U.S., Iraqi ground forces skirmish on Saudi border Iraq continues to bomb Israelis, Saudis

By Neil MacFarquhar
The Associated Press

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — U.S. armored cavalrymen skirmished with Iraqis in the first firefight along the border where fleets of tanks maneuvered and dug in on the desert floor Wednesday for the land war just over the horizon.

The Americans captured six Iraqis and suffered two slight casualties, the U.S. command said. It denied a Baghdad claim that the Iraqis also seized prisoners.

For a second night running, Iraq fired off a double-barreled volley of Scud missiles at Saudi Arabia and Israel. No casualties were reported immediately.

One Scud descended on northern Israel about 10 p.m. and was intercepted by U.S.-supplied Patriot defense missiles, the Israeli military said. At the same time, five Scuds apparently were intercepted by Patriots over the Saudi cities of Dhahran, Riyadh, and Hafr al Batin, Saudi sources and witnesses reported.

If confirmed, it would be the first time the Hafr al Batin area had been targeted. The northern desert city is where Arab members of the anti-Iraq coalition have military encampments.

Each Scud launch against Israel pushes the Jewish state closer to striking back at Iraq. At U.S. urging, the Israeli leadership was holding its fire Wednesday, despite a Tuesday night Scud attack that caused dozens of injuries, including three fatal heart attacks.

The cloudy skies over Iraq began to clear Wednesday, and allied air commanders pressed their mission-a-minute campaign in the seventh day of Operation Desert Storm, the U.S.-led offensive to reverse Iraq's six-month-old military occupation of Kuwait.

Bombing raids have demolished half of Iraq's oil-refining capacity, allied commanders said. Iraq announced it was suspending gasoline sales.

Allied officers also say bombing runs have wrecked much of Iraq's chemical weapons and nuclear installations. Many analysts believed Iraq to be near achieving the ability to produce nuclear weapons.

In a televised address in Washington, President Bush said the air war had put Iraq "out of the nuclear bomb-building business for

Big Ten vigils unite both sides

By Ann Riley
The Daily Iowan

Simultaneous silent candlelight vigils were held at all Big Ten schools last night in an attempt to bring together both supporters and protesters of the gulf war.

About 25 students gathered on the Pentacrest to show their solidarity with a moment of silence for peace.

The vigil was organized by the student governments of all the Big Ten universities, which make up the Net 10 student organization.

"This has provided a forum for an extremely emotional issue, and these people are talking now," said Mark Havlicek, president of the UI Student Association.

"Both sides are here now and they're not fighting or screaming or damaging anything. Now when they see each other at a rally perhaps they'll think about things a little more before they fight. We're being mature and acting like the adults we claim to be."

Havlicek said the Net 10 decided to sponsor the vigil out of fear that recent campus protests of the war in the gulf would lead to violence.

"The thing we would like to do at all Big Ten schools is to make a plea to protesters on both sides to realize that they both have viewpoints that are benevolent and worth being heard," he said.

The Net 10 voted Monday in a 6-5 vote not to take a stand on the U.S. position in the Persian Gulf. The organization was formed this past summer to replace the Big Ten Student Association founded by last year's student government president, Pepe Rojas-Cardona.

"I think that Net 10 should serve as a service organization and they should not take views on policies. I think they should be there to advocate for all students," said Troy Raper, executive officer of the Undergraduate Activities Senate.

Donna Flayhan, spokeswoman for Operation U.S. Out, said that she thought the vigil was a good idea but didn't think it would solve anything in the longterm.

"But I think it's definitely better than standing out there and shouting at each other because nobody is listening," she said.

UI student Melinda DeHamer said she supported the idea of the vigil.

"I think it's important that we all take this issue seriously, but there is a time for demonstrations and being on one side or the other, but there is also a time for quiet reflection and taking the war seriously," she said.

How Arab Countries Got Their Modern Borders

The crumbling of the Ottoman Empire left behind a power vacuum and a web of vague and ill-defined boundaries in its former lands. The political intrigues of European powers before and after World War I produced today's boundaries, which many Arabs say are arbitrary. They rarely mattered before oil was discovered. Now they can set off wars, including Iraqi invasions of Iran in 1980 and Kuwait in 1990.

The Ottoman Empire ruled most Arab lands, including Mesopotamia and the Al Hasa coast of the Persian Gulf, since the reign of Suleyman I in the 1560s. By the late 1800s, Ottoman control of its vast empire was weakening, and many areas were ruled by tribal leaders with the title of emir (prince) who had considerable local autonomy. No formal borders were set in desert areas.

Britain allied itself with the Ottomans through most of the nineteenth century, mostly to keep it from being swallowed up by Russia. But by the 1890s Britain was dealing directly with emirs around the Arabian peninsula. Kuwait became a British protectorate in 1899. Britain and the Ottomans negotiated a border for Kuwait, a 40-mile radius from Kuwait City, but it was never ratified.

At the same time, Britain offered to back an Arab rebellion headed by Husayn, Sharif of Mecca and sheikh of the Hashemite clan, to overthrow Ottoman rule and set up an independent Arab state. Husayn wanted a promise that all lands between Egypt, Iran and Turkey would be part of it, but Britain wanted to exempt the regions around Basra, Baghdad, and Alexandria.

After World War I Husayn's territory in Hijaz and the Ibn Saud clan's territory in Najd became independent Arab states. The League of Nations gave "mandates" to France for Lebanon and Syria, and to Britain for Palestine and Mesopotamia. Britain installed Husayn's sons as kings of Iraq and Jordan.

Association votes contradictory; GPSS may separate from UISA

By Ann Riley
The Daily Iowan

The UISA giveth, and the UISA taketh away.

The status of the UI Graduate and Professional Student Senate will most likely remain unchanged after the UI Student Association passed a pair of contradictory proposals last night.

Nancy Mortensen, executive officer of the GPSS, presented a referendum to be included on the ballot of the next student government election, calling for GPSS to become independent from the UISA. The new organization would have separate mandatory student fee assessment and allocation, she said.

"This is nothing personal," she said, "but the Graduate and Professional Student Senate believes UISA has a problem addressing the needs of graduate students."

Following the passage of this proposal, a second referendum was proposed by Troy Raper, executive officer of the Undergraduate Activities Senate, and senator Dustin Wilcox, contradicting the first.

"This referendum erases the first one. It would prevent the graduate students from creating a new, separate senate," said UISA President Mark Havlicek. "But if their referendum did get a large number of votes, then the senate would have to vote to create a new senate. The senators have to represent their constituents."

According to the current student government constitution, any student group can have a referendum put on the ballot. The deadline for submitting referendums is Jan. 28.

Other actions taken by the senate last night:

The UISA voted to give its full support to the university-sponsored Emergency Blue Cap phones program. This program would place emergency phones in particular "areas of concern" around campus. These phones would have a direct line to the UI Department of Public Safety and may also include such features as flashing lights or loud horns to discourage possible attackers.

The UISA also granted funds to support the 1991 International Student Retreat and to sponsor a debate on the gulf crisis.

UI may have to delay renovations due to proposed state budget cuts

By Julie Creswell
The Daily Iowan

Budget cuts now being negotiated in the state legislature may force the UI to "tighten its belt" and delay construction of the UI Pharmacy building addition, according to one state official.

In formal budget requests, the UI asked for $199 million from the Iowa Legislature for fiscal year 1992. Gov. Terry Branstad has recommended $181 million.

While Branstad's recommendation constitutes an approximate $18 million increase from the UI's current $180 million operating budget, another factor will drain about $1.2 million from the UI's budget for deferred maintenance.

According to Branstad press secretary Richard Vohs, the state's budget for fiscal year 1992 is approximately $3.357 billion, up slightly from last year's $3.160 billion. But Vohs said state legislators reacted to a strong growth in last year's economy by overspending when budgeting for fiscal year 1991.

This move left Iowa with a projected deficit. Therefore, Branstad announced that $47 million previously allocated to state agencies would have to be returned to the state's general fund. The UI's share of this is approximately $1.2 million, according to Peter Nathan, vice president of Academic Affairs.

Nathan said the UI's operating budget would not be affected by the cut, but rather, funding that would have met deferred maintenance needs and new equipment demands will no longer be available, and probably won't be in the near future.

"It's a standstill budget. We'll have to make due with what we had this year," Nathan said. "People will have to be even more See Budget, Page 4A

Administrators see benefits, problems of enrollment decline

Enrollment Projections

By Leslie Yazel
The Daily Iowan

The UI is still part of the Big Ten, but in the future it may be a significantly smaller part. Like other national universities, the UI is predicting a sharp decline in enrollment in the coming years, and with it, a mixed bag of surprise benefits and unforeseen hazards.

The shortfall translates into smaller classes for UI students, but less students also means less money in the UI General Education Fund, UI officials said.

When it comes to enrollment, the UI is largely a victim of demographics, according to Director of Admissions Michael Barron.

"A decline is inevitable if there are fewer students and not fewer colleges — it means increased competition and a buyer's market for students," Barron said.

At a faculty meeting last week, UI Vice President Peter Nathan expressed dismay at the recent statistics.

He told the faculty council that he expects next year's enrollment to be 26,800 for undergraduates, down from 28,000 this year. Depending on the UI's ability to solve what Nathan called several "problems" with programs and recruitment, enrollment could be as low as 23,800 or as high as 26,200 by the year 1995.

"It's important that the faculty know about it, but it's not necessarily something we want to broadcast to the state," Nathan said of the projected decline.

Barron felt that smaller figures on incoming freshmen could have positive indications for the undergraduate environment. "Class size is smaller and the quality of students coming in is higher. That makes for an exciting classroom environment," he said.

But the decline in enrollment should not be considered a decline in the quality of students, according to Faculty Council President Steve Collins. He said the quality of the freshman class of 1989-90 — another year in which the UI had an enrollment shortfall — was "very high."

Barron agreed that incoming UI freshmen are of a higher academic caliber, citing students' better high school grade point averages, higher scores on aptitude tests and the UI's ranking of 28th among national universities for the number of National Merit Scholars.

While officials speak glowingly of the pros signaled by an enrollment decline, such as a better student-professor ratio, the cons are preceded by dollar figures.

"Obviously it's going to cause some problems," said Vice President of Finance Susan Phillips. "What would be best is if we experienced a decline in students but (not in the budget)."

To understand how a decline in students would affect the General Education Fund, more than a quarter of which comes from tuition fees, Treasurer Doug True suggested thinking in terms of losing $1,952 for each in-state student the UI loses and $6,470 for non-residents. True said having fewer students will also have an adverse financial effect on the Iowa City community.

Phillips said student tuition did not increase as much as inflation this year. The state Board of Regents policy, passed last month, indicates that they will keep tuition increases below inflation but reserve the right to make adjustments.

Board requests input on proposed projects

By Wendy Alesch
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City School Board members want feedback from the community before they embark on an expansion of the system that could cost taxpayers $10 million.

The funds needed to complete the projects would be raised through the issue of bonds, as the district would not have enough money to fund the projects with currently available resources.

Iowa City school officials have proposed a plan that would complete major building projects that have been discussed for several years. The projects include a renovation of City High's fine arts wing, the addition of a classroom and remodeling of South East Junior High's music, cafeteria and kitchen areas.

The project also includes building an auditorium at West High that was in the original plan but never was completed. It also includes tentative plans to build a new elementary school, according to Alan Leff, a member of the newly formed budget committee.

"It is possible a new grade or middle school may be built; no decision has been made yet," Leff said.

The entire project could run about $10 million, but the idea is still in the "hypothetical stages," and the board wants to organize an expanded group of citizens to "bounce ideas off of," according to board member Craig Willis.

After these communication sessions are finished in mid-February, some type of decision could be made, Willis added.

"Some of the decisions will come out of the communicative planning, and we will make some demographic decisions also," he said.

"We should have a plan charted out by the end of school — we want to do it as fast as is prudent," Willis said.

Both board members felt the community would react positively to a proposed bond issue if the costs are controlled.

"The local public will demand the project be responsible in scope and price," Leff said.

Farm leaders want new bill examined

By Don Kendall
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The 1990 farm law, less than two months old, should be revised by Congress to help a growing number of hard-pressed farmers and other rural people, the National Farmers Union said Wednesday.

Leaders announced a nationwide petition campaign "designed to show Congress and the Bush administration a groundswell of support" for modifying the new law.

Administration and congressional farm leaders say new farm laws are always subject to review but that a massive redo of the 1990 version is not likely.

One of the NFU's recommendations would raise federal loan rates on commodities such as wheat, corn and cotton. These are price supports. They effectively set floors under market prices by guaranteeing farmers a specific rate for their crop.

The administration and many bipartisan advocates in Congress argue that high price supports make U.S. commodities less competitive on the world market and cut into exports.

NFU President Leland Swenson said that market prices and other economic conditions have deteriorated since Congress debated the massive five-year farm bill last summer and fall.

Among other failings, he said, the law has allowed the Agriculture Department to set loan rates too low.

President Bush signed the legislation into law on Nov. 28. It includes a package of changes to give farmers more flexibility and choice in determining what to produce.

But the law also reduces the direct subsidies, or deficiency payments, due farmers when market prices fall below target levels, which the NFU said are also too low.

The tone of the law is to place more reliance on market orientation and less on price supports and direct subsidies. The NFU and some other farm groups say the financial structure of many farmers is too fragile to weather such revision.

"We're not asking for more spending on farm programs," Swenson said. "But there are ways to make the farm bill work for farmers within current budget constraints."

Swenson said if crop loan rates are raised it would ease the pressure on making deficiency payments to farmers. Those basically make up the difference between the loan rates and target prices.

The reopening of the 1990 law is needed to forestall "economic devastation" among farmers, he said. Food and nutrition programs also should be strengthened to provide help for poor people.

Swenson cited figures showing that prices of major commodities, including milk and grain, have dropped sharply in recent months.

Iowa City Police records state that officials at the UI Old Capital Building received a bomb threat from an anonymous caller on Jan. 17, during a student rally on the Pentacrest. The caller claimed a bomb would explode at 1:15 p.m. The building was evacuated from 1:11 to 1:20 p.m., but after a search, no bomb was located and occupants of the building were allowed to return.

According to police records, three arrests were made Tuesday and resulted in the recovery of goods from at least six separate burglaries, including items from Audio Odyssey of Iowa City.

Police records state that Tommy Wallander, 19, Zach Hale, 18, and Shane Novak, 18, all of 1606 30th St. N.W., No. 1, Cedar Rapids were arrested on a variety of burglary charges.

UI Public Safety records state that David C. Hauffman reported on Jan. 22, that a Rockhopper bike had been stolen from the south bike rack of the UI Main Library.

Courts

An Iowa City man was charged Wednesday with two counts of assault causing injury, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Court records state Beau T. Brockman, 21, 123 Iowa Ave., Apt. 4, was involved in a fight near the intersection of Iowa Ave. and Dubuque St.

The police officer involved reported that when he arrived at the scene, he observed the defendant engaged in a physical altercation with another person. Records state the defendant fled from the scene when he saw the squad car.

According to court records, Brockman fractured the nose of one victim at the scene and pushed the other victim into a wall with such force that she suffered injury to the face.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Feb. 7.

A New York man and woman were charged Sunday with possession of marijuana, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Court records state Barbara B. Thompson, 36, and Anthony F. Scibelli, 37, both of New York City, were to receive a package at the Union, but police had been informed that the package may possibly contain a controlled substance and consequently intercepted it.

Court records state a warrant was obtained by police officers, the contents of the package were examined and found to be marijuana.

According to court records, a controlled delivery of the package was arranged and after a reasonable amount of time had transpired, the defendants were confronted by police officers and charged with possession of the marijuana.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Jan. 31.

Correction

The Iowa City City Council approved the first consideration of an ordinance to ban leaf burning by a vote of 4-3 Tuesday night. A story on page 4A Wednesday incorrectly reported that Mayor John McDonald cast a tie-breaking vote in support of the proposal. He actually voted against it, along with councilmembers Darrel Courtney and William Ambrisco. Karen Kubby, Randy Larson, Susan Horowitz and Naomi Novak voted in favor of the ban. According to a clerk in the City Clerk's office, the ordinance will not actually be adopted until it is approved after two more considerations by the council.

Incomes in Iowa match U.S. average

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Personal income in Iowa grew by 1.2 percent from July through September, higher than 90 percent of the surrounding states and equal to the national average, government figures show.

The Commerce Department's Bureau of Economic Analysis said Wednesday that personal incomes grew 1.2 percent nationally in the third quarter, down from 1.3 percent during the second quarter and 2.1 percent in the first.

Iowa's growth ranked 21st nationally. Wisconsin had the best rate of growth of any of the states around Iowa, at 1.1 percent. In Nebraska, personal income shrank by 1.3 percent and it fell 1.7 percent in South Dakota. Personal income grew 0.8 percent in Missouri, 0.7 percent in Illinois and 0.5 percent in Minnesota.

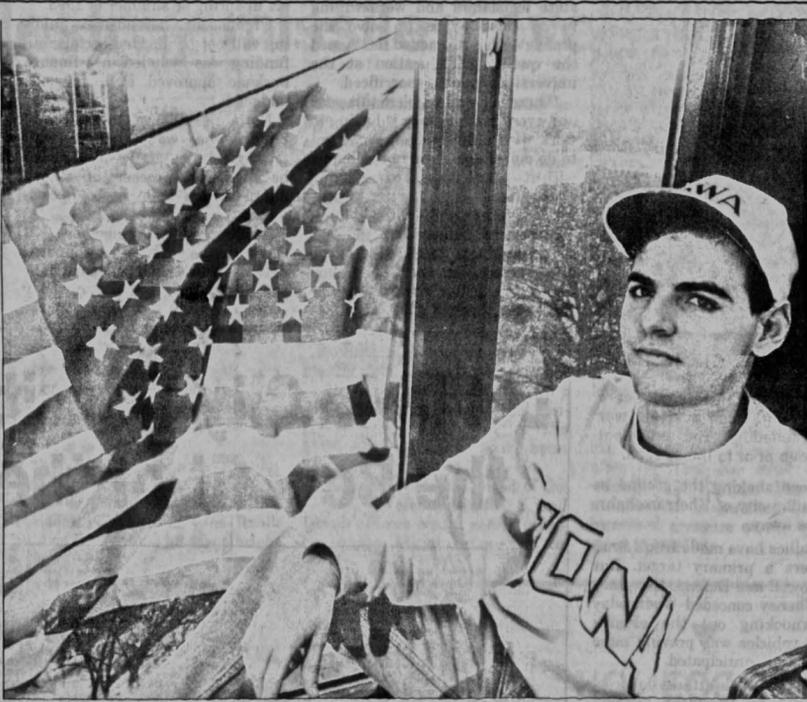

The Plains region — made up of Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota — ranked last in the eight Commerce Department regions with a barely perceptible growth of 0.3 percent.

Personal incomes grew only 0.6 percent — half as fast as the national average — in New England. The Rocky Mountain region also grew slower than the national average, up 1.1 percent after a 1.6 percent gain in the second quarter.

Three of the eight regions grew faster than the nation as a whole — the Far West, 1.7 percent; the Southwest, 1.5 percent, and the Southeast, 1.3 percent. The other two regions — the Great Lakes and the Mideast — equaled the national average.

The slow growth in the Plains region "mainly reflected a decline in farm income, as federal farm subsidy payments fell," the report said.

Commerce defines personal income as the income received by persons from all sources less personal contributions for social insurance. It is not adjusted for inflation.

County might charge contractor for lost time

By Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

A possible five-month extension in the construction of Johnson County's long-delayed Butler Bridge may force the contractor to foot the bill for lost time.

The county had originally hoped to have the bridge finished during the summer of 1990. But County Engineer Doug Frederick told the Board of Supervisors Tuesday that construction has been delayed for various reasons, including the high water level of the Iowa River last year and obstruction by power lines.

The two-lane bridge, located north of Iowa City on Dubuque Street, is being widened to accommodate between 5,000 and 6,000 cars per day. The total cost of the project is around $998,000.

Frederick has proposed that the county start penalizing Jensen Road Company, contractors for the bridge, beginning April 1 or the day the project is first closed to traffic. April 1 is the date the Iowa Department of Transportation said they would allow pouring on the upper deck of the bridge to begin.

The county's contract calls for Jensen to pay a penalty of $550 for each working day the company goes over the deadline. Frederick said an unofficial count had Jensen working 75 days past the deadline, but after a meeting with Jensen just before Christmas, he credited the company with days lost to unavoidable delays, bringing the current total to 18 days under deadline.

However, Frederick added, "There's no way they'll get it done within 18 days."

Although Jensen proposed a new contract period that would begin April 1 and give the company 40 days to complete the bridge, the board will endorse Frederick's proposal at its next meeting, said Supervisor Dick Myers.

"They wanted us to rewrite the contract, and we won't do that," Myers said. "I don't think it makes any sense to rewrite it."

This is not the first time that the board and Jensen have clashed over delays in construction.

In August of last year, the board sent a letter warning Jensen that a default notice would be served in two weeks. The delay would have allowed Jensen a chance to resume work or give the board a chance to negotiate for a third-party contractor to do the job.

After receiving the letter, the president of the company attended a Board of Supervisors meeting where it was decided to leave the contract as it was.

State questions private deposit insurance safety

By Tom Seery
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Private deposit insurance could be outlawed as the sole means of backing up deposits in Iowa financial institutions, a leading state legislator said Wednesday.

Private deposit insurance is rare in the state. All banks and savings and loan institutions in Iowa participate in federal insurance programs, as do all but two Iowa credit unions.

But Senate Commerce Chairman Patrick Deluhery, D-Davenport, said he is concerned about growth of private insurance. He said his committee might move this year to require all Iowa savings institutions to participate in federal deposit insurance programs.

Deluhery called in state banking, credit union and savings and loan regulators for the commerce committee hearing. Some legislators said they wanted reassurances in the wake of recent banking problems in Rhode Island.

Rhode Island's governor ordered 45 credit unions and small banks closed Jan. 1 after a private deposit insurance company's reserves were depleted by the failure of a single state bank.

No banks or savings and loan institutions have private insurance in Iowa, regulators said. Of the more than 250 credit unions operating in the state, only two have private insurance, said James Forney, the state superintendent of credit unions.

Forney said those two credit unions are relatively small, with a total of $6.5 million of the more than $1.76 billion of credit union deposits in the state. The two credit unions purchase insurance from a Tennessee company that insures more than 300 credit unions in five states.

"The private insurer of credit unions in Iowa deals with a number of states, so they disperse that risk," Forney said.

"There is a unique situation in Rhode Island," he said.

In Rhode Island, a small private insurer operated only in that state and offered deposit insurance to credit unions and small banks.

There are also four industrial loan companies operating in Iowa without federally backed insurance, regulators said. Those institutions have a total of $9.5 million in funds from investors who bought thrift certificates from the companies.

Iowa established a state Industrial Loan Thrift Guaranty Corp. in 1981, but it sought bankruptcy protection after several claims were filed by insolvent industrial loan companies.

In a letter to Deluhery earlier this month, state banking superintendent Robert Rigler said industrial loan companies are not subject to strict state regulation.

"There is nothing in present law to prevent an industrial loan company buying FDIC or private coverage," Rigler wrote.

 a long time to come." He was both upbeat and cautious in his overall assessment of the war's progress, saying Iraq could still pull some surprises.

In Baghdad, more and more people were emerging from their shelters, CNN's Peter Arnett reported from the Iraqi capital. Commerce seemed to be resuming, Baghdadis were shopping at the central market and water trucks were making their rounds, said Arnett, one of the few foreign journalists in Baghdad.

The shops still offered dry food, canned goods, soft drinks and bottled water, Canadian Press correspondent Leila Deeb said in a Tuesday dispatch reaching Jordan on Wednesday. She also said the air raids remained intensive Tuesday.

Arnett said Iraqi authorities were reviewing Western news reports but had censored little.

Beyond northern Saudi Arabia's remote desert frontier, more than a half-million Iraqi troops are in position in Kuwait and southern Iraq, facing a growing army of hundreds of thousands of American, Saudi, British and other allied tanks and infantrymen.

The allies have almost 3,000 tanks at or converging on the front lines, facing off against some 4,200 Iraqi tanks in Kuwait and southern Iraq.

The allied army is deployed along the 130-mile Saudi-Kuwaiti border and farther west, along the Iraqi-Saudi border, where tanks of the desert-trained 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment — from Fort Bliss, Texas — are believed to be conducting reconnaissance and guarding the allied force's western flank.

Wednesday's first report of a ground action came from the Iranian news media, which said Iraq reported its forces had attacked enemy troops in Saudi territory and captured allied prisoners.

Later, apparently reporting on the same firefight, the U.S. command reported that 3rd Armored Cavalry troopers were manning an observation post near the Saudi-Iraqi border late Tuesday when they came under small-arms fire from an Iraqi patrol and returned fire.

Two Americans were slightly wounded and returned to duty after treatment, and six Iraqis were captured, the command said. It denied that any Americans had been captured.

American armored units continued maneuvering into place along the frontier Wednesday after days of rain and drizzle that turned desert-dry areas into small lakes and created sinkholes — "sabhahs" — that can bog down a tank.

Commanders have begun to slow the pace of combat exercises at the front lines so soldiers can be rested and equipment put in good shape for what could be a long ground battle.

A ground offensive is not expected until February at the earliest.

Associated Press

President Bush gestures during a speech to the Reserve Officers Association in Washington Wednesday evening. Bush said the war against Saddam Hussein was right on schedule. The president received the Minuteman Award from the group prior to the speech.

American tank officers, like Marine Capt. Rob Philon, know it won't be a rollover. Philon's M-60 tanks will have to go up against Iraq's Soviet-made T-72s, whose laser-equipped guns have a longer range than his.

"We'll have to outmaneuver them and not let them get the drop on us," Philon said.

For now the allied troops are content to let U.S. and allied airpower "soften up" Iraqi positions.

In Washington, joint chiefs chairman Gen. Colin Powell told reporters, "Our strategy for dealing with this army is very simple: First we're going to cut it off, then we're going to kill it."

The Iraqi army is "sitting there dug in, waiting to be attacked and attacked it will be," Powell said, adding that the allies are "assembling a fairly sizeable ground force that can finish the job if necessary."

Again Wednesday, bombers pounded the Iraqi port city of Basra, site of the military headquarters for Iraq's defense of Kuwait, the news agency in neighboring Iran reported. The blasts have been shaking the ground in the Iranian city of Khorramshahr, 25 miles away.

The allies have made Iraq's Scud launchers a primary target. But both Powell and Defense Secretary Dick Cheney conceded Wednesday that knocking out the elusive launch vehicles was proving more difficult than anticipated.

The Iraqi missile attacks on Israel are a bid by President Saddam Hussein to draw the Israelis into the gulf war, a development that might lead some of Israel's traditional Arab enemies to abandon the anti-Iraq alliance.

Only a fraction of the Scuds fired have hit home, but Iraqi radio Wednesday boasted of the weapon's prowess, declaring that they "have the protection of God."

Allied planes have flown some 12,000 sorties thus far, the U.S. command said. Allied airpower has damaged almost all main Iraqi military airfields, has dislocated the Iraqi air force, and is "degrading" Iraq's command-and-control system, said Maj. Gen. Alex Harley, deputy operations chief for British defense forces.

Decline

Although declining enrollment is part of a nation-wide trend, the Midwest is being hit more severely, Collins said. Iowa's percent decline in high school graduates is the second highest in the nation, according to Nathan.

The admissions department is taking strides to reverse the decline, and Nathan said the university administration is working to change the projected enrollment figures by "making the undergraduate experience very attractive to students." He added that the impact of these steps should be apparent by 1992.

Budget

economical next year than they were this year."

Nathan said the regent institutions understood the crisis faced by state legislators and were willing to do their share to solve the problem, but he added he hoped the quality of education at the universities won't be sacrificed.

"There is a real problem this year and every state agency is having to work with a flat budget. We've got to do our share — we're not happy with it — but it's got to be done," Nathan said.

Both Nathan and Vohs said funding may be delayed for the $18 million addition to the UI College of Pharmacy, but the $1.3 million renovation at MacLean Hall will be completed through short-term borrowing.

Open bidding on the pharmacy addition is slated to begin this April, with completion of the project in spring or summer of 1993.

UI plans for a new business building will not be affected because its funding was included in a finance package approved in a previous budget.

Nathan said it was premature to project what would happen with faculty salaries at the institutions because the process of salary annualization had not been completed.

"You've got to remember that these are the governor's recommendations which will be debated by the legislature, so it's anybody's guess of what will happen,"

Nathan said. "But I can worry."

"It's our intention to protect undergraduate education, even if that means cutting or deferring other projects."

Vohs said managers of programs should realize they won't see the large increases this year like they saw last year, adding it would be prudent for them to begin "tightening their belts" to help in the year ahead.

But Nathan said the UI was not a stranger to strained budgets and said it would comply once again.

"The university has tightened its belt in recent years and we'll have to do more belt tightening. We'll do more belt tightening."

Patriots destroy missiles over Israel

Officials confident with anti-missile system after earlier disappointment

By Larry Thorson
The Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — After a glaring failure the day before, U.S. Patriot missiles destroyed an Iraqi Scud rocket Wednesday night that was fired at the Haifa area in northern Israel, the army reported. It was the fourth Iraqi missile attack on Israel in five days. On Tuesday, Patriots hit an Iraqi Scud but failed to detonate the warhead, which blasted the Tel Aviv suburb of Ramat Gan, wounding at least 70 people. The army said three elderly people died of heart attacks. Israeli commanders said Tuesday they still had confidence in the U.S.-supplied anti-missile system, and two Patriot rockets passed the test about 26 hours later. "Tonight, to our great satisfaction, the Patriot battery managed to destroy a Scud missile and avoid a hit in Israel," said Defense Ministry spokesman Danny Naveh. Air raid sirens wailed all over Israel at about 10:05 p.m. (3:05 p.m. EST) Wednesday and Israelis were told to go to sealed rooms wearing gas masks. People in the Haifa area, 55 miles north of Tel Aviv, heard the explosions of Patriots being fired. A resident identified only as Itzhik said on Israel radio he saw a bright yellow flash in the sky, probably as a Patriot hit a Scud, "and a terrific explosion over our heads." "My wife got hysterical," said Yossi Levi, another resident. "She grabbed the two kids and hugged them, and we all shook with fear." Levi said the windows, shutters and window frames of his 13-story apartment block were blown into the street by the concussion. Military censorship prevented a more exact location of the action. Foreign reporters who toured a muddy Patriot base in the Tel Aviv area saw evidence of Tuesday night's action in a blackened container from which one of the $700,000 missiles had been launched in vain. Brig. Gen. Uri Ram, head of the Israeli air defenses, said U.S. and Israeli officers would jointly investigate the initial failure of the Patriots, which had appeared completely successful in thwarting Iraqi Scud attacks on Saudi Arabia. When the two Patriot batteries were rushed to Israel after the first two Iraqi missile barrages, U.S. officials said American soldiers were manning them. Ram said the Patriot battery that attacked the Scud on Tuesday, however, was "manned and commanded" by Israelis with Americans in a support role. A battery consists of four launchers, each with four tubes to fire missiles, and one radar unit. Two Patriot batteries, with American crews, were flown to Israel after the first two Scud strikes wounded 29 people. The large number of casualties Tuesday increased pressure on the government to retaliate.

Two Israeli soldiers look over the devastation caused by an Iraqi-fired Scud missile in the Tel Aviv area yesterday. Israeli officials met to discuss the possible retaliation late yesterday.

Utah Senate clears toughest anti-abortion law in U.S.

By Peg McEntee
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Senate on Wednesday passed a tough anti-abortion bill that the governor promises to sign despite a legal battle promised by abortion rights advocates. The Senate voted 23-5 in favor of the bill which would outlaw most abortions in Utah. The legislation goes to the House Health Committee today and the full House probably by Friday. The bill was expected to win House passage. Seventy percent of Utah residents and 90 percent of the 104 state lawmakers belong to the Mormon Church which considers abortion a grievous sin except in the most dire medical circumstances. Majority Whip Lane Beattie said the bill "has a great deal of interest to the unborn." "At what time does the unborn child have rights?" he asked. But Sen. Karen Shepherd, one of the five dissenting Democrats in the Republican-dominated Senate, said the law would cost the state millions of dollars. "I know many of you feel no cost is too great," she said. "But it is a process that will be out of our control very quickly. I fear Utah will pay in terms of the Olympics, tourism and conventions and in human lives and suffering." If the measure passes, Utah would likely become the first state this year to outlaw most elective abortions. Gov. Norm Bangerter confirmed in a letter to Republican sponsor LeRay McAllister, who was absent for Wednesday's vote, that he will sign the bill immediately. "It's time to get this legislation before the courts so we can receive some definitive information as to what the state can do to more fully protect the sanctity and dignity of life," wrote Bangerter, a Republican who will step down in 1992. Susanne Millsaps, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League's Utah chapter, said the bill's quick passage was "distressing but not surprising."

Soviets persist in Baltic crackdown

By John Daniszewski
The Associated Press

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. — Soviet soldiers seized the central paper and dye warehouse in the Lithuanian capital Wednesday, despite a pledge by President Mikhail Gorbachev to restore peace in the Baltic republics.

"This is simply an attempt to hamper the press in Lithuania and certainly will increase the tension," Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis told a news conference.

Landsbergis said a telegram, which had been approved by the republic's parliament, was sent to Gorbachev saying the Soviet leader should order the withdrawal of all Soviet troops occupying buildings in Lithuania.

Gorbachev told the nation Tuesday that his main task was to achieve calm in the Baltics. But he also called on the republics to abide by the Soviet constitution.

The Lithuanian parliament's press office said two civilians who claimed to represent the Lithuanian Communist Party announced they were taking control when they arrived at the warehouse with soldiers at 1 p.m. Wednesday.

About 20 Interior Ministry soldiers with automatic weapons drove up in five jeeps and took up positions throughout the warehouse.

There were just a few workers in the warehouse who offered no resistance said Lithuanian government spokesman Audrius Azubalis.

He said the building had about 37 tons of paper inside, but added that the seizure was unlikely to have a serious effect on news because most independent publications have their own supplies.

The Soviet military already controls Press House, the main printing plant in Vilnius. A unit of the so-called "black beret" troops of the Soviet Interior Ministry last weekend seized a similar plant in the Latvian capital, Riga.

Nikolai Gribanov, a member of the Lithuanian Communist Party's Central Committee, later said the armed forces of the Soviet Interior Ministry were carrying out a resolution of the Soviet Council of Ministers on the protection of Communist Party property.

In Stockholm, Sweden's vice foreign minister said Wednesday he is going to the Baltics to "show solidarity" with their independence movements. Speaking at a news conference, Pierre Schori said he will meet with Baltic leaders, including some pro-Moscow.

Commuters try to make their way through AIDS protesters at New York's Grand Central Terminal during rush hour yesterday. Hundreds of protesters marched through the city to protest government spending on war and not health.

AIDS activists begin day of disobedience

By Rayner Pike
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hundreds of AIDS activists marched through the city Wednesday, clogging Grand Central Terminal at the evening rush to protest government policies they said favored spending for war over spending for health.

The demonstrators chanted outside the New York Stock Exchange during the morning and left empty coffins symbolizing the deadline of AIDS at City Hall before descending on the train station.

It was the second day of demonstrations planned by the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power — ACT UP. Some protesters were arrested for disorderly conduct or trespass.

Hundreds of protesters sat on the floor at Grand Central, blocking commuter passage to some train platforms. Some activists emptied racks of train schedules and tossed them in the air.

"Money for AIDS, Not for War" read a sign attached to a cluster of balloons that floated to the ornate ceiling of the terminal. The protesters created a cacophony of whistles, screams and applause, at one point chanting, "Thousands dead, where's George?"

Earlier, three marchers were arrested when they tried to deliver a container they said included used hypodermic needles to the city health commissioner. There were no immediate reports of arrests at Grand Central.

Elsewhere, more than 50 protesters capped an ACT UP march and rally in downtown Portland, Maine, by blocking traffic for several minutes before police moved in to make arrests on charges of obstructing a public way.

The Maine protesters carried tombstone-shaped placards and pushed homemade coffins into the street while protesting what they said was government apathy to the growing number of deaths from AIDS. Speakers said they hoped to shift the public's attention from the fighting in the Persian Gulf to the war against AIDS.

Tuesday night in New York, 10 people from ACT UP were taken into police custody after invading the broadcast studios of CBS and PBS and disrupting the start of the networks' main evening news broadcasts. Four other protesters were stopped and turned over to police when they tried to get into NBC's studios.

Around midnight, six women and two men from ACT UP were arrested for locking themselves inside the gate of St. Paul's cemetery, a Revolutionary-era site. They displayed banners saying "Women Die of AIDS" and "Do You Care?"

Wednesday morning, a crowd estimated by police at 700 chanted outside the New York Stock Exchange, then went on a two-hour march through the Wall Street.

Three of the acts in the list have been booked for upcoming shows at Carver-Hawkeye Arena: The Replacements (Feb. 5), Poison (Feb. 8) and Paul Simon (Feb. 20). Tickets for the Replacements and Poison are now on sale; tickets for Paul Simon can currently be purchased with an American Express Gold Card, and will go on general sale Saturday, Jan. 26. All tickets are available at the University Box Office or at Ticketmaster outlets.

AC/DC gives its side

The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Officials banned festival seating at Salt Palace while they investigate the fatal trampling of three young fans at an AC-DC concert.

The heavy metal band, meanwhile, denied reports it kept playing despite calls to stop as the crowd in front of the stage crushed forward during Friday night's show.

Salt Lake County and Spectator Management Systems, which operates the county-owned arena, announced Tuesday they would discontinue festival seating until an investigation is completed.

In a statement issued late Tuesday by Atco Records in New York, AC-DC said grief over the deaths "has been compounded by erroneous news reports that the band continued to perform with callous disregard for the safety of the audience."

"Nothing could be further from the truth," the statement said.

"The events of this calamity occurred in a very quick time frame. Once the gravity of the situation was communicated to the band, they immediately discontinued their performance."

Officials said the band paused about 20 minutes into the show, after the injured had been passed hand-to-hand over the crowd to rescue workers. The group finished the show with the arena lights on.

"The decision to conclude the performance was made... in order to maintain calm and order among the thousands of fans who were unaware of what had occurred," the group's statement said.

The attorney for one victim's family said he expects to file a lawsuit in the next two weeks against the concert promoter and Salt Palace management.

Dynasties' riches on display

'Asian Art' exhibit combines Chinese, Japanese artifacts

The Daily Iowan

"Iowa Collects Asian Art," an exhibition of works from the rich and diverse artistic traditions of China and Japan, will be on display Jan. 26-March 24 at the UI Museum of Art.

To mark the opening of the exhibition, Chu-tsing Li, professor emeritus of art history at the University of Kansas, will present a free public lecture on Chinese art at 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 26, in the museum. Li's lecture, which also celebrates the opening of the concurrent exhibition "Wang Fangyu: Contemporary Chinese Calligrapher," will be followed by a free public reception.

In conjunction with the exhibition, the State Room in the Union will be serving a special Chinese theme dinner at a set price and menu, starting at 5 p.m. Jan. 26.

"Iowa Collects Asian Art" surveys the major artistic trends of China and Japan from the Neolithic period to the turn of the 20th century. A total of 58 works will be shown, among them hanging scroll paintings, screens, prints, ceramics, carved objects and textiles.

Also included in the exhibition will be jade snuff bottles, a 16th-century Japanese landscape painting, a colorful Japanese kimono and a Chinese dragon robe depicting a cosmic landscape of waves, mountains and clouds.

Landscapes have served for centuries as both a personal and a philosophical statement for the Chinese scholar/painters, and also for Japanese artists connected to Chinese ideas and ways of life through Buddhism. Several landscapes are in the exhibition, including an anonymous Japanese hanging scroll from the 16th century that illustrates the influence of Chinese culture in Japan.

One particularly notable piece, a tomb figurine of a court lady, represents the standard beautiful woman of China's Tang Dynasty (618-907 A.D.).

The pieces included in this exhibition, such as those from Herbert Hoover's acquisition of Chinese blue-and-white porcelain vases, are selected from 16 private and institutional collections in Iowa. They demonstrate one of the exhibition's broader themes, the history of Iowa's long-standing interest in Asian art and culture.

The Museum of Art will offer several educational programs on Asian art while "Iowa Collects Asian Art" is on display. The museum's regular weekly Perspectives program, presented Wednesdays at 12:30 p.m., will focus on Asian art on Jan. 30 and Feb. 6, 13 and 20.

"East Meets West: A Humanities Symposium" (Feb. 15-16) will explore topics concerning the cultural relationships between East and West. The subjects to be discussed will range from the Jesuits' experiences in China in the 16th century to the films of one of Japan's leading filmmakers, Kenji Mizoguchi. Participants will be faculty members from the UI, Coe College and Iowa State University.

The Museum of Art will also present a performance by the Chusei Koto Society, a group of musicians dedicated to promoting the study and enjoyment of the Japanese koto and koto music, at 2 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 23, in the museum.

During February and early March, all third grade students in the Iowa City area will visit "Iowa Collects Asian Art" as part of the Art teachers from the Iowa City School District, Regina and Willowwind Schools have collaborated with the university to prepare materials for the students' museum visit and to reinforce what they will have learned once they return to their classrooms.

"Iowa Collects Asian Art" was organized by the Blanden Memorial Art Museum in Ft. Dodge and the UI Museum of Art in Iowa City. Margaret Carney Xie, former director of the Blanden Museum, and Jane C. Ju, curator of education at the UI Museum of Art, are co-curators of the exhibition. A fully illustrated catalogue will accompany the exhibition.

The UI Museum of Art is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. The museum is located on North Riverside Drive in Iowa City as part of the Iowa Center for the Arts campus of the UI. Public metered parking is available in lots across Riverside Drive from the museum and adjacent to the Alumni Center, just north of the museum. Admission to the museum, the Asian exhibitions and all associated events is free.

CITY SIDEWALKS

Ice Ice Baby

No one likes to slip and fall on ice-covered sidewalks. Besides the potential for painful injury, there is the humiliation of losing one's balance and composure in front of others. To slip and fall, or indeed even to merely slip and flail about without actually falling, is an indication that one cannot perform that simplest of motions, putting one foot in front of the other. Everyone, it would seem, has a common goal in eliminating this hazard from our lives.

Why then are Iowa City sidewalks, two weeks after the last ice storm, still covered with layers of ice? The situation is especially severe in the residential areas, where roiling, polished rivers of ice cover nearly all of the sidewalks. What was once a pleasant 10-minute walk to and from campus has been transformed into a hellish reconnaissance mission with unpredictable footing at every step. Taking one's eyes off the ground is an invitation to a hairline fracture.

What was once a pleasant 10-minute walk to and from campus has been transformed into a hellish reconnaissance mission, with unpredictable footing at every step.

The sidewalks need to be cleaned, and Iowa City maintenance workers are not going to do it. Legally, at least, sidewalks are not the city's responsibility, but that of whomever lives next to them. The resident needs simply to take a shovel, break up the ice in front of his home and perhaps scatter some salt or gravel. If the resident is infirm, a neighborhood child can surely be employed for a modest sum.

Whatever the cost, it will probably be less expensive than an actionable negligence lawsuit.

OPERATION DESERT STORM

Yellow ribbons

Now is the time to tie yellow ribbons and unfurl Old Glory. There are more than 400,000 American men and women proudly serving in the Middle East in Operation Desert Storm. These people are far from home and facing the uncertainties of war. Seeing protests against the military action must be disheartening. Even though the protests are not directed at those in uniform, they still can have a negative effect on morale.

It is difficult — perhaps impossible — to imagine how it would feel to be in a tent in the Saudi desert, aware that at any moment the orders to attack might be given. To know that some of your closest friends and comrades will be killed; others will be wounded; and still others will be taken prisoner. These are the fates awaiting hundreds, if not thousands, of U.S. servicepeople. Yet these soldiers are prepared to risk their lives for our country.

With patriotism in their hearts, the soldiers try to relax with television. The images are of thousands of people in various cities protesting. Cries of "No blood for oil" and "U.S. out" can only disturb them.

Fortunately, during the past week there also have been several profound displays of support for the military personnel. At the NHL All-Star game and both the AFC and NFC championship games, the fans cheered wildly and waved flags during the playing of the national anthem. These are the kinds of demonstrations members of the armed forces need.

Those who disagree with the use of force must realize that Operation Desert Storm is an irreversible offensive. Whether or not someone supports the war is no longer important. The offensive has started, and it cannot be abandoned. It was not the decision of the soldiers to attack; they are just doing their jobs. For that they should not be criticized.

The U.S. is now fully committed to the liberation of Kuwait. Mindlessly yelling "No blood for oil" is pointless. It is far more courageous to carefully and intelligently explain that, although you may feel that military action was unnecessary, now that it has begun you support the men and women serving in the armed forces. Intelligent disagreement will get more attention than shouting.

So take a few moments each day to display an American flag. If you desire, say a prayer for our men and women in the Persian Gulf. Tie a yellow ribbon on a tree. Pledge your support for the fine servicemen and women who are serving in Operation Desert Storm.

The gulf war press corps corpse

I know. You're just about Wolf Blitzered out on the gulf war. But we in the media have a credo to follow that won't let us neglect to cover the war: Tedi Turnerus, Nielson Ratingus Rex! So below are a couple of the less-reported events of the war.

Just one thing before we get down to brass tacks. Who is going to get a Pulitzer out of this thing? Bernie Shaw and the rest of the Baghdad Hotel slumber party? I think not. Rather, let us honor the 100 pounds of tuna that sacrificed its highly congealed life so that Bernie would have the strength to hold the Sony H-500 night-capable, all-weather, Ripperhawk microphone out the (according to initial reports, although we do speculate at a time like this... oh, what the hell) window.

Or perhaps it should go to our own Ron Steele. He got the scoop of the crisis when he reported from Saudi Arabia the shocking revelation that Lance Cpl. Hunter Ragbrai A.N. Farmers "Loved his mom" and "Sure wished he was home." I will always remember where I was when the Challenger disaster was announced, what I was doing (very pre-natally speaking) when Walter Cronkite said Kennedy was dead, and the lump I felt in my throat when Ron "Cold Blue" Steel reported that Saudia Arabia had "miles and miles of sand." But personal glory and profit never really enter into the minds of the fourth estate, so let us get back to the news at hand:

Several protesters were seen marching in Washington, D.C. Death threats were made against Richard Blystone, and signs were being carried demanding a constitutional amendment banning the use of the word "eerie" in conjunction with the word "calm." Also, the protesters demanded that the phrase "needle in a haystack" be forbidden until the end of time.

The Actors' Guild told the Los Angeles Times that it was running perilously low on old, grumpy guys to play retired generals and admirals on TV.

As striking video of the astounding success of high tech armaments was being shown on national television, the military/industrial complex was seen walking around the Pentagon a lot more erect, if you get me, drift-wise.

Reporters in Saudia Arabia became angered when a close examination of pool video revealed that much of it consisted of electronically altered out-takes from "The Flying Leather-necks."

In a related incident, one of the pool reporters demanded to know if Gen. Schwarzkopf was going to "get off his fat behind" and do something about "this outrage." The general refused to confirm or deny that he was going to get off his fat behind, citing a long-standing policy against discussing future operations.

A calm began descending on Dhahran, Saudia Arabia, early Wednesday morning, but it was shot down by a U.S. Patriot missile. Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams was unable to say if it was eerie or not.

Peter Arnett, the last Western reporter in Baghdad, reported via satellite that Saddam Hussein was actually a swell guy but had simply not been quite himself lately because of what one close adviser described as "a mid-life crisis." The report was cleared by Iraqi censors.

Bush once again revealed his knack for personal diplomacy when he privately told Itshak Shamir that, in return for continued restraint, he would personally billy club any member of the Intafada Shamir didn't like the looks of.

The effort to suppress the mobile Scud missile launchers got a big boost when intelligence sources discovered that they were being hidden in super-hardened, modified Soviet haystacks, disguised as needles.

In perhaps the most tragic development of the war so far, Dan Quayle was reported Missing in Action late Wednesday night (as opposed to Missing in Office). After giving a rousing speech about the brave men and women who were risking their lives for their country, Quayle took off from Norfolk in Air Force Two for a well-deserved rest in his home state. Sadly, Air Force Two was the final approach when it was hit by a stray howitzer shell from the Indiana National Guard artillery/driving range.

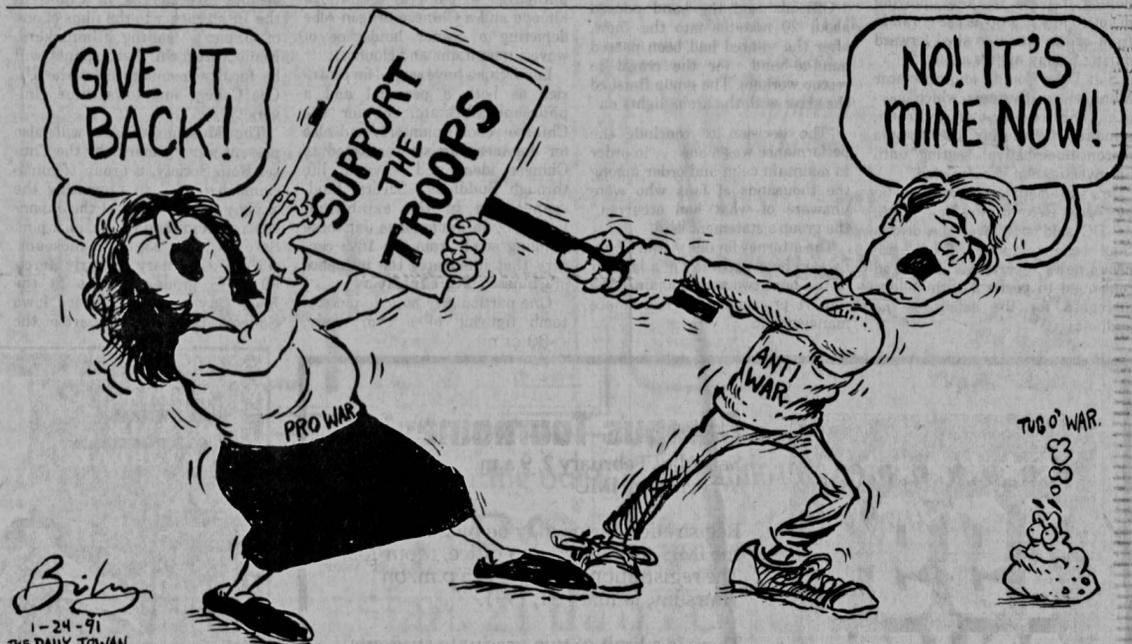

As the Weather Channel continued to report diplomatic flurries, the president of Iraq sent a message via the U.N. Secretary General that he would withdraw from Kuwait in return for guarantees that George Bush would stop calling him "Sade-um." Bush refused the offer after consultation with "Paris" de Cuellar.

There were no injuries to report in Dhahran as Patriot anti-missile missiles intercepted Scud pro-missile missiles. However, in a related event, several sprained ankles were reported at the corporate headquarters of The Raytheon Company, makers of the Patriot. Early reports tell of a scene where senior vice-presidents watching CNN in the executive lounge all spontaneously rose to their feet, held hands and began jumping up and down shouting, "It works? IT WORKS. IT WORKS. Holy soarin' stock prices, that piece of electronic sheep dip works!"

George Bush vehemently denied the Radio Baghdad report that he is about to initiate a ground war to impress Jodie Foster.

The National Security Council, in an official report to the president, suggested the U.S. should follow the Iraqi example and nationalize all electronic media. The report cited evidence that seemed to suggest that while the U.S. media was catching up in the area of admirable reporting, it still had a little catching up to do.

Mitch Martin's column appears Thursdays on the Viewpoints page.

Tempering emotions in the gulf war

One of the obnoxious qualities of many of those who support the gulf war is their terming Saddam Hussein irrational. In the first instance, that Americans are more comfortable describing an enemy in therapeutic categories rather than ethical categories tells us something about our country, but I'm not sure exactly what.

More importantly, however, is that we recognize our mistake with respect to Hussein in order to avoid wrong strategy in prosecuting the war.

Similar mistakes have been made throughout history. For example, Yale professor Donald Kagan writes that the great early Athenian statesman Pericles wrongly assumed the rationality of his military opponents.

As a recent reviewer characterized Keegan's argument: "Pericles intended his actions and gestures to go exactly as far as they did go, and to stop at the planned point; and the other side was expected to respond in the same spirit, seeing that he meant to be firm, not to force a showdown. Kagan thinks the failure of this policy shows that Pericles underrated the role of emotion and the irrational in such transactions: moves that were meant to seem firm were interpreted as aggressive."

Pericles' announced strategy for military prosecution was, what is termed in game theory, a tit-for-tat strategy. This is also George Bush's announced strategy. That is, you respond to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait by announcing that you will force Hussein from Kuwait. Tit-for-tat. (There was, to be sure, a serious mistake made by the administration in not announcing this policy with all firmness prior to the Iraqi invasion.) Now the sort of pleasing quality about tit-for-tat strategies is that in certain games (most notably the prisoners' dilemma), the strategy may evolve into a cooperative result to the conflict: Neither party to the dispute wants to accept the costs of open conflict.

Both Pericles and Bush believed that tit-for-tat, providing the underlying threat was credible, would deter war. They both seemed to be earnestly surprised when it didn't. The temptation of the tit-for-tat player is to ascribe irrationality to the opponent who isn't playing the game correctly.

And if the game truly were tit-for-tat, that ascription of irrationality would be correct. But the hidden assumption here is that the opponent perceives a game where a credible tit-for-tat strategy can evolve into cooperation.

If an opponent believes that he's playing, say, a game of chicken, then a different outcome may result in the first instance. The game is most familiar from all those movies about teen-agers barreling their cars toward each other; the point of the game is to force the other person to swerve.

As UI political scientist John Conybeare points out in his book on trade wars, when a person playing chicken faces a person playing tit-for-tat, then the first player will call the bluff and conflict will break out. Note that neither player is irrational. Rather, they have different perceptions about what game they're playing.

To say that Hussein or Pericles' opponents are irrational since they did not respond correctly to a tit-for-tat strategy wrongly ascribes an objectivity to the game that Bush and Pericles think that they are playing.

This doesn't mean that Bush (and Pericles) made a mistake in going to war: One way to win all future games of chicken is not to swerve once or twice and take the impacts. In the case of a chicken game, the only way to deter the calling of false bluffs (and Hussein did call a false bluff) is to develop a reputation for not swerving.

To be fair to Bush, he never termed Hussein irrational, although he has flirted with it — evidenced at least by Bush's habit of talking of "Saddam"; that is, employing Hussein's first name, as one would talk to a child. Nonetheless, the rhetoric of "miscalculation" assumes that your opponent is rational.

But even if Bush has always assumed Hussein's rationality, a large segment of our nation does talk of Hussein's irrationality. This has some disturbing policy implications if it is to be translated into a political mood as to how to prosecute the war.

UI political scientist Jim Lindsay observed to me that the Americans don't like practical wars; that the public likes to understand foreign policy in black and white moral categories (and this applies to those both for and against the war).

This urge, combined with the idea of Hussein's irrationality creates, Lindsay says, a "tendency to want to pulverize Iraq."

This would be a serious mistake. A key central to the ultimate success of this war is winning the peace after the conflict is over. Lindsay and many other observers fear that taking Hussein out of the picture and destroying Iraq completely would create a power vacuum in the gulf, thus contributing to the instability endemic to the region.

Syria, Iran and Iraq are the three belligerent powers in the gulf. None have any love lost for the other. The virtual destruction of Iran's military might have invited the current Iraqi aggression. Destroying Iraq might do little more than to invite Syria to attempt the same gambit.

Military and political victory in this instance does not necessarily mean that America takes out Hussein. The United States went into the gulf with specific objectives, including reestablishing a rough military equivalence between Iraq and her belligerent neighbors. That is a wise and prudent policy. We should be wary of letting our emotions overrule our prudence.

Jim Rogers' column appears Thursdays on the Viewpoints page.

Northern front emotions running high

By Mort Rosenblum

NEAR THE IRAQI BORDER, Saudi Arabia — In a gas line such as this desert has never seen, assault helicopters swarm in like black death, filling up for a ground war their crews expect any day.

At a highway cloverleaf, American MPs hunker down behind a concrete block barrier painted, "Pink Floyd, The Wall," waiting for their piece of the war.

In a truckstop curry joint, two British artillerymen, "Desert Rats," shake their heads in grim anticipation of a weeks-long onslaught — predict will be far worse than is widely believed.

By a roadside phone booth, Omani soldiers in faded combat turbans wait cheerfully to ring up their families, hopeful that their next call — if Allah wishes — will be made from liberated Kuwait City.

Desert Storm is getting ready to break, and all concerned are convinced that a hard rain is going to fall.

On the surface, the mood is mostly positive, even relaxed.

Full alert conditions did not stop a Bedouin from threading his pickup load of confused sheep beneath the revolving blades of U.S. Army helicopters awaiting fuel on an abandoned stretch of tarmac.

Capt. Robert Belletier of the U.S. First Cavalry Division climbed out of a Blackhawk helicopter as it settled down to a rumbling idle, in line with 12 Cobras, Apaches and little Bell choppers.

"We're all set," said Belletier, a southerner from Atlanta with an easy laugh. "We hear about all those Scuds in Dhahran, and we're happy to be up north where it's safe."

But when pressed to reflect on what might lie ahead in the next few weeks, his face took on that half-somber, half-quizzical look so common among allied troops on the northern frontier.

Three MPs from the 14th Military Police Brigade had that look as they watched the main road north from Dhahran to Kuwait in their machine-gun mounted humvee, the Army's newfangled version of the jeep.

"It's gonna take longer than we thought," said Cpl. Dave Hoernle, of Harrisburg, Pa., who ended up in the desert from his former base in Stuttgart, Germany, where his wife is also an MP.

"Hopefully it will be done by June, but I doubt it," he said. Asked his age, he replied with a nervous chuckle, "I'm 24, hoping to be 25."

Pfc. Dean Smith of Middleburgh, N.Y., added, "For myself, I figure I'll be here at least to December. I don't want to be disappointed."

Two British artillerymen preferred to speak frankly rather than give their names. One, a veteran non-commissioned officer who had learned lessons the hard way, had no illusions.

"It will take five weeks at the least, from the word 'go,' and it will be bloody difficult," he said. "A bloke's dug in with his artillery, he's going to fight you, isn't he?"

He described U.S. land forces as hampered by too many overconfident young troops who had little idea of what they faced.

"I don't mean to be impolite about the Americans, but they're not ready," he said. "Too many aren't serious."

Cleanup of S&Ls will require more money

By Dave Skidmore
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady asked Congress on Wednesday for an open-ended appropriation to continue the government's costly cleanup of the savings and loan industry. But Democrats refused, as one put it, to "just sign off on a blank check."

Republicans on the Senate Banking Committee said forcing the Bush administration to repeatedly ask for more money would disrupt the program. "I believe in short leashes," said Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah. "But I don't believe in choking the animal to death, and that's exactly what we've been doing."

The Treasury secretary, who serves as chairman of a panel overseeing the Resolution Trust Corp., warned the bailout agency's rescue program would shut down by March 1 unless more money is provided.

The administration wants to spend $77 billion from March through September to close or sell 225 insolvent S&Ls. Brady said $30

"I believe in short leashes . . . But I don't believe in choking the animal to death . . ."

Sen. Jake Garn

billion would cover the institutions' losses. The rest would be borrowed short-term and repaid as the government sells loans, real estate, and other assets inherited from the failed thrifts.

"The fact is that this is not a discretionary matter. If we do not act, depositors will be left hanging," Brady said.

He asked for "the permanent funding necessary to get the whole job done," but said he would work with Congress to enact a more limited appropriation.

"I am afraid that if Congress imposes on itself the burden of repeated votes on funding, the result will be a start and stop cleanup process that produces further delays, substantial additional costs to taxpayers, and confusion and fear in the minds of depositors," he said.

Brady had asked for more bailout money before Congress adjourned last October, but lawmakers in the House balked at such a vote before the November election.

He estimated the delay has driven up rescue costs by $250 million to $300 million and said another three-month delay would cost taxpayers an additional $750 million to $850 million.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., chairman of the banking panel, said he would move swiftly to provide more money and his aides indicated a committee vote could occur as soon as next week.

However, Riegle said his bill would provide interim financing.

U.S. blacks question gulf war

By Rick Hampson
The Associated Press

A black American, polls show, is less likely than a white American to support the war in the Persian Gulf, but more likely to be fighting in it — a paradox that burdens the black community's response to the conflict.

The war's critics say an "economic draft" forced disproportionate numbers of young blacks into the all-volunteer military. Supporters point with pride to Army Gen. Colin Powell and the many other blacks in the military.

As a group, "black people are caught on the horns of a dilemma," says Andrew Cooper, publisher of The City Sun, a black weekly in New York City.

Blacks are leading protests in church and on campus; many turned King Day ceremonies this year into peace rallies.

"We support the troops," said the Rev. Herbert Daughtry, a civil rights activist who attended a peace rally Monday at the United Nations. "That's why we want them home."

Recent polls indicate that slightly less than half of blacks support the decision to attack Iraq, compared to more than three-quarters of whites. And a USA Today poll found that only 21 percent of blacks said they were angered by anti-war protests, compared to 56 percent of whites.

Although less than 13 percent of the U.S. population is black, blacks account for 21 percent of all U.S. military personnel in all branches. About a third of the Army forces in the Persian Gulf are black and almost half of U.S. servicewomen in the gulf are black.

Anti-war blacks say these disproportionate ratios are the result of social and economic injustices at home that forced blacks who wanted job skills or college funds to volunteer for the military. The war, they add, will eat up money and energy that could correct the conditions that forced blacks to enlist in the first place.

They point to young blacks like Ricky Williams of Seattle, who joined the Army after high school and was trained as a medic. But when he returned home the best job he could find was stocking shelves; he re-enlisted. He's now in the gulf region.

"Either way, it's a battle for black kids. If it's not in Saudi Arabia, it's here on the streets," said his father, Johnnie Williams.

Ricky Williams' re-enlistment may not have been a bad decision.

A study published last year in the Journal of the American Medical Association concluded that during peacetime, black men in uniform were safer than their civilian counterparts, who were five times more likely to die from disease and 12 times more likely to be homicide victims.

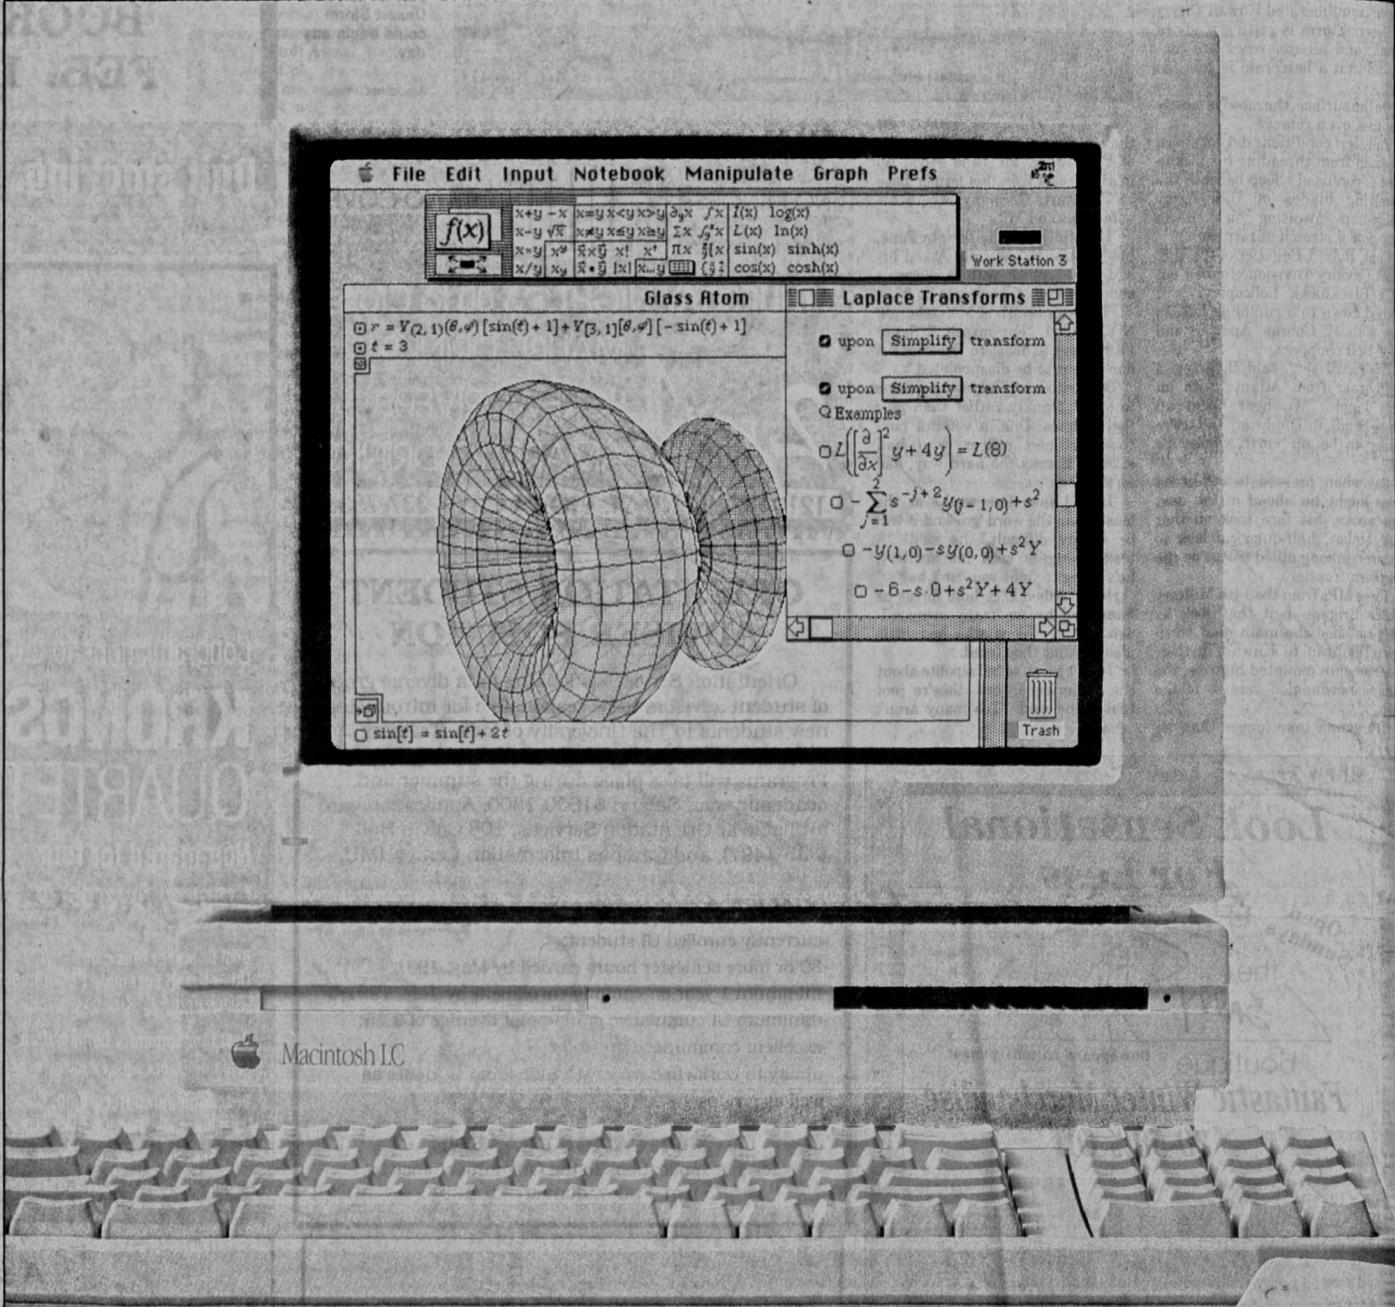

Black leaders against the war include the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who calls it "the president's war" and George Bush "the commander in chief who vetoed the (1990) civil rights bill"; Eleanor Holmes Norton, the District of Columbia's congressional delegate, who said if her son signed up for service in the gulf she'd take him to a psychiatrist; and former Atlanta Mayor Andrew Young, who has called for a cease-fire.

Black veterans have been conspicuous mostly for their opposition to the war. Many fought in Vietnam and remember that "the folks who cheered you on were nowhere to be found when you got home," according to Job Mashariki, director of Black Veterans for Social Justice.

All but one of the 25 voting members of the Congressional Black Caucus voted against the House war resolution Jan. 12 which passed 250-183. And opposition has extended from entertainers such as Spike Lee and Harry Belafonte to Martin Luther King's wife, daughter and son.

Martin Luther King III, a commissioner in Fulton County, Ga., has urged black soldiers in the gulf to refuse to fight and say, "This is not my war."

Apple introduces the Macintosh LC—an affordable color Macintosh system that's perfect for students.

If you thought that finding a color Macintosh® system you could afford was just a dream, then the new, affordable Macintosh LC is a dream come true.

The Macintosh LC is rich in color. Unlike many computers that can display only 16 colors at once, the Macintosh LC expands your palette to 256 colors. It also comes with a microphone and new sound-input technology that lets you personalize your work by adding voice or other sounds.

Like every Macintosh computer, the LC is easy to set up and easy to master. And it runs thousands of available applications that all work in the same, consistent way—so once you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. The Macintosh LC even lets you share information with someone who uses a different type of computer—thanks to the versatile Apple® SuperDrive™, which can read from and write to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS/2, and Apple II floppy disks.

Take a look at the Macintosh LC and see what it gives you. Then pinch yourself. It's better than a dream—it's a Macintosh.

Other McEnroe makes semis Patrick among men's elite at Australian

By Steve Wilstein
The Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Patrick McEnroe overcame a pulled back muscle and a tenacious Italian to become the most improbable semifinalist at the Australian Open Wednesday.

McEnroe, all his life just John's baby brother, became his own man with a gutsy, classy show and a glorious run of luck — seven net cords in the last two sets — in the most dramatic match of this Grand Slam event.

Tears trickled down his cheeks and the crowd rose in a loud, sustained ovation when McEnroe, his torso wrapped in a brace, ended a 3½ hour thriller by beating Italy's Cristiano Caratti 7-6 (7-2), 6-3, 4-6, 4-6, 6-2.

Czechoslovakia's Jana Novotna, coming into her own, too, as she blossoms as a singles player, reached the women's final Thursday by beating Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 6-2, 6-4.

Novotna, the 10th seed, played brilliantly and aggressively at the net in upsetting three-time defending champion Steffi Graf in the quarters and No. 8 Zina Garrison in the fourth round. But against the No. 6 Sanchez Vicario, Novotna stayed back at the baseline and merely outlasted the error-prone Spaniard in a sloppy groundstroke match.

Barely an hour into the McEnroe-Caratti match Wednesday night, the New Yorker felt a shot of pain on the left side of his back while serving in the fourth game of the second set. He won that game to go up 3-1, then called a 3-minute injury timeout during the changeover after Caratti held.

A trainer massaged McEnroe and snapped a corset around his back. And in that condition, McEnroe played on, rubbing and clutching his side but never quitting.

Ranked a lowly No. 114, McEnroe isn't at the same level with No. 1 Stefan Edberg, No. 2 Boris Becker or No. 3 Ivan Lendl, but he's in the semis with them and no one is taking him lightly.

"It's unbelievable company to be in," McEnroe said.

"It sounds incredible," Becker said when learning he'd next play McEnroe. "I think immediately of the Great McEnroe."

The Great One, thrown out of a fourth-round match for misconduct last year, stayed away this year with a strained shoulder. Patrick came instead, and in his second Grand Slam tournament matched his brother's best here, a semifinal in 1983.

"He has shown he can play great tennis under pressure," Becker said.

Becker, though, may be far beyond McEnroe's reach at this point after playing nearly perfectly in beating tough, 10th-seeded Guy Forget 6-2, 7-6 (7-2), 6-3.

"He would have killed even Ivan or Stefan playing like this today," Forget said. "When he serves like this, and he goes for so many shots and he makes them, there's not much you can do."

Becker acknowledged that he was in top form against Forget, but added, "The only problem is I don't play like that every day."

Waiting for the winner of that match will be the survivor of Lendl-Edberg, a rematch of last year's finalists. Lendl beat Goran Prpic 6-0, 7-6 (7-1), 7-6 (7-2) in the quarters, and Edberg beat Jaime Yzaga 6-2, 6-3, 6-2.

No matter what happens, it will be hard to beat the drama of McEnroe's victory over Caratti. What it lacked in skill, it made up in spirit, as the two played their hearts out.

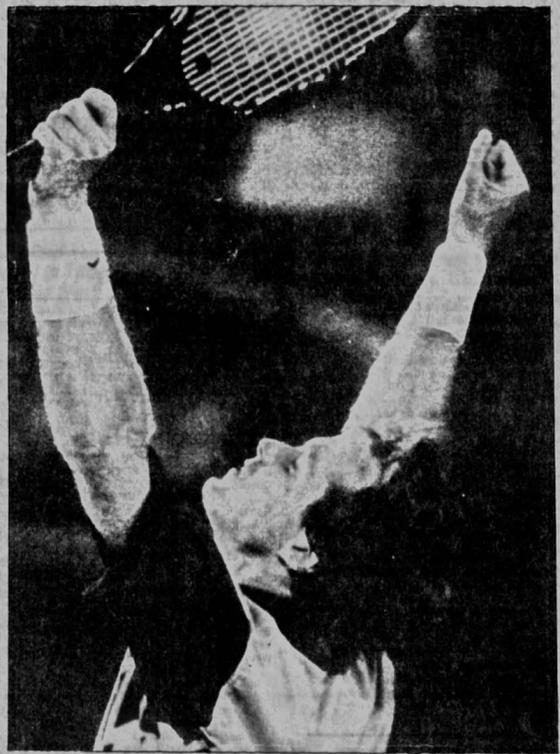

Caratti also played in pain, with a strained left buttock, but he kept it a secret until the match was over. He said the injury slowed him going to the net, but McEnroe said, "He looked pretty quick to me."

Caratti, a 20-year-old ranked No. 101, had more flair but looked less controlled on court than the 24-year-old McEnroe, a former star at NCAA champion Stanford.

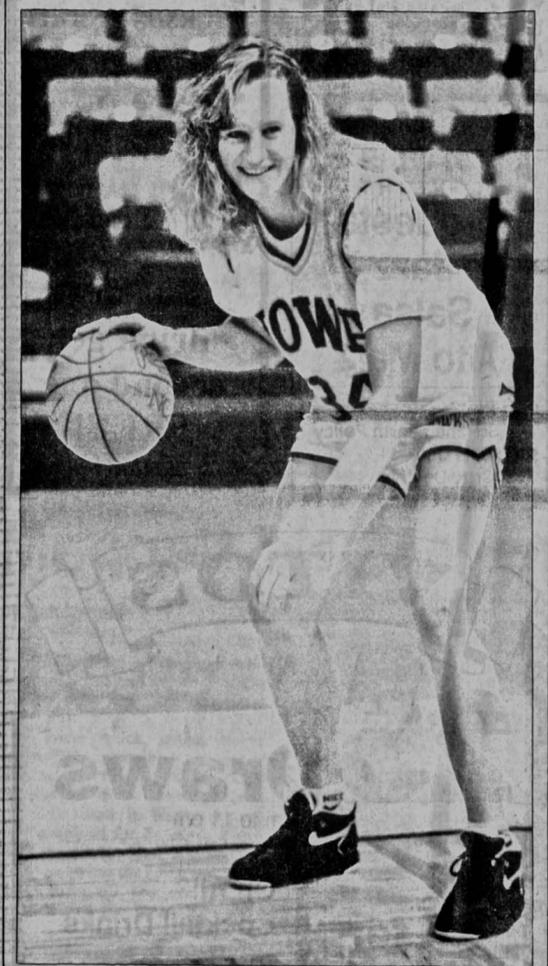

McEnroe's shirt drooped sloppily over his shorts, and the only thing colorful about him was the neon green trim of his sneakers. He didn't wear a red bandanna or paint his face with multicolored sunscreens like John. There was no need in this match, played under a closed retractable roof because of the threat of rain.

After a break apiece in the first set, McEnroe asserted himself in the tiebreaker, attacking the net and serving with greater authority. Two service winners, a two-fisted return crosscourt past Caratti and another service

Waterloo native Molly Tideback is ready to get on the Carver-Hawkeye court after a year on the sidelines.

Tideback back home for dream come true

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

When Molly Tideback finally takes the floor of Carver-Hawkeye Arena Friday night as a member of the Iowa women's basketball team, it will be a dream come true — literally.

Tideback, a transfer from UCLA who became eligible to play for Iowa last week, will be playing her first game in front of the home fans when the Hawkeyes face Minnesota in a 7:30 p.m. Big Ten tilt Friday in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The 6-foot-3 center has been thinking about her home debut a lot lately. And not just in her waking hours.

"The other night I had a dream that I came out in the starting lineup, and we were in the Arena," Tideback said. "This dream was so real. They called my name, and I hit everyone's hands and saw everyone's face."

"I went over, shook one of the (opposing) coaches hands and came back and hit hands with my teammates. It was weird because it was so real. I'm hoping that's the future and that it will happen."

In Friday's game, she is expected to be a big contributor off the bench both for that game and for the rest of the season.

According to Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer, Tideback's presence and her enthusiasm will make her teammates better.

"She gives us some dimension," Stringer said. "She's an outside shooter and she's a strong player. It just means that people like Toni (Foster) and Drea (Andrea Harmon) will attack even more because they will play with no fear of fouls."

"We can seriously get up and down the floor, we can seriously press, we can run, we can do the things we want to do and the inside people can challenge a little more. Anytime you bring a quality player to a new position, it lightens the load off of the other people. It's going to be a big plus."

Tideback said her goal is to help the team win — whatever it takes.

Hawks vow they won't overlook Badgers

By Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

When the Iowa Hawkeyes invade the University of Wisconsin's Fieldhouse tonight, it doesn't figure to be much of a test for Coach Dan Gable's 16-0-1 squad.

But since the Hawkeyes don't have to look too far back in time to know what happened the last time they overlooked an opponent, it's almost certain Iowa won't make the same mistake twice.

The Hawkeyes are coming off a resounding 25-9 victory over Iowa State in Ames last Sunday, in which they claimed the first seven bouts of the meet. The victory was a key one for Iowa, which is trying to show Gable that the team that tied Penn State 19-19 two weeks ago (after pummeling the Nittany Lions 32-6 a month before) was not the real Hawkeye contingent.

After the victory over the Cyclones, Gable said he was pleased with the performances of most of his wrestlers. But he also conceded that with the Big Ten and National Championship meets less than two months away, the Hawkeyes need to be readier than ever — and that includes tonight's meeting with the Badgers.

"We're going to have to be ready to go because you're not going to get too many calls up there," Gable said. "There's some key matches that I want my kids to be ready for, to make them improve."

Gable was referring in particular to 177-pounder Bart Chelavik and heavyweight John Oostendorp. Ironically, Gable benched the two against the Cyclones, saying he didn't think either was prepared, physically or mentally, to step onto the mat.

Chelavik, who sports a record of 12-4, should draw Wisconsin sophomore Keith Davison as his opponent. Davison was named co-Big Ten Freshman of the Year last year, as he finished fourth at the Big Ten meet and qualified for the national tournament.

As for Oostendorp, the No. 7 heavyweight should face Lee Krueger, the starting nose guard on the Badger football team. Although Krueger had a dismal 4-11-1 mark last year as a freshman, Badger Coach Andy Rein attributed that to Krueger being up against "a lot of experience."

In addition to Davison, Wisconsin is led by three other NCAA qualifiers.

At 118 pounds, Iowa sophomore Chad Zaputil, who is 20-1, will battle senior Badger Charlie Erick, who finished third at the Midlands Open last Dec. 30. Zaputil's only loss thus far came to the nation's top-ranked 118-pounder, Penn State's Jeff Prescott.

Wisconsin also boasts junior Dan Flood at 126 pounds. Flood will go up against top-ranked Hawkeye Terry Brands, who is 26-1. Brands defeated Flood at last year's NCAA meet, en route to winning the national title.

Finally, the best of all the Badgers may be 150-pounder Matt Demaray, the only returning all-American for Rein. Demaray, who is coming off a season in which he took second at the Big Ten meet and seventh at the nationals, will go up against No. 5 Hawkeye Terry Steiner. Steiner is fresh off a 6-5 minor upset of No. 3 Cyclone Torrae Jackson last Sunday.

At 134 pounds, Iowa's only undefeated wrestler (27-0), top-ranked junior Tom Brands, will go for his 100th career win when he faces Wisconsin's Steve Hoffman.

It doesn't appear the Badgers have much of a chance, at least on paper, but will the Hawkeyes execute as expected?

Zaputil, for one, believes they will. "We're looking forward to this," the sophomore said of the mid-week road trip. "It'll be another good match to just improve on things. We should blow them out."

Portland lands new All-Star, Anderson shipped off again

By Bill Barnard
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Walter Davis went to Portland, Drazen Petrovic and Terry Mills moved to New Jersey, and Denver acquired a first-round draft pick and Greg Anderson Wednesday in a three-team NBA deal.

Davis, who has averaged nearly 20 points per game for his 14-year career, joins an already potent guard rotation for the Trail Blazers, the defending Western Conference champions who have the NBA's best record this season. Davis was Denver's No. 3 scorer, averaging 18.7 points in 27 minutes this season.

For Petrovic and Mills, the Nets gave up Anderson, acquired only last week from Milwaukee, and their No. 1 pick in 1992, 1993 or 1994.

"What we have done is satisfy a need for a rebounder and shot-blocker," Nuggets general manager Bernie Bickerstaff said. "Terry Mills is a talented player and has a future in this league, but with Anthony Cook and Joe Wolf performing admirably, he has not been receiving the playing time he needs to allow him to develop."

The Nuggets will get New Jersey's first-round selection in 1992 if it's not one of the first 12 picks. If Denver does not get the pick in 1992, the Nuggets will receive the Nets' 1993 first-rounder, as long as it's not among the first seven.

The Nuggets then will automatically get the Nets' 1994 first-round selection if they didn't get New Jersey's pick in 1992 or 1993.

"This could be a good deal for all three teams," Nets general manager Willis Reed said. "Portland gets a proven veteran who can help them get a ring. Denver gets a good rebounder and shot blocker, and they really wanted a first-round pick in this deal."

Petrovic, a second-year guard from Zagreb, Yugoslavia, has averaged just 4.4 points in 18 games with the Trail Blazers this season.

He became disenchanted with the team after it acquired guard Danny Ainge in the offseason, and at one point was fined for asking to be traded. The fine later was rescinded when he apologized.

Mills, a rookie forward, averaged 7.5 in 17 games for Denver this season. He joined the team after a long contract holdout.

Nets executive vice president Bob Casciola said Petrovic, who was given a one-year contract extension through 1993, is the key to the deal for the Nets.

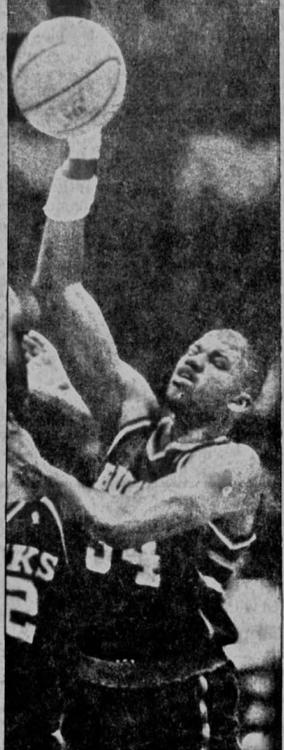

"This is something we've been working on for weeks, even months," Casciola said before the team's game against Chicago on Wednesday night. "We've had a great deal of interest in Petrovic for some time."

"Drazen Petrovic is a very promising player who wants to be the best European in the NBA," Reed said.

To make room for Mills and Petrovic on the roster, Casciola said the Nets placed center Sam Bowie on the injured list with a bruised right shin.

Casciola said Petrovic and Mills would be in uniform Friday against the Los Angeles Lakers.

Anderson, now going to Denver, was acquired from the Bucks for Lester Conner on Jan. 16. He played one game for the Nets and had eight points and six rebounds in 18 minutes against Atlanta on Saturday.

Greg Anderson: Traded for the second time this week.

'Bubble' should be ready for spring football

DI wire services

University of Iowa officials are recommending a plan to repair the Indoor Practice Facility that was severely damaged in an early December snowstorm. Because of time and cost considerations, the UI has received preliminary approval from the executive director of the State Board of Regents to proceed with the repairs.

The project will be presented to the Regents for formal approval at their February meeting.

The project, contingent upon approval by the Regents, will cost an estimated $493,965. Of the total, $313,985 is expected from insurance coverage, while the Iowa Men's Athletic Department Reserves will provide the $100,000 deductible and another $80,000 to increase the height of the inflated roof.

"No tax money or student fees will be used to finance the project," said Ann Rhodes, UI vice president for university relations.

The repairs should be completed by April 1 when the UI football squad is scheduled to begin spring practice.

Another element of the plan reported Tuesday to the Iowa

Board of Athletics is that the UI will initiate an analysis of the facilities needs for Iowa intercollegiate athletics.

In a presentation to the athletics board, Rhodes said the analysis will involve representatives of the athletics board and Iowa athletics directors Bump Elliott and Christine Grant.

A combination of heavy, wet snow and high winds caused the "bubble" to collapse the morning of Dec. 3, tearing the fabric roof and causing extensive damage to a custom-designed lighting system and other equipment.

The facility was constructed in 1985 at a cost of $3.1 million, using athletic funds from ticket sales and television and bowl game revenue.

An immediate consequence of the early December roof damage was that the Rose Bowl-bound Iowa football team left for California Dec. 17, several days earlier than previously planned due to the lack of adequate indoor practice area.

In addition to football, the Indoor Practice Facility was extensively used by Iowa field hockey, softball and baseball squads. The baseball and softball squads are now working out in the Iowa Recreational Building.

winner gave McEnroe a 6-2 lead in the tiebreaker, then he sealed the set with a backhand volley.
 McEnroe remained aggressive until hurting himself in the second set, then relied on his superior serve and Caratti's mistakes. After the injury timeout, McEnroe held service at love with the help of an ace and a backhand volley that ticked the top of the net and fell over at game point for a 4-2 lead.
 McEnroe, gasping in pain, relaxed a little on Caratti's service. After Caratti held, the trainer again rubbed McEnroe's side, trying to relieve the muscle spasms.
 Caratti's errors cost him the final game of the set and gave McEnroe a chance to get out of the match quickly.

But Caratti dug in, tried to make McEnroe run and stretch, and broke him three times to win the third set. On each changeover, McEnroe did exercises to relieve the spasms, rubbed a pain-killing ointment on his back, and readjusted the brace.
 A heavy downpour pounded against the metal roof as the fourth set began, justifying the decision of officials to close the roof at the start of play seven hours earlier.
 The players exchanged breaks in the fifth and sixth games, and Caratti broke again in the ninth game despite a couple of shots that ticked the tape to McEnroe's benefit. At that point, McEnroe seemed to concede the set and prepare for the final battle.
 Serving at 30-15 in the fifth set opener, the usually polite McEnroe turned to a vocal court-side supporter of Caratti's next to the Italian's coach, and said, "How about shutting up for once?" The crowd, partial to McEnroe, cheered, and it was evident he was determined to fight back in this match.

 McEnroe held, then broke Caratti with the help of another net cord, and held again to 3-0 when a backhand hit the net again and dropped over.
 McEnroe continued when Caratti was broken again to 5-1 as another McEnroe backhand caught the tape and trickled over and a Caratti backhand pass attempt hit the net and popped up for McEnroe to put away. When Caratti double-faulted at game point, the match was all but over.

Tideback

"I'm just hoping to make a positive impact," Tideback said, "if it's going to come scoring or if it's going to come from getting people open or if it's going to come from being a positive enforcer and getting everyone riled up. Whatever it is, I'm just going to try to be the best that I can be on the floor for the team and for Coach Stringer."
 She showed signs of that kind of play last Sunday, when she scored eight points and grabbed four rebounds in Iowa's 88-68 victory at Ohio State. But she also played just 13 minutes because of foul trouble and fouled out with six minutes left.
 The Hawkeyes had lost five out of six games before Sunday's win, largely due to injuries to frontcourt starters Trisha Waugh and Felicia Hall. But Tideback said she didn't see herself as a savior for the Iowa team.
 "I just feel that, once I come in, I'm just going to help," Tideback said. "I'm not going to be the miracle-worker, and I don't think they're looking for that, either."
 What the Iowa coaching staff is looking for is the kind of play that made Tideback a four-time all-Iowa selection and the 1989 Pac-10 Freshman of the Year.
 Tideback had a storied high school career. She guided her Waterloo Columbus High School to four Iowa state tournaments, including appearances under both the state's five-player and six-player rules.
 In her first appearance, Tideback became the first freshman in Iowa state history to captain the all-state tournament team. As a senior, she was named Miss Iowa Basketball and was a consensus all-American.
 Stringer recruited Tideback out of high school, but Tideback opted to leave the state of Iowa for the glamor of southern California. She enrolled at UCLA, where she averaged 12.7 points and 4.4 rebounds in 1 1/2 seasons.

But Tideback decided to leave the Bruins after a dispute with the coaching staff following consecutive losses to Notre Dame and Ohio State last December. She transferred to Iowa, where she had to sit out one year because of NCAA transfer rules. She has 2 1/2 years of eligibility remaining.
 The year-long wait was a long and frustrating one for Tideback. It was a wait full of injuries, workouts and cheerleading — but no competition.
 The injuries started before she came to Iowa. She suffered from a hip pointer, two injured knees and a sprained ankle at UCLA. The ankle and one knee never completely healed, so Tideback had arthroscopic surgery on them last summer. She also broke her right wrist in a weightlifting accident shortly after coming to Iowa.
 Tideback said the knee still bothers her somewhat, but the biggest pain was sitting out the year. When Tideback was healthy, she worked out and practiced with the team but could only sit, watch and cheer from the end of the bench during the games.
 "It was like I'd been going through all the dirty stuff, doing all the dirty work and doing all the gritting and griming and the fighting in practice," Tideback said. "And the reward of all that hard work was to play in a game. I hadn't got to do that, so that part was really, really hard. Plus I get so much satisfaction out of playing in front of big crowds."
 She should be satisfied tonight because the Hawkeyes are one of the best women's basketball teams in the country. The next question for Tideback is: Will the Iowa fans remember her?
 "I wonder if they'll remember who I am," Tideback admitted. "It would be nice if they would remember me from high school or from what I used to be, but if they don't, that's fine, too."

despite dominating the first two games of the five-game match. The Hawkeyes finished the trip with a strong showing against Central Missouri State, defeating them in four games.
 Iowa takes a 1-1 match record into its first home contests of the season this Saturday. Northern Illinois and Illinois State will participate in the matches starting a 1 p.m. in the North Gym of the Fieldhouse.
Braves sign new-look catcher Heath
 ATLANTA — Catcher Mike Heath, a new-look free agent set free by the collusion settlement, left the Detroit Tigers on Tuesday and agreed to a $2 million, two-year contract with the Atlanta Braves.
 Heath, who will be 36 on Feb. 5, hit .270 with seven home runs and 38 RBIs in 122 games last season. The 13-year veteran has a .253 lifetime average with 85 homers and 457 RBIs.
 Heath made $500,000 last season and was to have made $900,000 in 1991 under his Detroit contract. Under the new deal with Atlanta, he gets a $100,000 signing bonus and $900,000 in each of the two years.
 The Braves have an option for 1993 at $1.1 million contract and must pay a $100,000 buyout if the option is not exercised. He also can earn $75,000 each season in performance bonuses.
 To make room on their 40-man roster, the Braves assigned outfielder Geronimo Berroa to their Richmond farm club of the Class AAA International League.

Davis expects to miss spring training

DI wire services
CINCINNATI — Reds outfielder Eric Davis expects to be recovered from last year's injuries in time for the April 8 season opener, but not in time for spring training, a little more than a month away.
 "I'm not concerned about being strong in spring training," Davis said. "My goal is to be ready in April, when it counts. I don't have to make anybody's team in spring training."

Klingler undecided on early NFL entry
HOUSTON — In his first days back in class for the spring semester, University of Houston quarterback David Klingler began an intensified study — to determine if he returns to play his senior season for the Cougars.
 Klingler continues to hear and read that he could be the first quarterback drafted by the NFL if he decides by the Feb. 1 deadline to make himself available and pass up his senior season.
 "As of now, nothing has changed," Klingler said. "My parents and I are trying to gather as much good information as we can before I sit down and start to seriously look at things. They said the decision is up to me, and they support me either way."
 Klingler said if he declares for the draft, he may be picked by New England, which has the first selection.
 "There are people at New England who say, 'We're considering you for our first pick,' and there are others who say they are not going to draft a quarterback," Klingler said.
 Klingler hopes to announce his decision this weekend.
 "It might go to the last day," he said.

Men's volleyball set for 1st homestand
 The Iowa men's volleyball team traveled to Kansas City to compete against Central Missouri State University and Park College this past weekend.
 Iowa lost the match against Park College

Sportsbriefs

"Usually, I'm in good shape for spring training, but usually I haven't torn my kidney in three places. Usually, I'm down there a week and a half early."
 Davis injured his kidney while diving for a ball Oct. 20 in the fourth game of the World Series, the game in which Cincinnati completed its sweep of the Oakland Athletics.
 Davis said the lacerated kidney no longer causes him pain, nor do his knees, hips or shoulders, which withstood various injuries throughout the 1990 season.
 "I still have to take it a little bit easy. My shoulder is fine. Rest took care of that," he said. "My knee is responding pretty good. My mobility is coming. I still need to get strong."

Bills coach accounts for no-show

By John F. Bonfatti
The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Buffalo Bills coach Marv Levy insisted on following his routine, even if it clashed with the NFL's long-established Super Bowl routine.

As a result, Levy was on the firing line Wednesday, explaining why he was a no-show for Tuesday's mandatory press conference.

"I didn't think that question would be asked," Levy joked when the first question he was asked at Wednesday's media briefing was why he was absent Tuesday.

It was the first time in the 25 years of the Super Bowl that a coach had missed a mandatory press briefing.

Levy tried to smooth things over, saying, "I apologize to you and to the league for not having been here."

Levy explained that Tuesday is the team's normal game-planning day.

"We usually have Monday to get a running start on it," he said. "But we didn't. Monday was a logistical day, get things packed, have a meeting with the players, set the tone for when you're down here."

As a result, he said, the coaching staff was behind schedule when it began planning game strategy Tuesday.

"I started working on the me plan and I became immersed in it," he said.

"I lost track of time somewhat. By the time I was aware that we were a little late, I felt we were behind in our preparations... and made the decision — maybe it isn't one that was very popular — that our first priority was to prepare for the game."

Usually, he said, his coaching staff begins preparing for a game up to 10 days in advance. "That's fine if you can zero in on a specific team," he said. "And we did have them preparing for the possibility of either the 49ers or the Giants, but it isn't quite the same."

The NFL said Tuesday that Levy's failure to appear at the conference was "a clear breach of club obligations," but said any decision on whether he would be fined wouldn't be made until after the Super Bowl.

The Bills players did appear at the Tuesday session at Tampa Stadium and Levy said he thought that would mitigate his failure to appear.

"I didn't realize it was that much of an issue since all of our players were here," he said, "but I'm finding it out it was."

Levy didn't seem to regret his decision, however. "Tuesday is the coach's game plan day and there's nothing more important for the coach on that day," he said. "I've been coaching for 40 years. I've been preparing for this game all my life and I'm not going to cut a corner on it."

Oates, Hull both started in USFL

By Mary Foster
The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Blame it on their point of view — upside down and backwards — or just call them late-bloomers. Whatever the reason, neither Bart Oates nor Kent Hull took the direct route to NFL stardom and the Super Bowl.

"We started in the USFL," Buffalo Bills center Kent Hull said Wednesday. "In those days, the Super Bowl was a far-away dream. If it hadn't been for the USFL, though, I wouldn't be here today."

The same for Oates, the New York Giants center, who played for the USFL's Philadelphia Stars while Hull was with the New Jersey Generals.

"The USFL gave us a great deal of on-the-job training," Oates said. "It allowed both of us to develop and overcome our weaknesses."

Hull and Oates are among eight players in this year's Super Bowl who started in the United States Football League.

"We felt we could have competed with the NFL," Hull said. "That will always be speculation, but I think this many people being in the Super Bowl is a way of saying we could have competed. There were a lot of good players in that league."

If the Giants win Sunday, it would

"The USFL gave us a great deal of on-the-job training. It allowed both of us to develop and overcome our weaknesses."

Hull said. "When the thing folded, I decided I'd give it one shot. I decided to go to Buffalo because they had a lot of openings."

The Giants had been interested in both Hull and Oates.

"I think the Giants would rather have had Kent," Oates said. "He had another year on his contract, though, and I was free."

Oates, who will join Hull in the Pro Bowl this year, was an alternate for the game for the past two seasons.

"There's definitely enough talent for another league," Oates said. "There is little difference between starters and backups. Usually it's just a coach's decision as to which you are, not a clear-cut difference. In the USFL, a lot of guys who would have been backups got game experience."

Oates has played in every regular season game since joining the Giants in 1985. He has a degree in accounting from Brigham Young and a law degree from Seton Hall.

Most of his personal and professional goals and dreams have been fulfilled with the Giants' successful season, Oates said. A Super Bowl victory might be the way to cap his career.

"There's a chance this might be my last professional game," Oates said.

Meggett big concern for Bills

By Tom Canavan
The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — For a guy who admittedly has had an off year, the Buffalo Bills are very concerned about Dave Meggett.

Explosive, quick, strong, scary, smart. Pick a complimentary adjective to describe prototype NFL return-third down specialists and the Bills used it Wednesday as they prepared for Sunday's Super Bowl against the New York Giants.

"When he has the ball, you have to make sure all the creases are plugged and the lanes are filled," Buffalo defensive coordinator Walt Corey said. "He is a daylight runner. I don't know what kind of speed he has, but his quickness seems to get him ahead of everyone. Once that happens, you're in trouble."

Meggett is the Giants' only offensive game-breaker, just like a year ago. He can beat an opponent with a run, a pass or a return.

He led the NFL in kickoff returns this season with a 23.4-yard average, and his 10.9 punt return average was second in the NFC.

But the big difference in Meggett this year is that he is not breaking the big one. He has scored only twice, down three from a year ago, and he hasn't broken a big play since Dec. 9 when the 5-foot-7 speedster had a 37-yard punt return and a 58-yard kickoff return against Minnesota.

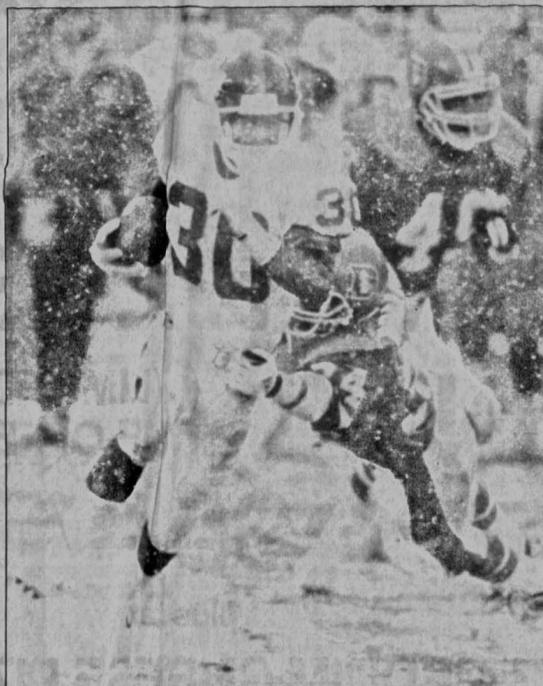

He has caught only five passes for 20 yards or more — no TDs — and only five of his 22 rushes were for at least 10 yards.

"As far as the numbers are concerned, the numbers were not there," Meggett said. "I didn't have any big returns or long runs, no scrimmage. I was more confident this year and didn't make the stupid mistakes. But I would have loved better numbers. So this is a down year for me."

That might change if Meggett can come up with a big one Sunday.

Bills special teams coach Bruce DeHaven called the second-year pro from Towson State the best return player in the game.

"He is scary," he said. "He's tough. He makes good decisions and he has a phenomenal change of direction. He has super leg drive and he's tough to tackle. Right now, he's my biggest nightmare."

Giants' all-around threat Dave Meggett (30) is giving the Buffalo Bills defensive coordinators grey hair.

Meggett did little against Buffalo in the Bills' 17-13 win over New York on Dec. 15. He returned two punts for 13 yards, didn't handle any of the four kickoffs, carried the ball twice for 6 yards and caught two passes for 16 yards.

Bills linebacker and special teams player Hal Garner said the key to stopping Meggett on returns is discipline, having people staying in their lanes and not going for the legs, because he'll break those tackles.

"To prepare for him you have to be aware of his capabilities and know he is back there," said Steve Tasker, the Bills' special teams leader and AFC special teamer for the Pro Bowl. "If you don't or make a mistake, he'll make you pay."

Meggett had an outstanding year in 1989, catching short punts out of the backfield and turning them for big yards, including touchdowns of 62, 57, 53 and 33 yards.

Overall, he had 34 receptions for 531 yards, or 15.6 per catch.

The receptions increased to 39 this season, but the average dipped to 10.5, an indication that opponents were not being caught off guard.

Meggett also ran into the problem of being a role player in a backfield that included Ottis Anderson and top draft pick Rodney Hampton, who broke his left leg against Chicago in the opening round of the playoffs.

Expect to see Meggett more Sunday, either spelling Anderson or trying to help New York spread the Buffalo defense. The fifth-round draft pick has lined up as a back, a wide receiver, a return man and even helped pick up the blitz.

"I think they have gotten the maximum from my abilities," he said. "But I'm not saying I have gotten the maximum from my abilities."

Ryan considers part ownership of Astros

The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Nolan Ryan has confirmed that he has been approached about buying his former team, the Houston Astros, and said he is interested.

"I've had a couple of people that are trying to put groups together that have contacted me to see if I had any interest," said Ryan, who lives in Alvin, 26 miles south of Houston.

"I told them that I would certainly have an interest in visiting with the parties that are trying to do something to see if I would like to participate in some manner, although I wouldn't have any idea what that would be."

Ryan, 43, told the Austin American-Statesman Tuesday that he expressed some interest when approached by the two groups before the Christmas holidays, but he has not heard anything recently.

John McMullen, owner of Houston Sports Association, and Robert Harter, president of HSA, which owns the Astros, announced Nov. 24 that the team was for sale. HSA also holds the lease on the Astrodome and two other buildings in the same complex, the Astrodome and the Astroarena. It also owns properties in Florida and various cable television interests.

Louis B. Susman, managing director for Salomon Brothers Inc., which represents the Astros in the sale, said Texas and Houston investors would have the inside track in making a deal for the National League team.

Ryan, the major league's strikeout king, pitched for the Astros from 1980-88 and ranks fifth on the club's all-time victories list.

Ryan declined to reveal the identity of the potential investors and said he does not know if either group is still pursuing the possibility of buying the team.

Astros Manager Art Howe said last week that he had heard that McMullen had "not had a nibble" from any interested buyers. The estimated price tag of the franchise has ranged from $75 million to $100 million.

Asked if he would like to own a major-league franchise, Ryan said: "It would depend. I would certainly never be in a position to be a majority owner of any ball club. But it would depend on the situation and the organization."

Ryan, who has won 302 games and thrown an unprecedented six no-hitters, said he is disturbed by McMullen's recent unloading of players who make almost $50 million collectively.

NCAA committee cracks down on taunting

The Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas — The NCAA Football Rules Committee, concerned with mocking incidents that marred the Cotton Bowl, adopted new regulations Wednesday to curb taunting and showboating.

Tighter regulation of unsportsmanlike conduct was a priority at the meeting in Corpus Christi, said David M. Nelson, the committee secretary.

"The No. 1 concern of the committee was the image of the game deteriorating because of antics and actions of players," said Nelson, the Yankee Conference commissioner from the University of Delaware. "I believe that was the committee's top priority in this year's meeting."

The 12-member NCAA Rules Committee, composed of head football coaches and athletic directors from NCAA Division I, II and III schools, decided Tuesday to pass new rules on field behavior.

The committee conducted the formal vote on Wednesday.

Taunting on the field became a major factor after Miami's 46-3 victory over Texas in a penalty-plagued Cotton Bowl game on Jan. 1. The Hurricanes were flagged 16 times, including nine times for unsportsmanlike conduct or personal fouls.

"There's no question that the activities of the Cotton Bowl helped bring this issue to the forefront," committee Chairman Mike R. Lude told the Corpus Christi Caller-Times on Tuesday. "And the concern was and is there that this type of behavior, if tolerated, will continue to affect the image of the game."

Miami coach Dennis Erickson said he was embarrassed and disappointed by his team's unruly behavior in the Cotton Bowl.

"It took away from what was a great win otherwise," Erickson said in a statement shortly after the Cotton Bowl.

University president Edward Foote said shortly after the game he was disappointed by the Hurricanes' antics.

The Miami Herald said Erickson was despondent when talking about the situation hours after the Jan. 1 game.

"I don't have any answers," the second-year Miami coach told The Herald after the game. "This has been the worst year of my life, between today's unsportsmanlike conduct stuff and some of the mail I got after the Brigham Young and Notre Dame games (both Miami losses)."

The Hurricanes established the tone for the Cotton Bowl before it started, charging off their sideline to taunt Texas as the Longhorns sprinted onto the field. The Hurricanes ended the game by taunting a near-empty stadium with a group dance.

As the penalties mounted, Erickson reprimanded his players after the first quarter and again at halftime.

"Coach Erickson made it clear, point-blank, that he didn't want the taunting, but emotions just took over," senior center Darren Handy said at the time. "I feel bad for him because he's going to take the heat, but we were just playing Hurricane football."

"It might be embarrassing to the university and the coaches, but it's not to the players. We enjoy it. It's like a show. People from Texas came to see."

Clemens brothers' hearing put on hold

By Michael Graczyk
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — A scheduled hearing on felony charges that Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens and his brother assaulted a Houston police officer was postponed until next month.

Neither Clemens, a two-time Cy Young Award winner, nor his 39-year-old brother, Gary, was in the courtroom of State District judge A.D. Azios for the probable cause hearing Tuesday. The proceeding was rescheduled until Feb. 18.

Their lawyer, Mike Ramsey, requested the delay so he could interview witnesses.

Clemens and his brother were arrested for aggravated assault on a police officer during a Saturday morning disturbance at Bayou Mama's nightclub.

They remain free on $2,000 bond. "What I did was go in and read the offense reports and the case has not been indicted yet," Ramsey said. "If there's an indictment on the 18th, both of them will appear. It's filed presently as a felony and that would be a matter for the grand jury."

Ramsey said he would discuss the case with prosecutors in hopes of getting it reduced to a misdemeanor or have it dismissed.

Police said the two were involved in a shouting match with club patrons when an off-duty officer working there as a security guard tried to break up the group and got into a wrestling match with the brothers. Roger Clemens is accused of jumping on an officer's back and choking the policeman who tried to arrest his brother.

Ramsey declined, however, to detail his clients' version of the incident.

"I don't want to do that yet except to say it's very different from what's been reported," he said. "I want a complete investigation before we start to go public with the position the defense believes to be true."

The Clemens brothers spent about 11 hours in jail Saturday before evading the media by ducking out a back door of the police station. Roger Clemens has made no public comment about the incident.

"He's not terribly upset about it, but the version I hear from virtually everyone on the defense side is about 180 degrees off what is so far been reported," Ramsey said. "I don't think it's time yet to be taking a position factually until it's been investigated."

Conviction on the third-degree felony charges could bring penalties up to two to 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000.

Clemens already has been slapped with a $10,000 fine and a five-game suspension at the start of the 1991 season for a verbal assault on an umpire during the American League playoffs in October. Clemens, who was thrown out of the game for yelling obscenities at umpire Terry Cooney, denies he verbally assaulted the umpire and is appealing the penalty. The appeal will be heard Jan. 28 by American League president Bobby Brown.

Clemens is free on $2,000 bond.

Dominique Wilkins will defend his NBA Slam Dunk title on All-Star Saturday, Feb. 9 in Charlotte, N.C. Michael Jordan will sit this one out, disappointing his home-state fans.

All-Star Weekend gets extra security Wilkins to defend title

By Paul Nowell
The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — NBA officials are reviewing security measures for next month's All-Star game because of the Persian Gulf war, a league official said Wednesday.

"It's a situation we are looking at very seriously," said Stephen Mills, the NBA's vice president for special events. "At some point between now and All-Star weekend, if any changes are made, we will make an announcement."

Mills said the All-Star Game always warrants extra security precautions. But with growing fears of terrorist attacks in the United States, those measures may be increased, he said.

"Our security department has spent a lot of time in Charlotte meeting with local and state officials," Mills said. "We're in a situation that changes daily. We still have two weeks to go, so we want to be flexible."

None of the events surrounding the game at the Charlotte Coliseum has been canceled or changed, Mills said at a news conference.

Besides the game, there are a variety of other events throughout the weekend, including the slam-dunk contest, an old-timers game and a 3-point shooting contest.

The NBA goes all out at the All-Star break, spending up to $3 million to entertain supporters, players and fans with parties, dinners and other affairs. Mills said most Americans understand the need for extra precautions.

"I don't think anyone is going to complain," he said.

Several current and former NBA stars attended the news conference, including guards Rex Chapman and Kendall Gill of the Charlotte Hornets and Orlando Magic rookie Dennis Scott.

The 3-point shooting contest will pit Scott, who played at Georgia Tech, and a strong field of sharpshooters. They include defending champion Craig Hodges of the Chicago Bulls, Danny Ainge and Clyde Drexler of the Portland Trail Blazers, and Jack Sikma of the Milwaukee Bucks.

Three-time winner Larry Bird of the Boston Celtics, who injured his back earlier this season, will not compete.

Perhaps the highlight of the pre-game events is the slam-dunk contest. Gill and Chapman — if his sprained ankle heals — will represent the host team. They will have some tough competition, including defending champion and two-time winner Dominique Wilkins of the Atlanta Hawks and last year's runnerup, Kenny Smith of the Houston Rockets.

Two-time winner Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls has decided to sit out this year's competition. That came as a major disappointment to the local fans because he played college ball at North Carolina.

Singletery named NFL Man of Year

By Steven Vine
The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Chicago Bears linebacker Mike Singletery, who tackles the problems of children with the same zeal that he tackles ball carriers, was named the NFL Man of the Year on Wednesday.

"So many times what you read about and hear about are the athletes with the big contracts and bonuses," Singletery said at a news conference in Tampa, site of Sunday's Super Bowl. "You don't get a chance to hear about the athletes that are giving back to the community, that are taking it upon themselves to make a difference."

Singletery, a devout Christian, often addresses youngsters on the dangers of substance abuse. He has also worked for such organizations as the Special Olympics and the March of Dimes.

"There's always one kid standing in the corner," he said. "That kid usually is the one that has been abused the most and has been neglected the most and is afraid to trust anyone."

"When you take the opportunity to seek him out and say, 'You matter to me,' and you see the tear roll down his eyes, that really makes a difference. All of a sudden, the kid believes again."

The Travelers Companies Foundation, which sponsored the award, will divide $25,000 among four Chicago-area charities of Singletery's choosing.

A Pro Bowl selection in each of the past seven years, Singletery has long worked to improve his community. As a teenager in Houston, he donated his weight-lifting equipment to his high school.

"I was the last of the 10 in my family," he said. "My older brothers and sisters had it a lot tougher than I did. I had a chance to see some of the tragedies that happened and it made me grow up a lot faster."

Ismail calls cryptic press conference

The Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Raghib "Rocket" Ismail, Notre Dame's talented flanker and return specialist, has called a press conference for Thursday, where university officials expect he will announce his decision to enter the NFL draft.

"I think everyone has the impression that's the direction in which he's leaning," sports information director John Heisler said Wednesday. "I probably put myself in that category."

Ismail has conferred in recent weeks with friends, players and coaches about giving up his final year of eligibility to enter the draft early, Heisler said.

"The overwhelming majority of people are saying, 'Looking at the pros and cons, you should go,'" he said.

Ismail was a 1990 All-American and a finalist for the Heisman Trophy. In three seasons, he has returned five kickoffs for touchdowns, one short of the NCAA record set by Southern Cal's Anthony Davis from 1970-72.

He has amassed 4,187 all-purpose yards and a total of 15 touchdowns, including four passing, five rushing and one punt return.

Duncan, others agree to terms

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Infielders Mariano Duncan and Gene Larkin, pitcher Calvin Schiraldi and outfielder Dave Clark agreed to contracts Wednesday, leaving 131 players remaining in salary arbitration.

Larkin, who made $228,000 in 1990, got a two-year deal with the Minnesota Twins worth $1,675,000. Duncan agreed to a one-year contract with Cincinnati worth $925,000, a $525,000 raise.

Schiraldi and San Diego agreed to a one-year contract for $740,000, a raise of $140,000, and Clark agreed to a one-year deal with the Chicago Cubs worth $350,000, a $155,000 raise.

In addition, the Boston Red Sox and pitcher Cecilio Guante agreed to a minor-league contract with Pawtucket of the International League. Guante would make $750,000 if he makes the major league club. The Red Sox also agreed to a minor-league contract with pitcher Tony Fossas.

Also, the New York Mets signed right-handers Anthony Young and John Johnstone to one-year contracts.

Duncan's signing leaves six Reds in salary arbitration. He had asked for $1.1 million with the Reds offering $750,000.

Mariano Duncan

Duncan, 27, hit a career-high .306 last season, led the National League with 11 triples, and had 10 home runs. He was the club's full-time second baseman until the Reds obtained Bill Doran from Houston at the end of August. Doran will return next season, leaving Duncan with a backup or platoon role.

The other Reds players still in arbitration are infielders Todd Benzinger, Barry Larkin and Chris Sabo, pitchers Jose Rijo and Norm Charlton, and outfielder Billy Hatcher.

The Reds also signed three players to minor-league contracts Wednesday: right-handed pitchers Mo Sanford and Luis Vasquez, and outfielder Reggie Sanders.

Vasquez was 4-6 with 3.64 ERA last year at Class AAA Nashville. Sanford was 13-4 with a 2.74 ERA at Class A Cedar Rapids. Sanders hit .285 with 17 home runs and 63 RBI and 40 stolen bases for Cedar Rapids, and was voted the Midwest League MVP and best prospect.

Gene Larkin, 28, will get $725,000 in 1991 and $950,000 in 1992. He had asked for $850,000 in arbitration and the Twins had offered $600,000. He batted .269 in 1990 with five homers and 42 RBIs in 401 at-bats.

Schiraldi, 28, was 3-8 last season with a 4.41 ERA in eight starts and 34 relief appearances.

Clark, 28, had asked for $395,000 while the Cubs offered $320,000. He hit .275 last season with five homers and 20 RBIs in 171 at-bats.

Guante, 29, has a 29-34 record with 36 saves in 363 games with Pittsburgh, the New York Yankees, Texas and Cleveland. He was 2-3 in 28 relief appearances with Cleveland in 1990. Released by the Indians, he signed with Pawtucket in late August and appeared in two games with the Triple-A club.

Barnes fails to make his steroid case

By Paul Page
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A panel of The Athletics Congress said Wednesday that shot put world record-holder Randy Barnes did not prove his drug tests were tampered with, and refused to lift his suspension for steroid use.

Barnes, 24, was suspended by the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the world governing body for track and field, after testing positive for use of methyltestosterone at a meet in Malmo, Sweden, last Aug. 7. The suspension prevents Barnes from competing for two years, locking him out of the 1991 World Championships and the 1992 Olympics. He was a silver medalist at the 1988 Seoul Games.

The TAC panel criticized the international testing procedures, and said IAAF rules imposed "an impossible burden" of proof upon an athlete who claims tampering. But it said it had no choice but to adhere to those rules.

"Because Mr. Barnes has presented no clear and convincing evidence that his sample was, in fact, tampered with, we have no choice but to determine that he committed a doping offense in contravention of existing rules," the three-member panel wrote.

Barnes' attorney, John Dowd, said he would immediately appeal to TAC's Drug Appeals Board.

He pointed to the panel's acknowledgement that athletes who appeal positive tests had been given "an impossible burden" to prove their innocence.

"This is a vindication of Randy," said Dowd, who renewed his charge that Barnes' drug tests were mishandled by Swedish officials. "We won the battle of facts. The next step is to see if we can't get the law straightened out."

"I'm very optimistic," Barnes said. "I'm pleased at what the panel said. I feel we're much closer now to getting the truth out."

Barnes, who has vehemently denied any steroid use, won the Malmo shot put event with a heave of 74 feet, 11 1/4 inches, three months after setting the world record of 75-10 1/4 at Los Angeles.

The panel — TAC vice president Cliff Wiley, Tim Baker, director of the Penn Relays, and Brooklyn, N.Y., attorney Jill Pilgrim — heard testimony on the case in a seven-hour hearing last month and largely supported Barnes' version of events.

Barnes' samples were kept one night in the home refrigerator of the testing official, according to TAC testimony, and control numbers may have been written on sealed packets containing urine samples some time after Barnes submitted his tests.

But the panel of the national governing body said it was bound by IAAF rules that place the burden on the accused to prove that samples were tampered with.

"Were the burdens (of proof) to be reversed, TAC could not establish, by clear and convincing evidence, that the samples tested were in fact the same given by Mr. Barnes," the opinion said.

"Under United States standards, it is inconceivable that a sample to be used as evidence against an accused person would have gone through the process that Mr. Barnes' samples went through and still constitute reliable evidence," the panel said.

Dowd, who conducted baseball's investigation of Pete Rose, said he would seek more evidence for his appeal, and if Barnes loses there and fails to gain arbitration with the IAAF, he could take the case to federal court.

"There's a very serious due process argument here," he said.

He lashed out at officials who tested Barnes and said the IAAF had been "reticent," at releasing information for his appeal, singling out Swedish Doping Control official Jan Hokfelt.

"There are places in the chain where this sample moved around without any accounting," Dowd said. "That gives the opportunity for mischief. . . I've never seen a chain of custody like this. You have to ask yourself, is it just sloppiness, or is it something else?"

"I want to know whether Hokfelt is a liar or a truth-teller. His statements conflict. It kept changing — he kept adding facts. . . His statements cannot live together as truth."

George Griffin's "New Fangled," a visual representation of ideas overheard in an ad agency's marketing strategy meeting, is part of "The Third Animation Celebration: The Movie." The film, which includes work by Bill Plympton, the U.S.S.R.'s Alexei Karaev and Czechoslovakia's Jan Svankmajer, will be shown at the Bijou Saturday and Sunday at 3, 6, 8 and 10 p.m.

Domino's dealer gets busted

The Associated Press

BRISTOL, R.I. — A Domino's Pizza manager was charged with using the business to deal marijuana to go.

Police were tipped off by an informant and grew suspicious when they noticed people leaving the store without pizza, said Detective Lt. Terrence Mullen.

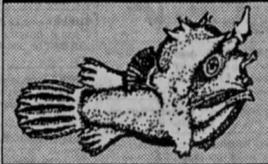

Another detective was told "you could order a pizza and marijuana and they would put the marijuana inside the box along with the pizza," Mullen said. "They also would deliver."

Police arrested store manager Arthur Singleton, 26, of East Providence on Saturday and charged him with possessing marijuana with intent to deliver and distributing marijuana to a minor, Mullen said.

The owner of the franchise, Brad Brubaker, said Monday he was as shocked. "I have a partner and I'm going to have to discuss with him what we can do to make sure this never happens again," Brubaker said.

Tales of the Bizarre

The charges carry 15 years to life in prison and a fine up to $500,000 if convicted. A bail commissioner ordered Singleton held at the state prison until a court hearing Wednesday.

"Our sources told us that Singleton was selling because he wanted to buy the franchise," Mullen said.

Store employee William Wood, 38, of Newport was charged with possessing marijuana and released on his own recognizance pending a court appearance, Mullen said.

At least one other person was involved in the marijuana distribution and the investigation was continuing, Mullen said. Brubaker said Singleton had worked his way up from driver to manager during the past 2½ years and had a good reputation.

Domino's spokesman Mike Jenkins said from company headquarters in Michigan it was the first time the chain has heard of organized drug distribution from one of its stores.

Although Domino's has an extensive security department for its company-owned stores, security at franchises "typically depends on the franchisee and how large they are," he said.

War boosts ratings to record heights

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — More than 13 million American homes were tuned to ABC and Peter Jennings when the U.S.-led forces first attacked Iraq, giving the network's news its highest ratings ever.

ABC's total for Jan. 14 to Jan. 20 was about 4 million households higher than its closest competitor, according to figures released Tuesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co. The attack began Jan. 16.

ABC and Jennings earned a 14.8 average rating. NBC and Tom Brokaw earned 10.4 for their war coverage, followed by CBS and Dan Rather with 10.1.

The ratings represent the networks' regular evening news broadcasts. Each ratings point represents 931,000 homes.

Cable News Network, whose highly acclaimed reports periodically featured the only live broadcasts from the Iraqi capital under siege, broke all cable ratings records last Wednesday by earning a 19.1 average. That figure represents 10.8 million cable households out of a total of 56.8 million.

The Nielsen broadcast network ratings are averaged to reflect viewership among the nation's 93.1 million TV households. Cable ratings are averaged to reflect viewership among the nation's 56.8 million cable subscriber homes. The two sets of ratings are not equivalent.
