Bush proposes Israel relinquish territory in exchange for peace

By Barry Schwed
The Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — Eight Arab governments Sunday endorsed President Bush's proposal calling on Israel to relinquish territory in exchange for peace in the region, but Secretary of State James Baker said he had not asked them for specific commitments.

"We still have a long way to go, and it is very early," Baker told reporters as he flew here after meeting with Arab foreign ministers in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia. "We are trying to get a process going."

Baker, on his first Mideast diplomatic mission since the allied victory over Iraq, met with the foreign ministers of Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, the United Arab Emirates, Oman and Qatar.

In a declaration issued after Baker left Saudi Arabia, the ministers called for "an end to the Israeli occupation of the Arab territories" and assurances of national rights for Palestinians.

While endorsing Bush's peace proposal, the Arabs reiterated their desire for a Mideast peace conference.

Baker rejected the request, saying, "This is not the appropriate time."

Israeli response to the Arab meeting was cautious.

"If the Arabs come and tell us that territory is the primary objective of negotiations, it is a sign they (are) not really aiming for peace," said Yosef Ben-Aharon, who advises Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on the land-for-peace question.

"If they tell us they finally decided to recognize Israel's existence and deal with it as an equal partner, then they can place on the negotiating table any issue they wish," Ben-Aharon said.

Another top adviser to Shamir said Israel would push a 2-year-old plan that offers Palestinians elections and negotiations on Israel's autonomy offer.

"We have a good peace initiative of May 1989, and this is what we want to go ahead with," Avi Pazner said on the eve of Baker's arrival in Israel for two days of talks.

Baker, who had offered to talk with Palestinians while in Israel, said there was "some indication" there would be such a meeting. But there were mixed signals from the Palestine Liberation Organization, with one faction saying such a meeting had been approved and another saying it had not.

The issue has caused renewed violence between Palestinians and Israelis. See Diplomacy, Page 7A

The homeless: battle against discrimination

Big city problems of poverty, housing shortages come home

By Stacy Williamson
The Daily Iowan

You probably wouldn't notice anything unusual about Jim if he passed you on the street. He is a young man, in his late 20s or early 30s, and his dark brown hair pokes out from underneath the blue ski cap he wears. He is proud of the new hiking boots that adorn his feet.

James is an older man. His back is slightly stooped, and his face is weathered. His red eyes look tired through the smoke from his cigarette.

Every day brings a new challenge for Jim and James because they are homeless. James faces a daily struggle to survive until he receives a few much-needed checks. And every night, Jim wonders where he will sleep.

But Jim and James are not unique. They are only two of as many as 200 homeless people in Iowa City, according to Carol Thompson of the Johnson County Department of Human Services.

The number of people living on the streets in Iowa City has increased sharply in the last several years, up from about 10 people a few years ago, Thompson says.

And this number, she adds, does not include teens living in youth shelters, people in emergency housing, or individuals and families who double up with others to share housing costs. If these people were included, the figure would run over 1,000, she says.

Jim and James say they face unfair stereotypes and even discrimination because of their condition.

"The stereotype of a homeless person is someone with holes in their coat and a dirty appearance," James says. "But that's really only a handful of them. There are some people out there that are dressed immaculately, and you could never tell they're homeless."

Jim, who now stays with friends, in a local laundry or wherever he can, said that although his appearance might not give his homeless condition away at first, people still react differently to him once they find out he is homeless.

"People fear homeless people because of the stigma that comes with the name," he said. "People fear what they don't understand, and people tend to discriminate against you. They tend to think that homeless people choose to be that way, but there are many different reasons why people are

Programs decry lack of funds

By Eric Detwiler
The Daily Iowan

The Greater Iowa City Housing Fellowship invited the public to sleep out for, and with, the homeless of Iowa City Friday night. Nine individuals took the challenge, but the homeless participants from the Overnight Emergency Housing Project opted to stay indoors, due to the cold weather.

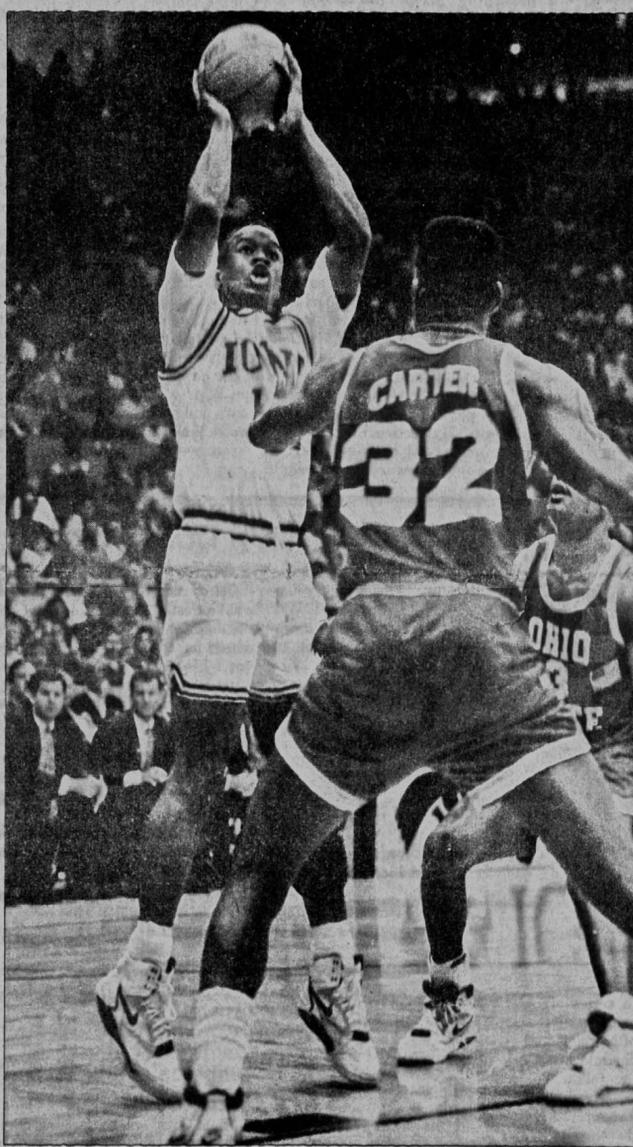

The sleep out, held at St. Thomas More Church, was followed by breakfast and a panel discussion with several individuals with experience in the field. The discussion ranged from the various problems facing the homeless due to shortages of affordable housing to difficulties in dealing with funding on the local and federal level.

"There are substantial changes going on in our society that we are not responding to," Bill McCarty, director of Youth Homes in Iowa City, said. "People say we keep trying these new programs and nothing seems to work. That's because society keeps changing."

"We have all these people who, for whatever reasons, don't have a place to live," McCarty said. "We're just putting Band-Aids on the problem. It's all focusing on little pieces of the problem and not on the national problem. Homeless problems right now have priority, but there is a finite amount of money for domestic programs."

"I don't know which is worse," Ron Henderson of the Iowa City

Hawks earn NCAA tourney invitation, face E. Tennessee

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

Iowa guard Troy Skinner has been to a baseball game at the Metrodome. But he doesn't know about the basketball accommodations there.

Skinner, along with the rest of the Hawkeye team, will soon find out what it's like to play basketball in the Minneapolis venue used primarily for football and baseball, because that's where Iowa will be going for its first-round NCAA tournament game.

The Hawkeyes were seeded seventh in the Midwest Region Sunday when the pairings for the 1991 tournament were announced. Iowa, which defeated No. 2 Ohio State 80-69 earlier Sunday, will face 10th-seeded East Tennessee State Thursday in Minneapolis. Times of the first-round matchups are due to be released today.

"We're happy to be going to Minneapolis," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "This is a good spot for us because this is the first time since I've been here that we've been close enough that our fans can actually take part."

The Buccaneers are 28-4 on the season and have been to the NCAA tournament for the last two years, according to Davis. The Iowa coach also said that all five of the team's starters and 10 of the 12 lettermen are back this season.

"They're a high-scoring ballclub," Davis said. "They're a good 3-point shooting ballclub and high-tempo team. I think their record speaks for itself."

If the Hawkeyes beat East Tennessee State, they will face the winner of the Duke-Northeast Louisiana game Saturday at the Metrodome.

As far as scouting, Davis said he will be prepared to face the Blue Devils if the situation comes up.

"We have 16 tapes of Duke," Davis said, "but unfortunately we may not get to play Duke. We do have a few tapes of East Tennessee State."

Due to the NCAA wrestling tournament, the Hawkeyes will work out in the North Gym of the Field House today. But the practice will be closed to the public because of "close quarters," Davis said.

Tickets for the Midwest Regional games at the Metrodome are available through Ticket Master at (612)922-9000. Price for three sessions is $51.

Five Big Ten teams received bids for this year's tournament: Iowa, Ohio State, Indiana, Michigan State and Purdue.

Transitional housing option for struggling families

Laura Parks
Special to The Daily Iowan

David and Susan Findley have a 1-year-old baby and practically no income. Susan is unemployed, and David works for a temporary service agency. Last year, when Susan was pregnant, they lived in city shelters by night and wandered the streets by day. They put themselves on waiting lists for city subsidized housing, but were rejected by landlords who didn't accept children or considered homeless families to be a financial risk.

Today, Susan and her husband live in transitional housing, which provides a temporary home for their family until they get "back on their feet again." The Findleys were allowed to move into their Davenport Street house, owned by the Zion Lutheran Church, when their son, David Jr., was born.

Susan reflects on the life she and David have had. "It seems the only way you can survive is to get assistance from everybody. Like the low-income housing thing. I don't mind being on it. It will help us. But I'd like to be independent — like other people — paying my own bills. It's frustrating."

Transitional housing, a service of the Hawkeye Area Community Action Program, provides temporary housing for homeless families. Mike Maher, the transitional housing coordinator for Johnson County, says HACAP's program rehabilitates structurally usable housing and gives support services to families.

"Hopefully this will enable them to become self-sufficient within a specific time frame. Usually, that's two years." People in transitional housing must attempt to pay 30 percent of their income as rent and try to build savings toward a down payment on a home of their own.

HACAP is funded by the United Way, as well as by local and federal grants. The organization offers a wide range of help. For instance, they guide families in how to function successfully in a home setting: They teach nutrition, housekeeping, paying bills, balancing a checkbook, and give information and referrals to help in job searches. They also send liaisons to check on families to see how they're doing.

The Rev. Daniel Rasmus of Zion Lutheran Church counsels the

Iowa City's Homeless

Findleys weekly in their new home. He says the Findleys' biggest problem is the Iowa City housing market.

"It's particularly difficult in a place like Iowa City because of the housing situation with all the students. The price of housing is very high," Rasmus said.

Maher explains the situation: 10 or 20 years ago, low- and middle-income families could eventually switch from renting to owning their own homes. Now they're stuck renting, mainly because the large student population drives rent prices higher. Students are willing to double up on living space, because they know they won't be here long, he says.

"It's unfair to ask families to do the same," Maher said. "But it's a business for landlords, who get their rent checks just the same."

Iowa City needs more transitional housing for the many more low-income families like David and Susan, Maher says. About 16 families — or 45 people — are now on HACAP's waiting list. Polly Pagliai, vice president of the Greater Iowa City Housing Fellowship, says demand varies during different times of the year.

"They had about 40 families waiting this summer. It varies with the weather," she said.

Rasmus says he sees a lot of homeless people when his congregation serves free hot lunches. "I don't know where they come from, but they're dressed like they're having difficulties finding their way. They're old, and they're young. Some are women with children. It's obvious there are people in this community who are in great need." But he adds there is not enough help available.

And the need is growing. Four hundred people in Johnson County are waiting for city subsidized housing, which is provided by funds from the federal government. The average wait for subsidized housing is 18 months, whereas the average wait for transitional housing is only nine months. But subsidized housing offers none of transitional housing's social services, so many of those 400 will be knocking on Mike Maher's door.

HACAP has guidelines people must meet to qualify for help. Homeless single women with small children are top priority. Recipients also must fall below the federal definition of low income — a family of four making $15,875 gross income per year, for example. They also have to be motivated to change their situation, Maher says.

The Findleys want things to change for them. David wants to become a cook or an artist. Samples of his drawings adorn the walls of their home, lighting rooms with their colorful swirls and geometric patterns. But in the meantime, he works for Manpower doing odd jobs. He complains the work isn't steady.

"Employment in Iowa City ain't the best. There's a lot of jobs, but they're real low-paying jobs — McDonald's, that sort of thing." He frowns as he looks down at David Jr. "That's not the way it should be

WRAC celebrates 20th anniversary

By Les May
The Daily Iowan

The UI Women's Resource and Action Center brought its foremothers back for a feminist reunion as it celebrated its 20th anniversary last weekend.

During the celebrations, many of those who had been active in WRAC in the past visited to participate in informal workshops on the issues of child care and women and violence, discussing the past and future of the women's movement.

"The idea of this celebration was to bring back women who were at the Women's Center 20 years ago," WRAC Director Papusa Molina said.

First organized primarily around the issues of providing care for the children of working mothers and combating sexism and violence, WRAC formed from a group called the Women's Liberation Movement. It asked the UI administration for a permanent space where women could meet to discuss and search for solutions to their shared problems.

"When the Women's Center formed, people didn't know what 'women's liberation' was. They were wondering, 'What do these women want?'" early WRAC activist Tracy Moore said.

Among the activities the WRAC of 20 years ago sponsored were 'consciousness raising' discussion groups. Talking honestly about their experiences, women began to see patterns of discrimination against them.

"This was the basis for the theory of the women's movement — the realization that there is prejudice against women and that there is a system of male privilege," Moore said.

Today, the center continues its tradition of support and has expanded to offer individual counseling and over 40 discussion groups concerned with "everything from women and welfare to women in computer science to lesbian and feminist issues," Molina said.

With a library of books on women's issues and a computerized information system, WRAC plays an educational role and also refers women to services in areas such as housing, health care and employment. Serving as an advocate for individuals who have experienced sexual or racial discrimination or harassment, WRAC seeks to promote social equality and fairness, according to the organization's formal statement of its functions.

Included in the anniversary program were an open house, a talent show, an award ceremony for a feminist scholar and a fund-raising reception for Dale McCormick, state representative from Maine and early member of WRAC.

Looking back on the formative days, or the 'herstory' of the center, McCormick remarked on the pressure that had been necessary to convince the UI administration and the Student Senate to give it a meeting house and funding. The first building WRAC was housed in had previously been married student housing. "And it was pretty dingy," McCormick said.

When WRAC formed, the UI was indifferent to women's needs, Moore said. Moore was dismayed that although progress has been made, funding and space for the care of children of mothers working or studying at the UI remain inadequate.

"Now, the university supposedly has a commitment to child care, but nothing is getting done," she said.

WRAC has the same goal as it did when it was established in the early 1970s: providing a place where women could find work, education, support and empowerment, Molina said. But, she added, the center has expanded its role to serve the changing needs of women.

"The doors are now more or less open, and women are coming through. Now the question is what do we do once we get through those doors," Molina said.

Budget cuts: how they're made; who's to blame?

By Leslie Yazel
The Daily Iowan

With talk of cuts in state appropriations for next fall and the possible "pay-back" of funds this spring permeating the air, many at the UI are asking how cuts are made and who makes these decisions.

The group responsible for ongoing planning and executing of the UI's goals is the Strategic Planning and Implementation Process Committee. This group of faculty, appointed by President Hunter Rawlings, makes recommendations for methods to implement the UI's Strategic Plan. The first Strategic Planning Committee was appointed by Rawlings in January of 1989.

"It's just the process of evaluating where you are, where you want to go and how to get there," member and Faculty Council President Steve Collins said, describing the strategic planning.

Among those who are aware of the plan, "some think that planning is inconsistent with a spontaneous, creative approach to life," Collins said. "They worry that a strategic plan will be a stone around our necks and prevent us from reacting to new opportunities."

Collins said the committee expects the strategic plan to be a "living, breathing document — not a detailed blueprint."

"We are not making decisions as to which activities should be funded or which should be eliminated," Collins said. The committee's final recommendations will be made to Rawlings in a few weeks, according to Collins.

In light of potential cuts to the university budget, Collins spoke of the possible loss of funds for student services.

"Historically, the first place to be cut is the non-academic areas — that doesn't mean that students will see no changes," he said.

The UI's Strategic Plan consists of three levels — the overall university plan "Achieving Distinction," 19 or 20 first level plans (which include every UI college, the vice president for research and the UI Hospitals and Clinics) and second level departmental plans.

"Our hope is that planning on campus will be a bottom up process," he said.

The committee recommendations will be widely distributed, and those from the university community will be able to comment and suggest revisions.

"We (faculty and staff) all have opinions, and part of what we are trying to accomplish is to bring together the vast array of resources and articulate a common goal," Collins said.

UI law student D.J. Miller dies; college holds memorial service

By Larry Burch
The Daily Iowan

A memorial service was held in Levitt Auditorium at the UI College of Law Sunday for Antonia "D.J." Miller who died last Thursday night in Montgomery, Ala., from a massive heart attack.

Miller was a third-year law student who was working as a legal extern at the Southern Poverty Law Center. He had been married just two months before his sudden death. About 200 friends of Miller's gathered to pay tribute and remember him. Among the speakers were Dean N. William Hines, Professors Joseph Knight and William Buss, Kevin Lindsey, editor-in-chief of The Iowa Law Review and a close friend of Miller's, presided over the ceremony while friends sang and read poetry and remembered their friendship with the deceased.

Hines said that Miller, who was from Winston-Salem, N.C., was the type of person who makes the law school's policy of recruiting a diverse student body successful. Hines will award Miller a law school diploma posthumously at the commencement exercises in May. Miller's widow will accept the award on his behalf.

IC family learns missing photojournalist son safe in Iraq

The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City family breathed a sigh of relief last week after learning their photojournalist son was safe in Iraq.

John Buchanan, vice president of the Iowa City brokerage firm Seabury and Smith, said he received a telephone call Saturday from his son Todd Buchanan, 29, who had been missing in Iraq since March 3.

The family had already received word of Todd's safety Friday, but Buchanan said the telephone call was the best confirmation they could get.

"We were thrilled to death because that was our first real, live word from him," he said.

Buchanan said Todd, a staff photographer for The Philadelphia Inquirer, was captured along with 31 other Western journalists on the outskirts of Basra last Sunday while trying to interview refugees fleeing the city. Basra has been a site of heavy conflict, as Iraqi army units loyal to President Saddam Hussein try to subdue rebel soldiers and their Shiite allies.

The press convoy was heading toward Basra expecting to be stopped at a checkpoint and turned back before reaching the city when troops heading into Basra surrounded them with AK-47s and ordered them out of their cars, Buchanan said.

From there they were taken into Basra and held at Basra University until Thursday when they were joined by eight more journalists and two U.S. servicemen and flown by helicopter into Baghdad.

Buchanan said he and his family were quite worried when they first

"We've had a whole week that was really tense. There have been a lot of ups and downs."

John Buchanan

learned that the group was missing, fearing the possibility that they might have been captured by a more extreme Shiite faction.

Although Buchanan said his son had not been treated severely by his captors, they did experience some frightening times in Baghdad. There the journalists were put into individual rooms where the Iraqis tried to get them to confess that they were military personnel instead of press representatives, he said.

The group was handed over to the International Red Cross in Baghdad on Friday and on Saturday were transported to Amman, Jordan.

Buchanan said he received the first indication that Todd might be safe earlier Friday when the mother of Time photographer Christopher Morris, believed to be with Todd, saw her son on television footage from Iraq.

She phoned Time magazine, which contacted the Inquirer, which in turn phoned Buchanan and told him to watch for the footage. Buchanan said he was not able to find Todd when he watched the broadcast, however.

Later in the day, Buchanan received word from a Red Cross official in Switzerland that Todd was safe.

"We got a call from a wonderful lady in Geneva who said, 'I have the pleasant duty to tell you that your son Todd is alive and well,'" he said.

The waiting and uncertainty was hard on the family, Buchanan said. "We've had a whole week that was really tense," he said. "There have been a lot of ups and downs."

The group lost much of their equipment in Iraq, Buchanan said, with an estimated one million dollars worth of the group's equipment confiscated by the Iraqis.

"He was fuming and furious because of them ripping off all the equipment," he said, adding that Todd walked out with only his rain poncho, a camera lens and an Iowa flag.

An Iowa City City High School graduate, Todd Buchanan was an intern at The Des Moines Register in 1981 and worked for The Cedar Rapids Gazette in 1987. He has also been a member of two Pulitzer Prize-winning photography teams, one for the coverage of the 1984 Summer Olympics in The Orange County Register and one for coverage of a church school bus crash in The Louisville Courier Journal.

"He has a big network of photojournalist family who has been calling and doing stories about him," Buchanan said.

Buchanan doubted that Todd, who he said is trying to get a flight back to Philadelphia, will let the experience stop him for long.

"Probably the two main reasons he's coming back to the U.S. are to renew his visa and get re-equipped," he said.

Iowa Senate to consider bill urging use of environmentally safe packaging

By Cynthia Taylor
The Daily Iowan

A bill encouraging the use of environmentally safe packaging has been introduced in the Iowa Senate this legislative session.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Kay Hedge (R-Dist. 32), would require industries to get authorization to use a special logo, identifying packaging that is not harmful to the environment.

However, the bill does not ban harmful packaging, according to Hedge.

"(The bill) is starting with a soft approach to the problem of packaging," Hedge said. "It has the potential of encouraging packagers to look at this and join the environmental movement."

If the bill passes, members of the food, restaurant and manufacturing industries — which Hedge said may be affected most — would be asked to sit on a seven-member board to review industry requests for use of the logo.

Other members of the proposed review board would include representatives from the Department of Natural Resources, the local government, an environmental group, and the waste disposal or recycling industry.

The Republican Party wanted the packaging issue to be a priority this year, Hedge said, therefore the bill was written by several members at a retreat last summer.

Hedge said he doesn't expect the bill to advance beyond committee discussions, but he does expect an identical bill — which is to be introduced in the House — to be more successful.

Hedge said he hopes one of the bills will pass and force industries to more closely examine their packaging practices.

Drake law school graduate donates millions to alma mater

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Drake University has received a $2 million gift to help build a new law library.

"I've reached a point in life where you start giving back," said Dwight Opperman, president of West Publishing Co. in St. Paul, Minn.

The gift is the second multimillion dollar gift to Drake this year. Earlier, Des Moines businessman William Knapp donated $3 million to help construct a new recreation and sports arena.

Opperman, a Perry native and 1951 Drake law school graduate, announced the gift at the school's annual Supreme Court banquet on Saturday.

"It was nice being rich," he joked. "My business is tied with legal education, so my interest in it is natural. It's where I received my legal training, and it got me my first job at West Publishing."

West Publishing is the nation's largest law publishing firm.

Albanian refugees return

By Piero Valsecchi
The Associated Press

BRINDISI, Italy — More than 1,500 Albanian refugees sailed back to their Communist homeland Sunday, many tired of fighting for food in this port city and sick after several days without shelter.

About 18,000 Albanians remained behind, hoping that Italy would not deport them as feared.

In the past 10 days, thousands of asylum-seekers have sailed from Albania to Italian ports. Italy seized the ships and dispatched its navy to block others in an effort to stem the exodus.

Club-wielding police on Sunday broke up several scuffles among groups of men crowded on the docks, where many of the refugees had slept in the rain the night before.

The disenchanted Albanians piled aboard the freighter Tirana and threatened a hunger strike unless authorities let them leave. Some of the refugees, who had cheered Italy on their arrival days earlier, now shouted "Long Live Albania" as they waited.

"We have been disappointed with what we have found here," said a man who described himself as a leader of those seeking to return. He refused to give his name or be photographed.

"We did not find freedom and a friendly welcome but the police on our arrival. We have been left without food for days," he said.

Many refugees had said they were disgruntled with Albania's Communist system and weren't putting much stock in Albania's promises of reform.

Albania was the last bastion of Stalinism in Europe after revolution swept what used to be the East bloc in late 1989.

Thousands call for Gorbachev, Communists to give up power

By Ann Imse
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Shouts of "Resign! Resign!" reverberated off the Kremlin walls on Sunday as hundreds of thousands of protesters demanded that President Mikhail Gorbachev and his fellow Communists relinquish power.

It was the biggest anti-government demonstration in Moscow at least since the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution. People waving flags and protest banners filled Manezh Square next to the Kremlin. Many shouted that they will not allow a dictatorship to be restored in the Soviet Union.

The crowd was estimated at 500,000 by journalists and one of the speakers. Pro-democracy activists had drawn 200,000-300,000 to Moscow rallies several times in the past year, but have never previously filled the huge square.

The rally was one of at least 16 held in cities across Russia Sunday to support Russian President Boris Yeltsin in his political fight with Gorbachev. Yeltsin has called for Gorbachev's resignation and on Saturday turned up the heat by "declaring war" on the Communist leadership.

Yeltsin wants Gorbachev replaced by the Federation Council, which includes the presidents of the 15 republics. At Sunday's protest in Moscow, several speakers called for an immediate election of a new president.

Elsewhere, 70,000 people braved freezing rain in Leningrad, 15,000 met in Yaroslavl and 2,500 in Vladivostok. Demonstrations also were reported in Sverdlovsk, Irkutsk, Kazan, Syktyvkar, Ulan-Ude, Petropavlovsk-Kamchatsky, Omsk, Khabarovsk, Novosibirsk, Smolensk, Novosibirsk and Krasnoyarsk.

Yeltsin did not appear at the rallies.

In both Moscow and Leningrad, organizers collected sacks of rubles to support the nearly 100,000 coal miners who are on strike to demand Gorbachev's resignation and higher pay. Speakers said miners in Kuznetsk and Vorkuta have dropped their economic demands to focus on the political ones.

Diplomacy

In Jerusalem Sunday, an Arab man who said he was sending a "message to Baker" fatally stabbed three Jewish women and wounded another. After the attack, angry Israelis shouted, "Baker go home!" and anti-Arab slogans.

In addition to promoting Arab-Israeli peace, Bush's four-point proposal calls for economic cooperation, a slowdown in the influx of weapons to the region and a permanent security force to protect Persian Gulf oil fields. Bush told Congress last week that any settlement should be based on an exchange of territory for peace.

"We support this initiative," Saudi Foreign Minister Prince Saud said after meeting with Baker. "We had a very positive discussion."

Prince Bandar, the Saudi ambassador to Washington, agreed.

"When you get these eight countries supporting U.S. policies... I think that is very, very important," he said.

"Our objective is to convene an international conference under U.N. auspices. There is a consensus on this."

Farouk Sharaa
Syrian Foreign Minister

Baker said he had explored with the foreign ministers steps they want to take toward peace with Israel but sought no specifics.

"We are not at the point yet, and I didn't ask them to commit themselves in the absence of knowing what might or might not be possible on the other side of the equation," Baker said.

There was a clear difference between the United States and the eight Arab nations on a Middle East peace conference.

"Our objective is to convene an international conference under U.N. auspices," Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa told reporters. "There is a consensus on this."

Shamir and his senior advisers object to such a conference because they fear unfavorable terms for a settlement might be imposed on Israel.

Even so, the gathering support for Bush's proposal that Israel give up territory poses a problem for Shamir, who wants to retain the West Bank and Gaza.

Prince Bandar shrugged off a question about whether Saudi Arabia was ready to recognize Israel.

IC Improvs risk shame,

The Daily Iowan

It takes a brave or foolish person to risk embarrassment on stage. The I.C. Improvs may be both — but the chance to show off, the opportunity to make the audience laugh or the danger of messing up is excitement enough to stifle any stage fright.

Iowa City's improvisational comedy troupe will perform tonight and March 25 at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., at 9 p.m. They will also appear at The Mill, 120 E. Burlington St., on March 27 at 8 p.m. Admission for all shows is two dollars.

The Improvs rely solely on the suggestions of the audience to develop their skits, incorporating these suggestions into different structures. In one of the structures, "Storyline," the nine troupe members stand in a row onstage as movie genres — "comedy," "horror," "western," etc. — are solicited from the audience. The "director" singles out individual improvs, asking them to develop the story. If the member can't think of anything, they must act out a death in the requested genre.

Of course, the resulting skits rely heavily on the quality of the audience's suggestions. Improvs member Mike Ruekberg says, "We're always looking for something highbrow, but the audience frequently ends up asking for something to do with ... poop." Also, cast member Dan Cahoy says that the troupe gets a lot of requests for skits featuring proctologists or gynecologists.

Not, however, that the Improvs dislike incorporating the unusual into their skits; if anything, it makes performing simpler. Improv John Luxton says, "A salesman in a store is a lot harder to work with than a mutant in Burma."

The members' attractions to improvisational acting are as varied as the troupe itself. "I like the danger," says Luxton. "You can fail at any moment. You don't have to worry about props or memorizing lines — it's completely up to you." Ruekberg adds, "I like making the audience laugh. But it's a challenge, and I don't like that."

Luxton says the key to being good at improvisation is finding the heart of a situation. "You have to cut to the center of everything, find what's intrinsically funny about it and then take it beyond the limits."

Indeed, taking things beyond the limit seems to be a hallmark of the troupe. Nothing is taboo. Cahoy says, "We'll go as low as we want." Clarifying that, Ruekberg adds, "Some things just aren't funny, like teenage suicide. Though, if we could get a laugh out of it, we'd do it."

Reed: on the road with 'Love Letters'

By Staci Sturrock
The Daily Iowan

About a week ago, Robert Reed found out he was taking a surprise trip to the Midwest. "Love Letters," the A.R. Gurney play in which Reed stars along with Betsy Palmer, has extended its run to include Iowa City, replacing "Rumors" on the Hancher schedule.

The added shows meant that instead of performing in six cities in eight days, Reed would be in seven cities in 10 days. He didn't find it too disconcerting, though. "We always knew there was a possibility of extending the run," Reed says. "So when they asked if we would (go to Iowa City), it wasn't much of a surprise. We're looking forward to being there."

"Love Letters" consists entirely of two characters reading the love letters they have written to each other throughout their lives. Reed says it is a surprisingly engaging evening of theater.

"I know if my wife came to me and said, 'I've got two tickets to go see people read love letters to each other,' I'd say, 'Thank you very much — I'll stay home and watch the ball game.' But Betsy and I are always amazed at how moved people are, especially older men," Reed says.

"The letters open up the imagination of the audience," he continues.

"Betsy (Palmer) and I are always amazed at how moved people are."

for his students to shed the association in the classroom?

"Well, I'm sure they come in with that reference," Reed says, "but after awhile it's no nonsense."

Like Reed, Palmer brings a wealth of experience to "Love Letters."

She has starred on Broadway and in films including "The Gray Line," "The Last Angry Man" and

"Mister Roberts." TV audiences know her for her current role as Aunt Virginia on "Knots Landing."

"Love Letters" will be performed at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 12, and Wednesday, March 13. Tickets are $23 and $25 ($18.40 and $20 for UI students, $11.50 and $12.50 for those 18 and under).

UI's Corning wins award

The Daily Iowan

Beth Corning, faculty member in the UI Dance Department, has received two honors that recognize her achievements as a choreographer. For the second consecutive year she has been awarded a Dance Magazine Foundation Award, and she has been invited to compete at the 1991 Tokyo International Choreography Competition this August.

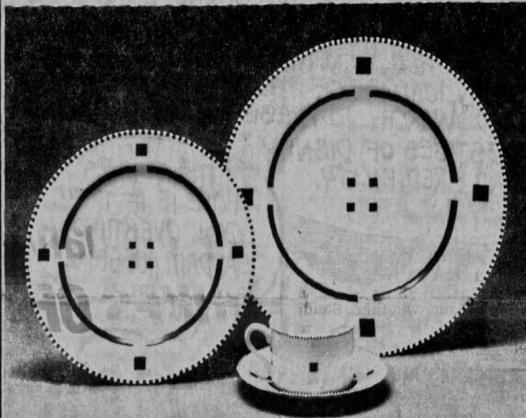

The Dance Magazine Foundation Award provides funds to support the premieres of new choreography. Corning is artistic director of Corning Dances & Company, an internationally respected company that Corning relocated to Iowa when she joined the UI Dance Department faculty last fall. In January, she and her company presented the world premiere of her "When Harry Left Sally" on the UI campus, and another new work is now in the early stages of development.

Corning was one of 23 choreographers selected from among 156 applicants for the Tokyo competition. Applications were received from choreographers in 35 nations.

The Tokyo International Choreography Competition was founded by the Min-On Concert Association to promote international peace through the arts and cultural exchanges. The association, which boasts 1.5 million members and presents more than 1,500 concerts each year, also sponsors international vocal, conducting and chamber music competitions.

THE IVORY TOWER

Real life

Last Thursday, a letter posted on the law school bulletin board asked all interested students to join three new organizations to fight liberalism, feminism and homosexuality at the law school. The letter ranted against "dykes and fags," affirmative action on behalf of "certain minority groups" and demanded that the student who heads the Organization of Women Law Students "listen when males are talking." The tone of the diatribe portrayed the writer as someone with all the charm and compassion of Adolf Hitler.

In about as much time as it takes to punch out 200 words on a word processor, a response was posted. A third-year law student wrote that while there might be a "kernel of truth" in what the fanatic had written, the letter was a vicious attack, and "we" would not tolerate it. He demanded that the fanatic be thrown out of law school. It was a bit like asking Hitler to be reasonable.

By early afternoon, crowds had gathered to read the two letters. In their condemnation of the fanatic's diatribe, they mostly took up the position of the second letter and demanded that the fanatic be kicked out of school. After all, he might be dangerous and attack someone, they reasoned.

It seems ironic that law students who spend hours reading and talking about First Amendment rights would so quickly decide to kick someone out of law school for voicing his opinion. Granted, the letter was ugly and vicious, but the First Amendment was meant to protect all speech — not just agreeable speech. Besides, what danger was caused by the letter? It certainly wasn't going to change anyone's mind.

The next day, news of the death of one of our fellow law students spread around the school. Antonia "D.J." Miller died Thursday night of a massive heart attack. He was only 24-years young, and he left behind a bride of two months. D.J. had been working at the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., when he died. He was just three months short of graduating law school and seemed to have a bright future waiting for him. Those of us who knew him and delighted in his bright and kind disposition will surely miss him.

The controversy surrounding the two letters has become unmentionably trivial at the law school. The ivory-tower debate has been interrupted by real life. Sometimes at school, especially at law school, students can get so carried away by the stress and sway of work and intellectual debate that words seem to take on a life of their own. A perspective on what really matters is lost. The next time you are blue in the face arguing a point, ask yourself if it really means that much. There will always be stupid people writing vicious things, but there are far too few people like Antonia "D.J." Miller.

PENTACREST PROTESTS

'Dueling bullhorns'

If there was a common thread that ran through the various pro- and anti-war activities on campus during the past two months, it was a lack of dialogue. People made their opinions known through vandalism and graffiti, shouting matches, sign waving, or displays of American flags and yellow ribbons. Absent from these activities was any sort of communication; they were monologues of anger, intolerance and contempt for opposing viewpoints. As a result, the various rallies rarely — if ever — served to inform the public or promote mutual understanding; they merely highlighted the differences in opinion without any attempt to recognize or understand other views.

The UI administration has handed down a policy that might affect the nature of future rallies on the Pentacrest. Battery-powered megaphones have been specifically banned from such events. The administration also reiterated a pre-existing policy that prohibits interference with approved Pentacrest events, and it urged compliance with these regulations to ensure safe and responsible rallies in the future. While UI officials seem to have good intentions hoping to put an end to "dueling bullhorns," it is unlikely to prevent future disruptive clashes of opinion on the Pentacrest.

In each of the recent demonstrations, there were voices of dissent, and this phenomenon will surely continue. The main shortcoming of the administration's regulations is that there is no reasonable way to enforce silence on counterprotesters. The prospect of campus security or local police officers hauling off screaming demonstrators is a chilling one indeed and should be rejected by people of all political leanings. The ambiguity of these rules renders them meaningless as a deterrent against counterprotesting, as it is unclear what sanctions violators would face.

Disruption is probably inevitable at any Pentacrest rally, particularly when emotional issues are the focus. The adversarial nature of the political groups on campus almost ensures that clashes of opinion will occur. Such rallies are prone to degeneration into circuses in which opposing sides try to "win" by drowning out voices of opposition. Attempts to regulate the conduct of protesters, while well-intentioned, have little hope of success. If past rallies are any indication of future ones, chances are slim of enforcing any strict rules of conduct upon the participants.

Success is mission of IC schools

The Iowa City Community School District needs your help. The district's much-publicized Strategic Planning process has been set in motion. The next step, the work of action teams, will focus on the strategies delineated by the Planning Committee. The action teams will outline the tasks required to implement the seven strategies. This is the "how-to" phase. As a member of the Strategic Planning Committee, I'd like to encourage interested members of the UI community to join an action team of their choosing.

Why join an action team? No doubt there is a deep commitment to education, to the community and to our children. An action team is not the chilly domain of experts, not the realm of power and authority. An action team is a gathering of informed, committed people with a common purpose who are willing to contribute their time and ideas to a demanding, exciting process. Expertise is welcome, but not required.

There is one word that will be both championed and feared: "change." Why? When? Why not? How much? For whom? Change is something I can champion because learning is change: Students are changed; teachers are changed; administrators are changed; parents are changed; the community is changed. Education must be more than an endurance test, more than a "bell-to-bell, cell-to-cell" misadventure, more than a system bound by time rather than individual needs. Participation by all segments of the community is essential to the success of this school district's mission. I am certain that every action team member will find that participation and cooperation are great teachers.

Iowa City's schools work. There is abundant evidence of exceptional effort and remarkable achievement. But as a part of a global community, a world that grows more demanding each day, the school's will need to get better, to adjust, to grow, to change. A child's education will need to be the beginning of a stimulating K-through-forever process in which she becomes an active, valued asset. Teachers will need to be inventive, professional, compassionate people of ideas and active participants in the decision-making process of the district. The administration must make hard decisions for good reasons, decisions based on goodwill, reliable information and honest communication. The community will need to take a giant step closer to our schools, and become partners and planners with the district. House by house, business by business, agency by agency, Iowa City expects a lot from its schools. In return, the school district and every student in it expects support, encouragement and cooperation. Education is not a spectator sport.

This is a rare opportunity. Few school districts have the foresight to commit to a process such as this. Joining an action team is an acknowledgment of the value and wisdom of collaborative planning, an affirmation of a clearly stated mission. Action team applications are available at all schools, the district office and the public library. Why not lend a hand?

lot of skepticism about education in general and this process in particular. It took three days in February, sequestered in a room with 20 other points of view, for my skepticism to wear off. The sense of mission generated in that room will give a focus to the school district that it has never had. This is an open invitation to be a part of a process that will make a difference in this community — in every business, in every classroom, in every home. In this case action means action.

My guess is that people will join action teams for a variety of reasons. Some will join in an effort to right some wrong, to explore a shortcoming or need. Some will join because they see excellence in our school district and want to hold the district to that promise. Some will join out of curiosity, some out of a need to share some expertise. The only requirement is

Let's face it: They don't have a chance

All eyes are on the shattered, smoldering infrastructure, the twisted pile of blasted hopes. Iraq? No, the Democratic Party. Last Aug. 1, which now seems light-years away, Bush was stuck to the tar baby of the budget negotiations. He had jettisoned the one principle that gave him a clearly defined political profile — "no new taxes." Then came Aug. 2 and the Great Clarifier, Saddam Hussein. Suddenly Bush possessed what he had lacked — a clear purpose and convincing passion.

The almost party-line vote on authorizing the use of force has done to the Democratic Party what it can least afford: Attention is now focused on its national security record. And that vote has done for the Republican Party, especially as led by George Bush, what it most needs for its most cherished goal. That goal is not to win the presidency (Republicans assume that) but to win elsewhere, particularly in congressional races. For that it needs a strong single theme of the sort an ideological leader like Ronald Reagan provided. The war may have provided it.

The Democratic vote against force was not a defining moment but a reinforcing moment for the party, deepening the already deep public perception of the party as semi-pacifist. That perception was fixed 19 helicopters across the desert." Who should march into the teeth of such withering fire? Only a Democrat who voted to support the use of force.

For some Democrats — the names of Tennessee Sen. Al Gore, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton and Oklahoma Rep. Dave McCurdy come to mind — 1992 could be a win-win situation. They might win. Stranger things have happened. Not often, but if the banking crisis aborts the recovery, this Era of Good Feelings will be brief.

The Democratic vote against force was not a defining moment but a reinforcing moment for the party, deepening the already deep public perception of the party as semi-pacifist. That perception was fixed eight years ago by the nomination of George McGovern.

Besides, if a young Democrat gets blown away by Bush, so what? He is not expected to win. And by going around the track he will hone his skills, sharpen his message and make friends for the next time. It took George Bush two times around the track to win and Ronald Reagan two and a half times (counting his 1968 effort).

History does not encourage anyone now serving in Congress or a statehouse. Before Dukakis did it, Nelson Rockefeller was the last sitting governor to mount even a semi-serious campaign for president. Rockefeller did not even get nominated. The most recent sitting member of Congress to receive his party's nomination was McGovern in 1972. Before him there was Goldwater in 1964. The last time a sitting member of Congress was elected was Kennedy eight elections ago. Before that? Harding in 1920 and Garfield in 1880.

But the nation needs a serious Democratic candidacy. In 1984 Reagan coasted to a 49-state sweep while saying, "It is morning in America." In 1988 flags and furloughs were sufficient to reduce the election to a referendum on the political culture of Dukakis' Massachusetts Democratic Party. If the Democratic challenge in 1992 is perfunctory and without relevance to the future — if it is too weak to influence the content of the Bush campaign — we will have a third consecutive campaign without a clear argument.

That would mean that by 1996 the country would have gone 16 years — almost a generation — without the clarifying conversation of a serious political contest. If that happens, the tone of American politics will join the Democratic Party as a war casualty.

years ago by the nomination of George McGovern. To many Americans, the January vote against force was part of a Democratic pattern extending from McGovern's campaign promise to slash the defense budget by 30 percent to Carter's astonishment at the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, to Mondale's denunciation of the liberation of Grenada, to Dukakis' attempt to expunge his party's record — and his own — by riding in a tank.

Republicans have been dealt a strong hand, but they could play their cards too crudely. It is one thing to say that the Democratic Party is unrealistic; it is another to say it is unpatriotic. So far, Republican rhetoric is tough but acceptable.

Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, says, "Democrats voted to position themselves to the left of the United Nations." Newt Gingrich of Georgia, House Republican whip, who is urging local Republican organizations to recruit Desert Storm veterans to run against Democratic incumbents, says: One party just won a war, and as for the other party, "the last time it was in power it couldn't get eight

African-American poetry collected for anthology

By Leslie Davis
The Daily Iowan

An African-American woman from Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass., hopes to find African-American students eager to have their poetry published.

Natasha Tarpley is collecting poetry from black college students nationwide to put into an anthology called "Raising up the New Bones."

Tarpley said the purpose of the anthology is "to provide a space — a forum in which black students can express their views on how it is to live in the world. It will serve, as well, to create a community and establish links between students of color."

She sent letters to students, professors and newspapers throughout the country in an effort to get a wide variety of perspectives from different schools, social classes and backgrounds.

The Chicago native said she was motivated to start the anthology of black poetry after participating in a Harvard poetry workshop last semester and discovering that there were no African-American poets included on the reading list. She said she is disturbed by the lack of role models and support networks available for young writers.

To establish a sort of pen pal system where writers can become better acquainted, and receive feedback and helpful hints from one another, a list of addresses will be circulated among those published in the anthology.

In addition to serving as a network, Tarpley hopes the anthology will "enhance society's understanding of black students' perception of self, their history and their future" in a way that counteracts the negative messages portrayed in the media.

Although the anthology is meant to raise issues and stir social consciousness, she hopes writers won't feel restricted to those boundaries.

"I don't want people to feel they have to couch their stuff with issues. I think as black people, we have a variety of things that are important to us, and I want to see all of it," Tarpley said.

Some of the initial funding was provided by Harvard and surrounding arts councils, but Tarpley plans to apply for state grants to aid with the actual cost of publishing.

She has received about 40 submissions thus far and hopes for many more.

Students can send typed manuscripts to: "Raising up the New Bones," c/o Natasha Tarpley, Claverly 41, Harvard College, Cambridge, Mass., 02138.

'Teach-in' links domestic, gulf war issues

By Heidi Pederson
The Daily Iowan

Asserting that Middle East problems did not end when Bush declared victory in the gulf war, Operation U.S. Out held a "teach-in" in the Wheelroom of the Union Friday to refocus attention on those problems.

"The factors that led to U.S. intervention are still present and will lead to a situation like this again," Tom Hatch, a member of the organization, said. "A lot of people may think the war is over, but other problems still exist."

The purpose of the teach-in, Hatch said, was to make people aware of the linkage between war and domestic problems, including the ones the war would cause, such as economic hardship.

"Somebody's got to pay for this (war)," he explained.

Issues brought up at the forum, attended by approximately 40 people, included racism, both in the U.S. and in the military, the Palestinian problem, and oil companies profiting from the Middle East situation.

Speaker Saed Jamal, a UI Palestinian student, called Operation Desert Storm a 'racist' war. He said U.S. intervention in the Middle East was not based on concern for the people there, as some have claimed.

"The problem goes far back," he said. "The (U.S.) government is not interested in human rights. Its interest is based on oil and military products and profits."

James Lee, leader of the Black Student Union, said the U.S. holds a universal disrespect for alternative cultures outside the Western idea.

"There is a desire (by the U.S.) for worldwide hegemony," he said. "We want to set up democracies, because what we set up we can control."

Lee said that democracy was not economically viable for all countries, especially the Third World countries.

"The right to vote doesn't put food on your dinner table," he said.

The speakers concluded that forums such as the one held Friday served as more than just a rally to support one side of the issue.

"We can educate each other when we hear the different opinions and can discuss them," Lee said.

Audience member Julie Olson, a UI junior, agreed.

"I think these forums are a productive way of helping people vent their feelings (about the situation)," Olson said.

However, one UI senior sitting in the Wheelroom during the discussion felt differently.

"I think these people are dramatizing things more than they need to," she said. "There was a situation in the Middle East, and Bush had to take action. It went beyond just oil."

at all, but it's the way it is in this town and so we have to accept it and do the very best we can."

Susan wants to become a nurse. She's from Connecticut, and she'd like to return to begin a one-year training program. But she needs to save enough money before that's possible. "I do like Iowa City, but I feel it's a college town. It's mostly for the students. I don't think Iowa City is a place for a family to grow up and have kids."

Pagliai says drugs and alcohol are reasons why people end up homeless and in need of transitional housing. She also cites the early 1970s trend of deinstitutionalizing mental patients. Many people who need mental help wind up on the streets, she says. Homelessness can also be generational — homeless parents pass their lifestyle to their children, while other people, she says, just have a string of bad luck.

Maher says domestic violence explains many cases. People often leave home because of an intolerable situation. Fuel costs for utilities are another cause, he says. "They get behind in their bills and their pipes freeze, and their landlords kick them out." He also blames the minimum wage facing people with low job skills. "You can't feed a family on that," he said. Finally, he blames high housing costs in Iowa City and surrounding communities.

The Findleys are aware of high housing costs, but for now they have their house, consisting of a small living room with fireplace, kitchen and bedroom which they share with David Jr. Susan shudders when she remembers the nights they spent in the city shelters. "It was real crowded. You had no privacy or anything."

David chimes in, "Our living conditions now are great. There's privacy, and we can do what we want here. We still gotta follow rules and follow a budget, but it's quiet." A series of gurgles and happy squeals from his son distracts him, and he smiles at the baby who clutches his finger.

Susan gently takes the baby from David to put him down for a nap. She stands, cradling the child in her arms and humming softly to him. David follows them into the bedroom and in a fake Southern accent announces, "Time for your nap, boy!" Susan puts the baby in his crib and covers him with a small pink blanket. David winds up the music box attached to the railing. It begins playing, "Rock A Bye Baby" and David Jr. coos in response. Susan rubs his stomach momentarily and smiles at her husband. Together they leave the room and turn out the light.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This story was written in December. Since then, David and Susan Findley have moved back to Connecticut, according to Rev. Rasmus.

Homeless

homeless."

Jim said he was not allowed to check out library books once because the address of his ID was that of the Emergency Housing Project, a local shelter for people who need a place to sleep or eat. "I felt really discriminated against," he said.

After that happened, however, Jim found out that he could check books out if he paid a deposit, using the Housing Project as his address.

Jim said he's also found that many employers seem reluctant to hire someone without a permanent address.

Mary Larew, director of the Housing Project, said she's heard the same story from many people who have stayed at the house.

"People will answer an ad in the paper, give (employers) the EHP phone number as their number and never get a call back," she said. "Or they will find out the person is homeless and ask them lots of things that go beyond the depth of normal questions; you'd ask a potential employee."

"I've heard people complaining about that ever since I've been here," she added. "I do have the feeling that this is discrimination against people. It's not just in looking for jobs but for things like applying for housing. Lots of places do not accept rent vouchers."

A rent voucher is a check issued by the federal government for financial assistance to people with low incomes.

The biggest barrier homeless people face when trying to find housing, Larew said, is not having enough money to pay a large deposit and rent. Urban renewal in the late 1970s, which destroyed a lot of inexpensive housing locally, and the steady influx of college students competing for housing tend to keep rent prices too high for those without much money, she said.

Jim says his inability to find an affordable place to live is frustrating.

"If I could find a place to live for $100 a month and save some money, then I wouldn't lose a job (looking for a place to stay)," said Jim. "Having a place to stay should be a right and not a privilege."

Thompson blames the situation on cuts to the federal budget for housing assistance, citing a drop from $27 billion to $8 billion since 1981.

In addition, Thompson said the responsibility for the homeless problem is shifting to the local government level, while funding is not.

"We see these people," Thompson said. "We know the problem is here, but we can't get the money. It's a public policy problem, and I don't see it going away in the near future."

Thompson added that it's particularly difficult for a single person to receive housing aid. Currently, a person must be elderly, pregnant, disabled or have a child in order to qualify for assisted housing.

These requirements create a subculture of poverty, she said, because there are people who qualify for public assistance on one level, and then there are people who do not even qualify for that.

Concerns about a low-income housing shortage spurred the Iowa City City Council last year to form an Affordable Housing Task Force. Its purpose is to investigate strategies to alleviate housing shortages in Iowa City.

City Housing Administrator Ron Henderson said dealing with funding for single people is not the top priority of the task force, but that strategies to deal with the matter are being seriously considered within the framework of the whole problem.

James said he is displeased with the housing shortage.

"If the attitude was right, there'd be more places to stay than people on the street," he says. "This is a very egocentric society."

Having been without a permanent home for several years now, Jim says he has gained a better perspective on many things and almost believes that everyone should be homeless for a time.

"Being homeless makes you see truths," he said. "It makes you appreciate things that other people take for granted."

James is now staying at the Emergency Housing Project, which is located at 331 N. Gilbert St.

Larew said EHP, which relies a great deal on food and financial donations, is low on money right now.

Iowa's Stephanie Schueler did.

After missing the front end of one-and-one free throw opportunity that would have won the game in regulation, Schueler made three of four foul shots in the final minute of overtime to lead the Iowa women's basketball team's 85-76 victory over Wisconsin Saturday.

"I was glad I was able to make the technical free throws in overtime," Schueler said. "It gave me the chance to shine for myself."

The victory, Iowa's 20th in the season, allowed the Hawkeyes to pull into a second-place tie with Michigan State in the final Big Ten standings.

ment's No. 1 seed in the Midwest Region. The Hawkeyes, seeded seventh in the Midwest, will face 10th-seeded East Tennessee State Thursday night in Minneapolis, Minn.

The win was Iowa's first in Carver-Hawkeye Arena in its last four tries and came just hours before the NCAA announced the 64-team field that will have a shot at a national title.

Iowa upped its record to 20-10 overall and sealed a return to the tournament after a year away by beating their second top five opponent in its last five games. The Hawkeyes beat No. 4 Indiana 80-79 in overtime Feb. 21 in Bloomington, Ind.

Iowa, which led the entire game, pulled its Big Ten record to .500 at 9-9 to finish the season tied for fifth place with Purdue, which also made the tournament.

Also making the tournament for the Big Ten were Indiana and Michigan State.

Even before the seedings were announced, Iowa coach Tom Davis and his team were talking like they had made the tournament with their 20th win of the season.

"I'm pleased that we have a chance to go on to the (NCAA) tournament," Davis said in his postgame press conference. "It certainly takes a lot of pressure off watching the pairings at 5:30 (p.m. Sunday), I would expect."

"It's now more, 'Where are we going?' rather than, 'Are we going?'"

"It's definitely a big a big motivator going into the tournament because we just beat a top five team," junior swingman James Moses said. "It's no longer a matter of being there; it's a matter of how far we'll go."

Iowa held Ohio State to just one basket in the final 2:08 of the game as guards Troy Skinner and Kevin Smith and center Acie Earl combined on six free throws to give Iowa a 77-67 lead with 0:18 remaining.

Ohio State still gets No. 1 seed

By Doug Tucker
The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Top-ranked UNLV, given a chance to defend its championship by an historic reversal by the NCAA, was made the No. 1 seed in the West Regional on Sunday in an NCAA tournament dominated by Eastern teams.

Twelve conferences got more than one bid from the nine-man committee, topped by a record-tying seven schools from the Big East, six from the Atlantic Coast Conference and five from the Big Ten and Southeastern conferences.

UNLV, on a 41-game winning streak, was joined as top seeds by Ohio State, ranked No. 2 in the nation, which was placed in the Midwest; No. 5 Arkansas in the Southeast; and No. 7 North Carolina in the East.

The Runnin' Rebels will play Big Sky champion Montana in Tucson, Ariz., on Friday. They then could face Georgetown, making its 13th straight NCAA appearance, in the next round if the Hoyas survive their first-round meeting with Vanderbilt.

UNLV had been banned from postseason play this season before the NCAA altered its decision and allowed the Rebels to play and sit out the 1992 postseason. That ban stemmed from a 1978 decision that Tarkanian and the school challenged in the courts.

Jim Delany, chairman of the selection committee, said the 64-man team field reflects greater competitiveness in college basketball.

Beat Wisconsin for 20th on way to tournament

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Few college seniors ever get one chance to win their final home game.

Iowa's Stephanie Schueler got two.

After missing the front end of a one-and-one free throw opportunity that would have won the game in regulation, Schueler hit three of four foul shots in the final minute of overtime to ice the Iowa women's basketball team's 85-76 victory over Wisconsin Saturday.

"I was glad I was able to shoot the technical free throws in the overtime," Schueler said. "It gave me the chance to redeem myself."

The victory, Iowa's 20th of the season, allowed the Hawkeyes to pull into a second-place tie with Michigan State in the final Big Ten standings.

Iowa is 20-8 overall and 13-5 in the Big Ten. Wisconsin fell to 13-15 and 7-11 with its ninth straight league road loss.

"Aside from the free throws, I thought we played a better game," Iowa coach C. Vivian Stringer said. "They were shooting the 3-pointers, but they weren't really executing their offense."

The Hawkeyes trailed only twice in 40 minutes of regulation, but Wisconsin never allowed the Hawkeyes to build a double-figure lead.

Wisconsin used 3-point shooting to continually slice six to nine-point Iowa leads. The Badgers hit 10 of 24 from 3-point range in the game.

Junior guard Robin Threatt hit her first of three 3-pointers to cut a 19-13 Iowa lead down to three midway through the first half, and freshman Dolly Rademaker's 20-footer cut it to 22-19 two minutes later.

Stringer gets her wish: Hawks play Wednesday

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's basketball coach C. Vivian Stringer got her wish Sunday.

No, it wasn't just a bid to the NCAA Tournament that Stringer was hoping for. She had a feeling her 24th-ranked Hawkeyes would be included in the 48-team field for the sixth straight year.

What Stringer wanted was to play a first-round game on Wednesday, rather than on Saturday. The top four seeds in each region receive first-round byes and don't play until next weekend.

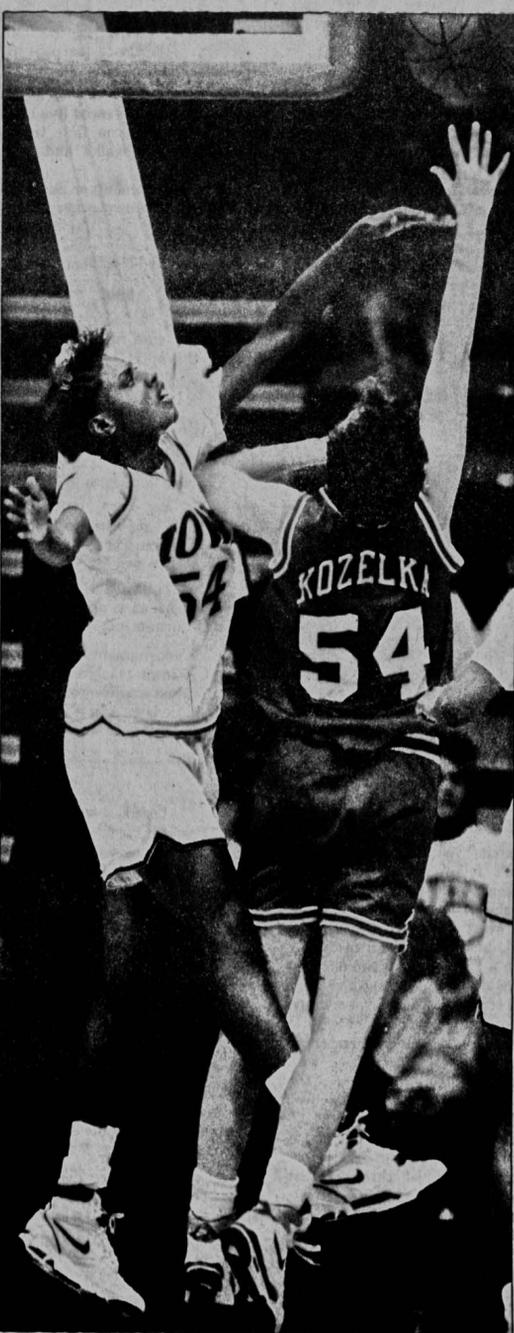

But Stringer wants her young squad to get back in action — the sooner, the better.

"I'm happy that we're playing right away," Stringer said. "I don't want (the players) to have time to think about it."

The Hawkeyes, seeded sixth in the West regional, will face 11th-seeded Montana in a first-round game in Missoula, Mont., Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.

The Lady Griz, 24-3 overall, were the champions of the Big Sky conference with a 16-0 record. Iowa, 20-8 overall, finished in a

Reds still waiting on missing All-Star

By Jim Donaghy
The Associated Press

The Cincinnati Reds are looking for a repeat of their world championship and their All-Star right-hander.

Jack Armstrong continued his walkout on Sunday in a salary dispute with the Reds as his fines mounted to $2,000.

Armstrong walked out of camp last Tuesday when his contract was renewed for $215,000. He's demanding $315,000.

Armstrong met with Reds owner Marge Schott on Saturday, but wasn't satisfied by the results. He said afterwards that his walkout might be a long one.

"I'm saying, you don't have to pay me and I don't have to play," Armstrong said he told Schott. "My team will go on without me, and I'd rather go work on a tuna boat if I were treated fairly there."

His teammates enjoyed the tuna boat remark. On Sunday, Armstrong's cubicle was decked with a large map that said, "Tuna Tracker," a pair of rubber boots, a fishing pole with a cardboard tuna attached, and a sign that said, "Wanted: Tuna Boat Captain. Experience: Baseball Pitcher."

Armstrong is being fined $500 a day from the team's mandatory reporting date of last Thursday.

"Jack's going to have to catch about a 500-pound tuna to pay the fines," manager Lou Piniella said.

Spring Training

Armstrong made $107,000 last year, when he was 12-9 with a 3.42 earned run average and started the All-Star game for the National League. He struggled in the second half, however, and finished 12-9 with a 3.42 ERA.

Meanwhile, John Smoltz reported back to Atlanta's camp in West Palm Beach, Fla., on Sunday after a two-day absence but didn't dress for the game.

The 23-year-old right-hander, who left camp Friday when the Braves renewed his contract for $360,000 after he asked for $450,000, will start Monday against the Yankees and pitch two innings.

Hall of Famer Jim Palmer, 45, is also scheduled to make his long-awaited return against major-league batters on Monday when Baltimore plays Boston at Bradenton, Fla. He has been bothered by a sore right Achilles tendon, but says he will start.

Mike Flanagan, also trying to make a comeback with Baltimore, pitched three scoreless innings Sunday as the Orioles beat the New York Yankees 6-3.

Flanagan, 39, pitched with the Orioles from 1975-1987 and has a career record of 165-136. The left-hander gave up one hit in relief of starter Mike Mussina.

NIT announces pairings

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Eight of the 12 20-game winners ignored by the NCAA Selection Committee were among the 32 teams chosen Sunday night for the 54th annual National Invitation Tournament.

Among the interesting first-round matchups in the nation's oldest postseason basketball tournament are an all-Oklahoma affair when Tulsa goes to Oklahoma; a double 20-winner matchup with Fairleigh Dickinson at Siena; and future Great Midwest conference mates hooking up with Alabama-Birmingham at Memphis State.

The other first-round pairings are James Madison at Providence; Ball State at Cincinnati; Fordham at South Florida; Furman at West Virginia; La Salle at Massachusetts; Southern Illinois at Boise State; Coppin State at Southwest Missouri State; Rice at Arkansas State; Bowling Green at Wisconsin; Houston at Stanford; Butler at Wyoming; George Washington at South Carolina and Michigan at Colorado.

The second and third rounds will be played at campus sites and the semifinals and finals will be held at Madison Square Garden on March 25 and 27.

First-round action begins Thursday and Friday at sites around the country. Second-round winners advance to the regionals the following weekend, with the four regional winners meeting at the Final Four from March 30-April 1 at Indianapolis.

Ohio State, which retained the top seed in the Midwest despite losing its last two games, will play Towson State at Dayton, Ohio; North Carolina faces Northeastern at Syracuse, N.Y.; and Arkansas plays Georgia State in Atlanta in first round games.

The Buckeyes then had a chance to send Iowa to the locker room with its smallest lead of the half when Perry Carter hit a transition lay-up with 0:18 left in the half to cut the lead to five, 44-39. But Iowa played for the last shot and Smith hit a 3-pointer with 0:05 left to give Iowa a 47-39 halftime lead.

Iowa out-rebounded Ohio State 41-30, led by Earl and Chris Street with eight each and followed by Davis' six. Carter picked up a team-high six for the Buckeyes.

"They key to the game was that Iowa really hit the boards well," said Buckeye coach Randy Ayers. "They made the big plays and nine times out of ten it was getting a key rebound."

The Hawkeyes, who had shown a tendency to fold in the second half earlier in the season, held off several Ohio State rallies, never letting the Buckeyes get closer than four points as they played what Moses called the team's best game of the season.

"They didn't have a lead the whole game," he said. "It's definitely our best game."

Arkansas and Kentucky to the tournament.

Southern Cal will be the third school coach George Raveling has taken to the tournament — he also led Washington State and Iowa to NCAA bids.

Each of the regionals has 16 seeds, with the top seed meeting the No. 16 seed, No. 2 facing No. 15 and so on.

Among the teams receiving at-large bids were Duke, last year's national runner-up, Syracuse, Indiana and UCLA.

Here are the first-round pairings:
In the West Regional, it's UNLV vs. Montana, Georgetown vs. Vanderbilt, Michigan State vs. Wisconsin-Green Bay, Utah vs. South Alabama, New Mexico State vs. Creighton, Seton Hall vs. Pepperdine, Virginia vs. Brigham Young and Arizona vs. St. Francis, Pa.

In the Midwest, it's Ohio State vs. Towson State, Georgia Tech vs. DePaul, Texas vs. St. Peter's, St. John's vs. Northern Illinois, LSU vs. Connecticut, Nebraska vs. Xavier of Ohio, Iowa vs. East Tennessee State and Duke vs. Northeast Louisiana.

In the East, the matchups are North Carolina vs. Northeastern, Princeton vs. Villanova, Mississippi State vs. Eastern Michigan, UCLA vs. Penn State, North Carolina State vs. Southern Mississippi, Oklahoma State vs. New Mexico, Purdue vs. Temple and Syracuse vs. Richmond.

In the Southeast, it's Arkansas vs. Georgia State, Arizona State vs. Rutgers, Wake Forest vs. Louisiana Tech, Alabama vs. Murray State, Pittsburgh vs. Georgia, Kansas vs. New Orleans, Florida State vs. South Carolina and Indiana vs. Coastal Carolina.

homer off Anthony Young.

"I was trying to keep him in the ballpark, that's all," Gooden said of his confrontation with Strawberry. "During the season, it would be great. Now, it's not a big deal. I might walk him in that situation during the season. That was a mid-season curveball right there. I'd take that one into the season."

"Spring training, it's nothing. I'll probably tease him about that, no doubt about it. During the season, he'll get me at some points."

Strawberry, who signed a five-year, $20.25 million contract with the Dodgers during the off-season after playing eight years with the Mets, said he'd faced his former teammate just once before — in an intra-squad game in 1984.

"Not to take anything away from (Boston's) Roger Clemens, but Doc (Gooden) is a much better pitcher, he's the best pitcher in baseball," Strawberry said. "When people realize how good he is, maybe he'll be appreciated."

Fernando Valenzuela, 13-13 with a 4.59 earned run average last season and perhaps fighting for a job with the Dodgers, allowed five hits and two runs in the first three innings with no walks and two strikeouts.

In other developments on Sunday:
■ Danny Darwin gave up one run on a leadoff homer by Tony Phillips in three innings in his Boston debut as the Red Sox combined 12 hits, 11 walks and four Detroit errors for a 13-7 victory.
■ San Diego's Tony Gwynn is 7-for-7 with four runs scored and six RBIs this spring.

teams with a large fan following such as Iowa are kept close to home so that the fans can travel, Stringer said.

"I don't understand why Iowa was sent to the West," Stringer said. "We thought we might go to Notre Dame, Oklahoma or Oklahoma State. But we want to approach it in a very positive way."

Normally, the Hawkeyes would host a first-round game because they are the higher seed, but Carver-Hawkeye Arena is unavailable Wednesday because of the NCAA Wrestling Tournament.

Stringer said that playing in the postseason tournament will be a good experience for her young team, but the Iowa coach said she wants to get more out of the tournament than just experience.

"I want to go to the dance," Stringer said Saturday. "And if I go to the dance, I want to dance a little bit."

nervous," Schueler said. "I just didn't follow through. I didn't concentrate as much as I could."

Schueler hit a 16-footer early in the overtime period for a 74-72 lead, but Lisa Lawrence tied it with a driving layup two minutes later after Iowa missed the front end of three straight one-and-one opportunities.

Tate hit two outside jumpers to give Iowa a four-point lead with 1:27 left but Clark trimmed the lead to two when she hit two free throws.

Foster's short bank shot gave the Hawkeyes an 80-76 lead before Schueler canned three of four free throws to seal the victory. The senior was awarded two shots after being fouled in a scramble for a loose ball and two more when Wisconsin coach Mary Murphy was slapped with a technical foul for arguing the call.

Freshman Virgie Dillingham hit two free throws with 10 seconds left to account for the final margin.

Foster pulled down 12 rebounds and led all scorers with 23 points. Dillingham grabbed 10 rebounds, a season- and career-high.

Schueler and Tate chipped in with 22 points apiece. That total gave Tate a career-high for the second night in a row.

"They've been seen so much of Stephanie and they're doubling down on Toni," Stringer said. "They've been leaving (Tate) wide open."

Thraatt led the Badgers with 17 points. Junior center Michele Kozelka added 16 points and 10 rebounds.

Iowa's Trisha Waugh didn't play after reinjuring a separated shoulder in Thursday's victory over Northwestern. She is expected to play in the NCAA tournament.

The Hawkeyes will open the NCAA women's basketball tournament this Wednesday in Missoula, Mont., against Montana. The Lady Griz were 24-3 overall and won the Big Sky conference with a 16-0 mark.

Iowa roll to 8-1 on homestar

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan
The Iowa men's tennis team its spring record to 8-weekend, edging Nebraska 8-1 day night and blanking Georgia Tech 8-0 Sunday at the Adolphus 9-0 Sunday at the Recreation Building.

The match against Nebraska, which the Hawkeyes won 8-1, was a surprise. "The match against Nebraska was unbelievable," Coach Houghton said. "It was important for us to play a close match that at this stage of the season, particularly one played so well. Against Nebraska, the Hawkeyes posted wins in three of six matches and two of three to seal the victory."

Following a tough three-setter over nationally-ranked Dionne of Drake Thursday, top seed Klas Bergstrom suffered a 6-3, 6-3 straight-set loss Friday to another top-rated player, Coker Mattias Mueller, ranked No. 1 in the nation. The defeat of Bergstrom's season record at No. 2 singles, senior Adler rebounded from a loss Friday evening to defeat Nebraska second seed Steve Bartram in straight sets, 6-3, 7-6.

"It's a very good feeling to this," said Adler, now 7-2 season. "It was very hard to lose Thursday and I'm glad that I bounced back so many days with a chest cold. I seeded senior Paul Buckingherfer his second loss of the season, 6-7, 6-2, 1-6 to Nebraska's Randolph. In the second set, hehingham raced to a 5-2 lead, ending Randolph with a mix of one-handed slices and two-handed backhands before succumbing to the third set.

Senior Tommy Heiting earned the first set of his match with Falkand 6-1 at No. 4 single, dropping the second set 1-6 using a variety of groundstrokes and volleys, Heiting redid his former rhythm, taking the third set 6-2 for the win.

"I was very happy with the way I played," said Heiting, now 7-1.

The Iowa softball team did what Coach Gayle Blevins expected over the weekend — and a lot more.

According to Blevins, the team's goals in the South Atlantic Classic were to play consistently, win their pool and advance to the championship game.

But the Iowa team didn't stop just reaching the title game. Iowa capped off an undefeated weekend with a 6-1 shutout of South Carolina in the title game. The South Florida Class of 1991 Hawkeyes rolled to an 8-0 record in the tournament in Tampa, Fla.

"To be undefeated, that's a great accomplishment," Blevins said. "We played some real good clubs down here."

The Lady Redbirds had given trouble in both the fall and spring seasons last year, but they were no obstacle Friday. Iowa opened the tournament with a 17-0 victory over Illinois State, which Blevins expected to be the team's toughest challenge. Iowa won 10-0.

"I was surprised," Blevins said. "I fully expected Illinois State to be a really tough team. I think it's atypical for them."

The Hawkeyes then beat Tennessee in five innings, in which they shortened by the 10-run Junior Amy Hartsock to one-hitter and Iowa banged out a 10-0 victory.

"The Hawkeyes' closest rival play was their final game. Iowa beat Ball State 12-0 in five innings, but had to overcome eight illegal pitches by junior McFarland.

The Iowa men's tennis team upped its spring record to 8-1 this weekend, edging Nebraska 5-4 Friday night and blanking Gustavus Adolphus 9-0 Sunday at the Iowa Recreation Building.

"The match against Nebraska was unbelievable," Coach Steve Houghton said. "It was important for us to play a close match like that at this stage of the season, particularly one played so well."

Against Nebraska, the Hawkeyes posted wins in three of six singles matches and two of three in doubles to seal the victory.

Following a tough three-set victory over nationally-ranked Martin Dienne of Drake Thursday, Iowa's top seed Klas Bergstrom suffered a 6-3, 6-3 straight-set loss Friday to another top-rated player, Cornhusker Mattias Mueller, ranked 26th in the nation. The defeat dropped Bergstrom's season record to 6-2.

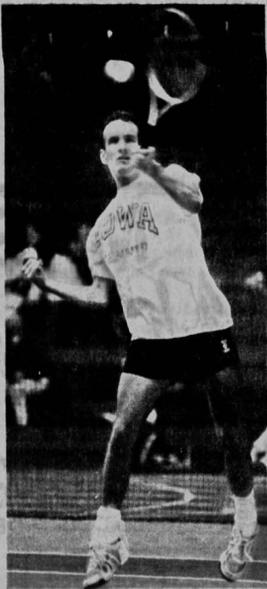

At No. 2 singles, senior Thomas Adler rebounded from a loss Thursday evening to defeat Nebraska's second seed Steve Barley in straight sets, 6-3, 7-6.

"It's a very good feeling to win like this," said Adler, now 7-2 on the season. "It was very hard to take the loss Thursday and I'm very glad that I bounced back so well."

Playing his second match in as many days with a chest cold, No. 3 seed senior Paul Buckingham suffered his second loss of the season 5-7, 6-2, 1-6 to Nebraska's Scott Randolph. In the second set, Buckingham raced to a 5-2 lead, confusing Randolph with a mixture of one-handed slices and two-fisted backhands before succumbing in the third set.

Senior Tommy Heiting easily took the first set of his match with Karl Falkand 6-1 at No. 4 singles before dropping the second set 1-6. But, using a variety of groundstrokes and volleys, Heiting rediscovered his former rhythm, taking the third set 6-2 for the win.

"I was very happy with the way I played," said Heiting, now 7-1 on the season. "I thought that I executed pretty well and I felt really good. Beating a team like Nebraska definitely took a total team effort, and I think that this was good preparation for the upcoming Big Ten season."

The match that may well have set the tone for the rest of the evening's matches came at No. 6 singles, where Hawkeye Greg Hebard gritted out a tight 7-6, 6-7, 6-4 three-setter over Cornhusker Anthony Kofarac. The win, Hebard's eighth on the season without a loss, evened the matches at three to three heading into the final doubles matches.

"At the time, we were down 2-3 in singles matches," Houghton said, "so Hebard's win gave us some momentum going into the doubles. It was a crucial win, especially since in the final set the score was 4-4 and could have gone either way."

The Hawkeye's other singles' loss on the night came at No. 5 singles as freshman Neil Denahan fell to Nebraska's Joey Salerna 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

In the Hawkeyes' victory over Gustavus Adolphus, Iowa posted straight-set victories in all nine singles and doubles matches.

Hawkeyes bounce back in a big way

Top Michigan after tough loss to ISU

By David Taylor
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's gymnastics team bounced back from a disappointing loss to Iowa State last week with a 188.95 to 184.90 victory against Michigan last Saturday.

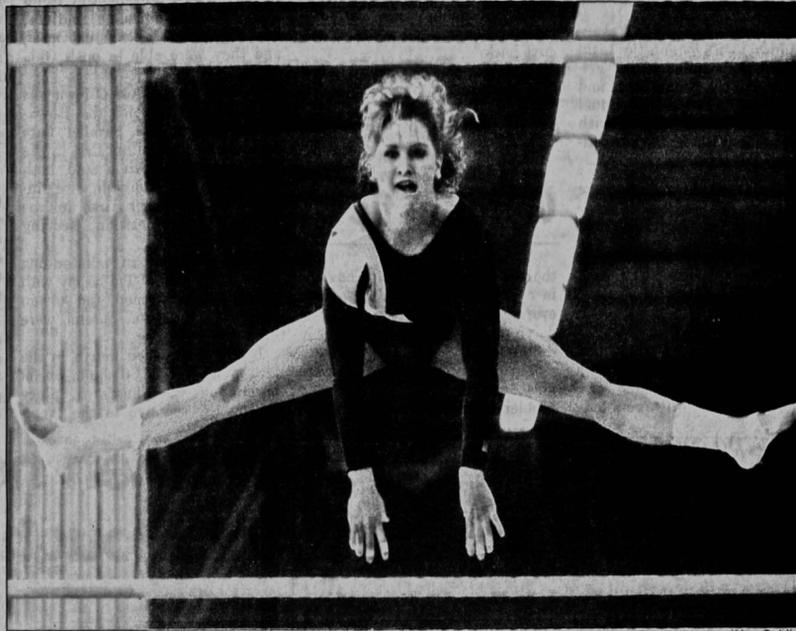

The Hawkeyes dominated the meet from start to finish, winning every event, and setting numerous team and personal bests in the process.

"This was our best meet of the year, and probably the finest team performance in Iowa women's gymnastics history," said Iowa coach Diane DeMarco. "We were focused, determined and confident of ourselves."

Junior Lori Cole turned in another strong day of competition, as she captured first-place finishes in the vault with a 9.45, the floor exercise with a 9.75 and the all-around with 38.05 points, edging out teammate Sandy Stengel who ended with a score of 37.85.

"I felt like it was my best performance of the year," said Cole. "I hit everything that I wanted to, and we put it together as a team, showing what we are capable of."

"Lori was her usual stellar self

Iowa's Michelle Cahal executes her mount of the uneven bars Saturday afternoon at North Gym in the Field House. Cahal scored a school record 9.75 in the event as the Hawkeyes defeated Michigan.

against Michigan," DeMarco said.

Senior Michelle Cahal broke her own school record on the uneven bars, taking first in the event with a 9.75. Cahal also finished third in the all-around, totaling 37.35 points. Teammates Stengel and Jamie Lynne Hedley tied for second behind Cahal on the bars with scores of 9.55.

"Cahal and Tracy Junker ended up with great performances in the meet," DeMarco said. "Junker had her best beam showing of the year."

Iowa swept the beam competition, with freshman Michele Myers taking the top spot at 9.45.

"It was very satisfying to see them do so well on the beam, because it is such a challenging event, and the margin of error is so small," DeMarco said.

Hawks take title at South Florida

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa softball team did everything Coach Gayle Blevins wanted over the weekend — and a little bit more.

According to Blevins, the Hawkeyes' goals in the South Florida Classic were to play consistently, win their pool and advance to the championship game.

But the Iowa team didn't stop with just reaching the title game.

Iowa capped off an undefeated weekend with a 6-1 shelling of South Carolina in the title game of the South Florida Classic. The Hawkeyes rolled to an 8-0 record in the tournament in Tampa, Fla.

"To be undefeated, that's quite an accomplishment," Blevins said. "We played some real good ball — clubs down here."

Softball

Among those teams was South Carolina, who came into the championship game with a 15-2 record. Iowa pounded out 12 hits and freshman Karen Jackson threw a three-hitter for the victory.

That continued a pattern of strong pitching and hard hitting that the Hawkeyes throughout the tournament. Iowa scored 57 runs and allowed only three in eight games.

Iowa opened the tournament Friday against Illinois State, a team that Blevins expected to be her team's toughest challenge in their five-team pool.

The Lady Redbirds had given Iowa trouble in both the fall and spring seasons last year, but they provided no obstacle Friday. Iowa tapped out 17 hits and Jackson threw her first collegiate no-hitter in the 13-0 victory.

"I was surprised," Blevins said, "I fully expected Illinois State to play us really tough. I think it was an atypical game for them."

The Hawkeyes then beat Stetson, 12-0 in five innings, in a game shortened by the 10-run rule. Junior Amy Hartsock tossed a one-hitter and Iowa banged out 12 hits.

The Hawkeyes' closest game in pool play was their final one Friday. Iowa beat Ball State, 8-2 in eight innings, but had to overcome eight illegal pitches by junior Terri McFarland.

The Hawkeyes scored six times in the eighth inning after allowing the Cardinals to tie the game with two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning. McFarland limited Ball

State to two hits for her third victory.

After a long rain delay which forced Saturday's games to be postponed to the evening, the Hawkeyes continued pool play with a 9-0 victory over North Carolina-Wilmington.

Sophomore shortstop Jenny Roe drove in Iowa's first run in the first inning and the Hawkeyes went on to score four runs in the first four innings. They added five in the fifth to put the game out of reach.

Hartsock picked up the win on the mound with her second one-hitter of the tournament. She improved to 2-1 on the season.

Iowa then completed an undefeated showing in its pool with a 2-0 blanking of Virginia. McFarland tossed a one-hitter against the Lady Cavaliers.

As the top seed in their pool, Iowa received a first-round bye in Sunday's single-elimination championship round and faced the host school in the quarterfinals.

The Hawkeyes defeated South Florida, 3-0, behind Jackson, who threw a one-hitter and fanned 12. Iowa collected nine hits in the game.

The Hawkeyes also shut out Eastern Michigan, 4-0, in the semifinals behind the two-hit pitching of McFarland. The junior from Sacramento, Calif., struck out five and improved to 5-0 this season.

That set up the title matchup against South Carolina, who beat seventh-ranked Florida State in the other semifinal game.

"The nicest thing about the tournament is that we got our offense on track," Blevins said. "We got a lot of contributions throughout the lineup. It's hard to highlight anybody because everyone hit so well."

Blevins did note the contributions of four players, including two of the team's captains. Senior centerfielder Amy Johnson went 10-20 with five RBIs and junior leadoff hitter Diane Pohl hit .416.

Sophomore Kim Davis hit .571 in her first action as a slap hitter. Blevins said Davis "tore teams up" with her slap hitting after practicing the technique for just one week.

Roe, the tournament's most valuable offensive player, may have made the biggest impact. The sophomore from Des Moines drove in 14 runs and hit .522.

"(Roe) had an outstanding tournament all-around," Blevins said.

Roe joined Pohl, senior third baseman Diana Repp, and pitchers Jackson and McFarland on the all-tournament team. McFarland was named the Classic MVP.

Depleted Hawks close out regular season

By David Taylor
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's gymnastics team closed out the regular season Friday, losing to No. 2 Ohio State and No. 8 Wisconsin in a four-way dual meet. Iowa placed third, with Army finishing last in the competition.

The ninth-ranked Hawkeyes were without the full services of three top gymnasts, as Gary Denk and Dillon Ashton both missed the meet with injuries. Chris Kabat was also hindered by a torn knee meniscus and did not compete in all of the meet's six events.

"We had some good points and some rough points, but we were a little short-handed," said Iowa coach Tom Dunn. "We were a long way from our best, but we'll be looking to make some improvements when we get some of our guys back."

On paper the Hawkeyes looked like they might have dominated the meet, winning championships in every event but vaulting. However, Dunn said that the lack of depth in the Iowa team made a big difference.

Men's Gymnastics

"I'm pleased with what we were able to accomplish, but we had problems with lower scores because we didn't have any depth," Dunn said. "We missed some routines, but Wisconsin looked real good, and they were able to push Ohio State."

Senior Erik Heikkila of Iowa was the top performer for the Hawkeyes, winning the parallel bars with a 9.65 and taking first in the horizontal bars with a 9.80, both personal highs. Heikkila also finished in a tie for first in the all-around competition, scoring 56.05 points.

"Heikkila had an outstanding meet," said Dunn. "I'm happy with the way he performed, and Adrian Besancon and Paul Bautel were both very good also."

Besancon finished fourth in the all-around with 55.50 points, one of three Iowa gymnasts to place among the top five in the event.

Bautel took third for the Hawkeyes with 56.00 points. Besancon also won the still rings, scoring a personal best of 9.75, while Bautel finished first in the floor exercise with a 9.65, also a personal high.

Iowa's other champion was Rich Frye on the pommel horse with a season high 9.75.

The team will break from competition until March 22-23, when they will compete in the Big Ten Conference meet. Dunn said that he expects Ohio State and Minnesota to vie for first place at the competition.

"I wouldn't say that either one is clear cut over the other," Dunn said. "They are both good, and I think third place will be up for grabs, with us in there with Wisconsin and Michigan State."

Iowa can't qualify any more

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swimming team missed its final opportunity to send two more relay teams and several other individual swimmers to the NCAA Championships Saturday at the Iowa State United States

Glenn Patton

Men's Swimming

Swimming Championships in Cedar Rapids.

"We didn't swim nearly as fast as we did in Indianapolis (at the Big Ten Championships)," said Coach Glenn Patton, now in his 16th season with Iowa. "Everybody was a little off their best times and the mental hype wasn't there like at Big Tens. But, because of the chance to possibly have a few more guys go to NAAs, we didn't want to leave any stone unturned."

"Now, we just want to train hard and get the guys who are going ready for nationals."

The 400-yard medley relay team of Matt Smith, Rob Leyshon, Mike Johnson and Eric Kirch barely missed the national cut time of 3:19, finishing the race in 3:22. Last week in a time trial at the Big Ten Championships, the same team clocked a season-best and NCAA-qualifying time of 3:18.50 but were disqualified because of an early takeoff.

"Our starts off the blocks were better than at Big Tens," Leyshon said, "but every single leg was consistently slower than last week."

Also missing NCAA cuts by seconds were the 200 medley relay team of Johnson, Keith Gunderson, Tom Beer and Rob Meadows, Dan Stoppenhagen, Smith and Johnson in the 200 freestyle and Meadows in the 50 freestyle. Stoppenhagen also swam the 500 freestyle, missing Senior National cuts by less than two seconds.

Women netters run into tough Badgers

By David Taylor
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's tennis team took to the road and ran into another Big Ten powerhouse over the weekend and lost, this time to Wisconsin, 9-0.

"We were not real sharp this weekend," said Iowa coach Micki Schillig. "Wisconsin is a very strong team, and I think we were playing more not to lose, rather than playing to win."

It was the Hawkeyes' fourth loss in four Big Ten meets, with nearly all of them coming at the hands of the league's elite teams: Indiana, Northwestern, and the Badgers.

"I don't know what we could have done better to win," Schillig said. "We tried to be more consistent after the first few sets, and play a little more relaxed, but it was quite a fiasco."

The team did rebound to play somewhat better in doubles, but in the end it was more of the same — Wisconsin victories.

After losing the first set in the No. 1 and No. 2 doubles matches, the Badgers came back to halt the Hawkeyes' short-lived burst.

"We looked like a different team in doubles," Schillig said. "I think the team was less intimidated on the courts, and they played more aggressively."

With its usual injury problems, the squad has become somewhat run-down in their past few meets, and Schillig said that it may do them good to be on the road somewhere other than the Midwest. The Hawkeyes will take an extended road trip to California beginning this Friday.

"This is a real hard time of the year for us, and a change of atmosphere will do wonders," Schillig said. "It takes some of the pressure off when we aren't playing in a Big Ten meet, but it also puts a different kind of pressure on us, playing nationally-ranked teams like San Diego."

Iowa will face California Baptist, San Diego, and United States International on the California trip. San Diego is ranked among the top ten teams in the country.

That Grammar Guy

By Jake Stigers
The Daily Iowan

Gentle Communicators, What color is this newspaper? Is it white? Maybe it's platinum. How about taupe (and how is taupe pronounced)? Today's column is designed to terminate confusion about colors and their pronunciations.

Chartreuse is an often brilliant light green. The name is derived from a trademark for a green or yellow liqueur.

Ecrú is a light combination of gray, yellow and brown. It is often a color of choice for casual cotton pants in trendy catalogs.

Heliotrope, pronounced HEEL-yuh-trope, is anywhere from a brilliant violet to a deep reddish purple. The name comes from a South American plant that bears small, fragrant flowers.

Mauve is a reddish purple. It is pronounced mav — not mauv.

Ocher is an orange yellow. It, too, is often mispronounced. Say O-ker.

Platinum is a medium to light gray. Contrary to popular belief, it has no yellow in it — a mistaken notion borne no doubt of the old Hollywood platinum blonde hair-bleaching trend.

Puce is a dark combination of red, gray and purple. It comes from the Latin word for flea: pulex. We must thank the French for discovering the need to describe the color of a flea. I don't know who is to blame for bringing the word puce, to the modern English lexicon.

Taupe, pronounced tope, is a combination of brown, gray and yellow. Of all the colors listed here, platinum comes the closest to describing this paper. Until next time, happy communicating.

Bee horde rides through car wash

The Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Maddie Mix's lunchtime stop at the car wash turned into a three-hour ordeal when a swarm of bees commandeered her newly scrubbed car.

"I just said, 'Why me, Lord?' I've got so much stuff to do," Mix said Wednesday as she watched thousands of bees buzz in and out of her Buick.

Tales of the Bizarre

Gene Humphreys, who owns Hammond Aire Auto Spa, said the first bees landed on the car as it headed into his 100-foot-long wash tunnel.

"When we drove it in through the tunnel, there must have been 100 bees on the door," he said Thursday. "We blasted them off with the hose. ... It wasn't 10 minutes there must have been 10,000 bees all over it."

"They massed so big you couldn't see the color of her car. The interior of her car was black with bees. The ceiling of her car was black with bees."

The swarm forced him to close the car wash for more than two hours until a beekeeper from Louisiana State University could remove the swarm.

Humphreys said the bees were "hitting me like raindrops, they were coming at me in such masses."

"I thought they were killer bees," said Beau Michael, who drove the car through the car wash. He was the only person who got stung — he sat on a bee while moving the car.

Terry Tillman, a former beekeeper who drove into the car wash just as the bees landed, and the LSU beekeeper said the bees apparently were confused because they couldn't find their queen.

Humphreys said the beekeeper lured most of the bees into a trap filled with honeycomb.

Mix wound up leaving her car at the car wash and getting a ride back to work before the bees were all removed.

Humphreys had a series of photographs of the swarm.

"I gave Maddie ... some of the best of them. She said, 'I know my boss won't believe me if I say that's why I was late to work,'" he said.

Dancers head to festival

The Daily Iowan

Two dance works will represent the UI Dance Department at the central regional American College Dance Festival March 20-23 at Southwest Missouri State University.

Student dancers will perform "Eye of the Storm" by guest faculty member Valerie Bergman and "Desert Sun" by graduate student Laurie Fields.

The UI productions will compete with performances by dance groups from other colleges and universities. The central regional festival is one of seven regional festivals sponsored by the American College Dance Festival Association (ACDFA), and colleges and universities are free to attend the regional festival of their choice.

Winning dances will be included in a Gala Concert at the conclusion of this regional festival.

Valerie Bergman, an alumna of the UI Dance Department who was for several years a leading member of the Nina Wiener Dance Company, was a UI guest faculty member in the fall semester of 1990. She choreographed "Eye of the Storm" last fall for the UI Dance Company's Dance Gala, and the work is also performed by Dancers in Company, the UI Dance Department's touring ensemble.

Using high-energy movement set to the rock music of Art of Noise, "Eye of the Storm" depicts the possibility for romance and piece of mind amidst the tumult of contemporary urban life.

Laurie Fields is pursuing a Master of Fine Arts degree in dance. Her "Desert Sun" is a duet for a parched traveler and his delusions. Set to the music of Japan's Stomu Yamashta, "Desert Sun" casts a female dancer as the sun, who dances with and finally overcomes a man lost in the desert.

The two works will be performed at the festival by dance students Beth Zogg, Daniel Stark, Jeffrey Curtis, Wendy Kanter, Charlie Livingston, Kristin Mitchell, Beth Wunluck, Monique Gruter, Marc Slayton and Laurie Fields.

ACDFA provides college dance faculty and students with opportunities to exchange information and ideas.

UI writing program receives AT & T grant

The Daily Iowan

The UI International Writing Program has received a grant of $50,000 from the AT & T Foundation. A check for the grant amount was formally presented on the UI campus March 7 by representatives of AT & T.

Clark Blaise, director of the IWP, Antonia Hamilton of the UI Foundation and UI Vice President Fredrick Woodard were on hand to receive the check from AT & T officials.

The grant was given to sponsor three writers, one each from Armenia, Mexico and Poland, in the IWP next fall. Invitations have been extended to writers who are among the most prominent literary figures in their homelands.

As IWP participants, the AT & T-sponsored writers will have an opportunity to work on their current writing and research projects.

The Mexican writer will visit Chicago and three cities in the Southwest that have significant populations of Mexican-Americans. The Armenian writer will visit Detroit, Los Angeles, San Francisco and New York, and the Polish writer will visit Chicago, Detroit, New York and Pittsburgh.

In accepting the grant, Blaise stated, "This is an absolutely glorious moment for the IWP. Over the 24 years of service of the IWP we have been able to demonstrate the universality of human genius. Now the AT & T Foundation has made it possible for three writers of extraordinary talent to come to the IWP."

AT & T's interest in Armenia came about when AT & T rebuilt the region's communications system after the earthquake that devastated that area of the Soviet Union. Because of AT & T's sponsorship, the IWP will host an Armenian writer for the first time.

McGriff powers Padres, Cubs make it perfect 3-0

The Associated Press

YUMA, Ariz. — Fred McGriff drove in three runs with a triple and a sacrifice fly, and four Padre pitchers held California to three hits as San Diego swept a three-game series from the Angels with a 4-0 victory on Sunday.

Calvin Schiraldi pitched the first three innings for the Padres, walking one, striking out none and allowing no hits for the victory.

The Angels' Jim Abbott gave up all four runs on six hits in three innings and was tagged with the loss.

Both teams meet again Monday in Tempe, Ariz., with the Angels hosting their first exhibition game ever at Arizona State University.

The Padres opened the scoring in the first inning when Tony Fernandez singled and went to third on a single by Tony Gwynn. McGriff then tied to left field, scoring Fernandez, giving the Padres a 1-0 lead. McGriff was 3-for-3 with an RBI on Saturday.

White Sox 3, Reds 1

PLANT CITY, Fla. — Steve Lyons hit a three-run homer off Norm Charlton to give the Chicago White Sox a 3-1 victory Sunday over the Cincinnati Reds.

Charlton retired the first four White Sox batters, two on strikeouts, before he walked Rob Nelson and gave up a single to Ron Karkovice in the second inning. Lyons then narrowly missed a homer on a drive down the left-field line before hitting a homer to right.

The White Sox managed just two more hits the rest of the game.

Melido Perez allowed one hit in the first three innings, fanning three. Seven White Sox pitchers held the Reds to six hits.

Cincinnati got its run in the fourth inning off Tom Drees. Paul O'Neill hit a soft double to left and Chris Sabo singled him home.

Expos 6, Braves 2

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Otis Nixon doubled in two runs and Andres Galarraga homered to lead the Montreal Expos past the Atlanta Braves 6-2 on Sunday.

Nixon's shot down the left-field line scored starting pitcher Brian Barnes and second baseman Junior Noboa in the second inning.

Galarraga hit the first pitch from Randy Kramer over the center field fence in the fourth inning for his second home run in three games.

The Expos built a 5-0 lead in the first four innings and stopped the Braves on fine outings from Barnes and Bill Sampen.

Barnes, the winner, gave up two hits in three innings. Rick Mahler shut out the Braves for two innings, then was touched for two runs in the sixth.

Astros 9, Royals 5

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — Ken Caminiti and Carl Nichols drove in three runs apiece Sunday, leading the Houston Astros to a 9-5 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Caminiti hit a two-run single and Nichols added a two-run double as the Astros scored five runs in the first inning off starter Kevin Appier.

The Astros, picked by most pre-season publications to be the worst team in baseball this year, improved to 2-0.

Astros starter Mark Portugal earned the victory.

Appier took the loss after giving up five runs on four hits and two walks in one inning.

After the Royals rallied to make it 5-4 in the third with the help of a two-run single by Brian McRae, the Astros scored two runs apiece in the third and fifth innings.

Cardinals 11, Pirates 0

BRADENTON, Fla. — Bryn Smith combined with three relievers on a five-hitter and added a two-run single in leading the St. Louis Cardinals to an 11-0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates on Sunday.

Smith went three innings and allowed no hits while striking out one and walking none. Chris Carpenter relieved Smith and pitched three innings, Mike Perez came on in the seventh and Frank DiPino pitched the ninth.

Ray Lankford and Tom Pagnozzi each had three hits as the Cardinals collected 19 hits off six Pirate pitchers.

Phillies 9, Blue Jays 5

CLEARWATER, Fla. — Jim Lindeman broke a sixth-inning tie with a single and the Philadelphia Phillies went on for a 9-5 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays on Sunday.

Von Hayes' RBI grounder in the sixth tied the score 5-5 before Lindeman's single to center field off loser Jim Acker scored Darren Daulton. Tommy Greene got the victory.

Toronto's Mel Stottlemyre started and gave up two runs in the first on a Hayes' RBI single and a felder's choice.

Toronto picked up a run in the fourth on an RBI single off reliever Bruce Ruffin.

Cubs 9, Brewers 3

CHANDLER, Ariz. — Dwight Smith hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning to give Chicago the lead, and the Chicago Cubs went on for a 9-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers on Sunday.

Hector Villanueva, who had four hits and drove in two runs, led off the sixth with a single off Milwaukee reliever Julio Machado.

Smith followed with a drive over the right-field wall to put Chicago ahead to stay, 4-3.

The loss dropped the Brewers to 0-3 and improved the Cubs to 3-0. The game was played before 10,161, a Compadre Stadium record. The teams played before 8,973 Saturday in Mesa, a Cubs spring record.

Chicago broke open the game with five runs in the ninth off Chuck Crim, who surrendered three singles, two triples and a double. Chico Walker delivered the big hit, a two-run triple, as the Cubs finished with 17 hits.

Giants 5, Indians 2

TUCSON, Ariz. — Matt Williams had a double and two RBIs as the San Francisco Giants beat the Cleveland Indians 5-2 Sunday.

Williams' infield ground out drove in Dave Anderson to give San Francisco a 2-1 lead in the third inning, and Kevin Bass followed with another infield ground out that scored Clark.

Starter Mike LaCoss picked up the victory for the Giants and Willie Blair took the loss.
