Lance Rocke are spurned, leading me to believe that sex between males isn't one of Meyer's turn-ons. Of course violence is another thing. "You will drink the black sperm of my vengeance," Ronnie warns Lance, shortly before Manson-style mayhem breaks loose.

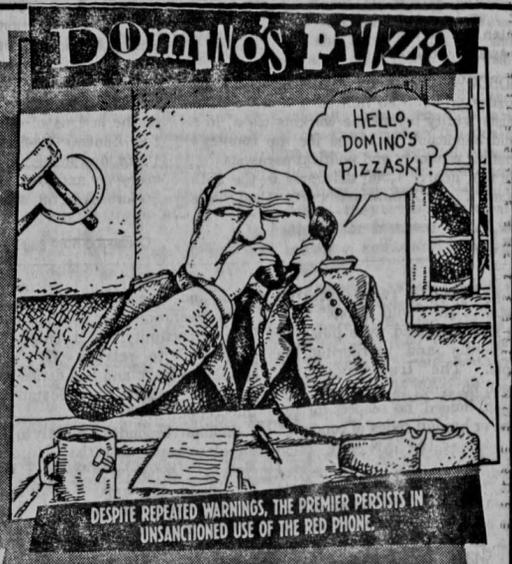

"Beyond the Valley of the Dolls" will be shown at the Bijou Friday, Nov. 30, at 9:15 p.m. and Saturday, Dec. 1, at 9:15 p.m.

CLOSE-UP: CASUALTIES OF WAR
A SYMPOSIUM organized by
The Institute for Cinema and Culture
FRIDAY, November 30
3:30pm: CASUALTIES OF WAR (1989)
Directed by Brian de Palma. Taking its cue from a brutal episode of America's Vietnam war, de Palma's highly controversial film seeks to plunge its viewers into the hellish nightmare world of Vietnam by focusing on a squad of soldiers caught in a moral dilemma as one of them refuses to participate in the abduction, rape and murder of a young Vietnamese woman. 35mm, 120 min.
Introduction: Pat Toomay (and possibly David Rabe), the film's screenwriters.
7:00pm: CASUALTIES OF WAR (1989)
This second screening will be followed by a panel discussing the ethical issues raised by de Palma's unsettling drama. Participants: George Nickelsburg (School of Religion), James McCue (School of Religion), David Stern (Philosophy), Kathleen Newman (Spanish and Portuguese), and Steven Vlastos (History), as well as the film's screenwriters.
SATURDAY, December 1
9:30am: WORKSHOP
This workshop will focus -- under the guidance of the film's screenwriters -- on the genesis of Casualties of War: from Daniel Lang's journalistic account in the New Yorker, to a screenplay by David Rabe and Pat Toomay, to the de Palma film, with an emphasis on where de Palma went with the script. Participants are likely to have familiarized themselves with the Lang story and the screenplay of the movie, both of which are on reserve in the main library under Steven Vlastos, 36B:176. Arts events planned for Awareness Day

The Daily Iowan

The UI Museum of Art and Project A at UI Hospitals and Clinics join in a worldwide observance of AIDS Awareness Day with events scheduled for Friday, Nov. 30, and Saturday, Dec. 1.

As part of "A Day Without Art," a nationwide observance in the arts community that coincides with AIDS Awareness Day, the museum will be closed all day Saturday, Dec. 1.

The UI Hospitals and Clinics will present a free public performance of Paul Selig's one-act play "Terminal Bar" at noon Friday, Nov. 30, in the Atrium on the First Floor of the John W. Colloton Pavilion.

The World Health Organization has designated Dec. 1 as its third annual AIDS Awareness Day. To mark that occasion, "A Day Without Art" was organized by Visual AIDS, a group of art professionals intended to facilitate and promote AIDS-related events in arts organizations, museums, commercial galleries and other cultural institutions.

The closing of the UI Museum of Art is intended to increase public awareness of deaths in the art community resulting from AIDS. Across North America a broad range of activities is planned for "A Day Without Art." Included are special exhibitions, performances, readings, rituals, lectures, memorials, closings of museums, galleries and exhibitions, shrouding and removal of artworks, moments of silence, and cancellations and interruptions of performances.

"Terminal Bar" is a story about the unlikely meeting of a prostitute, a Southern housewife and a gay preparatory school student at a bar in a plague-ridden New York. This play, which has a message about the reaffirmation of life in the face of death, premiered at the Yale School of Drama, and has been performed in New York.

Old Gold Singers continue tradition

By Michael Williams
The Daily Iowan

While all that glitters may not be gold, the UI Old Gold Singers have recently added some polish to their show under the new direction of Randy Buikema, who has brought a more Broadway-oriented style to their performances.

The latest adaptations will be on display this weekend at Hancher Auditorium, as the Old Gold Singers present their annual "Cocoa and Carols" concert. The program will include various Christmas carols and other holiday songs, including the traditional audience sing-along, "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer." Also, as the name promises, complimentary cocoa will be available in the Hancher lobby. The Saturday performance will be at 8 p.m. and the Sunday performance at 6:30 p.m.

Music

"I think we are doing things that have a little bit more meaning," says Buikema, a doctoral student in choral conducting and assistant director of Kantorei, the UI's premier vocal ensemble. "We do a wider variety of dance styles. Old Gold is more musical theater-oriented than show choir-oriented."

In addition to doing some of the choreography for the group himself, Buikema has hired choreographers Lee Adami and Pam Bristow, who have helped expand the group's repertoire.

"We're doing a wider variety and range of dance steps," Buikema says. "The choreographers try to dig a bit deeper into the meaning of the songs — if that's possible with some of these pop tunes — and each number has a different look."

Another one of the "new" additions to the Old Gold repertoire is actually quite old. "We resurrected the University of Iowa Alma Mater (by G. Mills), which had been lost for about 20 years and which we found in the archives," says Buikema, adding that the group's rendition has been made more accessible with the addition of sign language.

Though Old Gold performances incorporate dance as well as singing, Buikema emphasizes vocal talent in auditioning students. "First of all, Old Gold is a choir. Singing ability is No. 1," he says. Music majors make up about half of the group, but all of the members share a love of musical performance.

UI English major Joel Aalberts has been a member of Old Gold for three years. "It's a good place to perform and to meet people who are interested in the exact same things as you are," he says. "Everyone who's there is interested in performing and interested in that style of music, and so am I."

Alisha Ellwood, a sophomore open major, was involved in chorus and musicals, as well as All-State chorus and other honor choirs in high school. She first heard Old Gold when it performed for her honor choir and met some of the singers when she came to the UI for the All-State Music Camp during the summer. "It's a great way to meet new friends. We're a really close family group," she says.

The UI Old Gold Singers will present their annual "Cocoa and Carols" performance at 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 1, and at 2 and 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 2, in Hancher Auditorium.

Tickets for "Cocoa and Carols" are $5 for adults and $4 for students and youth 18 and under, and are available from Hancher Box Office, which is open 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. weekdays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday and 1-3 p.m. Sunday. To order tickets by phone, call (319) 335-1160, or toll-free within Iowa, 1-800-HANCHER. Orders may be charged to VISA, MasterCard or American Express.

Desert dance

UI dancers Marc Slayton and Monique Gruter in a scene from Laurie Fields' "Desert Sun," one of several pieces in a concert of new student choreography to be given Friday and Saturday, Nov. 30 and Dec. 1, in the Space/Place Theatre in North Hall. Admission to the concert is $3.

Concert to include original works

The Daily Iowan

The UI Symphony Band will present a free concert at 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 30, in Clapp Recital Hall.

The program, conducted by UI Director of Bands Myron Welch, will feature two original works for band as well as transcriptions of works originally written for orchestra.

The concert will open with the "Circus Overture" of American composer William Schuman. Originally written for orchestra, the "Circus Overture" is a lively and energetic curtain-raiser.

The other orchestral transcription on the program is the tone poem "Don Juan" by Richard Strauss. One of the great virtuoso showpieces for orchestra, "Don Juan" is known for its soaring main theme, representing the protagonist, played by the full horn section.

"The Leaves are Falling" by Warren Benson is one of the original band compositions on the program. A setting of Martin Luther's well-loved hymn "A Mighty Fortress is our God," Benson's score was inspired by the poem "Herbst" ("Autumn") by the German poet

Rainer Maria Rilke.

The concluding major work on the program will be the "Symphony for Brass and Percussion" by Alfred Reed. Composed in 1952 and revised several years later, the symphony is in three movements.

The composer has described the work as "an attempt at exploring... only brass and percussion sonorities in an extended work." It utilizes traditional band styles in each movement. The first includes a hard-driven march, and the second is a more lyrical song form. The finale embraces the Latin-American musical idiom, with its extensive use of percussion.

SOCIALISM IN THE UNITED STATES

Discouraging victory

For a minute it seemed like the popularity of socialism might have died from the same kind of sudden seizure that took disco in its sleep. Leaving nothing more relevant than a legacy of embarrassed fans privately wondering, "Karl Marx? Andy Gibb? What were we thinking?" But America is the land of opportunity — the sort of place where people can be convinced that killer collars look good, and that socialism (never mind the revolutions) might not be so bad after all. Thus, Bernie Sanders, self-proclaimed socialist, has been recently elected to the U.S. House of Representatives.

In one sense it is refreshing to see that a member of a third party can get elected to Congress, even if he has to run as an independent. Ballot access laws make it almost financially impossible for third-party candidates to participate in anything but local elections. With the ever-increasing similarity between Democrats and Republicans, Sanders' victory is somewhat encouraging.

On that note, however, all cause for celebration ends. The perpetuation and acceptance of socialist philosophy in any degree is a serious threat to human rights and the existence of any moral nation designed to protect them.

In a recent interview with The Daily Iowan, several local socialists glossed over the definition of socialism with humorous creativity, not the least bit surprising in the extent of its evasiveness.

While these modern socialists claim to reject the legitimacy of fascist or totalitarian regimes, they refuse to acknowledge the reality that "socialist democracy" amounts to an acoustically palatable term for dictatorship. Whether wealth is redistributed by the whim of a tyrant or the will of a majority, such a system cannot be implemented without the threat and use of force.

By decree or by vote, any socialist system depends on the premise that a person has no right to the fruits of his labor, the products of his own mind, and therefore to his mind itself. Whoever claims the right to a person's mind — in the name of government, society or greater good — claims the right to practice slavery.

Certainly no single member of Congress is going to change the shape of American government. But at a time when policies such as socialized medicine are being seriously considered by members of both major parties, it is disturbing to see that a socialist can gain the popular support necessary to get elected to national office.

Every step taken toward mixed economy, every step away from laissez-faire capitalism, is a progressively irreversible step from a system dependent on contractual consent and intellectual liberty, toward the historically tragic alternative that — with or without blood — necessitates the sacrifice of the individual to those who own him.

"Timing is everything," Slat Grobnik said. Don't worry, this joint doesn't close till 2 a.m. "I wasn't talking about that. I mean trends and fashions. You and me, we were way ahead of our times as trendy guys."

"Us? Trendy?"
"Sure. You remember when we were punks, what we put on our hair before we combed it?"
"Yes, I remember it with great disgust. I was partial to brilliantine from Piatrowski's gas station and garage."

"Nah, I used pure petroleum jelly from the drugstore. Boy, one glob of that stuff and my hair would have stayed in place in a tornado. And you remember how often we used to wash our hair?"

As often as we washed the rest of ourselves, which was once a week.

"That's right. The regular Saturday bath, whether we needed one or not. Of course, if it was hot summer, and we played four or five softball games on a dusty diamond, I used to wash my feet on Wednesday night."

You always were a fastidious lad.

"Yeah, but not our hair. We put that stuff on our heads every day, and it just kind of built up, layer after layer of goop. I remember once a bat flew into my hair. Died on instant contact."

What has provoked these raunchy memories?
"Because I happened to be reading a Wall Street Journal that somebody left on the bar, and there was a story in it about how the real trendy thing out in L.A. and in New York is to have a real greasy, dirty hair look. There are movie stars who have stopped washing their hair, and some of the fancy hair joints are fixing people so that they look greasier and dirtier than when they came in. They even sell stuff that gives you an instant, greasy look."

Why would anyone want their hair to look greasy and dirty?

"Well, we used to, didn't we?"

No. We didn't know any better. We thought we looked cool. And because nobody in the neighborhood had showers, washing our hair meant sticking our heads in the kitchen sink, which could be uncomfortable if there were pots and pans there.

"Yeah, I guess so. But now it's considered sexy."

"To look like a slob?"
"Sure. Here, lemme read you what this big-time hairdresser out there says. Guy by the name of Victor Vidal."

I wonder why hairdressers always have names like Victor Vidal. Why aren't they ever named Horace Glotz or Bruno Zankowski?

"Because those are barbers' names. If you're a barber, you can be a Bruno Zankowski. If Marlon Brando in 'Streetcar named Desire.'"

Then why was it that when we asked girls for dates, they called us geeks and greaseballs?"

"Because the babes in our neighborhood didn't have no sense of style. They didn't recognize that we were wild and trendy guys secreting our own oils and being animalistic. That's why they all ended up marrying yahoo's, and now they got thick ankles and blue veins. Hah! The laugh's on them."

I still find it hard to believe that anyone would choose to have hair that looks like it was dipped in a crankcase. And that a female would find it appealing.

"It must be so. I guess if you got the look, the doll will say: 'Oh, your hair looks so oily and animalistic, as if you are secreting your own oils. And the smell. My, it's as if a mouse died in it. May I run my fingers through it? Wait, I'll fetch a surgical glove.'"

But what about cooties? If you don't wash your hair, the little buggers breed and thrive on your noggin.

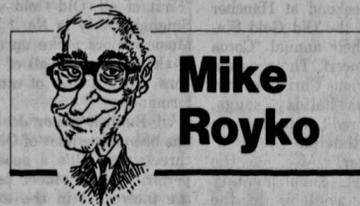

"I don't know. Maybe that's even a bigger turn-on. Maybe the women say: 'Oh, your head is just teeming with wildlife. Take me, you animal, I'm yours.'"

I hope this doesn't mean you're tempted to give this trend a try.

"I'll tell you the truth: I did. I went out and got some of the old car jelly and rubbed it all over the top of my head. Then I asked my wife what she thought."

What did she think?
"She said she thought I needed a new style hat to go with my new style head, and she went out and bought it for me."

What kind of hat?
"A bowling bag."

you're a hairdresser, you got to be a Victor Vidal. Don't you know nothing about show-biz?"

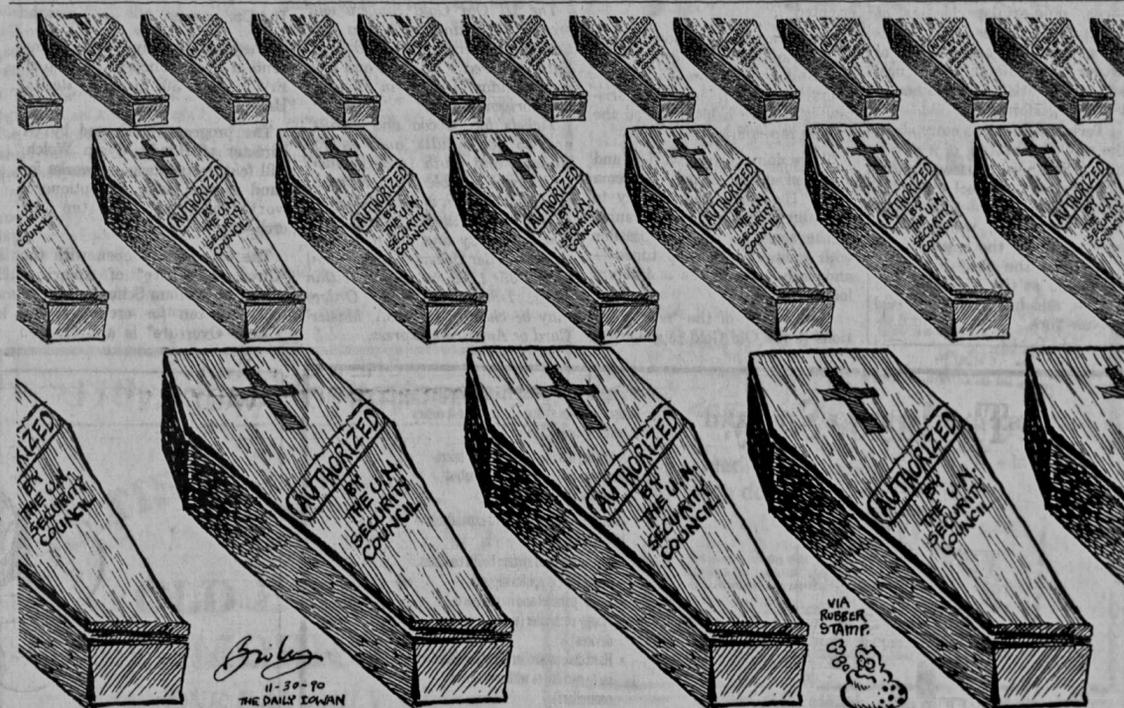

I guess not. So what did he say?

"He says: 'The whole look is eroticism. It's very animalistic. It's aggressive. That's the whole purpose of not washing the hair so much. You are allowing yourself to secrete your own oils.' How do ya like that, huh? Way back when, you and me had the eroticism look. We were animalistic."

You may be right. I remember the time a gym teacher told us we smelled like a couple of skunks, so that's animalistic.

"Nah, what that means is that we must have had that natural, sexy, animal quality like

Thank you for ruining my day with your mean-spirited cartoon portraying as zombies the people who distribute the Add Sheet. Whatever the intent of the cartoon was, it was filled with contempt and scorn I cannot share. While I do not always appreciate being offered the Add Sheet, I've never tried to make those people's jobs tougher, nor have I mocked them, as you have. I get the Add Sheet, whether I want it or not, once a week. Its contents consist of advertisements, coupons, etc. I get The Daily Iowan five days a week — it appears on my doorstep although I never asked for it. Wednesday morning it contained a hateful cartoon that colored my day as no Add Sheet ever has. Maybe you'll stop delivering your ugly little newspaper to my house if you get harassed and made fun of.

Consolidation

To the Editor:
Recently, Iowa State Board of Education officials took over the operation of the Hedrick Community School district, a move that closed down the schools and resulted in an outcry from angry residents.

Considering the renewed national focus on education, I am astonished at the degree of anger that residents are displaying. As a UI student and former resident of Sigourney, Iowa, a small town located about 12 miles northwest of Hedrick, I can attest to the fact that small-town schools in Iowa are in desperate need of upgrading. The reasons cited by state officials for closing the school — not offering required courses and not having teachers certified to teach their assigned courses — are all too common practices in the majority of rural Iowa schools. The consequences of receiving inadequate schooling for those students wishing to attend higher education are detrimental. Those students are finding themselves without the necessary knowledge to succeed at the collegiate level.

While the loyalty Hedrick residents displayed to their school is understandable, it cannot overshadow that the purpose of the school is to educate. Residents and protesters claim the State Board of Education is "nit-picking" and that what has been done is "cruel." But, is it really cruel to want to give young students an adequate education?

In my opinion, it would be to the state's advantage to combine smaller school districts. It is impossible for districts the size of Hedrick's to fund faculty and resources to maintain their facilities. The move toward district consolidation is long overdue. Like all changes, it will meet with opposition and emotional resistance from those who want to preserve the status quo. But, we must maintain the focus on the quality of the education our young people receive if we are to improve not only the educational system, but also the quality of life in our nation.

Teacher Talk

The balancing act of higher education

Quality instruction is an essential ingredient of quality education. Almost every public institution of higher learning claims to have a large number of good instructors on its faculty. It would be difficult to recruit students or maintain the support and goodwill of the Legislature without making such claims. It would appear, then, that the identification, recruitment and retention of faculty who are skilled instructors should be a prime concern of these institutions — as indeed it is. But universities have the additional concern of identifying, recruiting and retaining good research faculty. These tasks would be greatly simplified if good researchers were always good teachers and good teachers were always good researchers. Unfortunately, this is not the case. Choices often have to be made between research and teaching priorities.

John Stratton

Sociology

Faculty are recruited at the department level, which is organized around a particular discipline, e.g., chemistry, political science, philosophy. Departmental members perceive themselves as members of a discipline and recruit new faculty on the basis of their ability to make a contribution to that discipline. Primacy is often given to concerns dictated by the department rather than the educational function of the university.

The administration, while concerned with fulfilling the university's educational mission, is also concerned with the reputation of the university among the disciplines and with obtaining research money to supplement the funds provided by the Legislature and tuition — funds that never seem to be quite adequate. Fortunately, the concern with recruiting individuals who will make research contributions allows good teachers who are identified as good researchers to be recruited.

The problem then is twofold: to retain these individuals, i.e., to tenure them; and to maintain their interest in teaching. Here again, a strain exists between the educational and research missions of the university.

Tenure requires research and publication, which are visible and quantifiable. Teaching, which is also required, is less visible and often difficult to evaluate. The criteria defining good teaching are often neither agreed upon nor easy to assess. Since one's competence as a professional within a discipline is judged more by research than by classroom instruction, and since the criteria for evaluating research are generally more explicit, publication is often in fact, if not in principle, given priority. This means that individuals who are good teachers, but not strong researchers, may not be tenured; while at the same time individuals who are strong researchers, but not strong teachers, are likely to be retained. The professional image of the department is tied to its research productivity and the publication record of its faculty much more than to the quality of instruction it provides.

Tenure candidates are generally made quickly aware of the relative importance of teaching and research for their future, which creates pressure to spend more time and effort on research than on classroom instruction. Lack of productivity will not be offset by evidence of excellence in teaching. But reports of mediocre teaching are often outweighed by publications or grants. Instructors who are good and who enjoy working with students may find that pursuing these interests will have negative career implications. Those who do not learn this lesson often find themselves looking for new jobs; those who do learn it spend less time and effort on teaching.

One might assume that after a positive tenure decision faculty interested in giving priority to teaching would be free to do so with minimal risk. This is not the case. Promotion and salary increases are still problematic. Initial recommendations in these areas are generally made at the departmental level where, again, contributions to the discipline are more heavily weighted. Those who contribute to the discipline most through publication receive a larger proportion of available funds than do those who contribute less.

Given limited resources, those whose primary contribution is teaching may find there are no funds left to reward them for their activities. In universities that do not provide cost-of-living raises or step increases, but use a discretionary merit approach, it is possible for a faculty member who emphasizes teaching to receive only a token raise, or none at all. As in the case of tenure, emphasizing instruction may either slow or eliminate the possibility of promotion to full professor.

What policies can universities that desire to encourage quality teaching do to facilitate this goal? One essential element is to create an environment supportive of teaching. This would include providing good physical facilities and equipment, adequate assistance to allow more innovative teaching, and support services to assist instructors in improving their skills in instruction and evaluation. A keystone of a supportive environment is to reward good teaching through salary increases and promotion and, likewise, to punish inadequate teaching by withholding raises and promotions. Until success and failure in the classroom are responded to in the same way as success and failure in the research setting, faculty will perceive teaching as being of a lower priority. Motivation to optimize teaching efforts will remain low and the problem of obtaining good instruction will persist.

City tries orange extract to mask sewage

LYNN, Mass. — The stench from a sewage dump here is so foul that officials tried to mask it with orange extract. Next they'll try lemon, and they might even use the scent of vanilla or almonds.

"If 'Evening in Paris' or 'Chanel No. 5' was best we'd use that," said John Casey, executive director of the Lynn Water and Sewer Commission. "Right now, lemon's the best."

The problem arose last week after workers started dumping sludge in a landfill near a new sewage treatment plant. Officials originally intended to burn the sludge at an incinerator, but they are awaiting state permission.

In the meantime, crews have covered the sludge with gravel and lime, but that hasn't stopped the odors.

Casey explained that the sludge is "soupy," and as bulldozers spread the gravel, they also dig up some of the slop from the day before.

This does not cause too much trouble when the wind is blowing from the west, which carries the odors over the ocean. But when the wind comes from the east, the stench is blown over the city. "It's not a pleasant smell," Casey said. "I wouldn't want my bedroom windows open at night with this blowing in."

After receiving complaints, the commission this week bought about 80 quarts of orange extract, mixed it with water, and sprayed it over the dump.

Keillor rewards attentive college class

GRAND FORKS, N.D. — Author Garrison Keillor has an English class at the University of North Dakota to thank for spotting a discrepancy in one of his stories published in New Yorker magazine.

Keillor thanked the class with a box full of his books and tapes of his radio show, and a letter inviting the class to dinner, his manager, Jennifer Howe, said Thursday from New York.

Lecturer Lisa Lewis-Spicer's class wrote a letter two weeks ago asking Keillor to explain why a family suddenly grew from three to four kids in "Zeus the Lutheran," a story that ran in the Oct. 29 issue.

He responded in a letter with the box of gifts that they should be commended for their close reading of his story, Lewis-Spicer said.

"I was so overwhelmed," Lewis-Spicer said. She began handing out the gifts from Keillor to her three classes Tuesday.

Lewis-Spicer said her English students plan to send Keillor a copy of a class-produced magazine along with a dinner invitation of their own.

Keillor is creator of the fictional Lake Wobegon and is host of public radio's "Garrison Keillor's American Radio Company of the Air."

Free ticket lure brings in criminals

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Police said they scored a touchdown with a "sting" that nabbed about 200 fugitives by making them think they had won tickets to Saturday's Auburn-Alabama football game.

Police Chief Arthur Deutsch said people wanted for crimes including robbery and drug dealing were apprehended when they showed up for a "winner's party" Wednesday night at the Birmingham-Jefferson Civic Center.

About 800 letters were sent from phony cable television station WGGY — whose call letters stood for "We're Gonna Get You," and were signed by J.L. Byrd, or jailbird, Deutsch said.

The scheme was dubbed "Operation Touchdown," said police spokesman Mike Crawford.

"The idea was that if we got 10, we were at the 10-yard line," he said. "If we got 20, we were at the 20-yard line. More than that would be a touchdown."

'Recession' becoming a dirty word

NEW YORK — Washington seems to be testing kinder, gentler substitutes for what has become the dreaded r-word — "recession."

"You don't hear them using that word a lot," said Danny Williams, head position trader at Dillon, Read & Co. "I don't think we ever really know we're in one until we're about out of it."

When Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said Wednesday that the economy had hit a "meaningful downturn," stock analyst Michael Metz of Oppenheimer & Co. immediately saw it as an acknowledgement "that we're in something of a recession."

The stock market didn't dive because members of the financial community had already been using the r-word and factoring the troubles into their trading strategies. Some still noted with interest that Greenspan wouldn't say it.

"Maybe he's dancing around a little bit," Williams said.

Even when President Bush and his chief economic adviser, Michael Boskin, have discussed the weakened economy, they have avoided the r-word. Bush called it a "downturn." Boskin said it was a "lull."

Quibbling over what to call a bad economy is nothing new, of course.

As the old joke goes, when your neighbor loses his job, it's a slowdown. When you lose your job, it's a recession. When an economist loses his job, it's a depression.

Bulgarian premier quits; no successor named yet

By Veselin Toshkov
The Associated Press

SOFIA, Bulgaria — Premier Andrei Lukanov and his government of former Communists resigned Thursday under unrelenting pressure from strikes, street protests and the halls of Parliament.

The Socialist premier, blamed for the Balkan country's political and economic anarchy, accused unions and the opposition of making it impossible for him to govern.

"For me, it is therefore pointless to remain at the premier's post, and . . . I resign my office," he said in a statement broadcast on state radio and television.

No successor was immediately named to replace Lukanov, a reform-minded Socialist Party member who helped oust longtime Communist leader Todor Zhivkov last November. Lukanov, 52, was appointed premier in early February.

But it appeared certain the resignation would end a four-day nationwide strike that had gained strength daily, and would draw the opposition Union of Democratic Forces back into Parliament. Its lawmakers walked out last week.

The resignation of the 52-year-old Lukanov had been expected since he and other political leaders struck a deal in talks Thursday to end a stalemate that has prevented Bulgaria from tackling its worst postwar economic crisis.

The accord came in a meeting called by President Zhelyu Zhelev, as the strike continued and Sofia's streets filled with thousands of people demanding an end to political turmoil and economic hardship. Bulgaria is suffering its worst postwar crisis. Electricity is rationed in Sofia and elsewhere. Many basic consumer items are either rationed or unavailable. The country cannot make payments on its $11 billion foreign debt.

Although political leaders agreed during the meeting on Lukanov's resignation, they apparently had been unable to reach final agreement on who should succeed him.

Lukanov was one of the few politicians in Bulgaria with the experience and stature for the job.

On Wednesday, the official BTA news agency said the new premier would be a member of neither the Socialist Party nor the opposition coalition. Alexander Lilov, Socialist Party chairman, agreed in an interview earlier Thursday.

Franks adds conservative vote

1st black Republican since '30s elected to U.S. Congress may change Caucus

By John Diamond
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Gary Franks, the first black Republican elected to the House since the 1930s, will bring a conservative voice to the liberal Congressional Black Caucus. Whether that voice is welcome is another matter.

Franks, touring Capitol Hill Thursday for a series of orientation sessions, says he wants to recruit blacks into the Republican fold and hopes to bring diversity to the unswervingly liberal caucus.

"I qualify. I'm black and I'm a congressman," Franks quipped. "I'm a fiscal-conservative Republican and I think that in itself will offer a difference between me and the some 25 members of the caucus."

The 37-year-old alderman from Waterbury, Conn., raised eyebrows during his successful campaign against liberal Democrat Toby Moffett by opposing a major civil rights bill. Franks, a wealthy landlord and real estate developer, said the bill "smelled like quotas."

That was the position taken by President Bush who vetoed the bill. But it runs counter to the enthusiastic support given the bill by the black caucus and it worries the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"We hope that he is not used by the right wing to sing the praises of their position," said Edward Hailes, a lawyer in the NAACP's Washington office.

Regardless of right wing aims, the Republican National Committee is certainly planning to enlist the freshman lawmaker as a magnet for black voters. The GOP made its fondness for Franks clear during the campaign as President Bush, Barbara Bush and House Secretary Jack Kemp made separate visits to stump for him.

"He'll be a national spokesman for the party," said Charles Black, the RNC's chief spokesman. "He'll be a great example for us to recruit other blacks to run for office and to draw black voters into the Republican Party."

There has been no black Republican in the House since Illinois Rep. Oscar de Priest stepped down after three terms in 1935. The last black in the Senate was Republican Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, who was defeated in 1978. With no black Republican governors or mayors now serving, Franks is considered the highest-ranking black in his party.

Franks says his first loyalty will be to his district. Freshman lawmakers who stray from that line often lose their seats. And since blacks make up only 4 percent of the population in Franks' 5th Congressional District, a GOP recruiting drive led by Franks would win him few points back home.

Nevertheless, Franks says, "I would like to do all that I can to help my national party and I will do so if time allows."

Many blacks agree with his brand of fiscal conservatism, Franks says. He ran on a pledge of no new taxes and opposed Bush's willingness to accept higher taxes to ease the budget deficit. He supports a cut in the capital gains tax and favors the death penalty.

A Yale graduate who captained his college basketball team, Franks grew up in a poor family in Waterbury and parlayed his education into a successful business career. While some blacks in Waterbury accused Franks of being a slumlord, Franks points out that he defeated Moffett in Waterbury's black precincts.

But a close observer of black national politics said Franks would have a hard time using his election in a predominantly white district as a national platform.

"In terms of his policy positions, they are completely repudiated by the black community," said David Bostitis, a senior associate with the Joint Center for Political Studies, a group devoted to black issues. "The idea that a candidate who was sent to Congress by white voters would be embraced around the country by black voters is ridiculous."

Researchers feel abnormal p35 gene may cause high cancer susceptibility

By Paul Recer
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Researchers have found an inherited abnormal gene that can lead to a high susceptibility for breast cancer, a major discovery about the tendency for malignancies to be passed from generation to generation.

In a study to be published today in the journal Science, a group of scientists say the cancer-promoting mutation was found by studying the genetic pattern in a group of families that have an exceptionally high rate of six types of cancers, including breast cancer.

"Up until now there have been no inherited genes isolated and identified which provided susceptibilities to some of the common adult malignancies," said Dr. Stephen Friend, a Massachusetts General Hospital Cancer Center scientist.

Friend, who was lead author of the study, said the mutation was found on what is called the p53 cancer suppressor gene. For people who inherit a mutated p53 gene, he said, "their chance of getting a malignancy by age 60 is 90 percent."

Dr. Andrew Feinberg, a University of Michigan Cancer Center researcher and co-discoverer of genes related to a rare kidney cancer, said the p53 discovery adds a step in the cascade of cell changes that is thought to lead to some cancers.

"From a scientific viewpoint, it is very important because it helps us understand the sequence of events that lead to cancer," said Feinberg. He emphasized that there are a number of other steps, still unknown, that cause a normal cell to become cancerous.

The p53 gene is one of a group of genes that control cell growth. The gene, in effect, blocks the uncontrolled division of cells, hence, suppresses tumor development. If this function is lost through mutation, then the cell lacks one of the controls that keep division in balance.

The mutated p53 gene has been detected in the past in a number of types of cancers, but the new study is the first to find that the mutation can be inherited.

Friend said that although the loss of the p53 function is only one of a series of steps that can lead to cancer, it demonstrates just how fragile is the natural protection against cancer.

"Up until now, the question in the common adult malignancies has been whether any one step would make a difference and provide a susceptibility," he said. "This shows that the answer is yes. If you are born with an inactive region in one gene, then that gives you a hidden susceptibility to malignancies."

Friend said he and his colleagues isolated the specific p53 gene mutation by studying people with what is called the Li-Fraumeni syndrome. These are families in which there is an inherited tendency to develop one of six types of cancer at an early age.

Breast cancer is the most common malignancy among Li-Fraumeni families, but they can also develop leukemias, brain tumors, sarcomas of the bone and cancer of the adrenal gland.

Hawkeyes cruise to easy wins in WIVC pool

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team made short work of the bottom two seeds in its pool and senior Janet Moylan inched closer to the NCAA all-time digging record in the first round of the Women's Invitational Volleyball Championship in Knoxville, Tenn., Thursday.

The Hawkeyes rode the efforts of three seniors — Moylan, Jenny Rees and Barb Willis — to three-game sweeps of Eastern Kentucky and Alabama-Birmingham in the first round of pool play.

"Barb, Jenny and Janet all played well,"

Iowa coach Ruth Nelson said. "They were very consistent. I think they're real excited to be playing here."

All three seniors hit over .400 and freshman Courtney Gillis hit a career-high .584 in Iowa's 15-7, 15-1, 15-8 win over 18th-seeded Eastern Kentucky in the first match of the day.

The Hawkeyes, seeded seventh in the WIVC, then disposed of 15th-seeded Alabama-Birmingham 15-9, 15-7, 15-6 in an afternoon match.

The wins gave the Hawkeyes an 18-14 overall record and a 2-0 mark in their pool. Eastern Kentucky fell to 17-14, overall and Alabama-Birmingham dropped to 31-15.

Moylan recorded a combined 20 digs in the two contests, bringing her career total to 1,899. She needs 15 digs in the remaining matches to break the current NCAA all-time record of 1,913.

The setter from Chicago, Ill., averaged 4.69 digs per game during the regular season and is ranked fifth nationally in individual digging.

Moylan also hit .500 with seven kills and 55 assists in the two matches.

Willis downed 10 kills and hit .450 against Eastern Kentucky as the Hawkeyes hit a season-high .337 in the match.

Rees also had 10 kills with a season-high .409 hitting percentage.

Gillis added seven spikes and set a career-best in hitting percentage for the second match in a row. Her previous best was .438 against Indiana last Saturday.

Willis, a middle hitter from Camanche, Iowa, also led the Hawkeyes with 13 kills against Alabama-Birmingham. Rees was second with 12 kills on .308 hitting.

Defensively, Rees led Iowa with 22 digs in the two matches. Moylan and defensive specialist Ginger Lorentson both finished with 20 digs for the Hawkeyes, who are ranked fifth nationally in digging.

Iowa held a 111-83 advantage in digging in the two matches.

Iowa completes pool play against 10th-seeded Colorado State and the WIVC's No. 2 seed, Cal State-Northridge, today. Both teams won their first matches before meeting each other later Thursday night.

The winners of each of the WIVC's four pools meet in semifinal matches early Saturday. The championship match is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. EST Saturday.

"Tomorrow will be the real test," Nelson said. "Today, the seniors played consistently and the freshmen played well. They played well as a team. They've just gotten consistently better."

AFC: How low can it sink?

There's no truth to the rumor that in an effort to bolster its football reputation for new member school Miami, the Big East will seek the addition of the New England Patriots. Too bad for the Patriots. Considering their 1-10 record, they need a Boston College on their schedule.

In fact, the New York Jets and the Cleveland Browns might consider Division I competition. Maybe their head coaches will last longer and Art Modell would shut the hell up.

The days of the Steel Curtain, Air Coryell and Denver's Orange Crush have given way to Bubby's Blunders, Rod Rust Always Sleeps and flushable Super Bowls.

Recently-released Indianapolis quarterback Joe Ferguson, Patriot cronies Steve Grogan and Marc Wilson, and the superbly mediocre Dave Krieg all illustrate the problem with the AFC: incestuous football that yields 8-8 divisional champs and quarterbacks named Boomer.

Marc Morehouse

Watching an AFC football game is enough to make anyone ache for anything this side of Dan Pastorini.

Case Study: The Chargers-Seahawks matchup on ESPN last Sunday night. Ten fumbles, players spitting on each other and the game actually having the audacity to go into overtime just so the Seahawks could eke out a vapid 13-10 win.

The best and most ridiculous play of this epic dirge featured San Diego punter Billy Kidd kicking the ball to Seattle return man Mike Warren. Warren, in the middle of a successful return, then fumbled the ball.

Not funny yet? Here's the punchline: The ball rolls right back into Kidd's sure hands. He tries to run the ball back up the field but is hit ... and fumbles the ball back to Seattle.

Parody. The new buzzword of the AFC.

The problem isn't relegated to the planarian AFC teams like New England and Cleveland. They are only barnacles clinging and eating through the hull of an already sinking ship. The "middle class" has equaled the losers in comedic, nonsensical and gauche football.

Seattle, Cincinnati, Houston, Pittsburgh and Kansas City have won, lost, won, lost, won, lost their respective ways into the palpitating hearts of their fans. Kansas City gets beat by Seattle despite an NFL record seven sacks by defensive end Derrick Thomas, but still sits atop the AFC West. Matching the rest of the conference leaders, Kansas City shares its dubious achievement — with the Los Angeles Raiders.

The Raiders have managed a Tampa Bay Buccaneer-like disappearing act and seem to be headed south along with the Bucs, who have always been the NFC's little piece of the AFC. But it is hard to blame the Raiders for sliding into the AFC's valley of fatigue. With NFC castaway Jay Schroeder at the helm, it was bound to happen sooner or later.

Miami and Buffalo have been the saviors of the un-conference thus far. Both teams sport respectable 9-2 records, have

Davis expects tough Amana Classic field

By Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

Colgate, Creighton and Texas-San Antonio may not be the most well-known men's basketball squads. But, like many teams in former Amana Hawkeye Classics, Iowa coach Tom Davis says to watch for them in the future.

"I think a couple of these teams could surface in being excellent ballclubs," Davis said. "The funny thing is a lot of times you get them before they're known. It's hard to get the team that's on top to come into tournaments like this."

The ninth annual Amana Hawkeye Classic opens tonight at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Creighton vs. Texas-San Antonio matchup beginning at 6:05 p.m., with Iowa-Colgate schedule to start about 8:05 p.m.

The consolation match will be Saturday at 6:05 p.m. followed by the championship game.

In the past, the tournament has featured teams such as Loyola-Marymount, Georgia, Southern California and Long Beach State.

"Loyola-Marymount ... came in here about five years ago," Davis said. "The whole country became enamored with Loyola-Marymount and their style and Hank Gathers and Bo Kimble. We saw the beginning of that, even though that was the year Gathers and Kimble started out.

"Some of those players (from teams participating in the tournament) went on to be very important players over the next two, three years. This year's tournament has that type of field, too."

Last year, the Hawkeyes beat California-Santa Barbara 85-79 to take their seventh Classic title, Iowa's only loss was in 1985 to Arkansas State in the first round. Alabama-Birmingham won the tournament that year.

As for the Hawkeyes' first-round opponent this year, Davis said he expects a tough team.

Colgate, which hasn't faced Iowa before, lost 111-47 to Oklahoma State in their only game so far this season, but the Iowa coach said that game has to be taken for what it's worth.

"This is a pretty good veteran Colgate ballclub," said Davis, who coached against the Red Raiders when he was at Lafayette. "I think you have to throw out their one loss to Oklahoma State ... for a couple of reasons. One of their best

Hawks top UCONN on road, 58-41

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Laurie Aaron made her return to the lineup just in time to lead the 11th-ranked Iowa women's basketball team to a 58-41 victory over No. 23 Connecticut in Storrs, Conn., Thursday.

Aaron, a sophomore guard, came off of Coach C. Vivian Stringer's bench to score a career-high 18 points in her first game of the season. She shot 8 for 14 from the field and added three assists and three steals.

"I was anxious when I first got in," Aaron said. "Coach Stringer told me to take the shot, because they were keying on (forward) Toni (Foster), so that's when I started shooting."

Aaron missed Iowa's first two games after violating a team rule. Stringer said Tuesday that Aaron missed two classes this semester, causing her to be held out of Iowa's victories over UCLA and No. 20 LSU in the Amana-Hawkeye Classic last weekend.

Foster and senior point guard Stephanie Schueler each added 10 points. Foster also pulled down 11 rebounds and blocked four shots for the Hawkeyes, who improved to 3-0 this year.

Senior Kerry Bascom led the Huskies, 1-1, with 17 points but fell short of the 22 she needed to become Connecticut's all-time leading scorer. She is a two-time all-Big East selection.

"We started real slow, we were sloppy and tentative," Stringer said, "but ... I thought that they played with confidence, and ultimately just wore Connecticut down. Connecticut is a fine basketball team ... I thought it would be much, much, much closer than it was."

Iowa missed its first five shots of the game until Trisha Waugh hit a 15-foot jumper from the free throw line at the 15:19 mark of the first half.

The Hawkeyes used 14-6 run in the final minutes of the half to forge a 24-20 halftime lead. Iowa

Grapplers head East to face ranked opponents

By Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

Being the nation's top-ranked team in any sport is a double-edged sword.

The good news is that a certain type of confidence is instilled among the team's athletes that makes them believe they can't be stopped. The bad news is that the rest of the country is gunning for you.

But in the case of Iowa's No. 1 wrestlers, both of those aspects are more than welcomed.

Coach Dan Gable's squad will endure their first two major tests of the season this weekend, when they travel to No. 5 Penn State today and No. 8 Ohio State Saturday. Yet despite the quality of competition the Nittany Lions and Buckeyes are expected to give Iowa, the Hawkeyes aren't fazed a bit.

"I feel like we're a much stronger team than either of them," 118-pounder Chad Zaputil said. "We have some young guys in our lineup so everyone's going to have to go and wrestle their best."

Iowa (6-0) is coming off their first dual meet of the year at No. 18 Lehigh Wednesday night in Bethlehem, Pa. The Hawkeyes made it a silent night for the Engineers, as they won in a 42-4 cakewalk.

Everything went as expected, as the only points for Lehigh came at 190 pounds, when defending national champion Matt Ruppel defeated Iowa red shirt freshman Mike Manganiello, 12-4.

But by that point the meet was already over, thanks in part to falls from top-ranked Tom Brands at 134, No. 3 167-pounder Mark Reiland and No. 6 heavyweight John Oostendorp. Brands recorded the fastest of the falls, when he pinned Sam Dollyhigh in 1:20.

At 158 pounds, junior Tom Ryan recorded a technical fall over Engineer Toriano Boynton, 23-7, while Zaputil and 126-pounder Terry Brands added to the onslaught with major decisions. Joining in the hit parade were 142-pounder Troy Steiner, Terry Steiner (150) and red shirt freshman Rich Catalano at 177.

The meet was an especially satisfying moment for Catalano, who replaced junior Bart Chelavig in the starting lineup at Lehigh. Chelavig is sidelined for approximately a month after breaking his toe at last Saturday's Northern Open in Madison, Wis., a non-scoring meet in which Iowa claimed five individual titles.

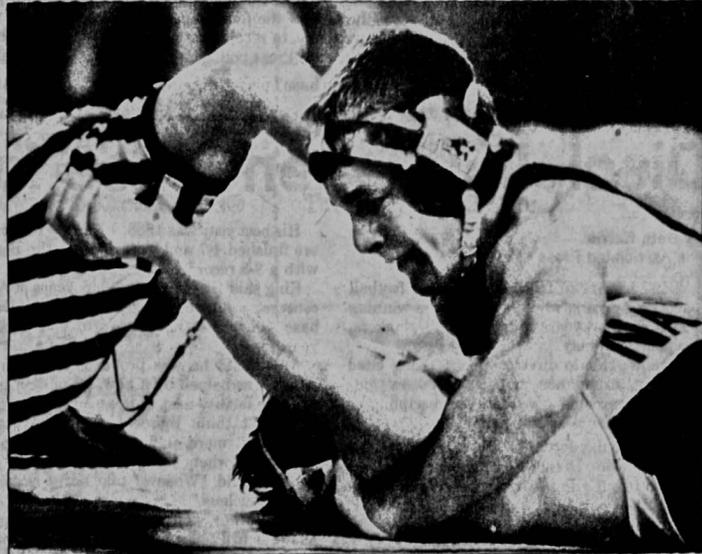

Catalano, a native of Pittsburgh, made a homecoming of sorts at Lehigh, and he says he will have the same type of motivation today at University Park, Pa., against the traditionally-tough Nittany Lions.

"I feel good to be getting some mat time and going back home because I don't like Iowa too much," Catalano said. "I don't think we should have a tough time against Penn State. As for me, I'll be wrestling my old high school teammate, so that gives me extra incentive."

Another Hawkeye who may have more incentive than usual this weekend is Tom Brands, who is looking forward to the journey to Columbus, Ohio, after something that occurred last season against the Buckeyes in Dubuque.

"I'm really looking forward to both of these meets and the rowdy crowds," Brands said. "(Last year) their coach (Russ Hellickson) said I was shoving but it was his kid that was doing all the shoving. (Hellickson) threw a tantrum and the crowd went nuts."

The Hawkeyes have had their way with the Buckeyes in the past, winning 20 out of 22 matches dating back to 1929, including a 12-1 mark at Columbus.

The Buckeyes, who finished 14th in the country last year, return two all-Americans. However, both of them will take on the unbeaten Brands brothers — Adam DiSabato at 126 pounds and Mark Marinelli at 134. DiSabato took sixth in the nation last year and Marinelli finished fourth in his weight class. Both of the Brands are defending national champions.

Meanwhile, Penn State Coach Rich Lorenzo will counter with Jeff Prescott at 118, Tim Wittman at 150 and what may be the feature match of the meet when Jason Suter, who finished eighth at last spring's NCAA meet, will grapple with the third-ranked Reiland.

"We have to have some strong individual matches," Zaputil said. "This is a good chance for us to get some meets in before Christmas."

trailed 16-10 with 8:09 left in the first period.

Stringer's team held the Huskies scoreless for nearly the final six minutes of the half. Aaron, who hit four straight shots during a three-minute stretch, gave the Hawkeyes the lead with a 15-footer with 4:44 remaining.

Iowa then used a 15-5 spurt during the first seven minutes of the second half to open up a 39-25 lead and held on for the victory. Aaron scored six points during the stretch.

Connecticut narrowed a 17-point Iowa lead to 11 on a short-lived run late in the game, but that was as close as it would get.

The Hawkeyes were held to 40.7 percent shooting in the game, but they throttled the Huskies defensively. Connecticut shot only 28.3 percent in the contest, including a frigid 3-16 from 3-point range.

Stringer's team also outrebounded its third straight opponent, this time by a 41-34 margin.

Connecticut's 41 points were the lowest total in four years for the Huskies. The Huskies' previous low came in a 59-38 loss to Villanova during head coach Geno Auriemma's first season, 1985-86.

"We may be the worst basketball team in America right now," Auriemma said. "We did play the 11th-ranked team in America and maybe they had something to do with it. That's why Iowa is Iowa, and that's why they're ranked 11th in the country. They made us look bad."

The Hawkeyes travel to State College, Pa., to face No. 17 Penn State Saturday night.

"We had more (discipline) trouble probably than at any other time that I can remember, and that's not a positive," King said. "I have not seen the progress in the program that I feel is necessary."

King said a search committee would be formed to find a new coach, but he gave no timetable. Akers' assistants will be kept on at least through Jan. 15, he said.

Akers arrived at Purdue with a 96-44-2 record as a head coach after two seasons at Wyoming and 10 seasons at Texas. He was 86-31-2 at Texas but was fired after a 5-6 season in 1986.

He replaced Leon Burnett in 1987 as Purdue's third football coach in five years. Burnett, now a coach with the Indianapolis Colts, also resigned after compiling a five-year record of 21-34-1.

Akers, 52, said he would seek a head coaching job elsewhere.

"I love coaching and I'm good at it. I'll get another one (job) and it will probably be better. See you down the road somewhere," he told reporters as he departed with a wave.

players is a football player named Dave Goodwin. The information I have is that he is a quarterback on their football team, and he was dressed against Oklahoma State but did not play.

"The other reason they did not perform as well as I think they might have is Darren Brown, a sophomore forward, has been out injured. He was their leading rebounder last year and one of their best players."

According to Davis, Creighton is the favorite based on preseason standings where the Blue Jays were the only of the four teams in the tournament to receive votes in The Associated Press poll.

Creighton hasn't played a regular-season game yet but were 21-12 last year.

"Creighton is obviously the highest-ranked team coming into this tournament in terms of preseason rankings," Davis said. "They have a very, very strong ballclub. (Coach) Tony Barone's done an excellent job over there."

Texas-San Antonio is 2-1 so far this season. The Roadrunners, who were 22-7 last year, defeated Southwest Texas State 132-97 and Texas-Pan American 96-78 before losing to Colorado 100-89 Wednesday night.

"I don't know much about their ballclub yet," Davis said. "But it appears from their early scores that they've played extremely well."

Discipline, attendance force Akers out

By Beth Harris
The Associated Press

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Purdue football coach Fred Akers, who did not have a winning season in four years with the Boilermakers, resigned Thursday.

Purdue athletic director George King cited declining attendance in each of Akers' four years and problems with player discipline as the reasons for a coaching change.

"It's a sad day for us," Akers said, accompanied by his wife, Diana. "The things that were a concern to our administration were things that I didn't feel I could do a great deal about."

Akers, however, said he was not forced to resign.

"I have a choice. Sometimes decisions you make are very difficult," he said, adding that he made up his mind on Wednesday.

Akers said a rape complaint filed Nov. 15 by a high school girl against quarterback Eric Hunter did not affect his decision to quit. No charges have been filed against Hunter.

"We're all going to learn sooner or later that there's nothing to that," he said.

Under Akers, Purdue finished this season 2-9, the first time the team lost nine games in a season. He had a 12-31-1 record in four years, including a 9-23 in the Big Ten Conference.

His best year was 1988, when the Boilermakers finished 4-7 and were sixth in the Big Ten with a 3-5 record.

King said the remaining four years of Akers' contract would be bought out. He receives a base salary that is reported to be $125,000 a year.

Akers said he was proud of his recruiting, which was helped by a new, $9 million indoor practice facility next to Ross-Ade Stadium.

"I don't think there's any question there's quite a bit more quality talent available here now than when we first started four years ago," he said. "Whoever takes over is going to have a nucleus."

But Hunter, who was the Big Ten freshman of the year in 1989, said he would re-evaluate his plans to play for Purdue.

"I felt that next year would have been our year," Hunter said after a private meeting between Akers and the players. "We did have a lot of injuries this year, that's no excuse, but I think he should have had at least one more year."

King said poor football attendance, including 1,500 fewer season ticket holders than last year, is jeopardizing Purdue's athletic program.

"If this trend continues, probably the next step for our administration in athletics will be to start a cutback in programs," he said. "We are that close to the bottom line."

King emphasized that the administration's budget woes and players' conduct off the field weren't Akers' fault. However, he said both situations were negatives in his recommendation to university president Steven Beering that Akers resign.

"We've had more (discipline) trouble probably than at any other time that I can remember, and that's not a positive," King said. "I have not seen the progress in the program that I feel is necessary."

King said a search committee would be formed to find a new coach, but he gave no timetable. Akers' assistants will be kept on at least through Jan. 15, he said.

UNIVERSITY S.P.I.R.I.T 13 S. Linn 338-5954

NCAA lets UNLV off — for now

By Robert Macy
The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — The NCAA and UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian — two longtime adversaries — settled a 13-year battle Thursday with a compromise that allows the Runnin' Rebels to defend their national basketball title.

"Historically, we ended today the 13 years of litigation between Jerry Tarkanian and the NCAA," UNLV president Robert Maxson told a jammed news conference. "All court rulings are history."

Maxson's comments came as he announced the university would accept a penalty offered by the NCAA that will ban the Runnin' Rebels from postseason play in 1991-92 and keep them off of live television that season.

In exchange, the NCAA agreed to overturn its ban on UNLV — currently the nation's No. 1-ranked team — defending the national championship it won in April with a 103-73 thrashing of Duke.

The penalty accepted by UNLV was one of two offered by the NCAA. The other alternative was that Tarkanian would sit out this season's playoffs and his team would sit out the 1991-92 playoffs.

"We thought both proposals were very fair," Maxson said. "There were no penalties against the national champions in any way."

In making the unprecedented reversal, the NCAA all but conceded that some players became innocent victims of the 13-year battle. But it also noted that Tarkanian had a hand in dragging it out.

"In many infractions cases, it is the unfortunate fact that the existence of NCAA violations cannot be established until several years after their occurrence," the committee said. It blamed the delay on litigation on the part of the university's head coach, which ultimately was unsuccessful in restraining the NCAA from implementing this penalty.

A crowd of secretaries and students who jammed an outer office cheered as Maxson announced the university had accepted the second alternative.

"We regret that next year's team is not eligible," Maxson said. "But, we felt it was terribly important our national champions be allowed to defend their title."

Tarkanian, who was in Vancouver, B.C., promoting the team's Saturday game against Alabama-Birmingham, could not immediately be reached for comment, but issued a statement saying he agreed with the decision.

"I am pleased for the kids and fans that we will be allowed to compete," he said. "Let's put these matters behind us and look to the season ahead and defending our national championship."

Even as the 13-year saga came to a close, however, more trouble loomed for UNLV's basketball program with the NCAA.

Maxson said an initial report on an investigation involving former prep star Lloyd Daniels is expected in about two weeks. He said the report has been ready for some time, but was delayed at the request of the school until after resolution of the Tarkanian matter so that the two would not become confused by the same infractions committee that has to hear the Daniels case.

"We have absolutely no idea what is in the report," Maxson said. "Coach Tarkanian says there are no infractions."

Maxson noted the NCAA gave the university 15 days to accept its choice of penalties in return for being able to defend this year's national championship, and

Associated Press

UNLV basketball coach Jerry Tarkanian, center, and his team will be allowed to defend their national title this year after the school and the NCAA agreed to postpone the Rebels' postseason ban until the 1991-92 season.

responded "I can assure you we won't wait 15 days."

UNLV had offered the NCAA four alternative sanctions, which involved various combinations of Tarkanian sitting out this year's playoffs and next, or limiting recruiting and television appearances.

The university president praised Tarkanian, saying there was no question the coach "went far beyond the call of duty." He said when the university sat down to consider alternatives to present to the NCAA Committee on Infractions at an Oct. 28 rehearing, he asked Tarkanian if the coach wasn't offering too much.

"Let's put these matters behind us and look to the season ahead and defending our championship."

Jerry Tarkanian
UNLV basketball coach

"Coach Tarkanian emphasized he would do what he had to do to let his kids play in the tournament. I give him 100 percent of the credit. Those were self-imposed penalties. Coach Tarkanian has told us all year that he has a very special relationship with these players. He put his money where his mouth is."

University counsel Brad Bookie said that historically the NCAA has been criticized for being vindictive and having a vendetta against the university. He said the agreement was reached because "we played this game by the numbers. We got a resolution that was fair to all concerned. It shows that if you work through the rules, you're going to have success."

Athletic director Dennis Finfrock said this year's team, which returns four starters from the championship squad, could be the best in the history of the school. He said UNLV could lose $200,000 to $300,000 by not appearing on television in the 1991-92 season, but it would be a far cry from the $1.5 million they could have lost the last year or two when a lion's share of the NCAA playoff revenues went to the winning school.

If not for the NCAA's change of heart, UNLV would have become the second national basketball champion to be barred from defending its title. The first was Kansas, which won the 1988 NCAA title but had to bypass the '89 tournament because of recruiting violations.

The settlement ends a dispute that began in 1977, when the NCAA placed UNLV on probation for two years because of recruiting violations and also ordered Tarkanian suspended for two years.

The school served the probation, but Tarkanian fought the suspension in the Nevada state courts and obtained a permanent injunction after arguing he was denied due process. The NCAA appealed the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The high court said the NCAA, as a private organization, didn't have to provide due process. But the same ruling said the university, as a public institution, had to provide Tarkanian those same rights.

It was apparently the threat of further litigation — including a promised suit by at least two of UNLV's seniors — that prompted the NCAA to agree to soften the penalty.

In a release issued by the NCAA in Overland Park, Kan., the agency said that a promise of no further litigation by UNLV helped it make its decision because there was no assurance that a court might issue an injunction allowing UNLV to play until the legal issues were resolved.

"If such litigation occurred, a considerable time might be required to finally resolve the issues presented," the NCAA said. "During this period, the basketball team might well be able to avoid the effect of the penalty the committee had imposed and compete in the 1991 tournament."

Iowa's trip to Madison should be a good time

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

After a two-week break from competitive action, the Iowa women's swimming and diving team heads into Madison, Wis., this weekend to compete in the Wisconsin Invitational.

Although on the schedule it is considered a meet of significance, the purpose of this competition is not to boost or demote the team's record, but to have some fun and try new events.

"This will be our opportunity to give the kids a break from their usual routine and give them a little bit of variety," said Coach Peter Kennedy. "Because there won't be any scoring, we'll try some of our new freshman swimmers to see what they can do."

"It will be a non-pressure meet so that, as coaches, we can move some people around in a different game plan and see what we need to find out."

Rather than competing in her specialty events, the 100 and 200 breaststrokes, sophomore Chrissy Eck will be "moving around," according to Kennedy. Eck will be tested in the 50, 200 and 500 freestyle races as well as the 100 backstroke. Many of the other swimmers will also be competing in events foreign to them in regular meet competition.

Also in action at the invitational this weekend will be Big Ten rivals Wisconsin and Illinois. Both squads are expected to be good competition for the Hawkeyes. Wisconsin is currently tied with Nebraska at 19th in the latest national CSCCA poll.

"Wisconsin has some very good swimmers," Kennedy said, "and Illinois had some good off-season recruiting."

Wojdat not available for Nebraska Invite

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

When the Iowa men's swimming and diving team travels to the three-day Nebraska Invitational this weekend in Lincoln the Hawkeyes will encounter a stiff challenge without their star swimmer.

Not only will they be facing two top 20 teams in UCLA and Nebraska, but they will also be facing them without standout freestyler Artur Wojdat.

M. Swimming

Wojdat will be readying himself for the World Championships by competing in the U.S. Open over the weekend.

"Artur will definitely be missed this weekend," said Coach Glenn Patton. "He is a big chunk of our team, and in a meet like this, he'd more than likely win three events and make the relays much stronger. But it is to his advantage to go to the U.S. Open to compete against the best in the U.S., as well as the rest of the world."

Aside from the absence of Wojdat, the 10th-ranked Hawkeyes will be up against 8th-ranked UCLA and 14th-ranked Nebraska. Wyoming, South Dakota, Air Force and St. Olaf are also entered in the competition.

Although it's early in the season, UCLA looks to be in mid-season form and Nebraska is expected to shave which will make them that much faster.

"If Nebraska shaves, they will have a definite advantage," Patton said. "So early in the season you don't really know about other teams, but we do know that UCLA had a good recruiting season."

"It will be a very tough meet with UCLA being there with an entire team while we are only sending 16 swimmers and three divers. We'll be severely tested."

This meet is Iowa's fall tune-up for upcoming three-day competitions during the spring season.

"This will be a very good experience for us to be involved in three-day meets similar to the Big Tens in the middle of the year," said assistant coach Rich Draper. "This way we'll be more prepared for our meets at the end of the year."

Hawkeyes send three to Winter Nationals

By David Taylor
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's gymnastics team sends three competitors to the Winter Nationals meet in Colorado Springs, Colorado this weekend. The meet will be the final competition of the season for the men, until they resume in January, after a relatively light fall schedule.

Junior Paul Bautel, sophomore Chris Kabat and freshman Gary Denk will represent Iowa in the All-Around competition, facing what amounts to a tough field comprised of the top 48 scores of respective gymnasts from qualifying meets around the country.

"The Winter Nationals is essentially the United States championship for gymnastics," said Iowa head coach Tom Dunn. "These guys will have to do very well."

Iowa competed in the Wisconsin Open Nov. 16-17, which was used as their qualifying meet for this weekend, and showed some impressive performances in the All-Around events and the high bars.

M. Gymnastics

"I was very pleased with our performance at the Wisconsin meet," said Dunn. "Kabat did very well at times, and so did Bautel."

Following the Nationals, the Hawkeyes break from competition until Jan. 11-12 when they compete in the Spartan Open at East Lansing, Michigan.

ILL TELL YOU ANOTHER THING THAT'S GOT ME BUMMED - THE CRISIS IN THE GULF!

HAS ANYONE GIVEN ANY THOUGHT TO WHAT HAPPENS IF IT TURNS INTO A SHOOTING WAR? I MEAN, YOU CAN SAY GOODBYE TO YOUR CHEAP GASOLINE AND YOUR HIGH-PERFORMANCE CARS!

A WAR IN THE MID-EAST MEANS ADS TO OUR WAY OF LIFE AS WE KNOW IT! A WAR MEANS WE'LL ALL BE DRIVING DOMESTIC COMPACTS WITHIN A MONTH!

SID, IT ALSO MEANS PEOPLE WILL DIE. EXACTLY! SOME OF THOSE CARS ARE DEATH TRAPS!

She hardly ever sits under there.

I picked her up and she seemed really tired.

I felt her paws and her skin was dry and chapped.

That's great, it starts with an earthquake

We all want this time of year to be just like the last five minutes of Frank Capra's "It's a Wonderful Life," but were he forced to earn his wings today, Clarence would most likely end up a babbling drunk, staggering down the streets of Bedford Falls, exposing himself to women and children.

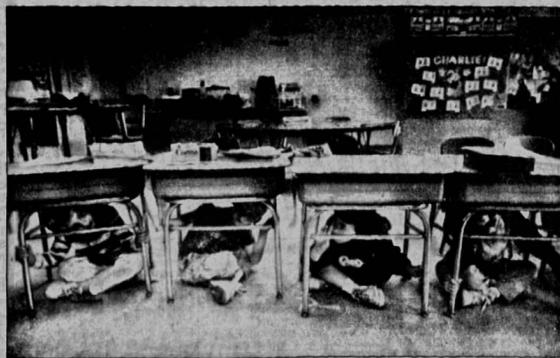

I can cope with the ugly, chaotic news coming out of the entertainment media zone when it falls into some sort of twisted pattern. But the psychotic rumblings of the real world — earthquakes, recessions battering down the hatches on the basis of a prediction by a scientist who once advocated wiring whales for detonation and sending them to the Soviet Union. Somebody needs to smack the whole state upside the head — they've been watching too many bad Charlton Heston films.

The Missourians have it all wrong — they should take their cues from our good friend Pat Robertson. Pat suggested, with muffled glee, that the fire at Universal Studios a few weeks back was not the work of a deranged security guard, but rather the hand of God, snuffing out the studio of sin that released "The Last Temptation of Christ."

It's almost pitiful to pick on Pat — the poor sap's resemblance to Alfred E. Neuman already effectively undermines everything he says — but it's hard to resist when he comes up with something this bone-headed. What's next? Will the Missouri earthquake be divine punishment for Anheuser-Busch?

When things get really goofy it's always best to turn to the music industry — at least it's always been stupidly surreal. The only thing surprising or annoying about the Milli Vanilli "expose" was the legal trouble — the sort that doesn't just take your Grammy away, but also puts you in the Crossbar Motel. Allegedly one of the Vanillis put his Milli Willi where it wasn't supposed to be and got slapped with a sexual battery charge. Alas, the charges were dropped due to insufficient evidence. (Sorry, that joke's just too easy.)

last week when Dave asked him what he'd been up to and Pop responded, "Suckin' and lickin'." Cue the band and go to commercial.

We're almost through here — just a few more tidbits from the world of publishing. An unconfirmed rumor has it that Hunter Thompson opened his fall lecture tour, promoting the hashed together "Songs of the Doomed," by kicking the podium to death and then peeing his pants, saying, "There, I feel better." A Gonzo legend trying to top himself or a sorry, drug-addled old man finally snapping? You make the call — the Depends people are waiting for an endorsement.

And by now feminists are already painting signs to protest the spring release of Bret Easton Ellis' "American Psycho," which contains enough brutally disgusting, misogynistic violence to guarantee the talentless hack a few more years on the publicity train. Under fire, Ellis will fortify himself against the storm by placing his book alongside the once-suppressed works of Joyce, Miller and Burroughs. Then he'll go out and tie on a Fitzgeraldian drunk with his buddy Jay McInerney and, in the pre-dawn glow of whatever vomit-filled gutter the two wind up in, they'll look each other in the red-eye and beat the mutual praises of the literary hollow. When they wake up they'll go home and play Super Mario Brothers III until the midday sun sends them back into hiding. After all, they've got that Rushdie score to beat.

There, I'm done now; things look a bit clearer, and I do feel better.

The Quake hysteria kicked up lately by the media is second only to "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" for groundless hype — are we ready for natural disasters with their own pre-production publicity departments?

dual hypocrisy of Clive Davis of Arista Records and the heads of the Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences denying prior knowledge of the lip-synching scandal.

Come on, boys, if you pull our cords any harder you're gonna get rope burns. You don't get to be head of a record label by blissfully ignoring how your acts are created; Davis' convenient unawareness sounds like Reagan-style management. And let's not hear any whining from the Grammy folks. They can plead the integrity of their silly awards when they stop sucking up to every hot commercial success that comes down the Billboard pipeline.

And as if Milli Vanilli hasn't been beaten to death lately over the lip-synch thing, now the poor schmucks are flirting with real

And MTV won't air Madonna's new video? Well, we've been through the Canned & Planned Controversy bit with Ms. Ciccione before with the "Like A Prayer" hulabaloo, but this time there may actually be room for some liberal indignation. Much of the network's problem with the video for "Justify My Love" seems to be its suggestions of bisexuality. At the same time, Saturday's Cole Porter-AIDS Tribute, "Red, Hot and Blue" on ABC, won't include a Jimmy Somerville clip that features homosexual posturings (though k.d. lang squeaked through with some subtle lesbian suggestions). MTV and ABC would much prefer to keep their sex nice, clean and straight — like Warrant's "Cherry Pie." On the other hand, Iggy Pop stirred the "Late Night" cocktail and massive military actions — have dragged the info-tainment world along into its non-sensical holiday abyss.

How can we watch Rudolph and the Grinch in bliss knowing that Ally Sheedy is releasing a book of poetry ("Yesterday I Saw the Sun" — yes, and it no doubt saw you too, Ally) and Salman Rushdie has admitted that one by-product of his two years in exile has been a champion-level mastery of Super Mario Brothers II and III? How can we find cultural coherence when Quincy Jones is called a Renaissance Man, while Michelangelo, Donatello, Raphael and Leonardo are the names of Ninja Turtles? And what does it mean when the slug-like producer Don Simpson ("Top Gun," "Days of Thunder") says the vermin-like producer Joel Silver ("Die Hard," "Predator," and their sequels) is "honestly emotional, and I value that in a human being"?

Take the impending Missouri earthquake, tentively scheduled for next Monday. The Quake hysteria kicked up lately by the media is second only to "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" for groundless hype — are we ready for natural disasters with their own pre-production publicity departments? After all, we're dealing with Missouri, a state whose prime functions have been to provide fireworks for the rest of the Midwest and to keep Illinois and Kansas apart. Now all of a sudden the Show Me State is
