Hawkeyes to gain $1.5 million for Rose Bowl appearance

By Wendy Alesch
The Daily iowan

Although the honor of a Rose Bowl appearance may not easily be measured in monetary terms, the Iowa Hawkeyes stand to gain about $1.5 million for their Jan. 1 trip to Pasadena.

The Hawkeyes, scheduled to meet the Washington Huskies New Year's Day, will get about $1 million from the Big Ten to cover the expenses of their Rose Bowl appearance.

The $1 million budget includes the cost of sending the marching band, cheerleaders and pompon squad, as well as expenses for the team and coaching staff.

Hawkeye expenditures above that figure must be submitted to the Big Ten in the form of a budget, according to Mick Walker, athletic department administrative associate.

"We really won't know how much it will cost until we get back," Walker said. "We went five years ago but the expenses are a lot higher this year."

Anytime a Big Ten team appears in the Rose Bowl, the whole conference receives $6 million. The money is split between each of the Big Ten teams and the Big Ten Conference office.

The UI's portion is expected to be around $500,000, Walker said. Last year, the Hawkeyes stayed at home while Michigan played in the Rose Bowl, but the UI still received $493,000.

Profits from the Rose Bowl trip will go into the athletic department's budget — a budget that has seen problems over the past few years. In fact, the budget for the 1989 fiscal year shows a loss.

According to Walker, this loss was a result of several "substantial" salary increases and capital improvement projects, including a new grass field in Kinnick Stadium and a new surface for the women's field hockey field.

The athletic department now also faces additional expenses since the indoor practice facility roof collapsed last week.

The football team will now fly to Pasadena earlier than expected, since there is no other UI indoor practice facility it could use.

The UI is now considering reconstructing the "bubble," or replacing it with a metal structure.

Price tags aside, some benefits of the Hawkeye Rose Bowl trip won't be measured in monetary terms. Recruiting, television contracts and the UI athletic program's image may all profit from the team's role in the "granddaddy" of all bowl games.

WEEG will open multimedia studio

Hypermedia may open 'playgrounds of the mind'

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily iowan

Instantly, effortlessly, the epic splendor of painter Albrecht Dürer's altar piece "The Adoration of the Crucifix" unfolds onto the computer screen. The picture is an exact photo representation, right down to the beatific light of the oil colors and the intricate carvings on the bronze centerpiece.

Click.

An adjacent screen, which displays data from a disk holding enough text for a small library, reveals the history of the piece, with relevant details about Dürer's life and his time period.

Click.

With a press of the mouse, the video screen zooms in on the lower right corner of the piece. There is Dürer's signature self portrait. What would be impossible to see in a museum or a microscopic dot in an art history textbook is revealed in vivid detail, from the locks of hair, to the flowing robes, to the shifty eyes that seem to dart away from the viewer.

It takes a while to take it all in. The piece is one of 4,500 works of art on the videodisc Pieta Resistance, a program developed by Weeg Computing Center and the School of Art and Art History.

Weeg computer specialists hope it will be one of countless programs eventually produced by faculty and students at the UI's new Multimedia Computing Studio, scheduled to open on Jan. 22.

The technology of the studio, known as "hypermedia," is currently sweeping the country, turning what was once science fiction fantasy into reality. It also has the potential to revolutionize the university classroom as we know it.

"Imaginary playgrounds"

Many computer specialists place hypermedia's roots in a 1945 Atlantic Monthly article by Vannevar Bush, in which he described a vision of the future where people have universal access to all forms of information, including text, graphics and video — a mode he called "Memex." Though the nuts and bolts differ, the modern concept of hypermedia is virtually the same.

The studio will produce a mixture of traditional computer programs, CD ROM discs, and videodiscs — the big brother of audio's compact disc — that will include a powerful blend of video images, graphics, sound, text and speech. And an already popular form of software, called hypertext, will organize the information so that users can move easily from subject to subject without needing an index or a table of contents.

In the world of hypermedia, the computer becomes a "command center," instantly summoning whatever images, text or sound the user wants. Browsers can interactively choose topics and side issues, and review items at their own speeds. In the words of one programmer, hypermedia technology is the gateway to "imaginary playgrounds of the mind."

To a generation of students raised on videogames and VCRs, the new technology may be the ultimate relief from 700-student classes, lecture notes and out-of-date textbooks. At a time when higher education is being assailed by many critics for failing to adequately teach students, multimedia learning appeals to many professors as well.

"I don't think it will make the classroom obsolete," said See Studio, Page 3A

Weeg computer specialists Mike Partridge, Joan Huntley and Todd Papke sport a somewhat ironic pose as they embark on their latest project, the UI Multimedia Computing Studio. The three hope no evil befalls the project, which will use computer technology to combine video, audio and text, and may revolutionize the classroom.

Captives continue to leave Kuwait

500 Americans remain behind

By Ellen Nimmons
The Associated Press

Nearly 500 more foreigners flew out of Iraq and occupied Kuwait on Tuesday, ending four months' captivity following the Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate.

One freed British hostage said he saw bodies on the street outside his Kuwait hideout Tuesday morning.

Three chartered flights brought 243 foreigners from Kuwait to Baghdad to join hundreds of other hostages on three chartered jetliners that left Iraq for Bangkok, London and Frankfurt.

Callum Strachan, dressed in a traditional kilt from his native Scotland, saluted the other hostages by playing his bagpipes as the foreigners cleared Iraqi passport control.

"The people who deserve the greatest admiration are the Kuwaitis who sheltered us despite the fact that they could be executed on the spot if they were found helping us," said 61-year-old Briton Ken Emsden.

He said there still was gunfire every night in Kuwait and that he saw the bodies of four civilians in the street Tuesday morning.

"We're just happy it's finally over," said Sid Hatcher, 35, of Knoxville, Tenn., who was held at an industrial site in Iraq.

Diplomats said just 14 Americans were on the flights from Baghdad — seven headed to Frankfurt and seven to London. There were no Americans on the flight from Kuwait to Baghdad.

"We must have gotten them all," said one American consular official, referring to earlier evacuation

UI alcohol policy expanded to cover greek system

By Chris Pothoven
The Daily iowan

Changes in alcohol policy will soon be in order for the UI greek system, bringing it in line with residence hall alcohol regulations.

The change, which will go into effect July 1, 1991, will update the current policy so that it is consistent with other university policies and that it follows state and federal laws.

Under the new policy, students below the Iowa legal drinking age of 21 are not permitted to drink alcoholic beverages in chapter houses. Students who are of legal age are permitted to drink in their private rooms only if allowed by their international or national chapter policies.

Alcoholic beverages are prohibited in hallways, stairways, lobbies, restrooms, dining areas, recreation room areas and any other public areas of chapter houses.

In addition, people under the legal age may not permit guests, including those who are of legal age, to consume alcohol within their private rooms.

According to Dean of Students Phillip Jones, the plan to implement the policy has existed for a few years.

"The decision came from the state Legislature when they changed the law," said Jones, referring to the increase in Iowa's drinking age — from 19 to 21 — in 1986.

The UI's decision to implement the policy should not be a total shock to the greek community, said Mary Peterson, associate director of campus programs and student activities and coordinator of the greek system.

"About five years ago I started planting the idea of change (of policy)," she said, adding that this latest alteration will probably be the last in what has been an evolving policy. "Most of the change has been empowered by the students," Peterson said.

Since the greek houses are approved university housing and are recognized by the UI, Peterson said it was essential that the greek system event policy be brought into line with UI residence hall regulations.

The changes are due to the nature of state law as well as both the university and the international and national greek organizations' rules about the consumption of alcohol, Peterson said, rather than any major problems with greek exchanges or other events.

"They've been doing an excellent job of enforcing things," she said. "I'm really proud of the greek community and what they've controlled."

Steve Cary, president of the Interfraternity Council, said he thinks the UI administration is also hoping to change the focus of

CR man pleads not guilty to 1st-degree kidnapping

By Beth Chacey
The Daily Iowan

A Cedar Rapids man accused of attempted murder, kidnapping and sexual assault stemming from an Oct. 20 incident pleaded not guilty in Linn County Tuesday to the first-degree kidnapping charge. A jury trial for that charge has been set for Feb. 11.

Patrick S. McAmis of Cedar Rapids is accused of kidnapping after allegedly forcing his way into a woman's car when she stopped to ask him for directions.

According to court documents, the victim left Werni's Tap, 1602 E Ave. NE, Cedar Rapids, at 12:30 a.m. on Oct. 20 and stopped her car to ask directions to the west side of Cedar Rapids. McAmis allegedly forced his way into the woman's car and drove into an alley where he beat her. He then allegedly drove to a rural area of Johnson County where he sexually assaulted her before stabbing her eight times — perforating her lungs and cutting her hands and shoulders.

McAmis is scheduled to enter a plea today in Johnson County for the charges of attempted murder and second-degree sexual abuse.

District hears audit report at meeting

By Heidi Pederson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School district spent more than $33 million last year and received more than $34 million in General Fund receipts from taxes and investments, according to an audit report released Monday.

That report, which was presented to the school board's board of directors at its Tuesday meeting, revealed that $34,322,370 in receipts were received in the year ending June 30, 1990, a 3.71 percent increase from last year. Disbursements in that time totaled $33,423,549, a 4.18 percent increase from last year.

Recommendations made to the board include a review of internal accounting controls due to a perceived overlap in employee duties in some areas, as well as a monitoring of school activity funds to prevent budget deficits. The board approved the recommendations.

Also at the meeting, the board approved a recommendation to create the position of volunteer coordinator — a person who will organize district school volunteer services on a part-time basis for the second semester.

Board President Ellen Widiss also made appointments to the Strategic Planning team and to the Board Selection Committee at the meeting.

Widiss and board Vice President Craig Willis will serve on the planning team. The remaining board members will review applications.

Widiss says she is pleased at the number of applicants.

"It is very exciting and very gratifying to see that so many highly qualified, committed members of the community are interested on serving on the committee," she said.

ISU investigates bootlegging connected with alleged rape

By Jessica Davidson
The Daily Iowan

Iowa State University is continuing an independent investigation of the Delta Chi fraternity following criminal charges of bootlegging filed by Ames police against the fraternity.

The investigation was started in early October, and ISU Dean of Students Mary Beth Snyder said she didn't know when it would be finished. Any university charges would be made after the criminal matter was completed, she said.

"And then, regardless of the findings of the court of guilt or innocence (in the criminal complaint), we will make our findings," Snyder said.

Ames police charged the fraternity with bootlegging Nov. 14 in connection with the alleged sexual assault of a 17-year-old Maryland girl in September. She had been visiting ISU as a prospective student.

Kevin Lee French, 20, a member of Delta Chi, was arrested Oct. 4 for the assault and charged with third-degree sexual abuse. He was released on bond, with the trial to begin Jan. 23.

"(Fraternity members) were apparently responsible for a party at which the girl was made intoxicated and later was allegedly sexually assaulted," said Capt. Terry Bird of the Ames Police Department.

Charges of bootlegging involve the illegal purchasing, sale and distribution of alcohol to minors.

As a serious misdemeanor, a guilty verdict for a bootlegging charge can result in up to a $1,000 fine for a corporation, and a $1,000 fine and/or one year imprisonment for an individual.

In the criminal case, the fraternity is being charged with bootlegging as a corporation, according to Molly Frazer at the Story County Attorney's office. The arraignment, during which the defendant will enter a plea, is set for Monday. The sexual assault charge is separate.

Snyder said the ISU investigation was started as soon as "it came to our attention that there was the possibility of an alcohol-related violation prior to an alleged sexual assault."

She said the independent investigation, unlike the criminal charges, will determine if the ISU conduct code has been violated.

"The rationale is that there may be a university conduct code being violated, and we have an obligation to the community to hold (the fraternity members) liable if they have violated that code," she said.

The conduct code is a set of regulations that includes policy on the use, sale and distribution of alcohol, and adherence to state law.

Penalties for violating the conduct code depend on whether corporations or individuals are found guilty, Snyder said, which in this case will be determined after the criminal case is finished and after ISU completes its investigation.

If individual fraternity members are found guilty, penalties could include conduct probation, community service, alcohol assessment or suspension. If the fraternity is found guilty, its privileges as an organization could be revoked or the university could refuse to recognize it.

Snyder said the university can wait for more information before filing charges because the fraternity is "not an immediate danger."

She said, "I have decided that with what I know of this case, the fraternity does not present a threat to the health or welfare of the community."

Council considers helipad ban

By Cynthia Taylor
The Daily Iowan

Although the controversy over a proposed Mercy Hospital helipad was laid to rest weeks ago, the Iowa City Council suggested officially banning helipads to avoid similar problems in the future.

Although most residents at the public hearing Tuesday night supported the ban in commercial and residential areas, the council agreed the proposal didn't go far enough to protect residents because helipads would still be allowed in industrial areas.

Councilor Randy Larson said a ban including industrial areas would avoid another controversy like the one involving Mercy.

During a recent hearing on the interpretation of the zoning ordinance, two former city council members testified that the ordinance they drafted was not intended to allow helipads.

The city ordinance has been criticized for not specifically permitting or prohibiting helipads. Because of the loophole, Mercy went ahead with plans to build a helipad atop its emergency wing.

Continuing their opposition to helipads near residential areas, more than 750 residents signed a petition supporting the proposed ban on helipads.

John Kammermeyer, a member of the Northside Neighborhood Association — a group of residents that led the opposition to the Mercy helipad — said a helipad would pose safety threats, increase noise pollution and decrease property values.

Several helicopters have crashed in the UI area in the past 10 years, including one near Slater Residence Hall and one during an Iowa-Iowa State football game in 1980, Kammermeyer said.

Iowa City wouldn't be the first community to ban helipads. According to Kammermeyer, several cities near Minneapolis-St. Paul and San Francisco have implemented bans.

The council deferred a vote until Jan. 8 to look into extending the ban to include industrial areas.

Courts

By Brenda Mobile
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man was charged with sexual abuse in the third degree Monday following a signed statement from a 13-year-old girl declaring that the man had sexual intercourse with her.

According to Johnson County District Court reports, Basim Y. Al-Bakri, 29, 2128 S. Riverside Drive, No. 60, verbally stated to Iowa City Police that he had "committed a sex act with this 13-year-old female."

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Dec. 11.

■ An Iowa City man, facing charges of third-degree criminal mischief and assault without intent, changed his plea to guilty of fourth-degree criminal mischief.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Todd M. Baggett, 24, 426 Ridgeview Ave., allegedly struck a female victim in the head while she was driving and attempted to cause her to lose control of the vehicle. Following this, the defendant proceeded to kick in the windshield with his feet, causing glass to cut the victim, records say. As he did this he reportedly said, "You want to see violence, I'll show you some," records say.

Summerwill receives STAR award

The Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce Arts Committee has announced that Joyce Summerwill, director of patient relations at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, is the recipient of the second annual STAR Award.

The award, a sculpture designed and fabricated by metalsmith Barbara Nilausen-K was presented at the Chamber of Commerce business awards breakfast held at the Highlander Inn on Nov. 30.

Established in 1989, the STAR (Service to The Arts in our Region) award recognizes an individual whose activities have had an exceptional impact on the life of the arts in the area, both in terms of cultural excellence and communitywide enrichment.

An original artwork, commissioned from a local artist by the arts committee, is given to the STAR award recipient.

Cell, molecular biology program receives grant

The UI Cell and Molecular Biology Training Program has been awarded a one-year grant of $142,506 from the National Institutes of General Medical Sciences.

The program, now in its 16th year, provides graduate students with training in cellular and molecular biology to learn how biology works at the level of individual cells and molecules.

Forty-seven faculty members take part in the interdisciplinary program, training students from several academic programs and departments.

West High Chamber Choir to sing at library

The Iowa City Public Library invites the public to stop in for a morning break at the library on Thursday at 10:30 a.m. for a concert by the West High Chamber Choir directed by Joe Hamm.

Cider and doughnuts will be served by the FRIENDS of the Library before and after the concert. Admission is free and the concert will end at 11 a.m.

Library to host Irving Weber's birthday

The Iowa City Public Library will host a birthday celebration for local historian Irving Weber on Dec. 18 from 3 to 5 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Birthday cake will be served, and Weber will be available to sign his newest volume of local history, which may be purchased at the event.

The library will be displaying samples of local history material and showing highlights from local history video series including "Irving Weber's Iowa City" and Ellen Buchanan's "Tell Me Your Story."

Studio

like Partridge, senior Weeg programs analyst and co-creator of the studio. "But if you look at what instructors are competing with today, in terms of movies, television, MTV and rock concerts, you can see there is room for a change. If you go to a rock concert today, look at what kind of experience that is, in terms of overwhelming sound and visual images, with fireworks going off and laser light shows. The professor is standing in a lecture room, talking to a bunch of students, and that's pretty hard to compete with, in terms of people's attention spans and what they're willing to concentrate on."

Faculty interest

Already, close to a dozen UI professors have discussed hypermedia proposals with Weeg programmers, according to Joan Huntley, the supervisor of the hypermedia project. The subjects range from radiology and nursing to music and journalism.

The studio will serve as a production lab for faculty, staff and faculty-sponsored students. Programs will range from multimedia presentations to interactive programs that students will be able to access on their own time. Though computer disks can be accessed at any of the UI's computer clusters, videodiscs can be operated only at the four campus computer stations equipped with laser-disc players.

The studio will also have staff of hypermedia consultants, led by Studio Manager Todd Papke, to assist users in figuring out the technology and fleshing out their ideas. To further aid instruction, Weeg will offer a series of "brown bag lunches" and seminars to teach hypermedia technology to the uninitiated. Two previous faculty seminars, attended by 80 faculty and staff members, were sold out.

The multimedia project builds on computer and video technology developed at Weeg's Computer Aided Instruction lab since 1978. But in addition to existing equipment, the studio will include new computers and software, a state-of-the-art digital sound studio, as well as photo and video equipment.

Though the exact cost of the studio has not yet been made available, project developers said the bulk of the funding came from donations of approximately $40,000 in new and used equipment. Contributors ranged from Apple Inc., the original sponsors of the studio, to Commodore and Gold-Ribbon sound.

The studio proposal was first sent to the UI administration in early May and was accepted and implemented in record time. The move pleased many who felt the UI was slow to computerize in other areas, particularly in the UI Main Library. And though the UI won't lead the field like Stanford and Carnegie-Mellon universities, project developers say the UI will make a good showing.

"It's a combination of three people really believing in it and an administration who's willing to do what they can," Huntley said. "There's not a lot of money right now, so it's not all new equipment. It's not the laser facility. It's not a $25 million showcase. But you can do a lot without a 'can-do' attitude."

User-friendly Shakespeare

The educational prospects for hypermedia look stunning. At Stanford's School of Medicine, for example, students use a program called Electric Cadaver, a hypermedia anatomy primer that allows students to observe thousands of photographs of the human body, from the toes to the nerves of the face, simply by moving a cursor on the computer screen. By working with a computer, the student can manipulate the body in ways not possible with a human subject. For instance, a student can "paralyze" a facial nerve and, on the computer monitor, the lips of the human face droop or the smile wanes.

Similar programs created by Voyager Software allow students to deal interactively with Orson Welles' film classic "Citizen Kane" or follow a note-by-note analysis of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony," while a compact disc recording of the piece is playing.

At Stanford's English department, hypermedia makes the work of William Shakespeare user-friendly. One videodisc lets students read passages from "Hamlet" and later call up film clips on the monitor, occasionally freezing the action to

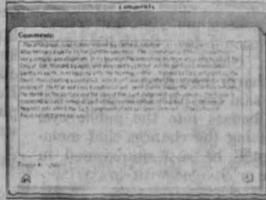

Pieta Resistance

The hypermedia art history program is an example of the technology to be produced at the new UI Multimedia Computing Studio, scheduled to open Jan. 22.

The computer displays an actual photograph of Albrecht Dürer's altar piece "The Adoration of the Crucifix." The piece is one of 4,500 works of art on the videodisc Pieta Resistance.

Click the mouse, and a section appears on the screen offering historic details and artistic analyses. Other options allow a user to look at reference works on the piece and related subjects.

A "zoom" function allows a user to see closeups of the artwork that often can't be seen in art history textbooks or museums.

Several zooms show what is usually nothing more than a pinpoint in textbooks: Dürer's self portrait. Note the detail in the locks of hair and the shifty eyes.

consult the text or look at different performances for a moment-by-moment comparison. Huntley said a UI English professor has proposed a similar program that would compare various texts of Shakespeare's "Henry V" and would include film footage from Lawrence Olivier's 1940s movie version and the 1990 film written and directed by Kenneth Branagh.

Brooks Landon, an associate professor of English, is also interested in hypermedia. Landon teaches a course called "Literature and Culture of 20th Century America" in which he incorporates video tapes and sound recording. But Landon said wheeling in VCRs and sound equipment often takes valuable time away from teaching and in larger classes, students sitting in the back are often left out of the learning process.

Feels like a "nerd"

"This isn't wild idealism; it's simple competition," Landon said of hypermedia. "Most of my students, when they watch TV or a video, are watching it on infinitely better systems than the little 19-inch TV with an old half-inch VCR that I have to wheel into the classroom. You can go to any bar in Iowa City to watch a basketball game and do better than that."

"When I use sound, instead of using a tinny-sounding little boombox or, worse, standing in front of the room, holding it up, looking kind of nerdy — basically using technology that my students wouldn't be caught dead listening to outside of the classroom — I could actually get the most out of the sound. I would like the classroom to be ready for media."

"The university can't be a cloistered museum," he continued. "You can't be living in an electronic culture during the hours of the day when you're not in class and then go to a museum and learn about a world that hasn't existed for 15 years."

Landon plans to use the UI studio to capture in hypermodal form the sights and sounds, the critical events and thoughts, that shaped our century. One scenario will include the film footage of the pathbreaking 1939-40 World's Fair. Instead of reading about the event or watching a film, students will be able to "walk" through the fair buildings and learn about the various technologies presented there. When students reach the RCA Building, for instance, where the first televisions were displayed, they will be able to summon a database describing the history of television.

Term papers of the future

Studio Manager Todd Papke said hypermedia will redefine what constitutes a classroom in the future, and has the potential to reach many students who fall out of the traditional learning process.

"It's going to make learning a lot more exciting," Papke said. "Our educational system isn't tailored for everybody. There is such a standardized way of learning, and there are so many students who slip outside the cracks. There are many people who don't go to school because it isn't made for them — it doesn't match what they need to learn."

He said the new technology could help reach these people. He uses as an example a hypermedia program that allows musicians to practice jazz with a full band.

"There's a thing with jazz musicians: you can't get good unless you can practice with a band," Papke said. "But a band won't let you practice with them unless you're good enough."

This is a dilemma in which students find themselves throughout life, Papke said. You need experience to get a job, but you can't get experience without a job.

"Hypermedia allows people to say, 'I'm tired of people pushing me away from getting experience,'" he said. "It's a way around the Catch-22."

One aspect of student life in which Weeg programmers think hypermedia can be particularly effective is in the area of interactive research and term papers. Instead of rushing through outdated textbooks to copy down information at the last minute, hypermedia will allow students to create a paper that is exciting, and may be read by more than the professor, according to Huntley. Landon said it makes research "kind of like a video game."

For example, a paper comparing the musical styles of Mozart and Bach could include actual samples of their music. A political science paper on Soviet agriculture could feature interviews with Russian farmers. Doing an English paper on how Sinclair Lewis' "Babbalanza" reflects life in the '20s? An interactive term paper could sport tape recordings of the songs of Al Jolson, still photographs of speakeasies, or film footage of flappers dancing the Charleston.

Citizen group urges incinerator monitoring

By Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

Local citizens demanded that emissions from area incinerators be monitored and cleaned by filters at an informal public meeting Tuesday night.

The local group Environmental Advocates sponsored the informational meeting to discuss the potential health hazards of incineration.

"The first and foremost reason we are here is to share concerns about incinerators going up in our community," said member Deanna Bickford. "A lot of us aren't doctors or engineers, but we have learned enough to know that we should be concerned about the incinerators."

"There hasn't been a whole lot of information coming out of the university," said meeting organizer Leah Hass.

The meeting focused on what standards the UI uses to decide if the emissions from the incinerators are hazardous and what monitoring should be done to ensure emissions are below recommended levels.

Currently the UI does not monitor the Oakdale incinerators after they have been approved in initial emissions testing. The incinerators do not use emissions filters in the incinerator stacks.

UI Director of Health Protection William Twaler said in a Sept. 28 Daily Iowan article that the emissions released from the Oakdale incinerators will not be at dangerous levels.

The UI has also stated there is no need for filters to monitor emissions levels in the stacks. In the same DI article, Ed Hawks of the Architectural Engineering Department said there is no need for such equipment.

"If we felt there was a need for them, we would have put them in," Hawks said.

For the past several months, environmental groups have demanded more information from the UI administration concerning the possible health hazards from pollutants released by the incinerators. According to a member of Protect

Oakdale who is also an Oakdale employee, the UI recently gave the grassroots organization a "1500-2000 page document explaining why and how they did what they did."

But despite this, several people at the meeting challenged the UI administration's concern about safety of the incineration facilities.

"If a container of ash could be delivered to the top 200 or so people in the administration then we would find out if the stuff is hazardous," said one person.

Also discussed at the meeting was the Veterans Administration Hospital's plan to build an incinerator — the fourth in the area. Although this incinerator will not be burning radioactive waste, as does one of the Oakdale incinerators, people are still concerned about its construction.

"I am concerned with any incinerator, and with the impact (that) all the pollutants these incinerators spew into the air will have on the community," said Hass.

responsibility for underage alcohol consumption — by shifting the burden of enforcement to the bars and the police.

Peterson agreed. "It takes some real risk off the chapters," she said.

Peterson said she expects other Big Ten and Big Eight schools to follow suit. Currently only Indiana University has a similar policy.

"I bet we'll see it at Iowa State University within the next year," she said.

Peterson said the major concern from the greek system so far has been how to explain the new policy to membership.

"I'm sure some are feeling clamped down," she said, but added that the majority of the greek community seems to understand the policy change.

"We understand their frustration, but it is law," Peterson said.

IFC Vice President Charles Ganske, a member of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, said members of his chapter reacted strongly when they heard the news.

"People were surprised, pissed," he said. "The first reaction was, 'It's our house. We can do whatever we want.'"

Cary said the new policy is simply a change the fraternities will have to deal with.

"I know that the system is strong enough to get through it," he added.

It is important the greek system and the UI administration have similar interpretations of the new policy, he said.

"Communication will definitely be an element for success (of the new policy)," Cary said. "We're all going to have to work together to keep the greek system strong."

He said most social exchanges will be moved from the chapter houses to local establishments, such as bars.

Another change will be an increased emphasis on activities not revolving around the use of alcohol, according to both Cary and Peterson.

"I think we'll see changes as far as programmatic things go," said Peterson.

She said the definition of social events will expand to include such things as parents' weekend, Hancher events and intramurals.

"We will work together as a community to make sure they have fun," Peterson added.

But several fraternity members said they are not in favor of the new policy change.

"I understand the university's motivation. I don't think it's a good policy," Ganske said. "It might do more harm than good."

He said that the new policy will force houses into the public eye, increasing the chances that members will be seen intoxicated in public or charged with an OWI.

Scott Nemecek, a UI fraternity member, said there were two problems with the new policy.

"If parties are going to be exclusively downtown, public intoxication will go up, which will mean more problems for the community and make life hellish for the police," he said. "Also, it will increase drunk driving."

Increased costs, stemming from holding parties outside the fraternities, will be another negative consequence of the change, said Lambda Chi Alpha member Mike Speer.

"It's definitely going to hurt, especially the smaller houses," he said.

Speer also said many houses will not be able to hold parties elsewhere and will probably simply violate the policy.

"The first house that gets caught is going to be made the example, and I think that house will be screwed," he said.

himself or herself into it and actually learn something, as opposed to copy something," Huntley said. "I think they will put more heart and soul into their work and do a better job."

A revolution?

So, is the answer to the educational dilemma just a few clicks away?

Despite their enthusiasm, the developers of the hypermedia project are skeptical.

"Hypermedia is not going to make a bad teacher a good teacher, but it is going to make a good teacher a better teacher," Huntley said. Nonetheless, she believes that creating multimedia documents will be as popular in the '90s as word-processing was in the '80s.

Others are even more optimistic.

"That's the one place in the university that I think is most aggressively preparing for what good teaching is going to be in the year 2000 or 2010," Landon said of the studio. "It seems to me that we are preparing for a pretty major revolution. At least, I hope we're ready."

5 suspended for misuse of computers

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Five Polk County employees have been suspended for using county computers to keep personal files, play games or display sexually suggestive pictures.

County Administrator Ray Sears said he suspended the five without pay Friday. The suspensions, which vary in length, began Monday.

Jim Day, information center manager, said he got a one week suspension.

"They were trumped-up charges. They have no backing," he said.

Day said he was cited for having religious material stored on his computer. He said it was part of a program that was on the machine when he received it.

He also was cited for knowing a man he supervises had games and an explicit picture on his computer.

flights from the Persian Gulf emirate. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

In Washington, the Bush administration said a planned evacuation flight Thursday is "likely to be the last" for Americans and will probably also carry home the remaining staff of the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait.

"We would anticipate that once all Americans who want out have been able to get out that we would remove the entire staff of the embassy," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

In Frankfurt, Germany, U.S. Consulate spokesman Craig Springer said seven Americans, two Canadians, two Britons, an Irishman, an Italian and an Australian were on the U.S.-chartered Iraqi Airways Boeing 707 that landed there late Tuesday from Baghdad.

Before departure, diplomats said six Britons were aboard and did not mention an Australian or Italian. The discrepancy was not explained immediately.

Springer said the former hostages would stay overnight and fly to their final destinations Wednesday on regular commercial flights.

The flight to London carried 310 people, nearly all of them Britons but including seven Americans.

A Japanese-chartered jetliner left Baghdad for Bangkok with 159 people aboard, including 14 Japanese diplomats from Kuwait. Nearly all the others were former Japanese hostages.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said in Washington that more than 500 Americans, most of them children, are remaining in Kuwait and Iraq — some because of roots there; in other cases, because the non-American head of household could not get Iraqi permission to leave.

Boucher said that except for three Americans with visa problems, all Americans wanting to leave apparently have left, so far as is known.

After his troops seized Kuwait on Aug. 2, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein barred many foreigners from leaving and detained some foreigners at strategic sites to ward off a possible attack. Last week, Saddam said all foreigners who wanted to leave could do so.

The United Nations has authorized the use of force to liberate Kuwait unless Iraq withdraws by Jan. 15. By that date, the U.S.-led multinational force assembled in the gulf and Saudi Arabia after the invasion will include more than 500,000 troops — about the same size as the Iraqi force in and around Kuwait.

Bush, Shamir discuss U.S. aid

By Rita Beamish
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir put a positive face Tuesday on relations strained by new U.S. ties to Israel's Arab foes. Bush promised to keep Israel's "qualitative edge" in weaponry, an American official said.

The two leaders, in a "friendly and good exchange of views" on the Persian Gulf crisis and other subjects, also discussed prospects for increased U.S. aid to ease Israel's immigration burden, said Assistant Secretary of State John Kelly.

But Bush voiced U.S. concerns about treatment of Palestinians living in the Israeli occupied territory, Kelly said, though the president did not bring up the touchy matter of the slaying of 17 Palestinians by Israeli police during an October riot at a Jerusalem holy site.

Nor did Bush press Shamir to cooperate with a planned United Nations investigation of that incident, because their discussion "evolved that way," without that subject coming up, Kelly said.

Shamir told reporters he felt assured by Bush that the United States would not accept a deal with Iraq that would threaten Israel, especially in light of Israel's increasing edginess over new U.S. alliances in the region.

"I trust the president, what he said. He has said it several times, and he said it to me now again, that there will not be any deal at the expense of Israel," Shamir said after spending nearly two hours with Bush and his aides.

Having promised the United States it will lie low in the Persian Gulf crisis, Israeli leaders have indicated fear that the administration would accept a diplomatic solution that would leave intact Iraq's stores of chemical and biological weapons.

Israel also is worried about Bush's plans to sell Saudi Arabia some $20 billion in sophisticated arms and has asked for an increase in U.S. military aid to offset the unprecedented sale.

On immigration, Shamir told Bush that Israel "would be looking for additional help" to cope with the influx of Jewish immigrants from the Soviet Union and Ethiopia.

Shamir did not ask for a specific amount, and Bush was generally supportive, Kelly said. But he said the administration was waiting to see the impact of its current loan program.

Soviets urge diplomacy in solving gulf conflict

By Barry Schweid
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze urged the Bush administration Tuesday to make a last-ditch diplomatic effort to avert war in the Persian Gulf.

"It is also my strong hope that U.S. troops will not see action," Shevardnadze said at a news conference near the end of a two-day meeting with the Secretary of State James Baker.

Referring to the high-level talks President Bush has proposed with Iraq, the Soviet foreign minister said, "We pin much hope on the coming contacts."

But Baker said Baghdad had still not agreed on a date for him to go to Iraq to see President Saddam Hussein. He offered any time between Dec. 20 and Jan. 3, but again rejected any Iraqi attempt to delay the visit until just before the Jan. 15 deadline set by the U.N. Security Council for Iraq to pull out or face the prospect of military measures.

While Baker gave a positive account of the U.S.-Soviet meetings held in his home town, no agreements were announced except that Shevardnadze said the two sides had decided to suspend weapons shipments to warring factions in Afghanistan.

Even on that point, however, the foreign minister said the date for the cutoff had not been set. And Baker said he did not expect an agreement on such issues as assistance to rehabilitate the war-torn country "in the near term."

Shevardnadze bluntly appealed for U.S. food aid before a meeting Monday with Baker. And officials in Washington said the White House could unveil an economic assistance package for the Soviet Union as early as Wednesday when Bush meets with Shevardnadze.

Extensive discussion of the Persian Gulf crisis slowed consideration by Baker and Shevardnadze about remaining roadblocks to a treaty to reduce U.S. and Soviet long-range weapons stockpiles.

However, they plan to meet Tuesday night to consider the results of bargaining between their arms experts.

Shevardnadze said no date had been set for Bush to go to Moscow to sign the treaty at a summit meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Industrialist Hammer dead at 92

By John Horn
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Industrialist Armand Hammer was remembered Tuesday as a tireless crusader for international peace who improved the human condition by investing millions in education, medicine and the arts.

The flamboyant, globe-trotting chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp., the nation's 16th largest industrial company, died Monday at his home in the Westwood district late Monday following a brief illness. He was 92.

The cause of death was not revealed, although associates said privately Hammer had been suffering from kidney problems. He died just one day before a planned celebration for his belated bar mitzvah.

Slammed by critics as a self-promoter more concerned with his image than corporate leadership, Hammer nonetheless drew praise from heads of state and leaders in business and education. He met with every Soviet leader.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said Hammer helped forge Soviet-American relations.

"Mr. Hammer was associated with one of the most remarkable pages of our relationship," Gorbachev said. "He met with Lenin and was very close in many ways to the Soviet Union and to Russia."

Hammer, whose father helped found the American Communist Party, became a millionaire by age 23 and by most estimates died a billionaire.

Hammer bought the then-ailing Occidental for $100,000 in 1957 as a tax shelter and turned it into an international giant; its 1989 income was $285 million on sales of $20.7 billion. Occidental's core businesses are oil and gas, chemicals, natural gas pipelines, pork and beef, and coal.

Ray Irani, Occidental's president and chief operating officer, immediately succeeded Hammer as chairman and chief executive.

But Hammer's death sparked speculation that Occidental, long beholden to his occasionally whimsical management style, might change its corporate agenda.

Armand Hammer 1898-1990

Highlights of a long and busy life

- Born in New York, son of a doctor and founding member of the American Communist Party.
- Turned his family's small pharmaceutical company into a million-dollar business while studying medicine at night; graduated but never practiced as a doctor.
- Travelled to Russia after communist revolution to do relief work; traded U.S. grain for Soviet products; became a Soviet hero for his help easing food shortages.
- Gained Lenin's trust and became the sole licensee for many U.S. manufacturers in the Soviet Union, setting up trading and manufacturing companies there; sold his interests after Stalin came to power, but kept up contacts with and was trusted by the Kremlin for the rest of his life.
- Succeeded in various businesses in the U.S., including cattle breeding, art dealing, and whiskey distilling. Bought nearly bankrupt Occidental Petroleum as a tax shelter in 1952 and built it into a huge energy and agribusiness firm.
- After years of being asked if he was named for the similar-sounding brand of baking soda (or vice versa), bought a stake in the manufacturer and took a seat on the company's board.

Warren Shimmerlik, an independent energy analyst, said under Irani's management Occidental was likely to undergo significant restructuring.

At times, Hammer's craving for power and publicity threatened to overshadow his achievements in business, philanthropy and the arts.

Teen guilty on 6 counts in trial for jogger rape

By Samuel Maul
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A 16-year-old Tuesday became the first defendant convicted of attempted murder in last year's gang rape of a Central Park jogger. A second teen-ager was convicted of sexual abuse but acquitted of attempted murder, rape and sodomy.

Kevin Richardson, 16, was convicted of attempted murder, rape, sodomy, robbery, assault and riot. Richardson, who was a juvenile when arrested, faces a maximum of five to 10 years in prison.

Kharey Wise, 18, who said in a videotape confession that this was his first rape, was also convicted of assault, but cleared of 10 of the 13 counts against him in the attack. Because Wise faces sentencing as an adult, he could receive five to 15 years.

The trial was the second for the April 19, 1989, attack on a female jogger and two men caught in a youthful rampage that came to be called "wilding."

The woman was not widely identified because she was a sexual assault victim. But her story attracted enormous public interest — and debate.

Critics of the national media attention attributed it to her status as a white investment banker in a city where minority crime victims get less attention. Others cited her dramatic fight for life, her recovery and return to work and the quiet bravery her story portrayed.

The two defendants wept and hugged each other and pandemonium erupted when the verdicts were read in the jury's 12th day of deliberations. A loud moaning went up from the section where Richardson's family sat. Richardson's mother, Grace Cuffey, fainted.

As Wise was led from the courtroom in handcuffs, he turned to prosecutor Elizabeth Lederer and snarled, "You're going to pay for this. Jesus is going to get you. You made this . . . up."

"He didn't do that! He could never hurt anybody," screamed Cuffey. "Oh, Lord!"

The victim was found comatose, muddy and bloody in a ravine below the jogging path around 1:30 a.m., about four hours after the attack. The nearly dead woman lost three-fourths of her blood; her skull was broken, her left cheekbone crushed; she had cuts, scratches and bruises all over her body.

In the first trial, Antron McCray, Yusef Salaam and Raymond Santana, all 16, were convicted Aug. 18 of rape, assault and other charges. All were sentenced in September to five to 10 years in prison.

Steven Lopez, 16, is the last to face charges in connection with the assaults. His trial was scheduled for early next year.

The second trial began much as the first had, with Lederer saying the defendants' own words would convict them. Defense lawyers charged those words were coerced by racist police looking for black and Hispanic suspects.

Defendant Kevin Richardson arrives at court Tuesday in New York with his mother before the jury came in with a verdict of guilty on six counts in the Central Park jogger trial.

Lederer insisted the case was "not about race. It's about violence. It's about right and wrong."

The taped statements were the prosecution's chief evidence.

Wise described how the female jogger screamed, kicked and struggled violently until she was struck unconscious with a rock.

Lederer asked Wise whether he thought they had left the woman dead.

"That's the way I looked at it," he said.

Wise later said police hit and tricked him into fabricating the confession. His attorney charged police and prosecutors with using "Hitlerian tactics."

The victim, now 30, testified that she has recovered from most of her injuries and has returned to work as an investment banker. She still suffers vision, balance and sense-of-smell problems.

Wise's attorney had promised to vigorously cross-examine the jogger during this trial. Instead, smiling and speaking softly, he asked questions he hoped would show her injuries were not as bad as Lederer had claimed.

Defense attorneys in the first trial declined to question the jogger.

Oil prices, military costs hurt foreign trade deficit

By Martin Crutsinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's foreign trade deficit, hurt by higher oil prices and increased military spending from the Persian Gulf crisis, widened a sharp 13.9 percent in the July-September quarter, the government said Tuesday.

The Commerce Department said the $25.6 billion third quarter deficit was up from a second quarter deficit of $22.5 billion. It was the largest quarterly imbalance since a $26.7 billion gap in the final three months of 1989.

The new report covered the current account, which is considered the most important yardstick of the country's international performance because it measures not only trade in merchandise but also trade in services and investment flows between countries.

The higher deficit in the July-September quarter was viewed as especially ominous because an improving trade balance had been the only bright spot in a lackluster economy this year.

A rising trade deficit would make the recession many economists believe has already started even steeper by removing the strength that export growth has provided to the manufacturing sector over the past several years.

"A lot of people are looking to exports as the key to moderating the severity of the recession and helping to pull the country out of the downturn," said Howard Lewis, a trade expert at the National Association of Manufacturers.

Cynthia Latta, an economist with DRI-McGraw Hill, predicted the trade deficit for this year would hover around $100 billion and would remain stuck at that level in 1991 as well.

For the third quarter, the primary weakness came from a 29 percent jump in the merchandise trade deficit, which rose to $29.75 billion as imports hit an all-time high.

Works of 2 S. African authors reflect distinct political views

By Hillel Italie
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Neither Nadine Gordimer nor J.M. Coetzee spent much time researching their new novels. They are South Africans, and the setting of their books — the world of apartheid, police raids and rebellion — is right in front of them.

To write in South Africa means to have your subjects chosen for you, Gordimer notes. The problems are simply too great to avoid. But she and Coetzee differed greatly in recent interviews on what a writer could, and should, do about them.

It's a matter of personalities as well as philosophies, the contrast between the outgoing, committed Gordimer and the shy, more skeptical Coetzee, a debate on the power of art for art's sake between two of South Africa's most acclaimed white writers.

"The creative act is not pure," Gordimer once wrote. "History evidences it. Ideology demands it. Society exacts it. . . . One thing is clear: Ours is a period when few can claim the absolute value of a writer without reference to a context of responsibilities."

The 67-year-old author works in the tradition of such politically minded South African writers as Alan Paton and Athol Fugard. Her characters are adventurers, travelers, participants — people forced to make difficult choices between political commitment and personal responsibilities.

In her most recent novel, "My Son's Story" (Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $19.95), Sonny is a married black man who falls in love with a fellow activist, a white woman.

Hillela, the hero of her 1987 novel "A Sport of Nature," leaves family and friends behind as she comes of age emotionally and politically. "Burger's Daughter," banned for three months in South Africa upon its release in 1979, details the struggles of the daughter of the late South African Communist party leader.

"These are searing experiences," Gordimer said, "and all sorts of things can happen."

"We tend to look down on people who are not like us, especially in revolutionary situations. I think sometimes you have people, good people, trying to do the right thing but not having the courage to go far enough. On the other side, we have people who tried to ignore what's going on."

"We tend to look down on people who are not like us, especially in revolutionary situations."

Nadine Gordimer
author of "My Son's Story"

While Gordimer writes of collaboration, Coetzee is obsessed with solitude. He is quiet, with a gray goatee and soft eyes. He waits several seconds before answering, his responses coming in full, well-constructed sentences, as if the delay was necessary for last-minute editing.

His books are brief — usually under 200 pages — and intense; the author knows it takes less time to prepare a meal if you turn up the heat.

"Age of Iron" (Random House, $18.95) reads like a single, sustained thought. The book is narrated by Mrs. Curren, a classics professor dying of cancer. Her husband is dead, her daughter has moved away and her closest companion is a homeless man she brings in from the street.

Tragedy pushes Gordimer's characters into action, but Coetzee's people become more withdrawn. Mrs. Curren does not initiate events, she reacts to them. The author writes of Mrs. Curren standing over the bleeding body of her servant's son, who has been shot by police:

Says the 50-year-old Coetzee, "Our history is such that all of a sudden ordinary people are confronted with major decisions in a way that ordinary people are usually not faced by. I think South Africa in the past 40 years has been a place where people have been faced with really huge, moral debts."

But what is the value of fiction in South Africa, a country where political responsibilities make introspection seem self-indulgent, almost treasonous? Gordimer, a member of the African National Congress, believes fiction has subversive power, that imagining a revolution can make it more likely to happen.

In "A Sport of Nature," she con-

"I don't think the novel is the most effective way to intervene in the daily processes of political life."

J.M. Coetzee
author of "Age of Iron"

cludes with Hillela and others attending a joyous ceremony proclaiming the birth of a new African state. The book was written before the release of Nelson Mandela and many other political prisoners.

Coetzee is more cautious, wary of predicting any post-apartheid utopia and unsure novels can keep up with current events. He closely follows politics, but does not see fiction as the ideal way to write about it.

"I don't think the novel is the most effective way to intervene in the daily processes of political life," he said. "Writing a novel takes too long. Publishing a novel takes too long. Novels are read by too few people. They don't have that direct kind of involvement with political reality that newspapers have."

Forum urges NEA to take risks

By Robert M. Andrews
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The National Endowment for the Arts has a special responsibility to protect freedom of artistic expression and should support promising new works that might prove risky or unpopular, a nonpartisan forum affiliated with Columbia University said Tuesday.

The report, by The American Assembly, also said the arts community was ill-equipped to deal with the recent controversy over alleged federal support for obscene and blasphemous works that once threatened the NEA's existence.

The public affairs forum's report summarized a four-day conference of more than 70 business, government, foundation and arts leaders last month at Arden House in Harriman, N.Y. A copy was made available in Washington.

The assembly was directed by Stephen Benedict, former director of Columbia University's graduate program in arts administration, and Steven Lavine, president of the California Institute of the Arts at Valencia. Participants included NEA Chairman John Frohnmayer, John Brademas, president of New York University, and Andrew Heiskell, chairman of the New York Public Library and former chairman of Time Inc.

Since the recent battle in Congress over imposing anti-obscenity restrictions on federal arts grants, the forum said, the NEA "has a specially compelling responsibility to protect freedom of expression, not only for the artists it supports but for every artist."

The assembly leaders added that "government policies and private actions that threaten to curb artistic 'speech' or to constrict in any way the marketplace of ideas for the arts have no place in American society and must be vigorously opposed."

The report noted that the NEA controversy was triggered by its grants for exhibitions of sexually explicit photographs by the late Robert Mapplethorpe and works by artist Andres Serrano that were accused of being anti-religious.

"Government arts programs should support new work of promise that may prove risky or unpopular," the forum said. "Some art has always been controversial and will continue to be, especially as cultures and art forms become more diverse and the boundaries of art continue to expand."

The assembly leaders said government grants must be administered on the principle that "no artist's work may be compromised, suppressed or unrecognized because of race, ethnicity, gender, sexual preference, or political or religious beliefs."

The forum said the arts community must overcome its differences and develop new ways to build the case for public support of the arts. It recommended a coalition with corporate executives willing to serve as arts advocates with all levels of government.

"Arts advocacy can only succeed if all participants in the process refrain from asserting their interests at the expense of others," the forum said.

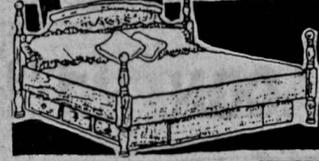

In October, Congress repealed strict anti-obscenity curbs on the NEA.

Warfare erupts in S. Africa; 37 dead

By Tina Susman
The Associated Press

TOKOZA, South Africa — Factional rivalries erupted in warfare Tuesday in Tokoza, where Zulus and Xhosas slashed and shot 37 people to death and burned scores of homes before black officials held peace talks.

In the afternoon, when the violence had died down, women piled household belongings on their heads and fled in the rain to seek shelter in a nearby township.

Armed men stayed behind, guarding their shacks in the impoverished township and the workers' hostels that have become a flash point of factional unrest.

Representatives of the African National Congress and the Inkatha Freedom Party, whose supporters are at the center of the clashes, met later and said they would appeal to their followers to stop fighting.

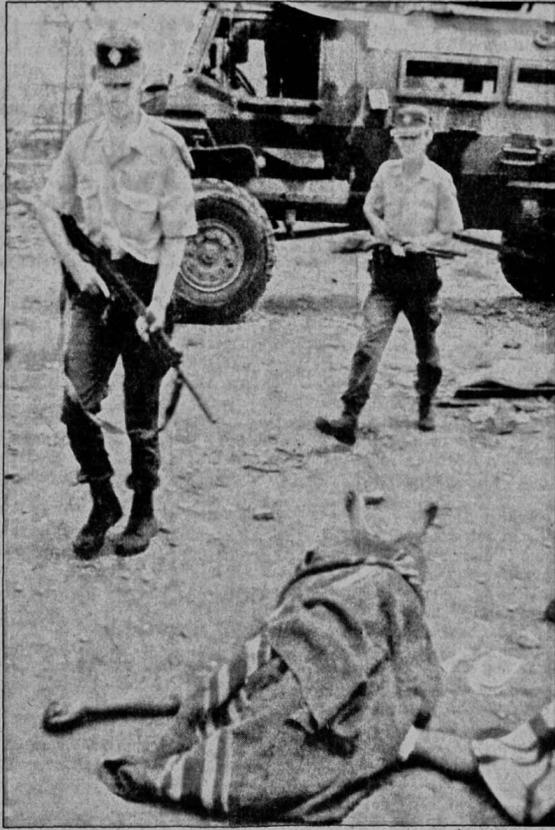

Past appeals from leaders of the rival groups have made little difference. The death toll in Johannesburg townships has exceeded 1,000 since August, and ANC leader Nelson Mandela and Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi have yet to sit down to talk.

Buthelezi, citing a tight schedule and late notice, rejected an invitation to tour Tokoza on Wednesday with Mandela and other black leaders. He said he instead would visit Tokoza separately with national Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok.

Xhosas loyal to the ANC and Zulus who back Inkatha battled for hours with guns, knives and axes and chased terrified people through the alleys of the Phola Park squatter camp within Tokoza, east of Johannesburg.

Hacked and mutilated bodies lay outside shacks that were reduced to smoldering piles.

Fighting also raged in a nearby

Associated Press

workers' hostel, where Zulus live, and in a surrounding industrial area.

"We want revenge... we want to fight," some Zulus chanted as they congregated at the hostel later.

Both sides blamed each other for the violence and accused government security forces of helping their opponents. Police in armored vehicles roamed the township but rarely ventured into the narrow lanes of shacks making up Phola Park.

Helicopters hovered above, and the government said police and army reinforcements would be deployed in Tokoza.

In the late afternoon, Zulus wearing white headbands and carrying iron bars stared out from the broken windows of their hostel or stood guard outside. One woman carried a large saw. Others held rocks in addition to their bars.

Down the road in the squatter camp, a few Xhosas were on guard outside their shacks, draped in blankets in the heavy rain.

Police spokesman Capt. Eugene Opperman said reports indicated fighting flared before dawn when Xhosas attacked the Zulu hostel and the Zulus mounted a revenge attack.

He denied police took sides in the fighting. He said officers were fired on several times but were not injured.

Hostels have been a frequent target of township unrest because they generally house Zulus who come from the Zulu homeland to take jobs at mines or in other industry.

12-year Trump marriage over

By Samuel Maul
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A tearful Ivana Trump was divorced Tuesday from her millionaire husband, Donald, whose "cruel and inhuman treatment" of his ex-wife was cited for the end of their 12-year marriage.

But the dissolution of the marriage left unresolved exactly who will get what from the troubled Trump empire, and whether the couple's marital agreement giving Donald the lion's share will hold.

The judge scheduled a hearing for Tuesday afternoon on a motion by Ivana Trump to block her husband from selling their Connecticut estate, their condominium at the Trump Tower and their Mar-A-Lago estate in Florida.

Ivana Trump, assisted by attorney Michael Kennedy, left the courthouse in tears after the divorce was approved by state Judge Phyllis Gangel-Jacob.

While Trump said through her attorney she would have no further comment on the matter, her ex-husband issued a statement of good will.

"I wish Ivana the best. I have no doubt that she will do very well in the years to come," said Trump.

But whether Ivana will do it with a reported $25 million pre-nuptial agreement or with much more remains to be seen. The judge said all other money matters such as child support, equitable distribution of property and the validity of any pre- and post-marital agreement will be decided at trial, unless they are otherwise resolved.

No trial date was set. Ivana, in court papers filed earlier this year, was seeking $2.5 billion of her ex-husband's estimated $5 billion fortune — a figure financial analysts say has dwindled in recent months.

Last month, Trump and his creditors agreed to a restructuring of a $675 million debt held by the investors in Trump's Taj Mahal casino in Atlantic City, N.J. Under the agreement, the casino will briefly come under protection of federal bankruptcy court.

CAMPUS REVIEW STATUS

The powers that be

The Campus Review should have its status as a student organization revoked.

According to a statement released Dec. 7, the Campus Review was found guilty of violating the human rights policy by placing a poster in the Union that depicted Bart Simpson holding a slingshot with the caption "Back off Faggot." Despite the violation, no punitive action was taken. It seems the UI Human Rights Committee does not have the power to do anything.

But the UI Student Assembly can take action. According to "Policies & Regulations affecting Students 1990-91," "recognition (as a student organization) may be revoked by the appropriate governing body." In the case of the Review, that governing body is UISA.

If a recommendation to revoke the Review's status as a student organization is made by the Student Activities Board, Bearing in mind the Human Rights Committee's report, it is obvious that the purposes of the Review are not consistent with those of the UI. Therefore, the UISA has sufficient grounds on which to revoke recognition.

the UISA must take action on the recommendation, either positively or negatively. If student senators vote to accept the recommendation, the Review loses its status as a student organization.

The process is very simple, but there are still lingering constitutional questions that may prevent SAB and UISA from acting against the Review: Does the Review enjoy First Amendment protection for its homophobic statements?

Yes, the First Amendment protects the right of the Review to express its opinions on any subject. That means that the UI cannot censor any statements the group makes. But the UISA needs no constitutional grounds to revoke recognition. If student senators determine that the Review is in violation of one of the regulations that govern all student organizations, they can rescind that recognition.

The UI human rights policy is one of those regulations. The Review has taken the opinion that homosexuals are undesirable, which is an opinion the UI, according to its human rights policy, does not share. The policies governing the recognition of student organizations state that a student organization whose purposes are "consistent with the educational objectives of the University" is eligible for recognition by the university. Bearing in mind the Human Rights Committee's report, it is obvious that the purposes of the Review are not consistent with those of the UI. Therefore, the UISA has sufficient grounds on which to revoke recognition.

SAB and UISA should show their support for the UI's commitment to human rights by removing the Review from the official list of student organizations. Recognition implicitly implies endorsement, and it is undesirable for the UI to recognize organizations that hold opinions that are inconsistent with its policies and commitments.

If the Review receives continued recognition despite its violation of the human rights policy, a dangerous rift will open between the UI administration and student government. For a commitment to human rights to be effective and useful, the administration and the student government must work together to support and enforce this policy. Any failure, by either party, would result only in demonstrating the inability of the UI to maintain a commitment to human rights.

In light of the UI's desire to support human rights, the SAB ought to recommend that the Review be removed as a student organization, and the UISA should take heed. If the Review is not penalized for violating the human rights policy, the policy and the UI's commitment to it are useless.

Letters

Take time to remember

To the Editor:

The Command of the 109th Medical Battalion would like to express its sincere thanks and appreciation to the university community for its thoughtful assistance and support in response to the recent activation and subsequent deployment of the 209th Medical Company (Clearing) and the 134th Medical Company (Ambulance). Both of these units contain a large percentage of university students, faculty and staff. The UI helped to provide these individuals with an efficient transition from civilian to military status and we are especially grateful for the favorable university billing and grade policy that was established. Many people at the UI contributed their time and resources to make this deployment move as smoothly as possible. Yet, for the students and university personnel, now turned soldiers who will soon be serving this nation in the Middle East, nothing was more special or important for them than to receive the support and best wishes of their friends and peers.

As we approach this holiday season and the contemplation of final examinations, we ask that you not forget the men and women of the 109th Medical Battalion as they respond to our nation's call to duty. No matter what your political persuasion might be concerning this difficult foreign issue, these individuals deserve your support and prayers.

Bad news travels fast. You could win a Nobel Prize (well, not you, but someone you might have read about), celebrate with a few too many cocktails, get arrested on your way home for driving under the influence, and for the next several months have friends, colleagues and associates approach you to ask about the DUI.

It's schadenfreude. "Schadenfreude" is a German word that means pleasure derived from the misfortune of others. Literally translated, "schadenfreude" means I'm happy you flunked your exam, because it makes me feel better about my D.

Garrison Keillor quipped about how the good folk of Lake Wobegon, with their strong sense of home and family, disliked and distrusted a certain group of folk who had ventured off to the promised land of California and achieved that most loathsome and malevolent state — that of success and affluence.

Who didn't feel good about the fall of Donald Trump?

Who didn't enjoy seeing Michael Milken and his comeuppance crash head on?

In a way we pity these people, but in a bigger way we thrive on their misfortune. Success is best when tempered.

We loved it when Elvis and Liz got fat. We couldn't get enough. We burst at the description of Jim Bakker under the couch in his psychiatrist's office. We relished the divorce of Madonna and Sean.

We didn't cry when Nixon resigned. We threw him his coat and showed him the door. Then we put our minds to work and devised several hundred thousand Nixon jokes, of which my favorite was the one about being in the doomed plane with one too few parachutes (Nixon lived).

Teddy Kennedy will die, and his detractors will still mutter Chappaquidick innuendo.

Mondale and Dukakis could spend lifetimes digging themselves out of the dung heaped generously upon them by the American public.

We are insatiate for misfortune and blundering.

The press, of course, is an all-too-willing participant. How else to explain the comprehensive coverage of Nancy and Ron's stargazing or Milli Vanilli's faux fame? How else to explain the sports editor's predilection toward photos of star athletes with expressions strained as if some invisible stooge were tugging every which way on their private parts?

It's the universal law of average. We, the average, want everyone to be average, too. If someone excels, we wait for him or her to fail. We cannot sustain for very long a Winston Churchill or a Chrissy Evert.

Conversely, we look to the little guy and offer assistance. This is the flip side of the coin, where the sentiment is: Nothing succeeds like failure.

Here we find the Little Engine of the American conscience. Little Engines fail, but we pull for them. We think they can. We think they can. No schadenfreude here.

We're behind them all the way. Go underdog! Then, of course, one Little Engine makes it. The Little Engine becomes a big success, and what do we do? We wait for it to blow a gasket, so that the law of average is preserved.

See, the story doesn't end when the Little Engine reaches the top of the hill. Either the story ends with the engine on top, making similar climbs with equal success, each time enjoying less and less public support. We hope it can't. We hope it can't. Or the story ends when the Little Engine is caught with his pants down on the wrong side of the tracks.

I don't understand this phenomenon, though I am party to it. One of my fellow writers here at the DI made the unfortunate mistake of blurring the non-word irregardless after noon. Although he now has to live with an insufferable amount of references to that non-word, he nevertheless has found himself to be the happy post-initiate. He has been endeared to us. He is a non-human among non-humans. We have pulled him up. After all, mild mockery is preferable to indifference any day.

There seems to be a dilemma borne of the conflict between capitalism and democracy. We want the opportunity to succeed, we want the freedom to succeed, we want, in fact, to succeed. But the danger of success is that it is unpopular. If nothing succeeds like failure, nothing fails like success.

Back-door, come-from-behind endearment has kindly affected Jeff Renander. Jeff is a Little Engine we all pulled for. Come on, Jeff, figure it out. Climb that hill. You can do it. Well, he didn't. Instead he made a boo-boo. He fell from his chair, which balanced so precariously on two legs as he leaned back to admire his work. He fell right by us, as if down an open elevator shaft. We heard him coming, caught a glimpse as he zipped by, then listened in silence as his voice trailed off. Jeff now seems like a comic book character to me. Only toons survive such falls.

But this column is not about Jeff. This column is about balance. America needs balance. We root with vigor for the underdog. We await the demise of those on top. Ours is a well-guarded democracy, for we are a nation built and thriving on the law of average.

Why not Affirmative Action for endive?

Do you know what your children are reading tonight? We're not talking about the lyrics of 2 Live Crew or dirty comics. We're talking about textbooks. We're not talking about sex and violence. We're talking historical information. Facts.

The special-interest groups will cheat your children if you don't watch out.

Some of the more ambitious publishers have gotten the word that it's time to put religion back in the texts — religion, not faith or the history of different religions. They're also trying to expand and deepen historical content.

Change isn't easy and the positive innovations may not last. Textbooks, like everything else deemed "sensitive" by special interest groups, are under fire.

Critics of proposed new textbooks for children in kindergarten through the eighth grade in California, a leader of public reform, created a new tower of Babel with their angry criticism, a spontaneous theater of the absurd.

Suzanne Fields

Atheists complained that their point of view was excluded. They want religion treated as superstition. California Muslims want to erase references to any historical account of religious persecution of "infidels."

"This is not a threat," one Muslim parent threatened. "But if our demands are not met, we will withdraw our children from school and mount a lawsuit."

Homosexuals, a new lobby in the world of textbooks, want to "out" historical figures. They want to celebrate the imagined homosexuality of an eclectic group of historical figures, including Julius Caesar, Erasmus, Michelangelo, Alexander Hamilton, Willa Cather and even Eleanor Roosevelt.

After reading the correspondence between the Marquis de LaFayette and George Washington, one hopeful homosexual concluded, "The father of our country may have been its first queen."

This might be funny on "Saturday Night Live," says Gilbert Sewall, the scholarly editor of Social Studies Review who evaluates textbooks and attended the California hearings. But he doesn't find gratuitous attacks on the new textbooks, which are considerably richer and more informative than the old ones, a laughing matter.

"The many wonderful advances in these recommended textbooks went unmentioned," he says. "Institutional prejudice, conspiratorial omission and victimization were the watchwords of the day."

Some of the more obvious "slights" raised by certain Jews, Christians and Muslims will probably be corrected in the final texts. Sewall is also concerned about the increasing pressures of "Afro-centrists." Unlike historians who have invited debate on their conclusions, he says, some

The melting-pot ideal is being pushed aside by "Afro-centrism."

Afro-centrists offer "half-baked facts, specious scholarship, overblown contentions and take this to be delivered truth."

The melting-pot ideal, so long venerated in our nation of immigrants, is being pushed aside by "Afro-centrism." Said one Afro-centrist to The New Republic: Multicultural means "mental genocide."

Another Afro-centrist teacher said in Oakland, who sounds more theological than historical, told the magazine: "When we educate a black man, we're not educating him for a job, we're educating him for eternity."

One California textbook hearing became so violent that police had to be called to restore an intellectual atmosphere. "Pressure from tonight was considerable 10 years ago," says Sewall, "but in social studies the right is overshadowed now by pressures from the left."

Irene Trivas, an artist for children's readers, told the New York Times how she had to quit the textbook business when her publishers tried to be "everything to everybody." One publisher sent 10 pages of instructions on how to draw the fictional characters: "The hero was a Hispanic boy. There were black twins, one boy, one girl; an overweight Oriental boy, and an American Indian girl. That leaves the Caucasian. Since we musn't forget the physically handicapped, (the white girl) was born with a congenital malformation and only had three fingers on one hand."

One child would have a dog, an Irish setter who had to be a female. The obligatory senior citizen had to be shown jogging, and the salad the mom and dad were making together (presumably in a bowl large enough to accommodate four hands) could not include iceberg lettuce, but "something nice" and upscale like endive.

Well, why not? Isn't lettuce entitled to a proper role model?

Multiple vehicle pileup kills 15

By Dan George
The Associated Press

CALHOON, Tenn. — Two chain reaction crashes in dense fog on a highway in southeastern Tennessee killed 15 people Tuesday, injured more than 50 and left the roadway looking like a war zone.

A morning fog covered Interstate 75 over the Hiwassee River, about 40 miles north of Chattanooga, when the 75-vehicle pileup began about 9:30 a.m., said Cecil Whaley, director of the Tennessee Emergency Management Agency.

People involved in the accident, which covered more than a mile of the interstate, described hearing booms in the fog as dozens of tractor-trailers collided with each other and with cars.

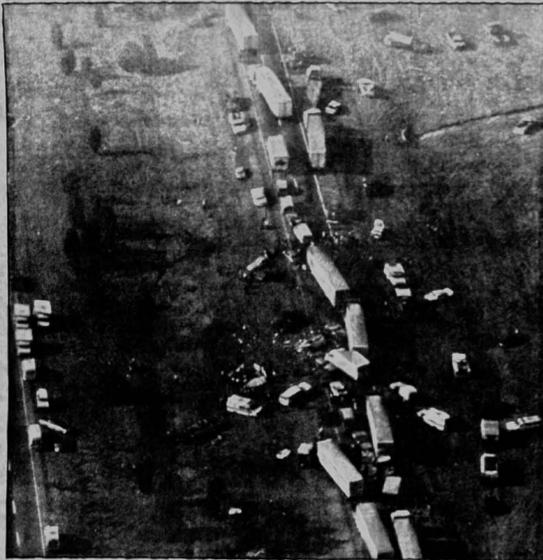

Traveling salesman Ralph Fisher of Cleveland, Tenn., was headed north when he hit the fog patch. He said he noticed traffic slowing down so he pulled to the side of the road.

"After that I started hearing bangs and booms from everywhere. Immediately after that there was a truck on fire from across the road. We started hearing them banging and booming from over there. Then all of a sudden you started hearing them from everywhere," said Fisher, 43.

Whaley confirmed 15 dead, but said the number could rise as crews searched the burned shells of vehicles. In some cases, only nameplates distinguished the wreckage of a car smashed into the side of a truck.

"This is one of the worst accidents that anyone can remember happening in Tennessee in terms of the number of vehicles and fatalities involved," said Whaley, who followed rescue efforts from his Nashville office.

Names of the victims would not be

At least 15 people were reported killed in this pileup on Interstate 75 north of Chattanooga, Tenn., Tuesday morning. The pileup involved at least 75 vehicles and was caused by heavy fog.

immediately released because some of the bodies were burned beyond recognition, Whaley said.

Authorities believe an initial accident occurred in the southbound lane, and cars jumping the median or people rubbernecking to see the southbound crash may have caused the second pileup in the northbound lane.

From there, authorities say it was a ghastly chain reaction.

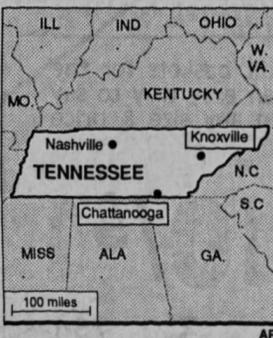

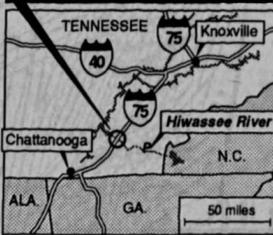

Russell Newman, eastern district regional director of the Tennessee Emergency Medical Agency, says no one is really sure what happened.

"It's just a conjecture as to what caused it, but it was just one of those damn chain reaction collisions that happen in this kind of situation — very heavy fog and probably too much speed," Newman said.

In Washington, the National Transportation Safety Board said it was dispatching a six-person team of experts in highway and hazardous material investigations.

The interstate was blocked in both directions, hampering efforts to remove the injured to hospitals in Athens and Cleveland.

New contraceptive OK'd in U.S.

By Deborah Mesce
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A new contraceptive touted by family planning experts as the most effective, reversible method of birth control will soon be available to American women.

The Food and Drug Administration approved Norplant on Monday, clearing the way for Wyeth-Ayerst Laboratories to begin training health practitioners how to insert the implant that can prevent pregnancy for up to five years.

"It's going to be interesting to watch what kind of reaction Norplant gets among the public and physicians," said Jeannie Rosoff, president of the Alan Guttmacher Institute, a research and policy group that focuses on reproductive health issues.

"There are going to be some women for whom this is a godsend. The numbers we don't know yet," she said. "But any new addition that is safe is desirable."

Family planning experts say Norplant is the first major new contraceptive available to American women in three decades, since the birth control pill was approved in 1960 and a new generation of intrauterine devices, or IUDs, became available around that same time.

Norplant was approved in Finland in 1983 and has been approved in 15 countries since then.

FBI arrests John Gotti at NY club

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — John Gotti, who is reputed to be one of the nation's most powerful crime bosses, was arrested Tuesday night at a social club in Manhattan, the FBI said.

Gotti was arrested by FBI agents and New York police officers at the Ravenite Club at 7 p.m. in the Little Italy neighborhood, said FBI spokesman Joseph Valiquette.

The charges against the reputed boss are sealed, Valiquette said. A police spokesman, Officer Scott Bloch, said details about the arrest would be revealed at a news conference likely to be held today. No other details were immediately available.

Gotti's attorney, Bruce Cutler, did not immediately return a call left on his answering service.

Gotti has been under investigation in the shooting death of Paul Castellano, reputed leader of the Gambino crime family, since the Dec. 16, 1985, slaying outside a Manhattan steakhouse.

Gotti was found innocent in February of state charges related to the shooting of a union official. It was the third time that he had been acquitted in recent years of major state or federal charges.

According to published reports, the FBI has gathered tape-recorded evidence against Gotti that could bring him up against federal prosecutors in New York for the 1985 slaying.

Jules Bonalovonta, in charge of the FBI's organized crime office in New York, recently described Gotti as "the No. 1 target of law enforcement" and added, "It's just a matter of time. He's going to go."

Gotti has never been charged in connection with the murder of Castellano.

INS church recordings found illegal in Arizona

By William F. Rawson
The Associated Press

PHOENIX — The government violated the First Amendment rights of church groups when it infiltrated and secretly tape-recorded religious gatherings, a federal judge ruled.

The government "does not have unfettered discretion to conduct investigations and law enforcement activities," U.S. District Judge Roger Strand ruled.

Four Arizona churches and two national denominations sued the federal government in 1986 over use of paid informers by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to secretly tape-record services in 1984.

The infiltration came during an investigation of the sanctuary movement, which provided shelter and transportation for illegal aliens fleeing alleged persecution in Central America.

The investigation resulted in the conviction of eight people in May 1986 on conspiracy and alien-smuggling charges. Attorneys for the churches said none of the evidence came from the tape-recorded services.

Strand ruled Monday that government investigators violated the churches' rights to freedom of religion. He rejected the churches' claim that their Fourth Amendment rights against unreasonable search and seizure were violated because investigators did not obtain search warrants.

"The government is constitutionally precluded from unbridled and inappropriate covert activity which has as its purpose or objective the abridgement of the First Amendment freedoms of those involved," Strand wrote.

The Rev. James Oines, pastor of Arizona Lutheran Church of Phoenix, one of the churches that sued, called the ruling a victory.

Big bowls:
Not for the discerning

Quick, what's worse than the two-week wait between conference title games and the Super Bowl? The month-long wait between the last major college football game and January 1st.

Lost in the long Christmas malaise, trying to make sense of rankings that would place Illinois and Michigan in front of a team that beat them both on the road, and hardest of all — trying to care.

It's not that the New Year's Day bowl games aren't worth waiting for, it's ... well, yes it is that the New Year's Day bowl games aren't worth waiting for. It's kind of like the drive between Iowa City and Chicago — four hours of narcotic, flatland hell and when it's over, you're in Chicago. Big deal.

Which is not to say that New Year's Day won't offer us some decent football viewing. Chicago's a good, sturdy town; but it ain't Vegas. And either are this year's big bowl games.

The major networks will try and unload on us three genuine clunkers this New Year's Day, starting with NBC's telecast of the Hall of Fame Bowl, a less than titanic match-up between ACC hanger-on Clemson and Big Ten also-ran Illinois. The game goes on at noon, Central Time, so it may make for a pretty good nap. Alternative: A colorized version of "The Bells of St. Mary's."

Our next travesty is NBC's golden blunder, the Fiesta Bowl (a.k.a. the We'd Piss On His Grave If It Would Get Our School On National Television Bowl), featuring the desperately seeking respect Louisville Cardinals and Alabama Crimson Tide (what a shocker). If not for its political ramifications, a non-event. Just what the state of Arizona deserves — an embarrassment. Alternative: "Birth of a Nation."

The last true skid mark of the day will be the Sugar Bowl, 7:30 p.m. Central Time on ABC, which will showcase the Incredible Disappearing Virginia Cavaliers and the University of Tennessee, which has graciously volunteered to extinguish this ACC football thing forever. Alternative: Stepping on ants.

The day's semi-clunker can be caught at 10:30 in the morning on ESPN: The Gator Bowl match-up between Ole Miss and Michigan. Unlike the aforementioned, this might actually be a good game. But who cares? Alternative: Staying in bed.

Meanwhile, CBS has lucked into making the most of its lone bowl game because the Texas Longhorns will meet the Miami Hurricanes in the Cotton Bowl at 12:30. Not that this will be a particularly good game, but the names are big. Miami doesn't lose bowl games unless the team they play has a little self-righteousness on its side — like Penn State or Notre Dame. Texas can hardly make such claims. Alternative: "Scared Straight."

Which brings us to the Granddaddy of bowl games, the Rose Bowl (ABC, 4 p.m.), featuring the Big Ten's nose-diving Iowa Hawkeyes versus the Pac-10's careless Washington Huskies.

At one time this looked as if it might decide the national championship; Washington was poised at No. 2 in the nation, while No. 6 Iowa had just beaten the tar out of then-No. 5 Illinois 54-28 and looked capable of beating any team that ever looked at them cross-eyed.

But, alas, the Hawkeyes lost two of their last three and Washington shot itself in the foot by letting UCLA beat them at home. Color this the Morose Bowl. Alternative: Old Yeller.

On to games with honest national importance. At 1:30 NBC will telecast the Citrus Bowl, a match-up between Georgia Tech (the only undefeated major college team) and Nebraska. If Tech wins and Notre Dame beats Colorado (more later), the Yellow Jackets could very conceivably be national champions.

Snap out of it! Stop crying, it's true — face the fact. Just repeat: An ACC team could be champion, an

No. 1 Edberg offed in Grand Slam Cup
Chang and Sampras advance in Germany

By Neshia Starcevic
The Associated Press

MUNICH, Germany — Michael Chang won the last four games to upset top-ranked Stefan Edberg 6-4, 4-6, 7-5 on Tuesday in the opening round of the $6 million Grand Slam Cup, the richest tournament in tennis history.

Chang, who trailed 5-3 in the decisive set, broke Edberg's last two service games to win the error-filled match.

"I knew I had a decent chance against him, I've played him before and he's won some and I've won some," Chang said.

Pete Sampras and Goran Ivanisevic also advanced to the second round. Sampras, the U.S. Open champion who is seeded fourth, overcame a sloppy start to beat Andrei Cherkasov of the Soviet Union 5-7, 6-2, 7-5. Ivanisevic, the fifth seed from Yugoslavia, ousted Kevin Curren 7-6 (7-3), 7-6 (9-7).

The 16-man field was determined on the basis of results in the four Grand Slam tournaments of the year — the Australian, French and U.S. Opens and Wimbledon. The winner gets $2 million and first-round losers receive $100,000.

Chang's stamina and determination prevailed over Edberg, who made too many unforced mistakes on his usually perfect volleys.

The victory leaves Chang trailing 5-3 in career clashes against Edberg. Chang beat Edberg when he became the youngest Grand Slam winner at the 1989 French Open.

Edberg was serving for the match at 5-4, but double-faulted and hit a volley wide to allow Chang pull even. Chang then held his serve at love, the first love game of the match, then got to match point on a double-fault before passing Edberg at the net for the victory.

"The year is finished at last, and that's one good thing," said Edberg, who won only three points in the last three games. "I missed a lot of easy shots, it's hard to get motivated after such a tough year."

Sampras served 16 aces but struggled with his second serve and his ground strokes.

"I rely on my first serve maybe too much," Sampras said.

He lost the first set when he committed two double faults. On the first, he fell behind 15-40. The 19-year-old American then served an ace but followed with another double fault to give Cherkasov the set.

Sampras quickly took control and dominated the second set, firing three aces on the last four points to win. He had a chance to put the match away after going up a break for a 5-4 lead in the final set, but hit a forehand long on the third break point.

But the Soviet was unable to take advantage. A spectacular passing shot down the line gave Sampras two break points and when Cherkasov netted a backhand, the

Michael Chang defeated top-ranked Stefan Edberg 6-4, 4-6, 7-5 in the opening round of the $6 million

Grand Slam Cup, the richest tournament in tennis history.

American regained the lead.

He served out the match without problems, winning in two hours, 19 minutes and evening his career record against Cherkasov at 1-1.

"I wasn't hitting my ground strokes very well," said Sampras, who added that shin splints that he suffered in November were still bothering him occasionally and that he put ice packs during the match.

"I was a little bit afraid," he said.

Ivanisevic served 18 aces to beat Curren in a battle of hard servers.

"It's the best serve I've ever played against," said Curren, who had two set points in the first set on Ivanisevic's serve. But the Yugoslav survived with the help of an ace and had no trouble winning the tiebreak.

Ivanisevic, who complained about several line calls, dropped his serve in the third game of the second set when he was beaten by a passing shot from Curren. He then smashed the ball into the stands and received a warning.

"I deserved the warning but it was good for me because it calmed me down and I played better tennis after that," Ivanisevic said.

Curren saved two more match points before surrendering to the Yugoslav's powerful serve.

49ers set NFL salary curve

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

The San Francisco 49ers, seeking to become the first team to win three straight Super Bowls, have by far the largest payroll in the NFL.

But the salary figures show that in the NFL, it's not always a case of getting what you pay for.

According to figures in a NFL Players Association salary list obtained by The Associated Press, the 49ers have a 1990 total payroll in salaries and bonuses of $26,815,500. That's over $4 million more than the runner-up New York Jets and double the payroll of the lowest-paying team, the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The 49ers, who have the league's best record at 12-1, also have the highest-paid player, three-time Super Bowl MVP Joe Montana, who will make $4 million this season. The next three highest are Minnesota's Herschel Walker ($2.25 million), Chicago's Neal Anderson ($2.2 million) and Jim Everett of the Los Angeles Rams ($2 million).

Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, at $1.55 million, is the highest-paid defensive player and fifth overall.

But the list shows that wins and money don't necessarily go together.

The Jets, for example, are 4-9 with a payroll of nearly $22.5 million. Cleveland (2-11) ranks fifth on the list at $20.8 million and New England (1-12) is 12th at $19.45 million. The Giants (11-2) are sixth at $20.5 million.

Pittsburgh, 7-6 and in a three-way tie for first place in the AFC Central, has a payroll of $13.1 million.

To put that in more graphic terms, it means the Browns are paying $10.4 million per win and New England $19.45 million. By contrast, each win by the Steelers has cost them $1,874,900, less than the 49ers have paid for theirs — $2.23 million.

As expected, most of the highest-paid players are quarterbacks. Cleveland's Bernie Kosar and Miami's Dan Marino are at $1.5 million, Denver's John Elway at $1.45 million, Buffalo's Jim Kelly and the Giants' Phil Simms at $1.4 million and Philadelphia's Randall Cunningham is at $1.25 million, which increases to $2.25 million next season.

Closest to Taylor in base salary among defensive players are defensive ends Reggie White of Philadelphia ($1.35 million) and Bruce Smith of Buffalo ($1.3 million).

There also are some oddities.

The two highest-paid players on the Atlanta Falcons, for example, are offensive linemen Bill Fralic and Chris Hinton, at $725,000 each. By comparison, Chris Miller, Atlanta's quarterback, makes $550,000.

Among the bargains: Running backs Derrick Fenner of Seattle and Johnnie Johnson of Phoenix, who each make just $75,000, and Dave Meggett, the Giants' all-purpose kick returner, receiver and running back, who makes $90,000.

Fenner, a 10th-round draft choice a year ago because of his troubles with the law, is tied for the Bill Walsh, shown here at the press conference before his last Super Bowl, could return to coaching in the NFL after his NBC contract runs out next year.

Walsh may return to NFL, with Bucs

The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Bill Walsh says he plans to wait until after the NFL playoffs to decide whether to stay in broadcasting or return to football, but the Tampa Bay Buccaneers would be his top choice if he chooses the latter.

"If I pick a team to sign with, Tampa Bay would be at the top of my list," Walsh told the St. Petersburg Times on Monday. "But there's a lot that would have to occur before we finalized something."

Walsh, who retired after the 1988 season, has seven games left on his two-year contract with NBC as a football analyst.

Although not in a hurry to make a decision about his future, he thinks Tampa Bay could be a good opportunity.

"I have great respect for (owner) Hugh Culverhouse and great respect for the whole organization," Walsh said.

"I also think Tampa Bay can become competitive and real contenders in that division (NFC Central) right away. It's just a matter of me looking into whether I want to leave the San Francisco area at this stage of my life. That would be the prime consideration."

Walsh said he has not talked directly with Culverhouse, but that he has had two conversations with San Francisco owner

Eddie DeBartolo and 49ers president Carmen Policy about the Bucs coaching vacancy.

He said Culverhouse had asked DeBartolo and Policy to present Tampa Bay's position in preliminary discussions.

DeBartolo told the newspaper on Sunday that Walsh "might prefer to be the general manager instead of being on the field." The former 49ers coach would not elaborate on what position he would like to hold for the Bucs.

"Like I said, there's a lot that would have to happen before we finalized anything," Walsh said. "A lot would depend on how much they wanted me and how much I wanted to be with them."

Browns may be in picture

The Cleveland Browns have talked to former San Francisco 49ers coach Bill Walsh about joining the organization, according to a published report. The report also said any Browns shakeup would not involve the jobs of Browns executive vice president Ernie Accorsi or pro personnel director Mike Lombardi.

The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer quoted unidentified sources as saying the Browns were one of three teams to contact Walsh, now an NBC-TV analyst, about a head coaching or front-office position. The other teams are OAKLAND, Calif. — Dave Henderson became the first new-look free agent to come to terms when he agreed Tuesday to a three-year contract with the Oakland Athletics worth slightly less than $8 million.

The 32-year-old outfielder was one of 15 players made new-look free agents last Friday in the $280 collusion settlement between baseball owners and the Major League Baseball Players Association.

Henderson had one season remaining, at $1 million, on a three-year $2.8 million deal. Last week's settlement gave him the right to negotiate with any team through Jan. 29.

"We just proceeded with Oakland and asked those clubs who were interested to hold off, and said we would call back if there was a hitch in the talks," said Henderson's agent, Doug Baldwin.

Jack Clark, another new-look free agent, received a contract offer from the Boston Red Sox on Tuesday. The parties do not appear to be close to a deal.

Minnesota, faced with trying to re-sign third baseman Gary Gaetti and pitcher Juan Berenguer because of the collusion settlement, still is upset.

"New-look really hurt us," Andy MacPhail, the Twins' general manager, was quoted as saying. "We were given assurances that the two players wouldn't be involved. Historically, we haven't been that active in free agency. And we're faced with the loss of two key players. We were sold down the river."

Oakland, swept by Cincinnati in the World Series, now turns its attention to re-signing Bob Welch, who won 27 games and the American League Cy Young Award in 1990.

"We have to focus on signing Bob Welch, and we have been for the last several days," Oakland general manager Sandy Alderson said. "We still optimistic. There's nothing to suggest to me that we should feel otherwise, but at the same time it's not done yet."

The A's, the Chicago White Sox, and the Boston Red Sox have made

AFC lead with 11 touchdowns and is sixth in the AFC in rushing with 719 yards. Johnson, a seventh-round pick by the Cardinals this season, is fourth in the NFC in rushing with 823 yards and led the conference until spraining an ankle two weeks ago. Meggett, a fifth-round pick by the Giants a year ago, has become the prototype scabback and made the Pro Bowl as a rookie last season. He leads the NFC in punt returns; is second in kickoff returns; leads the Giants in receptions with 31 and is averaging 7.9 yards per carry as a running back. Another discrepancy occurs in Detroit, where Rodney Peete, the 1988 Heisman Trophy runnerup, has a base salary of $90,000.

But Peete starts ahead of Andre Ware, last year's Heisman winner, who is getting $250,000 this year and will have his salary increase in increments of $250,000 to $1 million over the next three years. Ware also got a $2.25 million signing bonus.

But Peete was a sixth-round draft pick and Ware was taken seventh overall in this year's first round. Even so, Mark Duckens, a reserve offensive lineman signed as a Plan B free agent by the Lions this season makes $250,000 plus a signing bonus of $70,000 and a reporting bonus of $10,000.

Duckens also makes more than one of the team's best defensive players, linebacker Chris Spielman, who earns $220,000.

believed to be Tampa Bay and a West Coast team, possibly the Los Angeles Rams, the newspaper said.

"I'm not going to comment on that," Modell said when asked if Walsh had been contacted. "I'm not going to comment on any names in relation to the coach of the Cleveland Browns."

Bud Carson's replacement, Cleveland offensive coordinator Jim Shofner, is not expected to return as head coach next season but may take a post with the team's front office. Since Shofner took over Carson's 2-7 team, the Browns have deteriorated to 2-11.

Walsh told the Plain Dealer he had not talked to the Browns about employment.

"I've spoken to (the Browns) on occasion on minor matters, but certainly nothing with the significance of a position with the Browns," he said. Modell said the search for a new coach will not start until after the season.

"We want to finish the season as best as we can, get it over with, and then we'll start the process," Modell told the Beacon Journal. "We're not taking calls, we're not taking applications, we're not visiting with people, we're not interviewing people and will not until the end of the season."

contract offers to Welch. Oakland signed free-agent pitcher Eric Show on Monday to a two-year deal worth approximately $1.5 million. That insures that the A's will not be left short of starting pitchers should Welch and Scott Sanderson not re-sign.

Henderson batted .271 with 20 home runs and 63 RBIs for the A's in 1990 despite missing 27 games because of a knee injury. In three seasons with Oakland, Henderson has averaged .274 with 20 home runs and 74 RBIs.

"If he's not the (A's) spiritual leader, he's the glue," Baldwin said. "He knows when it's time to have fun. He knows when it's time to suck it up. He knows when it's time to put it in overdrive. I think other players know that about David and look for subtle clues along those lines."

With Henderson signed, the A's were left with four free agents — Welch, Sanderson, second baseman Willie Randolph and catcher Ron Hassey.

"With the exception of our pitching staff, which still has a big question mark involving signing Bob Welch, I think our team on the field, the everyday players and the bench, is very close to where we want it," Alderson said.

Henderson's signing also pushes veteran outfielder Willie Wilson into a reserve position. The A's signed Wilson, who had been a free agent after playing 13 seasons with Kansas City, to a two-year, $2 million contract earlier this month.

"We feel our outfield is about as strong as it was after we signed Willie McGee last year," Alderson said.

The biggest uncertainty in the Oakland outfield will be Jose Canseco, who is trying to recover from a bulging disc in his lower back that plagued him for the last two months of last season. Doctors have prescribed an exercise program instead of surgery, and Canseco is expected to be ready for spring training.

Cedar Falls lineman commits to Iowa

DI wire services CEDAR FALLS — Lineman Matt Purdy, who was in the Big Eight Conference as a high school football player, will switch to the Big Ten in college. Purdy, a 6-foot-2, 250-pound offensive and defensive tackle from Cedar Falls, has accepted a scholarship offer from Iowa. He'll sign a national letter of intent with the Hawkeyes in February.

"I should be ready to go next fall," she said. Lofstedt, a 6-foot-1 forward, said she hopes to play in an all-star series in Oklahoma this summer.

UNI wrestler sidelined until after X-mas CEDAR FALLS — Northern Iowa wrestler Burke Tyree will be sidelined until after Christmas because of a staph infection in his right knee.

Tyree underwent arthroscopic surgery at University Hospitals in Iowa City on Sunday, coach Don Briggs said. The sophomore from Kalispell, Mont., transferred to Northern Iowa from Wisconsin and has 7-5 record at 118 pounds.

The infection forced Tyree to forfeit his Saturday night match against Iowa's Chad Zaputill.

Northern Iowa will wrestle only three more times this month. The Panthers have dual meets with Missouri and Southwest Missouri on Thursday and will compete Dec. 29 in the Midwest Championships in Des Moines.

Parcells expected back at work NEWARK, N.J. — New York Giants coach Bill Parcells is expected to return to work Wednesday after a painful kidney stone was pulverized into smaller pieces, a team spokesman said.

Parcells was treated Tuesday as an outpatient at the New Jersey Kidney Stone Treatment Center in New Brunswick with lithotripsy, a procedure that uses ultrasound waves to break the stone into small pieces.

"He'll be in for a regular work day tomorrow," said team spokesman Ed Croke.

Parcells was admitted to Morristown Memorial Hospital Saturday night after the kidney stone began causing intense pain. He was released Sunday on a pass to coach the Giants during their 23-15 win over the Minnesota Vikings.

Parcells returned to the hospital after the game and underwent a cystoscopy, a non-surgical procedure in which the stone was pushed back into the kidney to make the lithotripsy much easier, according to Dr. Arthur Ginsburg, the attending urologist.

Mizlou to sell SNN for $39.5 million NEW YORK — Mizlou Communications Co. said Tuesday it had reached a preliminary understanding for the sale of Sports News Network and related assets to Landmark Communications Inc. and TeleCable Corporation, or their affiliates.

The proposed sale would be worth up to $39.5 million.

Under terms of the agreement, Mizlou would receive an initial cash payment of $7 million at closing, deferred payments of $1.5 million in equal annual installments over five years and contingent payments, if any, of up to $25 million, based on SNN's 1995 revenues.

The sale includes SNN's studio equipment leases, a transponder lease, and certain other ongoing obligations, but not real estate leases. If the transaction is completed, the initial purchase price would be used to pay accrued liabilities and outstanding indebtedness.

Pogues bounce back in style

By Pete Dufner
Special to The Daily Iowan

The Pogues have grown up. It was suggested on 1988's "If I Should Fall From Grace With God" and strongly hinted at on 1989's "Peace and Love." As hard as it is to believe, the "Boys From the County Hell" have matured — and mellowed. Submitted as evidence is their new LP, "Hell's Ditch."

been together for seven years. Over the years, they offered rough-and-tumble send-ups of traditional Irish songs, causing both uproar and critical praise. As time wore on, they interspersed the traditional numbers with competent originals.

By 1987, the Pogues' songwriting was being influenced by Middle Eastern and Spanish music. With "Peace and Love," all the influences came together, showing the Pogues in peak form. But at the same time, rumors were flying that MacGowan's drinking had caught up with him and the Pogues were no more — the band even played some dates without its leader.

All that seems to be behind them now, as the Pogues enter the '90s with "Hell's Ditch." The album begins with the graceful "Sunrise of the Street," as MacGowan croons "Seen the carnival at Rome/had the women had the booze/all I can remember now/is little kids with no shoes." MacGowan is a wonderful storyteller and his lyrics are vivid portrayals of real people. Several songs show an Eastern (as in Oriental, not Brooklyn) influence.

There really isn't a weak song among the 13 tracks — it's a consistently listenable effort. The Pogues seem to be relaxed on this, their fifth album, and have crafted their finest effort yet. With the help of producer Joe Strummer (former Clash member), the Pogues have made "Hell's Ditch" a place you actually want to go. They seem to be the musical hope for the '90s, supposing they keep on keepin' on.

As if that weren't enough, the Pogues have also released a four-song EP, "Yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah, yeah." It is the re-release of a post-"Peace and Love" single with some previously unavailable tracks. The title track and a rollicking cover of the Stones "Honky Tonk Women" are reason enough to pick this one up as well. Yeah, yeah, yeah.

See a concert, save a magazine

The Norman, Okla.-based band Janis Eighteen will be among the performers at the "Save NEO Benefit" concert tonight at 9 at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St. The concert, which will also feature the groups The Bent Scepters, Devastation Wagon and The Tyrds, is being held to benefit NEO magazine, an alternative music publication. Cover charge is $3.

Records

Lead Singer Shane MacGowan still spits words out from between his rotted teeth, and lyrical themes continue to be a drunken mix of Irish and English icons. However, these new songs are all beautifully written pieces of Poguetry.

LOS ANGELES — He knocked out Rocky Balboa on his debut, and last weekend he shot down Clint Eastwood. The crafty little boy in "Home Alone" was the nation's favorite movie for the fourth-straight weekend.

"Home Alone," starring Macaulay Culkin as an 8-year-old boy abandoned by his family while burglars prowled outside, has earned $84.2 million in a month. The year's biggest moneymaker, "Ghost," made $69 million in its first four weeks.

The 20th Century Fox hit premiered the same weekend as "Rocky V," but outdid the heavyweight.

Actor-director Clint Eastwood's police drama "The Rookie" fared no better last weekend, opening to a weak $5.5 million for third place.

That's three strikes for Eastwood this year. "Pink Cadillac" made just $12.1 million and "White Hunter, Black Heart" collected $2.1 million.

The film's poor opening leaves Warner Bros. two more chances before Christmas, with "The Sheltering Sky" and "Bonfire of the Vanities."

"Misery," adapted from the Stephen King novel by director Rob Reiner and screenwriter William Goldman, took second place on the charts with ticket sales of $7.1 million.

"The Rookie" was third, and actor Kevin Costner's directing debut in "Dances With Wolves" claimed fourth with receipts of $5.4 million.

"Three Men and a Little Lady" fell 43 percent from the previous weekend, collecting $4.6 million for fifth.

The urban alien drama "Predator II" netted $2.1 million for sixth and "Rocky V" was seventh with a disappointing $1.8 million.

The latest "Rocky" sequel has grossed $34.7 million to date and won't get far past $50 million before it disappears.

"Ghost" was eighth with ticket sales of $1.5 million and will pass the $200 million mark this week. "The Rescuers Down Under" was ninth with $1.4 million and "Child's Play 2" took 10th with $680,098.

Here are the top movie ticket sales Friday through Sunday as tallied by Exhibitor Relations.

Mike Tyson at the weigh-in prior to the Stewart fight. Promoter Don King now wants Tyson and Donovan 'Razor' Ruddock to fight for the WBC heavyweight title or the right to fight the winner of the Holyfield-Foreman bout this spring.

King wants Tyson to walk Razor's edge

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mike Tyson vs. Donovan "Razor" Ruddock? Maybe, maybe not. Promoter Don King says it will happen, Tyson's manager of record Bill Cayton says he might try to stop it and Shelley Finkel, heavyweight champion Evander Holyfield's advisor, says it's too early to tell.

After Tyson and Ruddock recorded first-round knockouts in bouts last Saturday night, King said Tyson-Ruddock would happen in late March or early April and "hopefully will be for the WBC heavyweight title."

If not, King says they will fight a 12-rounder with the winner in line to fight the winner of the Holyfield-George Foreman title bout on April 19.

Then there's Bill Cayton. Cayton, still Tyson's manager of record although he and the former champion are estranged, said he is holding discussions with his attorney about whether he can block the fight.

"It's not in Mike Tyson's best interest to take this fight," Cayton said. "It only benefits Don King. I think it's the wrong fight at this time."

"If the WBC title is at stake, I believe the fight might happen," said Seth Abraham, president of Time-Warner Sports and a former senior vice president of HBO, whose $26 million contract with Tyson ended with the former champion's victory over Alex Stewart on Saturday night.

"That's not going to happen," Finkel said of a possible Tyson-Ruddock fight for a vacated World Boxing Council title.

The WBC has ordered Holyfield to make his first defense against the top-ranked Tyson or be stripped of championship recognition.

The issue is now in litigation and appears headed for arbitration, which Jose Sulaiman, WBC president, now says he welcomes.

"It's going to take several months in court to resolve this issue," Finkel said, noting that he doesn't think it will be settled in time to promote a spring match between Tyson and Ruddock.

Such a fight "is absurd," promoter Bob Arum, who advises Foreman, said by telephone from Las Vegas. "It's a dumb fight for both of them. They can make a major payday waiting."

The International Boxing Federation and World Boxing Association are sanctioning the Holyfield-Foreman fight on the condition the winner fight the highest available contender. Tyson currently is ranked No. 1 and Ruddock No. 2 by all three governing bodies.

"If Don King would sit down and talk to Dan Duva (Holyfield's promoter), we are prepared to offer Tyson an unbelievable payday to fight the winner of Holyfield-Foreman," Arum said. "He can make fortune."

"King is a bright man," Finkel said. "He's not suddenly going to get dumb and take a fight (Ruddock) without a lot of money."

"Mike should fight a couple of easy fights for big money, then a year and a half from now fight Ruddock after he (Tyson) beats the winner of the Holyfield-Foreman match," Cayton said.

Ruddock clearly wants to fight Tyson for a title. He was supposed to challenge him Nov. 18, 1989, but that fight was postponed when Tyson got a respiratory ailment. When Tyson got better, however, he bypassed Ruddock and fought James "Buster" Douglas, who knocked him out in the 10th round Feb. 11 at Tokyo.

Murad Muhammad, Ruddock's promoter, has said Ruddock fought Mike Rouse for King on the undercard of Tyson's victory over Stewart with the understanding that Ruddock will fight Tyson for the WBC title. If not, there is no longer an agreement, according to Muhammad, who still is suing King for pulling out of the Tyson-Ruddock match.

Tyson finally fighting Holyfield — in court

By Todd Richissin

The Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — Mike Tyson has climbed into the legal ring with Evander Holyfield because the new heavyweight champion doesn't want to fight Tyson right now.

Tyson and the World Boxing Council are seeking to strip Holyfield of the WBC title before his April 19 fight against George Foreman.

The World Boxing Association and the International Boxing Federation first ordered Holyfield to make his initial title defense against Tyson, then backed down and sanctioned the Holyfield-Foreman fight, scheduled for Atlantic City, N.J.

Tyson filed papers Monday in U.S. District Court to intervene in Holyfield's lawsuit against the WBC. If Holyfield is stripped of the WBC title, Tyson — the top-ranked contender — would claim it with a victory in his next WBC-sanctioned bout.

Promoter Don King wants Tyson and Donovan "Razor" Ruddock to fight for that title. They both won first-round knockouts Saturday night at Atlantic City, with Tyson defeating Alex Stewart and Ruddock beating Mike Rouse.

"Holyfield and his managers and promoters refused to abide by the (WBC) rulings, apparently because Holyfield believes he has a better chance to maintain his title in a fight against the aging Foreman than in a bout with Tyson," Tyson's lawyers said in a statement.

Superior Court Judge Amos Saunders ruled last week that the WBC could not strip Holyfield of his title, pending arbitration. Saunders ordered further hearings to give the WBC an opportunity to show why there should be no arbitration.

Evander Holyfield

On Friday, WBC lawyers petitioned to move the case to federal court in Newark.

"Judge Saunders understands the rules of the World Boxing Council, having dealt with them on several occasions," said Pat English, one of Holyfield's lawyers. "My suspicion is the petition for removal was to try to get somebody who knows very little about the situation. We obviously feel the more any judge knows the better off we are."

The case was assigned to U.S. District Judge Nicholas Politan, who will decide whether it should be heard in federal or state court.

The WBC has agreed to go to arbitration.

NFL referees blunder two-minute drill

By Barry Wilner

The Associated Press

If NFL teams can change the course of games in a two-minute drill, why can't the officials figure out a play in the same time?

Joe Montana can win Super Bowls in less time than it takes some officiating crews to figure out the correct line of scrimmage, let alone whether someone scored a touchdown, recovered a fumble or went out of bounds.

On Monday night, in an otherwise highly entertaining game won by the Raiders 38-31, the officials seemed to lose their wits and way late in the game.

Lions quarterback Rodney Peete fumbled while running on fourth down and a wild scramble ensued. The ball eventually was covered by the Lions' Harvey Salem, who was on the ground. Realizing the Lions would lose the ball on downs, Salem then flung it. Another scramble led to Detroit recovering miles behind the line of scrimmage. Raiders ball.

OK. Everybody knew that. But it took the officiating crew more than eight minutes to decipher what had happened — including two penalties against Detroit, with Salem whistled for intentional grounding because he threw the ball while he was on the ground, which makes sense.

Analysis

Little else did, though. The officials couldn't figure out where to spot the ball and it took an interminable conversation with the press box and replay booth to figure that out.

"It was a complicated play on the field and (the delay) involved technical problems with communications between the field and replay booth," said league spokesman Greg Aiello. "When Peete fumbled, Salem scooped up the ball and officials ruled he did not possess the ball, which would have ended play at that spot. He pushed it forward for an illegal pass.

"The ball bounced off the leg of Howie Long and was recovered by Detroit's Terry Greer. The discussion between the replay official and on-field officials was hampered by crowd noise and technical problems. The discussion involved proper interpretation of the rule, whether it was an illegal forward pass or fumble, and the correct spot for the beginning of the next drive."

As ABC announcer Al Michaels said when the decision finally was made, "This play happened yesterday. It's 12:01."

That wasn't all.

Bo Jackson ran around right end for 11 yards and a first down, but he fumbled. As the ball was heading out of bounds, linebacker George Jamison slapped at it, which is legal as long as the ball is not batted ahead. He sent it back toward the Lions' goal and Detroit covered it.

After another long look at the replay, the Raiders kept possession, leading to a field goal.

"This is one I have to give a lot of credit to the officiating," Lions owner William Clay Ford said.

"The striped shirts took this one away from us."

Replay official Al Sabato said he looked at three replay views.

"After the play went back on, TV came back with another shot, with an end zone shot looking into the fumble in which, if I had had that shot, I would have overruled the play on the field," Sabato said. "I did not have it. I did not delay it (the game) anymore after those three."

However, ABC had been showing that replay to the home viewers, and it indicated Jamison got out of bounds when he hit the ball.

ABC's announcers wondered if Sabato had not looked long enough at that play in view of how long he and the officiating crew needed to sort out the previous line of scrimmage mess.

The biggest question here is whether ever happened to the two-minute limit? Dozens of replay decisions have lingered beyond that allotment, which was put into the replay rules this year as an incentive to save the whole thing.

SAN DIEGO — Nor Phillips, who hasn't played since Sept. 26 assault outside the club, is locked in a dispute with San Diego Chargers over the amount of this year's salary.

Phillips, a starter for the club for five seasons, is recovering from a head injury he suffered in a game last year. He reportedly was treated by the club's doctors to pay his full salary asked to be released.

The fifth-year veteran of the club for his full year, but the team could offer to pay him this season, general manager Beathard said.

"I would say it's a problem," Beathard said. "There are a number of things that need to be resolved back on the field. At the moment, we haven't found a way to do it."

Phillips is on the NFL's injured list. He has earned $315,000 in base salary. The club's offer is $157,500.

"Right now I don't know what's going to happen," said Beathard. "Options are to just keep him on the injured list, to release him or protect him. We're a 37-man squad (under contract) and we have to try to trade him."

The three men accused of Phillips' injury are on the list. Phillips is expected to stand trial in Superior Court on charges of assault, battery and kidnapping.

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa — McCullough scored 13 points in a balanced scoring day as Northern Iowa defeated Iowa State 68-62.

Northern Iowa, 2-6, has a two-game losing streak. Its first win over the Cyclones dating back to the 1950s. Iowa State, 1-8, is eighth straight time, its longest losing streak in 15 years.

BoSox preach fiscal responsibility

But say signing Welch 'just a matter of dollars'

By Dave O'Hara
The Associated Press

BOSTON — The Boston Red Sox are pursuing slugger Jack Clark and other high-priced free agents, but general manager Lou Gorman predicted Tuesday that some clubs face financial disaster if salaries keep skyrocketing.

"The amount of money being paid (to free agents) is staggering," Gorman said after a Hot Stove luncheon at Fenway Park. "It blows your mind. If it continues, some clubs are going to go broke. There's no question in my mind."

"The (San Francisco) Giants just gave $35 million to three players, and they're also going to have to pay $12 million in collusion (money)."

"I don't know how clubs can keep doing it. If they keep it up, some clubs are going to go bankrupt."

Despite his concern, Gorman showed no fear that the Red Sox would go broke after drawing a record 2,528,986 fans in 1990 to the majors' smallest park.

He said he's pursuing several free agents, including Clark, 27-game winner Bob Welch, reliever Larry Andersen, outfielder Tom Brunansky and infielder Vance Law.

Gorman also is trying to work out a new contract with two-time Cy Young Award winner Roger Clemens, whose multiyear agreement with the Red Sox expires after next season.

Gorman said that he'll "put some numbers on the board" in an offer to Clemens later this week. He said he expects negotiations to "take a little more time, but once we get the money agreed upon it should get done pretty quickly."

The negotiations with Clark and the others appeared to be of more urgency.

"This week will decide everything, I think," he said. "We're going to talk with most of the agents in the next two or three days. Hopefully, we'll resolve most of our situations by Friday or Saturday. We'll either have signed some players we're interested in, or we won't have signed them."

Clark, a right-handed slugger with 307 lifetime homers, is a primary target as a new-look free agent.

"Mr. Clark would fit in very nicely," Boston manager Joe Morgan said. "We'd love to have him hitting in our ballpark."

"If (the spending) continues, some clubs are going to go broke. There's no question in my mind."

Lou Gorman
Boston General Manager

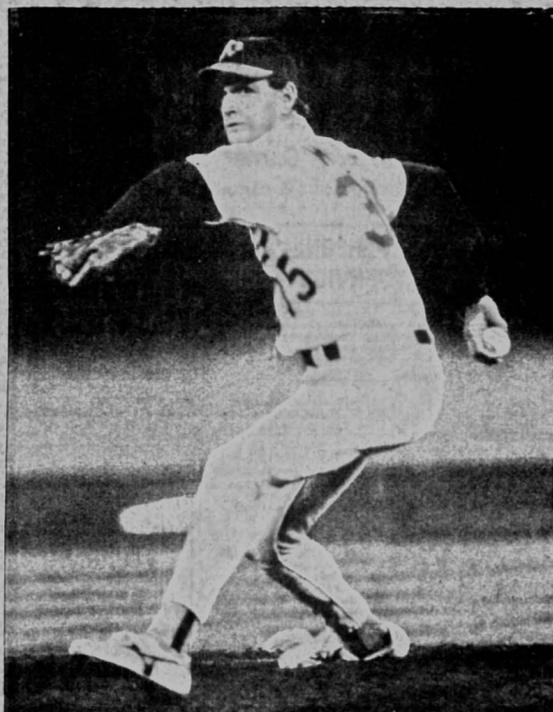

"We think he wants to come here, and we want him," Gorman said. "I think it's just a matter of money. I haven't talked to him, but I've talked with (agent) Tom Reich a number of times."

Gorman said he would make an offer to Reich and Clark "in the next day or two, probably a two-year deal with an option year, something like that."

He declined to go into figures, but one published report the Red Sox were reported ready to offer Clark $5.6 million for two years, plus an option year.

Although the Red Sox aren't thought to have much chance of signing Welch, Oakland's Cy Young Award winner this year, Gorman disagreed.

"I think he's sincere about coming

The Red Sox say they are definitely in the running to land free agent and 1990 AL Cy Young winner Bob Welch, who won 27 games for the Oakland A's last season.

Disabled Charger wants salary paid

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Nose tackle Joe Phillips, who hasn't played since a Sept. 26 assault outside a restaurant, is locked in a dispute with the San Diego Chargers over payment of this year's salary.

Phillips, a starter the past two seasons, is recovering from severe head injuries he suffered in the beating. He reportedly is so frustrated by the club's unwillingness to pay his full salary that he has asked to be released.

The fifth-year veteran has asked the club for his full salary this year, but the team countered with an offer to pay him for half the season, general manager Bobby Beathard said.

"I would say it's a problem," said Beathard. "There are some things that need to be resolved before it's back on the field. At this point, we haven't found a way to resolve them."

Phillips is on the reserve-non-football injury list. He's scheduled to earn $315,000 in base pay this year. The club's offer amounts to $157,500.

"Right now I don't know what will happen," said Beathard. "Our options are to just keep him on non-football injury, to activate him, release him or protect him with our 37-man squad (under Plan B) and try to trade him."

The three men accused of attacking Phillips were ordered Monday to stand trial in Superior Court on assault, battery and vandalism charges.

Beathard met with Phillips' lawyers Friday and said the player asked to be waived if the Chargers would not pay him a full season's salary. The club refused.

"We're not going to release him," Beathard said.

Phillips, 27, declined comment. Beathard said he talked with officials of several other NFL clubs to see how they handled similar cases before the Chargers decided to offer Phillips a half-year's salary.

"It's something we did back at the Redskins (when Beathard was general manager there)," he said.

"I called around and different teams did different things. Some paid them in full. Some did nothing. Some only paid a portion. There's more to this than the public knows, I just don't want to talk about it."

Under NFL guidelines, clubs are not obligated to pay players on the reserve-non-football injury list. But Beathard said he told Phillips shortly after he was hospitalized that he "will be paid."

Phillips, considered the Chargers' strongest player, underwent surgery to repair facial bones that were fractured when one of his attackers allegedly kicked him with steel-toe boots when he eventually fell to the ground.

The attack occurred as Phillips was leaving a Mission Beach restaurant and bar with a female friend. As his alleged assailants drove past, one made a comment to the woman that led to the confrontation, police reports said.

UNI Panther Brian Jones fends off Cyclone Doug Collins during Northern Iowa's 68-62 win in Cedar Falls.

Balanced Panthers send Iowa State reeling to 1-8

By Greg Smith
The Associated Press

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa — Cedrick McCullough scored 13 points Tuesday as Northern Iowa used balanced scoring to defeat Iowa State 68-62.

Northern Iowa, 2-6, snapped a two-game losing streak and posted its first win over the Cyclones in 14 games dating back to the 1964-65 season. Iowa State, 1-8, lost for the eighth straight time, its worst start in 15 years.

The Cyclones used a 17-2 spurt in the closing minutes of the first half to trail 34-31 at halftime. But 3-point shots by Maurice Newby and McCullough helped fuel a 10-5 run that gave Northern Iowa a 44-36 lead with 15:08 to play.

McCullough's basket a few minutes later increased the Panthers' lead to 50-40 before Iowa State rallied behind Victor Alexander. Alexander, whose previous high this season was 27 points against Santa Clara, was the only Cyclone in double figures.
