U.S. rejects peace plan; world heads for war

By Ellen Nimmons
The Associated Press

France offered a last-minute proposal Monday to avert war in the gulf, but the United States appeared to reject the plan because it called for talks on the Palestinian question in exchange for Iraq's pullout from Kuwait.

With Iraq and the United States seemingly locked on a course for war heading into the Tuesday midnight U.N. deadline for the withdrawal, last-ditch peace efforts were multiplying.

In addition to the French plan, to be presented to the U.N. Security Council on Monday night, Yemen and the Palestine Liberation Organization were floating proposals.

Iraq's U.N. ambassador, Abdul Amir al-Anbari, said French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas would go to Baghdad, presumably to discuss the proposal. U.N. diplomats said the visit might occur

Tuesday.

Around the world, anti-war protesters took to the streets, and Israel called up more reservists amid reports on state-owned radio that Iraq might make a surprise first strike on the Jewish state within two days.

New York stocks fell sharply before a late rally, and bonds tumbled while oil prices soared on world markets.

Kuwaiti officials meanwhile urged the anti-Iraq alliance to stand tough and said they were willing to have their country leveled in order to save it.

Sheik Ali Sabah, governor of Kuwait's Al-Ahmadi province, claimed Iraq was now holding 10,000 Kuwaitis as human shields against attack.

The emir of Kuwait, Sheik Jaber Al-Ahmed Al-Sabah, speaking from exile in the Saudi resort of Taif, said Americans would spill their blood "for a good cause," because "If you don't do this now, we'll have bigger countries devouring smaller countries all over the world."

As for Kuwaitis, he said: "We have already lost our land and a lot of our infrastructure. So we don't have much to lose. If it means the flattening of Kuwait is the liberation of Kuwait, I would say yes."

250 protest U.S. action in gulf, 10 arrested in post office lobby

By Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Ten people were arrested at 5 p.m. Tuesday after about 250 protesters of a United States war with Iraq reclaimed the Federal Building as the pro-peace, anti-war organizing center for Iowa City.

The ten were arrested and charged with criminal trespass after ignoring repeated requests to leave by both the site manager of the Federal Building, owned by the General Services Administration, and the Iowa City police.

Also because of the protest, the retail lobby of the Iowa City post office, located in the Federal

A disheartened postal customer reads a sign on the locked doors of the Iowa City post office Monday afternoon. The doors were locked for two hours after more than 250 war protesters marched on the building. Ten demonstrators were arrested and charged with criminal trespass, including City Councilor Karen Kubby.

Building, 400 S. Clinton St., was closed for two hours, leaving some postal patrons angry at the rally.

"This is ridiculous that they closed the post office," said one woman. "We're trying to get mail to our kids over there, and these people are blocking the way."

"It was very apparent to us that if they were to all try to get into that space, it would overflow into our retail lobby," said Kim McCarty, manager of customer service at the post office.

McCarty said once the number of protesters lessened and postal officials were able to talk to a couple of the leaders to receive assurances about intentions for the protest, the post office was reopened.

Bring the Troops Home, an ad hoc group of Iowa City residents opposed to war as a solution to the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait, organized the event, which was preceded by a protest march through downtown Iowa City.

During the march, participants carried signs reading "Isn't human life worth more than $1.27/gal?" and "Must we fight and kick some ass? How much blood for a gallon of gas?"

"We're here today in a last-ditch effort to prevent war," said participant Debbie Hare, a member of Women Against War. "We hope that people's voices will be heard by George Bush to prevent war."

Tim Volm, a UI graduate student, said he hoped to send the message that the U.S. does not have a "blank check" for a conflict, even though war seems inevitable.

"Hopefully, this will remind some of the people in charge that people here don't support war," he said.

The parade was led by a 12-foot-high puppet designed to represent a citizen of the world mourning the deaths of troops, said artist Scott Stevens, who made the puppet.

Upon reaching the Federal Building, the marchers set up an office in front of a copy of the Constitution and a photo of George Bush hanging inside the building. There, Quinn Dilkes, a member of Bring the Troops Home, read a prepared statement.

"We are Americans. We are responsible for our government's actions. It acts in our names.

Tomorrow our government threatens to murder untold numbers of innocent men, women and children. Our leaders are on the brink of starting the biggest war since World War II," she said.

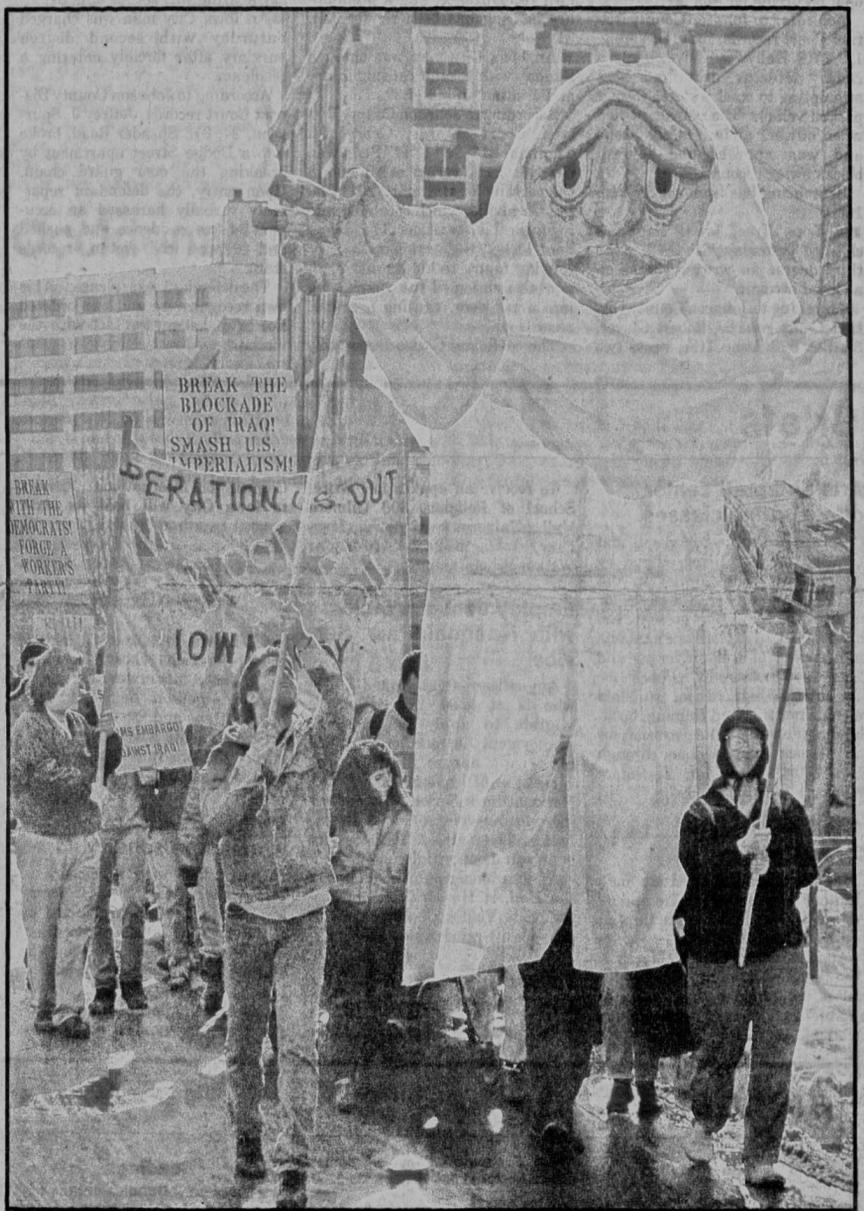

"We are here today to say not in our names, not in our names should such an attack be launched."

In the statement Dilkes also declared support for the troops which are in the Middle East and criticized the domestic effects of the crisis. She then officially declared the Federal Building as the anti-war office.

"Congress has given President Bush a blank check for war. This Federal Building is a symbol of a government that is out of control. Today we symbolically reclaim this building. We declare it to be the Iowa City community's anti-war organizing headquarters," Dilkes read, eliciting applause and cheers from her fellow protesters.

Gorbachev denies ordering military action in Lithuania

By Deborah Seward
The Associated Press

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. — President Mikhail Gorbachev on Monday defended the bloody military assault on Lithuania and said he learned about it only after a local military commander executed it.

Soviet troops seized another key broadcasting facility in Vilnius. Lithuanian officials said the action violated an agreement to reduce tensions in the republic following Sunday's attack that killed 14 people and injured 230. Troops control eight buildings in and around the capital.

Vilnius was calm but somber. Thousands of mourners lined up in the snow outside a sports arena to file past the open caskets of 10 victims as weeping parents stroked the bruised faces of the dead beneath a huge Lithuanian flag.

Gorbachev's statement that he was not in on the decision to use force called into question how strongly he controls the Soviet military.

Under the Soviet Constitution, the president is commander-in-chief of the armed forces. Soviet politicians harshly criticized him when people were killed in military crackdowns on unrest in Georgia in 1989 and in Azerbaijan a year ago.

In his first public comments on the weekend storming of Lithuania's radio and TV transmitter, Gorbachev expressed no sorrow or regret over the loss of life, except to say it was "a tragic development" that the Kremlin did not want.

He told the Supreme Soviet legislature in Moscow that it was "a defensive action."

"The manner of defense was decided by the commandant," Gorbachev told reporters during a break in the session.

"He reported to a deputy commander of the military district. . . I learned only in the morning, the early morning, when they got me up. When it happened, no one knew," Gorbachev said.

Soviet Interior Minister Boris Pugo, whose troops participated in Sunday's attack, told parliament, "No one from the center gave an order" to use force.

Gorbachev has also said he was not informed in advance of the

UI student will journey to Soviet republic, supports its fight for independence

By William Pepper
The Daily Iowan

While the crisis in the Persian Gulf has filled headlines in past months, the Soviet republic of Lithuania has simultaneously been struggling to achieve independence in its own crisis.

But this struggle has not been completely obscured by the gulf crisis for everyone. Krista Kapacinskas, a UI senior, has paid close attention to recent developments in Lithuania because she is leaving for Lithuania on Saturday to spend the next five months working on an honors thesis at Lawrence University.

Aside from her studies, Kapacinskas is a third generation Lithuanian in a family which strongly identifies itself with the Lithuanian culture and customs. She feels this gives her a unique slant on the problems there.

Kapacinskas holds a degree in Russian and plans to pursue a doctorate in Lithuanian and Russian simultaneously and then go into academics. While in Lithuania she will be working on a thesis concerning how periods of revolution or times of change affect the artistic community.

This is her first trip to Lithuania, although she did spend six weeks in the Soviet Union in 1988. She has cousins in Lithuania whom she plans to visit during her stay. However, she speaks no Lithuanian, and they speak no English. To solve this dilemma, Kapacinskas hopes that two months of intensive study will add Lithuanian to her list of foreign languages, which includes Russian, German and some Sanskrit.

While she is concerned about the political situation in Lithuania, she said now would be an "excellent time to be in a country like Lithuania" with all the political and social changes occurring.

One of the most recent conflicts in Lithuania's 10-month bid for independence from the Soviet Union occurred Sunday when Soviet troops seized control of a Lithuanian television station.

Several repressive measures on Lithuania's population were then imposed by the National Salvation Committee, a group of Communist Party loyalists, but not without a struggle in a night of violence which left 13 people dead.

Kapacinskas is unhappy with the media's overshadowing of the situation in Lithuania.

"With the gulf crisis the way it is, people aren't paying attention to what's going on (in Lithuania)," she said. "It has irked me to all get out to know that this is going on. It wasn't until today (Monday) that anything made it on the front page of any major newspaper."

Gothic House — 'Wood' you live there?

By Roger Munns
The Associated Press

ELDON, Iowa — It's the Gothic House to most people, but for Claire Chakib it's the country place where she can live with Generic the shepherd, Doodle the poodle and the cats Saikara and Zachary.

"I was driving all over these back towns, but nobody wanted pets, even though they're cleaner than I am," she said. "Every time I passed the sign to Eldon, my car wanted to turn and it finally won."

Chakib and friends are the latest occupants of perhaps Iowa's most famous backdrop. The oversized gothic window in her little farmhouse overlooks a stern father-daughter couple in "American Gothic," the 1930 painting that anchors Grant Wood's work.

Now that the backdrop is so well known, it's Chakib who has become the prop.

"When I first moved in, the easiest place to put the bed was in the front room. But everybody has to look in the windows," she said. "One morning I could hear them

"Whoever built it really loved whoever it was built for. It looks small but it's huge inside."

Claire Chakib

milling on the porch and suddenly somebody said, 'Mildred, Mildred, somebody DOES live here.'"

So she moved the bed.

"For the most part, the visitors are wonderful people. Oh, there are a couple of people I'm not happy with since they break things or leave garbage, but most are just curious. It's so fun to go out and find out where the people come from," she said.

Greeting visitors isn't part of the rental agreement, but Chakib said it comes naturally to her. "I'm the sort of person who men come up to at the supermarket and ask where they can find a certain cut of meat or where the bread is."

Part of every greeting is unabashed affection for the little house.

"Whoever built it really loved whoever it was built for. It looks small but it's huge inside. To build a gothic window out of wood is a pain in the first place and in a farmhouse yet," she said.

State preserves expert Steve Ohrn said the window is unusual for its size as much as its distinct shape.

"I've never seen one in quite such a humble building," he said. "It's the equivalent of having a mobile home with a $10,000 double French door entrance."

But Chakib said the window — and its mate on the other side — is a necessity, not for the light it lets in but for outside access to the second floor.

"There isn't any room to take things upstairs. There's just a tiny little curving staircase, and you can see where other tenants have shoved things into the wall trying to get things up there," she said.

The gothic window is on two sets of hinges, allowing it to fold in half and then swing to one side, creating a big opening to the first story roof below.

The state and Gothic House owner Carl Smith of Cleveland are negotiating a transfer of the property to the state, with instructions for perpetual care. Both sides hope it can be concluded by next month's celebration of Wood's 100th birthday.

Ohrn said the house is a fun place to visit, but that it will not likely become a tourism industry.

"It's an American icon, but we don't in any way estimate that this will be Iowa's equivalent to Mount Rushmore," he said.

Ohrn said the state plans to keep the house occupied, and Chakib said she'd be glad to stay.

"I'm an art major, and I figure if I'm not producing art" — pottery was her speciality — "then I should be protecting somebody else's."

"I've taken the time to study Grant Wood's things. He did his work while all the other painters were off in France doing fluff-up things. Wood was here doing down-home America," she said.

King's day shadowed by threat of gulf war

By Aziz Gökdemir
The Daily Iowan

In the months prior to today's deadline for the use of force in the gulf, there have been many parallels drawn between the recent crisis and prior events; comparisons to the Vietnam War and to the student protests of the 1960's are among them. And today comes the biggest, and what some call the most ironic, parallel of all.

Today would be Martin Luther King Jr.'s 62nd birthday — which, by a twist of international politics, coincides with the U.N. deadline that authorizes the use of force to get Iraq out of Kuwait. Student groups at the UI this week will celebrate the legacy of King, who taught non-violent resistance, and protest what to many seems an imminent war with Iraq.

A Nobel Peace Prize winner for his leadership in the non-violent civil rights struggle, King was assassinated on April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn.

Starting today, a series of events in remembrance of the slain leader will be held by several UI organizations through Jan. 22.

The first event in the 1991 Martin Luther King Jr. Holiday Convocation Program is the showing of a film today titled "Why We Must Continue the Dream," at the African-American Cultural Center, 303 Melrose Ave. The event, which includes dinner and a discussion of the film, will be from 4-10 p.m.

Meanwhile, the Black Student Union, who is sponsoring the above event jointly with the African-American Cultural Center, is also organizing a public panel today with New Wave at 12.30 a.m. in the Illinois Room of the Union.

The panel aims to protest Presi-

An upcoming highlight of the convocation program is a keynote address, "A Tribute to Martin Luther King Jr.," to be delivered by Gwendolyn Brooks at 8 p.m. next Sunday in the Main Lounge of the Union. Brooks, who wrote "We Real Cool" and several other acclaimed poems, is the first African-American writer to have won the Pulitzer Prize.

Following the dismissal of classes on Monday, Jan. 21, five events are scheduled.

They include a "Living History Forum" at Shambaugh Auditorium, two lectures, a workshop and a showing of the PBS documentary "Eyes on the Prize," in the Union.

Finally, on Tuesday, Jan. 22, a student forum on campus racial issues is planned to take place at 7 p.m. in the Union, Illinois Room. The forum is jointly sponsored by six UI organizations.

UI students meet Iraqi head; peace mission unsuccessful

By Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

After a "shot in the dark" effort to bring a peaceful solution to the current gulf crisis, UI graduate students John and Edith Gardner returned home from Washington, D.C., Sunday evening, feeling both disillusioned and a little wiser by their experience.

The couple, who left Iowa City on Jan. 10, drove nonstop to Washington to meet with officials at the Iraqi embassy and to discuss alternatives to the use of force in resolving the current gulf crisis.

Shortly after arriving in Washington on Jan. 11, the Gardners met with Deputy Minister Khalid Shewayish of the embassy for an hour-long conference.

"The message we got from the Iraqis was, 'We are willing to listen if we are listened to,'" said Edith.

She added that Shewayish and other officials felt like they have been talked at and told what to do without any chance to respond.

Shewayish was very willing to listen to their ideas, said John, and even kept the embassy open an extra half-hour to talk to the Gardners.

"The time in the embassy was very relaxed," said John. "At times we had a shouting match with him, and we were still able to talk."

Although the Gardners made it clear that they felt neither side was handling the situation correctly, the minister did not attack the U.S. government, said Edith.

"He seemed resigned about the whole thing," she said.

After meeting with the Iraqis, the Gardners tried talking to legislators from various states. The only contact they were able to make was with an aide from Sen. Tom Harkin's office, a senator who already agreed with the Gardner's ideas, said Edith.

"Basically, no one had time to listen until after the vote (on whether to authorize force) was made," said John.

He added that it was very disillusioning that only the so-called 'bad guys' of the crisis would talk to them.

"The one thing we wanted to say was 'You can stand up and be heard,'" said Edith, "and now I feel like you can't."

Both Gardners said they felt war was very likely, but they said it could still be averted.

"I think there's always a chance to avoid war," said Edith.

Occidental weighs sale of IBP shares

The Associated Press

Occidental Petroleum Corp. said Monday it will slash its debt by selling assets, including its 51 percent share in meatpacking giant IBP Inc.

Occidental, based in Los Angeles, announced a broad restructuring, which includes cutting the company's $2.50 per-share dividend to $1.

IBP is one of Iowa's leading employers, with a beef processing plant in Denison, Iowa, and pork plants in Perry, Columbus Junction, Council Bluffs, Storm Lake and Waterloo.

The company employs 8,500 Iowans and expected its Iowa payroll to increase from $150 million to $159 million in 1991. The company bought $2.1 billion worth of Iowa livestock in 1990.

Key elements of the restructuring, approved by Occidental's board of directors, includes reduction of at least $3 billion in debt through the sale of assets.

IBP spokesman Gary Mickelson said the Dakota City, Neb.-based firm would have no comment on Occidental's announcement.

Worldwide support for gulf peace

By Maud S. Beelman
The Associated Press

BONN, Germany — Thousands of people around the world prayed Monday for peace in the Persian Gulf and demonstrated against war as a way to end the crisis.

In Germany, hundreds of angry protesters tried to force their way into parliament.

Monday, the eve of the U.N. deadline for Iraq to quit Kuwait or face possible attack, marked the third day of anti-war protests in Germany, where opposition to war in the gulf appeared the strongest in Europe.

There also were protests in several other European countries, as well as in the United States, Africa and Asia. Strikes and rallies were planned for today in France, Germany, Italy and Spain.

Hundreds of white-robed women in Freetown, Sierra Leone, demonstrated for peace by demanding that Saddam withdraw his forces from Kuwait.

About 2,000 people attended a special prayer service led by Cardinal Jean-Marie Lustiger at Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris. There also were prayer vigils in Hong Kong and in many Italian cities, and 20 people demonstrated silently outside the U.S. Consulate in Amsterdam.

In London, members of Parliament jeered anti-war legislators in the House of Commons. A parliamentary debate on the gulf crisis was scheduled today.

In Vienna, about 3,500 people shouting anti-U.S. slogans and demanding peace in the gulf marched through downtown. Another 1,000 protesters marched in Innsbruck. Both demonstrations were peaceful.

Several speakers at the Vienna rally demanded that neutral Austria prohibit U.S. military flights to the gulf region over its territory in case of war.

More than 6,000 people joined two protests in downtown Stockholm. At one rally, Jan Axelsson of the Green Party said the United Nations had allowed itself to "become a tool of U.S. policy in the conflict."

In Bonn, about 500 protesters carrying banners reading "No blood for oil" and shouting "NATO, out of the gulf region!" pushed their way past police and marched through the government quarter to the gate of the Bundestag building.

The march on parliament was illegal and appeared to take police by surprise. Several vans filled with about 50 police officers rushed to the gate to prevent protesters from forcing their way into the compound, and a few scuffles broke out. No one was seriously injured.

Shortly before lawmakers began debating what could be Germany's first participation in a war since Hitler's devastation, a Greenpeace ship blaring an air raid siren cruised up the Rhine just outside the Bundestag.

The protesters later marched nearly two miles to Bonn's central Market Square, gathering people along the way. There, 600 people listened as speakers condemned the United States and its allies.

Saddam resolute; U.S. ready for war

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House said Monday that Iraq will be living on "borrowed time" after Tuesday's deadline for withdrawal from Kuwait. The administration urged Saddam Hussein to take "dramatic action" to avert war.

"Everyone has to assume that military action could occur at any point" after Tuesday, White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said.

There was no sign that Iraq would pull back. United Nations Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, who met in Baghdad with Saddam Hussein, said, "I don't see any reason to have real hope."

As war clouds darkened, there were calls for prayer and national unity.

"It's time to rally behind the forces in the field," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who had opposed the congressional resolution endorsing the use of force. He said the time for debate was over, but warned there could be bad news from the battlefield if war breaks out.

As the U.N.-set deadline neared, Bush summoned congressional leaders to the White House.

"If conflict occurs, there will be full support for the men and women of our armed forces," said Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, who also had opposed the congressional resolu-

"Conflict is not inevitable, and we hope it does not occur."

Fitzwater said, "We all share a sense of deep concern and somber anxiety about reaching this (Jan.) 15th deadline."

However, he said, "the basic consultations and decision-making that needs to be done preparatory to the use of force has essentially been done."

Speaking of Bush, Fitzwater said, "If the time comes, he is ready. I think the president has made up his mind. He is prepared to use force if that is called for and if that is his final decision."

After Tuesday, all necessary means can be used to expel Iraq from Kuwait under a U.N. mandate. Fitzwater said the United States was not obliged to strike then, but could pick its own date.

"Any moment after the 15th is borrowed time," Fitzwater said.

It was a foregone conclusion that Iraq could not meet the withdrawal deadline, even if Saddam unexpectedly decided to retreat, because of the logistical problems of moving the 270,000 troops deployed in Kuwait.

Three new ways to survive college.

The Macintosh Classic

The Macintosh LC

The Macintosh IIsi

With Apple's introduction of three new Macintosh computers, meeting the challenges of college life just got a whole lot easier. Because now, everybody can afford a Macintosh.

The Macintosh Classic is our most affordable model, yet it comes with everything you need—including a hard disk drive. The Macintosh LC combines color capabilities with affordability. And the Macintosh IIsi is perfect for students who need a computer with extra power and expandability.

No matter which Macintosh you choose, you'll have a computer that lightens your work load without giving you another tough subject to learn. Every Macintosh computer is easy to set up and even easier to master. And when you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. That's because thousands of available programs all work in the same, consistent manner. You can even share information with someone who uses a different type of computer—thanks to Apple's versatile SuperDrive™, which reads from and writes to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS/2, and Apple® II floppy disks.

See the new Macintosh computers for yourself, and find out how surviving college just got a whole lot easier.

Mobutu accepts summit with France

PARIS — President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire on Monday criticized Canada and Belgium for forcing cancellation of this year's summit of French-speaking countries in his nation.

But after talks with President Francois Mitterrand, Mobutu said he would accept transferring the October summit to an unspecified French city and that the 1993 summit would be held in Kinshasa, Zaire's capital.

"This is a real diktat," he told to reporters, referring to threats by Canada and Belgium to boycott the Zaire summit over reported human-rights violations.

Alain Decaux, France's minister of Francophonie, last week offered to hold the summit in France to avoid a serious rift in the movement to promote the French language.

The movement includes most of France's former African colonies. Zaire was a Belgian colony.

Mobutu has been accused of a dictatorial government, corruption and suppression during his 25 years in power.

Cox will survey S&L bailout

WASHINGTON — An experienced Pentagon investigator started work Monday as the top cop of contractors for the government's savings and loan bailout.

Howard Cox, 41, will direct the contractor oversight and surveillance office of the Resolution Trust Corp., created by Congress in August 1989 to handle the thrift cleanup.

His assignment will be to look for waste, fraud and abuse in what has been described as the biggest government real estate sale since the Oklahoma land rush.

He joins the RTC after eight years at the Department of Defense's Office of the Inspector General, where he was responsible for criminal investigations with an emphasis on contract fraud.

Specifically, he'll be policing the private firms and consultants hired by the agency to manage and sell the mountain of repossessed real estate and sour loans inherited from the more than 500 S&Ls that have failed over the past two years.

Yeutter won't recommend a successor

WASHINGTON — Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said Monday he doesn't plan to recommend anyone for the job he will soon vacate.

"It is not my intention to make a specific recommendation" to President Bush unless asked, Yeutter told reporters.

Bush recently announced Yeutter as his choice to head the Republican National Committee, which is scheduled to meet Jan. 25. No successor has been announced, but a number of names have been mentioned.

Yeutter said they are friends of his and each has special talents that could be brought to the Agriculture Department post.

Some of those mentioned include former Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., who was defeated for re-election in November; Rep. Edward Madigan, R-Ill.; Jack Parnell, deputy secretary of agriculture; and Dean Kleckner, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Yeutter has said he would like to remain at USDA until March 1 in case the long-standing Uruguay Round of trade negotiations finally ends. Talks in Geneva were suspended in December after failure to reach agreement but there are efforts to resume them.

Space explosion in distant galaxy

PHILADELPHIA — An eruption of energy equal to almost a million years of sunlight exploded in just three minutes from the edge of what may be a black hole at the center of a distant galaxy, astronomers reported Monday.

Ronald Remillard of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology said the massive burst of energy was detected by instruments on the Japanese Ginga satellite and was so astonishing that astronomers spent more than a year verifying the data.

Remillard said the energy, in the form of X-rays, came from what was thought to be a "common, garden variety" quasar known as PKS 0558-504 at the center of a galaxy 2 million light years away.

The quasar had been observed for months by the satellite and little unusual was seen. It appeared to be like many of the other 600 mysterious points of extra galactic energy known as quasars.

Research continues on vaccine

By A.J. Hostetler
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — The first AIDS vaccine to be tested on humans is safe, but its effectiveness has not yet been proven, researchers reported Tuesday.

The vaccine, VaxSyn, was injected into 36 healthy adult volunteers in 1988 at six hospitals as part of the federal AIDS Vaccine Clinical Trials Network. All 36 showed some immune response, according to the report in the Annals of Internal Medicine, published by the American College of Physicians.

"This is the first completed study of looking at the immune response and toxicity in humans" of an AIDS vaccine, said the lead author, Dr. Raphael Dolin of the University of Rochester.

In an accompanying editorial, a researcher said that because of the pressing need for preventive measures against the AIDS virus, scientists may have to go ahead with development of vaccines that may not block infection but could prevent or significantly delay the onset of the disease.

VaxSyn, developed by MicroGeneSys Inc., of West Haven, Conn., was previously tested on animals, including mice and monkeys.

Side effects of VaxSyn were few and slight, the researchers said. Eight volunteers experienced a slight fever after receiving the vaccine. Four said they had headaches or felt sluggish, and two said they felt pain at the injection site, according to the study.

The researchers found that the vaccine surprisingly prompted a double immune response in the volunteers. Not only did they develop antibodies to the AIDS virus, they also produced immune system "killer T cells" specific to the AIDS virus.

"This gives us some room for cautious optimism," Dolin said. "We ought to be able to come up with a vaccine that will work."

In a second stage of testing, studies of the vaccine at doses up to eight times stronger are under way in about 30 volunteers to see how strong an immune response the vaccine can produce.

The first volunteers' immune response will last for a few years, most likely under a decade, Dolin said.

Because current tests for AIDS measure the presence of antibodies to the virus rather than the virus itself, the volunteers will temporarily test positive. To prevent the discrimination against those with AIDS, each volunteer was given an identification card to verify participation in the vaccine trial.

The AIDS Vaccine Clinical Trial Network, run by the National Institute of Allergies and Infectious Diseases, is testing six vaccines in humans for safety.

One of the biggest problems in developing an AIDS vaccine is that the virus changes parts of its molecular identity as it replicates and spreads.

Urban schools move toward improvement

By Tamara Henry
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Educators and leaders of diverse business and community groups on Monday launched a joint effort to improve inner-city schools.

Leaders of 46 urban school districts and about 70 business, community, and philanthropic groups signed a three-year plan in the hope of finding creative ways to upgrade student achievement, reduce dropout rates and increase graduation rates in inner-city schools.

"For the first time, as witnessed by the signatures, there's a commitment on the part of all of us to stop battling about turf (and) stop worrying about organization. I think there's a glimmer of hope," said Joseph Fernandez, chancellor of the New York City Public Schools.

The agreement, signed at the conclusion of a National Urban Education Summit sponsored by the Council of the Great City Schools, acknowledged the "tremendous challenge" of improving urban education but stressed "the nation cannot afford to write-off the educational needs of urban children simply because those needs at times appear overwhelming."

Seattle Mayor Norm Rice, noting that "many diverse groups are talking to each other and acting together," said opposition may be dwindling to raising revenue needed to improve urban schools.

GLOBAL WARMING

Another desert war

1990 was the warmest year ever recorded by the NASA/Goddard Institute for Space Studies; the seven warmest years on record all occurred during the past 11 years. While it is still impossible to determine whether these unusually warm temperatures are the result of human activity — as many scientists believe — it would be irresponsible for this nation to delay action any longer. We must immediately begin limiting our production of greenhouse gases or face the possibility of profound climatic change.

When short-wave, solar radiation enters the atmosphere, it is able to pass through the so-called greenhouse gases such as carbon dioxide (CO₂), methane (CH₄), nitrous oxide (NO₂) and the chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs). This energy is absorbed by the earth and then re-radiated, at a different (longer) wavelength, into the atmosphere. Because this long-wave radiation is unable to pass back through the greenhouse gases, it remains trapped in the atmosphere, increasing the surrounding temperature.

Recently, atmospheric concentrations of the greenhouse gases have risen sharply; this rise is primarily due to global deforestation and an enormous increase in the combustion of fossil fuels, such as oil, gas and coal. Since the beginning of the Industrial Revolution, the concentration of atmospheric CO₂ has increased by approximately 25 percent and, if current trends continue, by the year 2030 the total effect of the combined greenhouse gases will be equivalent to a 100 percent increase in carbon dioxide.

The consequences of this enormous environmental experiment could be extremely noxious. Predictions, based on three-dimensional climatic models, indicate that a doubling of atmospheric carbon dioxide could result in a global temperature increase of between 1.5 to 5 degrees Celsius. (Currently, the earth is only 5 C warmer than it was during the peak of the last ice age.) Concomitant with this planetary warming, a vast number of climatic changes could also occur: increased precipitation, summer continental drying, rise in sea levels and an increase in tropical storm frequency and intensity. For Iowa, this would probably mean extremely dry summers — similar to what occurred during the drought of 1988.

Hope, however, exists with a better understanding of the severity of this universal dilemma. Reductions in greenhouse gas emissions are possible. Forty-nine nations have ratified the Montreal protocol on Substances That Deplete the Ozone Layer. This agreement calls for a 50 percent reduction in CFC production by 1999. In addition, decreases in the application of nitrogen-containing fertilizers and reductions in the rate of global deforestation could slow possible greenhouse effects.

The most substantial reductions in atmospheric greenhouse gases could be achieved through the use of alternative fuel sources, such as solar or nuclear power, and through a global commitment to energy conservation. Of course, these measures will have short-term detrimental effects on the world economy, but the alternative could very well be catastrophic. Unless we begin taking the threat of global warming seriously, we may soon be faced with our own desert war.

Soul-searching?

To the Editor:

After "a tremendous amount of soul-searching," Iowa Republican Sen. Charles Grassley apparently put politics aside this past Saturday in casting the Senate's sole GOP vote in favor of the resolution to continue economic sanctions against Iraq. But buried in back pages of newspapers yesterday and Sunday, as political pundits and columnists try to make sense of impending military conflict, was a report directly linking Iowa and Sen. Grassley with the Middle East that makes one doubt that his mental probing will extend any further than the oil fields of Saudi Arabia.

I'm talking, of course, about the Avenue of the Saints highway project. As American men and women prepare to engage in a fight for Kuwaiti oil fields, Grassley is making a four-lane highway running from St. Paul to St. Louis, via Iowa City and eastern Iowa towns, his "number one priority." While he is not morally prepared to see young Americans die in Saudi sand, he is clearly posed to keep Iowa's dependence on oil running unchecked through the beginning of the next century.

As reported Sunday in The Des Moines Register, Grassley is "optimistic" about money to start the project, which is currently competing with an alternative route through Illinois that would lay road here only in the Quad Cities. The cost of Grassley's pet pavement is estimated by Midwest Engineers Task Force at $359 million.

While Grassley maneuvers to have Iowa paved from Mason City to Keokuk, Iowa, Amtrak officials are quietly pushing for a federal subsidy to start daily train service between Chicago and Omaha, with service to Clinton, Cedar Rapids, Marshalltown, Ames, Boone and Carroll. Estimated cost of this railroad route extending through the length of Iowa? $15 million in capital expenses, split by Illinois and Iowa, and an annual operating loss of $1 million, to be split between the two states and the federal government. As of today, the plan has gained the support of neither Sen. Grassley nor Gov. Branstad nor the Iowa Department of Transportation.

We live in truly troubled times where Congress stands to allot billions of dollars for the renovation and construction of federal roads while boys barely old enough to drive prepare to die for our "right" to drive. Now is the time to pull to the side of the road and decide where we are going and how we will get there. Iowans deserve better than a senator who lets his "conscience" be his guide in foreign affairs and then leaves his home state running on empty. Now is the time for railroads, not super-highways.

About this thing called 'peace'

"It's not a question of if we will go to war, but when."

So lamented Sen. Pat Leahy of Vermont after a briefing with George Bush earlier this month on the situation in the Persian Gulf.

The general population seems to agree. According to a Newsweek poll conducted early in January, more than 80 percent of Americans believe war with Iraq is somewhat likely, while 50 percent believe it to be very likely.

And as more American troops ship out for the Middle East and those already there dig in and prepare for battle, the media continue to hype scattered protests by haggard peace activists around the country. "No blood for oil!" they chant as they denounce Bush (a.k.a. "King George") to the more left-leaning activists and his Persian Gulf policies.

But their rhetoric, as it is so often, is misguided and misinformed. Naturally, a peaceful solution to the crisis is desirable, but that time has clearly passed. There is now a clear and morally justifiable impetus for aggressive military action. And it appears Bush has recognized that impetus and will act accordingly.

There can be no question, even among war protesters, that Saddam Hussein has clearly overstepped all boundaries of international law. In an unjustified, unprovoked invasion, his army marched across the sovereign territory of another member of the United Nations and claimed it as Iraq's 19th province. To allow such aggression to go unchecked is to send a strong message that chaos and destruction are acceptable qualities of life. As long as it has the political and military capability, the United States, a moral nation of moral people, cannot sit inactive as a people with their own government and history are subverted, swallowed and destroyed.

Our government was obligated to take action, which it did, in a prudent and effective manner.

The White House immediately denounced the attack, along with the vast majority of other U.N. member nations. President Bush authorized the deployment of troops to halt the aggression and defend Saudi Arabia.

Next, in an adept demonstration of foreign policy maneuvering, Bush obtained an international green light for the use of force to remove Iraqi troops from Kuwait. Thus, the presence of troops and threat of military action seemed more credible, giving Saddam more reason to reconsider his little exercise.

Bush's actions have been definitive and unambiguous from the start. He set a deadline for the removal of troops, after which, he promised, Iraq would be forced out. He has committed ample U.S. forces and secured the assistance of enough international support troops one of the soldiers plunged his bayonet into her bulging belly and pinned her to the wall. Tell her about violence, blood and death.

Another favored argument of peace protesters is that international sanctions should be given more time to work. More drive, sanctions won't work. They will not. We're talking about a man who dragged his people through an eight-year war with Iran despite thousands of casualties per battle. We're talking about a man who dropped poison gas on his own countrymen. Saddam cares little for the people of Iraq, and to starve a few Iraqis will do nothing to get him out of Kuwait.

Even if sanctions would work, which alternative would be more humane? We seem faced with two options: a quick, admittedly violent, hot war that will end the suffering of innocent Kuwaitis in a matter of weeks, or several slow and painful years of starvation and scant medical attention for the people of both countries. Death is a part of life. In the Persian Gulf, death is imminent. But the suffering can be averted.

When all else fails, the protesters talk of something they call "peace." Ah, that tired, old liberal rhetoric.

What is "peace"? Peace for the U.S.? For our troops? As long as we're all right is everything rosy? That seems to be the message we're hearing from the left. Tell the Kuwaitis about peace. Tell the children starving as the embargo takes effect. Tell the pregnant Kuwaiti woman. Tell her child. Tell them all about American peace.

The talk has led nowhere. President Bush has taken bold and definitive action at a moment of crisis. And the American public is behind him. I must apologize to the graying '60s radicals — there will be no national outcry against military action, despite what we might see in Iowa City. A second Newsweek poll found that more than 60 percent of Americans believe the military should act if Iraq fails to leave Kuwait.

The deadline is here. The talk is finished.

Michael Lorenger's column appears Tuesdays on the Viewpoints page.

Michael Lorenger

to accomplish the U.N.'s objectives without threat of a protracted conflict. And he waited. Saddam has had every opportunity to leave Kuwait. His country is not being oppressed; it is not the object of "U.S. imperialism" (another meaningless buzzword of the left). It is an aggressor nation inflicting punishment on an undeserving neighbor. And the U.S. has the moral responsibility as a leader of freedom and self-determination to defend those principles.

But the radical left-wing continues to shout in protest. Why? Because, they say, war is bad and peace is good. War means violence, blood and death.

An American located in Kuwait shortly after the invasion tells the story of a trip with his wife to a hospital in Kuwait City. A pregnant Kuwaiti woman seeking medical attention as she went into labor was denied entrance to the hospital by Iraqi troops. She cried, yelled and raised quite a fuss, according to the American. The troops became a bit irritated, and in an Iraqi equivalent of a third-trimester abortion,

Remember Martin Luther King the right way

Today is George Bush's deadline for war. If Iraq has not withdrawn from Kuwait, George Bush and his small group of advisers virtually have promised to plunge this nation and the entire Middle East into a bloody war.

Today is also Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday. But if Dr. King were alive, he would not be celebrating the fact that George Bush chose his birthday as a deadline for war. He would not be celebrating a day in which the deaths of tens of thousands — of Iraqis and Americans — has become increasingly likely. Rather, if King were alive, he would be leading the demonstrations against Bush's Persian Gulf policy as well as demonstrations against the entire system which practices poverty

Civil Rights Bill of 1960, he sends an army which is over 40 percent people of color (and overwhelmingly lower income) to fight and die in Saudi Arabia. As the Cold War feeding trough for military contractors finally starts to dry up, George Bush simultaneously cuts social spending and promises to start a war which has already cost over $30 billion. When George Bush talks about his "New World Order," he means the rule of the industrialized, capitalist nations over the rest of the globe. Crucial to this rule is control over oil — the lifeblood of industrialized society — and it is a rule which (as we can see in the Persian Gulf) will be enforced by military might. The man who conquered Panama only one year ago can not seriously stand before the world as a man interested in self-determination for Kuwait or any other country.

As the nation, and our community, prepares to celebrate Dr. King's birthday, it is essential that we recall his actual words: "Our only hope today lies in our ability to recapture the revolutionary spirit and go out into a sometimes hostile world declaring eternal hostility to poverty, racism and militarism."

Malcolm X first realized, and Dr. King grew to acknowledge, that African-American demands for equality and self-determination are fundamentally demands for human rights and are connected to international demands for human rights. We live in a nation that maintains the greatest economic and military empire in the history of the world, while simultaneously maintaining a system of racism and poverty at home. The struggle for change in this nation can be just a national struggle but must be an international struggle for justice and human rights.

Dr. King said, "We must be prepared to match actions with words by seeking out every creative means of protest possible." This is the challenge presented to us by Dr. King's birthday: a challenge to struggle and agitate for justice and peace. George Bush's war may be in the Persian Gulf; our war should be here at home.

and racism at home while systematically invading and militarizing nations abroad.

Dr. King would lead such a demonstration because he was not just a civil rights leader — he was also a leader for peace. On April 4, 1967, one year to the day before he was assassinated, Dr. King spoke at the Riverside Church in New York City. That day, for the first time, Dr. King specifically attacked Lyndon Johnson's war policy in Vietnam and linked the war in Vietnam to the domestic oppression of people of color. Unlike some elements of the mainstream peace movement, which only became active with an increasing threat of Americans coming home in bodybags, Dr. King realized that a true peace movement would have to address the poverty and racism at home. And unlike his critics in the civil rights movement, Dr. King realized that freedom and equality for African-Americans had an international dimension.

King said that as long as billions of dollars were poured into the "domestic suction tube" of Vietnam, this nation would never spend the required money to attack poverty at home. He realized that African-Americans were being sent to die in Vietnam as they were being beaten in the streets of America for demanding equality and self-determination. He was "compelled to see the war as an enemy of the poor and to attack it as such."

In 1991 the behavior of this nation is at the same time different and yet virtually identical to its behavior in 1967. As George Bush vetoes the

Chuma work unites chaos and harmony

By Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

The chaos of modern life, one of the most prevalent topics in 20th-century art, will receive a new interpretation tonight — an interpretation by an artist who has experienced that chaos both as an observer and participant.

Yoshiko Chuma and the School of Hard Knocks, a New York-based performance group, will present "Suspicious Counterpoint," a piece that juggles dance, music, theater and film, at 8 p.m. in Hancher Auditorium. In addition, the company will meet at 11 a.m. today with students at Iowa City High School to create "artistic chaos."

"I feel sometimes that life itself can be like a bad dream," says director/choreographer Chuma. "But when you wake up, you can't avoid real life — something like picking up a toothbrush can bring you back to reality. Maybe sometimes chaos comes from ordinary life itself."

"Counterpoint" means the simultaneous occurrence of independent elements, such as the independent musical lines that when played together create the unique harmony of Baroque music. In "Suspicious Counterpoint," Chuma and her collaborators mold a variety of whimsical perspectives on a counterpoint in human behavior and the suspicion the audience feels for those whose thoughts, actions and appearances are different from our own.

In one scene, the ensemble repeatedly tries to perform a tender love ballad, only to be frustrated by mistakes, accidents, misunderstandings and interruptions. Meanwhile, an actor attempts to carry on a conversation with a woman's recycling, out-of-sync film image. The piece asks whether the conversation will ever make sense and whether the love ballad will ever be sung.

Chuma emigrated from Japan to New York City in 1977 and was immediately struck by the differences between the two countries.

Robin Holland

Yoshiko Chuma and the School of Hard Knocks will perform "Suspicious Counterpoint" tonight at Hancher Auditorium.

The cultural shock and synthesis she experienced have influenced much of her work since then.

"I didn't plan to stay in New York at first. . . I just came to see some theater," she says. "But as I spent more time I noticed more and more things going on in New York. It's such a compact society with many more cultures coming together — as opposed to Japan, which is a much more homogenous country."

Since coming to the United States, Chuma has experienced a change in her perception of the world. "My eye has gotten clearer about what's going on," she says. "After coming here I started getting a 'new eye.'"

Given "Suspicious Counterpoint's" analysis of the human condition, Chuma sees special significance in the fact that it is being performed on Jan. 15, a date that many believe may mark the beginning of war in the Persian Gulf. In fact, Chuma has a personal connection to the date: Her son was born on Jan. 16 of last year.

"He was born premature; I had a very hard time," she says. "But now when I look at him, he's fine. It does remind me of the importance of the date."

The production of "Suspicious Counterpoint" features original music in jazz and popular styles by Mark Bennett, who also plays piano, sings and acts; text by Harry Newman; and film sculpture by Jacob Burckhardt.

Bennett, who has collaborated with two other Chuma productions, says that his collaborations have a sense of continuity. "We've always used a grand piano, because it acts as a focus on-stage," he says. "And this is a piece that focuses as much on the instruments and players as on the movements."

Of his music for the production, Bennett says: "The instruments have an inherent history; the music goes from classical to tangos to Gershwin-esque jazz."

Tickets for "Suspicious Counterpoint" are $18 and $16; UI students and senior citizens qualify for a 20 percent discount, and tickets for those 18 and under are available for half price.

UI alumnus who wrote Bond screenplays dies

The Daily Iowan

UI alumnus Richard Maibaum, who wrote the screenplays for most of the James Bond films, died from a heart attack Jan. 4 in Santa Monica, Calif. He was 81.

A native of New York, Maibaum completed his bachelor's degree at the UI in 1931, graduating Phi Beta Kappa, and received a master's degree in 1932. He studied under E.C. Mabie, the legendary head of the UI drama department, whom Maibaum acknowledged as a major inspiration.

In addition to writing and producing more than 60 motion pictures, including writing or co-writing 13 James Bond films, Maibaum wrote for Broadway plays and was active in television. He also worked professionally as an actor on the New York stage and headed the U.S. Army's Industrial Film Unit during World War II.

His work was honored with two Writers' Guild of America nominations, two Mystery Writers of America special Edgar Allan Poe awards and an Emmy nomination for best teleplay.

Maibaum remained a loyal friend to the UI. He returned to campus on several occasions to try out new plays and to share his expertise with faculty and students.

He endowed a Richard Maibaum Award through the UI Foundation to assist students in the Playwrights Workshop of the Department of Theatre Arts and students studying screenwriting through the Broadcast and Film program in the Communication Studies Department.

In 1989 the UI Alumni Association honored Maibaum's achievements with a Distinguished Alumni Award.

Maibaum considered his James Bond screenplays parodies of the Ian Fleming novels on which they were based. He added humor, an element absent in the novels, creating the whimsical tone for which the Bond movies are famous. His screenplays include "Dr. No,"

Richard Maibaum

"From Russia With Love," "Goldfinger," "Thunderball," "On Her Majesty's Secret Service," "Diamonds Are Forever," "Octopussy," "For Your Eyes Only," "The Living Daylights," "The Spy Who Loved Me" and "A License to Kill." It is estimated that half the world's people have seen a Bond film, and the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has called the movies "the greatest series in the history of motion pictures."

HBO wins big at ACE Awards

By Deborah Hastings
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Home Box Office continued its reign over cable television's ACE Awards, winning 25 trophies in the 12th annual awards competition.

HBO's "Tales From the Crypt" won three prizes, including best drama series and best drama directing, and comedian Billy Crystal's "Midnight Train to Moscow" garnered four, including best comedy special, direction and writing.

Trophies in 27 categories, including 11 for HBO, were presented Sunday in a ceremony televised on eight cable networks. An additional 56 ACE Awards were announced Friday in a non-televised ceremony; 14 went to HBO.

Last year, HBO won 31 ACE awards, nearly matching the 35 awards it took in 1989.

Actor James Woods was the host of the ceremony at the Wilton Theatre, which also featured appearances by actor James Earl Jones and boxing great Muhammad Ali.

Jones, who joined Ali in a tribute to boxing, also won best dramatic actor and best supporting actor in a movie or miniseries.

The National Academy of Cable Programming awarded a total of 83 ACE honors. These included two special honors previously announced: The Weather Channel received a Golden Ace Award for its Hurricane Hugo coverage and MTV Chairman Tom Preston received the Governor's Award for his contributions to cable programming.

The Arts & Entertainment network and Showtime tied for second place behind HBO, with eight wins each. Showtime's "It's Garry Shandling's Show," which ceased production last year, earned half the pay channel's honors with trophies for comedy series, actor, actress and writing.

Wins for basic cable's A&E station included "Frontiers" for documentary series and "John Prine and Lyle Lovett" for international music special or series.

"Heat Wave," Turner Network Television's docudrama about the 1965 Watts riots, won best movie or miniseries and an acting honor for Cicely Tyson.

ESPN received seven awards and The Disney Channel and TNT each collected six.

Jones was named best actor in a dramatic series for "American Playwrights Theater: Third and Oak — The Pool" on A&E and best supporting actor in a movie or miniseries for TNT's "Heat Wave."

Blair Brown of the recently canceled "Days and Nights of Molly Dodd" on Lifetime was judged best actress.

"ONE OF THE BEST FILMS OF THE YEAR."

A poignant film of truth and courage that touches the heart and stirs the conscience.

Gulf

the Persian Gulf, and non-aggression guarantees for Iraq, once it pulls its troops from Kuwait.

The most controversial aspect is a call for a peace conference on Palestine, "at an appropriate time" and "with the appropriate structure," after Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering appeared to reject the proposal, saying, "We do not believe the creation of linkage... is a contribution. Any effort should come from Saddam Hussein."

Alone among leading Western nations, France has suggested the Palestinian issue might be part of a peaceful resolution of the gulf crisis. Iraq has said it would only consider leaving Kuwait if Israel left the occupied territories.

With Israel flatly rejecting such a possibility, the United States and its other EC allies oppose any linkage of Kuwait to Palestine.

The Yemeni plan was similar to the French one. It differed in calling for the multinational forces in the region to be withdrawn "as soon as Iraq accepts the principle of withdrawal," asking the Security Council to implement all resolutions on the Arab-Israeli conflict and ending the U.N.-decreed embargo on Iraq.

A high-level Yemeni delegation met Saddam on Monday, and President Ali Abdullah Saleh said in Sana'a, Yemen, that "the Americans have accepted the proposal." But that could not immediately be confirmed.

Secretary of State James Baker said in Ottawa he was aware of Yemen's proposal. But in Washington, an administration official said it was "not a going proposal" because it contained the unacceptable call for a Mideast peace conference.

The flurry of proposals came after U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar returned to New York, via Paris, from Baghdad, saying he had lost hope for peace after meeting with the Iraqi president on Sunday.

In his latest bellicose statement, Saddam denounced King Fahd for inviting the multinational force into Saudi Arabia and said "hundreds of thousands" of Saudis could be killed if war breaks out, Iraqi media reported.

"Your bringing of the armies of the infidels to the (Muslim) lands... and your participation in transforming their task from one of defending Saudi Arabia to one of attacking Iraq is a declaration of war against Iraq," Saddam said in a letter read on Baghdad radio.

Iraq's parliament on Monday once again declared that a Palestinian homeland, not Kuwait, was at issue in the gulf crisis.

"We declare here and now that we are ready to sacrifice everything for the cause of Palestine. Palestine should be liberated and rights of Palestinians restored," National Assembly speaker Saadi Mehdi Saleh said.

The lawmakers voted to give Saddam full authority over the gulf crisis. "It is either life with dignity or death," said one deputy, Muslim clergyman Abdulwaham al-Hitti.

Since shortly after his troops seized Kuwait on Aug. 2, Saddam has repeatedly tried to tie an Iraqi withdrawal from the emirate to a homeland for Palestinians.

President Bush called Iraq's apparent intention to keep troops in Kuwait beyond Tuesday midnight EST "a tremendous mistake."

Ahmed Ben Bella, the former president of Algeria, arrived in Baghdad on Monday and praised Iraq for its bravery.

ans. Your country needs you now. Come forward and fulfill your duties as citizens. Help stop this headlong rush into war. Tomorrow may be too late," she concluded.

Although the protesters were united in their stand against war, there was dissent about other possible solutions. Following Dilkes' statement, one crowd member spoke out opposing the use of sanctions against Iraq.

"Sanctions are not an option someone opposed to this war can take," he said, stating that such sanctions will allow innocent people to starve.

"The people who are going to suffer are the Arabs," he added.

After the statement, there were several announcements from various participants about other vigils, rallies and protests which are planned in the upcoming week.

A group of the protesters, led by Iowa City Councilwoman Karen Kubby, discussed the possibility of arrest and support for those who would be arrested.

Rusty Martin, member of Bring the Troops Home, said the protesters planned to remain at the Federal Building for as long as possible.

"We're hoping that others (from other anti-war groups) will staff the office," he said. "If they let us continue to stay here — great!"

Although war seems almost inevitable, Martin said they would continue to try to prevent it.

"When the stakes are this high, it always pays to try," Martin said.

Lithuania

April 1989 Soviet military crackdown on a pro-independence protest in the Georgian capital of Tbilisi that left 20 people dead.

Gorbachev said Lithuanian "workers and intellectuals" complaining of anti-Soviet broadcasts had tried to talk to the republic's parliament, but were refused and allegedly beaten. Then, he said, they asked the military commander in Vilnius to "give us protection."

He was apparently referring to the National Salvation Committee, a shadowy pro-Kremlin group trying to seize power from the democratically elected Lithuanian leadership. The group has appealed for presidential rule in the republic, which declared its independence on March 11, 1990.

Pugo also said the committee had asked Soviet military officials in Vilnius to defend its members massed outside the television tower.

Witnesses, including an Associated Press reporter, said several hundred Lithuanian nationalists had also gathered at the tower, hoping to prevent a takeover. Tanks and troops moved on the site early Sunday, opening fire with automatic weapons, beating the protesters and crushing some under armored vehicles.

Gorbachev, Pugo and Defense Minister Dmitry Yazov were asked

Montana named AP Athlete of the Year 49er edges Nolan Ryan

The Associated Press
NEW YORK — While the San Francisco 49ers are trying to Threepeat as Super Bowl champions, their quarterback, Joe Montana, has repeated as The Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year.

Montana became the fifth athlete to win the award twice and the fourth to win it consecutively, edging out Texas Rangers pitcher Nolan Ryan in balloting announced Monday by the AP.

Last week, Montana was named the NFL's Most Valuable Player for the second straight season by the AP.

Montana, 34, who passed for 274 yards and two touchdowns in San Francisco's 28-10 playoff victory over Washington on Saturday, received 33 of a possible 138 first-place votes and 259 points.

"He's special," former 49ers center Randy Cross said. "He has an aura about him. It's an air. O.J. had it. Namath, Staubach, Graham, Luckman, guys like that. With Joe, you almost felt if every game were a Super Bowl, you'd be undefeated. It's almost not fair. He's never played a huge game that he hasn't won."

Ryan, 43, who surpassed 5,000 career strikeouts and pitched his sixth no-hitter last season, had more first-place votes (36) but wound up with 254 points. Wayne Gretzky of the Los Angeles Kings was a distant third with 11 first-place votes and 104 points.

AP-member sports writers and broadcasters were asked to vote for three athletes, with a first-place vote worth five points, second three and third one.

Montana, who already has led the 49ers to four Super Bowl titles, is the first man since sprinter Carl Lewis to win consecutively. Lewis won the award in 1983 and '84. Also two-time winners are pitcher Sandy Koufax (1963-65), golfer Byron Nelson (1944-45) and tennis player Don Budge (1937-38).

Montana is the 12th football player to win the award, although none other than Montana has won it since O.J. Simpson in 1973. The award, initiated in 1931, has gone to baseball players 22 times.

Montana started his career with the 49ers in 1979. Since then, he has been the Super Bowl MVP three times, last year setting Super Bowl records with 13 consecutive completions and five touchdown passes in a 55-10 victory over Denver last year. He has thrown for 34,998 yards and 242 touchdowns in his career.

This season, he led the 49ers to a 14-2 record and was the league's seventh-leading passer with an 89.0 rating, one year after setting an NFL record with a 112.4 rating. He led the NFC with a completion rate of 61.7 percent, threw 26 touchdown passes, and set a club record with 3,944 passing yards.

Last August, Montana signed a four-year contract extension through the 1994 season, when he will have played 16 seasons in the NFL.

"I've played for so long it's actually part of my life," Montana once said. "... Eventually, it's going to be over, and when it is over, there is no coming back to it."

Rounding out the voting for those receiving more than two votes is Bo Jackson of the Los Angeles Raiders, 77 points; cyclist Greg LeMond, 77; Cecil Fielder of the Detroit Tigers, 69.

Iowa senior Barb Willis quickly changed her second semester plans to move to San Diego in order to train with the U.S. Olympic 'A' volleyball team. Willis will be competing in the Pan Am and World University Games this summer.

Semester looking different for Willis

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Iowa volleyball player Barb Willis had already made her plans for the second semester of the school year.

The fourth-year senior, who recently changed her major to communications studies, wanted to continue working toward her degree, play intramural basketball with several of her teammates from the volleyball team and enjoy the extra free time she would have now that volleyball season was over.

But that was before the Olympic volleyball tryout in Colorado Springs, Colo., last weekend. Sunday, her plans suddenly changed.

Willis made the final cut at the weekend tryouts and will be one of the 16 members of the U.S. Olympic 'B' team which will be competing in the Pan Am Games and the World University Games this summer.

In addition, she was one of five members of that team to be invited to train with the U.S. Olympic 'A' team later this month.

So instead of attending her first classes this week, Willis is making plans to spend the semester in San Diego, Calif., taking one or two classes and training with the national team.

"I'm excited about it but I feel really nervous and really scared because I don't know what it's going to be like," Willis said of the trip to San Diego.

"(Olympic coach) Terry Liskevych said that it's going to be really intense, that we're going to feel like we're the worst volleyball players ever when we get in there and play with these people," she continued. "So I don't really know how I'll respond to that. I'll work hard and I'll do the best I can."

Liskevych invited Willis and four others to work out with the national 'A' team Saturday night after the second day of the try-

UI wrestler killed in accident

Iowa wrestler Brian Schmitz, 19, died Dec. 19 at his parents home near Crawfordville of injuries sustained in a farm accident.

The 158-pounder was crushed to death by a "uni-loader" he was operating to clean a hog building at the farm, said Washington County Medical Examiner Dennis Shimp, adding Schmitz was killed instantly.

Schmitz, who was working alone at the time, became trapped between the machine's frame and hydraulic cylinder, Shimp said. The machinery crushed Schmitz' back and abdomen, he added.

Kabat, Bautel prevail; Hawks finish second

By David Taylor
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's gymnastics team returned to action with a strong performance at the Spartan Open in San Jose, Calif., this past weekend.

Iowa placed second to New Mexico, scoring 273.45 points to the Lobo's 274.75, but had individual champions in three events.

Juniors Chris Kabat and Paul Bautel turned in first place finishes — Kabat placing first in the high bar with a personal best 9.80, and Bautel scoring a 9.70 on the rings. Kabat also took third in both the all-around (109.25), and the parallel bars with a 9.30.

Senior Rich Frye and junior Don Scarlett also performed well — Frye taking first in the pommel horse with a 9.75, and Scarlett finishing in a tie for sixth place in the all-around with 104.10 points. Dylan Ashton was also a finals qualifier, but was scratched because of fatigue resulting from strep throat.

"This is about what I had hoped for," said Iowa coach Tom Dunn. "It's still early in the year, and we're a little rough, but on the whole I am very pleased."

"We had three guys win in the finals, and that is outstanding."

Despite holiday slump women rise in AP poll

The Associated Press

Iowa moved up one place to 20th in the Associated Press women's basketball poll Monday, despite losing to Purdue Sunday.

Virginia had two impressive road victories last week and, with some help from Rutgers, replaced Penn State atop the poll.

The Cavaliers (14-1), who were knocked from first to second last week by the Nittany Lions, came from 20 points back in the second half to beat then-No. 3 North Carolina State 123-120 in triple overtime at Raleigh, N.C., on Saturday. Virginia also defeated then-No. 12 Clemson last Wednesday.

Penn State's stay at No. 1 ended after one week with an 84-70 loss to Rutgers, the Knights' seventh straight victory over Penn State.

The Huskies (11-1) dropped to third and Rutgers (12-0) improved from 10th to sixth.

"We showed a lot of character in getting over the Penn State loss and coming back last week," Virginia coach Debbie Ryan said. "The N.C. State game was incredible. The crowd was really into it."

Virginia received 45 first-place votes and 1,566 points from a nationwide panel of 64 women's coaches. The balloting was relatively close between the second and sixth positions with only 143 points separating No. 2 Tennessee from No. 6 Rutgers.

Tennessee (12-2) won two games to take over the second spot with six first-place votes and 1,457 points, followed by Penn State, which received three first-place votes and 1,431 points.

North Carolina State (14-2) fell a step to third with 1,429 points.

UNLV (13-0), with Rutgers the only other unbeaten in Division I, moved up a spot to fifth with three first-place votes and 1,346 points.

Rutgers received seven first-place votes and 1,314 points.

Georgia (12-2) moved into seventh with 1,176 points and Purdue (12-1) is eighth with 1,164.

Minnesota loss knocks men from No. 22 to 24

The Associated Press

The Iowa Hawkeyes slipped two spots to No. 24 after a 79-77 loss to unranked Minnesota while at the top of the ranks it was another clean sweep for UNLV in the Associated Press college basketball poll Monday.

The Runnin' Rebels beat San Jose State, Utah State and Fresno State last week, pushing their record to 11-0. Their reward was a unanimous No. 1 ranking with all 64 first place ballots and 1,600 points for the second straight week in the voting by sports writers and broadcasters.

Behind UNLV, it was status quo for most of the Top 10. Arkansas pushed its record to 15-1 with victories over Texas and Texas Tech and remained No. 2 with 1,520 points. The Razorbacks play UNLV at Arkansas on Feb. 10.

Indiana, Ohio State, North Carolina, Arizona, UCLA and Syracuse held their positions from last week. The only change came at No. 9, with Kentucky up two notches from No. 11. St. John's remained at No. 10 with Sunday's victory at Connecticut, which dropped from No. 9 to 13th.

There were two new teams in the rankings.

Utah (15-1) used 12 straight victories to show up at No. 23 and Seton Hall (10-3) grabbed No. 25 despite a loss at home to Syracuse.

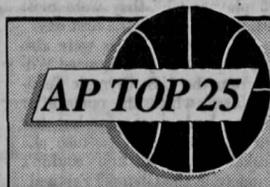

They replaced Georgia Tech and Texas-El Paso, who each lost twice and fell out of the rankings. The Yellow Jackets (9-5) were No. 24 and UTEP (10-4) was No. 25.

Ohio State, at 14-0, and UNLV are the only unbeaten major college teams. Indiana is 14-1 and North Carolina improved to 13-1 with a double-overtime victory at Virginia, which slipped a notch to No. 14.

Behind UNLV, it was status quo for most of the Top 10. Arkansas pushed its record to 15-1 with victories over Texas and Texas Tech and remained No. 2 with 1,520 points. The Razorbacks play UNLV at Arkansas on Feb. 10.

Oklahoma moved up one spot to No. 11 with two victories and Duke won twice and advanced two places to No. 12. Fifteenth-ranked East Tennessee State, Pittsburgh and Nebraska each moved up one notch, while Georgetown (10-3), after losing to Providence and barely escaping Boston College, dropped from 15th to 19th.

LSU stayed at No. 20 with two victories and New Mexico State moved up two spots to No. 21 with two wins, while No. 22 South Carolina and No. 24 Iowa slipped after losses.

Hawkeyes

Particularly encouraging was the return of several injured Hawkeyes, including defending Big Ten Champion Adrian Besancon who tied for fifth on the rings with a score of 9.40. Besancon was competing for the first time after having surgery on his bicep last summer.
 "It's encouraging to see everyone healthy, and it will make for more competition among the team in practice," Dunn said. "Now we have eight or nine guys who can compete for the six spots in each event."

Willis

The invitation came as a surprise to Willis, who said she didn't feel like she belonged at the tryout after an organizational meeting on Thursday night.
 "When I walked into the meeting Thursday night, I saw all these studs of volleyball from all over the country," Willis said. "I thought, 'There is no way. Why am I even here? There's no way that I'm going to make this.'"
 As it turned out, she not only belonged at the tryout but impressed the coaches so much during Friday's three practices that they included her on a list of 15 players who they were most interested in after the first day.
 Some of the players were also impressed. Many recognized Willis from the U.S. Olympic Festival team, which she made after her sophomore season, but few had seen her play because she broke her hand and couldn't compete in the Olympic Festival.
 "Some of them recognized me but when I played they were really surprised because they had never seen me play before," Willis said. "They just knew I broke my hand."

 Willis also survived the second cut which pared the field down to 28 candidates Saturday afternoon. After another practice Saturday, Liskevych told Willis that he wanted her to train with the Olympic 'A' team.
 But she still wasn't certain whether she had made the 'B' team or was only to train with the 'A' team.
 "When they said the names of the people who were on the 'B' team, I was listening to see if any of the other five were on it," Willis said. "When they said one of us, I figured I had made it. When they called my name, I felt like the weight was off my shoulders."
 Willis was one of only three players on the new Olympic 'B' team that did not play for a West Coast college. Willis said that all the starters on the national champions from UCLA made the second cut, and all but two survived the final cut.
 "I guess that proves that the West Coast is pretty dominant and the rest of the country is still catching up to them," Willis said.

The Hawkeyes

The Hawkeyes had not competed since mid-November when they participated in the Wisconsin Open, but the long gap in meet competition did not appear to hinder the team.
 "We had some trouble on the pommel horse and the parallel bars, but that is to be expected this early in the season," said Dunn. "We did perform well on other events, especially the floor exercise."

"The coaches out there all said this was the best group of people they had to pick from, the best tryout they ever had. That makes me feel good, too, that I made the team from such a good field of competitors."
 She also made the team trying out at an unusual position. A middle hitter in college, Willis tried out at three different positions before making the national team as an outside hitter.
 Willis originally planned to play middle hitter at the tryout, since their were only 25 players at that position compared to 70 candidates at outside hitter. But Liskevych suggested she move to outside hitter after the first day of workouts.
 "Terry Liskevych came up to me Saturday morning and asked if I had any aspirations of playing outside hitter," Willis said. "He was really impressed with me and he liked what he saw."
 So she played three positions — middle hitter, outside hitter and right-side hitter — in the rest of the scrimmages.
 "I didn't really know what I was doing the whole time but it was kind of fun to switch around," Willis said.

 The Olympic 'B' team will open competition in late July at the World University Games in England. It will also compete in the Pan Am Games in Cuba in August.
 Willis said she is looking forward to seeing the two countries.
 "I've been to England before and I loved it," Willis said. "Olympic 'B' team head coach Mike Hebert said the World University Games are the most fun thing he has ever been to. That's really exciting for me. He said it's just like a mini-Olympics."
 "He said the Pan Am Games, which are in Cuba, are more intense and there's more pressure but on you. . . It's kind of neat to think about how we're going to be in such a different culture."
 And there's also the possibility of playing in the Olympics, a dream Willis is coming close to fulfilling.
 "It's almost more nerve-wracking because now that I am this close," Willis said. "I have to really perform because I don't want to miss the opportunity."

Eye surgery a success for Olajuwon

DI wire services
 HOUSTON — Houston Rockets center Akeem Olajuwon underwent successful surgery Monday to repair damage to his right eye.
 "There were no surprises, and with proper healing everything should go as planned," said Dr. Robert Wilkins, who performed the surgery.

Patterson said Olajuwon will wear protective goggles when he returns to the court.
Pats hire new coaches
 FOXBORO, Mass. — Joe Collier, out of football the past two years after serving seven seasons as Denver's assistant head coach for defense, was named defensive coordinator of the New England Patriots on Monday.
 Collier served as defensive backs coach for the Patriots 30 years ago. After his first stint with the Patriots, Collier spent seven seasons with Buffalo, including a job as head coach from 1966 through 1968. He joined Denver in 1969.
 The Patriots also named Charlie West, who coached Denver's defensive backs from 1982 through 1988, to serve in the same position. Stan Jones, a longtime Denver assistant who was on Cleveland's staff last season, is the leading candidate to become defensive line coach.
 West, 44, was a defensive back with three NFL teams during a 12-year career that ended in 1979. He was secondary coach of the Broncos from 1983 through 1988 and defensive coordinator at Howard University in 1989. He was out of football last season.
 Last week Syracuse coach Dick MacPherson was named to replace Patriots head coach Rod Rust. MacPherson was with the Broncos from 1967 through 1970, beginning as coach of linebackers and defensive ends and moving on to defensive coordinator.

Jones leaves Lions for Falcons
 DETROIT — Detroit Lions quarterback coach June Jones is leaving to become offensive coordinator of the Atlanta Falcons.
 Jones, 37, has been with the Lions for the past two seasons. Under him, Detroit scored the second-most points in team history in 1990, with 373 and an average of 23.4 per game.
 The Lions had 4,977 total yards, ranking 11th in the NFL in rushing, and in first place with a 5.3 yards-per-carry average as Barry Sanders paced the entire league with 1,304 yards.
 A former Falcons quarterback, Jones coached two seasons with Atlanta coach Jerry Glanville in Houston (1987-88), where he helped the Oilers to back-to-back playoff berths.
 "I'm thrilled we could persuade June to come back," Glanville said in a statement issued on Monday. "He knows the way we approach things and fits right in."
 The Falcons were sixth in the NFL in passing and 10th in overall yards last season.

Sportsbriefs

Olajuwon, an All-Star starter the past four years, should be able to resume workouts with the team in eight weeks, Rockets general manager Steve Patterson said.
 Olajuwon hurt his eye on Jan. 3 when he was elbowed by Chicago's Bill Cartwright while battling for a rebound.
 Surgeons inserted a piece of Teflon shield to help repair the damaged bone structure around Olajuwon's eye.
 "He can begin some sort of exercise in roughly four weeks and in eight weeks be able to play basketball," Patterson said.

Edie Brickell's latest lacks earlier polish

By Brett Ratner
The Daily Iowan

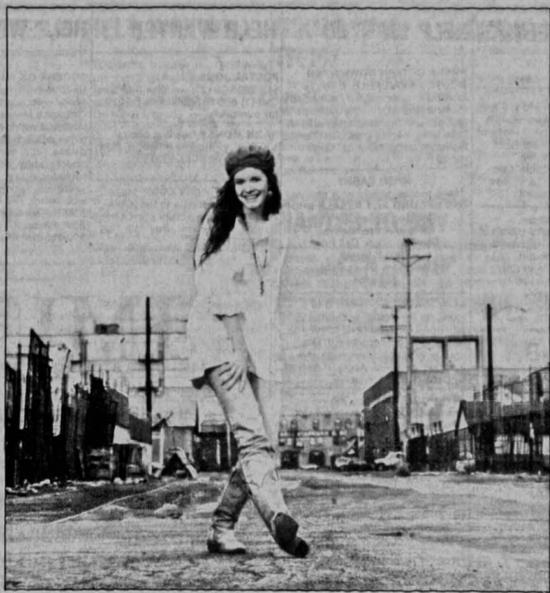

It's been said that a musician has his whole life to write his first album and only 12 months to complete the second. Twelve months is a very short time to figure out what was good about your first album, (b) attempt some sort of musical growth and (c) try to produce this on vinyl.

While it has been well over a year since Edie Brickell and the New Bohemians' "Shooting Rubber Bands at the Stars" was released, I took these conditions into account as I dropped the needle on the title track of "Ghost of a Dog," the band's latest release.

As the first two notes of the guitar poured out of the speakers, I imagined for a second I was hearing the opening riff of "Circle," one of the first album's best songs. But despite occasional nuances of its predecessor, it just wasn't the same. Unfortunately, this seemed to carry through the entire album.

The reason for this is difficult to pinpoint; the performances are all strong, though I'd swear that Edie's voice is even flatter than on the last album. The songs lack "Rubberbands'" genuine quality and don't strike the listener on as personal a level. It's as if Brickell were consciously trying to create a song that sounded earthy, rather than just letting it happen or develop a tiny seedling of inspiration. It's odd that so intangible an element can make such a big difference.

Another problem is the oversaturation of the album with Kenny Withrow's guitar playing. While Withrow is extremely talented, it was a bad decision to let the guitar dominate the mix, rather than sprinkling his best licks throughout the album.

A fresh change for the band, interestingly, is a harder sound, especially in the songs "Mama Help Me" and "Black and Blue."

Overall, "Ghost of a Dog" is a pretty good album — Brickell's vocals never fail to put me in a trance, and the songs aren't all run-of-the-mill. Next time, though, I hope that Edie and her Bohemian buddies will be able to put more emotion and personal experience into their songs.

New albums by Teenage Fanclub, Superchunk offer light in pop tunnel

By John Kenyon
The Daily Iowan

There is a future for infectious, poppy grunge.

Who wouldn't have been disillusioned by the way bands were popping up all over the place, like J Mascis and Thurston Moore kicking out little Dinosaur Youth clones from Seattle to Boston? It offer their master's thesis on American indie guitar rock, and get an A.

Sonic Youth, Mudhoney and yes, Dinosaur Jr. all seem to be the tributees on "A Catholic Education." In the end, however, it's aural mishmash becomes the own. On first listen, each brings a new round to the "who does this one sound like" game. But soon tracks like "Everything Flows," with its moody/syrupy chorus, and "Everybody's Fool," featuring a giddy shout-along chorus about fashion and squares, stand on their own.

Records

wouldn't have been bad if they all didn't start taking themselves so seriously. Seeing Soundgarden preening and strutting on MTV was the last straw — it was back to pure pop for this aficionado.

But wait! From out of nowhere, or at least Scotland, came the savior of the grunge — Teenage Fanclub. Their first LP, "A Catholic Education," caught the ear of critics around the world, reaffirming their faith in a tarnished genre. Granted, if these guys were from Chicago, they would be just another grimy band from the Midwest who worshiped Dinosaur Jr. Instead, these five ugly Scotsmen released in 1990 had to have been Superchunk's "Slack M-----r" (fill in the blanks yourself) — a mind-numbingly catchy ditty about working for a lazy boss, or not, as the case may be. "I'm workin'/But I'm not workin' for you ... No!/Slack M-----r!" You get the idea. Even with hundreds of repeated listenings over many sleepless days and nights, this song has yet to get tedious. Vulgarly in music can be seen as a sophomore attempt to please junior-high-school girls, but Violent Femmes Superchunk is not. "Hey you dumb boss" just wouldn't have worked on this one.

With that song alone worth the price of admission, it is a relief that the rest of the album is genius as well. "Binding," "Sick to Move" and "Not Tomorrow" could all have been considered the greatest song on this album if the aforementioned successor to "Take This Job and Shove It" did not exist. Excellent guitar work, a bass that does more than just anchor the song and adequate work behind the skins keep every song from sounding like the rest.

All in all, two great life-affirming new albums from two great life-affirming bands. There is hope for grunge.

Book reveals Picasso's extremes

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Pablo Picasso was alternately angelic and cruel, generous and stingy, says biographer John Richardson, whose first volume on the life of the Spanish-born artist is being published this month.

Richardson, an art historian and Picasso protégé, said in an interview in the February issue of Vanity Fair that the artist was "a strange mixture of exhibitionism and secretiveness."

"It's so difficult to write about Picasso because you always have to see the other side of the coin," Richardson said. "He was an angelic friend, but also demonic and cruel. He was incredibly generous, but also unbelievably stingy."

"I've tried to demolish the legends because the real story is so much more interesting," Richardson said. "Usually people who have these diametrically opposed qualities are in a loony bin, but somehow Picasso managed to contain all this within himself and put it to such fantastic use."

The four volumes of "A Life of Picasso" are to be published by Random House. The first volume covers from the artist's birth in 1881 to the creation of "Les Femmes d'Alger," painted in Paris in 1906. Picasso died in 1973 at age 91.

The Trivia Tribune

What? A trivia column? It's gotta be more boring than MTV — I bet that's what you're thinking right now.

And I suppose you're right. Let's face it, who'd bother to read about how Jimmy Carter once said in a speech that he sexually desires the Polish nation (according to his translator, anyway)? Who would care? Maybe the Poles, I dunno.

Your face is half-buried in her tousled blond hair, and you can't help thinking about the earth-moon gravity ratio!

But you see, reader, I can't help it; that's what I will write about. The trivialists are born this way — we're sort of like the Rain Man. You don't know how excruciating it is. Try to imagine this scene — it'll give you an idea:

You're sitting in this bar with your girlfriend. There's a talk show on the TV and the host says, "Who's the first rock artist to have topped the British and American LP and singles charts at the same time?" as an 800-number appears beneath him. Your girlfriend says, "Heh, you're gonna get old waiting for the answer to that one, bud; nobody but a creep would know a stupid thing like that! Right, sweetie?"

Well, as an answer to that you have to say, "Uh, Cynthia, honey, I happen to know it was Rod Stewart." And though it's the right answer, maybe it's not the right thing to say.

Life goes on. You order another beer after she's gone. These things happen.

Like when you and your loved one are sitting under a tree, watching the full moon, your face half-buried in her tousled blond hair, and you can't help thinking about the earth-moon gravity ratio!

"Isn't it lovely, the way it shines so brightly?" she chirps in your ear.

"Yes, it is, Lucille, and did you know that it's always the same side of the moon we see? There's a so-called dark side."

Which reminds you . . . "And by the way, not many people know that at the very end of Pink Floyd's album The Dark Side of the Moon, a man says: 'Der is no dark side in deh moon really. Matter of fact it's all dark! You can't easily hear it unless you turn it up.'"

You're also willing to tell her whose voice it is, but by that time you're talking to the tree.

It's destiny, reader. A sad case where the chromosomes plain refuse to forget.

It even manages to spoil sex. "Gee, I bet this position isn't mentioned in the Kama-Sutra," she giggles.

Quite to the contrary, sugar, it's on page such-and-such. And did you know that there are several different versions of that book available right here in Iowa City?

Please understand me — I need an outlet for these things. I promise I'll try not to make it too boring, even if it means killing myself in the process. Which reminds me, do you remember that movie in which a newscaster with low ratings announces that he will kill himself while on the air? It was "Network" — but now, I'm doing it again.

Friends, The Trivia Tribune will be right here, every other Tuesday in the Daily Break. See ya.

Celts missing Bird

Last 4 games Boston minus its best passer

The Associated Press

BROOKLINE, Mass. — The Boston Celtics revival has been one of the most surprising developments of the NBA season. Their decline since Larry Bird was sidelined with back problems is hardly shocking.

They have a new running game and several young players filling key roles. But Bird remains their most valuable player.

Without him, backup center Joe Kleine said Monday, "We're still a very good team (but) I don't think we're a championship caliber team."

Amazingly, the Celtics with Bird would have a realistic shot at an NBA title after being knocked out of the playoffs in the first round the past two seasons.

Two years ago they had the NBA's 15th best record. Last season, it was the ninth best. And now, their 29-6 mark is the league's best.

"The good thing about this success," center Robert Parish said, "is it's happened quickly, because I think it did wonders for our confidence, which we needed. Over the last couple of years, we haven't exactly been burning up the league."

The addition of guards Brian Shaw and Dee Brown and the unleashing of forward Kevin Gamble, who was used sparingly by former coach Jimmy Rodgers, have given the Celtics an uptempo attack to complement their half-court game.

But without Bird, they're getting fewer defensive rebounds to start the fastbreak and fewer crisp passes to finish it.

"With Larry, we have another great passer," Parish said. "He does a good job of distributing the ball."

The Celtics are 3-1 since Bird was sidelined indefinitely. But last Wednesday their 28-point lead in the second quarter dropped to 2 before they beat Milwaukee 111-102. Last Friday, they scored the last 6 points to edge the Los Angeles Clippers 109-107.

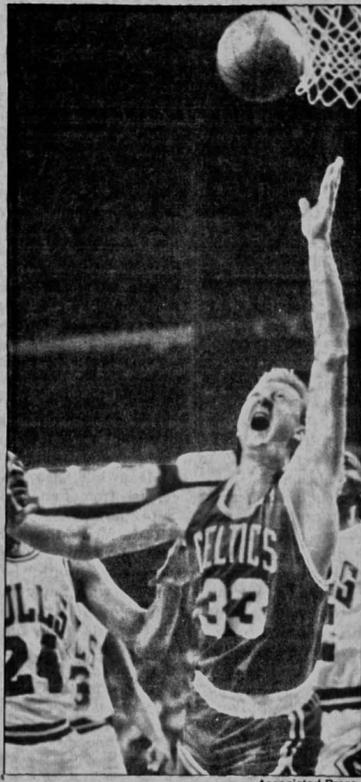

Only five of their previous 27 wins were by fewer than 9 points.

And last Saturday night, they were whipped in Washington 116-99. Boston's next game is Wednesday night at home against Golden State. Coach Chris Ford knew what he wanted to accomplish at practice Monday and Tuesday.

"We really have to go back over what has been successful for us," he said. "That's re-emphasizing the defense, making sure that no one gets easy baskets against us and make sure that we shore up our defensive rebounding."

Bird is second on the team in defensive rebounding, only five behind Parish. He also is averaging 19.2 points and team highs of 7.7 assists and 1.9 steals per game.

Without Bird, the Celtics have stagnated offensively and settled for tougher outside shots.

Associated Press

Though the Celtics are 3-1 since Larry Bird has been sidelined, the team has missed its best passer and as a result lost some of its inside game and fast-breaking ability.

"We're trying to once again get the movement when we dump the ball inside," Ford said. "We go to Robert and Kevin (McHale) inside right now and the last couple of games teams have been double teaming them and we've not been moving without the ball."

More misses give opponents more chances to run. And more baskets by opponents give the Celtics fewer fastbreak opportunities.

In their first game without Bird, the Celtics routed New York 101-87. And they had a strong first half against Milwaukee before almost losing.

"Larry's such a good all-around player," Kleine said, "you miss that over 48 minutes in a game because he does everything so well — rebounding, passing, shooting, great defensive rebounding. Over a 48-minute game, sooner or later you're going to miss something somewhere."

Team management is determined not to rush Bird back before he's healthy. Kleine agrees, especially now that Boston is back among the elite of the NBA.

"It's good that we're playing well now, but when you have to really be playing well is playoff time," he said. "If Larry comes back and he's not healthy, we're not a championship caliber team."

Giants may lose leading scorer

By Tom Canavan
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—The New York Giants may go to San Francisco for the NFC title game this weekend without their leading scorer and the only guy who scored against the 49ers on Dec. 3 — Matt Bahr.

Bahr's status for the game was in doubt Monday as Giants coach Bill Parcells disclosed that the place-kicker sustained a neck injury in the third quarter of the Giants' 31-3 win over Chicago Sunday.

It appeared that Bahr was knocked woozy making a tackle on a kickoff return by Dennis Gentry. He returned late in the game and kicked an extra point and kicked off, but he left the locker room wearing a neck brace.

"They are concerned about a line in the X-ray," Parcells told a crowded news conference. "They don't know if it's an old one or a new one. We're going to have to see."

Doctors planned to use a CAT-scan Monday to evaluate the injury, Parcells said. Giants spokesman Ed Croke said late Monday afternoon that the team would have no statement on the test until Tuesday.

Bahr, whose 20-yard field goal accounted for the Giants' offense in a 7-3 loss to the 49ers, was not immediately available for comment. The veteran kicker seemed to duck his head in attempting to tackle Gentry and his neck snapped back when the Bear tried to run him over.

If Bahr was not able to kick, the Giants have a number of options. The most likely would be activating veteran Raul Allegre, whose groin injury earlier this season created a job for Bahr.

Allegre has been ready to return to the active roster for weeks, but Bahr has kicked so well that Parcells has stayed with him. Bahr has converted 18 of 24 this field goals season, including a 46-yarder Sunday that bounced off the left upright and just crossed over the crossbar.

New York also has rookie Matt Stover on injured reserve, but he has never kicked in a NFL game, making the activation of Allegre likelier.

"I'd rather not talk about it," Allegre said Monday. "Whatever happens, happens. I hope he is well. I hope it's nothing serious."

Before being hurt, Allegre had converted 4 of 5 field goal attempts and all nine of his extra points. He also has better range than Bahr.

Bo questionable for Sunday

The Associated Press

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. — The status of Bo Jackson for the AFC Championship Game was in question Monday with the announcement that he was undergoing tests on his injured left hip.

"He's taking an MRI (magnetic resonance imaging) right now," Los Angeles Raiders coach Art Shell said Monday. "We'll know more when we get a reading as to the extent of the injury. We'll just have to wait and see."

Jackson was injured when tackled by Kevin Walker at the end of a 34-yard run on the second play of the third quarter Sunday in the Raiders' 20-10 second-round playoff victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

"It's a hip pointer," Jackson said after the game. "Yes, I'm going to play next week. Yes."

Robert Rosenfeld, the Raiders team physician, wasn't so sure. "I have to see how he responds to treatment," Rosenfeld said.

Rosenfeld said he didn't believe the injury was serious. "It's going to get well," he said. "I really don't know what the injury is yet, that's the trouble."

Jackson left the game having rushed for 77 yards on six carries.

Bo Jackson: May not play

Marcus Allen then picked up the slack, gaining 79 yards on 10 carries. Overall, Allen picked up 140 yards on 21 carries.

Shell said he wasn't sure when he'd know the results of the tests on Jackson. He said it could be as late as sometime Tuesday.

If the tests don't reveal serious damage, Shell said he will decide if Jackson plays against the Buffalo Bills next Sunday at Rich Stadium. "We'll watch it," Shell said. "If I think he can go, he'll go. If I don't think he can go, he won't go."

If it's clear Jackson can't play, Shell said it's possible running back Greg Bell will be activated. Bell has been on the injured list since October and although he's been healthy for some time, he hasn't been activated because he hasn't been needed.

Shell also said the defensive end Howie Long broke his left thumb against the Bengals, but returned to the game and will start against the Bills.

"He doesn't have to catch any balls, he'll play," Shell said of Long.

Otherwise, Shell said, the Raiders came out of the Cincinnati game with no serious injuries.

Shell smiled when asked what he thought about the weather his team will encounter in Buffalo next weekend.

"There's nothing to think about," he said. "We still have to play in it and perform. They have to play in it. It's going to be equal for everybody. We plan on being prepared to do whatever it takes to get the job done."

"The only thing I'm concerned about right now is to make sure we have the proper shoes."

The Bills earned the right to host the AFC Championship Game by beating Miami 44-34 on Saturday. It snowed throughout most of that game.

Hot new offense lifts Bills in cold weather

The Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Dull, traditional, uninspired. Those were the old descriptions of the Buffalo Bills offense.

But, with their no-huddle formation and the increased use of the tight end, the Bills, who led the NFL with 414 points, are a bore no more.

It wasn't a conscious change, says coach Marv Levy, who insists, "We're running the same offense."

"We still want to wind up the game running the ball more than our opponent," he said. "What we're probably saying is what you don't have to do... is start out by accumulating that number of runs by necessarily hammering it at the beginning of the game."

Ted Marchibroda, the team's offensive coordinator, said the differences from last season to this season are "subtle changes. It's not anything drastic outside of the no-huddle."

The no-huddle has been the most visible change. Marchibroda said the adoption of the no-huddle wasn't a deliberate move, but more of an evolution from the Bills success over the past two seasons with the two-minute drill.

Specifically, Marchibroda said Jim Kelly's obvious feel for the two-minute drill made him realize the hurry-up should be a permanent part of the team's offense.

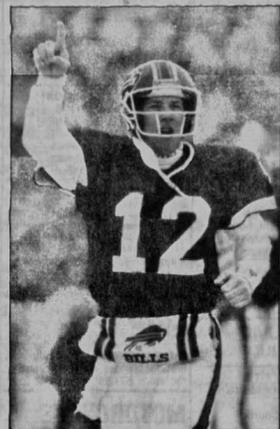

"He's that type of a personality," Marchibroda said. "Jimmy's a bright, intelligent football quarterback. Now, I think what we're doing suits Jimmy's personality. Not everybody is a Larry Bird or a Magic Johnson. Not everybody wants the ball in the last two minutes. You give it to the guy who does."

The Bills used the no-huddle offense last year at some points, Marchibroda said. But there is a difference in formations.

"We're using the no-huddle with three receivers in the ballgame," he said. "It's normally two backs, a tight end and two receivers."

The strategy behind that change, Marchibroda explained, was to try to get speedy wide receiver Don Beebe more involved with the offense. Beebe was injured late in the season, but the Bills are now using the three-receiver set with rookie Al Edwards.

"We wanted to get our most-talented players in the ballgame," Marchibroda said. "We wanted to get our speedy, big-play people in the game."

That's also why tight end Keith McKeller has figured more in the offense.

"We felt he could block well enough and he's been a deep threat," Marchibroda said. "He's a big-play guy who's made the big play for us."

McKeller, who caught 30 passes for 396 yards and five touchdown passes, was the team's leading receiver behind Andre Reed, Thurman Thomas and James Lofton.

"It's definitely a thrill," said McKeller of his increased role this season.
