Departments that have used them say they have been very pleased with them. Furtmiller added that he hasn't received any complaints from those officers apprehended by the Department of Public Safety that have driven in the new cars and they need to be replaced after. Furtmiller said: "Every two years we request renewal, of our vehicles because of the mileage they have on them," he said. "We put automobiles around 50,000 to 60,000 miles on them in the short time we have them."

Each vehicle cost over $12,299, and the total cost was $49,615. Local students instructed about AIDS

By Stacy Williamson

The Daily Iowan

AIDS is a topic that affects us all, as new high school educators are finding out through S.T.A.T.S., a program designed to teach eleventh grade students about AIDS.

S.T.A.T.S., Students Teaching About AIDS, is a two year program organized by the American Medical Association. Several Medical School students — one male and one female — will talk about health choices to diverse aspects of the AIDS issue, and answer questions.

Medical students who volunteer to teach the program must undergo two days of training to learn about the situation. how the students were chosen for two medical students to present the information and answer questions.

The program consists of games, anonymous question and answer sessions, and a video. The video has provided students with AIDS come to talk with the students about what it is like living with the illness. Iowa State students have not yet had the opportunity to speak with the AIDS victims, but they believe that when they do the students will feel more comfortable.

Yvonne Merit, one of the S.T.A.T.S. new coordinators at UI, said students are given a test to assess their knowledge of the disease both before and after the two-year program to measure how things have improved.

She believes, judging from test results and evaluation forms the students fill out at the end of the program, that it has been relatively successful.

"They have been quite interactive with the medical students, and they have gotten involved in the program in a way that is not always the case with as many students as we have," Merit said.

Merit feels the students are willing to participate and are more comfortable speaking with the medical students and other individuals about the AIDS issue. “Some students saw the program as helpful,” she added. "We have been trying to be smart in decisions in situations that might place them in a risk for AIDS, as well as making them realize that there are alternatives available in such situations."

"The biggest impact the program has on kids is that it begins to teach them that their actions have consequences," she said. "This is a hard thing to teach in a 15 or 15-minute period. It makes them think more about the effects of their actions.

Merit also said the program makes those students that AIDS is a very human issue.

"The program helped to teach kids to be afraid of AIDS," she said. "We teach them people with AIDS are people, too. It brings it home, instead of making it seem like something that its okay to do or talk about with anyone with a horrible disease."

Merit and co-coordinator Mary McFadden organized the program at the UI Medical school last year. Since then it has been taught at Iowa State University, City High School and the Community Medical Center, and a program begins today at West High.

South Principal Dr. Jerry Shriver said he’s found only positive responses from the communities.

"People think we have students better understand, but it’s a positive response from the community," he said. "I think people are seeing the willingness of kids to be open and willing to talk about the program in the area of AIDS."

The lessons of the Vietnam War

Nothin' new

Many military analysts are predicting that the Gulf war will end in a stalemate, a result of a "draw by default" strategy. The scenario relies on the belief that Iraq will suffer a decisive defeat but not enough to precipitate Saddam to offer a reasonable surrender. This is the result that many in the Bush administration and the U.S. military apparatus were hoping for in the run-up to the war. But the outcome of the war is far from clear, and the lessons of the Vietnam War offer some cautionary insights.

The Vietnam War was a disaster for the United States government—a disaster because it suffered a military defeat at the hands of a small, determined, and well-organized enemy. The war generated a powerful opposition movement at home, which eventually forced the government to commit a level of national resources that ultimately dictated the outcome of the war.

Will the Persian Gulf war be a similar disaster? Certainly, the war in Iraq is beset with similar problems as those that plagued the Vietnam War. But the key difference is that in Vietnam, the government was faced with a determined enemy that was not deterred by the costs of the war. In Iraq, the government is faced with a determined enemy that is deterred by the costs of the war. If the United States succeeds in convincing Iraq to withdraw, the war will be over. But if the United States fails to convince Iraq to withdraw, the war will continue until the United States is forced to withdraw.

The second major propaganda lie being spread by Saddam is that the war is a war of aggression by the United States against Iraq. The United States has been depicted as the aggressor in the conflict, and the Iraqis are portrayed as the victims. This is a lie that has been successfully propagated by Saddam in the media and among his supporters.

The United States did not fight the Gulf War with one hand tied behind its back. But the government is faced with a determined enemy that is deterred by the costs of the war. If the United States succeeds in convincing Iraq to withdraw, the war will be over. But if the United States fails to convince Iraq to withdraw, the war will continue until the United States is forced to withdraw.

Guest Opinion

Bruce Nester

Again, reality is different. It was the government of Iraq, with its American-made and working-class fighters, who attacked and held the American forces. It was the government of Iraq that used napalm to cluster bombs to fight a small, determined enemy.

The second major propaganda lie being spread by Saddam is that the war is a war of aggression by the United States against Iraq. The United States has been depicted as the aggressor in the conflict, and the Iraqis are portrayed as the victims. But if the United States fails to convince Iraq to withdraw, the war will continue until the United States is forced to withdraw.

The second major propaganda lie being spread by Saddam is that the war is a war of aggression by the United States against Iraq. The United States has been depicted as the aggressor in the conflict, and the Iraqis are portrayed as the victims. This is a lie that has been successfully propagated by Saddam in the media and among his supporters.

The United States did not fight the Gulf War with one hand tied behind its back. But the government is faced with a determined enemy that is deterred by the costs of the war. Gorbachev criticizes Yeltsin

Soviet leader hears complaints from factory workers.

By Robert Friedman
Shooshan Press

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev faced his first domestic trip as a half-year-old - visiting workers at the Minsk Tractor Works in the Soviet Union's capital.

He also said he would spend two of his three days abroad working hard to destroy the fragile relationship between the Soviet Union and the U.S.

Gorbachev got a welter of complaints about the difficulty for workers at the Minsk Tractor Works in the Soviet Union's capital.

He also said he would spend two of his three days abroad working hard to destroy the fragile relationship between the Soviet Union and the U.S.

Gorbachev said that Yeltsin's own objectives "are at odds with the goals of perestroika," and the difference is "very simple." He said that Yeltsin's activities were "harshly criticized" by him as he tried to achieve a "very simple" and "mythical" goal.

Legal counsel to be offered to athletes pursued by agents

By Eric Draper
The Daily Iowan

A record of the agent's background information, look at transcripts and advise the athlete on what to expect in the process of being pursued by agents.

According to Pflug, DiVincenzo had probably been a victim of one of the least known and least investigated forms of exploitation: the agent pursuit of a student-athlete. Such exploitation is not limited to the high-profile cases of professional athletes seeking representation. It can happen to any athlete, from the top collegiate athlete to the walk-on.

The Pflug law firm is offering a free legal consultation to any athlete who is being pursued by an agent. The consultation will include a review of the athlete's contract, a discussion of the legal rights and responsibilities of both the athlete and the agent, and advice on how to handle the situation.

The legal consultation is available to athletes across the country, and Pflug encourages athletes to take advantage of this opportunity to protect their rights and learn more about the complexities of the agent pursuit.

Davis says Earl welcomes stay to work with team

But arrest will lose the center his starting job

By John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Tom Davis said Tuesday that Arie Earl will lose his starting position indefinitely, but will be spared from the team's senior night ceremonies and the game against Minnesota on Saturday.

"We're going to keep him on the roster, but he won't be part of the team," Davis said. "This is a consequence for his actions, but we want to give him another opportunity to come back and be a part of the team."

Earl was arrested on Saturday night in Moline, Ill., on charges of assault and battery. He was arraigned Monday morning and is scheduled for a preliminary hearing on Wednesday.

"I'm under no pressure to try to get him back in the lineup," Davis said. "I want to see how he handles it, how he responds to the challenges that are going to come his way."

Earl is a senior forward who started 27 of the Hawkeyes' 31 games this season. He averages 14.7 points and 7.3 rebounds per game.

"He's a good player, he's a good person, and he's an important part of our team," Davis said. "But he's not going to be able to go out there and have the kind of impact he did before."

Earl's suspension will last through the rest of the season, Davis said. "He's not going to be able to play in the tournament, so he'll have to look at both basketball and baseball.

"We're going to look at both basketball and baseball, and we'll certainly be disciplined within the internal framework, but he'll be eligible to compete."}

Guns, lawmen, the bayou — it's the new Warrant video!

A tidbit of background on Warrant, the heavy rock band from Oklahoma City, was the subject of a recent article in The Daily Iowan. Warrant's latest video features an Oklahoma lawman who uses law enforcement tactics to chase and capture a band of outlaws.

The band has released a new single, "The Black Widow," which is a departure from their usual sound. The video, shot in the bayou area of Louisiana, features a lawman on horseback pursuing the band. The video was directed by Matt Salmon, a notable figure in the Oklahoma music scene.

In other music news, Sade has released a new album, "The Second Edition," which features a duet with Stevie Wonder. The album includes a cover of Wonder's classic song "Superstition." Sade'sbstylist and fashion sense continue to influence the industry, and her magnetic vocals have captured the hearts of fans worldwide.

Perennial favorites at top of Nielsen's lists.

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Sade is the prime-time television ratings leader as the A.C. Nielsen Co. releases its week of Feb. 11-17. The British soul singer's "The Second Edition" album is leading the rankings.

As "The Second Edition" continues to grab attention, the Nielsen hammers home its message: Sade's album is the most popular on television, with full coverage across all networks. The Nielsen ratings peak on Monday with a 31.2 share, followed by a 24.1 share on Thursday.

"Sade's success is a testament to her talent and the enduring appeal of her music," said Nielsen spokesman Jim Blatt.

In other music news, the Grammy Awards are this weekend, and fans are eagerly awaiting the ceremony. The ceremony will be broadcast live on ABC, and the televised event is expected to attract a large audience.

Jim's Journal

I had to get away on business the day before Valentine's Day. I was feeling a little burned out, so I decided to spend the weekend in a cozy cabin in the woods. I rented a cabin through a local rental service, and it was the perfect retreat.

Despite the dreary weather, I was able to enjoy the peace and quiet of the cabin. I spent most of my time reading and writing letters to my loved ones. It was a much-needed break from the hustle and bustle of everyday life.

When I returned from my trip, I noticed a noticeable change in my mood. I felt more optimistic and hopeful about the future. I realized that sometimes it's important to step away from our routines to recharge and rejuvenate.

Veeck elected to Cooperstown

The Associated Press

Altogether, the hall of famer has been traveling from the stadium he built in Cleveland to the halls of fame. "I've never been here before," said Veeck, who was inducted in Cooperstown, N.Y.

"The pressure to have great plays, to have great teams, to have a great ballclub...I don't have that anymore, so I'm not worried about any pressure," Veeck said.

"I'm going to have a new something to think about, to work on, to create," Veeck said. "I'm going to have a new ballclub."
