

Senate reviews Iowa drug laws for racehorses

By Tom Seery
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — A Senate committee voted Thursday to overhaul state laws regulating medication of racehorses. The action came at the request of state racing officials, who said current laws are needlessly restrictive. But one senator — Democrat William Dieleman of Pella — said the moves by the Senate State Government Committee weaken drug-testing laws. "You're going the wrong direction," said Dieleman, a critic of the horse-racing industry. "You're doing exactly what you don't want to do, and that's bringing discredit to the business of horse racing in the state." But Dieleman was the only committee member to vote against two bills making changes in drug laws for racehorses. Supporters said the changes would bring Iowa laws in line with those of other states. One bill would allow random instead of mandatory testing for the drug lasix, which is used to prevent bleeding in horses. Current law requires testing of all horses using the drug but does not require testing of other horses.

"I really believe you make people more honest if you randomly test," said Sen. Berl Priebe, D-Algona.

The other bill would eliminate a prohibition of giving the pain-killer phenylbutazone to a horse within 96 hours before a race. Testing for misuse of the drug would continue, but horses would no longer have to be monitored for four days prior to racing. Lorenzo Creighton, deputy administrator of the state Racing and Gaming Commission, said the moves would save about $100,000 in testing costs while maintaining the commission's ability to ensure that lasix and phenylbutazone are not abused. "We're handicapped by the current law," Creighton said. "We want to maintain patron confidence."

Courts

An Iowa City woman was charged with second-degree theft after stealing over $2,000 from a local store, according to Johnson County District Court records. Court records state Kristina Downing, 19, 1509 Aber Ave., stole $2,260 from J.C. Penney, 201 S. Clinton St. According to court records, the theft occurred in increments over a five-week period. Preliminary hearing is scheduled for March 26. The following people were charged in the Johnson County area with operating a vehicle while intoxicated: Steven H. Huff, 26, 210 E. Ninth St., Apt 19. Huff was charged on March 6 in the 1900 block of Broadway Street. This is his second offense. Kristina Brown, 27, 440 N. Stewart, North Liberty, Iowa. Brown was charged March 7 in the area of North Main and Cherry streets in North Liberty. The following people pleaded guilty to or were convicted of simple misdemeanors in Johnson County Magistrate Court: George A. Hartnett, 25, 15 E. Chestnut St., North Liberty, Iowa. Hartnett pleaded guilty to simple assault and was fined $110. Daniel R. Matsysik, 5050 E.P.

Two residential burglaries occurred in Iowa City March 6. According to Iowa City Police reports, the first theft, at 924 Washington St., happened sometime before 11:28 a.m., while the resident was asleep in his apartment. The front door was apparently unlocked, allowing the thief to enter and steal a VCR.

crime of driving off a roadway, and he was fined $27.

The second robbery occurred at 407 Elmridge Ave. sometime before 1:08 p.m. An unspecified amount of personal items was stolen.

A billfold, camera and watch valued at $569 were stolen March 6 from a racquetball court at the Field House. The victim, David W. Klockau, reported the theft at 4:40 p.m. Apparently, the items were lying on the side of the court at the time of the robbery.

Old house workshop planned

Friends of Historic Preservation has announced a one-day workshop for owners and lovers of old houses who want practical information on the care and maintenance of their homes. The workshop, "Bringing Preservation Home," will be held March 9 at the Union, with registration beginning at 8 a.m. The workshop will feature speakers, demonstrations and displays, ranging from repair and maintenance of wooden storm windows to designing a new addition for an old house. Funding is provided, in part, by a Historic Resource and Development Grant through the State Historical Society of Iowa. The fee, which includes lunch and materials, is $15 in advance and $20 at the door. Continuing education credits may be available to realtors, architects and others. Call the UI Center for Conferences and Institutes at 335-3231 for registration information.

Papermaking facility holds open house

If you'd like to see the process for producing handmade paper, plan to visit the UI's Oakdale campus March 9, when the Iowa Center for the Book holds an open house.

Tours of the Center for the Book's research and production papermaking facility will be conducted at 2 p.m., 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. The event is free and open to the public.

To reach the papermaking facility on the Oakdale campus, take Interstate 80 west from Iowa City to Exit 240 (North Liberty, Route 965) and follow Route 965 north to the sign identifying the Oakdale campus. Turn right onto the main road, bear to the right and take the second hard right to the south. The paper-making facility is the first building on the right immediately south of the power plant, which can be identified by its two tall smokestacks.

National issues forums planned

The Kettering Foundation and its Domestic Policy Association are sponsoring a series of nationwide National Issues Forums. Input from these community meetings is reported to local and state politicians and to members of Congress. Over the past 10 years, the forums have been coordinated by a steering committee made up of local community members under the leadership of the UI Division of Continuing Education.

Upcoming forums are "Gaining the Competitive Edge" on March 10 at 2 p.m. in the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St.; and "Racial Equality" on March 17 at 2 p.m. in the public library.

UI newsletter wins award

A UI newsletter has won a silver trophy in the 1990 Admissions Advertising Awards competition sponsored by the Admissions Marketing Report. The Iowa Scene received the second-place award in the newsletter category for its significant achievement in admissions marketing. Produced by University Relations Publications and published by the Office of Admissions, The Iowa Scene is sent to prospective students five times during the school year, and focuses on undergraduate students, programs and activities at the UI. The publication's contributors include: Lesanne Fiehrer, editor;

Amy Roach, design consultant; Tom Jorgensen, chief photographer; Debbie Blake, graduate assistant; Mary Bruce and Joseph Kress, photographers.

Girl Scouts announce 1991 fund campaign

The Mississippi Valley Girl Scout Council is kicking off an Annual Fund Campaign to raise $30,000. Heading the campaign is Honorary Campaign Chairwoman Edna Yoder. Thus far, the amount raised stands at $11,500. The money will be used toward scholarships and to provide a value-oriented educational program for over 11,000 girls in the council area. The Mississippi Valley Girl Scout Council serves 10 Iowa counties, including Johnson County, with over 1,300 girls served in the Iowa City area. The long-range goal of the council is to increase adult-generated income to provide 10 percent of the annual budget. This year's goal of $30,000 represents roughly 2 percent of the current annual budget. The Campaign Celebration is scheduled for April 25 at the spring Council meeting.

Corrections A letter to the editor by John Franzen published on Monday, Feb. 4, said that 1,900 non-smoking Americans die annually from second-hand smoke. The correct number, which appeared in Franzen's original letter, is 3,825. The number was incorrectly altered during the editing process.

Due to miscommunication in a translated interview with Ming-Deh Shih, the following errors occurred in a March 4 article: The average age of members of the National Assembly is 80 to 90, not 90 to 100, and many but not all of the representatives are carried in on stretchers or ride in on wheelchairs. Part of Shih's first jail term, not his second, was spent in an overcrowded room with 30 other prisoners. Shih did not say members of the UI Taiwanese Students' Association had been harassed, rather that Taiwanese students on other American campuses may have been harassed. In addition, Shih was quoted as saying, "I hope change can be achieved by peaceful means, but from my experience it is not likely." Shih says he meant to say, "I hope change can be achieved by peaceful means unless the will of the Taiwanese people is violated."

Also, there were a number of errors in a March 7 article on Transcendental Meditation. Jonathan Sabin is the owner of Vortex Crystal and Gem Inc. at 218 E. Washington St.

The Daily Iowan regrets the errors.

The Iowa City Alumnae Chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota is holding an undergraduate Music Scholarship Competition at 7 p.m. in Harper Hall, Music Building.

Wish-granting charity provides seriously ill kids with hope, joy

Volunteers, corporate sponsors support project

By John P. Waterhouse
The Daily Iowan

Andrew, diagnosed with leukemia, became very depressed during his stay at the hospital and wondered why his treatment was not making him better.

When he returned for his next visit, his nurse asked, "Andrew, if you could have anything in the world you've always wanted, or do anything you've dreamed of... what would it be?" For Andrew and many other children with a life-threatening illness, the Make-A-Wish Foundation can make their greatest wishes come true.

The foundation is an international non-profit wish-granting charity supported by more than 6,000 volunteers. It relies on corporate and personal donations to "give a child who may not have a tomorrow a special wish today."

The foundation was established in Phoenix, Ariz., in 1980, after officers from the Arizona Department of Public Safety made a dying little boy's wish of becoming a policeman come true. When they issued him a custom-made uniform, helmet, badge and gave him a helicopter ride, his happiness provided the inspiration for development of the foundation.

The Make-A-Wish Foundation of Iowa was established in 1987. The Southeast Iowa Division of the foundation granted its first wish to a 15-year-old with Hodgkin's disease, Billy Fisher.

In June 1988, Billy went to Adventureland in Des Moines with his parents and two of his friends. Although the foundation told Billy he could do anything he wanted, his father Richard Fisher said, "Billy chose Adventureland because... since he was getting a little better, he wanted to save the foundation some money for some kid who might not get better."

Since that first trip to Adventureland, the Southeast Iowa Division of the foundation has granted more than 20 wishes to children with life-threatening illnesses.

In 1989 doctors discovered a Wilms' tumor in Katie Kellogg's abdomen. At the UI Hospitals and Clinics she had surgery to remove the tumor and continues chemotherapy to reduce the chances of the tumor recurring. Katie dreamed of going to Walt Disney World, and the foundation made her wish come true. On Jan. 30, 1990, she flew with her parents and her brother to Florida.

In Orlando the Kelloggs saw the Epcot Center, Sea World, the MGM Studios Theme Park and more.

"The foundation is a wonderful program," Katie's mother Susan said. "It brought a lot of joy to our family, and we really enjoyed ourselves in Disney World."

Andrew Oppold's wish for an Apple IIgs computer with color monitor and printer came true when it was delivered on his seventh birthday in November 1989. Andrew's mother Lois said he originally had a whole list of wishes "including a new house for Mom, a horse or a swimming pool, but we helped him narrow it down to something more practical and personal for him.

All proceeds from the week's events will grant wishes of Iowa children with life-threatening illnesses.

Nine-year-old Joshua Mack, a leukemia patient at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, relaxes with his mother Jill after returning from a trip to Disney World. The vacation was made possible by the Make-A-Wish Foundation, which grants wishes to children with terminal illnesses.

Make-A-Wish Foundation holds fund-raising drive

By John P. Waterhouse
The Daily Iowan

The Make-A-Wish Foundation of Iowa, Southeast Division, will hold its first awareness and fund-raising campaign March 9-16.

The week long campaign will begin with a Wish Walk on Saturday, March 9, from 8-10 a.m. at Sycamore Mall in Iowa City. Walkers will collect pledges based on minutes or laps walked, and the foundation is encouraging each participant to raise at least $25 in pledges. The foundation will provide walkers with incentives such as sweatshirts, mugs and refreshments.

A similar walk will be held at Lindale Mall in Cedar Rapids on Saturday, March 16, from 8-10 a.m.

The Foundation will hold a "Kid's Carnival" at Westdale Mall in Cedar Rapids on Sunday, March 10, from 12-5 p.m. Children will have the opportunity to play carnival games for prizes.

Gambling, jazz music and a prize auction are all part of a "Casino Night" to be held at the Cedar Rapids Five Seasons Hotel on Friday, March 15, from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m.

All proceeds from the week's events will grant wishes of Iowa children with life-threatening illnesses.

Supervisors consider roadside weed killing

By Eric Detwiler
The Daily Iowan

Proposed spraying of Johnson County roadsides with the herbicides Oust and Karmex has sown the seeds of debate within the County Board of Supervisors. The board will tour several cities in the county Friday to determine whether spraying is needed before voting on the issue this Tuesday.

Over the last eight years, the county has phased out the practice of spraying large areas of road to stunt vegetation growth. At one time the county had a $50,000 budget for weed spraying, but gradually curtailed the practice due to environmental concerns.

"I don't know whether it will be done," said board member Dick Myers. "I don't think the votes are there to pass this."

The current goal of the county, according to Myers, is the eradication of weeds and the establishment of natural prairie grass in its place. Although the general consensus is that spraying is initially less expensive, in the long run Myers said he believes natural grasses are both economically and environmentally more practical.

"There are 980 miles of road in this county," Myers said. "Double that for the amount of ditches. I believe a long-term natural vegetation policy is cost efficient."

The board approved a pilot spring burning program Thursday as one alternative to the chemical spraying. County Roadside Vegetation Manager Russ Bennett said the burn program would take place in March to avoid the nesting time of various wildlife.

Regents approve international law degree

DI wire services

The UI College of Law has been given the go-ahead from the state Board of Regents to create a program to allow law students to earn a certificate in international and comparative law.

The International and Comparative Law Certificate Program will take four years to complete, one more than the traditional three-year program for a Juris Doctor degree. The greater degree requirements of the new program would be recognized by a special certificate accompanying the student's diploma.

The ICL Certificate Program is based on an accelerating global interdependence that requires lawyers of all kinds to be familiar with international law and foreign legal systems, said program Chairman Burns Weston.

"Global interdependence is internationalizing the practice of law," he said. "Business lawyers have long recognized this fact, and now others are coming to the same conclusion."

"Criminal lawyers know that the problems of the drug trade have to be dealt with on a transnational basis; environmentalists see international legal action as a prerequisite to serious progress on their issues; and the global dimension of politics and lawmaking is expanding rapidly as well," Weston said.

According to Weston, the UI law school has been working over the past 12 years to build a faculty and student body capable of supporting a program in international and comparative studies.

Seven members of the law school faculty identify themselves as teaching and researching primarily in international and comparative law fields. They will serve as the primary faculty. Ten others have interests and expertise in the field, and will serve as supplemental faculty.

The UI law school has for 24 years offered a one-year Master of Comparative Law degree to foreign-trained lawyers primarily from outside the Anglo-American legal system. Last year, that program brought students from France, Germany, Ghana, Nicaragua, Sudan, Taiwan and China to the UI law school.

The new ICL Certificate Program meets the standards of the American Bar Association and the American Association of Law Schools.

According to Weston, the program will be unique in the Midwest and among the better programs in the nation. This will improve the ability of the College of Law and the university to recruit superior faculty and students, he said.

Morrison myth inflated beyond boundaries of common sense

Dennis Miller once said he stopped smoking pot not because he hated getting high, but because he hated the people you had to get high with. I've always felt the same way about The Doors: I love the music, I just can't stand the people you have to listen to it with.

You know who I'm talking about: The ones who put red darkroom bulbs in their lamps and then sit around the bong saying, Oh wow, man, Jim was it. He was a poet and a god—completely in tune, man. He escaped from reality and transcended this world. There's no denying that The Lizard King before Stone's unmasked for the moronic, populist hack he is and his simplistic morality plays fade into obscurity. But for now Ollie is definitely in vogue with both the boomers who want to "remember (the '60s) correctly" (Stone's words) and the younger generation who are "dying for the '60s to come back" (Stone again).

So we're witness to the second media resurrection of Jim Morrison. These days every magazine, newspaper and television talk show has found its own Morrison "friend/expert" who once got baked or bedded with Jimbo. You'll never know Jim like I knew him they all squeal—it's the Pamela Des Barres approach, with rock history being written by the sexual winners. Come on—getting drunk with Morrison and/or giving him a blow job wasn't exactly an exclusive experience in the late '60s. And we all know that the best way to not know someone is to get drunk and sleep with them.

As far as we know, Oliver Stone never slept with Morrison. But that doesn't stop him from becoming a cheerleader for everything he feels Jim stood for. And just what did Jim stand for? Disturbing lyrical imagery, tremendous tenor voice, riveting sexual charisma and projectile vomiting? No, according to Stone and the legion of Jim worshippers, Morrison was a dark poetic and philosophical genius, the reincarnation of Dionysus, the embodiment of fiery "anything goes" rebellion.

Stone is also quick to romanticize Morrison's excessive lifestyle, especially his drug use, as a gateway to freedom and enlightenment. I'm certainly not preaching "Just say no." But let's not kid ourselves as to what such diversions are all about. They serve one purpose only: to help you escape from the problems of the world into a myopic chemical realm where, for a few hours, reality seems manageable. Go ahead and take all the drugs and booze you want, but let's not hide our mental lethargy and lack of willpower behind silly '60s acid reign claims of "expanded consciousness" and "heightened perception."

Still, we're drawn to rock stories like Morrison's, Hendrix's, Joplin's and Vicious' because they, in effect, died for our sins. Their lives, regardless of artistic merit (considerable in the cases of Morrison and Hendrix, questionable for Joplin and pointedly non-existent for Vicious) are seen entirely through their deaths. It's a common art-business creed that dying boosts careers, but the payoff is in more than sales. Once we're free of a person's walking, talking reality we can immortalize them into anything we want, using their excesses to legitimize our own transgressions.

But where no one really aspires to drown in their own vomit after stabbing their lover to death, people like Stone often paint Morrison's demise as an admirable cosmic validation of his life. "The Doors" Stone-washing is especially guilty of showing Morrison's "alleged" death from heart failure as an ascension to a higher world of Indian shamans, Nietzschean philosophy, Celtic priestesses and, of course, Greek gods. (Never let it be said that in life and death Morrison didn't cover all metaphysical bases.)

'Doors' director Oliver Stone at Jim Morrison's grave

And let's face it, when you're 19 and desperately seeking spiritual salvation, eating a lot of acid and running naked through the desert while talking to snakes sounds a lot more fun than bringing a covered dish to a potluck. But don't subscribe to a philosophical pathway just because a paranoid, middle-aged filmmaker finds mythical justification for his generation's disillusionment in the babblings of a confused, indulgent, handsome rock star. Never forget, in the words of some other rock gods, themselves no strangers to destructive excess, "It's only rock and roll ..."

he explained.

The Composers Workshop at the UI School of Music will conclude its 1990-91 performance season with a concert of new works at 8 p.m. Sunday, March 10, in Clapp Recital Hall on the UI campus.

The program will include new compositions by both undergraduate and graduate students in the School of Music. The program embraces a wide variety of performance media and styles, from solo cello to a 12-player chamber ensemble, to a quartet of four solo female voices.

The program will include Two Piano Preludes by graduate student Glenda Piek, played by pianist Gina Kruger, also a graduate student in the School of Music. Piek's preludes were written in memory of pianist Steven De Grook. The composer says that "the second prelude, subtitled 'Interrogation,' is designed to irritate."

A chamber ensemble of flute, oboe, violin, cello and piano will play the "Largo" by graduate student Scott Camp. This piece was written as a tribute to jazz pianist Bill E. Vans. "Preludes" by graduate student John Ross will be performed by an ensemble of flute, clarinet, violin, cello, piano and soprano, conducted by School of Music graduate student Myles Hernandez. Based upon a text by T.S. Eliot, the work uses the 12-tone technique "to express the 'grayness' of the text," Ross said. "As a composer, I sought to give the work a dramatic shape, which I had to reconcile with its detached, non-judgmental tone,"

Marian MacLeod's "Women" for four female voices will conclude the program. The work is based on a poem of the same title by Mary Swenson. The highly ironic text closes with the characteristic lines, "Women should always be waiting, willing to be set into motion. Women should be pedestals to men."

Other works on the concert will be "II" for solo cello by undergraduate Matthew Burrier, performed by Craig Hultgren; an untitled work for solo piano by undergraduate Kenneth Baker, played by graduate student Robert Fuller; and the Chamber Concert No. 1 by undergraduate Chris Sagers, for a mixed wind and string ensemble of 12 players, to be conducted by music graduate student Edward Cetto.

The UI Composers Workshop is directed by Martin Jenni, professor of music and chairman of the Theory and Composition Department in the School of Music. The workshop is devoted to the performance of music composed at the UI, and aims to foster greater collaboration and interplay between composers and performers in the Iowa City area.

Marc Weber, an Iowa Fellow in composition and former assistant director of the workshop, commented, "It's a wonderful opportunity for the composers and performers to work together. The performers can know what the composer wants, because the composer is right there."

The concerts of the Composers Workshop are free and open to the public.

POLICE BRUTALITY

Candid camera

Los Angeles residents watched in horror and disbelief Sunday when the evening newscasts aired a videotape of the beating of a black motorist by LAPD officers. What is different this time from previous cases is the existence of the two-minute amateur video recording, which was soon seen on television screens nationwide, reviving the always controversial issue of racially motivated police brutality.

Prior to the camcorder revolution, similar charges of police brutality had been very hard to prove. Usually it was the word of the victim against the word of police officers, or in some cases the entire police department. Moreover, the victims frequently were not the most believable characters, as many of them at the time of their arrests were criminal suspects or had criminal records.

Police officers often use some sort of verbal and psychological pressure in order to obtain valuable information that will help officers solve a case. But the blatant physical abuse of a detainee by LAPD officers in this case proves that sometimes that pressure may be out of control. According to The New York Times, however, this case is not the first one to be videotaped. Two Long Beach, Calif., officers will soon be tried for assaulting a black man in January 1989. They were videotaped by a television crew.

Though there are 40 documented cases where officers have engaged in brutality in one station of the LAPD alone, and there are five deputies from the Los Angeles County Sheriff's office who have been charged with theft and cover-up, the accusations against law enforcement officers in Los Angeles go far beyond physical violence. The California Department of Fair Employment and Housing has recently said that the LAPD has systematically denied promotions and job advancement to black and Hispanic officers. In addition, Police Chief Daryl Gates has been criticized for his outrageous comments on race and drugs. Gates, head of the department since 1978, advocates the shooting of casual drug users, and he has suggested that blacks die as a result of police choke holds due to an abnormality of their bodies.

In last Sunday's videotaped incident, Rodney King, who until last December was serving a six-month sentence for second-degree robbery, was stopped for speeding by 10 police cars. The recording showed that he did not resist the arrest and initially cooperated with the officers. Suddenly, the officers began to beat him repeatedly with nightsticks and kick his head. Witnesses say the man "begged the officers to stop, but they were laughing and chuckling, like they had just had a party." King suffered a broken leg and deforming injuries on his face. During a press conference on Thursday, LAPD Chief Gates said that at least two of the officers will have charges filed against them.

Unfortunately, it is very unlikely that this type of incident will end after this case. The potential presence of video cameras may act as a deterrent for future incidents, though. Nobody questions the officers' duty of arresting individuals who represent a menace to society. But no police force has the right to abuse detainees just for the simple idea of punishing them. The judicial system has its ways of taking care of that.

Bubba, don't be a Bozo

In the glow of the TV lights, Bubba Bozo held his new, long-term, multimillion-dollar contract in the air and shook hands with the new team owner.

"Are you happy with the terms?" a reporter shouted.

"Yes, Bubba Bozo is very happy," Bubba Bozo said. "They have shown that they appreciate Bubba Bozo's efforts. Now we can put this behind us and concentrate on winning a championship for the great fans of this city."

"Now Bubba Bozo must go and tape a commercial," Bozo said, waving and leaving the room.

The camera crews packed their gear, and the reporters began drifting away when the door opened and Bozo returned. Scowling, he said: "Where is everybody going?"

"Is there something more you want to say?" a reporter asked.

"Yes," Bozo said. "Bubba Bozo is fed up with being treated this way."

"What way?"

"They have insulted me, they have disrespected me and mutilated my manhood, and Bubba Bozo is not going to play for them anymore."

"But you just said you were very happy."

"Who said that?"

"You did."

"When did Bubba Bozo say that?"

"Five minutes ago."

"Oh, Well, that was a long time ago, and conditions have changed."

"What changed?"

"My agent told me that Bubba Bozo doesn't get to keep all this money. Bubba Bozo will have to pay taxes."

"So. Everybody pays taxes."

"Bubba Bozo is not just anybody. Bubba Bozo wants a new contract that says the owner pays the taxes."

"The owner can't do that."

"Then Bubba Bozo won't play. If Bubba Bozo is insulted and abused and demeaned, Bubba Bozo will go home and sleep."

"But what will you do for money?"

"The owner will pay me. There's still this contract, as disrespectful and abusive as it is."

"Yes, but if you refuse to play, he doesn't have to pay you."

"He doesn't? See, that's what Bubba Bozo means about how they are spitting on Bubba Bozo's pride and dignity. Then Bubba Bozo will go play for another team that appreciates my talents."

"You can't do that, either."

"Why not? A lot of teams would love to have a player of Bubba Bozo's talents. Remember, Bubba Bozo always gives 110 percent."

"You can't play for another team because you have a contract to play only for this team until the contract expires. That's what a contract means."

"It does? I thought a contract meant that they have to give Bubba Bozo enough money to make Bubba Bozo happy until Bubba Bozo stops being happy, and then they have to give Bubba Bozo more money to make him happy."

"No, Bubba. A contract is a binding agreement on both parties. It means that you and the owner agree that they will pay you a specific sum of money over a specific period of time if you perform specific services for them. So you have to play for them if you want to be paid."

"Play for someone who is insensitive to my needs? No, Bubba Bozo will make plenty of money just doing commercials and talking into a tape recorder so that somebody can write a book about the great thoughts of Bubba Bozo."

"But if you stop playing, nobody will want to publish your book and they won't ask you to do commercials anymore."

"They won't? Is that legal?"

"Of course it is. They'll just find somebody else to do the commercials."

"See? You can't trust anybody."

"Bubba, don't you think that the best thing to do would be to accept this contract? After all, it will make you a millionaire many times over, and you will be set for the rest of your life."

"No, because they have insulted Bubba Bozo in another way. On the radio, somebody said that Sam Walton is a billionaire. And I checked and I found out that a billionaire has a lot more money than a millionaire. Who's this Sam Walton? Nobody ever heard of him. I don't even know what team he's on. He must be a bench warmer."

"But Sam Walton isn't a player. He started the Wal-Mart Stores."

"He's not even a player, and he's richer than Bubba Bozo? That's even more disrespectful and uncaring. How much of this abuse do they think Bubba Bozo will take?"

"Well, maybe you should change careers, Bubba. Have you thought about opening stores like Sam Walton did?"

"Good idea. Bubba Bozo will call him. Do you think he'll give me a store?"

"No, but he might sell you one."

"See? Everybody is trying to cheat Bubba."

This is a national energy policy? Come on, Bush

With the war in the Persian Gulf seemingly behind us, we have been congratulating ourselves on how we "kicked butt" and showed Saddam Hussein — or anyone else who threatens our national security — that you cannot mess with the good ol' U.S.A.

But why did we fight the war? Despite administration claims to be upholding international law, the real reason was the threat to national security posed by Iraq due to our dependence on foreign oil. Though the Persian Gulf is within our sphere of national concern, after the second "oil shock" of the 1970s, President Carter had the hindsight to initiate a national energy policy that would lessen our dependence on oil, the threats to national security and, therefore, the necessity of going to war over oil.

However, this prudent policy was reversed by the Reagan administration as Reagan rushed to join forces with Iraq during the Iran-Iraq war. Reagan ordered the U.S. Navy to defend Kuwaiti tankers (Kuwait was then bankrolling Iraq) from Iranian attacks. U.S. military involvement led to the kidnappings of Americans in Lebanon by pro-Iranian terrorists, the humiliating attempt to supply arms to Iran in exchange for hostages, the needless deaths of U.S. sailors when the USS Stark was mistakenly hit by a missile from an Iraqi jet and the shooting down of an Iranian civilian airliner by the U.S. Navy.

One hoped the Bush administration would not repeat these mistakes and would see that a national energy policy was needed not only for environmental reasons, but also to reduce the danger of military involvement in the Middle East.

These hopes were dashed when Bush announced his long-awaited energy policy last week. While he should get credit for at least developing a policy, he deserves no credit for its content. Although intended to reduce reliance on foreign oil, Bush's plan will do nothing to reduce overall consumption of fossil fuels. By not promoting energy efficiency, Bush is seeking short-term solutions that will degrade the environment while increasing long-term vulnerability. Not only does the policy rely heavily on dwindling national oil reserves, it represents a Christmas wish list for oil, auto, nuclear and coal industries.

Oil suppliers will be required to begin drilling in sensitive environmental regions such as the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge and the nation's Outer Continental Shelf, which includes areas off the California coast, the Florida Gulf and near the Atlantic barrier Islands. According to the U.S. Geological Survey, even if all such protected lands were opened, drilled and exploited to full capacity, output would only supply about a year's worth of oil, based on the current rate of consumption.

Bush's policy, moreover, eases construction of nuclear and coal-fired plants by calling for the elimination of many regulations. It calls for tax credits for oil companies to explore for new oil, tax credits they do not need after a very profitable war. My favorite part of the policy is the provisions about burning trash for energy. Does this include burning tires, radioactive dog carcasses and medical waste? Nevermind the fact that the Florida Everglades are already poisoned by mercury released from municipal waste incinerators. The bottom line of Bush's policy is clear: continued support of big oil, nuclear and coal industries to supply U.S. energy demands.

Almost completely absent from the proposal is a commitment to energy efficiency. According to Greenpeace: "Energy efficiency could reduce national energy consumption by anywhere from 30 to 75 percent, saving our economy nearly $300 billion per year." Even if fully implemented, Bush's proposals would only reduce consumption by a few percent. Higher fuel efficiency requirements for automobiles are noticeably absent. An increase of only 2.8 miles per gallon could save us roughly the same amount of oil we imported from Iraq and Kuwait prior to hostilities. But Bush's plan only calls for car pooling and — "read my lips" — it encourages us to inflate our tires to 35 p.s.i. This cannot be the same president who defeated the world's fourth largest army in a matter of weeks, can it?

There is another issue to consider: the environmental cost. Perhaps cognizant of the greenhouse effect, Bush claims that "clean" nuclear energy does not produce any CO2. Someone should remind Bush of the terrible problems associated with nuclear energy: Chernobyl, Three-Mile Island, Rocky Flats, not to mention the highly radioactive waste no one wants buried in their backyard. Bush's energy policy calls for contracting radioactive waste out to private firms. Has no one thought of what they will do with the waste? Overall, this policy means that acid rain will continue to affect our lakes, forests and food production; smog will continue to choke our cities; and oil will continue to wash up on our beaches after there is an accident.

If this is part of Bush's vision of the New World Order, one supposedly based on morality, then what type of moral message does this send to the rest of the global community? The United States already consumes 30 percent of the petroleum with only a fraction of the global population. We seem to have no intention of reducing our consumption, our commitment in reducing pollution is limited at best, and we selfishly protect whatever is in our best interest.

Bush should be leading by focusing on energy efficiency and conservation. Obvious examples include: increased mileage requirements for cars, increased spending on research and implementation of renewable energy sources, emphasis on mass transit as an alternative to road construction, greater energy efficiency in homes and industries, and perhaps most importantly of all, an individual and collective realization that our standard of living cannot continue to increase at the expense of the environment or of other individuals in the global community.

We should remember that a tax increase on gasoline, a decrease in oil consumption and lower expectations for our standard of living are all a small price to pay to avoid the spilling of blood for oil in the Middle East. Perhaps it is the greatest patriotic act that we as individuals can accomplish. As long as we fail to develop a comprehensive, environmentally sound energy policy, we will not only continue to sacrifice American lives but also our environment in the pursuit of our militaristic and wasteful ways. As long as we view this as a supply rather than a demand issue, the longer we will be hostage to our foreign oil addiction. In many ways, we are not really all that different from Saddam Hussein, for we are as blinded by our own righteousness, greed, ignorance and pride.

David Obermiller is the chairman of the Research and Information Committee for the U.I. Environmental Coalition. Earth Alert, a column on environmental awareness, appears on alternate Fridays on the Viewpoints page.

We will continue to act

I am a Woman Against War. Women Against War met weekly after the outbreak of the war in the Persian Gulf, and we will continue to meet. We organized at all levels and in many ways to oppose the war, to bring relief to the victims of war and to educate about the policies that put us at war. Some of us are opposed to all war; some of us believe that a war might be a justifiable option in certain circumstances. All of us believe that this last war was wrong. Actually, we do not even believe that 40 days of incessant bombing, resulting in the near obliteration of another country, was a "war," but rather a unilateral, wholesale slaughter where the value of human life amounted to zero. The last six weeks allowed the U.S. military an opportunity to employ nearly every immoral weapon in its massive arsenal of material, the only purpose of which is to kill people and destroy their property.

Guest Opinion

In these days of U.S. euphoria over the destruction of Iraq, a country where amputations are now taking place without anesthesia because there isn't any, and with our president gloating like a billy goat, we could feel isolated and alienated from much of what is happening around us. The killing of tens of thousands of people in a country where half the population is under 16 years of age sickens us. When we hear a U.S. Air Force pilot enthusiastically describe the bombing of retreating Iraqi soldiers as being "almost Armageddon," we are frightened at the mentality of those who love war. Believing that this was not the answer to the problems in the Middle East, we know that America has failed.

We know that our country is in very troubled times: racism, poverty, the high infant mortality rate of Black babies, fewer Blacks being able to go to college than only five years ago, battered women, gay and lesbian members of our country unable to walk the streets in safety — the list goes on and on. We wonder what our children are learning from this period of time and what it means for the future of the world. Wanting to stand for something besides violence and carnage, we are apt to retreat in a lonely aftermath of a war we did not want and a war we do not believe is over.

George Bush waged an onslaught that is now estimated to have killed as many as 200,000 Iraqi soldiers and 50,000 to 100,000 Iraqi civilians. To cheer and wave flags now is an ominous sign. If the world needs that kind of death in order to have peace, there is little in the future for any of us. Bush says there is no anti-war movement. Does that mean there is only a war movement? With the Apocalypse occurring in the cities of this country, with rural America living in deep poverty, the administration is waging war against citizens of America.

Women Against War is not giving up. We want to raise money to establish a permanent home for ourselves in Iowa City where we will engage in battle against racism, poverty and sickness. Many men belong to Women Against War, and as a result, many of us refer to ourselves as the Coalition for Peace with Justice. No matter what you want to call us, you must join us if you have not already done so. It is not acceptable to say: "The problems are so big, what can I do?" I can't do anything, but we can. Find that spot inside you that is the barrier to believing you can't change things and kick it over. Women Against War meets every Monday at 7 p.m. Our organization is loosely structured; you may participate in whatever you feel capable. You can make us collectively strong so that we might take a government that has grown too corrupt and too militaristic and do something better with it than wage war against a Third World country of children in the name of peace.

Islam topic of panel at Coffeehouse

by Eric Detwiler
The Daily Iowan

Islamic ideology was debated and furious Thursday in the national Coffeehouse's "In Perspectives on Islam." The discussion consisted of a person panel which discussed a variety of subjects relating to and present in their own interpretations. The panel questions from the more people present and in an elaborate elaborated on some misconceptions portrayed in media as a result of the Gulf War.

The treatment of women in Islamic society as compared to their treatment in Saudi Arabia was one topic of discussion. "Saudi Arabia is not an Islamic society," said Tarik Aouf, an Arab-American.

"When you open a textbook, the portrayal you see of Assey. The prophet Mohammed was one of the great figures in the area."

"She led an army into Mecca," Miller added. "I am equal in Islam. I am respected as a mother. Women are respected; we're not male and female in Islam we are seen as all. All people are equal regardless of race."

"Women can't even drive in Saudi Arabia," added Tamara McCowan, a native and a convert to Islam.

The panel agreed that there is no true Islamic government. Examples of King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and his 16 wives.

"These leaders impose law, but they corrupt it," Hamza Omar, another panelist.

"Islam came to me as a way of life," said Israa, an Arab. "When you grow up, you have to understand what it means to be a Muslim."

The speakers added that the common misperception is that Arab individuals are Islamic. "Faith, Assey said over 2 billion Chinese and 150 million of the U.S.S.R. as well as profess the Islamic faith."

"Many Muslims are very proud of their own religion," said "Islam is basically a way of life," Assey said.

After 40 minutes of discussion, the panel broke up into smaller groups where individuals talked with panelists.

Islam topic of panel at Coffeehouse

By Eric Detwiler
The Daily Iowan

Islamic ideology was debated fast and furious Thursday in the International Coffeehouse's "Individual Perspectives on Islam."

The discussion consisted of a four-person panel which discussed a variety of subjects relating to Islam and presented their own personal interpretations. The panel fielded questions from the more than 40 people present and in an animated debate elaborated on some of the misconceptions portrayed by the media as a result of the Gulf war.

The treatment of women in an Islamic society as compared with their treatment in Saudi Arabia was one topic of discussion.

"Saudi Arabia is not an Islamic society," said Tarik Aosey, an Arab-American.

"When you open a textbook, this is the portrayal you see," added Aosey. "The prophet Mohammad's wife was one of the greatest traders in the area."

"She led an army into battle," Miller added. "I am equal and valued in Islam. I am respected as a mother. Women are equal to men; we're not male and female — in Islam we are seen as humans. All people are equal regardless of race."

"Women can't even drive (in Saudi Arabia)," added Tamara Miller, an Iowa native and a convert to Islam.

The panel agreed that there was no true Islamic government, citing examples of King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and his 16 wives.

"These leaders impose Islamic law, but they corrupt it," said Hamza Omar, another panel member.

"Islam came to me as a religious way of life," said Israa, a native Arab. "When you grow up, you have to understand what it is to be a Muslim."

The speakers added that a common misperception is that only Arabic individuals are Islamic in faith. Aosey said over 290 million Chinese and 150 million citizens of the U.S.S.R. as well as others, profess the Islamic faith.

"Many Muslims are very ignorant of their own religion," said Miller. "Islam is basically a way of life for the people," Aosey said.

After 40 minutes of discussion, the panel broke up into smaller groups, where individuals talked with the panelists.

UI President Hunter Rawlings speaks to an Introduction to Elementary Education class Thursday afternoon on the importance of teaching and the programs the UI is offering to "at-risk" children in elementary and junior high school.

Speaker: It's Kashmir's turn for freedom

By Les May
The Daily Iowan

India is denying the people of Kashmir self-determination and is violating their human rights, said Ayub Thakur. Chairman of the International Kashmir Liberation Movement, Thakur spoke Thursday evening at the Union.

Because Kashmir is a strategically important location, India has historically sought to dominate the region, Thakur said. Pakistan, a country with a large Muslim population like Kashmir, has also hoped to control the area.

In 1947, armed conflict broke out between India and Pakistan for control of Kashmir, concluding with a United Nations-mediated cease-fire. Since then, a third of the region has been controlled by Pakistan while the other two-thirds has been controlled by India.

U.N. resolutions passed in 1948 and 1949 said the Kashmiri people would be given the right to decide by plebiscite whether to remain independent or join either India or Pakistan, but Thakur said a legal vote has never been held in the part of Kashmir under Indian rule.

"It's time this so-called democratic country (India) implemented the U.N. resolutions that were made 40 years ago," Thakur said.

After elections held in 1987 in the Indian-controlled half of Kashmir were rigged, according to Thakur, nearly 2.2 million people publicly demonstrated in opposition to Indian domination, and the Kashmiri Liberation Movement emerged.

"We feel that we've used all the legal, moral and democratic methods to try to convince India," Thakur said. "It is only through a revolution, through people going out into the streets to get the attention of the world, that we can now get India to honor the U.N. resolutions."

Rawlings' lecture addresses UI commitment to public schools

By Beth Chacey
The Daily Iowan

About 60 UI education students craned their necks upward to watch UI President Hunter Rawlings make history Thursday.

Rawlings' speech to an Introduction to Elementary and Early Childhood Teaching class marked the first time a UI president has spoken to an education class — a fact reinforcing Rawlings' often-expressed commitment to teaching.

"I have a very vigorous and personal interest in education," Rawlings began as the students listened attentively. In his speech, Rawlings stressed the value of teaching and the UI's commitment to forming a close "partnership" with public schools, partly to recruit future students to compensate for lagging enrollment.

Rawlings, who also became the first UI president to speak at the Iowa City School District's opening of the academic year last fall, said this partnership has materialized into a successful program with three Iowa public schools.

"The first case in point," Rawlings said, "is a partnership the university has formed with Lincoln Elementary School in Waterloo" which, he explained, is in a relatively poor neighborhood that is high in minorities and low in literacy.

"I have a very vigorous and personal interest in education."

Hunter Rawlings
UI President

Rawlings said the UI sent faculty to improve reading among "risk kids" on a pilot basis in the hopes of changing their attitude about education.

"We thought it was important to give students an idea that college was something they could aspire to," he said. As part of the project, the students were brought to the UI campus and given a tour.

"The idea was to show them this was their university, and it was waiting if they did the work," he said.

He said the program has "caused a great deal of excitement," and the students are now "very proud of their reading."

Two other similar programs exist, one in Davenport and another in Cedar Rapids, and Rawlings said their success depends on the partnership concept of equality between university educators and public school teachers.

"We don't believe university teaching is any more prestigious or important than teaching in public schools," Rawlings said. "In fact we think it's more difficult."

Rawlings said the partnership is "a two-way street" providing UI expertise to public schools, and in return the schools provide data for research. He also admitted that the UI hopes to boost future enrollment, especially among minority and inner-city students.

Gusto Latino: spicy weekend diversion

By Risa Grudena
Special to The Daily Iowan

Need a little spice to break you out of the end-of-winter doldrums? Let Gusto Latino warm up your March with the vibrant rhythm of live Latin American music and food. For the last several years, hundreds of people have flocked to this annual Latino-style bash to dance and celebrate Hispanic culture.

Gusto Latino, sponsored by the Foreign Language House, is open to local Latinos as well as non-Latinos and offers a festive Latin American experience. For those worried about not knowing Latino dances, merengue, cumbia and salsa lessons will be given during the party. Planned events include dance, limbo and pinata-breaking contests, and a performance of mambo and tango. Tortilla chips and salsa will be free with admission, and tacos, quesadillas and Mexican candy will be on sale during the night.

Andy Wildenberg, co-director of the Spanish House, said two things will be different this year from last year's party, space and music.

"I think it'll be a lot better than last year," Wildenberg said. "There will be much more seating room."

Last year's Gusto Latino was held in the basement of the Holiday Inn-Downtown Iowa City, which was overcrowded by the 1,100 in attendance. This year it will be held in the Union, and there will also be more side rooms which will allow for different activities to go on simultaneously without interference from each other, Wildenberg said.

Music will be provided by Latin Rhythm, a Muscatine band who also played last year. Wildenberg said the band has expanded its repertoire.

"Last year they had only been together for three months, but by now they've added some salsa, merengue and cha-cha-cha," he explained. Disc jockey Frank Rubero will also be playing popular Latin American music during part of the night.

Various groups helping the Foreign Language House sponsor the event include: UI Student Assembly, Education Programs, Opportunity at Iowa, Associated Residence Halls, and the UI Department of Spanish and Portuguese.

This year Gusto Latino will be held on Saturday night, March 9, from 8 p.m. until 12:30 a.m. in the Main Lounge of the Union. Tickets are on sale now at the University Box Office or can be purchased at the door.

war group Operation U.S. Out, said the rules will serve to protect — not deny — the right to freedom of speech.

"I think it's an excellent move," Flayhan said.

Flayhan said during several U.S. Out-sponsored rallies, counter-protesters were very disruptive — shouting the entire time and drowning out scheduled speakers.

"That is interfering with the (speaker's) right to free speech," she said. "Our whole point was to get a message out."

Flayhan dismissed the notion that the UI was attempting to block the free speech of right-wing groups on campus.

"They're not blocking them from reserving the Pentacrest," she said. Ovel also expressed concern over the provision forbidding "casual users" of the Pentacrest from "interfering" with a scheduled rally or demonstration, and said it is unclear what constitutes interference.

"If I carry a sign that goes against what they're saying, that's interfering," he said. "But that's freedom of expression."

However, Flayhan is not concerned the guidelines will be interpreted in a way that makes carrying a sign a violation.

"I would be concerned if that were the implication, but I don't think that's the case," she said. "The purpose is to protect free speech and allow people to be heard."

ment. "We serve the customer and that is the United States Air Force, the Army, the Marines and allies worldwide," he said. "The responsibility for gulf war deaths is a political issue."

Nine members of the group then advanced to the building entrances, attempting to block the 4 p.m. shift change. Rockwell employees, some waving American flags, spilled out of the building from other doors as the protesters tried to hinder their departure.

When police approached the demonstrators in order to arrest them, the protesters refused to leave, but said, "We do not intend to fight."

After sitting in front of the employee's entrance for over a half-hour, chanting anti-Rockwell International slogans, a Coralville city bus arrived, and nine protesters were arrested and taken away.

All were released upon their promise to appear in Johnson County Magistrate Court. The initial court date has been set for March 20.

Iowa defeats Wildcats in 'ugly' game

46 turnovers, 35 fouls set mood for contest

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Iowa and Northwestern didn't step into a time machine and travel back to the dark ages of women's basketball before the start of Thursday's Big Ten contest.

It just looked like they did. The 24th-ranked Hawkeyes (19-8 overall, 12-5 Big Ten) rallied from a four-point halftime deficit to beat the No. 20 Wildcats (19-8, 11-6), 67-58, in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

But it was far from pretty. The teams combined for 46 turnovers and 35 fouls.

"I think both teams set the game back about 20 years in the first half," Northwestern coach Don Perrelli said. "It was turnover after turnover."

"It was very ugly," Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer said. "I thought that we played good defense but very definitely struggled offensively."

The first half was a struggle for both offenses. It went something like this:

Northwestern committed 15 turnovers. Iowa had 14. The Hawkeyes were whistled for 11 fouls. The Wildcats shot 16 free throws. But they missed seven.

Iowa opened up an early 24-14 lead but Northwestern went on a 19-5 run to grab a 33-29 halftime lead. The Hawkeyes missed five of seven shots and committed four turnovers in the spurt.

"I think they are smart enough to know how to win ballgames, whether it's with the outside jumper or the drive to the basket," Stringer said. "They were driving to the basket with the idea of stopping the clock and going to the free throw line because they're excellent free throw shooters."

The Wildcats, who were playing without Big Ten scoring leader

Michele Savage and three others who were starters early in the season, continued to hang close throughout the second half.

The Hawkeyes didn't regain the lead until freshman Necole Tunsil rebounded a missed shot by Toni Foster and hit a layup with 13:26 left in the game. That basket capped an 8-2 run.

Iowa led from that point on, but not by more than five points until Tunsil hit a free throw with 5:16 remaining. The Hawkeyes extended the lead to 11 with 1:44 left, then hit six of nine foul shots down the stretch.

"They got there act together in the second half and we didn't," Perrelli said. "We didn't play very well offensively. I felt we did a decent job defensively causing the turnovers, but when you can't score . . ."

"We put 58 points on the board, but they were a definite struggle. We got points that were sometimes handed to us. It wasn't within our offensive system."

Perrelli wasn't the only coach unhappy about the half-court offense. Stringer said the Hawkeyes waited too long to establish the inside game and wear down the Wildcats, who only brought eight players because of the injuries.

"I think we could have worn them down a little bit quicker if we would have attacked the inside a little bit more," the Iowa coach said. "I don't think they really got wore down until we started to go inside."

"I think that when that happened, it got them down a little bit and let us get the inside game and the outside game going."

Junior guard LaTonya Tate led balanced Iowa scoring with a career-high 19 points on seven-for-nine shooting. Toni Foster added 14 points and a game-high nine Chicago: Champs by default?

The last 10 years the Eastern Conference of the NBA has been dominated by three teams: the Boston Celtics, Detroit Pistons and the Philadelphia 76ers. Yet, as the second half of this season has quickly taken shape and proceeds towards its completion, a new team attempts to move from pretender to contender for the Eastern and ultimately NBA, crown.

Currently, the Chicago Bulls look as though they are the team to beat as they try to enter the small fraternity of champions previously mentioned. But the question remains as to whether or not the Bulls will succeed or blow an otherwise golden opportunity.

With the numerous injuries to the two-time defending World Champion Detroit Pistons and the unevenness of the Boston Celtics, the Bulls have virtually had the Eastern Conference title laid at their doorstep.

Due to the injuries of Isiah Thomas, John Salley and Joe Dumars, the Pistons have become the NBA's version of the walking wounded. With the absence of Zeke, the Pistons have placed an undue amount of pressure on a multi-injured Dumars and have consistently come up short. Throw in the loss of Salley and the addition of such NBA gangbusters as Gerald Henderson and John Long and the Pistons are on course to equal their worst season in recent history. Even the greatest of teams can't survive the trauma that has overtaken this squad.

The Celtics are another story entirely. With this seasons "Black to the Future" approach, the men in green have rebounded from two disappointing seasons. The addition of Brain Shaw, Dee Brown, and Kevin Gamble to an older nucleus of Reggie Lewis, Kevin McHale, Larry Bird and Robert Parrish the Celtics have a combination of inside/outside, youth/age that certainly places them in the upper echelon of the league. Yet these same strengths could possibly be their downfall.

The Celtics are now a much better team WITHOUT Larry Bird. As the younger players have developed an intense running game, Bird lags behind, putting up those jumpers which have definitely seen better days. Bird's game is no longer needed in order for them to win. In actuality his style of play slows down the team in a bad way. Isn't it funny that when many have decided to re-name Bird, Larry Legend, that his legend is all he has to live off. Bird's game is slowly going to the dogs.

Also the marked age difference between the young and older players will eventually cause problems. When McHale and the Chief join Bird in the NBA's senior citizen ward about mid-May don't be surprised to see a humble Celtic exit from the playoff scene.

This leaves the currently-smiling Bulls. After being an also-ran for the last few seasons the Bulls now have the opportunity to prove to the world that they are a serious team, not a one-man show as many have previously claimed. Recent play indicates that they are ready to assume the throne. With Scottie Pippen playing the best basketball of his career and Michael Jordan doing what he has always done, the team that calls the Chicago Stadium home look almost like a sure thing to take the East.

But, in a minute, will this team take a page from their south side neighbors — the Cubs — and succumb to the inevitable choke hold?

Let's take a closer look at a team of destiny. Aside from Jordan, the Bulls don't have a consistently good player. Though Pippen is playing great as of late, he is known to disappear when he is needed the most. He remains visible this year and maybe he will stay that way for once in his life. But if he does, what difference will it make?

After Pippen, the rest of the Bulls are a collective gang of NBA wannabes.

Hawks bolster NCAA hopes with win

By John Shipley
The Daily Iowan

EVANSTON, Ill. — The Iowa Hawkeyes bolstered their NCAA tournament hopes Thursday night by getting their 19th win of the season, a 79-76 squeaker over a gutsy Northwestern club that has yet to win a Big Ten contest this season.

The win boosted the Hawkeyes to 19-10 overall, 8-9 in the Big Ten and sets the stage for Sunday's showdown with No. 2 Ohio State in Iowa City. The Wildcats dropped to 5-22, 0-17.

Iowa played catch-up for most of the game after enjoying a fleeting 4-2 lead early in the first half on Chris Street's inside lay-up. The rest of the half belonged to Northwestern, who took a 49-40 lead into the locker room.

Iowa started the second half with a 13-7 spurt that cut the lead to three with 3:52 gone in the half. But Northwestern followed with a 10-5 spurt to extend the lead back to eight, 66-58.

Iowa then went on an 11-2 tear to take its first lead of the half, 69-68, on Street's basket off an offensive rebound.

Street scored the next basket off an assist from Troy Skinner to extend the lead to four, 74-70, with 0:42 remaining in the game.

The Wildcats looked to their leading scorer, senior Don Brotz (25 points), for a 3-pointer, but Iowa forward Rodell Davis blocked the shot and was fouled when Brotz attempted to recover. Davis then knocked in both bonus shots and the Hawkeyes were up 76-70 at the 0:31 mark.

"Davis made a terrific block . . .

and I really appreciate that," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "That's something this team really needs; more defensive stops."

Northwestern cut the lead to three on a 3-pointer by Todd Leslie with 0:16 left, but Brotz fouled Troy Skinner on the inbounds. Skinner, the Hawkeyes' leading free throw shooter, hit the first but missed the second, and Northwestern quickly cut the lead to one on Brotz's final 3-pointer with 0:05 left.

Northwestern quickly called timeout but was assessed a technical for not having any timeouts left. Skinner hit both free throws to put the Hawkeyes up 79-76 and Iowa got the ball out of bounds with 0:05 still on the clock.

Kevin Smith was fouled on the inbounds but missed the front end of the one-and-one. But the Wildcats couldn't get a final shot off.

The win breaks a two-game losing skid for Iowa, which had lost three of its last four, and puts the team in position to win 20 games, a good indicator of whether a team is NCAA tournament-bound. Davis wouldn't declare victory after his team won its 19th game, but seems to think 20 wins would seal a return to the tournament after failing to play in a postseason tournament last year.

"I hesitate," Davis said. "I like our chances better with 19 rather than 18. But we've got our work cut out for us. It sets the stage for Sunday's game (against Ohio State)."

The Wildcats took a 49-40 lead into the locker room at halftime. Northwestern grabbed its biggest lead of the half at the 1:18 mark, 47-34, and held a 12-point lead with 0:05 remaining when James

Gymnasts lose in home triangular

The Iowa women's gymnastics team had a frustrating evening of competition against Iowa State and Central Michigan at the Iowa Field House last night.

The Hawkeyes were unable to provide enough consistency in all four events as they finished third with 184.4 points. Iowa State won the meet with 187.05 points, and Central Michigan took second with 185.55 points.

"I cannot put into words how unexpected this was," said Iowa coach Diane DeMarco. "We can't expect to win when the competition is this close and we are not hitting all of our routines."

Iowa got off to a strong start, taking two of the top three places in the vaulting competition. But the squad was unable to keep it up on the bars and the balance beam, where they had several falls. Iowa's Jennifer Miller finished second in vaulting with a 9.55, and Michelle Cahal took third in the event, scoring a 9.45.

"We had a 50 percent hit ratio on bars and beam, and that was

Iowa raises record to 6-1 with Drake win

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

Lead by decisive victories by seniors Paul Buckingham, Greg Hebard and Tommy Heiting, and an upset by No. 1 freshman Klas Bergstrom, the Iowa men's tennis team defeated the Drake Bulldogs Thursday night 5-1 at the Iowa Recreation Building. The victory raised the Hawkeyes' spring record to 6-1 on the season.

Next up for Iowa are Nebraska Friday evening at 6:30 and Gustavus Adolphus Sunday morning at 9:30. Both matches are at the Recreation Building.

"This was a really good team," said Iowa coach Steve Houghton. "They were much better than last year and we still rose to the occasion. We were hoping to be up 4-2 after the singles matches, and we finished one better than that. So it was a great performance by the entire team."

The big surprise of the evening came at No. 1 singles where Iowa's top seed Bergstrom came back from one set down to defeat the Bulldog's nationally-ranked No. 1 player Martin Dionne — last year's Midwest Region V champion.

After dropping the first set 3-6 under continuous pressure by Dionne, Bergstrom battled back, winning the first three games of the second set en route to a 6-3 tie.

Then, down 0-3 in the final set, Bergstrom again rebounded, taking six of the last seven games and the 6-4 victory in the third. The win, his first of the season over a top-ranked player, raised his spring record to 6-1 on the year.

"It was a great win for Klas," Houghton said. "It was the key match of the night and he turned in an outstanding performance."

Although playing in a weakened condition from a severe chest cold, Buckingham held his ground, leveling the Bulldogs' No. 3 player Michael Nisell. Buckingham defeated last season's top Bulldog player with crisp volleys and penetrating groundstrokes in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2. The win improved Buckingham's singles record to 6-1 on the season.

Never in trouble at any stage of his match at No. 6 singles, Hebard remained undefeated at 7-0 with an easy 6-4, 7-5 victory over Drake's

Pat Baldwin with 12. But the game really belonged to Moses, who scored 29 points to lead all scorers, one point off his season high of 30 scored two weeks ago against Illinois.

"I just came out from the half more aggressive," said Moses, who scored 19 points in the second frame. "We were getting the ball inside to Street and (James) Winters and they started playing looser on the outside. That opened me up."

"We tried to cover him tighter in the zone," Wildcat coach Bill Foster said. "He hit some good ones, some quick ones."

 Winters was the Hawkeyes' second leading scorer with 13, followed by Davis with 12.

Moses, for one, feels the team's 19th win should put the Hawkeyes in the tournament.

"I think we should definitely consider ourselves worthy of the NCAAs," Moses said. "We beat some top 10 teams in UCLA and Indiana and beat Michigan State twice... I think we should be in." "We didn't come this far to lose," rebounds. "I think it was moreso they were leaving me open than I was looking for (the shot)," Tate said of her career-best performance. "I think it's been kind of the situation all year for me. Today they were just falling for me."

"(Tate's been hitting the outside shot really well all year," said fellow guard Stephanie Schueler, who scored 11 points and dished out five assists. "She's been our most consistent outside shooter."

Trisha Waugh was the other Hawkeye in double-figures. The junior forward scored 11 points and grabbed six rebounds before reinjuring her shoulder with about three minutes left. Waugh had her arm in a sling most of this week after separating her shoulder several times in the last two weeks.

Guards Nancy Kennelly and Kelly Cole paced the Wildcats with 14 points apiece. Junior center Heather Ertel added 13 points. The Hawkeyes will play their final regular-season game when they host Wisconsin at 2 p.m. Saturday. It will be the last home appearance for Schueler and injured forward Felicia Hall.

"I can't think of two better people to set an example for a young team like this," Stringer said of the two seniors. "I will miss them greatly."

Andrew Vancott. "Tonight I think that I played very well," Hebard said. "I broke his serve in critical games in both the first and second sets, and I felt really good. I've been playing well lately and I have a lot of self-confidence, but there's a long season ahead."

Heiting and freshman Neil Denahan also posted victories with Heiting easily downing J.D. Nieman 6-1, 6-3, and Denahan struggling before eliminating the Bulldog's No. 5 player Adam Denton in three tough sets, 4-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Iowa's only loss of the night came at No. 2 singles where senior Thomas Adler fell in three tough sets to Drake's second seed Ross Nwachukwu 3-6, 7-5, 7-6 (7-4 in the tiebreak). The loss dropped Adler's season record to 5-2.

In the Hawkeyes' upcoming confrontation with Nebraska Friday and Gustavus Adolphus Sunday, Houghton says he expects decisive team wins but tight individual matches. "Nebraska is good up and down their lineup," Houghton said. "They are definitely one of the better teams in the Big Eight. As far as Gustavus Adolphus is concerned, it will be a test of our stamina after playing so many matches."

Nebraska boasts a strong lineup including nationally-ranked No. 1 player Matthias Mueller. Last fall, the Hawkeyes posted a 5-4 victory over the Cornhuskers in a Colorado tournament. But earlier this spring, Nebraska easily defeated Drake 8-1 and according to Houghton "looks very strong."

Like Drake, Gustavus Adolphus, a Division III school, is primarily known for their tennis and is always ranked in the Top 10 nationally in their division. They are lead by Coach Steve Wilkinson, former No. 1 player and assistant coach for the Hawkeyes.

The beam was expected to be a strong point for Iowa, but too many mistakes brought down a good effort by the team.

"Cole, Michelle Myers and Stacy Stengel did a fabulous job on the beam, but we just couldn't hit it consistently," said DeMarco. "We need to just put this behind us and look toward Michigan."

totally unexpected," DeMarco said. "We looked so good in practice this past week, I just can't believe it."

Lori Cole again led the Hawkeyes, winning the floor exercise with a score of 9.65. Cole also finished third on the balance beam with a 9.45, and took second in the all-around behind Iowa State's K.J. Kinder with 37.85 points. Kinder, who won the all-around last time Iowa competed against Iowa State, finished at 38.05 and also won individual championships in the beam and the bars, with scores of 9.55 and 9.5 respectively.

"Lori had another solid day, and Jane Powers really sparkled on the floor exercise," Demarco said. "Jane's routine was beautiful."

The off-season acquisition of Dennis Hopson was a complete waste and though Cliff Levingstone has added much needed inside stability, he alone is not enough. Stacey King left his game in Oklahoma and B.J. Armstrong seems to have Iowa flashbacks of brilliance far too sporadically, though he has played with a great deal more confidence as of late.

IOWA CITY — February Big Ten Conference Athlete-of-the-Month honors for women's gymnastics belong to Iowa senior Michelle Cahal.

Cahal scored a personal-best 38.00 in the all-around to lead Iowa to an upset victory over league-leading Wisconsin 186.95-185.10 February 15. She also improved her own school record on the uneven parallel bars with a first-place score of 9.70 in that meet.

season-high vault score of 9.35 two weeks earlier as well.

Cahal averages 9.18 on vault, 9.18 on uneven bars, 8.95 on balance beam and 9.2 on floor exercise for an all-around average of 36.40 this season.

Age makes a difference to Mariners
TEMPE, Ariz. — The Seattle Mariners were all set to give Phoenix Cardinals wide receiver J.T. Smith a tryout — until they found out how old he really was, 35.

Smith, a two-time Pro Bowl selection in his 13-year NFL career who last played baseball while attending high school in Texas, took batting practice and fielded some fly balls Tuesday at Tempe Diablo Stadium under the watchful eye of Mariners farm director Jim Beattie.

Seattle agreed to give Smith an official tryout Wednesday on the assumption that he was 30 years old, as they had been told by Smith's friends who requested the tryout on Smith's behalf.

But Mariners management saw a television report of Smith's informal workout and found out Smith's actual age. They decided that 35 was too old to start a baseball career and

She is only the second Iowa women's gymnast in history to reach the 38.00 plateau. Junior Lori Cole set the Iowa all-around record at 38.05 last season. Cahal's score ranked second in the conference through February, and her uneven bars high of 9.70 was third among the league gymnasts through the month.

The Arvada, Colo. native registered a season-high 9.40 on the balance beam and 9.55 on floor exercise February 15, and posted her season-high vault score of 9.35 two weeks earlier as well.

Cahal averages 9.18 on vault, 9.18 on uneven bars, 8.95 on balance beam and 9.2 on floor exercise for an all-around average of 36.40 this season.

Age makes a difference to Mariners
TEMPE, Ariz. — The Seattle Mariners were all set to give Phoenix Cardinals wide receiver J.T. Smith a tryout — until they found out how old he really was, 35.

Smith, a two-time Pro Bowl selection in his 13-year NFL career who last played baseball while attending high school in Texas, took batting practice and fielded some fly balls Tuesday at Tempe Diablo Stadium under the watchful eye of Mariners farm director Jim Beattie.

Seattle agreed to give Smith an official tryout Wednesday on the assumption that he was 30 years old, as they had been told by Smith's friends who requested the tryout on Smith's behalf.

But Mariners management saw a television report of Smith's informal workout and found out Smith's actual age. They decided that 35 was too old to start a baseball career and

Hawkeyes looking for consistency

by Brian Gaul
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa softball coach Gayle Blevins is hoping to avoid a repeat year when her team plays South Florida Classic weekend.

Blevins' 1990 team was a repeat of a sports cliché — a team that was consistently inconsistent. The Hawkeyes usually played well against quality teams but often stumbled against lesser competition.

At last year's South Florida Classic, for example, the Hawkeyes topped a nationally-ranked Florida State, but lost to two unranked teams in Florida and Central Michigan.

Blevins said that getting consistent performance is a constant when the Hawkeyes ramp up for the weekend.

"One thing we knew we were doing last year was playing a lot of competition all the time," Blevins said. "We have to play day-to-day and take a consistent approach. We don't want our approach to be dictated by other teams."

The 11th-ranked Hawkeyes will play three games in the Florida State, Stetson at 5 p.m. EST, Stetson at 5 p.m. EST, Stetson at 5 p.m. EST.

Blevins' team finishes practice Saturday against North Carolina at 9 a.m. and at 3 p.m. A single-elimination championship round starts Saturday night and continues through the top four seeds in each region.

Blevins felt inconsistency was the reason the Hawkeyes were eliminated from last year's NCAA Tournament. The 43-28 Hawkeyes were Pitcher/infielder Brett Backlund, who will be throwing for the Hawkeyes.

Backlund to average

By Erica Weiland
 The Daily Iowan

For Iowa pitcher Brett Backlund, the season is a personal triumph. The right-handed junior is a two-time All-American.

"From a mental standpoint, I've really improved," said Backlund, who gave up two-thirds of an inning in the loss to Missouri.

The Hawkeyes are all looking for a repeat of last year's success. Backlund was the first pitcher to pitch a complete game in the series.

Backlund will pitch the first game of the series against Missouri on Saturday. He will be joined by pitcher Tom Anderson.

Junior Tom Anderson is a two-time All-American. He was named the Big Ten Pitcher of the Year in 1989.

Despite the losses to the Hawkeyes, Backlund is confident he can prove that he is a consistent performer.

"Having the first week of the series, we're more experienced than we showed last week," Backlund said.

"Hopefully last week's loss was a wake-up call. Killeen, who went 4-for-4, got really unraveled on the mound. We need to be composed. We need to be able to prove that we're a consistent performer."

As for the competition, Backlund is confident he can prove that he is a consistent performer.

"I think Southwest is a good team. I pitched against them last year."

Hawkeyes looking for consistency

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Iowa softball coach Gayle Blevins is hoping to avoid a repeat of last year when her team plays in the South Florida Classic this weekend.

Blevins' 1990 team was — to borrow a sports cliché — consistently inconsistent. The Hawkeyes usually played well against high-quality teams but often struggled against lesser competition.

At last year's South Florida Classic, for example, the Hawkeyes topped a nationally-ranked team in Florida State, but lost games to two unranked teams in South Florida and Central Michigan.

Blevins said that getting a more consistent performance is important when the Hawkeyes return to Tampa, Fla., this weekend.

"One thing we knew we were weak in last year was playing our level of competition all the time," Blevins said. "We have to learn to play day-to-day and take a consistent approach. We don't want to let our approach be dictated by the other team."

The 11th-ranked Hawkeyes open the three-day, 18-team tournament with three games in their pool today. Iowa faces Illinois State at 1 p.m. EST, Stetson at 5 p.m. and Ball State at 7 p.m.

Blevins' team finishes pool play Saturday against North Carolina-Wilmington at 9 a.m. and Virginia at 3 p.m. A single-elimination championship round starts Saturday night and continues Sunday for the top four seeds in each pool.

Blevins felt inconsistency was the reason the Hawkeyes were left out of last year's NCAA Tournament. The 43-28 Hawkeyes were Big Ten co-champs last year but didn't receive an at-large bid to the tournament.

"If you look at last year, for the most part we played well against the good competition," Blevins said. "We struggled against some teams that had less talent but played hard against us. We didn't handle that very well."

To correct that problem, Blevins has asked her team to take a consistent approach to every practice and every game this year.

"I think that's as much a sign of maturing and the mental side of it," Blevins said. "I think our team remembers that what happened to them throughout the season was reflected at the end."

The Iowa coach said she was pleased with her team's consistency in the Hawkeyes' season-opening tournament at Arizona State. Iowa finished 4-2 in that event against what Blevins said was a "fairly strong" field.

The Hawkeyes played three nationally-ranked teams in the tournament and came away with a victory over No. 12 Arizona State. Iowa's losses came at the hands of No. 3 Arizona and No. 10 UNLV.

This tournament will be an even better test of consistency, Blevins said, because the field includes a wider range of talent, including teams from the South, Northeast and Midwest regions of the country.

Blevins said the tournament will also give the Hawkeyes a chance to play against teams with about the same amount of preparation.

At Arizona State, most of Iowa's opponents had already opened their seasons and had practiced outside since January.

The Iowa coach expected the Hawkeyes' toughest games in their pool to be against Illinois State — last year's Gateway conference regular-season champions — and Virginia.

Iowa split a doubleheader with Illinois State last year in Normal, Ill. Virginia signed one of the top high school pitchers in the country last year and Blevins expects the Cavaliers to start her Saturday.

Should the Hawkeyes finish in the top four in their pool, they will advance to the championship round Saturday and Sunday. Blevins said that earning a berth in Sunday's championship game was a reasonable goal for her team.

The Daily Iowan/David Greedy

Pitcher/infielder Brett Backlund squares up to bunt during a Hawkeye practice. Backlund, who sometimes plays third base and designated hitter, will be throwing Iowa's first game Saturday at St. Louis.

Backlund looking to avenge shelling

By Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

For Iowa pitcher Brett Backlund, Saturday's game with Southwest Missouri State is personal. After taking a beating there last season, the right-handed junior is ready for payback time.

"From a mental standpoint, I'm glad I'm pitching against them again," said Backlund, who gave up eight hits and seven runs and walked three in two-thirds of an inning. "I want to get that off my chest."

The Hawkeyes are all looking for some improvement after starting the season by going 1-2 with Missouri last weekend in Columbia, Mo.

Iowa won the first game, 4-2, Saturday but dropped the nightcap 5-0 and Sunday the Tigers won 13-2.

"We realized that it would take some time," Coach Duane Banks said. "I think once we get to Florida (March 16-23), we'll start to see big improvement. But we'll be better this weekend."

Banks' squad will face Southwest Missouri State and Saint Louis in a doubleheader Saturday. Sunday the Hawkeyes will take on Northern Illinois.

Backlund will pitch the first game Saturday after striking out nine Tiger players last weekend. The Salem, Ore., native gave up seven hits and two earned runs on the way to taking the win.

Junior Tom Anderson is slated to start the second game and the third starter is undecided. Anderson picked up the loss in the Hawkeyes 5-0 defeat by Missouri but allowed only three earned runs while striking out seven and walking two.

Despite the losses to the Tigers, Iowa pitcher Mark Stuhr said that just having played will make the Hawkeye squad better.

"Having the first weekend out of the way will help us," Stuhr said. "We're more experienced. Now we just want to prove that we're better than we showed last week."

"Hopefully last weekend was somewhat of a fluke," said catcher Tim Killen, who went 4-for-7 over the weekend, including a home run. "We got really unraveled once the other team started scoring; we lost our composure. We need to be more consistent in our play. Maybe this week we can prove that we're better than that."

As for the competition this weekend, Southwest Missouri State is the favorite. The Hawkeyes took two out of three games from the Bears last year but are on the downside of a 20-14 series record.

"I think Southwest is pretty good," Backlund said. "The two-thirds of an inning I pitched against them last year was the worse outing I've ever had."

Capriati wins Slims on pro anniversary

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — Jennifer Capriati marked the first anniversary of her professional debut with a three-set victory Wednesday night over upset-minded Karin Kschwendt in the Virginia Slims of Florida.

Kschwendt was hampered by foot blisters in the final two sets, and Capriati won 6-7 (0-7), 6-1, 6-1.

As a 13-year-old, Capriati surprised the tennis world by reaching the finals a year ago in her first pro tournament. Against Kschwendt, the only surprise was that Capriati dropped the first set.

"I said to myself, 'You know, you're in trouble here,'" Capriati said. "She was playing really good."

Kschwendt, ranked 82nd, kept the 11th-ranked teen-ager off balance for a while with an assortment of volleys, drop shots and moon balls as well as a sizzling forehand.

But after falling behind 4-1 in the second set, the 22-year-old from Luxembourg called for a trainer. At the end of the set, she took a 3-minute injury timeout.

The problem, she said later, was blisters on both feet.

"I couldn't move any more after the middle of the second set," she said. "I was running like on nails."

Only one seed was eliminated Wednesday. No. 6 Barbara Paulus lost to Lisa Bonder-Kreiss 6-4, 6-3.

No. 3 Mary Joe Fernandez beat Amanda Coetzer of South Africa 6-4, 6-1; No. 8 Nathalie Tauziat eliminated Peanut Louie-Harper 6-0, 6-3; and No. 9 Helen Kelesi beat Halle Cioffi 6-3, 6-1.

'Peaks' gets Thursday slot

By Scott Williams
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — "Twin Peaks," the moody, obscure nighttime soap opera about the eccentric inhabitants of a Pacific Northwest lumber town, is returning to ABC's prime time lineup, network officials said Thursday.

"Twin Peaks" returns Thursday, March 28, at 9 p.m. EST with six original episodes to air in that time slot, said Robert Iger, president of ABC Entertainment.

"We've returned it to the time period where it performed very well against strong competition last spring, and we're hopeful that this move will revitalize interest in the program," Iger said.

"Twin Peaks" replaced "Gabriel's Fire," a drama starring James Earl Jones, which will be in hiatus following Thursday's broadcast. "Gabriel's Fire" will return in April at a different time period, Iger said.

"Twin Peaks" had been languishing in a Saturday night time slot until it was placed on hiatus last month. At the beginning of its March 28 broadcast, Iger said, what has happened so far in the season will be recapitulated.

That's a tall order, considering how even fans of the quirky series sometimes have trouble following its events.

Let's take, for example, the mysterious death of Josie Packard (Joan Chen). She died in bed while aiming a pistol at her lover, Sheriff Harry S. Truman (Michael Ontkean), and mystical, pie-gobbling FBI Agent Dale Cooper (Kyle MacLachlan).

Was she angry? Who knows. She feared that he would learn all her unsavory secrets. What happened to her after she died? Glad you asked. Her image took up residence inside a dresser drawer knob at the Great Northern Hotel.

Let's not even discuss who killed Laura Palmer. Everybody knows it was her father, Leland, while under the influence of the demonic BOB.

BOB, you may be interested to learn, appeared on the bed shortly after Josie died. So did that really, really strange dwarf who appears in Cooper's dreams.

The series was conceived by director David Lynch, the high priest of cinematic anxiety ("Eraserhead," "The Elephant Man," "Dune," "Blue Velvet" and "Wild at Heart"), and Mark Frost, a TV producer from "Hill Street Blues."

"Twin Peaks," a midseason replacement, was the year's most written-about show even before its April 8, 1990, debut won a 33 percent share of the TV audience. It quickly became the most talked-about show on television.

But it was everything except a hit. Nominated for 14 Emmy Awards, the most of any drama, it won only two technical prizes.

Its audience share of 33 percent

Robert Iger
ABC Entertainment

eroded when it went up against NBC's blockbuster "Cheers." It finished the season with a respectable if unspectacular tie for 40th place.

ABC's decision to return "Twin Peaks" to the Thursday night slot against "Cheers" was bad news to one ratings analyst.

"They're determined to kill the show," said David Marans, a senior researcher for the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency. "While pulling it out of that nowhere slot on Saturday, the lead-in of 'The Father Dowling Mysteries' is almost as incompatible a program as they have."

No pain, some gain for Dodgers pitcher

By John Nadel
The Associated Press

VERO BEACH, Fla. — Orel Hershiser took a major step toward returning to the Dodgers' pitching rotation when he threw 54 painless pitches during a spring training workout.

"I didn't do a whole lot," he said Thursday after icing down his right shoulder, which was surgically rebuilt last April 27. "Today was the first day I let myself think like it was even a game."

"I'm pretty confident that I could probably relieve in a big-league game right now — throw one or two innings, take a day or two off, throw one or two innings."

Hershiser, the 1988 NL Cy Young Award winner, threw a 22-pitch segment and a 14-pitch segment to live hitters at Holman Stadium before an 18-pitch segment on the sidelines with just a catcher involved.

To simulate game conditions, he took eight-minute breaks between the first and second workout and the second and third session. He warmed up with 40 pitches.

"I had no problem loosening up," he said. "In the first segment, I was just kind of feeling my oats. I wasn't throwing game speed and I definitely didn't have game accuracy."

"I felt a lot better in the second inning. I was a little more aggressive, I was throwing the ball like it really matters. I think I even surprised myself." Outfielders Braulio Castillo and Jose Gonzalez and third baseman Dave Hansen were the hitters. Coach Mark Cresse did the catching, calling balls and strikes and deciding which balls were hits and which were outs.

Castillo singled and doubled in the first session and struck out in the second session. Gonzalez singled and doubled in the second session.

Hansen took a called third strike and walked in the first session and grounded out weakly twice in the second session.

"He's throwing great," Hansen said. "The ball's got more movement than ever. He seems just like he was before, he's throwing great."

Dodgers physical therapist Pat Srenar was also impressed. "He did extremely well today," Srenar said. "That was as far as we've come to date, obviously. He had no problems warming up between innings, that's what we were concerned about."

When asked when Hershiser might appear in a game, Srenar said, "That's probably the next step. I don't know what form that will be. We'll see how he feels tomorrow. This was a major step for him."

As he's done all along in his rehabilitation, Hershiser wouldn't set a timetable.

"I don't think we did this and all of a sudden, I'm going into exhibition games," he said. "I've got a lot to do to become a pitcher. There are two or three (more) steps to take."

Orel Hershiser threw '54 painless pitches' Thursday at Vero Beach, Fla., to advance another step in his long rehabilitation from shoulder surgery.

However, Hershiser said he planned to pitch in a game before the Dodgers break camp.

"I would rather get some innings in down here to get a better gauge of where I'm at" than to open the season in the minor leagues, he said. "I'll be wanting to see if I can get people out, big-league people out. It definitely would build confidence if I can get people out."

Hershiser, 32, said the toughest part for him lies ahead.

"I feel almost like a pregnant woman, that the hardest part is coming now," he said. "It's time to deliver. It's really getting harder for me, not easier. I've got to get ready to be a pitcher."

Rickey Henderson

Rickey finally shows up

By Tim Liotta
The Associated Press

PHOENIX — A day late and feeling nearly a million dollars short, Rickey Henderson arrived at the Oakland Athletics training camp Thursday with his desire for a contract extension in tow.

The 1990 American League Most Valuable Player, who is three stolen bases shy of breaking Lou Brock's record for career steals, Henderson wants to be one of the five highest-paid players in baseball. He's giving the A's until the end of spring training to make him so.

"It's pride, period," Henderson said before the A's workout Thursday. "Every time I hit that dirt (stealing a base), it's pride. . . I don't think my contract is fair. I don't think it goes with the way I play the game. I don't think I'm 40th or 50th on the list."

Henderson's teammates took the disgruntled outfielder's contract demands to heart, and welcomed him to camp with a wheelbarrow full of money. While Henderson and the rest of the A's were going through pre-practice stretching, Coach Reggie Jackson wheeled out a large glass jar full of money donated by the players, mostly $1 dollar bills.

A sign on the jar read, "The Rickey Henderson Appreciation Fund. Not Tax Deductible."

Henderson would not put a specific dollar figure on his demands, but said he was offered a contract worth more than $3.7 million per year before he chose to sign a four-year, $12 million deal with the A's on Feb. 28, 1989.

"And that was before I was the MVP," Henderson said. ". . . You base yourself on the players in the game and what kind of player you think you are. I think I deserve to be in the top five."

"If you ask me I deserve to be No. 1. . . Whatever any player is worth, I'm worth that."

Boston pitcher Roger Clemens is baseball's highest-paid player with a salary of more than $5.38 million per year. Jose Canseco ranks second at $4.7 million, with Tony Gwynn of San Diego third ($4.08), Darryl Strawberry fourth ($4.05 million), and Don Mattingly fifth ($3.86 million).

Dunn wary of Buckeyes

By David Taylor
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's gymnastics team will make its last regular-season showing tonight, as it faces conference foes Ohio State and Wisconsin in Madison. Army will compete also, but Iowa coach Tom Dunn thinks most of the trouble will come from the third-ranked Buckeyes and the No. 13 Badgers.

"This will be a real tough meet for us," Dunn said. "I'm hoping for a strong effort, but we're not in real good shape, and I don't know if we'll be able to stay with Ohio State."

The team has developed a recent rash of injuries, and several key performers will be missing at the meet. Junior Dillon Ashton injured his back and neck against Penn State two weeks ago, and sophomore Chris Kabat and freshman Gary Denk also have suffered injuries in the past week.

Kabat has a knee injury and Dunn said it is uncertain whether he will perform. Denk will not compete after sustaining a mild concussion against Michigan State last week.

"Our team will be a little bit weaker than it would be normally, but hopefully Kabat and Denk will be ready for the Big Ten meet," Dunn said.

Iowa will compete in the Big Ten Championships March 22-23.

Dunn also said that the nine-man team used in the Big Ten meet has "more or less been decided on." Kabat and Denk normally compete in six events apiece, so their return could be crucial.

Dunn said that he was concerned "about everything" having to do with tonight's meet, but he also said that he expected a strong effort from the squad.

Bucs force this exit by Clemens

The Associated Press

Roger Clemens was back on the mound and Darryl Strawberry was making his Dodgers debut. The exhibition season has begun.

Clemens, last seen being dragged from the mound in the playoffs, didn't get kicked out Thursday. He got knocked out.

The two-time Cy Young Award winner got tagged for five runs and five hits in two innings as the Pittsburgh Pirates beat Boston 10-7 at Winter Haven, Fla.

"Right now, there's no reason for me to try to punch guys out or throw on the corners," Clemens said. "I threw a lot of strikes in the middle. I wanted to throw fastballs and breaking balls, which I did. My velocity was OK. It was a good, overall workout."

Boston manager Joe Morgan made a rare spring trip to the mound when Clemens got in trouble, and lifted him when Pittsburgh finished batting around. Clemens struck out one, walked none and gave up three earned runs.

Over in Vero Beach, Strawberry went 1-for-3 with a double in his Los Angeles debut, but the Dodgers lost as Rob Deer drove in three runs in Detroit's 10-3 victory.

"Like I've said before, this isn't the game I played seven years ago," Strawberry said. "My game will be at a different level."

Strawberry threw out Lou Whitaker after he had made a big turn at first base following a third-inning single.

Roger Clemens didn't need umpires to drag him out of the BoSox' exhibition game with the Pirates Thursday — his performance did the trick.

Baltimore beat the Chicago White Sox 8-0 on a combined four-hitter by Ben McDonald, Jose Mesa, Dave Johnson and Kevin Hickey. Sam Horn hit a three-run homer for the Orioles.

Atlanta beat defending NCAA champion Georgia 2-0 on Sid Bream's two-run, fourth-inning homer.

The Chicago Cubs beat Arizona 5-4, overcoming four RBIs by Mike Kelly.

In other spring training news:

■ AL MVP Rickey Henderson finally arrived at Oakland's training camp in Scottsdale, Ariz.

■ Catcher Joe Oliver ended his two-day workout and returned to Cincinnati's spring training camp. Pitcher Jack Armstrong, however, said he would continue to stay away until his contract is changed.

Iowa gunning for nationals

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

Even though 10 of its swimmers qualified for nationals last week at the Big Ten Championships, the Iowa men's swimming team is gunning to add several new names to the flight list to Texas this weekend at the Iowa State United States Swimming Championships in Cedar Rapids.

"We had decided ahead of time that Big Ten would be our qualifying meet," Coach Glenn Patton said. "That's why we cancelled the Iowa Invitational (scheduled for next week). Our main goal is to get our 200- and 400-yard medley relay teams qualified for nationals, and there will also be some guys swimming to qualify in some individual events."

Twice last week — once during competition and the second in a time trial following the conclusion of the meet — the Hawkeye 400 medley relay team made NCAA cuts but was disqualified because of early starts. This Saturday, after concentrated practice on takeoffs, the Hawkeyes vow things will be different.

"I've been trying to go a little bit slower off the start than usual," said junior Mike Johnson, who swims the butterfly leg of the relay. "This time I don't want any questions from anybody, but I think we're ready enough not to have to be overly safe if we just concentrate."

Also hoping to qualify for nationals is Iowa's 200 medley relay team, which sports Johnson and three freshmen in Keith Gunderson, Tom Beer and Rob Meadows.

Johnson, who set a Big Ten and school record as a member of the NCAA-qualifying 800 freestyle relay, will swim the backstroke leg of the relay, followed by Gunderson (breaststroke), Beer (butterfly) and Meadows (freestyle). Beer and Meadows also qualified for NAAs as members of the third-place 200 freestyle relay team.

"I'm really psyched," said Gunderson, who edged sophomore Brad Gaeth Thursday afternoon in a race for the relay spot. "Scoring points for the team is very important, and it's particularly exciting for me going as a freshman."

In individual action, Meadows, Beer and Kirch will swim the 50 freestyle in hopes of making NCAA cuts, while Johnson will swim the 200 freestyle to attempt to qualify for U.S. Senior Nationals.

"It's a great team goal," said senior tri-captain Rob Leyshon. "Relays score a lot of points at nationals, so we really need the 400 medley relay to qualify."

CAIRO, Egypt — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak Sunday endorsed a peace proposal calling on Israel to withdraw from occupied territory in exchange for a peace treaty in the region, but Secretary of State James Baker said he had no specific commitments.

"We still have a long way to go," Baker told reporters here after meeting with Mubarak.

You probably wouldn't think it's unusual about a young man, in his late 30s, and his dark brown hair, looking out from underneath a cap he wears. He is wearing new hiking boots that are a little off his feet.

James is an older man, slightly stooped, and weathered. His red eyes are rimmed with smoke through the smoke of a cigarette.

Every day brings a new challenge for Jim and James because they are homeless. James faces a struggle to survive on the streets. He receives a few meals a day from charity checks. And every night he has to find a place where he will sleep.

But Jim and James are different. They are only

The Greater Iowa City Fellowship invited the homeless of Iowa City to a sleep out for, and a challenge, but the homeless participants from the Emergency Housing Program opted to stay indoors, because of the cold weather.

The sleep out, held at More Church, was for breakfast and a panel discussion with several individuals with experience in the field. The discussion ranged from the problems facing the homeless to shortages of affordable housing to difficulties in defunding on the local level.

"There are substantial problems going on in our society that are not responding to the needs of the homeless," said Eric McCarty, director of the Homeless in Iowa City, "and we need to do more work. That's because the program that's been set up keeps changing."

"We have all these programs for whatever reasons, but we need a place to live," McCarty said. "We're just putting Band-Aids on the problem. It's all these little pieces of the puzzle that are not on the national level. Homeless problems have priority, but there's not enough money for these programs."

"I don't know which program is the best," said Ron Henderson of the
