Iraq threatens to use chemical warfare

By Fred Bayles
The Associated Press

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Saddam Hussein on Monday raised the specter of chemical-biological warfare — and even nuclear weapons — in Iraq's fateful confrontation with the U.S. superpower. Meanwhile, scores more of his air force pilots were slipping out the back door to Iran.

CNN's Peter Arnett, who interviewed the Iraqi president, said Saddam claimed that the missiles his military has fired at Saudi Arabia and Israel have chemical, biological and nuclear capability.

The dozens of Scuds launched thus far have carried only conventional warheads. The Iraqis have chemical and biological weapons, but Western analysts question whether Iraq is technically capable of equipping missiles with such warheads.

As for nuclear warheads, some analysts believed before the Persian Gulf war broke out that Iraq was a year or two from developing a primitive atomic weapon. But the U.S. military said its recent air attacks eliminated the Iraqi nuclear network.

As recounted by Arnett, Saddam skirted the question of whether the Iraqis would use unconventional weapons.

"Iraq will use weapons that equate the weapons used against us," Arnett quoted Saddam as saying.

"All the air superiority ... that has come upon us has failed. We have maintained our balance, using only conventional weapons."

But, Arnett said, the Iraqi leader then suggested Baghdad might be "forced" to take drastic action.

"We pray that not a lot of blood will be shed from any nation," he quoted him as saying. "We pray that we shall not be forced in taking a forced measure."

Baghdad radio, meanwhile, issued a more direct threat about what it called "strategic weapons."

"What will emerge from these days when these weapons are used is more tragic days for the allied forces," the broadcast said.

In another development, the Iraqi radio also said captured Operation Desert Storm pilots have been injured in air attacks staged by their comrades on "populated and civilian targets in Iraq."

Captured pilots as human shields

The terse report, which gave no further details, appeared to be a follow-up to Iraq's earlier threat to turn POWs into "human shields."

The Iraqis, who said they hold more than 20 American and other prisoners, announced Jan. 21 they were sending them out to potential targets to deter air attack.

The Baghdad government now said more than 320 civilians have been killed in Desert Storm air raids — a figure used in a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar. Refugees fleeing Iraq said warplanes of the anti-Iraq coalition had bombed civilian convoys on the desert highway west from Baghdad to Jordan.

Iraqi planes flying to Iran

The U.S. military said more and more Iraqi pilots were flying to Iran.

Iraq's 700-plane air force has mostly lain low during the war, hidden away in shelters or hopping to other Iraqi airfields during the incessant U.S. and allied air strikes.

Over the weekend, the Iranian news media reported Iraqi fighters and other aircraft had begun landing at airfields in neutral Iran. By Monday, the Pentagon said, more than 60 fighter-bombers and more than 20 transports, both military and civilian, had found refuge in Iran.

The aircraft leaving Iraq included some of its most advanced fighters, Soviet-built MiG-29s, the reports said.

The Iraqi pilots' motives — simply to defect or to shield their planes from American attack to fight another day — could not be immediately determined.

"We ... don't know if this is a spontaneous act on the part of

Saddam promises bloodshed, Iraqi victory ahead in gulf war

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was quoted as saying Monday that the missiles Iraq has been firing at Israel and Saudi Arabia could be harnessed to nuclear, chemical or biological warheads.

Saddam, in an interview with CNN's correspondent in Baghdad, Peter Arnett, also said the round-the-clock allied air assault on Iraq has "failed," and he predicted that "lots of blood will be shed on every side" of the gulf war.

He expressed bitterness at having released foreign hostages prior to the beginning of the war and said Iraq would never surrender Kuwait, Arnett said.

"He said missiles fired at Israel and Saudi Arabia, which he proudly called al-Hussein missiles ... had nuclear, chemical and biological capability," Arnett said.

in taking a forced measure."

White House deputy press secretary Roman Popadiuk said the Bush administration had no reaction to Arnett's report.

Arnett, one of the few Western correspondents left in Baghdad, spoke by phone with CNN in the United States after the interview he said took place in a bungalow in Baghdad. Saddam was last interviewed by a U.S. network correspondent on Nov. 15. Arnett's reports are screened by Iraqi censors.

"I asked, 'Would you use chemical weapons in a land war in Kuwait?' He responded, 'We will use the weapons that will be equitable to the weapons used against us by our enemies,'" Arnett said.

Did that mean Saddam would refrain from using chemical weapons if the United States and its allies refrained from doing so?

Professors: Gulf war will hinder economy

By Beth Chacey
The Daily Iowan

Consumers already nervous about the recession confronting the nation may be losing sleep over the reported $1 billion per day being spent on the war.

Two UI business professors said their concern may be justified. Unlike some past wars that have boosted the economy, this one will only hurt already pained pocket-books, they predicted.

Both professors agreed it's too early to tell exactly how the economy will be affected by the war, but several factors indicate the already existing recession will be sharper and last longer because of it.

Richard Stevenson, UI professor of finance and former UI treasurer, said a primary effect on the economy by the war will be decided by consumer spending and confidence levels — a reflection of consumer spending habits.

He explained that confidence levels play a major factor in the economy since consumer spending accounts for roughly two-thirds of all economic activity.

Stevenson said confidence levels were already shaky because of the existing recession.

"We were going into a recession even without the war, and consumers are pretty well tapped out," he said.

Stevenson believes that because of the existing uncertainty, consumer confidence may only be worsened by the war. He referred to an article in the Wall Street Journal, which stated that surveys of consumer attitudes showed a steep drop in confidence after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Stevenson said although initial good news from the war in the gulf may have pushed levels back up, in the long run, consumer confidence will depend on U.S. success in the war and its length.

"What war does is add another layer of uncertainty," Stevenson said.

Charles Whiteman, UI professor of economics, agreed that some bad news in the war could affect the initial optimism in consumer confidence which caused the early drop in oil prices.

"A few reversals could dampen this initial fervor," he said.

Whiteman also explained he doesn't foresee a boost to the economy as a result of the war.

"The question is, 'Is this going to be a helpful injection of resources

Forum addresses press, war

By Heidi Pederson
The Daily Iowan

"In peacetime be skeptical, in wartime suspicious," were the words of advice from one UI journalism professor during a discussion on war and the press.

Kenneth Starck, professor and director of the School of Journalism, cautioned about 40 listeners Monday to be wary of information in news stories, especially during times of crisis.

"The first casualty of war is truth," said Starck, one of several journalism professors to speak on the topic. Starck said people must give careful consideration to news accounts about the war in the Middle East — accounts, he said, which involve an "almost unbelievable orchestration of information" and create an almost "electronic war."

"I believe the press owes us a fair, accurate account of events placed in some kind of context," he said.

"Most of the time we don't get it."

Judy Polumbaum, assistant journalism professor, said reporters covering the war could improve in several respects, including increasing the level of skepticism surrounding information released by the government.

"I think it is worthwhile for reporters to remember what I.F. Stone once said, 'Every government is run by liars, and nothing they say should be believed,'" Polumbaum said.

Starck said that during the war in the gulf, the press has acted more like the government's "lap dog" than the "watchdog" it was designed to be.

To remedy this, Don Smith, professor of journalism, said some aspects of journalism need to be re-evaluated.

"(The press) should do more than just respond with its knee-jerk demand for information," he said.

Student government seats unclaimed

By Ann Riley
The Daily Iowan

Over half of the available seats on the UI Student Association were left empty after an elections board meeting last night awarded seats to everyone who filed a petition to enter the race.

Of the 137 positions available on the senate, 50 were filled because the position was uncontested. Graduate and Professional Student Senate had the worst turnout with only 25 of 75 seats being filled. In Undergraduate Activities, 15 of 32 were filled as were 10 of 30 in Undergraduate Collegiate.

"This is the first time in 15 years we have had such a low turnout," said Thomas Lunde, executive officer of the Undergraduate Academic Senate. "I believe it is a culmination of all the problems we've had in student government. The problems have been well-enough publicized, and I think people just didn't want to get involved."

For the office of president and vice president, three separate teams filed petitions. They were Matt Wise and Jennifer Kelley, Troy Raper and Dusty Wilcox, and Reanae McNeal and Elizabeth Gilles. According to the new UIJA constitution, candidates for executive positions may not affiliate themselves with campus parties.

UNCONTESTED STUDENT SENATE SEATS

Out of 137 seats on the UI Student Association, 50 were filled Monday night because the candidates were unopposed. UI students will vote for president, vice president and three referendums Feb. 11 and 12. Unfilled seats will be decided by a special election later this spring.

- In the Graduate and Professional Student Senate, 25 of the 75 seats were uncontested and therefore, filled.
- In the Undergraduate Activities Senate, 15 of 32 seats were uncontested.
- In the Undergraduate Collegiate Senate, 10 of 30 seats were uncontested.

typical response of the GPSS who are fed up with not having their concerns addressed from the Student Assembly," said Nancy Mor-

Governor: Budget cuts threaten state jobs

By Tom Seery
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad warned Monday that state workers will be laid off if the Legislature persists in its budget-cutting plan.

"I don't think there's any question about that," the Republican governor said at his weekly news conference.

Democrats, who hold a majority in the state House and Senate, have said they can make cuts without forcing layoffs but might ask some state workers to take voluntary furloughs.

Branstad said he is confident the Legislature will see the merits of his budget plan, which includes a mix of spending cuts, money transfers and an increase in the state cigarette tax.

"I intend to work with the Legislature on this matter," Branstad said. "We did put in place a substantial program to put the state's fiscal house in order."

Experts say the state faces a budget deficit of about $75 million this year and a projected shortfall of up to $250 million in the fiscal year beginning July 1. The Legislature is now intent on balancing this year's $3 billion state budget and will then move on to next year's proposed $3.3 billion spending plan.

Democratic leaders in the Legislature have rejected Branstad's proposed cigarette tax increase but have agreed to many of Branstad's other proposals. The governor wants to raise the cigarette tax to 41 cents a pack; it is now 31 cents. That would raise about $2 million a month.

Branstad has said the main benefit will be in discouraging cigarette smoking.

The governor said he plans to ask U.S. Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan to come to Iowa to speak on behalf of the tax increase and other anti-smoking initiatives such as raising the legal smoking age to 21 from 18.

While rejecting the cigarette tax increase, legislative Democrats are looking at deeper cuts than Branstad proposed in state agency budgets. They have said layoffs can be avoided, but Branstad disputed that claim. He said he feels an obligation to state workers but that their jobs are not guaranteed.

"I think it's important and appropriate that we treat people fairly," Branstad said.

The state's budget woes have prompted some legislators to float plans to increase the state sales or income taxes. Legislative leaders have resisted those plans. Branstad said he remains opposed to general tax increases.

Branstad asks support for cigarette tax

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad, looking to change the focus of a tax debate, on Monday sought lobbying help from Washington to make Iowa a non-smoking model for the nation.

With his proposed 10-cent-per-pack cigarette tax increase under fire, Branstad said he wants to shift the focus from taxes to reducing smoking.

"I'd like to see Iowa nationally recognized as a leader on this issue," Branstad said.

Branstad said he plans to invite Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan to the state to lobby lawmakers for his anti-smoking package.

"I think it would be appropriate for them to hear from the medical community that is dealing with health problems that are caused by cigarette and tobacco consumption," Branstad said.

"I'm going to ask him to come to Iowa to speak in support of these initiatives," the governor said. "I definitely would like to see him come to the state and share with the legislators why this makes good sense."

In his anti-smoking package, Branstad is asking that the tax be increased to 41 cents a pack, which would be tied for highest in the nation. While that's gotten most of the attention, Branstad's plan also would increase the legal age for purchasing tobacco to 21, toughen penalties for selling to minors and regulate sales through vending machines.

Branstad said the package was modeled after legislation that Sullivan has proposed and said it is time to shift the debate to health issues.

Courts

By Jennifer Hanna
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man was charged Saturday with assault causing injury, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Court records state Brian C. Vandenberg, 32, 214 Blackfoot Trail, became upset and verbally abusive toward a woman in the area of 75 Hilltop Trailer Court.

The defendant reportedly grabbed the victim by the arm, pushed her and then shoved her out of his way, causing her to strike a door frame, court records state.

The altercation resulted in injury to the victim's arm, according to court records.

Preliminary hearing is scheduled for Feb. 14.

The following people were charged in Johnson County with operating a vehicle while intoxicated:

■ Thomas W. Pederson, 47, 1819 Gleason Dr. Charged Saturday in the area of Highway 6 driving eastbound from First Avenue. Preliminary hearing Feb. 14.

■ Ronald W. Mullen, 32, 111 E. Fourth St., Riverside, Iowa. Charged Sunday. Preliminary hearing Feb. 14.

■ William M. Murray, 62, 1328 Muscatine Ave. Charged Saturday when driving northbound on First Avenue. Preliminary hearing Feb. 14.

■ Johsee Kim, 25, 612 E. Court St., Apt. 9. Charged Saturday when driving westbound from First Avenue on Highway 6. Preliminary hearing Feb. 14.

Police

By Laura Ballman
The Daily Iowan

According to Iowa City Police records, Russel Grout, 24, 709 Eighth St., Coralville, was arrested for operating a vehicle while under the influence of alcohol Sunday at approximately 2:34 p.m. in the 1200 block of Court Street East.

Daryl J. Hradek, 26, 613 Court St., was arrested by UI Security Sunday at approximately 10:40 p.m. in the UI Main Library, according to UI Security reports.

He was charged with the attempted theft of a UI computer, keyboard, printer and other computer accessories. Reports state that an alarm sounded in the library, alerting library personnel who immediately noticed Hradek who was carrying a stuffed gym bag and two UI Hospital plastic bags.

Upon searching the parcels, authorities discovered the stolen computer goods, all identified by special tags and theft protection devices.

A robbery was reported Sunday at the UI Field House. According to UI Security reports, sometime between 3:30 p.m. and 5:30 p.m., Jason Sandersfield was robbed of approximately $1,342 worth of belongings.

While Sandersfield was playing basketball, someone stole his car keys from a pile of clothing and located Sandersfield's vehicle. He later discovered that several items, including a leather coat and gold necklace, were stolen from his car.

Iowan exchanges Midwest life for Romanian orphanage

By Roger Munns
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Changing careers at midlife is gutsy enough, but JaNeal Rockwell is leaving the country, learning a new language and trying a job she's never done before.

An athletic shoe commercial would have her "just do it," but that's just part of Rockwell's approach to overhauling her life.

To those who are secure but bored, she said her advice is to find an area of interest then jump in with both feet, both confident and afraid.

"Feel the fear and do it anyway," she said. "Do it scared. I've had so many people say, 'I can't understand why you want to do something like this.' Well, I can't understand why they can't understand."

Born in Manchester, raised in Cedar Rapids and brought to a Mount Pleasant farm by the first of two husbands, Rockwell has decided at age 47 to sell everything, including her two businesses, and go to Romania.

Romania? Her description of the country doesn't make the place sound too inviting.

"They're totally poverty-stricken, and the people are very depressed," she said. "They have a lot of problems, and they don't have a functioning government."

Because of this disarray, there are an estimated 200,000 orphans in the country, and Rockwell is going to Bucharest to help them. Using money from a group called the Rome America International Corp., she hopes to create a model orphanage. She has made a five-year commitment.

One factor allowing her to make a sudden move is lack of family commitments, she said. Now divorced, she has two grown children in Chicago who both support her decision.

Even so, she said, "We can't keep living for our families at this age. My hair is white, and it doesn't bother me if everybody knows I'm 47. I think you can stay young as long as you stay active. I'm not too old to do this. I want my life to be exciting."

Possessions also are not holding her back. "I'm getting rid of everything I have," she told the Mount Pleasant News.

Trained as a classical dancer, she taught ballet for years at her dance studio. She also opened a consignment shop. Proceeds from both have gotten her out of debt and given her enough money to get to Romania and back, but not much more.

"I'm walking away with a tiny bit, but it's pretty much nothing," she said.

And life in the Midwest isn't holding her back either. She said she's disgusted with Iowa's "isn't that too bad" view on the world's problems.

"The small town complacency bothers me a lot," she said.

"I was being successful (in her business), but not for me. These kids are wonderful, but they can live without what I'm giving them. The kids in Romania, who's there for them?"

"The system here angers me. It angers me because I don't think we are reaching out enough and touching other peoples' lives. We struggle so hard for what? A car and nice home. It has no purpose," she said.

She said her dance students seem to understand her decision better than adults do.

"Most of the students say they want to do something like this some day. I think their generation won't be so afraid."

Legislator stands firm on abortion

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — The first proposed restrictions on abortion arrived Monday in the Legislature and battle lines on the issue were drawn immediately.

Rep. Clay Spear, D-Burlington, introduced three proposals, including a parental notification plan expected to be the center of this year's abortion debate.

All three were sent to a committee headed by a pro-choice Democrat.

"Frankly, I'm not sure they will progress beyond that," said Rep. Dan Jay, D-Centerville, who heads the House Judiciary Committee.

The measures Spear introduced were:

- Prohibiting some second trimester abortions at tax-supported hospitals. That is directed against a clinic at University Hospitals in Iowa City, which performs privately-financed abortions.

- Requiring that at least one parent be notified before a minor obtains an abortion. Some exceptions are included to allow a judge to be substituted.

- Taking away the tax-exempt status of hospitals that perform certain types of second trimester abortions.

Anti-abortion activists have made it clear during the opening weeks of this year's session that they favor tough restrictions but will focus their efforts on parental notification.

That's generally considered a close issue in the Legislature, where the outcome is too close to call. Most severe restrictions aren't considered likely.

Jay said he will use his position as head of the Judiciary Committee to block all three.

"They will be assigned to a subcommittee that I'll chair," Jay said. "I can't give you any assurance what will happen, but I think my position is pretty well known by everybody in here."

Committee heads have broad authority to decide what legislation will emerge from their panel. In past years, Jay's committee has been a dumping ground for bills that leaders never want to see again.

That allows him to take the political heat for single-handedly squelching controversial issues such as the death sentence. Since he represents a heavily Democratic southern Iowa district, Jay is considered immune from the political heat.

The abortion issue has heavy political overtones, and it's likely that all 55 Democrats in the House will eventually meet to decide the issue, Jay said.

"I'm sure we will, as a caucus, end up deciding the fate of those or any others that come to my committee," he said. "Until that happens they aren't going to go anywhere. I just imagine I'll retain possession of them."

Though most polls have shown parental notification has support, Jay said he's comfortable with his position.

"Frankly, I've gotten more mail that would support the defeat of any parental notification legislation than I have letters and contacts in favor," Jay said. "At this point, I'm not sure if my mind could be changed."

tensen, executive officer of the GPSS. "I am real pleased with the initial turnout, but I know more people didn't run because they are disappointed with the job UISA is doing and don't feel they are being properly represented."

GPSS has also filed an injunction to extend the election 30 days, but Mortensen said they have not heard of a decision yet.

The ballot will also include three referendums regarding the possible separation of the GPSS from the UISA.

Rare book thief selected targets from obituaries

By Roger Munns
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Stephen Blumberg ran a group of antique thieves in the Minneapolis area and found many of his targets by combing obituary pages, an accomplice testified Monday.

"I helped him set up stolen goods at flea markets," said Brian Tracy Teeuwe, 24, who pleaded guilty to interstate transportation of stolen property. "It was a good business."

He also said Blumberg had a vendetta against Minneapolis.

Blumberg is charged with the theft of 21,000 rare books valued at up to $20 million from hundreds of libraries across the country. He has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity, with lawyers saying he thought he was a guardian of the past.

The curator of rare books at the Harvard libraries in Cambridge, Mass., told the federal court jury it is likely that some of the books stolen by Blumberg were disguised so thoroughly that their owners may never be found. Curator Roger Stoddard said the only way he could identify some of the 670 books stolen from Harvard was by checking binding repairs.

Teeuwe said Blumberg, after checking obituary columns, used city directories to find addresses and names of relatives of those who died.

"He'd find out how many people lived there, and we'd call and find out if anybody was home. If there was nobody, we'd go and burglarize it," Teeuwe said.

He said Blumberg also hired a small group of thieves to do their own work in the Twin Cities. Two of those thefts — four stained glass windows from a health food store and a vanload of musical instruments from a rock band — account for the two charges of interstate transportation of stolen goods against Blumberg. He also is charged with conspiracy and possession of the stolen books.

The stolen goods were loaded aboard Blumberg's truck and taken to flea markets, mostly in Texas, Teeuwe said. The books were never sold.

Blumberg's book-stealing career almost came to an end in April 1988 when he was charged with possession of burglary tools and trespassing at the University of California-Riverside. He pleaded guilty to the misdemeanors and was sentenced to three years probation, an officer testified.

In earlier testimony, Blumberg was said to have been frightened by the arrest, causing him to delay further thefts. Teeuwe said Blumberg bragged about getting away.

An attorney for Blumberg, Ray Rosenberg, asked, "Did he tell you his goal was to steal the city of Minneapolis and sell it to Texas?"

"Yes, he did," Teeuwe said.

Also testifying was Howard Bergstrom, who was captured during a burglary he and Blumberg committed in 1983.

Soviet Union torn by Baltic unrest, gulf war

Gorbachev, Bush delay Feb. summit

By Barry Schweid
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush, troubled about a long trip to Moscow in the midst of the Persian Gulf war as well as bogged-down talks over a strategic arms reduction treaty, decided Monday to put off his scheduled Feb. 11-13 summit with Mikhail Gorbachev.

The decision was "by mutual agreement" with the Kremlin, and the summit will be rescheduled in Moscow at "a later date in the first half of this year," according to a joint statement of Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh.

Bush met with Bessmertnykh just prior to the announcement. It was the first time that a scheduled U.S.-Soviet summit had been put off since the late Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev canceled President Dwight Eisenhower's 1959 visit to Moscow in furious objection to U.S. spy flights over Soviet territory.

But the postponement of the Bush-Gorbachev meeting "was a mutual decision so there is no disappointment," Bessmertnykh emphasized.

Standing together in a White House driveway, Bessmertnykh first in Russian and then Baker in English read their joint statement.

It said, "The gulf war makes it inappropriate for President Bush

President George Bush met in the White House Oval Office yesterday with Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh. After the meeting it was announced that next month's scheduled Moscow summit between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev had been postponed.

to be away from Washington. In addition, work on the START treaty will require some additional time. Both presidents look forward to setting an exact summit date as soon as it becomes feasible to do so."

Bush and senior administration officials have been hinting for weeks that he would forego the Feb. 11-13 trip to register displeasure with the military crackdown on the independence movement in Latvia and Lithuania.

But the statement did not mention the situation in the Baltic Republics.

Asked whether that issue was involved in the decision, Baker said, "the statement speaks for itself."

However, he said, "we have made our substantial concerns known" to the Soviets over the Baltics issue.

There was no elaboration, meanwhile, on why it would be "inappropriate" for Bush to be away from Washington during the Persian Gulf war.

The President has not taken any trips — except to his Camp David retreat in the nearby Catoctin mountains of Maryland — since ordering U.S. forces into action.

On the arms control front, meanwhile, Baker said some technical issues were still standing in the way of completing the treaty to cut U.S. and Soviet long-range nuclear missiles, bombers and submarines by about 30 percent.

He cited, for instance, ways of monitoring U.S. and Soviet missile plants to guard against cheating.

Republics: police dissent; television workers rally

By Alan Cooperman
The Associated Press

RIGA, U.S.S.R. — Hundreds of pro-Kremlin Latvian policemen jeered the republic's president Monday, reflecting the deep division in local law enforcement ranks over the issue of independence.

In the Lithuanian capital of Vilnius, about 1,000 of the republic's television workers rallied to demand their jobs back. The workers have been locked out of work because of the Jan. 13 Soviet military takeover of the republic's TV facility that killed 14 people.

The 500-800 Latvian police officers — mostly ethnic Russians, Ukrainians and Byelorussians — jammed an auditorium at the University of Latvia for a four-hour meeting with the Baltic republic's leaders, including their boss, Latvian Interior Minister Alois Vaznis, as well as President Anatolij Gorbunovs and Prime Minister Ivars Godmanis.

The police whistled and hooted when Vaznis said he had tried to depoliticize the police force, which is part of the Interior Ministry, and they called for his resignation.

The raucous meeting reflected a sharp split between police supporting Latvia's pro-independence government and those loyal to the national government in Moscow and the anti-independence branch of the Communist Party in Riga.

That split was aggravated on Jan. 20 when elite "black beret" riot police loyal to Moscow attacked the Latvian Interior Ministry, killing four people, including two regular police officers.

On Friday, a similar gathering of about 500 Latvian police officers took a unanimous vote of no-confidence in Vaznis, who has supported the pro-independence forces and allowed volunteers to build barricades in the streets of Riga.

When Gorbunovs said the barricades had been erected spontaneously by Latvians fearing a Soviet attack, jeering arose from the audience. The 43-year-old president was unable to continue until a senior police officer called for order.

Gorbunovs said a "political battle" was taking place in Latvia between the pro-independence Popular Front, which supports him, and the Communist Party. The recent shootings, he said, show "this battle is now being fought not only with political means, but also with violence."

He called for all political groups in Latvia to renounce violence and sit down at a negotiating table.

Among grievances raised by police were understaffing, low pay, lack of housing and a recent law requiring officers to learn the Latvian language.

They also voiced anger over an order by Vaznis prohibiting police from engaging in Communist Party activity during working hours. Vaznis suggested that much of the dissatisfaction stemmed from his decision to forbid police from moonlighting as guards.

Somali rebel guerrillas ask for calm, aid

By Chege Mbitiru
The Associated Press

NAIROBI, Kenya — The whereabouts of longtime Somali leader Mohamed Siad Barre remained a mystery Monday, more than a day after he fled the presidential palace in a tank. Rebels appealed for calm in the war-ravaged capital of Mogadishu and promised a return to democracy.

According to a radio broadcast of the Somali National Movement, the oldest of the three major guerrilla groups fighting to oust Siad Barre, loyalist troops and officials from the old regime were giving up through much of the Horn of Africa nation.

"Reports reaching Radio SNM say that in various parts of our country, remnants of Siad Barre's soldiers and officials are surrendering en masse to the bases of the liberation movements," the broadcast said Monday.

The Somali National Movement, which draws its support mainly from the Isaaq clan in northern Somalia and controls most of the interior, has operated the radio clandestinely for years.

The surrenders were not reported by the new state station Radio Mogadishu.

A spokesman of the humanitarian medical team Doctors Without Borders said his colleagues in Mogadishu reported no fighting overnight for the first time since the rebel offensive began Dec. 30 against Siad Barre.

Iraq warns of injuries to POWs

By David Cray
The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus — In an ominous follow-up to its "human shield" threat, Iraq said Monday that captured Desert Storm pilots have been injured in air raids staged by their comrades.

The Iraqi radio also warned that the Baghdad military might use "strategic weapons" against the U.S.-led coalition.

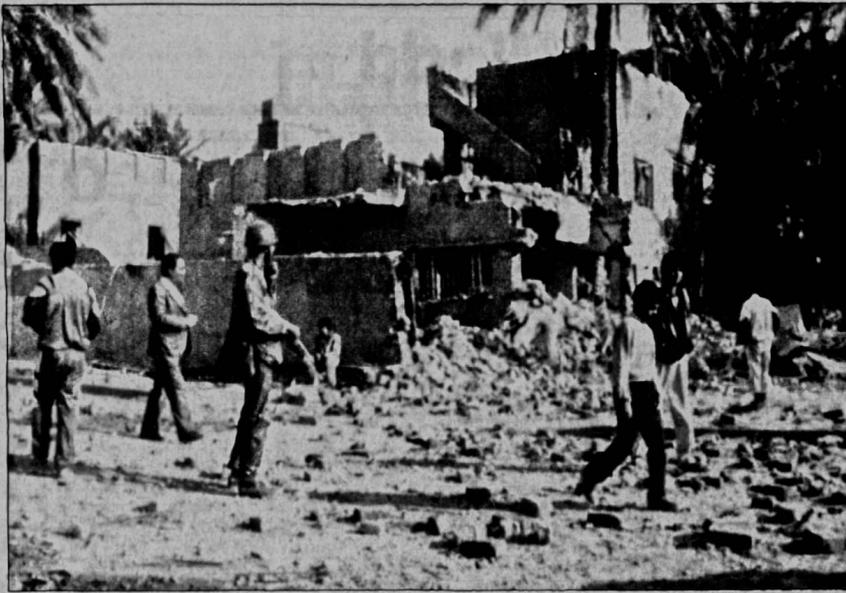

In a terse broadcast monitored in Nicosia, the radio said "a number of captured pilots were wounded" in air raids Sunday and Monday on "populated and civilian targets in Iraq."

"The responsible military quarters did not indicate whether any of the injured pilots have died," it added. It gave no further details.

Iraq claims to hold more than 20 American, British and other allied airmen as prisoners of war, and said last week that it would hold some of them in sites that might be targeted by the allies for air strikes.

The Iraqis last week brought some of the downed pilots before the television screen, where they made statements — clearly under coercion — against the U.S.-led war effort.

Both the interviews and the threat

This recent picture distributed by the Iraqi news agency to Jordanian newspapers shows, as the INA says, the severe damage inflicted in a Baghdad civilian neighborhood by the allied bombing.

to use a "human shield" tactic have been denounced by the anti-Iraq coalition as violations of the Geneva Convention on treatment of prisoners of war.

The radio's threat regarding "strategic weapons" apparently referred to Iraq's known capabilities in chemical and biological warfare. Although some analysts believed the Iraqis were a year or two from developing nuclear weapons, the U.S. military said its recent air attacks have obliterated the Iraqi nuclear network.

"Iraq has not yet used its strategic weapons," said Baghdad's "Mother of Battles Radio."

"What will emerge from these days when these weapons are used is more tragic days for the allied forces who began the aggression, then lost control of it," it said.

"Iraq's power alone will determine the finale of this confrontation the way it wants it (the finale) to be."

Meanwhile, in a letter to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, Iraq charged that U.S.-led allies had killed more than 320 people and wounded nearly 400 others in attacks on civilian, economic and religious targets.

The letter alleged that the highest number of civilian casualties occurred on Jan. 21 when 144 people were killed and 24 wounded in the bombing of residential neighborhoods in the holy cities.

President: Gulf conflict has become 'a just war'

Bush discusses moral issues of war, vows to free Kuwait, not destroy Iraq

By Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush, in an impassioned defense of the Persian Gulf conflict, said Monday it is "a just war" with a noble aim. Acknowledging that innocent people will be killed, he said, "That is war's greatest tragedy."

He said the sole purpose is to free Kuwait, not to destroy Iraq as some critics contend.

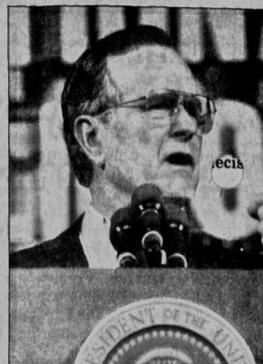

Bush said U.S.-led allies were making "every effort possible" to spare civilian casualties in nonstop bombing attacks.

By contrast, he said, Iraq's Saddam Hussein had ordered "wanton, barbaric bombing of civilian areas" in Israel and Saudi Arabia.

"War is never without the loss of innocent life," Bush said. "And that is war's greatest tragedy. But when a war must be fought for the greater good, it is our gravest obligation to conduct a war in proportion to the threat."

He discussed the morality of the war in a speech before a convention of religious broadcasters, who loudly applauded predictions that the allies will prevail over Iraq.

The speech followed a weekend filled with anti-war demonstrations — 75,000 people in Washington alone — and expressions of concern from Moscow about the damage being inflicted on its one-time ally, Iraq, and the danger to Iraqi civilians.

However, Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh, during a meeting with Bush, took note of the president's pledge not to destroy Iraq. Bessmertnykh said that "was always the policy of the president, so we are satisfied with that, absolutely."

World aids Saudis in slowing coastal slick

By Nabila Megalli
The Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — Experts from around the world raced to the Saudi Arabian coast on Monday to help the kingdom defend its vital desalination plants against an oil slick.

A Norwegian company that helped fight the Exxon Valdez spill in Alaska was sending a pollution-battling ship capable of swallowing a half-mile of oil daily. It was to reach a critical desalination plant on Tuesday.

British Petroleum Co. was flying in more than 70 tons of oil booms and suction skimmers. A team of experts from the U.S. Coast Guard and Environmental Protection Agency arrived in Riyadh and immediately met with Saudi officials.

The slick was several days away from Jubail, site of the world's largest water desalination plant and one of many such facilities in the path of the spill.

The oil from the Sea Island Terminal at Kuwait's Mina al-Ahmadi may have been halted by the allied precision bombing Saturday of the mechanism that allowed the oil to be pumped into the Persian Gulf, U.S. military officials said.

But environmentalists said so much crude already has poured into the waterway that an ecological catastrophe was certain.

For the arid desert region, the top priority was protecting the desalination plants that treat water for two-thirds of the region's estimated 18 million people.

U.S.-led allied forces in the war with Iraq also depend in part on the plants, which make sea water drinkable.

Saudi Oil Minister Hisham Nazer told King Fahd and his Cabinet that the slick contained roughly 11 million barrels of oil, or 460 million gallons, making it by far the biggest spill ever.

The previous record was 4.2 million barrels, or 176 million gallons, in a 1979 slick in the Gulf of Mexico. By contrast, the Exxon Valdez spill, the worst ever in the United States, was just under 11 million gallons.

U.S. officials said the Kuwaiti spill was heading south at 15 miles per day and would reach the Saudi coastal city of Ras al-Misha'ab by Tuesday. That is about 100 miles north of Jubail.

Brig. Gen. Pat Stevens, deputy director for logistics of the U.S. Central Command in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, said the extent of the slick was not clear.

"It appears we have stopped the flow of oil, but we continue to seek positive confirmation of that fact," he told reporters.

Nazer also said it was unclear if the flow had been stopped by the U.S. bombing.

Lt. Col. Ahmed Roboyan, a Saudi military spokesman, said a fire at the source of the slick had begun to diminish, an indication that the oil flow was abating.

The slick was just off the coast and so far had not encroached on shipping lanes, shipping executives said.

Walter McKenzie, principal surveyor for London's Salvage Association in the Persian Gulf, said the U.S. operation "almost decidedly was the best thing and to me the only way" to stop the gushing oil.

Still, he and others estimated that even if the U.S. operation was fully successful, at least another 50,000 barrels would add to the slick as residue from the pipelines dribbles into the sea.

International teams converged on the gulf to protect the desalination plants.

The 14,000-ton Al-Waasit of the Oslo-based Marine Service Co. was due to dock at Jubail early Tuesday, company manager Gunnar Gangsaas said.

Oil booms are placed in front of the desalination plant at Manama in Bahrain yesterday in an attempt to stop oil from the world's largest slick.

'Scissorhands' gives suburbia a new aura

By Henry Olson
The Daily Iowan

The concept behind "Edward Scissorhands" is corny, melodramatic and mawkishly sentimental. However, under Tim Burton's skillful direction and with its exceptional performances by Dianne Wiest and Vincent Price, "Edward Scissorhands" is a magical, moving fairy tale.

Edward, played by Johnny Depp, lives in a castle high above a lower-middle-class subdivision. Because of the untimely death of of the movie, we'll leave it at that.) Dianne Wiest, with her performance as the perfect suburban mom, is indeed perfect. To a character who speaks almost entirely in clichés, she lends a heartwarming believability. "I blame myself," she says as she rescues Edward from jail. She epitomizes hope in the face of unfortunate circumstances and the eager desire to help.

The scenes between Edward and his creator, played by Vincent Price, are equally touching. Price diligently teaches his young ward etiquette (lump sugar may never be taken with the fingers) and reads poetry to him, "There was an old man from the cape who would only wear garments of crepe/ When asked if they tear, he replied, 'Here and there, but they keep such a wonderful shape.'" You can't really get a better education than that.

Tim Burton balances the sentimentality of "Edward Scissorhands" with observant yet gentle criticisms of the American middle class. Edward's appearance on a his creator, he is left with scissors for hands. He remains alone until, one day, the neighborhood Avon lady, Peg (Dianne Wiest) calls. She rescues Edward and brings him down to the depths of suburbia.

Initially, Edward is a hit with the neighbors. He samples the women's ambrosia salads and works wonders with their hair (not to mention their pets and hedges). The fellows invite him to come play poker with them but make him promise that he won't cut the deck, heh heh. Then rumors about Edward begin to spread, and things start to go wrong. (Since the plot twists dominate the latter half talk show (with host John Davidson) mocks the conventions of the genre. One woman tells Edward that if he receives human hands, he wouldn't be special anymore; another asks Edward if he has a girlfriend.

Though Burton pokes fun at the foibles of suburbanites, he presents them in a very likable way. Perhaps the best example of this is Peg's concern for Edward's well-being. In an attempt to conceal the self-inflicted scarring on Edward's face, she calls the Avon corporate headquarters; though the excitement she takes in making the call is amusing, her genuine desire to make life better for Edward is refreshing.

Burton's genius for devising Rube Goldberg devices, which revealed itself in "Pee Wee's Big Adventure," also surfaces in "Edward Scissorhands." The creator's castle is filled with pink-frosted-cookie-making contraptions that reveal an unabandoned love of technology.

The only problem with "Edward Scissorhands" is a lackluster performance by Anthony Michael Hall, who this time plays not a geek with braces but a "threatening" bad guy. He succeeds, though, only in being belligerent. Fortunately, toward the end of the film, we are avenged.

"Edward Scissorhands" is one of the best films of 1990 (how lucky we are, though, to be able to watch it in 1991). It takes a brave man to create a film so unhip in its value system; fortunately, Tim Burton was just hip enough to do it.

Irving, Gurganus to read on campus next month

The Daily Iowan

Best-selling author John Irving, a graduate and former visiting lecturer at the UI Writers' Workshop, will read from his work at 8 p.m. Monday, Feb. 11, in Macbride Hall Auditorium.

Irving published his first novel "Setting Free The Bears" in 1968, one year after graduating from the UI Writers' Workshop. This was followed by "The Water-Method Man" in 1972 and "158-Pound Marriage" in 1974.

In 1978 he published "The World According to Garp," which brought him worldwide acclaim. The novel was nominated for a Pulitzer Prize, the National Book Critics' Circle Award and the National Book Award, and it won the American Book Award. His subsequent novels have been "The Hotel New Hampshire," "The Cider House Rules" and the recent best seller "A Prayer for Owen Meany."

Irving has taught at universities including the UI, Mount Holyoke College and Brandeis University.

His essays and book reviews have been published in The New Republic, The Saturday Review and the New York Times Book Review.

Irving is presently a member of the Executive Board of the interna-

Best-selling author Allan Gurganus, a graduate and former visiting lecturer of the UI Writers' Workshop, will read from his work at 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 8, in Shambaugh Auditorium. The reading will be broadcast live on WSUI AM 910.

Gurganus is the author of the best-selling novel "The Oldest Living Confederate Widow Tells All." It was his first novel, and it became an immediate nationwide success.

His second book, "White People," a collection of short stories, was published in 1990.

Gurganus' short fiction has appeared in many magazines, including The Atlantic Monthly, The Paris Review and The New Yorker.

He has also won many awards, including a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, an Ingram-Merrill Grant, a Danforth Scholarship and Stanford University's Wallace Stegner Fellowship.

Gurganus' university teaching includes positions at Stanford, Duke, the UI Writers' Workshop and Sarah Lawrence College.

Keaton, Eastwood get award

The Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Clint Eastwood and Diane Keaton are to receive Man and Woman of the Year Awards from Harvard University's Hasty Pudding Theatricals for their "lasting contribution" to the silver screen.

Keaton, 45, who made urban angst alluring with her Oscar-winning title role in "Annie Hall," will get a parade through Harvard Square and be presented with the traditional "Pudding Pot" at the Hasty Pudding Theater on Feb. 12, the theater group said Monday.

Eastwood, 60, who personifies macho excess in his "Dirty Harry" movies and also has won praise as a film director, is to get his award Feb. 19 at the premiere performance of the theater group's 143rd annual musical production.

WAR IN THE GULF

Press 'freedom'

Since the onset of the Persian Gulf war, Pentagon officials have successfully buoyed public opinion by diligently releasing favorable accounts of the U.S. military campaign in Iraq and Kuwait. While the American public has been soothed by the technical proficiency of its armed forces, the price of this technology-induced confidence has been a limitation on public understanding and on the free press. Unless the military adopts a more tolerant view of the press and reinstates the prerogative of unilateral coverage, the American people will never be given an authentic depiction of Operation Desert Storm.

Traditionally, the press has demonstrated considerable restraint when matters of military security are involved. Because of its vigilant discretion, journalists were afforded individual access to military personnel during the Vietnam

The current military bureaucracy appears to believe that the public's right to know is subservient to the political goals of the Bush administration.

War. The benefits of this open policy were immeasurable. Americans viewed the war with knowledge rather than ignorance. The government, stripped of wartime carte blanche, was forced to consider public opinion before it formulated governmental policies. Of course this complicated domestic and military strategies, but to do otherwise — to control the country through limited access to information — is tantamount to authoritarianism. This is what the United States was ostensibly fighting against in Vietnam, and it is one of the major criticisms of the Iraqi government.

Unfortunately, the current military bureaucracy appears to believe that the public's right to know is subservient to the political goals of the Bush administration. The American people are watching a carefully choreographed, made-for-TV miniseries about the successful exploits of the coalition forces. Reporters are being herded around in correspondent pools without any control over which battles are seen or which soldiers are interviewed. Then, when an interview finally does take place, a Public Affairs Officer presides over the entire process, ensuring that the discussion simply perpetuates military propaganda. This is not a matter of military security and concern for the lives of soldiers; it is a calculated attempt to retain public support by filtering out unpopular aspects of the war.

The horrors of Vietnam inculcated an extremely important lesson on the people of this country. Most Americans now find it difficult to cheer the deaths of the oppressed Iraqi soldiers. War is no longer viewed as a noble contest; there is nothing noble about killing the enemy. Instead, we have learned that war defiles our humanity. But if we allow the government to purify the destructiveness of our actions, if we hide the necessary atrocities that wartime brings, we risk losing our distaste for the gruesome consequences of war.

Of course, the press should never breach military security and threaten the lives of American and allied soldiers, but the government, the press and even the people must accept responsibility for the effects of the war. This can only occur if access to information remains free and unbiased.

Operation Desert Storm could last many months and policy decisions will need to be made. If the Bush administration values the public's opinion, information must be forthcoming; the news must be heard.

The real issue

To the Editor:

Michael Lorenger should be respected for his readiness to facilitate and to engage in gulf war debates. Yet his spirited column on the anti-war movement contains flawed arguments ("The anti-war position examined," Jan. 22, DI). I will address only one: oil.

Oil is not the single reason, but it certainly is a principal reason why Bush has driven the world to war. Lorenger claims that the gulf war is not about access to oil. Here he is right! No gulf country can survive without selling oil. And Iraq never threatened to deny oil to the U.S. or to any other nation.

War in the Middle East represents "Bush's big gamble" to control oil prices. With this control would come the power to coerce our European and Japanese "allies" — who are defeating us economically yet who depend on Middle Eastern oil — into such things as greater access to their markets and continued payoffs to our "rent-an-army."

The financial surpluses generated by oil sales to Europe and Japan, moreover, flow primarily to U.S. and British banks. Most of the largest U.S. banks are in real trouble. And, as a Nation writer puts it, "those who defend the oil fort will have de facto control of an Arabian treasure beyond the dreams of Aladdin."

My arguments have consistently identified Bush's plans for a cynical "New World Order" and U.S. thirst for oil profits as the two explanations of why tens of thousands of Americans and hundreds of thousands of Arabs will die in the coming months. Lorenger claims that the Left has mistakenly defined the gulf conflict as one over "U.S. access to Middle Eastern oil reserves." Here he is wrong. Insofar as oil is concerned, I certainly have defined it as one over profits, not access.

Does anyone seriously think that the U.S. would be carpet-bombing Iraq if its main export were broccoli?

Placing themselves above the law

(The following column is part of a monthly series of columns distributed by The Forum Syndicate, a group of minority student writers from around the country dedicated to establishing a more open and balanced debate on issues of race and ethnicity on college campuses.)

The recent Department of Education ruling that set the so-called civil rights leadership into a frenzy should have become one of the cornerstones of United States Education policy. The department's ruling only reaffirmed what the language of Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 so clearly states: that discrimination on the basis of race, color or national origin is against the law. Why then would so-called minority leaders come out so strongly against the application of the law which many of them (are you listening Ben Hooks?) helped to enact?

The Department of Education, via Assistant Secretary Williams, recently declared that the practice of awarding race-based scholarships was against public policy. Many legal scholars, including Derrick Bell of Harvard Law School, have declared that the Department of Education's ruling easily could have withstood judicial scrutiny. Similarly, there has been no outcry from the legal community attacking the legality of Williams' policy statement. It seems that the legal community understands the concept of applying the various laws of our country equally to all people, not just to specific groups.

I would call the application of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 to all Americans as being a type of intellectual honesty. What defines intellectual honesty? It means that one group shouldn't ask for the protection of its rights under a law unless it is willing to submit itself to the possible detriments that may occur within an equal application of that law. Does it not seem unusual then that civil rights leaders such as Benjamin Hooks of the NAACP cry foul when one of the arguably more important laws of our country is simply applied to blacks in the same fashion that it applies to whites?

It seems that Dr. Hooks is leading minority students down a yellow brick road of resentment and perhaps increased racial hostility on the nation's college campuses. This resentment will undoubtedly result as a by-product of President Bush's decision not to follow Williams' findings. This resentment and animosity may manifest itself in the form of racial hostilities at college campuses where race relations are somewhat amicable. If Hooks truly believed in bettering the racial climate in the United States, he could have spoken a thousand words simply by uttering nine, "I support the ruling of the Department of Education." Yes, uttering these nine words may have altered the college plans of hundreds if not thousands of black and other minority college students, but it would have also sent a message. The message sent to millions of Americans would have read: Blacks and other minorities can be intellectually honest even when it hurts. Hooks, however, chose not to send this message.

Guest Opinion

President Bush also failed to seize this opportunity to stand up for fairness. The result of the president's lack of leadership means that for the next four years minority students will be able to receive scholarship monies for which the non-minority population on most college campuses will not have a chance to compete. If I were a non-minority college student, I would be madly upset at the fact that I did not have the opportunity to compete for the same scholarship as a minority student solely because of my race.

Do you want to get a clearer picture of what non-minority students may be feeling? Put yourself in the shoes of the non-minority college student. Your family has realized that it cannot afford to continue financing your education. Imagine walking into the financial aid office at the university you now attend. Upon inquiring about financial aid opportunities, you are told that the only financial aid that remains is designated specifically for minority students. Wouldn't you feel a certain amount of animosity toward the next minority student with whom you came in contact?

The so-called civil rights leadership regularly issues inflammatory statements detailing how either public or private action and/or policies will result in a backlash of racism. One should wonder whether the so-called civil rights leadership has recognized that its actions themselves will cause a backlash of racism. Many Americans, who genuinely want to provide equal access to education for all and who believed in the civil rights movement, will stop supporting the traditional civil rights organizations such as the NAACP, PUSH and the Urban League. I believe that many Americans will do just this because now it is clear that these so-called civil rights leaders no longer want equality. Instead, they want to have their respective groups placed above the law. The American people, college students included, will not stand for this.

Civil rights leaders have used the Civil Rights Act to protect myriad Americans from the "vestiges of racism which pervade this country." However, these leaders now feel that minorities should be excluded from the class of Americans to which the act applies. Benjamin Hooks and others are making a mockery of the system and are certainly diminishing the earnest efforts of leaders across the country who truly want equal rights for all. Many thanks go to Ben Hooks and to other so-called civil rights leaders for showing Americans that people of color don't want to be judged by the content of our character but rather by the color of our skin.

War is an extension of the political arm

(Col. Harry G. Summers writes a weekly column for The Los Angeles Times. His military career includes combat action in both Korea and Vietnam, and he has served as an instructor in strategy at the Army War College. When the gulf crisis broke, media leaders sought Summers' military and analytical expertise. He has appeared on numerous television programs, including ABC "Nightline," NBC "Nightly News," the "Today Show" and "Crossfire." His columns are occasionally sent to The Daily Iowan by the Los Angeles Times Syndicate.)

What is war? That might seem a rather obvious question, but as the war in the Persian Gulf nears its second complete week, it is clear that many people do not fully understand what war is all about.

Curiously, even for those born long after that conflict was over, World War II remains the paradigm of war in most American minds. For them, total war, total destruction and total victory are what it's all about. You can even sense that in some discussions of why Baghdad is still standing after thousands of allied air sorties. Views of relatively little structural damage and reports of light civilian casualties, while testimony to the pinpoint accuracy of America's smart bombs and munitions, do not conform to that model and paradoxically are seen by some as evidence that our air campaign has been less than successful.

Guest Opinion

This misperception exists even at the highest levels of government. Calls for the trial of Saddam Hussein on war crimes charges for, among other things, mistreatment of allied prisoners of war are certainly understandable, but they are not in consonance with the U.S.'s stated war aims. Instead of total victory, these aims are limited to the expulsion of Iraqi forces from Kuwait, restoration of the government there, and insurance of peace and security in the area.

But total victory, as in World War II, is a necessary precondition for war crimes trials. After that war, enemy political and military leaders were brought to trial and convicted. Such was not the case after Korea and Vietnam, even though the crimes of North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung and North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh were equally monstrous.

Both waged aggressive war, and both killed and viciously mistreated American POWs. But since total victory was not achieved in either the Korean or Vietnam wars, neither was brought to trial. If President Bush intends to hang Saddam high, he needs to change his war aims; for as it now stands, calls for a trial — whether Bush realizes it or not — are just empty threats.

But the greatest misapprehension about war is the peculiar American view that war and politics are diametrically and fundamentally things apart. Americans by and large reject the Clausewitzian dictum that "war is simply a continuation of political intercourse with the addition of other means" and fail to see that "the main lines along which military events progress, and to which they are restricted, are political lines that continue throughout the war into the subsequent peace."

"War cannot be divorced from political life," Clausewitz warned, "and whenever this occurs in our thinking about war, the many links that connect the two elements are destroyed, and we are left with something pointless and devoid of sense."

Most commentators are measuring the progress in this war in military terms. In doing so, they are overlooking the enormous successes already scored in the political dimension of the conflict. The most significant success, the one that made all else possible, was persuading the Soviet Union to support America's actions in the gulf. The Soviet Union is indeed the enabler of the conflict, for without its tacit agreement the U.S. could not have disengaged its VII Corps from its defensive positions in Germany and deployed it to the gulf. And without that corps' two armored divisions, armored cavalry regiment and other fighting units, the allied forces in the gulf would have lacked the punch to take offensive action against Iraq.

With its veto power in the U.N. Security Council, the Soviet Union could have blocked any U.N. action against Iraq. But instead, as Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney pointed out last week, it took an active role in condemning Iraq and voting for the imposition of sanctions, including military sanctions, against its former ally. The result was the total cutoff of all Soviet arms, ammunition and military spare parts to Iraq.

Equally remarkable was the success of the Bush administration in forging an Arab coalition against Iraq. While Saddam Hussein called for a jihad, or holy war, Egypt and Syria, two of the largest Arab nations in the world, joined the coalition and moved their armored divisions into Saudi Arabia. The demeaning question of whether these Arab forces would fight was answered when the war planes of both Saudi Arabia and Kuwait joined in the air campaign against Iraq.

Also taking part in the air campaign are aircraft from Britain, Canada, France and Italy. In addition, military forces of some 28 nations from around the world are ready to do their part when and if ground combat operations are required.

The greatest evidence, however, that Clausewitz knew what he was talking about has been the role Israel has played in the conflict. Not a member of the coalition, and officially not part of the war, Israel has been the repeated target of Saddam's Scud missiles. It is important to note that the reasons for these attacks have nothing to do with military operations. They are political acts, pure and simple.

Even before the shooting war began, Saddam had tried to goad Israel into a pre-emptive attack, hoping to enrage the Arab members of the alliance and split the coalition. And when that didn't work, he tried to use military force.

Not only Israel, but the Arab members of the coalition as well, saw through his schemes. It was revealing to see the Israeli Deputy Foreign Minister Benjamin Netanyahu quoting both Egypt and Syria in support of Israel's right to respond to outside aggression.

To understand the war in the gulf, first one must understand its political nature, for as Clausewitz warned, "the probable character and general shape of any war should mainly be assessed in the light of political factors and conditions."

Prime example

To the Editor:

In responding to Tom Lewis' "Teacher Talk" column, Michael Lorenger adopts the standard of discourse he attributes to the campus Left. The linchpin of Lorenger's argument is the right-wing chant, "it's not about oil," in which he ignores most of the economic and political analyses of the issues in the Persian Gulf, as well as Bush's statements immediately following the dispatch of U.S. troops to the gulf. Remember

"defending our way of life" (e.g. heavy consumption of imported oil)?

When Bush discovered that fighting for cheap oil and/or high oil profits was not going to sell, he came up with a public relations campaign for war based on the vilification of Saddam and the bogeyman of his questionable nuclear capacity. If "it's not about oil," why have AMOCO profits gone up 69 percent?

Lorenger goes on to explain the U.S.'s selectivity in supporting butchers and aggressors like Saddam in some instances, while defending their victims in others, as a moral cost-benefit analysis. However, in decrying the "atrocities committed against the Kuwaiti people," he ignores similar reports about the torture and brutality practiced by the ruling families of Saudi Arabia and of Kuwait before the invasion.

For an argument "devoid of consistency and relevance," there is no better example than Lorenger's column. The "catch phrase-style propaganda" is also presented as news in The Daily Iowan and is even more deplorable. As long as the DI focuses on counterprotesters, scuffles and civil disobedience and ignores the arguments presented by the speakers at demonstrations and rallies, there can be no credible discourse in its pages.

Tasteless 'toon

To the Editor:

In regard to the editorial cartoon of Jan. 18, we are writing to express our dismay. It is difficult to imagine that in this era of heightened sensitivity to the rights of women and ethnic minorities, you find it appropriate to print something so offensive. During this time of international crisis and division of national opinion, you have satirized an issue as serious as war with a normally solemn and private occasion.

Congratulations! You have succeeded in offending not only those who support or oppose the president's actions in regards to the Middle East but other unrelated groups as well. As you are supposedly an "enlightened" editorial group, it is surprising to us that you have been so well able to give the word "distasteful" new meaning.

Noriega tapes allowed; case goes on

By Richard Cole
The Associated Press

MIAMI — A federal judge Monday rejected the defense's call to throw out Manuel Noriega's drug case, ruling the deposed Panamanian leader's rights had not been jeopardized by government taping of his prison phone calls.

The defense had asked U.S. District Judge William Hoeverler to dismiss the indictment on grounds of government misconduct.

Noriega's attorneys accused the prosecution of improperly recording calls between their client and their office, one of which was later leaked and telecast by Cable News Network.

But prosecutors responded that Noriega had signed documents acknowledging his calls were being monitored and taped.

Hoeverler said Monday that the June 24 trial will go on as planned.

"While there were some irregularities, I'm going to follow the law which says that dismissal is too great a sanction," said Hoeverler. "I don't think the defendant has been hurt to the extent that he has been denied a fair trial."

On another front, Noriega's defense attorneys confirmed they will remain on the case, in view of the Austrian government's release of $1.6 million in frozen funds linked to their client.

More than $18 million is still frozen in European banks, and the federal government has agreed to continue trying to get enough of that money released to pay Noriega's attorneys.

The defense says the $1.6 million is already committed for past expenses, and they agreed to accept $75 an hour — far less than the $350 an hour that lead attorney Frank Rubino says he needs — from the federal government until more of their client's money is released. Only two attorneys — Rubino and co-counsel Jon May — will be covered by the government's fee arrangement.

The judge's ruling on the dismissal case doesn't end the tape controversy. CNN is still potentially liable for criminal contempt fines for airing one tape in alleged violation of Hoeverler's order, although no hearing date has been set in that case.

And Jose Blandon, Noriega's former intelligence chief who is now a prosecution witness, is still under investigation for leaking the tape to the network.

The judge emphasized that the question of the tapes was not closed. He said he would review the question as the case progressed if the defense could show him evidence their case was damaged because of the phone recordings.

The ruling followed two days of hearings earlier this month.

New Mexico state police officers look over a scene where seven people, including a state police officer and a Rio Arriba County sheriff's deputy, were shot to death Saturday evening. A suspect in the slayings, 29-year-old Rickey Abeya, was arrested late Sunday night by New Mexico State Police.

Man surrenders after N.M. slayings

By Ed Moreno
The Associated Press

SANTA FE, N.M. — Charges of first-degree murder and assault were filed Monday against a 29-year-old man suspected in the fatal shootings of two lawmen and possibly five other people, including his girlfriend.

The officers were killed Sunday after they arrived at the man's home to serve a restraining order on him at his girlfriend's request, police said. The man, Ricky Abeya, surrendered to New Mexico State Police in Albuquerque Sunday night.

Abeya was charged with a single count of murder for the death of Rio Arriba County Deputy Jerry Martinez, 30, police told a news conference. He also was charged with assault in the wounding of a 13-year-old boy, police said at a news conference.

State police Sgt. David Osuna said the district attorney would present other cases to a grand jury within 10 days.

Abeya was being held in the Santa Fe County Detention Center.

He is suspected in the slayings Saturday of Martinez and state police Officer Glen Huber, 35, in a rural cluster of mobile homes a few miles from Chimayo, a community 100 miles north of Albuquerque.

Huber was shot in the head through the window of his car and Martinez' body was found on the ground, police said.

Also killed were Abeya's girlfriend, Ignacia Sandoval, 36; her daughter, Maryellen Sandoval, 19; Maryellen's 6-month-old son, Justin Gonzales; Justin's father, Macario Gonzales, 19; and Ignacia Sandoval's sister, Cheryl Rendon, 25.

Abeya also is a suspect in at least some of the other five deaths, Osuna said. It remained unclear if any of the other victims were shot before the officers arrived. Police also were investigating the possibility that someone else was involved in the shootings.

Osuna said shots had been reported fired at Abeya's home before the two law officers arrived.

Ignacia Sandoval's son, Eloy Sandoval, was shot in the shoulder.

Murdered man linked to IRA

The Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — An outlawed Protestant paramilitary group claimed responsibility Monday for shooting to death a man in front of his five children.

The Ulster Freedom Fighters said Sean Rafferty, 44, was killed Sunday night because he was "deeply involved with the Provisional IRA in north Belfast."

But neighbors said Rafferty, a construction worker, was unconnected with any paramilitary or political group. They believed he was killed simply because he was Roman Catholic.

Police late Monday said they were searching for three assailants, who reportedly drove away from the shooting scene and set the car ablaze in the nearby Protestant-dominated Shankill district.

Neighbors said Rafferty was killed in the kitchen of his home. The killing was witnessed by his children, aged 11 to 21. His wife was upstairs at the time.

The Freedom Fighters is the military wing of the Ulster Defense Association, the largest of a number of paramilitary groups that have formed in the Protestant areas of Belfast.

The Provisional IRA, so-called because of a split in the ranks in the late 1960s, has carried on an armed campaign against British rule in Northern Ireland for more than 20 years.

Violence in Northern Ireland since 1969 has claimed more than 2,850 lives, including civilians, police, militia and soldiers, according to police records.

About 20 percent of those deaths have been in north Belfast, according to journalist Michael McKeown, author of "Two Seven Six Three," an analysis of casualties in Northern Ireland.

Iraqi pilots just trying to get out of the war or it's something the Iraqi regime is supporting," Pentagon operations chief Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly said in Washington.

But whatever the motive, U.S. command spokesman Brig. Gen. Pat Stevens told reporters in Saudi Arabia, "We are delighted to see (it) because every one of those aircraft that leaves Iraq is one less that we will have to engage in combat."

In Washington, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, said Iran has repeatedly assured the United States that it would impound the Iraqi planes until the end of hostilities.

Stevens said war planners nonetheless would keep a close eye on the aircraft in Iran, since they could pose a threat to Navy ships in the gulf and other Desert Storm units.

Arnett, one of the last foreign correspondents in Baghdad, asked about the departed pilots in his interview with Saddam.

The Iraqi leader replied by vaguely referring to Iran and Iraq, former enemies, as both viewing "the confrontation here as a battle between faith and the infidel." But he said Iraq would respect the decisions of neighbor Iran, Arnett reported.

Largest-ever oil spill
Out in the gulf's blackened waters, meanwhile, the mammoth crude oil slick that began pouring from Iraqi-held Kuwait early last week now totals some 460 million gallons, Saudi officials reported. That is almost three times the size of the world's largest previous spill, from a Mexican well blowout in the Gulf of Mexico in 1979.

The U.S. command said the spill began when the Iraqis opened valves and pumped crude directly into the sea from Kuwait's main offshore loading terminal, Sea Island.

Late Saturday, U.S. Air Force F-111 bombers unleashed "smart bombs" on key onshore pipeline junctions in Kuwait in hopes of stemming the oil flow out to the terminal.

"It appears that we have stopped the flow of oil," Stevens said Monday. "But we continue to seek positive confirmation of that fact."

In broadcasts short on specifics, the Baghdad government claimed U.S. air strikes on tankers and oil facilities had spilled oil and touched off fires. The U.S. command acknowledged that a nearby clash at sea ignited a fire at the Sea Island terminal, but it rejects the charge that its forces caused the major spill.

The Sea Island fire was "getting smaller and smaller" Monday, a sign that the flow from shore may have been cut off, said a Saudi military spokesman, Col. Ahmed al-Robayan.

The crude already in the water was enough for an environmental calamity.

The gulf is full of marine life — dolphins and turtles, cormorants and coral, mangrove and shellfish — lying in the path of the south-bound spill.

But Saudi authorities were necessarily concentrating their defenses not on animal and plant life, but on desalination plants, whose converted seawater supplies two-thirds of the drinking water for the gulf states, as well as water for an estimated 100,000 troops of Operation Desert Storm.

A Norwegian oil-skimming ship is expected to be on station Tuesday off the major water-conversion plant at Jubail, Saudi Arabia. The slick, traveling some 15 miles a day, should reach Jubail within several days.

Meanwhile, British Petroleum Co. was flying in more than 70 tons of oil booms and suction skimmers. Environmentalists sound hopeless.

Media

Smith emphasized quality of information over quantity — the availability of information is not as important as how reporters utilize it.

But many people are being too hard on the press, according to Hanno Hardt, professor of journalism, who believes that the public's expectations of the media have been unrealistic.

"Media coverage reflects society's problems," Hardt said. Lack of educated individuals in the press, just as in society, has contributed to poor war coverage, he said.

Saddam

"I don't mean that," Arnett quoted Saddam as saying, "Iraq will use weapons that equate the weapons used against us."

The Iraqis are known to have chemical and biological warfare capabilities, but Western analysts have questioned whether they could equip their Scud missiles with such weapons.

As for nuclear weapons, some in the West believed Iraq was just a year or two from developing atomic warheads. But the U.S. military said its recent bombing has obliterated Iraq's nuclear network.

Saddam refused to comment specifically on whether Iraq had dumped millions of barrels of oil into the gulf, as others have reported. But he said oil could be used as a weapon. "If Iraq uses oil in self-defense, including in the sea, they would be justified in taking such action," Arnett quoted him as saying.

Saddam attacked "hypocritical Western politicians" who he said convinced him last fall that if he let foreigners go, there would be peace, Arnett said. Iraq allowed most foreigners to leave by December.

Arnett quoted Saddam as saying, "If we had kept these 5,000 hostages here, would Bush have bombed Baghdad?"

Arnett said he was unexpectedly summoned to a meeting with a high official and then was taken to a small bungalow in suburban Baghdad. He said he waited about an hour and Saddam arrived. The interview was about 90 minutes.

Asked about using the captured pilots as hostages, Saddam said that Iraqis had been interned in allied nations.

When asked how long he thought the war would last, Saddam said, "Only God knows. Iraqis will win the admiration of the world with their fighting prowess."

"Lots of blood will be shed, blood on every side — American, French, Saudi blood and Iraqi," Arnett quoted him as saying.

"I asked him what message he hoped would come through in the interview," Arnett said.

His reply, according to Arnett:

"I wish the Americans well and pray none of their sons will die and that all the people of Iraq are grateful to noble souls in America demonstrating against the war, in France, in Germany, in Spain and all others."

Saddam said he had no doubt whether Iraq would win, "Not even one in a million."

As for Iraq using planes that have flown to Iran, Iraq's bitter enemy during eight years of war, Saddam said, "in all circumstances, we respect the decisions and regulations of the state of Iran," according to Arnett.

Asked if the planes would be used again, Saddam said, "each case in its own circumstance."

Allied officials have said as many as 100 Iraqi planes have flown to Iran, which has promised to impound them until the war's end.

Economy

into the economy? I think the answer is no," Whiteman said.

Whiteman said that the U.S. is amply supplied because of the military build-up in the '80s and that the number of missiles that may be produced in the next few months won't be enough to affect economic statistics.

And unlike Stevenson who believes Americans are already "tapped out," Whiteman said consumers, if necessary, are willing to fund the war effort because ultimately "taxpayers stand ready to fork over the resources."

Apple introduces the Macintosh LC—an affordable color Macintosh system that's perfect for students.

If you thought that finding a color Macintosh® system you could afford was just a dream, then the new, affordable Macintosh LC is a dream come true.

The Macintosh LC is rich in color. Unlike many computers that can display only 16 colors at once at once, the Macintosh LC expands your palette to 256 colors. It also comes with a microphone and new sound-input technology that lets you personalize your work by adding voice or other sounds.

Like every Macintosh computer, the LC is easy to set up and easy to master. And it runs thousands of available applications that all work in the same, consistent way—so once you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. The Macintosh LC even lets you share information with someone who uses a different type of computer—thanks to the versatile Apple® SuperDrive™, which can read from and write to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS/2, and Apple II floppy disks.

Take a look at the Macintosh LC and see what it gives you. Then pinch yourself. It's better than a dream—it's a Macintosh.

Grudge match calm, but ugly

Hawks finally fall, 53-50

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — What could have turned into a hostile situation stayed subdued and was confined to the basketball court as the Iowa men's basketball team faced Illinois Monday night.

Though boos and chants of "Iowa sucks" and "Bruce Pearl sucks" echoed throughout Assembly Hall, the only fighting present was done legally on the court. And by the end, it had turned into one heckuva fight.

Coming back from a 15-point deficit early in the second half, the Hawkeyes almost sent the ESPN "Big Monday" contest into overtime before settling for a 53-50 loss to the Illini.

The game was the first between Iowa and Illinois since the Illini basketball program was put on probation.

It was suspected that the game could be home for some ugly scenes because of the situation with Iowa assistant coach Bruce Pearl and Illinois freshman forward Deon Thomas. But the only ugliness seen here Monday night was the caliber of play both teams displayed in a first half that ended 25-19 in favor of the Illini.

Pearl had taped a telephone conversation with Thomas when he was being recruited, during which Thomas allegedly said that he had been offered a car and $80,000 by the Illini. Thomas denied making all such comments after signing with Illinois.

In their investigation, the NCAA didn't find Illinois guilty of any illegal offers, but put the Illini on probation for other infractions.

Thomas, who had vowed to have "the game of his life" against the Hawkeyes, finished Monday's contest with seven points and eight rebounds. After the game, he talked about the controversy.

"I don't know about ever forgetting (Pearl), but I have to try," Thomas said. "Everybody's human, and like the good book says, you have to forgive and forget. But I don't know if that's going to happen."

Pearl also commented on the situation, saying that the moment of silence before the game for the troops in Saudi Arabia helped to keep the situation calm.

"There are great rivalries in the Big Ten, and this was a great rivalry before we had this problem," Pearl said. "I thought everybody handled the situation pretty well. Having everyone pause for the moment of silence and everyone quiet (before the game) put it in perspective for me."

The Illini split the game wide open in the beginning of the second half. After the intermission, Illinois pulled the score to 37-24 in its favor in the four minutes of the half.

But with about seven minutes left in the game, the Hawkeyes began a charge that pulled them within 10 of the Illini, 48-38.

With three and a half minutes remaining, Iowa point guard Kevin Iowa freshman Chris Street looks to get around Illinois forward Andy Kpedi during the first half of Iowa's 53-50 loss to Illinois at Assembly Hall in Champaign.

Smith brought the Hawkeyes within five points of Illinois, 51-46 and sophomore guard Val Barnes added two more points just 30 seconds later.

But after a free throw by Illinois'

Rennie Clemons, Smith missed a 3-point shot and Iowa center Acie Earl fouled Thomas.

With the score 52-48, Thomas hit one of two from the free throw line.

UNLV still on top, but OSU lurks

The Associated Press

UNLV continues unbeaten, but the Runnin' Rebels' dominance is no longer unquestioned.

For the first time in four weeks UNLV (15-0) failed to get all 64 first-place votes in weekly poll of sports writers and broadcasters.

In the poll released Monday, two voters picked Ohio State as No. 1. The Buckeyes moved from fourth to third after beating Indiana and Minnesota last week.

Ohio State (17-0) was one of four teams in last week's Top 10 which did not lose. The others were UNLV, a winner over UC-Santa Barbara and Louisville; Arkansas, which beat Texas A&M and Baylor and remained No. 2, and St. John's, which jumped from No. 10 to fourth with victories over Connecticut and Villanova.

UNLV, the defending national champion, is on a 26-game winning streak and has been No. 1 for 11 straight weeks. In the latest poll, the Runnin' Rebels got 1,598 points, 82 points more than Arkansas and 108 more than Ohio State.

Completing the Top 10 are No. 4 Indiana, St. John's, Arizona, Duke, Syracuse, North Carolina and Kentucky. Arizona dropped to sixth from fifth; Duke moved from ninth to seventh; Syracuse dropped from sixth to eighth; North Carolina dropped from No. 7 to No. 9 and Kentucky dipped from eighth to 10th.

Nebraska (17-2) advanced three spots to No. 11.

Completing the Top 25 are UCLA, Utah, Louisiana State, Virginia, East Tennessee State, Southern

Kansas is in the poll for the first time this season after being No. 1 for four weeks last season.

Five new-lookers remain available

Six agree to arbitration

By Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — With one day remaining in the new-look free agency period, five players still were available, including pitcher Jack Morris of the Detroit Tigers.

The new-look free agents have until midnight EST Tuesday to sign with new clubs or stay with their present teams. Morris was the most attractive of the remaining group.

"There's nothing I can say at this point," said Richard Moss, Morris' agent. Moss said that he was talking with other clubs besides the Tigers, so it was unclear where the winningest pitcher of the 1980s would wind up.

California outfielder Chili Davis and pitchers Juan Berenguer of Minnesota, Dave LaPoint of the New York Yankees and Mike LaCoss of San Francisco also were left from the original group of 15. The agents for Davis and LaPoint said Monday that their players had no offers and would likely retain their present contracts.

The first 10 new-look free agents to agree to new deals signed for a total of $79.95 million over 29 years, an average of $2,756,896 a season.

Meanwhile, six players in salary arbitration agreed Monday to one-year contracts, leaving 116 remaining in arbitration. Hearings are scheduled to begin next Monday and run through Feb. 21.

Outfielder John Kruk and Philadelphia agreed at $1,175,000, a raise of $495,000, while infielder-outfielder Bip Roberts quadrupled his salary when San Diego settled at $875,000, a raise of $680,000.

Pitcher Eric Plunk and the New York Yankees agreed to $950,000, a raise of $435,500. Outfielder Dave Martinez and the Montreal Expos settled at $805,000, a raise of $395,000.

First baseman Todd Benzinger and the Cincinnati Reds agreed to $705,000, a raise of $380,000, while infielder Rene Gonzales and the Toronto Blue Jays settled at $306,250, a $100,000 raise.

In other baseball news, outfielder Shane Mack, who became a starter with the Minnesota Twins in 1990, has signed a one-year contract with the team.

Iowa breaks out of Badger streak

By Jim Viner
The Daily Iowan

History was made as the Iowa women's track and field team traveled to Camp Randall Sport Center for a triangular meet against Wisconsin and Western Illinois last weekend.

It was the first victory for the team over Wisconsin in fifteen years, with the Hawkeyes tallying 64 team points to Wisconsin's 44. Western Illinois finished with 32.

Women's Track

"I told the team that although it's a triangular and early in the season that it was important to perform well against a team that has given us a lot of headaches over the years," Coach Jerry Hassard said.

Sophomore Christine Salsberry was a double winner, winning the mile in 4:54.9 and the 800 in 2:14.6. Both times were personal bests for Salsberry. Tina Stec placed second in the mile with 4:56.9, and junior Tami Hoskins placed second in the 800 with 2:16.2.

The Hawkeyes fared well in the field events as well, highlighted by Nancy Tessmer's performance in the high jump. Tessmer cleared 5'8.5" for first in the event. Lisa Van Steenwyk and Laura Kriener placed 1-2 in the shot put, with Van Steenwyk winning with a 45'6 1/4" toss.

The 4x400 relay team of Layne, Powell, McReil and Floyd placed first with a time of 3:57.5.

Other highlights included the 3000 meter run, in which Tracy Dahl placed second and freshman Jennifer Johnson placed fourth with a personal best of 10:05.4.

"Tracy's time was our greatest improvement over a previous p.r. (personal record)," Hassard said. "It was an improvement of 42 seconds over her previous best."

Hassard was pleased with not only the winning performances in the meet, but also the large number of other places the team claimed.

"I felt that our overall balance was excellent in this meet," Hassard said. "That's something that I really stress and it really was the difference for us."

"This was a bigger step for us than you usually expect from a triangular meet. This is a real good experience for us to build on for the rest of the year."

Hassard's team will stay home to host Illinois State and Northeast Missouri State this weekend. Field events start at 10:30 and track events start at 11:00.

Anderson doesn't expect protection

By Dave Goldberg
The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Bill Parcells almost surely will be back as coach of the New York Giants next season. Otis Anderson almost surely will be exposed to Plan B for the third straight season despite his Super Bowl MVP award.

And the Giants hope they won't repeat the mistakes they made after they won their last Super Bowl, which led to their only losing season in eight years.

Parcells, who won his second Super Bowl when the Giants beat the Buffalo Bills 20-19 on Sunday, didn't exactly say he would return to the Giants. But he signed off this way on Monday:

"To you New York writers, I'll see you in training camp next summer."

After the Giants won their first Super Bowl in 1987, Parcells was offered the job as Atlanta's general manager and coach. All this week, with the Super Bowl in Tampa, there has been speculation that he would resign after this game to take the same position with the Tampa Bay Bucs — one even said he would do it Monday.

"Everything that's been written about me is a fabrication," he said. "There is no truth to any of those rumors. I haven't talked to anyone about anything. Last time after we won this thing I didn't give my owners or George Young (the general manager) any time to savor the victory. That's not going to happen this time."

The hedge came when Parcells, who has one year left on a contract that will pay him $900,000 for the 1991 season, added: "Just like every year, I'll sit down and evaluate where I am and what I want to do."

Parcells then talked about his plans for the next few weeks — making up his list of Plan B players; attending the pre-draft scouting combine in Indianapolis; and revamping his coaching staff, which has already lost receivers coach Tom Coughlin, the new head coach at Boston College.

It also could lose defensive coordinator Bill Belichick to a head coaching job in Cleveland or Tampa, and running backs coach Ray Handley, who has been accepted at George Washington Law School. Belichick and Handley would have been the two most likely candidates to succeed Parcells had he decided to leave.

As for Plan B, one of those on the Giants' unprotected list will undoubtedly be Anderson, who has been on it the last two years.

"I should be on it," said the 33-year-old running back, who won the MVP after rushing for 102 yards on 21 carries in Sunday's game.

Why? Because the Giants have a stable of young running backs headed by rookie Rodney Hampton, who had moved ahead of Anderson until breaking his leg in the playoff victory over Chicago; all-purpose back Dave Meggett and second-year man Lewis Tillman.

Moreover, like most successful teams, the Giants tend to expose older players and protect younger talent — they lost nine players last season but picked up veterans such as Everson Walls, Dave Duerson, Matt Bahr and Lawrence McGrew to compensate.

Asked what Parcells had told him, Anderson laughed and went into a series of elaborate hand and facial gestures to simulate the conversation.

"Well . . . you know . . . it's like this," he said. "We talk for about 10 or 15 minutes and it sort of goes like that."

But Anderson, who hasn't even gotten a nibble the last two years, said that unless he gets an offer he can't refuse, he'd be back.

"I'd like to finish my career in New York," he said. "Am I ready to retire? No."

Parcells also said that as far as he's concerned, there's no quarterback controversy for next season. Jeff Hostetler, the 29-year-old who is 7-0 as a starter, led the Giants to three playoff victories in place of 35-year-old Phil Simms, who injured his foot Dec. 15 against Buffalo.

"I'll let you know at the start of camp next year," Parcells said.

New York running back Otis Anderson, winner of this year's Super Bowl MVP award, expects to be left unprotected by the Giants and says that's how it should be.

Hawkeyes

But with 1:50 left, Barnes put the Hawkeyes within two points. As time ran out, Smith drove down the court and tried to dish the ball, but none of his teammates had an open shot. Smith then pulled up for a 3-pointer himself, but the shot bounced off the rim. And the Illini had a 53-50 victory. Illinois opened up the scoring, but junior James Moses hit the go-ahead basket for the Hawkeyes with 17 minutes left in the half. Iowa then remained in front of the Illini until an alley oop pass to guard Rennie Clemons with 2:22 left in the first half made the score 19-17 in Illinois' favor. After Clemons and Tom Michael each hit one free throw, Iowa's

Smith got Iowa on the board again with a baseline jumper to make the score 21-19. But Clemons quickly returned the favor and guard Brooks Taylor added two free throws to give the Illini a six-point lead. With under 10 seconds left in the half, Skinner was fouled but missed his shot from the charity stripe. A final desperation shot from half-court by Iowa's Smith was wide and the Illini carried a the six-point lead into the locker room at the intermission. The Hawkeyes had 10 blocked shots during the contest, setting a new school record. Earl tied an Iowa record set by Les Jepsen with six blocks.

Replacement lifts Pistons over Bullets

Pistons 87, Bullets 81
AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — John Long made four free throws in the final 16 seconds and Joe Dumars scored 10 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter as the Detroit Pistons beat Washington 87-81 Monday night. Dennis Rodman added 18 points Long had 10 as Detroit won its 15th in the last 17 games. The Pistons won their 11th straight at home and moved one-half game ahead of Chicago in the Central Division. Bernard King led Washington with 30 points. Harvey Grant added 10 as the Bullets lost to Detroit for the 13th time in 14 games. Celtics 108, Timberwolves 87
MINNEAPOLIS — Brian Shaw scored 8 of his 23 points in the final 6 minutes and the Boston two free throws with 16.4 seconds left to put the Pistons ahead 85-81. He added two more with 7.7 seconds. Kevin McHale added 20 points and Kevin Gamble 19 for the Celtics, who are 5-6 without injured Larry Bird. Boston, which saw a 25-point lead shrink to 5, leads the NBA with a 25-1 record against the four most recent expansion teams. Pooh Richardson and Tyrone Corbin scored 18 each for the Timberwolves. Minnesota, 0-4 since leading scorer Tony Campbell left the lineup with a sprained ankle, tied a team record with only 10 points in the second quarter. Spurs 119, Sonics 107

SAN ANTONIO — Willie Anderson scored a season-high 28 points, including three straight baskets late in the fourth quarter as the San Antonio Spurs beat the Seattle SuperSonics 119-107 and extended their winning streak to five. David Robinson added 25 points, 11 rebounds and eight blocked shots. He also made the first 3-point basket of his career, at the buzzer. Terry Cummings scored 24 points and Rod Strickland contributed 18 points, 12 assists and nine rebounds as the Spurs lifted their home-court record to 17-3. The Sonics, losers of seven straight on the road, were led by Eddie Johnson's 21 points and Shawn Kemp's 15.

Bears to leave Tomczak unprotected

DI wire services
CHICAGO — Chicago Bears quarterback Mike Tomczak says he won't be on his team's 37-man protected list, leaving him free to negotiate with other teams. Tomczak said Sunday he received a letter Friday from the Bears informing him he'll become a Plan B free agent when the list is submitted Feb. 1. "It was my recommendation that if we wanted to give Peter Tom Willis an opportunity to see what he can do, that we let Mike go now," Bears offensive coordinator Greg Landry said. "Not that we didn't want Mike. And he could still decide that he wants to stay with us rather than signing with another team.

percent) for 521 yards in the regular season with three touchdowns and five interceptions. USA Today to launch baseball tabloid
NEW YORK — The publishers of USA Today said Monday they plan to launch a weekly tabloid this April devoted exclusively to baseball. The newspaper ostensibly would provide more competition for readers and advertisers with The National, the daily sports newspaper that celebrates its first anniversary on Thursday, and The Sporting News, a weekly sports paper published by Times Mirror Co. It is also debuting during one of the weakest periods for advertising spending growth in 20 years. The new weekly, which will be called USA Today Baseball Weekly, will begin publication April 5 and have a cover price of $1. USA Today said in an announcement. It will also be available by subscription for about $35 a year. The newspaper, owned by Gannett Co. Inc., said it plans to publish the baseball paper every week during the 1991 season and once every other week in the offseason. "We believe there is a demand for more baseball statistics and news than readers get from their daily newspaper," said USA Today general manager Thomas J. Farrell, who takes on the added title of publisher of the baseball tabloid. Executives at The National say they have been studying the possibility of launching a weekly tabloid that would be in addition to its daily paper, which now publishes Monday through Friday. Frand Deford, editor of The National, said the introduction of the baseball weekly will not have any impact on The National's deliberations over launching a weekly that would cover all sports. Farrell said USA Today Baseball Weekly would be printed in color at 18 print sites that currently print USA Today and that it will be between 32 and 48 pages. The newspaper will include extensive statistical reports, TV previews, game schedules, team-by-team notes for major and minor-league teams and reports devoted to fans who play in fantasy leagues or memorabilia collectors, he said. He said Paul White, formerly assignment editor-baseball for USA Today, has been named editor of the baseball weekly. Rick D. Gebensleben, general manager of the Cleveland-Columbus market for USA Today, has been named circulation manager, and Kevin McCarthy, formerly account executive at USA Today, has been named national advertising director.

Long, baseball record-holder, dead at 64
PALM COAST, Fla. — Dale Long, who set a major league record with home runs in eight consecutive games in 1956, died Sunday after a long bout with cancer. He was 64. Long spent 11 years in the major leagues with the Pittsburgh Pirates, Chicago Cubs, Washington Senators and New York Yankees. His record string of homers began in Pittsburgh on May 19, 1956, off Jim Davis of the Chicago Cubs. It ended on May 28 with his eighth homer, off Carl Erskine of the Brooklyn Dodgers at Forbes Field. The record was tied by Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees in 1987. Long, then with the Pirates, was the starting first baseman in the 1956 All-Star Game. In 1958, the Cubs tried a short-lived experiment with Long, making him a left-handed throwing catcher. He played in the World Series with the Yankees in 1960 and '62, and retired in 1963 with a .267 average, 132 homers and 467 RBIs. Long, who was born in Springfield, Mo., is survived by his wife, Dorothy, and two sons, Dale Jr., and Jonny.

Sportsbriefs

"But I felt it would be better to give Mike a chance to catch on someplace else now rather than wait until August," Landry said. "Then, if Willis worked out and became our No. 2 quarterback, we'd hand him his walking papers just before the regular season started." Tomczak said the letter came as a surprise because Bears coach Mike Ditka had said he was planning to keep all three quarterbacks — Tomczak, Willis and Jim Harbaugh. "But, like Ditka says, in life, sometimes you change your mind," Tomczak said. Tomczak signed with the Bears as a free agent in 1985 after all 28 NFL teams passed him up in the draft. He backed up Jim McMahon until winning the starting job in 1989. Tomczak lost the starting spot to Harbaugh this year until Harbaugh was benched with a separated shoulder in December. Tomczak completed 39 of 104 passes (37.5

percent) for 521 yards in the regular season with three touchdowns and five interceptions. USA Today to launch baseball tabloid

'Galloping Ghost' dead at 87

The Associated Press

LAKE WALES, Fla. — Red Grange, football's "Galloping Ghost" whose blazing speed catapulted the game to front-page headlines, died Monday at a Lake Wales hospital after a lengthy illness. He was 87.

Grange, who had been hospitalized since July and on the critical list for a while, died of complications from pneumonia about 3 a.m. EST. Grange died a few hours after millions of people watched the New York Giants beat the Buffalo Bills for the championship of the NFL, a league that owes much of its present popularity to Grange.

After a sensational career at Illinois ended in 1925, Grange signed a contract with the Chicago Bears. His impact was immediate. On Thanksgiving Day, a crowd of 36,000, then a record for a pro football game, packed Wrigley Field to watch the Bears play a scoreless tie with the Chicago Cardinals.

With Grange the drawing card, the Bears went on a 12-day, eight-city barnstorming tour. The Bears drew 73,000 to the Polo Grounds for a game against the New York Giants, a turnout that did much to save the financially troubled New York franchise. Another 75,000 turned out in the Los Angeles Coliseum to watch the Bears play the Los Angeles Tigers.

A glimpse of the future was provided when, before the 1926 season, his agent demanded a five-figure salary and one-third ownership of the Bears on the threat of Grange holding out.

Bears owner George Halas refused the demand, and Grange's appeal was such that he was able to field a nine-team American Football League to challenge the NFL. The rival league lasted a year. Grange finished up his pro career with the Bears. He spent 13 years as player, coach and promoter of pro football and was a charter member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

"Yes, I think I brought some attention to the game," Grange once conceded.

He wound up his playing days in 1934 with the Bears, finishing his career as a pass receiver and defensive back. Grange scored 56 touchdowns in his pro career.

Grange, known throughout his life for his modesty, was private to the end.

"You're never prepared," said Margaret, his wife of 49 years. "He's to be cremated. He specifically didn't want any viewing."

A memorial service being planned will be open only to family, said Barrett Nelson of Marion Nelson Funeral Home, which is handling arrangements.

"He was a very modest person, always gave credit to the others who were involved with him on the football field," said Chuck Flynn, a former Illinois sports information director who knew Grange. "He was one of the greatest runners that football has ever seen — that burst of speed to get into the open when split seconds count."

Grange, nicknamed "Red" in his younger days for his hair color, made his jersey number "77" famous during the years 1923-25 at Illinois.

In his junior year, he played his most famous game — against Michigan — and scored four touchdowns in 12 minutes on sprints of 95, 67, 56 and 45 yards. The next season he gained 363 yards against undefeated Pennsylvania. He was an All-America for three seasons.

"I was kind of sorry to hear it. He was a great guy," said 87-year-old Dwight Follett of Oak Park, Ill., who played end for Illinois from

Associated Press

As an Illini running back, Grange scored four touchdowns on 263 yards in 12 minutes against Michigan in 1924.

1922 to 1924. "I had a lot of respect for him. He was a great athlete... He was a very cheerful and friendly person, but his greatest asset was his modesty."

After his football career, Grange held an assortment of jobs that included managing a nightclub, sales manager of a large bottling company and selling insurance. He retired to Central Florida and lived at Indian Lakes Estates outside Lake Wales.

He had been in poor health in recent years and died at the Lake Wales Hospital extended care facility.

Harold Grange was born June 13, 1903, in Forksville, Pa. Disheartened by the death of his mother and handicapped by the lack of money, it was only after a stern lecture from his father that he decided to enter high school.

He showed up at football practice because, he later recalled, "the sight of a new uniform for just the asking was too much to resist."

Admiration for coach Bob Zuppke attracted Grange to Illinois. When he first tried out, he was put on the seventh team but within a week was in the starting lineup.

Grange, whose family then lived in Wheaton, Ill., became known as the "Wheaton Ice Man" because he worked his way through school by carrying 200-pound blocks of ice.

Grange played 20 games for Illinois over three seasons, scoring 31 touchdowns and running for 3,637 yards. His touchdown record stood until last season, when it was surpassed by Howard Griffith.

Grantland Rice once wrote of Grange: "A streak of fire, a breath of flame, eluding all who reach the clutch; A gray ghost thrown into the game that rivals' hands may never touch..."

Grange is survived by his widow; a nephew, Cleon Haverly of New York and several grandnieces and nephews.

Buffalo gives Bills warm welcome home

Norwood receives biggest support of all

By Alan Flipper
The Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Buffalo fans gave the Bills a heroes' welcome Monday and saved the biggest cheers for the man who failed to win the Super Bowl, kicker Scott Norwood.

"We love Scott! We love Scott!" shouted a crowd estimated at 25,000, interrupting master of ceremonies Kevin Keeley.

Norwood, who failed to make a last-second field goal that would have given the Bills a victory over the New York Giants, had tears in his eyes when Keeley yielded the podium to him.

"I've got to tell you that we're struggling with this right now," Norwood said, his voice breaking. "I know I've never felt more loved than this right now."

"We all realize the sun's going to come up tomorrow, and we're going to start preparing this football team," Norwood said to deafening cheers. "I'm dedicating next season to the fans of Buffalo."

Although Buffalo lost Sunday's game 20-19, the crowd acted as if the Bills had won.

"They showed they deserved to be there," said Dave Baranowski, a laboratory worker from Orchard Park, N.Y.

"I'm very down, but I feel good about it, too," said John Mye, a warehouseman from Cheektowaga, N.Y. "It was one of those that could have gone either way. They're still the best."

Coach Marv Levy told the crowd that after the game, he had consoled his players by telling them, "There's not a loser in this room."

"I walked out here today and I looked at this crowd," Levy said, "and I say to myself now, there's not a loser in this city."

"Last night, I thought the Bills lost. But after seeing this reception today, the Bills won!" team owner Ralph Wilson said.

The politicians who spoke at the ceremony echoed that theme.

"They have made this entire state proud by their performance this year and their performance yesterday," said Gov. Mario Cuomo. "They showed more class, more character coming up one point short than most teams show in victory."

Many businesses gave their employees the afternoon off to attend the ceremony. Some closed entirely, while others allowed shift workers to come in early so they could leave in time to get downtown.

Most of the team attended the ceremony, but several stars, including quarterback Jim Kelly, were absent because they had flown directly from Tampa to Honolulu for next weekend's Pro Bowl.

Wide receiver James Lofton promised the crowd the team would be back next year.

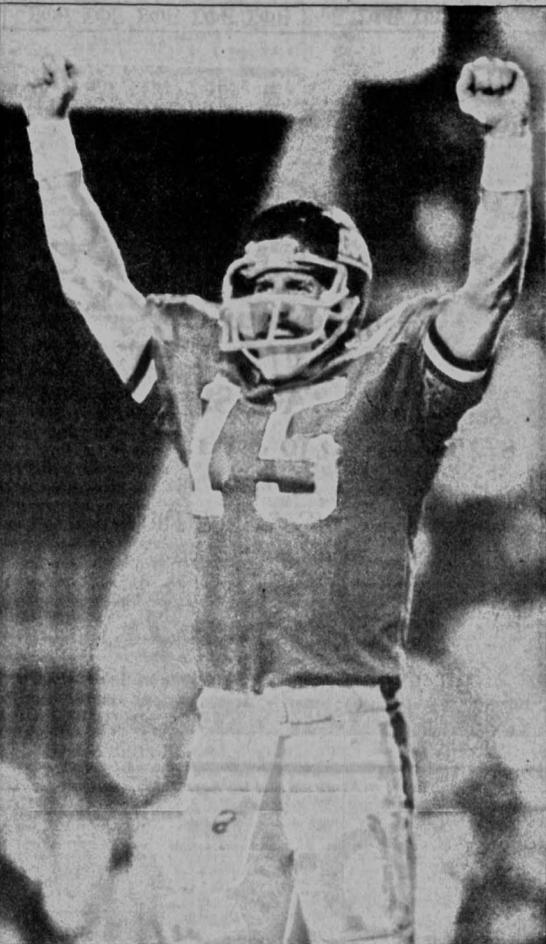

"We're just inches short of our goal," Lofton said. "It doesn't stop this year."

After the ceremony, Norwood was greeted by pats on the back and requests for his autograph as he made his way through City Hall.

Giants quarterback Jeff Hostetler may have won the Super Bowl, but he'll still be competing with Phil Simms for a starting spot in August.

Hostetler's biggest challenge to come

By Tom Canavan
The Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Now that Jeff Hostetler has led the New York Giants to the Super Bowl championship, all he has to do is win the job as No. 1 quarterback.

Hostetler has been trying for seven years to take over for Phil Simms and the only way he managed was when Simms suffered a sprained right foot on Dec. 15, which sidelined him for the season.

That made Hostetler the Giants' quarterback. And he certainly made the most of his chances, leading the Giants to victories in the final two regular-season games before guiding them through the playoffs and a 20-19 victory over Buffalo in Sunday's Super Bowl.

It all leaves coach Bill Parcells with a headache when training camp opens. Does he give the starting job back to Simms, the 35-year-old MVP of the 1987 Super Bowl, or does he let Hostetler, who will be 30 in a couple of months, keep it?

"Every year we go to camp I tell the guys the same thing," Parcells said Monday. "Whoever plays best will play."

That would seem to leave the job open. However, Parcells left the job up for grabs after last season, too, and Hostetler really never seemed to get a fair chance at winning the job.

Parcells is going to have to give him the chance next season.

Hostetler, who had started just two games entering the season, did not throw an interception or turn the ball over in his five-game season. He was 45 of 76 for 510 yards and three TDs in the playoffs.

Not spectacular numbers. But perfect for the Giants' low-risk, don't-make-an-error offense.

"I have no idea what's going to happen," Hostetler said Monday before taking a team charter for a return to New Jersey. "I don't know. I'm just thinking about the game. What happens, happens."

Hostetler and Simms offer the Giants different quarterbacking styles. Simms is a pocket passer, with a good arm and tremendous experience. Hostetler is less experienced, but he makes up for it with a good arm and great mobility.

Against the Bills, he helped open the running game with his rollouts. "They were so concerned about the rollouts at one point, that they were not getting to the run," Parcells said.

Giants offensive coordinator Ron Erhardt said there would be no room for two No. 1 quarterbacks next season.

None of Hostetler's teammates wanted to get involved in a quarterback controversy.

"No comment," wide receiver Stephen Baker said. "I don't know who it will be. I'm happy and I'm savoring this moment. Maybe when it happens, I'll have a comment."

"Mum's the word," said wide receiver Mark Ingram, the Giants emergency quarterback in case everyone got hurt. "I might decide I want to play another position and I'll go out and beat out Phil and Jeff."

One of the raps against Hostetler has been that his scrambling style would test his durability in a 16-game season. But he proved his toughness on Sunday, taking several big hits from Bruce Smith, Leon Seals and Cornelius Bennett.

"He came back to the huddle and you could see the look on his face," guard Bob Kratch said. "He was in pain. Guys like Otis kept walking around telling us, 'We can't let him get hit anymore.' I just didn't want my man to hit him. We just didn't want Smith or Seals to hit him any more."

The Trivia Tribune

By Aziz Gökdemir

It's been a long two weeks since our first issue of The Tribune appeared — the superegos went from words to actual battle in the Middle East, and here in our modest town the river melted and then froze again. So, a reminder: This publication is here to bring you facts and occurrences you (hopefully) never knew. For this issue, I've ditched the fun bits and instead put in "relevant" stuff about war, people of war and so on. Blame George and Saddam, not me.

Older than you think
Chemical warfare was first used by Spanish peasants against the Roman army in the first century B.C. You see, the peasants knew that the chemicals in honey produced by azalea nectar-eating bees were poisonous enough to induce illness. The advancing army of Pompey the Great found huge pots

Caveat!

Who owns Hitler's land now? You can call the mayor in Kit Carson, Colo., and try to find out.

Hitler in Colorado

The most hated warmonger of all time once owned 8,960 acres of land in the state that is snatching David Crawford from us. The land was inherited from his (Hitler's, that is) relatives and was not used until 1942, when the owner's identity became common knowledge. (Infamy gives real estate such an impressive aura.) Who owns the land now? I have no idea — you can call the mayor in Kit Carson, Colo., and try to find out.

History will teach us nothing

The so-called 100 Years' War lasted for 106 years. Don't ask me why, just do and die.

of honey left by the fleeing Spaniards, and honey being the favorite — nay, the only — sweet available back then, the soldiers gobbled it all up with gusto. Weak and defenseless, they were slaughtered almost to a man, and the Roman conquest of Spain was delayed because of the first known chemical attack.

Another first
Our tribute to the Pentacrest folks: The first student protest in the U.S. was pulled off in 1776 by one Asa Dunbar. It wasn't against war though. Dunbar and friends started with the slogan, "Behold, our butter stinketh!" to protest Harvard's food service and indignantly ate breakfast off campus after drawing fire from the school administration. Later in life, Dunbar had a grandson named Henry David Thoreau, proving that it does run in the family...

In the next Tribune: The U.S. does not have 50 states. George Washington was not the first president of the U.S. The inner angles of a triangle can add up to more than 180 degrees. Mount Everest is not the tallest mountain in the world. Be there.

Kronos not very memorable

By Brett Ratner
The Daily Iowan

Last Friday's performance of the Kronos Quartet at Hancher Auditorium highlighted the group's astounding technical prowess as musicians — yet provided few memorable compositions.

Music

The group's flawless renditions of four pieces by Alfred Schnittke, U.S.S.R.'s foremost contemporary composer, made it hard to imagine that the same group has also recorded a string arrangement of "Purple Haze." All the creative energy that Kronos might have been able to put into interpretation was consumed by their keeping pace with the blazing fast parts and dizzying counter-melodies characteristic of Schnittke's compositions.

It was difficult not to appreciate the ease with which Kronos tore through the pieces. The shock of seeing four musicians play music this difficult soon wore off though, and one was stuck watching a rather uninteresting performance.

Schnittke's music seemed to lack both cohesiveness between the various string parts, as well as some hint of a melodic theme for the audience to cling to. At times it seemed as if there were simply four people playing their own separate yet simultaneous recitals — an effect that led to the audience's detachment, if not outright confusion. I wasn't surprised when, at one point, a member of the audience mistook the Quartet's practice of tuning up as the next piece. Fortunately, there were sporadic glimpses of musical genius scattered throughout the show — in particular, the Quartet's ability to produce a palette of sounds that would make even the best synthesizer player envious. Cellist Joan Jeanreneaud performed amazing bends, harmonics and other tones I never thought possible on an acoustic instrument. The screams and squeals that David Harrington evoked with his violin prompted me to periodically examine Hancher's structural stability, in case it started to collapse upon our heads.

Fortunately, Friday's show was only one of a week-long residency for Kronos at the UI. Those who saw the group only on Friday should attempt to catch it at future performances that better represent its creative essence — taking traditional instruments and making them sound anything but traditional. Friday's show only gave occasional glimpses of this quality.

Lee inherits film project about life of Malcolm X

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Filmmaker Spike Lee, who complained last year that a white director should not be in charge of a film about Malcolm X, will direct the movie itself.

Lee inherited the movie "The Autobiography of Malcolm X" from director Norman Jewison, who worked months on the project before throwing in the towel. The New York Times said Sunday. Jewison said he didn't know how to make it.

Lee was quoted by the Times last year saying he had "a big problem" with Jewison directing the film. "Blacks have to control these films," he said.

A movie about the black militant's life has been kicking around Hollywood for 20 years. Jewison took it over for Warner Bros. in May 1990 but finally said Malcolm X was "an enigma to me. I just haven't licked it." Jewison denied he was stepping down because of pressure to have a black director handle the film.

"(The film's subject was) an enigma to me. I just haven't licked it."

Norman Jewison former director, "Autobiography of Malcolm X"

Spike Lee

movies include "A Soldier's Story," about the murder of the commander of a black regiment during World War II.

Malcolm X, a militant civil-rights activist and champion of black nationalism, was assassinated in 1965 in New York.

Trudeau's flu brings 'Doonesbury' reruns

The Associated Press

FAIRWAY, Kan. — "Doonesbury" will be rerun this week because cartoonist Garry Trudeau had the flu, not because of complaints over the comic strip's depiction of soldiers in the Persian Gulf war, its syndicate says.

Some newspaper editors pulled the cartoon from Sunday editions, complaining about how it portrayed soldiers in the gulf war.

Except for the first panel, the cartoons were drawn by an American soldier in the Middle East with whom Trudeau had corresponded, said Robert Duffy, vice president of sales for Universal Press Syndicate.

The panels show one soldier committing suicide and another being roasted on a spit. Yet another has a soldier being struck by a missile and converted into an angel.

Lee Salem, editorial director of Universal Press, said he had heard from about a dozen different papers complaining about the cartoon. But he said "Doonesbury" strips from 18 months ago are being used today through Saturday because Trudeau had been ill.

Trudeau, who draws the strips about 10 days in advance, was ill with the flu about a week ago and decided to take a week off, Duffy said.
