3 more residential burglary reports brings IC count to 11

By Laura Ballman
The Daily Iowan

Three more residential burglaries and one attempted burglary were reported in Iowa City March 11. This raises the number of reported residential burglaries to 11 since Feb. 26. All of the incidents have involved the theft of electronic goods and petty personal property.

Police Sergeant Pat Harney said he believes some of the burglaries are "obviously tied together," but is not sure if the thief or thieves are professionals.

"We go through these rashes (of burglaries) every so often," Harney said.

The Monday burglaries occurred when the residents were not home, allowing the burglar to enter by prying open doors. VCRs were stolen in each of the three robberies.

The first robbery occurred at 905 Benton St., sometime between 7 a.m. and 4:28 p.m. Besides a VCR, the thief parted with a compact disc player, remote controls and compact discs.

The following two robberies took place in apartments at 2605 Westwinds Drive, sometime between 1:30 and 5:17 p.m., when the first theft was reported.

The second theft, in the neighboring apartment, was not discovered until approximately 10:45 p.m.

"We have had a noticeable increase in residential burglaries, enough where it has alerted me that it's a problem and caused me to increase man hours," Iowa City Detective Sergeant Tom Widmer said.

Most of the incidents have happened during daylight hours, which is the most common time for Iowa City burglaries, according to Widmer. He said neighbors mistake day-time thieves for meter checkers and servicepeople.

Because the robberies are occurring in more than one neighborhood, some in expensive houses, some in student apartments, Widmer thinks there might be more than one active thief, possibly working as a team.

"We do have suspects. Now it is a matter of proving it," Widmer said.

Widmer suggested residents use common sense in trying to deter robbers. By locking doors and windows, hiding valuables and making the home look occupied, a person can decrease the risk of burglary.

Soviets to vote on preserving socialist union

Baltics, 3 other republics refuse to hold referendum

By Ann Imse
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Soviet republics voting to preserve the union in Sunday's referendum will unite under a new treaty in a country renamed the Federation of Sovereign States, an aide to President Mikhail Gorbachev predicted Tuesday.

The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics cannot keep its name because many of its 15 republics have dropped the words "Soviet" and "Socialist" from their own names, said Grigory Revenko, the presidential staffer in charge of negotiations for a new Union Treaty.

Revenko said republics that vote against preservation of the union in Sunday's referendum will be allowed to secede, but only according to the national secession law.

Independence activists say that law, which requires that the national legislature approve of the republics' secession, makes leaving the union virtually impossible.

Many republics want no part of any union. Others are demanding a loose federation rather than a formal union with a strong central government.

Gorbachev will address the nation on television Saturday night to urge approval of the referendum, Revenko said.

The referendum "has legal force" but is "unlikely to finally decide the destiny of the country," he said.

Republics that approve the referendum will proceed with construction of a union "on the principles that the republics prefer," Revenko said.

"I believe once these republics join together in the union, they will have to work out a form of relations for those who do not want to be part of the union," he said.

Six republics — Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia, Georgia, Armenia and Moldavia — are refusing to hold Sunday's referendum.

Revenko said the national legislature this week decreed that "cities, councils, work collectives and associations may hold the referendum on their own, regardless of the decision of the republic parliaments."

"Associations" would include the Communist Party, which has said it plans to open polling places in the six republics.

Soviet law invalidates any election in which less than 50 percent of the voters participate. In that case, the Central Election Commission would decide whether to hold another election, Revenko said.

The referendum will ask, "Do you consider it necessary to preserve the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics as a renewed federation of equal, sovereign republics in which human rights and freedoms of any nationality (people of all ethnic groups) will be fully guaranteed?"

Voters in the Ukraine also will be asked, "Do you agree that the Ukraine must be part of the Union

March snowstorm blasts into Iowa City

By Les May
The Daily Iowan

UI students dreaming of spring break and sunny beaches were rudely awakened to reality in Iowa Tuesday evening by a March snowstorm that dumped over four inches of snow on Iowa City and blasted it with 40 to 50 mph winds.

By 9 p.m., temperatures had dropped from about 30 degrees to the low 20's and are expected to only rise into the high 20's by Wednesday morning, according to Mark Strehl, a meteorologist at KGAN-TV in Cedar Rapids. He said area weathermen are watching to see if the storm will dump more snow on the area. But he added that by late Thursday there is a good chance the clouds will break up.

But don't plan on leaving for spring break early, as UI classes probably won't be cancelled, said Ann Rhodes, vice president of university relations, when she was contacted Tuesday evening. A new weather safety protocol was enacted where UI Public Safety officials assess weather conditions to determine whether or not it is too hazardous for students and faculty to attend classes.

A report is then made to UI Business Manager Michael Finnegan and Dean of Students Phillip Jones who make a final decision on cancellations. Previously, UI policy held that because hospital employees are always required to go to work regardless of weather conditions, the university never closed, Rhodes said.

The Iowa City Police Department estimated that over 20 traffic accidents, none of which involved major injuries, had occurred by 8 p.m. Tuesday on sleet and snow-covered roads. Several power surges, but no power outages, also took place.

Having developed in the Rocky Mountains region, the storm is now moving toward southern Illinois. In some parts of northern and eastern Iowa, interstate highways were under zero visibility conditions and were covered with snow, ice and sleet. Severe weather, including thundershowers in Missouri and winds up to 70 mph in Kansas, were also reported in adjacent states.

1990 deficit smallest since '84; predicted to drop even further

By Martin Crutsinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit shrank to a six-year low of $99.3 billion in 1990, and economists say allied contributions for the Persian Gulf war should translate into an even more dramatic improvement this year.

The Commerce Department said Tuesday the broadest measure of trade, called the current account, narrowed by 9.8 percent from a trade gap of $110 billion in 1989, as U.S. merchandise exports climbed to an all-time high and a record number of foreign tourists visited America.

The current account, also known as the balance of payments, is considered the most important trade statistic because it measures not only trade in merchandise but also investment flows between countries and earnings on tourism and other services.

The 1990 deficit was the smallest since a $99.01 billion deficit in 1984 and it marked the third consecutive year of improvement since hitting a record of $162.31 billion in 1987.

David Wyss, an economist with DRI-McGraw Hill, said that this year's current account deficit could be cut by more than half, falling to around $40 billion.

The bulk of that improvement will come from the $53.5 billion in contributions pledged by American allies to defray the costs of the Persian Gulf war, much of which will be counted as a kind of reverse foreign aid and will directly reduce the current account deficit.

Wyss and other economists said the improvement this year would be a one-time phenomenon with the deficit for 1992 returning to a level of around $75 billion to $80 billion.

In addition to the allied contributions, the 1991 deficit will be cut by a modest amount by continued improvements in U.S. export sales abroad, analysts said.

Strong demand for merchandise exports has helped cushion the severity of the current recession and the Bush administration is counting on continued demand this year to help pull the country out of the downturn.

However, private analysts said that the administration may be pinning too much hope on this sector, given spreading weakness in overseas markets.

"We will continue to get export growth this year but it will not be as rapid as the past two years," said Bruce Steinberg, an economist with Merrill Lynch. "Exports by themselves are not enough to pull the country out of recession."

Although Operation Desert Shield and Desert Storm are expected to improve the bottom line this year, the Persian Gulf conflict actually added to the fourth quarter deficit, which edged up 4.8 percent to $27.76 billion.

While $4.3 billion in contributions lowered the deficit, this was more than offset by a $7.1 billion charge which represented a write-off of loans to Egypt, an action taken to reward that country for joining the coalition fighting Iraq.

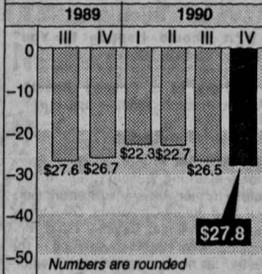

At the beginning of the 1980s, the United States enjoyed annual surpluses in its current account as perennial deficits in merchandise trade were offset by overseas investment earnings.

But as Americans handed over billions of dollars to foreigners to pay for a flood of imported cars and television sets, the investment cushion eroded. It disappeared altogether in 1985, when the United States became a net debtor for the first time in 71 years.

Simply stated, that means foreig-

Baker offers settlement to Palestinians, Israel

By Barry Schweid
The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Secretary of State James Baker opened new talks with Palestinian Arabs on Tuesday, overlooking their assertion they represent the Palestine Liberation Organization that the Bush administration has shunned for the past year.

Separately, Baker discussed with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir demands from Arab nations that Shamir prove he is willing to make concessions in their direction.

A senior U.S. official said Shamir took the request under consideration.

Baker is touring the Middle East trying to sell Arabs and Israel on President Bush's Mideast settlement formula: That Israel relinquish occupied land in order to gain the acceptance of its Arab neighbors.

Shamir and Baker met for 75 minutes and, in an unusual flourish of secret diplomacy, excluded even note-takers from most of the one-on-one discussion in Shamir's office.

By contrast, Baker's meeting with the Palestinians was widely publicized by American and Palestinian participants. While Baker said nothing about his session with the prime minister, he called the meeting with the Palestinians in the home of U.S. Consul General Philip Wilcox a "window of opportunity."

Faisal Husseini, a spokesman for the delegation, said, "We told him we are here because Yasser Arafat told us to be here." The group presented Baker with an 11-point memorandum reaffirming that

Students arrested for attempted theft of art

By Laura Ballman
The Daily Iowan

Two people were arrested March 10 for attempting to steal three paintings from the Liberal Arts Office of the Dean, room 107 of Schaeffer Hall. Jeffrey R. Hoffman, 21, 2712 Stonehurst, St. Louis, Mo., and Richard J. Casey, 21, 11725 Carolyn Lane, Alsip, Ill., were both charged with burglary in the second degree.

According to UI Public Safety reports, an Iowa City police officer was driving by the Pentacrest shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday when he noticed the subjects loading two paintings onto a bus. UI Public Safety officers were immediately notified. Upon investigating, the officers discovered the subjects crawling out the window of room 107, carrying a third painting.

Two of the paintings were on loan from the Thesis Rental Gallery, a collection of UI MA and MFA thesis work. The gallery director, Robert Kennon, had no comment about the incident.

Don Hogan, chief of UI Public Safety, said, "They didn't set off any alarm. Not every room is equipped with an alarm and apparently this one wasn't." He said this incident has not resulted in plans to increase alarm coverage.

The subjects, both students at Bradley University in Peoria, Ill., were apparently in Iowa City on a Sigma Nu fraternity walkout — an event where a whole fraternity from one university visits the brother house at another school.

Mary Peterson, a program associate in Campus Programs in charge of the UI greek system, said that she was out of town this weekend when the attempted theft occurred, and was not aware of the exact circumstances. She said, "I just know that it is (the subjects' school officials who are handling it)." She made it clear that the subjects are not from the UI Sigma Nu chapter. She would not comment about whether this kind of incident with visiting chapters is a frequent problem.

Mary Lou Doyle, Assistant to the Dean of Liberal Arts said, "The Dean has not yet set a value to the paintings." She said he is doing research that will determine the paintings' value.

Committee OKs higher cigarette taxes

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES—A tax-writing House committee Tuesday approved a "pretty awful" $25 million cigarette tax increase.

"It's kind of like having to shoot Old Yeller," said committee head Rep. John Groninga, D-Mason City. "Sometimes you just have to do it."

The House Ways and Means Committee approved the higher tax 13-9, with two members opting not to cast a vote. Both Republicans and Democrats supported the tax, which had been sought by Gov. Terry Branstad.

Backers said the tax increase was unfair and would not solve the state's budget woes but said there was no choice but to begin looking for ways to wipe out the projected deficit in next year's budget.

"We simply said it was necessary. We are looking at shortfalls of $250 million. It's a pretty awful combination. It doesn't solve the problem, but it does go part of the way."

"It's a pretty awful combination," he said. "It doesn't solve the problem, but it does go part of the way." Under the proposal, which could be debated by the full House within a week, changes include:

■ Taxes would increase dramatically on wine coolers, flavored drinks that include a modest level of alcohol. That would bring in $2.4 million next year.

■ The state's cigarette tax would increase to 41 cents per pack, a 10-cent increase. The higher taxes would go on the books May 1 to help bail out this year's budget. It would bring in $5 million by the time this year ends on June 30, and $25 million for next year.

■ You have, in effect, a highly discriminatory tax," Groninga said. "This will probably tax the product out of existence." Wine coolers are generally sold in packages containing four 12-ounce bottles that are taxed at a rate of 19 cents per gallon, meaning the tax is about 8 cents for each four-pack. The tax on each four-pack would increase by $1.32 under the proposal.

Rep. John Groninga

Branstad asked the Legislature for the tax increase in his budget proposal in January, but it was rejected out of hand by Democrats who hold a majority in both chambers of the Legislature.

Since then, legislators have been seeking spending cuts or tax increases that could generate enough support for passage.

Unable to find that combination, legislative leaders have said they will move to approve, virtually intact, Branstad's budget, in effect tossing the ball back into his court.

House Speaker Bob Arnold, D-Davenport, said plans call for House approval of the new taxes and Branstad's spending plan late this week or early next week.

He said there is not enough Democratic support to force approval and GOP votes will be needed.

A Davenport man was charged Monday with third-degree theft after stealing a television from a local store, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Court records state Robert D. Myrick, 35, 1127 Emarld, was in Radio Shack, 51 Second St., Coralville, when an off-duty police officer observed Myrick take a small, portable television set from a shelf and place it in his pants. Myrick then left the store and when officers stopped him, he threw the television under his car, according to court records.

The television was valued at $199.95.

Preliminary hearing is scheduled for March 28.

the area of College and Clinton Streets. This is his second offense.

■ April Moreno, 23, 2749 Highway 218, pleaded guilty to fifth-degree theft and was fined $56.

■ Christopher J. Meder, 19, 320 S. Gilbert St., pleaded guilty to fifth-degree criminal mischief and leaving a parking ramp without paying. Meder was fined $100.

■ Jeffery J. Green, 22, 603 S. Dubuque St., pleaded guilty to disorderly house after playing music too loud. Green was fined $56.

Winners named in UI symposium

Five high school students were cited for outstanding presentations in the 29th Annual Iowa Junior Science and Humanities Symposium at the UI last month.

Alan Adams of Regis High School, Cedar Rapids, was named top finalist for his research entitled, "Thigmomorphogenetic Response in Spring Barley." Alan received guidance from his science teacher, Julie Peltz, who will receive a $300 grant from the U.S. Army Research Office to purchase instructional materials for Regis High School.

More than 220 students and teachers participated in the symposium and 16 Iowa high school students presented their research. The five finalists were selected from that group of presenters.

Other finalists were Eric Berggren, Marshalltown High; Zeeshan Ali, Linn-Mar High; Marion; Anuj Goel, City High, Iowa City; and

Jeff Merkel, East High, Sioux City. All five will attend the national symposium at Fort Monroe, Virginia, in May. Adams has been asked to present his research there.

IC house added to National Register

The Sylvanus Johnson house, 2155 Prairie du Chien Road, was recently added to the list of properties on the National Register of Historic Places. A federal program administered in Iowa by the State Historical Society of Iowa, the National Register program recognizes resources that are significant in history, architecture and archaeology.

The house is important as the first house in Iowa City built with a mansard roof in a style of architecture known as second empire. Built as a farmhouse in 1856, the house helped to popularize the style locally. It also showcased the product of Iowa City's first brick-maker, Sylvanus Johnson, whose brick kilns were located on the property.

Health of Iowa is topic of alumni meeting

More than 60 people gathered to learn about the latest in health care technologies at the UI Hospitals and Clinics (UIHC) during a UI Alumni Association Directors' Club Conclave, March 1 and 2 in Iowa City.

Participants heard physicians, researchers and administrators from UIHC discuss the latest developments in the prevention and treatment of coronary artery disease, strategies to increase organ donations in the coming year, and protecting patients' rights to decide important questions in their own care. Other programs included geriatric medicine and health care and progress in stroke research.

In addition, participants toured the UIHC Medical Museum, hyperbaric medicine services, the cardiac catheterization laboratory, and the positron emission tomography imaging center.

Students participate in externships

Seven UI students will participate in a special program of the UI Alumni Association's Career Information Network (CIN) during spring break.

The Externship program offers UI students a week "on the job" to explore career directions with UI alumni or friends as a complement to their college coursework. Externships are offered during the winter and spring breaks and cover a variety of occupations.

The program is one of four sponsored by the CIN, which uses alumni volunteers to share career experiences and advice with students to help them make decisions about their careers.

Nursing research director holds local press conference

By Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

Improving the quality of life for AIDS patients, reducing the infant mortality rate and stepping up nursing recruitment efforts are major concerns facing the profession, the director of a major research institute told reporters Tuesday.

Ada Sue Hinshaw, director of the National Center for Nursing Research and the UI College of Nursing's Distinguished Ida Beam visiting professor this spring, held the press conference to discuss the NCNR's agenda.

"Unlike other professionals in the medical profession, we are not focused on cancer, heart disease or AIDS. But rather, we are focused on individuals and how they are coping with, and continue to function with the disease," Hinshaw said.

One major area of the center's research deals with improving the U.S.'s infant mortality rate, which is at the level of developing countries, Hinshaw said.

Nearly nine percent of the NCNR's funding goes toward researching improvements for the care of infants in ICU units and how nurses can work with the mothers and fathers to prevent infant deaths, Hinshaw said.

Another area of research is concerned with improving the care and quality of life for HIV infected patients, and counseling their families and partners, Hinshaw said.

Upcoming studies will attempt to look into what treatments, given the same physiological results, would result in the least amount of negative side effects, she said.

Hinshaw added that the UI could participate in the HIV patient care research being conducted.

Providing adequate nursing care has been complicated by a shortage of nurses, and as a result the NCNR is conducting research aimed at rectifying the problem, Hinshaw said.

For the first time ever, people are being aggressively recruited to nursing schools, Hinshaw said. This effort includes modifying recruitment measures so they appeal to both sexes, as well as to minority groups who historically have not had large numbers in nursing.

In addition to recruitment efforts, the center is also conducting studies on how nurses can be used more effectively, Hinshaw said.

"We are finding that as the demand has increased, more and more ways nurses can be important have also increased," Hinshaw said.

Despite current efforts, however, the nursing shortage will probably take five years to rectify, she said.

Despite being director of the NCNR, Hinshaw also serves on the Department of Health and Human Services Council on Alzheimer's Disease, the Health Profession's Working Group on Minority Health and the Policy and Oversight Committee of the National Institutes of Health.

Gulf war impetus for sculpture

By James Arnold
The Daily Iowan

A sculpture inspired by the gulf war is now on display outside of the Union.

The piece, created by UI graduate student Joe Nelson, debuted Friday, March 8 and is scheduled to remain near the Madison street entrance until May 11.

"This piece is a reflection of our political attitudes and the physical elements of the U.S. involvement in the Middle East," Nelson inscribed on a plaque by the sculpture. "The intent of this piece is not to take a stand for or against, but rather symbolize the viewpoints of both."

Nelson said the sculpture and the colors in it are meant to reflect many different interpretations. The red and black in the piece could symbolize blood and oil, he said.

"I put a piece out there that would symbolize some different viewpoints, and it is open for interpretation," he said.

Nelson said he wanted to display the sculpture during the war, but by the time the piece was scheduled for exhibit, the war had ended.

"It would have been stronger if it was up during the war," he said. "As it turned out it is after (the war) so it is more of a reflection of our involvement."

Before the sculpture could be displayed on campus, Nelson had to get permission from the UI Art On Campus Committee. Committee member Richard Gibson said permission is usually granted if the piece is determined to be of a good quality.

"We don't have very much student work scattered around campus," he said. "There is an implication associated with putting it out on campus about the quality of the work."

Gibson said the political statement involved with the sculpture could have been a concern for the review board. But since the war was over and because there can be several different interpretations of the piece, the review board approved display of Nelson's sculpture.

"I suspect that its supposed ambiguity probably improved his chances for being approved," Gibson said. "It might have been different had it been reviewed when the war was more active."

Radon tests not required for newly-bought homes

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES—A House committee on Tuesday rejected a proposal to require that homes be tested for radon gas when they are sold.

Instead, the panel opted to allow the prospective purchaser to request a test, which would then have to be conducted.

"We want to encourage people to test," said Rep. Bill Bernau, D-Nevada, main backer of the measure.

"It was sort of a glamour problem a few years ago. Everybody was talking about it," he said. "Interest in it seems to have waned a little bit."

The House Energy Committee rejected the testing requirement on a voice vote, then voted 14-5 in favor of the passing version, with one lawmaker opting not to vote.

At issue is radon gas, a colorless and odorless gas that occurs naturally in the environment. It's described as a health hazard because of its links to causing cancer.

Because of its geological structure, Bernau said, Iowa has one of the highest concentrations of the gas of any state in the nation.

The gas ordinarily seeps into homes through the basement, and officials for years have encouraged homeowners to test for its presence.

The tests are relatively cheap — about $15 — and can be conducted by the homeowner, though they are sent off for analysis.

Preventing radon can be expensive, running to thousands of dollars. The usual repair is to install a ventilation system to allow the gas to escape before it builds to toxic levels.

The rejected proposal would have required that a home be tested for radon when it's sold. That could complicate efforts to sell a house, since some projections show that more than 60 percent of the homes in the state have concentrations of the gas above acceptable limits.

In addition, Bernau conceded, Iowans are generally stable and most homes aren't bought and sold repeatedly.

"This is not a situation where in five years we would have every house tested," he said.

The voluntary method would allow those interested in determining radon levels a chance to do so. It also calls for the Real Estate Commission to include radon issues in continuing education programs for those with real estate licenses.

The measure now goes to the full House for debate.

New disabilities act to affect businesses

Regional employers attend conferences

By Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

Regional employers got a chance to learn at a conference Tuesday how to make their workplace more accessible to disabled people and discover how the recently passed Americans with Disabilities Act will affect their businesses.

The day-long conference, held at the Holiday Inn, was sponsored by the UI College of Business Administration, and was highlighted by several speakers involved in preventing discrimination against disabled people. The conference was attended by nearly 200 employers from around the Midwest.

The ADA, passed last May, prohibits discrimination in the private sector based on disability and applies to all employers with 15 or more employees. The act becomes effective in May 1992 and will affect an estimated 43 million disabled Americans.

The ADA is expected to bring about several changes in the workplace. For instance, once enacted, employers will no longer be able to ask potential employees if they have a disability, but will be allowed to ask any job applicants if they can perform essential functions of the job, said Christopher Bell, chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission and author of ADA regulations.

However, much of the legislation isn't specific because of the uniqueness of each disability and the varying job requirements, Bell said. Therefore, each employer must determine requirements of the job and then look at each individual applicant to see if the potential employee could carry out the necessary tasks.

If the applicant can't perform a key function of the job, the employer may be forced to modify the workplace so the potential employee can do so, Bell said. However, the employer needs only to provide "reasonable accommodations that are cost effective."

John Leslie, executive vice president of the Cerebral Palsy Research Center of Kansas, told area employers that while the ADA was a landmark piece of legislation, there are a lot of "weasel" clauses in it, such as the "reasonable accommodations provision."

He urged employers to use the spirit of the legislation rather than its letter, and gave several suggestions as to how to effectively modify employers' worksites.

For instance, the employer should adapt jobs where there is a good profit so the modification will be cost effective. In addition, there should be a continuous need for the job to limit any future modifications.

Maricela Monterubio of Hewlett Packard's office of affirmative action in Santa Rosa, California, said it is a "business need" to modify the workplace as competition for professionals increases.

Phone companies want 900 numbers

By Tom Seery
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — State officials should not go overboard in regulating 900-number telephone services, telephone company officials said at an Iowa Utilities Board hearing Tuesday.

"The vast majority of services... are well worth the price that customers pay," William Schaphorst of US West Communications Inc. said.

"I would imagine the percentage of subscribers who have any complaint with 900 service is very, very small," he said.

Schaphorst and officials of other local and long-distance telephone companies urged the Utilities Board to use restraint in implementing new rules regulating the growing 900-number phone industry.

They said that while some segments of the industry have a bad reputation for attracting calls from children, many 900 numbers offer valuable financial information, weather forecasts and other data and services.

"As with any new and innovative service, there are growing pains," Cathy Conway, an AT&T official, said.

"People are beginning to understand 900 services. It's new to them," Schaphorst said. "The cases of problems are not as frequent as one might suppose."

Robert Brammer, an assistant state attorney general, disagreed with Schaphorst and said state regulation is needed.

"We think that there is a major problem. We see a lot of complaints in our office," he said.

Brammer said the attorney general's office receives 10 to 12 calls their children would run up huge telephone bills, for example.

Many telephone companies in Iowa already offer free blocking of 900 calls for individual customers, but they are not required to do so. Some of the state's smaller telephone companies say they do not have the equipment to automatically block such calls and want the Utilities Board to refrain from imposing a blocking requirement.

There is less opposition to the proposal that telephone companies be prohibited from disconnecting customers who fail to pay for 900-number calls. However, the Rural Iowa Independent Telephone Association has objected to that.

"The inability of the local exchange carrier to disconnect all telephone services for non-payment of such unregulated services will make collection more difficult and result in additional cost to the local exchange carrier," the association said in a written statement.

Baker

"The PLO is our sole legitimate leadership and interlocutor embodying the national identity and expressing the will of Palestinian people everywhere."

The Bush administration a week ago suspended U.S. talks with PLO, accusing it of new terrorist attacks against Israel.

Baker said at a news conference Monday night that the deal had been "terminated," but he said Baker explained his misapprehension and meant to say "suspended."

According to a senior U.S. official who described the meeting condition of anonymity, the Palestinians complained to Baker such Israeli actions as curfew and deportations.

The official said the Palestinians wanted to continue the talks and the United States comply. He brushed aside the Palestinians' statement of ties to PLO and said Baker was surprised by them.

One of the Palestinians, Iyad Ashrawi, said Baker had tried to persuade them to make a deal without the PLO.

Baker's talks with Shamir, resumed over dinner Tuesday night, were designed to prod into negotiations both with Palestinians and Arab nations.

Avi Pazner, the prime minister's media adviser, said the two "a very friendly, warm cooperative atmosphere" and Israel would try to keep the process going.

The U.S. official, meanwhile, credit to Shamir and the Arab foreign ministers Baker with Sunday in Riyadh, Arabia.

"What we've seen in both parties a mutual recognition that it's time to move," the official said.

Between meetings, Baker over the occupied West Bank, visited a school for immigrants in northern Israel, placed garlands of green olive and a symbolic stone on the tomb of four Jewish women who were stabbed to death on Sunday in Jerusalem bus stop. The accused of the slayings, a Palestinian from Gaza, said he intended to "send a message" to Baker.

Baker made a speech at the Miel language center in which he said the nations of the Middle East "are very anxious to close the door of war."

And yet, even as he toured a base of 27,000 with Foreign Minister David Levy, reporters were told that North Korea had decided about two dozen modified missiles to Syria along with 20 missile launchers.

The surface-to-surface warhead said to be capable of carrying bigger payloads than the one that Iraq fired on Israel in Arabia, were delivered by the past day or two, the report traveling with Baker was. The information was provided on condition the source not be identified.

The missiles and launchers were a Syrian arsenal that analysts say, is capable of virtually all of Israel with a warhead.

Syria's Baker's next stop is he leaves the Middle East to the Soviet Union.

Baker, speaking in a court language school where thousands of Ethiopian and Russian grants are taught Hebrew, said:

"Let Desert Storm be a great battle in the Middle East. Desert Storm is now over. Nations of the Middle East anxious to close the book and open the book of peace must continue to seek a peace between Israel, its neighbors and the Palestin-

Deficit creates unusual mood at state house

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — With less than two weeks until a major legislative deadline, House Speaker Bob Arnold said a fight over budget deficits has slowed efforts to deal with many issues.

"What's happened is the members recognize that most of the concepts they work on have some pricetag involved with them," Arnold said. "In a year of tight, tight budgets, there just isn't much desire to bring bills out either with a cost attached to them or other kinds of bills that might require long debate."

Arnold made his comments during his regular meeting with reporters when asked to gauge the output of this year's Legislature.

Next week is the first — and most important — of the Legislature's self-imposed deadlines. Bills which have not won committee approval by March 22 are not eligible for debate this year. Legislators traditionally use that deadline to weed out proposals they want to discard by simply ignoring them.

This year, the Legislature has been swamped with dealing with budget deficits projected as high as $250 million.

Few noteworthy pieces of legislation have emerged from committee, and most have only two or three meetings left before the deadline.

"Many ideas in a different kind of budget year might have moved forward," Arnold said. "They're not bringing out bills that have additional costs. There has been some slower time frame on bills coming out of committee."

Arnold said most of the legislative committees have been spending time preparing legislation, and he predicted the pace will quicken as the deadline nears.

"I do suspect we will have some bills out," said Arnold. "Most of the committees are poised to bring quite a few bills out in the next couple of weeks."

Referring to the budget morass, Arnold said House Democrats are moving ahead with plans to approve virtually intact the budget submitted by Gov. Terry Branstad but have not developed the support it needs to pass.

"There are not 51 Democratic votes," Arnold said. "It will need to be a bipartisan effort."

Arnold said lawmakers will be facing additional wrangling as they search for ways to pay for a new contract for state workers.

"We don't see this as anything that solves all of the budget problems," he said.

Arnold repeated his call for Branstad to offer proposals on how to deal with the estimated $50 million cost of that new contract. Branstad earlier in the week suggested he might not provide the money to pay for that contract.

"We're still researching the law," Arnold said. "I think he needs to make a recommendation."

Asked how the Legislature would react if Branstad chooses not to provide the money, Arnold said: "We'll cross that bridge when we come to it. I think that would be a complete abdication of his responsibility as governor."

Union head accuses Branstad of going back on his promise

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — The head of the biggest union representing state workers Tuesday threatened to sue Gov. Terry Branstad for "bad faith bargaining" in suggesting he may not fund wage increases.

"The governor of the state of Iowa needs to get over the sticker shock and get on with the process of funding this agreement," said Don McKee, head of Council 61 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

At a news conference, McKee said he has told the union's lawyers "to be ready to take legal action against Governor Branstad for his bad faith bargaining."

McKee called the news conference after Branstad had said he may not provide the money to pay for higher salaries awarded union workers in an arbitration settlement. The union represents about 20,000 workers. Costs of the new contract have been estimated at $50 million a year.

While the arbitrator handling the case has the power to issue a binding result, Branstad said he lacks the authority to force the state to raise taxes or take other steps to pay for the agreement.

"We feel Governor Branstad's message is bad faith bargaining," McKee said. "We feel it is a political ploy."

Branstad and his spokesman were on the road Tuesday and their reaction was not immediately available.

McKee said the union was simply following the state's collective bargaining law, which calls for binding arbitration when the two sides come to an impasse.

In past arbitrations, the union has lost but has accepted the results, McKee said. He said other arbitrations involving state workers this year have had the same result.

"We plan to take all legal action necessary to secure the wage increases for state employees we represent," McKee said. "The state does have the ability to fund this award."

Workers were given a 4 percent salary increase the first year of the contract and 5 percent the second.

McKee said union members would travel to the Statehouse next week to pressure the Legislature.

The state's collective bargaining law also prohibits strikes. "There is no work stoppage or slowdown planned," McKee said.

Branstad has said as many as 3,500 state workers would have to be laid off to pay for the contract. McKee said if layoffs are needed, union officials want to negotiate procedures.

"I don't believe that a layoff is an alternative that either the state wants or, frankly, we want," McKee said.

Many analysts forecast it will top $1 trillion before beginning to improve toward the end of this decade. The official accounting of the country's net debtor position will not be made until July. For 1990, the deficit in merchandise trade narrowed by 5.4 percent to $108.68 billion as record sales of American products overseas outpaced a rise in imports that was blamed in large part on a higher oil bill.

After posting a rare deficit of $913 million in investment earnings in 1989, this sector returned to a surplus of $7.5 billion in 1990. Receipts on Americans' overseas earnings rose slightly while foreigners' earnings in the United States fell, reflecting the slowdown in the U.S. economy. The surplus in the services category increased to $22.9 billion last year, up 11.7 percent from the previous year, boosted primarily by a record level of foreign tourists in the United States. A final category known as unilateral transfers, reflecting U.S. foreign aid, rose to $21.1 billion, up 43.5 percent from the previous year.

The Iowa City School Board passed a number of proposals at its meeting Tuesday night, including a $45-million-plus district budget.

roof improvement and maintenance projects at City High, West High, Southeast Junior High, Earnest Horn, Roosevelt, Hills, Horace Mann and Longfellow Elementaries.

The board approved the official district budget for the 1991-92 school year at a total of $45,405,307. This includes an instructional support levy of $2.6 million, to be funded by property taxes, state aid, and a 4.8 percent surtax on income. The property tax amount for school taxes will amount to $660 per person for the 1991-92 school year, a $19 decrease from last year.

In other business, the board devised a system to be used in choosing action team leaders for the strategic planning program. It was decided to accept all interested community members for positions on the action teams, as well as consider them eligible to act as leaders for the teams. The board moved to create a committee made up of two employees appointed by the Iowa City Education Agency, three district administrators, and three board members to choose the team leaders.

notified by April 2. The action teams begin deciding how to fulfill the strategic planning goals on April 10.

In other business, the board set a date of April 23 for deciding whether to consider including a bond issue to finance certain projects.

The board also approved the 1991-92 course of studies for the Iowa City Junior High Schools and summer school programs.

Debra Wretman, associate principal at Southeast Junior High, and Carol Bildstein, principal at Horace Mann Elementary, were presented with certificates of completion of the Leader 123 program, an improvement program for school administrators. Bildstein thanked the board for the opportunity to participate. She said, "We especially appreciate your continued support for educational development."

Jerry Palmer, school board treasurer, praised the board for its efficiency in protecting the taxpayer, in light of continuing growth in the community. "The board has been very responsible to the taxpayers of the district."

This group will review the action team applications and submit a report of their decisions to the board by March 26. Those applicants chosen to participate on action teams or serve as leaders will be

Cargo plane explodes in flames at JFK

Crew all right, airport closes for over 2 hours

By Pat Milton
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A cargo plane burst into flames during an aborted take-off Tuesday, forcing the shutdown of Kennedy International Airport for 2½ hours. The six-member crew escaped with only bumps and bruises, authorities said.

The problem occurred midway down the runway as Air Transport International Flight 102 was taking off for Brussels, Belgium, airport officials said.

"The plane was smoking," said Port Authority spokesman Mark Marchese. "It came to a stop and burst into flames."

The DC-8's landing gear, wheels and two engines were left strewn across the ground about 200 feet from the flaming fuselage. The wing tip on the right side was bent into the ground; deep black skid marks were clearly visible on the 11,100-foot runway.

The fire spread quickly through the craft's cargo, sending huge plumes of smoke through the top of the plane. Firefighters used foam and water to extinguish the blaze, which burned for more than four hours.

It was not immediately known how many flights were affected by the airport shutdown, but all incoming flights were diverted, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Fred Glassberg. Activity in the terminals seemed normal by early afternoon.

An incoming flight with 400 returning Persian Gulf soldiers was among the diverted planes, said another airport spokesman, Tom Middlemiss. The soldiers were stopping over on their way back to North Dakota.

Officials were able to open a single runway by 11:30 a.m.

Little Rock, Ark.-based Air Transport International said it would have no comment on the accident.

Georgia to do cocaine exposure study

By Robert Byrd
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — March of Dimes officials announced Tuesday the nation's first statewide study of cocaine exposure in newborns.

A recent survey of mothers with children in the neonatal intensive care unit at Atlanta's Grady Memorial Hospital found that 16 percent had used cocaine in the days preceding delivery.

Come October, new blood-testing technology will enable researchers to look at cocaine use among all of Georgia's newborns, using blood samples already taken for other medical tests.

"How widespread is cocaine use? How do we reach these women? We don't have good answers to these questions," said Dr. Paul Fernhoff, pediatrics professor at Emory University and the study chairman.

"This will give us very accurate data on the prevalence of cocaine in the newborn population," said national March of Dimes President Jennifer Howse.

Babies born in Georgia — and most other states — already have a small blood sample taken in the first two or three days of life to test for a variety of metabolic diseases.

In the new Georgia study, names will be removed from those samples before they are sent to a lab at the Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control for drug tests.

Initially, the testing will screen for cocaine; later, researchers hope to screen for maternal cigarette smoking and marijuana use, Fernhoff said.

Cocaine use by pregnant women has been linked to stillbirths, fetal abnormalities, birth defects, problems in mother-child bonding and learning disorders at school age, Howse said.

Cocaine babies also are more prone to low birth weight, the leading cause of birth defects and infant mortality.

Although the study will detect only babies whose mothers used cocaine in the three days or so before birth, researchers still hope the results will point toward a better understanding of the cocaine-birth problem.

Gen. Schwarzkopf visits liberated Kuwait

Kuwaitis line up to apply for exit visas

By John Pomfret
The Associated Press

KUWAIT CITY — Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf arrived in Kuwait City Tuesday and scooped up sand from a peaceful Persian Gulf beach in his first visit to the liberated emirate.

The general, who commanded allied forces in the gulf war, said the number of Iraqi dead, estimated in the tens of thousands, would probably never be known.

"Most of them are buried in mass graves in the desert," Schwarzkopf said in remarks to reporters on the beach.

Elsewhere in Kuwait, the U.S. ambassador helped open the country's first major port since Iraqi troops seized the emirate last Aug. 2. And thousands of Kuwaitis crowded a soccer stadium seeking permission to leave the country and the chaos brought on by the war.

British Royal Navy divers, meanwhile, found a number of bodies that had been bound and weighted so they would sink in the murky waters off Kuwait's coast, a British television report said Tuesday.

During his triumphant visit, Schwarzkopf ruled out a long-term U.S. ground troop presence in the region and said he hopes the cease-fire with Iraq holds so the war is truly over.

"As far as I'm concerned it's over. Saddam Hussein had better know it's over. If Saddam Hussein makes the mistake of starting it again then he's going to have a lot more trouble than he has on his hands in Iraq right now," Schwarzkopf said.

Walking on the Kuwait beach with Gen. Jaber al-Sabah, the commanding general of Kuwait's armed forces, Schwarzkopf stopped, bent over and filled two small "magic genie" bottles with sand.

"This is sand from the liberated beaches of Kuwait," Schwarzkopf said. "That's what this is and we're very proud to be able to do this. . . . This is something that I promised myself that I would do."

He said he planned to give one bottle to his children.

The beach played an important role in the allied victory in Kuwait, acting as a giant ruse U.S. strategists used to fool Saddam Hussein.

U.S. military officials believe Iraq thought the spearhead of the allied attack on Iraqi forces would come as an amphibious assault on Kuwait City. The assault never came.

"I am very happy to see that the city is not destroyed," Schwarzkopf said. "I am very happy to see that the bombing we did was against Iraqi targets. But most of all I'm just happy to see that the city is liberated and that it's back in the hands of Kuwait."

Not all Kuwaitis are so happy.

An official at the Ministry of Interior said more than 10,000 people have requested permission to leave the country temporarily. Many are disgusted by the government's slow progress in restoring basic necessities such as food, water and electricity.

"The government is simply incom-

Emergency meeting called to restore order in Serbia

By Mark J. Porubcansky
The Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The collective leadership of Yugoslavia met in emergency session Tuesday following an appeal by the defense minister to restore law and order in the Marxist republic of Serbia.

For a fourth day, anti-Communist protests convulsed Serbia. About 10,000 students demonstrated against the military crackdown Saturday that left two people dead and 120 injured. Students also demanded an end to Communist censorship of the local press.

The challenge to Serbia's government has brought to a head the political and ethnic strife pulling apart this fractious nation of six republics and two provinces. Serbia is the most populous republic.

The 24 million residents of Yugoslavia's various republics are being tugged at by pro-Western forces advocating more freedom in northern Croatia and Slovenia and by Communist authorities seeking to maintain their rule in Belgrade, the federal capital and seat of the powerful Serbian republic.

Borisav Jovic, Serbian head of the collective presidency and nominal armed forces commander, said the latest unrest has left security "endangered in various parts of the country."

SOVIET POLITICS

Stalin's ghost

With his most recent column, "A warning of danger to Yeltsin," William Safire establishes himself as a follower of the "history-repeats-itself school." Safire believes that the Soviet Union today is much like the Soviet Union of 1934. He compares the reform-minded Boris Yeltsin to the Leningrad mayor, Sergei Kirov. Kirov's popularity was seen as a threat to Stalin's rule and the Leningrad Bolshevik was assassinated. Safire claims that in much the same way, Yeltsin may meet the same fate.

True, Yeltsin, like Kirov, has his own following and is seen as a rival to the Soviet leadership. But to view history in this fashion undermines one's ability to interpret the present and relate it to the entire historical framework. An endless succession of repeated events is not history — it is redundancy. Safire makes this mistake.

Gorbachev's hopes for a revolution from above and reform in Soviet society have been dashed.

Safire's comparison of Yeltsin to Kirov is not the problem; it is his implication of the similarities of 1991 and 1934 that demands scrutiny. To justify the comparison of the two, Safire must relate the Gorbachev era to the Stalinist era — two very different epochs of Soviet history. Proving Safire's judgmental errors requires only a contrast of the two eras.

Safire writes that, as in 1934, "famine again stalks the Soviet Union." No doubt the long queues and supply shortages are plaguing Soviet society, but they pale in comparison to the events of 1934. Perestroika and glasnost are nice ideas, but they are not edible. The 500,000 Muscovites who rallied outside the Kremlin walls went on their tables, not ideas. Gorbachev's hopes for a revolution from above and reform in Soviet society have been dashed. His move to the right has been a disappointment to the West and has resulted in a transfer of power to more conservative elements in Soviet politics. The weight of Stalinism remains a heavy burden to the Soviet system. The continuing unrest in the Soviet republics also threatens the existence of the Soviet federation.

In 1934 things were much different. Soviet society was bent to the cult of personality of Joseph Stalin. Refusal to cooperate with the government, especially by "unruly kulaks," was handled Stalin-style. Deportation, arrest and murder were instruments of domestic policy. The famine of 1934 resulted in the deaths of millions of Ukrainians under the banner of collectivization. This mass extermination of the peasantry was a "necessary" component of Stalin's wider industrialization plans to move the Soviet Union into the 20th Century. The feared NKVD, forerunner of the KGB, served as the eyes and ears of the Georgian dictator. Joseph Stalin alone was in control.

Yeltsin and Kirov may be similar in their historical roles, but their eras are entirely different. Comparing the two periods, however, is a different matter. Gorbachev is more like Krushchev; he has opened his perestroika can of worms and is now attempting to shut it. Gorbachev's weak position can in no way be termed a dictatorship. The problems of Soviet society today are a direct result of Stalinism — not a repeat of them. If, as Safire fears, Yeltsin is assassinated, it will be at the hands of a Stalinist system that still plagues the Soviet Union.

A chance to rearrange the pieces

Secretary Baker is flying around the Middle East looking for peace. Purveyors of conventional wisdom, entirely unembarrassed for having gotten the gulf war so spectacularly wrong, have new advice for him: Now that the war is over, a solution to the Palestinian problem is of particular urgency to the United States. They offer reasons:

Because we owe it to our Arab coalition partners. Excuse me, but we saved them. If there are debts to be paid, one would think the United States should be collecting. The Saudis and the Kuwaitis, for example, could show their gratitude for our saving their skins by taking an accommodating step or two toward Israel, say, calling off their 40-year economic boycott and ending their state of belligerency with the Jewish state.

To shore up American standing in the Arab world. Remember Adm. Crowe's warning that we would "lose ground in the Arab world" if we bashed up Arab Iraq? On the contrary, from Cairo to Damascus to Kuwait, the vast majority of Arabs applaud the United States for defeating Saddam. America's credibility in the Arab world has never been higher.

Because the Palestinian question is the root cause of all instability in the Middle East. The mother of Middle East cliches, now gone the way of the Republican Guard. We have just witnessed the greatest Middle East war since World War II, and it had nothing to do with the Palestinian issue. As Crown Prince Hassan of Jordan, hardly unsympathetic to Saddam, said, "If you believe Iraq invaded Kuwait for the sake of the Palestinians, then you can believe anything." On the contrary, the gulf war showed that the Arab world, chronically unstable, is torn by innumerable bitter divisions — Shia vs. Sunni, fundamentalist vs. secular, oil-rich vs. oil-poor — that predate and will long post-date the Arab-Israeli dispute.

In fact, Arab-Israeli peace is no more or less urgent today than it was 12 months ago. Nonetheless, Secretary Baker is right to go to the Middle East now. Not because of urgency, but because of opportunity. The immediate post-war period, when all the broken china is still on the floor, offers an unparalleled opportunity for rearranging the pieces.

In the past, radicals such as Saddam and Arafat could exercise a veto over peace by intimidating potential moderates such as Saudi Arabia. Well, this time they called a pan-Arab uprising and nobody came. The vaunted Arab "street" proved impotent. With the radicals routed, potential moderates have a freedom of action on the Israel question that they have never had before.

Moreover, the area's chief radical and chief obstacle to peace, Arafat's PLO, has been wholly discredited. Not just in the eyes of the Americans and Israelis but, where it counts, in the eyes of the Arabs. The Saudi ambassador to the United States now refers to Arafat as a "clown." Two weeks before the end of the war, foreign ministers of eight Arab countries allied with the United States met in Cairo to outline a five-point post-war security plan. The Palestinian section pointedly omitted even a reference to the PLO. Said an Egyptian official to the Washington Post, "As far as we are concerned, Arafat is finished."

The single greatest mistake of American Middle East diplomacy in the last decade was saving Arafat and the PLO from oblivion in Beirut in 1982. We must not make that mistake again. The Arabs that count — Egyptian, Saudi, Syrian — certainly hope we don't. The Saudis are already talking about backing an alternative indigenous Palestinian leadership on the West Bank. If they follow through on this idea, peace has a chance.

Why? Because West Bankers, who above all want an end to occupation, might be prepared for a reasonable compromise with the Israelis. Unlike Arafat and his cronies comfortably ensconced in Tunis and prepared to fight Israel to the last West Banker, West Bankers might settle for something less than the maximalist demands of the PLO.

Yet they have been afraid to step forward. They fear assassination by the PLO. And they fear being seen as Israeli stooges if they come forward without the PLO umbrella. Now, however, Saudi and Egyptian support would give elected West Bankers the legitimacy they need to represent the Palestinians in negotiations with the Israelis.

Will the Palestinians in the territories take advantage of the fluidity of the post-war moment and step forward with a moderate leadership of their own? "One cannot but be astonished at the consistency with which the Palestinian leadership has chosen the wrong side," writes historian Bernard Lewis. "Wrong in both senses — in that it was the losing side, but also in a moral sense, in that it was the cause of an odious tyranny whose defeat was a victory not only for its adversaries, but also for humanity. In World War II they chose the Axis; in the Cold War, the Soviets; and now Saddam."

And now, after Saddam, how will they choose? First signals are not encouraging. Some West Bankers have already said they will boycott Baker when he comes to Israel because Baker won't talk with the PLO. As Abba Eban once said, the Palestinians never miss an opportunity to miss an opportunity. This could be their last one.

Charles Krauthammer's syndicated column appears Wednesdays on the Viewpoints page. (c) 1991 Washington Post Writers Group.

Gulf war victory does not guarantee peace in Middle East

The war is over.

Soldiers are coming home and some of the yellow ribbons are being taken from trees. The ribbons are a thing of the past — at least for a while. The war ended the way the allies wanted; that is, with a free Kuwait and an unpopular Saddam Hussein. Saddam seems to have lost the firm grip he once had on Iraq. But the outcome of the military intervention will affect all the countries in the region, on either side of the conflict, for years to come. The craters left by bomb explosions in Baghdad and the burning oil wells in Kuwait may well ignite further conflicts — conflicts that will stem from issues this one has left unresolved.

Perhaps of most immediate concern is the Palestinian issue. Israel emerged from the war strong and intact. The Israelis wisely decided not to retaliate after the Scud attacks on Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, leaving Saddam as the sole aggressor. Consequently, the militarily strong yet ideologically feeble alliance against Saddam remained intact for the duration of the war. But with the Iraqi giant now a smaller foe, Syria, Iran and Saudi Arabia appear to have gained more than Israel in geopolitical terms. The Bush administration, by sending Baker to the Middle East earlier this week, is trying to assess how much pressure the Arab countries want to exert on Israel in hoping to find a satisfactory solution to the Palestinian problem. And they are not alone. The Soviet Union and other Western European nations are also insisting on a quick settlement.

On the other hand, the Palestinians made a mistake they may regret for a long time. By backing Saddam's invasion of Kuwait and believing in his promises of an independent Palestinian state, they lost much of the support they had gained during the last three decades among other Arab nations. Kuwait will not aid Palestinians in their quest for statehood. Furthermore, many Palestinians are being arrested in Kuwait. The Kuwaitis are deporting people they believe collaborated with the Iraqi invaders, and they are expelling immigrants to aid their damaged economy. Most of the immigrants are Palestinians who before August worked in Kuwait as part of the cheap labor force. The Saudis, long-time supporters of the Palestine Liberation Organization before the war, are now annoyed — to say the least — by the PLO's support of Saddam. Undoubtedly, Saudi Arabia will be very reserved in its demands for a Palestinian state.

The Palestinians may find their biggest supporters in Syria, Saddam's most powerful enemy since the end of the Iran-Iraq war. Syria has served as a refuge for thousands of Palestinians and intervened militarily in Lebanon, taking action against Israel. The Syrians will most likely continue to support a resolution to the situations in the occupied territories that is favorable to the Palestinians, though not as enthusiastically as before the war.

Egypt and Iran seem less concerned about the situation in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip than other Arab countries. Iranians seem more concerned with their post-war role in the Middle East; they are actively attempting to improve relations with the West and help Iraqi Shiites get to power, a move that would put Muslim fundamentalists in control of a large percentage of Middle East oil reserves.

Until last week, Iran was officially the only neutral Middle East country with regards to the gulf war. But its announced backing of the Shiite rebels in Iraq changes the post-war political climate. Furthermore, Egypt, the only Arab country that has signed a peace treaty with Israel (the Carter-Begin-Sadat accord in 1977), is making attempts to recover from an ailing economy and strengthen its ties with the U.S. and Europe. President Mubarak's concern for the Palestinian issue has taken a backseat to these domestic Egyptian concerns.

Nonetheless, it is important to note that these prerogatives are those of governments; the sentiments of the citizens are not entirely reflective. None of the Arab countries is a role model of democracy. Their governments range from monarchies in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Jordan to a fundamentalist religious regime in Iran to dictatorships in Iraq and Syria. Though little room is left for public expression in any Middle Eastern country, support for Iraq and for Saddam Hussein was widespread in the streets of many Arabic cities.

Jordan's King Hussein was the most prominent leader to publicly relent under pressure from his subjects. From the beginning, King Hussein, though previously an ally of Saddam, professed neutrality in the gulf confrontation. By mid-February, however, he spoke out against the war, calling it a war "against all Arabs and Muslims." He added that the "real purpose" of the war was to destroy Iraq and rearrange the area to put its resources under foreign hegemony. His attitude merely reflected the popular opinion in Jordan, which is almost uniformly pro-Saddam. Increasing support for Saddam and terrorist attacks on Western targets in Amman prompted King Hussein to reject the foreign military intervention. With the war over, King Hussein, a long-time friend of Washington, will have to work hard to regain the trust of the White House. Already, the U.S. has eliminated a $55 million Jordanian aid package. King Hussein's quickest way out is admitting he was wrong in backing Saddam. To do otherwise will mean disaster for his already ruined economy.

In Saudi Arabia, virtually no one is loyal to Saddam. During the war, however, many Saudis questioned the way the war was being conducted, wondered about U.S., British and French justifications for the war and worried about the consequences the outcome would have in Saudi Arabia. Others thought that the Western powers were testing weapons on Arabs or were trying to weaken all Arab nations and establish Israel as the region's military power. A long-term American presence is also one of the Saudis' and Kuwaitis' biggest concerns. They believe other Arab countries may blame Saudi Arabia and Kuwait for the new balance of power in the region. Religious fundamentalists in Saudi Arabia want the troops out as soon as possible. Officials in the Saudi monarchy fear that the fundamentalists' fierce opposition could bring a backlash to an Iran-like rule in the near future.

The reaction of the people of the Maghreb countries (Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia) also came as an unpleasant surprise to the anti-Saddam alliance. Pro-Iraqi sentiment has been so strong in these nations that the governments of each of these nations feared for their own security.

In Algeria, the Islamic Salvation Front massed 400,000 people in a rally against French and American leaders, and a few days later French offices were bombed in terrorist attacks. In light of these events, Algeria's president Chadli Bendjedid reversed his initial rejection of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait with a proclamation stating Algeria's brotherly ties with Iraq.

Tunisia's leader, Zine al-Abidine Ben Ali, though joining in the condemnation of Saddam's actions, protested against the "destruction of Iraq" by Western forces. And Morocco's King Hassan II, grateful for Saudi aid in his fight against the Polisario rebels in the Western Sahara, sent 1,300 troops to the anti-Saddam coalition. At the same time, however, he allowed pro-Iraq demonstrations that attracted up to 300,000 protesters.

Egypt has proved to be the exception. During the Iran-Iraq war, 1.5 million Egyptians worked in Iraq, sending more than $1 billion a year back to their country. When the war ended, the Egyptian immigrants faced harsh labor competition from returning Iraqi soldiers. Many were mistreated and some even died under questionable circumstances. This caused great resentment of Saddam to build in Egypt. Furthermore, many Egyptians are reluctant to call themselves Arabs; they feel that their 5,000-year-old civilization sets them far apart from other Arab cultures. As a result, Egyptians have generally supported President Mubarak's opposition to Saddam since the beginning.

The greatest fear of all Arab rulers, with the exception of Muslim-extremist Iran, is that the humiliation of a Muslim leader (Saddam) at the hands of the "infidels" (the coalition troops) may encourage religious fundamentalists to promote Islamic nationalism in much stronger ways.

The soldiers may be coming back home, but the smell of war still lingers in the Middle East.

Good luck with the girlfriend, Jim

To the Editor:
I am writing in opposition to the opinion piece entitled "Choice arguments fail scrutiny" [Mar. 5]. For author Jim Rogers, I will make this as simple as I can, sparing him the seemingly endless pseudo-intellectual posturing which he so unkindly did not spare DI readers. As males, Jim, you and I will never have to decide whether or not to have an abortion. Therefore, for you or I to extend a political will and determine for women the answer to a very personal quandary we could never understand would be entirely inappropriate. Your response to this "silly" argument (which, by the way, is no more silly than beginning a treatise on abortion with a quote from Dr. Seuss) includes the statement "... in usual cases of justice we covet the advice of the impartial ...". This implies that society should respect the opinion of men on all women's issues due to a perceived inherent impartiality. But if you expect women facing any kind of private decision to "covet" your advice in all of its holier-than-thou, self-righteous glory just because you are male, then good luck in finding a girlfriend.

Sorry, but it really is not that simple

To the Editor:
Anyone who read Jim Rogers' column of March 5 and does not agree with his abortion views should resist the guilt trip on which Mr. Rogers attempted to send us. Mr. Rogers insists that "men and women of conscience" would agree that abortion is unjust. In other words, anyone who disagrees is not a person of conscience. When someone frames his argument in these terms, the intolerance that individual has for dissent becomes quite clear. Furthermore, because of this uncompromising attitude, Mr. Rogers proposes simple, uncompromising solutions. The reader should always be wary of those who attempt to solve complex problems in this way.

matter how carefully placed these devices are and despite the fact that man clearly does not want to kill. Is he guilty of homicide? After all, these innocent men, women and children are incapable of defending themselves. According to Mr. Rogers' theory, this must be homicide. The entire theme of his essay describes abortion as homicide because innocent human beings die. Can there not be another view? One which recognizes that the man faced with the task of dropping bombs and the woman faced with an unwanted pregnancy are both moved to act by forces out of their control?

Mr. Rogers argument is logical only if our society should decide to treat the man in the airplane in the same way he wants us to treat those who choose abortion, by considering them criminals. Fortunately, our legal system makes allowances in both of these situations. This is entirely consistent.

Most of us are not big fans of war or abortion. However, to criminalize either act is to deny that we are complex beings with complex problems. Unfortunately, Mr. Rogers' view is representative of what I feel is a disturbing trend in our society. Rather than critically address the source of serious problems such as war and abortion, we react to their consequences in ways that are counterproductive. To those who feel abortion can never be justified, even when some wars can be, I respect the sincerity of your views. Will the day ever come when you respect the sincerity of mine?

Support for the anti-abortion side

To the Editor:
Jim Rogers is right: "Strip away the mask ... and we see innocents under attack."

In Verdi's opera, "Il Trovatore," the gypsy steals the manipulative count's son and flings him into the fire. Or so she thinks. She turns around. She sees the count's son lying safely on the ground. She looks for her own son. She looks at the fire. She realizes that she threw her own son into the fire.

When will we turn around? When will we realize that with abortion, it's not the count's son, not male aggression, but innocent babies that we are throwing into the fire? And when will we have the courage to stop it?

Jim Rogers is to be congratulated for having sorted through the melange of lies, half-truths and euphemisms that abortion advocates use to rationalize profiteering from desperate women and killing their babies.

Nation is beginning to understand abortion truth

To the Editor:

Jim Rogers column, "The case against abortion," was excellent. I myself am pro-life, and I have often tabulated in my mind the many arguments against abortion. But Mr. Rogers' column was the best summation of the most crucial arguments I have seen in a very long time. His examples of legal situations paralleling abortion were very insightful and effectively showed the weakness of pro-choice arguments. The column shows abortion for what it is — the violent killing of human life, killing that simply cannot be morally or legally justified unless the mother's life is in danger.

Seeing as the rest of the nation is slowly but surely turning to this truth, it's good to see that Iowa City is doing its fair share. Imagine — George Bush, David Souter, Utah, and now The Daily Iowan! Roe v. Wade is in more jeopardy than I thought.

Caroline Mulrooney
Iowa City

To the Editor:

The social acceptability of abortion makes a woman who does not accept the new life in her feel that the struggle is pointless. The joy she feels in doing the right thing is taken away from her by those who insist that it is better to do the convenient thing.

Instead of offering women real help with crisis pregnancy, our society brushes them off with abortion and claims to do them a service.

Beth Knaack
Iowa City

If Rogers were consistent, he'd oppose Pill, IUD as well

To the Editor:

I found very interesting Jim Rogers' attempt to justify his position against abortion by claiming impartiality because of his sex. He claims: "in usual cases of justice we covet the advice of the impartial ...". The very fact that men can't get pregnant and therefore don't have such a personal stake in the decision should qualify them to participate in the discussion." His conviction that men ought to decide what happens to a woman's body is further emphasized by his citation of only male "authorities" on both sides of the issue throughout the column (five men — including Dr. Seuss — and no women). Apparently Mr. Rogers believes that women should be denied the right to participate in the discussion of this issue because they lack masculine objectivity in deciding what happens to their own bodies.

On another point, if Rogers wants to give the fetus (more correctly called the embryo for the first eight weeks after conception) "the benefit of the doubt" from the moment of conception by according it legal status as a human being, then he should be aware that oral contraceptives and intrauterine devices would have to be legally banned. The Pill and the IUD do not prevent the fertilization of the ovum but rather they prevent the attachment of the fertilized egg to the lining of the uterus.

I imagine that Rogers would only be too willing to deny women the choice of using these methods of protecting their bodies against unwanted pregnancies as well.

Pickers outside the New York Daily News celebrate after an announcement that agreements have been reached with all nine striking Daily News

News unions celebrate victory

By Beth J. Harpaz
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Daily News workers popped champagne corks and cheered four months of worker solidarity Tuesday after the last striking union reached an agreement with the newspaper's likely buyer.

"Union! Union!" striking workers chanted as British publisher Robert Maxwell announced a final deal was in place to clear the way for him to purchase the 71-year-old tabloid from the Chicago-based Tribune Co.

Employees circulated a champagne bottle, hugged and shook hands as Maxwell spoke.

Maxwell wore a blue Daily News baseball cap and a red bow tie as he announced the deals Tuesday at the headquarters of Macmillan publishing house, part of Maxwell's publishing empire.

He called the agreement a "historical, unprecedented and necessary deal."

The strike by Daily News employees was seen as a major showdown for the future of unions around the country, mostly because replacement workers were hired to help management produce the paper.

"We're not Eastern, we're not Greyhound. We showed them they couldn't do that to us in New York," said Jerry Capeci, a union leader and the News' organized crime reporter. "The Tribune Co. is back on its way out of town."

Labor unions around the city and the nation had rallied to support the News' nine striking unions, helping cut the newspaper's circulation and advertising.

Leaders of outside unions joined workers from the Daily News' nine unions in celebrating. Hospital workers union president Dennis Rivera, who helped the News unions map strategy, was among the revelers.

Capeci and other union members blasted the Tribune Co.

"What we just saw is the final proof that the Tribune Co. was never interested in dealing with the unions," said News reporter Tom Robbins.

Robbins said he thought the strike, which began Oct. 25 and was marked by violence, "was worth it."

On the picket line outside the News, workers holding picket signs sipped champagne from paper cups. Inside, replacement workers received the word that their jobs were coming to an end.

Earlier, replacement workers gathered around television sets in the seventh floor newsroom and listened to word of the agreement.

 Defeating NCAA champion UNLV and the rest of the favorites can rest easy.
 Ball State's bullies are safely stashed away in the National Invitation Tournament where they can do no damage to the championship aspirations of the NCAA tournament heavyweights.
 Ball State has terrorized the top seeds in the last two NAAs, wiping out Pitt two years ago then submarining Oregon State and Louisville last March to reach the round of 16 before losing by just two points to UNLV.
 The Cardinals went 21-9 this season and seemed headed back to the NCAA tournament before losing by one point to Toledo in the Mid-American Conference semifinals. That left the conference's NCAA berth to Eastern Michigan and sent Ball State to the NIT, which was fine with coach Dick Hunsaker.

 Ball State opens the NIT tonight at Cincinnati, one of six games on the schedule. In the others, James Madison plays at Providence, Bowling Green is at Wisconsin, Michigan plays at Colorado, Southern Illinois is at Boise State and Houston plays at Stanford.
 The tournament continues Thursday with Fairleigh Dickinson at Siena, Fordham at South Florida, Coppin State at Southwest Missouri State, Alabama-Birmingham at Memphis State, Rice at Arkansas State and Tulsa at Oklahoma.
 The opening round concludes Friday with Furman at West Virginia, George Washington at South Carolina, La Salle at Massachusetts and Butler at Wyoming.
 Second round games are scheduled for next Monday and Tuesday with the third round Wednesday and Thursday. The tournament moves to New York's Madison Square Garden for the semifinals Monday, March 25 and the championship Wednesday March 27.

Hawks begin quest for finals

By Brian Gaul
 The Daily Iowan
 Just like every other team in this year's NCAA women's basketball tournament field, the 23rd-ranked Hawkeyes know only two things are certain when they open postseason play tonight.
 If they win tonight's game, they will move one step closer to the Final Four in New Orleans, La., on March 30-31.
 If they lose, their season will come to an end.
 That situation would put pressure on any team, especially one like Iowa, which plays only one senior and six freshman.
 But Iowa point guard Stephanie Schueler, who has been to four NCAA tournaments in her four-year career, has a simple word of advice for her teammates:
 Relax.
 "The main thing we have to remember is to treat it just as another game," said the senior from Sioux Falls, S.D. "Last year (when a favored Iowa team lost to Vanderbilt in the first round), we really didn't execute our offense very well because we were too keyed-up. We just need to relax and have fun."
 The Hawkeyes, seeded sixth in the West Regional, open NCAA tournament play tonight against 11th-seeded Montana in Missoula, Mont. Game time is 8:30 CDT p.m.
 The Lady Griz, 24-3 overall, were the champions of the Big Sky Conference with a 16-0 record. Iowa, 20-8 overall, finished in a second-place tie with a 13-5 mark.

 Both teams sparked in the latter part of the season. Iowa won 11 of its last 12 games while the Lady Griz won their last 19, the longest current streak in the nation.
 Montana coach Robin Selvig's team is led by preseason all-American Shannon Cate, who averages 21.9 points and 9.3 rebounds per game. The 6-foot-1 junior forward is Montana's all-time leading scorer.
 "She was certainly a preseason all-American last year and from her numbers, she's also going to be one this year," Stringer said.
 Senior guard Marti Kinzler is second on the team in both scoring (10.7) and rebounding (6.8). Kinzler, at 5-11, could pose some matchup problems for Iowa's guards. The Hawkeyes' tallest guard is 5-9 LaTonya Tate.
 The game will pit two of the winningest coaches in the country against one another. Stringer is third on the active list (435-102, 810), and Selvig is sixth (310-75, 805).
 "He seemed like a very nice gentleman," Stringer said of Selvig, whom she met when they both served on an all-American selection committee. "I'm very familiar with the success that he has had. He is probably one of the best kept secrets in the coaching profession."
 Stringer said junior forward Trisha Waugh is expected to play in tonight's game after missing Saturday's game with a shoulder problem.

Waugh, who averages 9.9 points and 6.4 rebounds, has separated her shoulder several times in the past two weeks, the last time in the final moments of Thursday's victory over Northwestern.
 "We are taking Trish in anticipation that she will be able to play," Stringer said. "It was tough trying to play without her."
 The Hawkeyes will be without three players who didn't travel with the team when it flew to Montana Monday.
 Redshirt freshman Antonia Macklin and two injured players — sophomore Molly Tideback and senior Felicia Hall — stayed home to avoid missing one week of classes. Both Tideback and Hall are out for the rest of the season.
 The winner of tonight's game advances to second-round action against 12th-ranked and third-seeded Washington in Seattle, Wash., Saturday night.
 Stringer said she wants her team, especially her younger players, to learn from the tournament experience. But she said that doesn't mean Iowa will be making a quick exit from the 48-team field.
 "It has to be a great experience for the freshmen," the Iowa coach said. "I want them, since this is their first experience, not to be satisfied with going to the dance. We want to open up the floor and do a couple of numbers."

LSU All-American Shaquille O'Neal has been given clearance for the NAAs after fracturing a leg in the SEC tournament.

Shaq, Jennings Midwest's big names

Big Ten-tough Iowa looks to crash party

By Mike Nadel
 The Associated Press
 MINNEAPOLIS — In LSU's 7-foot-1 Shaquille O'Neal and East Tennessee State's 5-foot-7 Keith Jennings, the Midwest Regional will feature the nation's best big man and best little man.
 Jennings, a third-team All-American guard, is shooting 60.6 percent from the field and an incredible 60.4 percent from 3-point range.
 O'Neal and Jennings are the two marquee players who will try to thrill the 75,000 or more fans expected at the Metrodome for the NCAA Midwest Regional, which begins Thursday and concludes Saturday.
 O'Neal, returning from a hairline fracture in his left leg, leads No. 22 LSU (20-9) against Connecticut (18-10) at 7:10 p.m. while Jennings and the 17th-ranked Buccaneers (28-4) meet Iowa (20-10) at 2:05 p.m.
 Thursday's other first-round games pit No. 6 Duke (26-7) against Northeast Louisiana (25-7) and No. 11 Nebraska (26-7) against Xavier of Ohio (21-9).
 LSU coach Dale Brown said the Tigers had little chance of advancing without O'Neal, who is averaging 27.7 points, 14.6 rebounds and 5.0 blocks. With O'Neal, however, no backboard — and no opponent — is safe.

 "He's the top-rated player in college," said Brown's assistant, Craig Carse. "Anytime you take the best away from something, it's physical, mental, emotional, social. He's the best. And it's hard to replace the best."
 The Tigers lost twice without O'Neal, including a 92-76 defeat to Auburn in the first round of the SEC tournament.
 "I don't remember us facing a guy who averages 27.7 points, almost 15 rebounds and had (135) blocked shots," Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun said. "He can change the complexion of a game completely. We'll try to find ways to attack him."
 Any game could be O'Neal's last for the Tigers. Most pro scouts say that if he leaves LSU after his sophomore year, he would be the NBA's No. 1 draft choice.
 "I think what people have to realize is that the rumors about Shaquille isn't the news," Brown said. "The news is the NCAA tournament."

 Jennings is a senior, so he will certainly be NBA bound after this season. Despite his tiny frame, he is a big-time player.
 "He is by far the best little man in the country," said Tom Jorgensen, a scout for the Denver Nuggets. "The success of ETSU is almost entirely to the credit of Mister Jennings."
 Jorgensen wasn't just being polite. Jennings has been called Mister since he was 6 years old and, based on his play, it's obvious that he deserves such respect.
 "He's outstanding," Iowa coach Tom Davis said. "He's so good at so many things. His shooting percentage and assist totals are impressive."
 Jennings is averaging 20.3 points and 9.0 assists but his accuracy is the most eye-popping part of his game. Unless he goes cold during the NAAs, he will become the first player ever to top 60 percent both overall and from 3-point range. In addition, he is shooting 89.5 percent from the line.
 "I'm sure I'll look back on it and realize what I've done," Jennings said, "but right now I'm just ready to play in this tournament."

 Even though the Buccaneers have been ranked all season, they were only the 10th seed in the region.
 "Now we really have something to prove," ETSU's Marty Story said.
 Meanwhile, Iowa, which struggled much of the season, is seeded seventh. That sign of respect probably has more to do with the perceived strength of the teams' conferences; Iowa finished fifth in the rugged Big Ten while East Tennessee State swept through the Southern Conference tourney.

NIT

Eight of the 32 NIT teams played in the NCAA tournament a year ago. None, however, enjoyed the success of Ball State. There was a one-point win over Oregon State followed by a two-point decision over Louisville. That thrust the Cardinals in against UNLV, an apparent mismatch in which the Runnin' Rebels barely survived, 69-67.
Hunsaker knew the danger of living off last year's success, especially with a team that lost nine seniors from that squad. "Last year's success will be unmatched," he said before the season. "I don't want to compare and live in the past."

Two players from that team are Ball State's keys — Chandler Thompson and Emanuel Cross, both averaging better than 15 points per game.
Ball State was the most successful of the eight NIT teams who played in last year's NCAA tournament. Except for Oklahoma, the others — Houston, Providence, South Florida, Coppin State, Southwest Missouri State and Alabama-Birmingham — were first round losers. Oklahoma made it to the second round before being eliminated.

Providence, 17-12, and Houston, 18-10, were among the NIT teams prominently mentioned for potential NCAA bids but left out of the 64-team field. Hunsaker thought Cincinnati, 17-11, was in the same situation.

"I thought they were a tournament team," Hunsaker said. "They're not only an outstanding team, but at home, they're a great team."
Cincinnati is led by seniors Louis Banks, Levertis Robinson and Keith Starks and junior Herb Jones.

Sportsbriefs

Ayers, 34, led the Buckeyes to a 25-3 record entering the NCAA tournament. Ohio State shared the conference title with Indiana at 15-3, the first Big Ten title for the Buckeyes since 1971.
In balloting by the conference's coaches, Ayers received seven of 10 first-place votes. Illinois' Lou Henson had two first-place votes, and the remaining one was cast for Tom Davis of Iowa.

Iowa has 16 returning starters, including quarterback Matt Rodgers, who threw for 2,228 yards and 15 touchdowns in 1990. Rodgers, who also ran for nine scores, shared conference Offensive Player of the Year honors with Bell and Michigan tailback Jon Vaughn. John Derby, a second-team all-conference linebacker, spearheads the Hawkeye defense.
Iowa finished last season with an 8-4 record (6-2 in the Big Ten), before bowing to Washington in the Rose Bowl, 46-34. As a result, Fry was named Big Ten Coach of the Year.

Orioles pitcher Jim Palmer signs autographs after his first outing of his comeback spring training on Monday. The 45-year-old gave up five hits in two innings and quit the next day.

Hurt Palmer ends comeback

The Associated Press

SARASOTA, Fla. — A day after his first appearance in seven years, Jim Palmer retired again.

The 45-year-old Hall of Famer abandoned his comeback attempt Tuesday, citing the hamstring injury he aggravated before Monday's exhibition game against the Boston Red Sox.

"I talked to Frank Robinson this morning," the three-time Cy Young Award winner said. "He said, 'Are you sure?' I said, 'I'm not, but my leg is.'"

Palmer was pounded by the Red Sox, giving up five hits and two runs in two innings. He threw 38 pitches — none over 75 mph. And of 19 strikes, Boston batters swung and missed only once.

"It's sad, because you're rooting for it to materialize," Baltimore general manager Roland Hemond said. "It's still a positive thing. He showed our young players what a career means to a great player."

Palmer had been bothered by hamstring soreness since he first began working out at the University of Miami in December, but he apparently tore it while warming up for his exhibition debut. He said then that if he was still hobbled Tuesday, he would give up his comeback attempt.

Palmer, who was trying to become the first Hall of Famer to return to the majors, packed up and left the club's Twin Lakes Park training facility to spend the next few days recuperating at his Key Biscayne apartment.

"I appreciate the Orioles giving me the chance to do this," Palmer said. "The players have been terrific. It has been a very pleasant experience."

Palmer was 268-152 in a 19-year career that ended when Baltimore released him in May 1984.

"He looked like the same Jim Palmer I faced in 1984," said

Boston's Wade Boggs. Palmer was 0-3 with a 9.17 ERA when he was released.

The Orioles invited Palmer to camp after sending a scout to watch him pitch in Miami. He reported on Feb. 23 and took part in all phases of the club's spring training regimen.

Palmer said Monday that the comeback had lost a lot of its personal appeal, but said he was staying with it because he felt he owed it to all the people who had supported the effort.

On Tuesday he said that even though the comeback failed, it was a positive experience because the friendships he made and the knowledge he gained will help him as a television commentator.

"I respect his decision," Robinson said. "He knows better than anyone else what he is capable of doing and what he isn't. I would have liked to see him succeed. He was fighting some big odds."

Phillies outfielder Lenny Dykstra testified in a Mississippi court Tuesday as a federal witness against a local gambler.

Dykstra in court: 'Lost big stakes'

By Frank Fisher
The Associated Press

OXFORD, Miss. — Lenny Dykstra portrayed himself Tuesday as an amateur poker player who lost some big-stakes hands and ended up owing $78,000 to a man charged with running an illegal gambling establishment.

The Philadelphia Phillies outfielder took time out from spring training to testify for approximately 45 minutes in U.S. District Court in the trial of Herbert Kelso of Ridgeland, Miss.

The government contends that Kelso ran a betting parlor in Indianola, Miss. Testifying for the government, Dykstra admitted that in February of 1990 he wrote two checks — one for $29,000 and the other for $21,000 — to cover his losses while playing poker after the 1988, 1989 and 1990 seasons in Indianola and Jackson.

"I just lost some money," Dykstra said in court. "It didn't matter to me how he wanted me to make the check out to him. If he wanted cash, I would have made it out for cash."

Dykstra, who played for the Jackson Mets in 1984 and lived in Mississippi until a year ago, is not charged with any criminal wrongdoing.

Rich Levin, a spokesman for the commissioner's office, would neither confirm nor deny baseball was investigating Dykstra.

Dykstra testified that he played cards only once at the alleged Indianola casino, but often at Kelso's lake-front condominium in Ridgeland.

He said he wrote the two 1990 checks with the understanding that they wouldn't be cashed until summer because the then-New York Met was short of cash.

"I didn't want them cashed at that time," he said.

However, Kelso tried to cash the one for $29,000, but couldn't because Dykstra had put a "stop payment" on it, he testified. The other check for $21,000 — which was undated — was never cashed by Kelso, the defense said.

According to Kelso's testimony, Dykstra asked to be included in Kelso's poker games in Richland during the winter of 1989 and during that time accumulated a $21,000 debt.

Kelso said Dykstra asked him to honor his bets up to a $50,000 credit line and this is where the additional $29,000 debt came from.

The defendant denied telling Dykstra to make out two checks. The only forms of legal gambling in Mississippi are aboard cruise ships and river boats. Other gambling is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $500.

Dawson to 'play till he's 40'

The Associated Press

MESA, Ariz. — All-Star outfielder Andre Dawson says he won't retire next year after all and plans to play four more seasons with the Chicago Cubs.

"The way I feel now, I'll play until I'm 40," the 36-year-old Dawson said in a surprise announcement Monday at the Cubs' spring training grounds.

"The only way I'd change my mind again is if my legs don't make it," he said. "Right now, everything is great physically and mentally."

General manager Jim Frey seemed pleased with Dawson's change of mind.

"Hawk's one of those types who can do what he says. If he says he'll play till he's 40, he probably will," Frey said.

Dawson said his decision was partly based on the club's rebuilding, including the free-agent signings of George Bell, Danny Jackson and Dave Smith.

"It meant a lot when they got those guys," said Dawson, who joined the Cubs as a free agent himself in 1987.

Since then, he has averaged 30 homers a season, for a total of 346. Dawson overcame major knee surgery last season and hit .310 with 27 homers and 100 RBI.

Griffey Sr. likes Jr.'s work habits

By Jim Cour
The Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — Ken Griffey Sr. has a piece of advice for his 21-year-old son and Seattle Mariner teammate, Ken Jr.

"The most important thing for him is to do his job out on the field," Griffey Sr. said. "That's where all the popularity and everything else comes from."

Signed by the Mariners as a free agent last Aug. 29 after being released by Cincinnati, the 40-year-old Griffey earned a new contract with Seattle by hitting .377 in 21 games.

The Griffey family became the first father-son combination to play together on the same team in the major leagues.

The younger Griffey, heading into his third season with the Mariners, is regarded as a potential superstarsuper.

"It just depends on how much he wants it," Griffey Sr. said Monday in assessing his son's career potential.

Griffey Sr. has a career .297 batting average entering his 19th big league season.

He knows about life and its pitfalls, especially pitfalls in the major leagues.

Griffey Sr. said he has stayed in the majors by working hard. His son, who started in center fielder for the American League in last summer's All-Star game, must do the same to succeed, his father said.

Ken Griffey Sr., right, and his son/teammate Ken Jr. loosen up in spring training the day Little Ken signed a big two-year, $2.5 million contract. Griffey Sr. hit .377 in limited duty last season.

Griffey Jr. signed a two-year contract this month for $2.5 million. He will get a base salary of $535,000 this season and a base salary of $2 million next season.

The younger Griffey will be eligible for free agency after six seasons in the major leagues, at age 25.

He is focused and right on course, his dad said.

"He knows he has to do well out there and that's what he does — his best work out there on the field," Griffey Sr. said. "You go out and play the game and if you do a good job, you'll get rewarded for it."

The father said he wasn't surprised that he hit three home runs for the Mariners last season and had 18 RBIs.

"... If I didn't do well, I wasn't going to come back this year," he said. "So I just came out and did the best job I could. I wanted to help the ball club."

Simms expects battle for starting QB spot

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Phil Simms, who missed the New York Giants' run to their Super Bowl title because of an injured left foot, says he's eager to battle with Jeff Hostetler for the team's starting quarterback job.

"It's great. I'm looking forward to it. I'm sure it will be on the back pages of the newspapers every day," Simms said with a chuckle.

"At least for the first two days..."

The 34-year-old Simms, MVP in the 1987 Super Bowl, was on the way to his best season ever with 15 touchdown passes and just four interceptions when he severely bruised his left foot against Buffalo in the regular-season's 14th game. His quarterback rating of 92.7 led the NFC and was fourth overall in the league.

Hostetler, five years younger, then led the Giants to two victories at the end of the season; two more in the playoffs, and the 20-19 Super Bowl victory over the Bills. That gave him an 8-0 career record as a starter.

"Right now I'm in the worst shape of my career because I haven't been able to be active the way I am normally," said Simms, who has just been given permission by his doctors to begin running. "But I'm sure I'll be ready for the start of training camp."

Asked if he expected to get his starting job back automatically, Simms replied: "No. But I never expect to have it. Maybe it doesn't seem like it, but every year there's a competition between Jeff and myself."

LOS ANGELES — The inner-city drama "New Jack City," which has been blamed for violent outbursts in several cities, debuted at No. 2 in weekend box office ratings as "The Silence of the Lambs" held its top position.

"New Jack City" made $7 million over the weekend while playing on just 867 screens, according to figures released Monday by Entertainment Data, Inc.

That was good enough to capture second place on the box office charts behind "The Silence of the Lambs," which sold $8.9 million in tickets while showing on 1,586 screens.

"The Silence of the Lambs" has been in first place for four consecutive weeks.

The opening of "New Jack City," a gritty look at a drug lord and the police officers laboring to bring him down, was marred by a fatal shooting outside a theater in New York and a looting spree in Los Angeles that began after tickets to a performance were oversold.

Other cities also reported violent incidents in connection with the movie, which stars Wesley Snipes, Judd Nelson, Ice-T and Mario Van Peebles, who also directed.

In sixth place was Kevin Costner's western "Dances With Wolves," which grossed $3.4 million.

It was followed in seventh by "Home Alone." The comedy made $3.3 million and is now the sixth biggest-grossing film ever with receipts of $245.9 million to date, surpassing "Raiders of the Lost Ark" and its take of $242.4 million. The family drama "Shipwrecked" was eighth, on proceeds of $3.04 million, and "King Ralph," starring John Goodman, was ninth, with sales of $2.97 million. In 10th place was Steve Martin's "L.A. Story," which made $1.6 million.

Brando to write autobiography

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Random House has agreed to pay Marlon Brando a seven-figure sum for his autobiography, it was reported today.

"The book will finally reveal the man behind the legend," Harry Evans, publisher of Random House, said in the New York Times.

The reclusive actor has agreed to complete the book by 1993. The exact amount he will be paid was not disclosed.

"(Brando) reached a point in his life when there was something he wanted to say, a point where a number of things had distilled and coalesced," said George England, a friend who acted as Brando's agent during negotiations.

Evans said the book will focus on Brando's troubled private life as well as his career. The actor's son, Christian Brando, was recently sentenced to 10 years in prison for shooting to death his half-sister's lover.

Brando has starred in such movies as "Last Tango in Paris" and "Apocalypse Now." He won Oscars for "On the Waterfront" and "The Godfather."

Van Gogh find sparks treasure hunts

By Anthony Shadid
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — The discovery of a Vincent Van Gogh painting that turned its unsuspecting owners into instant millionaires has sent Milwaukee residents poking through attics and dusty cupboards in search of hidden treasures.

It also has initiated a boom in business for Midwestern art galleries and appraisers, who are fielding inquiries about everything from family jewelry to century-old furniture.

"I came back here from lunch with four people waiting to see me," said Paul Frederick, owner of Frederick Galleries Inc. "Since that painting was discovered, we've just had a barrage. I've been getting all kinds of calls."

The painting that has inspired the hopeful searches is an early Van Gogh work that hung anonymously in a local couple's home for 35 years before a real estate agent and part-time art prospector discovered it.

Experts at Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam verified the 16 1/4-by-13-inch painting, "Still Life With Flowers," as an authentic Van Gogh work believed completed in 1886.

The couple, who have declined to be identified, sold it at auction Sunday for $1.43 million.

"Anytime something sells for a lot of money, people start wondering what their possessions are worth," said Leslie Hindman, the Chicago auctioneer who handled the painting's sale. "A lot of people have come out of the woodwork with all sorts of things that they think are great masterpieces."

William DeLind, a Milwaukee art dealer, said business at his gallery and appraisal service has increased 400 percent since the painting was found.

But he warned that only one out of 20 items he appraises turns out to be worth more than the owners hoped.

Still, Janice Kuhn, president of Chestnut Court Appraisal Associates, said there is precedence for some optimism.

She noted that in 1984 her gallery sold a bronze by British sculptor Henry Moore for $170,000. The 20-inch statue had been purchased 10 years before for $5,000.

Professor to speak on African societies

Joel Barkan, chairman of the UI African Studies Program, will speak on the weekly Museum Perspectives Program at the UI Museum of Art at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 13.

Barkan, who is also a professor in the UI Department of Political Science, will speak on "State, Society and Markets in Sub-Saharan Africa." He will explain how Africans living in rural areas have responded to pressures from outside their communities, and how they have restructured their lives as a result of the changes.

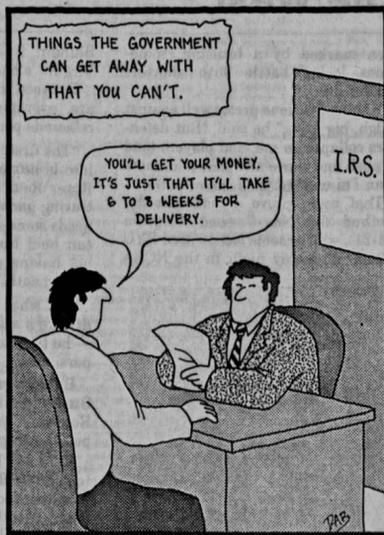

Barkan, a specialist in the problems of development in third-world countries, is currently studying the relation of state, society and voluntary associations in Kenya, Nigeria and India.

His talk is part of a Museum Perspectives series on Africa, presented in conjunction with the exhibition of works from the collection of African art at the museum.

The UI Museum of Art, located on North Riverside Drive in Iowa City, is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. the day of Barkan's talk. Admission is free to the museum and to the Perspectives program. Big men aplenty mark the West

By Robert Mims
The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Brigham Young's Shawn Bradley says there's a price to pay for leading the nation in blocked shots: the price is pain.

The record 207 blocked shots set by David Robinson of Navy in 1986 is not in danger, but the 7-foot-6 Bradley rejected 165 shots in 32 games, or 5.2 an outing.

The freshman center also leads the Cougars in scoring (15.2 points) and rebounding (7.8 per game).

But at a scrawny 210 pounds, Bradley's first year of college ball also has West Regional.

In other opening round games, Seton Hall (22-8) faces Pepperdine (22-8), New Mexico State (23-5) meets Creighton (23-7) and Arizona (26-6) goes against St. Francis, Pa. (22-8).

In Friday's West Regional games at Tucson, Ariz., Michigan State (18-10) meets Wisconsin-Green Bay, Utah (28-3) meets South Alabama (22-8), Georgetown (18-12) takes on Vanderbilt (17-12) and defending champ UNLV (30-0) plays Montana (23-7).

Against Bradley Thursday night, Virginia will look to a pair of strong, stocky centers — 6-9, 240-pound sophomore Ted Jeffries, and Matt

Georgetown's Dikembo Mutombo

NCAA preview: The West

been marked by a bruising, sometimes losing battle with shorter, bulkier foes.

"I think I've done pretty well against tough, big guys," he said. "But defenders collapse on me, and players tend to push and shove and grab a lot more than I'm used to."

That could prove a made-to-order method for No. 7 seed Virginia (21-11), which meets No. 10 seed BYU (20-12) Thursday night in the NCAA Blundin, a 6-7, 232-pounder who was Virginia's backup quarterback.

Between them, Jeffries and Blundin are averaging 8.9 points and 9.5 rebounds per game.

"The first thing Shawn has going for him is he's a competitor," BYU coach Roger Reid said. "But he's had frustrating games in that area. He really needs some strength and weight so he can hold his position a little longer, not having people moving him away underneath."

But what Bradley lacks in bulk — despite a season-long weight program — he tries to make up with savvy and persistence.

BYU will start a pair of 6-7 forwards, Steve Schreiner and Kenneth Roberts, averaging 14.5 and 6.4 points per game, respectively.

They will be countered by Virginia's top scorer, Bryant Stith (20 points per game), and Kenny Turner (14.9 points). In the forefront, Virginia also may have the edge with John Crotty (15.4 points per game).

BYU, the WAC tournament winner, has not done well against ACC teams, winning just twice in 13 games.

Seton Hall coach P.J. Carlesimo is confident about his Pirates' matchup with Pepperdine.

"I know some of the players," he said. "I am familiar with their coach. If we play, we're going to be OK."

But assuming a victory over Pepperdine, Carlesimo saw an increasingly tough road ahead for his Pirates.

"But there's no such thing as an easy region or an easy opponent. It starts all over now," he said.

St. Francis' first NCAA tournament appearance garnered little sympathy from the selection committee. Despite going 17-1 on its home floor, winning its first Northeast Conference tournament and defeating Fordham in a play-in game last week, St. Francis drew one of the NCAA field's prestige teams in Arizona.

But St. Francis coach Jim Baron is used to playing big-name teams like Arizona, having once been an assistant to coach Digger Phelps at Notre Dame.

"I think we're ready to take on the challenge," Baron said. "We're excited about playing someone like Arizona."

Arizona coach Lute Olson was a little disappointed the Wildcats wound up in the same region as UNLV.

"I guess we kind of put ourselves in this place," Olson said. "Ever since we lost to Georgia Tech, I felt we were going to be out here (the West). But to be frank, I don't think Vegas has it any easier than us, even though they are a No. 1."

Fairfield coach starts the big resigning push

The Associated Press

FAIRFIELD, Conn. — Mitch Buonaguro resigned Tuesday as head basketball coach of Fairfield after four seasons.

Buonaguro will resign effective June 30, when his four-year contract ends.

In a statement announcing his resignation, Buonaguro gave no explanation for his decision to leave.

"I wish the players and the university the best in the future and I am disappointed that things didn't work out," he said.

William P. Schimpf, vice president for student services at Fairfield, said the athletic department will act promptly to hire a new coach.

During Buonaguro's tenure, the team won 72 games and lost 103. In 1986 and 1987, the Stags won the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference tournament. They qualified for the NCAA national tournament both years, where they lost to Illinois in 1986 and Indiana in 1987.

Buonaguro said he is undecided about his future plans.

Jacksonville's Haddon resigns

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Jacksonville basketball coach Rich Haddad, whose team finished 6-22 this season, resigned Tuesday with a year left on his contract.

Haddad, 37, had a four-year mark of 41-75 (.353) with the Dolphins. This past season's record was the worst in school history.

"I have reluctantly accepted Rich's resignation," athletic director Don Jacobs said in a statement. "He has given his all to Jacksonville University basketball, and we thank him for that."

Haddad's plans weren't disclosed. He did not return a phone call seeking comment.

In his first season as head coach, the Dolphins were 8-21. They followed that with records of 14-16 and 13-16.

Prior to becoming head coach, Haddad was a Dolphins assistant for six years. Three players he helped to recruit at Jacksonville have made it to the NBA — Dee Brown, Ronnie Murphy and Otis Smith.

A search to replace Haddad will begin immediately, Jacobs said.

Lee resigns as Vanderbilt coach

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — A visit to the 1990 girls' state basketball tournament that violated NCAA rules appears to be behind Phil Lee's resignation as women's basketball coach at Vanderbilt.

"It was a night when I would have been better off staying at home," Lee told The Tennessean.

The trip to nearby Middle Tennessee State University was the focal point of a Vanderbilt investigation which resulted in Lee's resignation and the suspension of three players for Wednesday's NCAA tournament opener with South Carolina at Memorial Gym.

Athletic director Paul Hoolahan has refused to comment on the specifics of the internal investigation except to characterize the violations as minor.
