UI appeals OSHA's findings of Power Plant safety violations

By Aziz Gökdemir
The Daily Iowan
and The Associated Press

The UI has decided to appeal $31,210 of the $37,720 total fine levied by the Occupational Health and Safety Administration for the 29 Power Plant safety violations—agreeing to pay the remaining $6,510.

Meanwhile, an OSHA spokesman said Thursday a third inspection conducted around the same time with the two inspections that resulted in the $38,000 fine may bring about more fines for hygienic violations at the plant.

OSHA's Iowa Division of Labor spokeswoman Mary Bryant said the analysis of the inspection results may take another two weeks. She said she would not comment on the possibility of more fines before a citation is issued.

Bryant also declined comment on the UI's decision to appeal the fines.

The fines being appealed by the UI include the three heaviest citations, resulting in fines of $25,000:

■ $9,000: Exposing employees to fire and explosions caused by spontaneous combustion and carbon monoxide in coal bunkers, as exemplified by the Feb. 5 explosion in a plant silo.

■ $9,000: Leaving open a switch gear-box door in a boiler basement to prevent heat build-up in the box, consequently exposing workers to 480 volts of electricity.

■ $7,000: Failing to provide protective gear for eyes, face, head and limbs to employees exposed to flying hot ash. Those are employees who must look into and stoke

Other citations being appealed include failing to provide an eye wash facility in case of accidents at one site, having unsafe equipment and failing to establish a written hazard communication program to inform employees about hazardous chemicals at work.

"The sense is that these were not intentional violations and that they were taken care of," Ann versity relations, said Wednesday. The UI recognized the citations were legitimate and took action to correct them, Rhodes said.

The Feb. 5 explosion was caused by sparks and spontaneous combustion of wet coal. A fire that smoldered 10 days before finally exploding Feb. 5 prompted the American Federation of State, See Fines, Page 8A

U.S. troops jubilant over U.N. cease-fire

Many voice concern for Iraqi rebels

By George Esper
The Associated Press

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — U.S. troops expressed joy Thursday as the hours ticked toward a permanent cease-fire in the gulf war. But the joy was tempered with concern for the Iraqi resistance fighters left behind to face the wrath of Saddam Hussein.

The arrival of advance elements of a 1,440-member U.N. peacekeeping force Friday could speed the American withdrawal, which is already more than 40 percent complete.

U.S. Air Force transport planes were flying out 5,000 troops a day. At the Riyadh Air Base, troops in a makeshift air terminal named "Freedom Gate" rushed outside and cheered when their transport arrived.

"Hey, it's here!" they yelled. But some expressed fear for the rebels who failed to overthrow Saddam.

"I think we should have fought more, made it so he was not able to defeat the rebels," said Spec. 4 Joseph Hazuka, 23, of Post Falls, Idaho. "Not that we should have joined in, but made it so it wasn't possible."

"I agree on the cease-fire," said Spec. 4 Cartrell Goode, 21, of Washington, D.C. "But pulling our forces out so quick, I don't agree." "I think it's great," said Spec. Gary Lightner, 36, of Tyrone, Pa. "It means our mission got accomplished."

U.S. troop strength has dropped sharply to 316,000 from a peak of 540,000, the U.S. Central Command said. This represented a withdrawal of 224,000 men and women, or more than 40 percent, since the war ended Feb. 27.

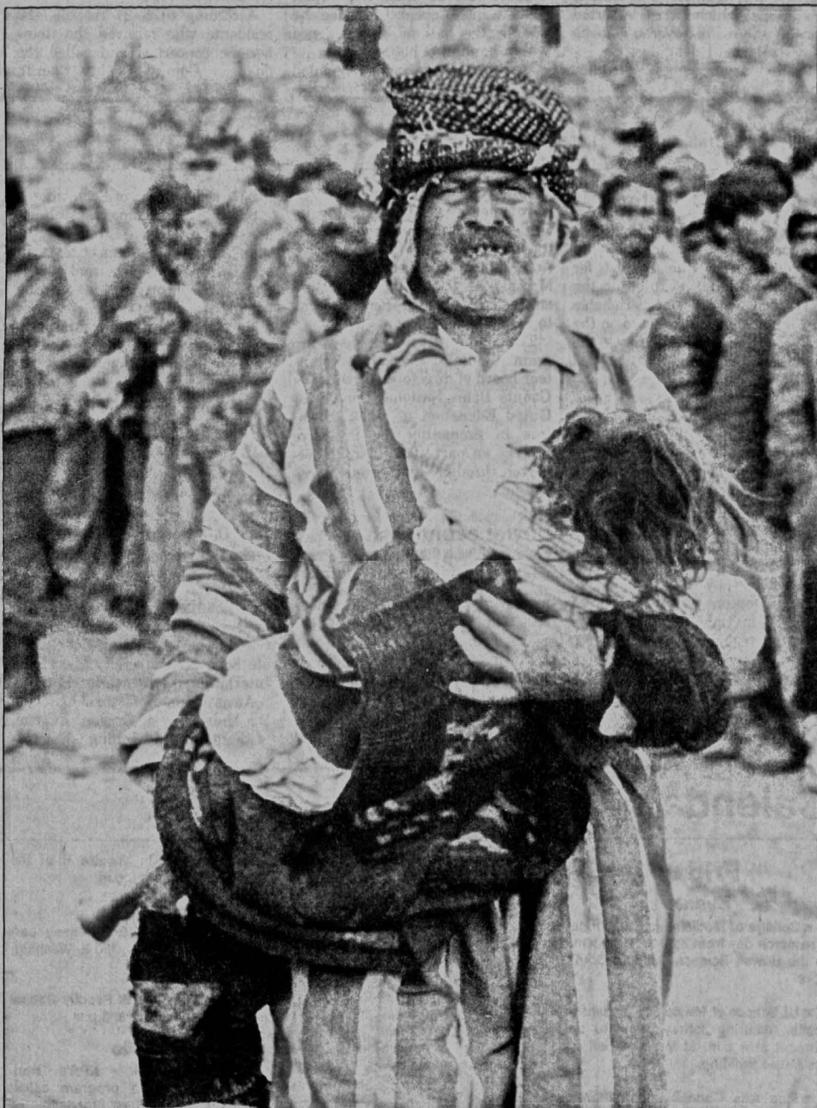

But not all troops were going home. Some medical units, including National Guardsmen, were being redeployed from the gulf to Turkey to help save the lives of stricken Kurdish refugees fleeing Saddam's forces. And U.S. aircraft were on duty airlifting supplies to the refugees.

In other developments Thursday:

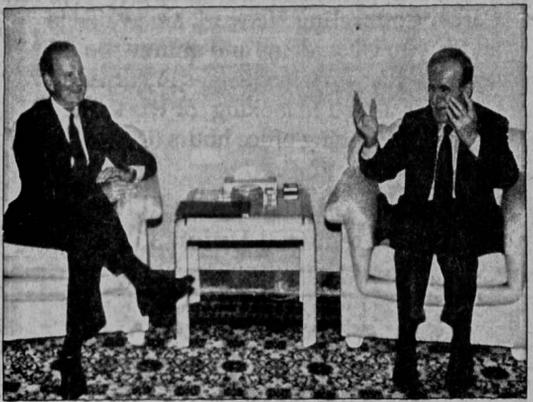

■ The White House said it considers the area north of the 36th parallel in Iraq as a "safe haven" for Kurdish refugees and warned Baghdad anew not to fly military aircraft there. President Bush said he sees "eye to eye" with European leaders on how best to protect the Kurds who have fled to the mountains of northern Iraq to escape Saddam's army.

■ Kurdish rebels ambushed Iraqi troops trying to push deeper into the Iraq mountains, killing at least 12 soldiers and knocking out two tanks and an armored personnel carrier. The rebels said two guer-

Syrian President Hafez Assad meets with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker in Damascus. Baker arrived here after talks in Egypt and Israel on the prospects of an Arab-Israeli peace settlement.

Saudi Arabia informs Baker of financial cutoff of PLO

By Barry Schweid
The Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria — Saudi Arabia's foreign minister told Secretary of State James Baker Thursday that his government was cutting off financial support to the Palestine Liberation Organization, a senior U.S. official said.

Prince Saud also responded positively to an Israeli proposal for Mideast peace talks, the official said as Baker flew to Damascus for an appraisal of the plan from Syrian President Hafez Assad.

Assessing his efforts so far, Baker said, "We've made some progress, but there's still a lot that has to be done."

Speaking to reporters before he saw Assad, Baker said there was potential for a breakthrough. And yet, he said, "We're hoping people wouldn't rush to judgment. It isn't black and white."

Syrian government radio, which usually reflects Assad's views, stressed that Israel must adhere to U.N. resolutions calling for withdrawal from lands that had been held by the Arabs until the 1967 Mideast war.

Otherwise, the radio said, "an effort to find peace in the Middle East is stillborn."

Northern Iraq declared Kurdish 'safe haven'

By Rita Beamish
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House declared Thursday that the northern tip of Iraq is a "safe haven" for Kurdish refugees and off-limits for "any kind of military activity" by Iraq.

The region is still part of Iraq, said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, and Iraq will be responsible for governing and maintaining law and order there.

However, he also said the United States is prepared, along with international relief agencies, to sustain the Kurdish refugees north of the 36th parallel until they feel safe going back to their homes.

And while the massive relief effort is under way, "we have the resources there available to safeguard the operation," Fitzwater said.

"There are forces there that are capable of taking action to carry out this warning that we have given to Iraq," he added.

The territory declared off-limits to Iraqi military encompasses about 10 percent of Iraq's 170,000 square miles.

Fitzwater's characterization of the region as a safe haven and sanctuary marked a switch from the administration's previous avoidance of the terms out of apparent concern that the United States might be seen as violating a sovereign country.

The spokesman said that the United States, U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and the European Community all agree "that our preference is to have these refugees be able to stay in Iraq and ultimately to be able to return to their homes."

He said the safe haven would be needed for months, though he said he couldn't be more specific.

Fitzwater said any potential use of U.S. forces in the sanctuary would be to protect the humanitarian aid effort and would not conflict with President Bush's promise to keep U.S. forces out of Iraq's civil war.

"I want these kids to come home, and that's what's going to happen," Bush said.

IC City Council considers putting bond issues before voters

By Mary Arnott
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City residents may have the opportunity to decide which local projects will be funded next year if the Iowa City City Council approves several bond referendums.

A bond referendum allows voters to decide whether the city will sell bonds to obtain money for area projects. These bonds normally mature and are paid back by the city in five or 10 years. Most of these projects will be coming up within the next few years.

"Everything is not necessarily coming up this year," Mayor John McDonald said. "We're going to make a definite decision at the meeting (April 15)."

"The issue most likely to be voted on soon is the Napoleon Park-Sports Complex package," City Council member Darrel Courtney said.

The Iowa City City Council will be discussing ways to obtain money at its April 15 meeting. Possible sources include increasing local sales tax or the city's hotel-motel tax by 2 percent, and fees and/or charges for the use of new facilities. All of these options must be approved by voters before they can go into effect.

The board is looking for ways to fund several tentative projects.

■ The Library Board would like a library levy to obtain funds to hire additional staff, which the city had previously denied. If additional funds cannot be found, the library may have to cut its hours or services.

"If there is some other way to raise money we could benefit from, we would go with that," said Lolly Eggers of the Library Board of Trustees.

■ Up to $15 million may be spent to improve Iowa City's water. New wells would be drilled south and southeast of the city to provide better quality water for residents.

"It's a question of quality and quantity. You either drill lots of expensive wells to give the city good water, or you spend a lot of money to treat river water. Even if you treat river water) you may not have the quantity," City Council member Randy Larson said. "It's going to be a tough question within a year or two."

"This would probably have to be a bond referendum," McDonald added.

■ Contaminant leaks at the Iowa City landfill will cost the city over $3 million. The city must fix the leak to meet government health and safety standards.

"We don't get enough funds from the landfill to correct the situation," McDonald said. Currently the council does not know where it will obtain the money to pay for the cleanup.

"The heavy users bear most of the burden. Residential fees will not increase much if they increase at all," Larson said.

■ A new softball and soccer complex adjacent to the wastewater treatment plant south of the city and the renovation of Napoleon Park are the reasons for a $4.9 million bond referendum tentatively scheduled for June 25. The council will vote on whether to allow a referendum at its April 16 meeting.

"The development cost is substantial," City Manager Steve Atkins said.

■ A tentative referendum has been scheduled for Oct. 15. This referendum would cover the estimated $10 million needed to renovate City High and South East Junior High and to provide a new elementary school.

Inter-Tribal PowWow comes to Iowa this weekend

By Nancy Ridenour
Special to The Daily Iowan

The American Indian Student Association will hold its annual Inter-Tribal PowWow at the UI Field House this weekend — featuring arts and crafts vendors, food booths and dancers from throughout the Midwest.

Festivities begin Friday night at 7 p.m. with the Grand Entry of flag-bearers, head dancers, a welcoming address, and victory and flag songs. Dancing will continue until midnight.

Saturday's theme, "Honor the Veterans", will honor American Indian Veterans. There will be dancing from noon until 5 p.m., when approximately 300 pounds of buffalo will be served during a feast at the Chicano-Indian American Culture Center, 308 Melrose Ave. The PowWow will continue from 7 p.m. until midnight.

On Sunday the PowWow will "Honor the Elders" with dancing from 12 to 5 p.m.

The AISA represents Iowa City residents from 12 American Indian tribes. Representatives from 28 tribes throughout the Midwest attended last year's PowWow, and the group expects even more to participate this year.

AISA members said the powwows are a good opportunity for the general public to learn about American Indian culture. Dancers will compete in eight styles of dance, including children's, men's fancy and women's jingle dance, and audience members will also be invited to participate.

The AISA dancers travel around the state to perform for schools and other groups. Through the Arts Connection program at Hancher, Sharon Bowers, manager of the AISA cultural center and a UI American Studies graduate student, visits schools to tell traditional stories.

Last year the UI began to specifically search for students to accept American Indian scholarships through the Opportunity at Iowa program, which attracts African-Americans, Latinos and American Indians to the UI faculty, staff and student body.

People at the Mesquakie settlement in Tama have shown new interest in the UI, and the university recently participated in a college fair there, according to Kathy Basset, associate director of admissions.

"For a largely white, midwestern state, Iowa has made a good commitment to minority recruiting," Basset said.

"The most attractive thing this school offers is a core of faculty members interested in Indian law. Only one or two schools in the country have more than one," said Robert Clinton, a law professor specializing in Indian law. "The law school is more culturally diverse than the university in general, and the university needs to follow that lead."

Courts

By Jennifer Hanna
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City woman accused of stealing items from her roommates was charged with third-degree theft, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The three roommates of Michelle Clay, 19, S22 Currier, reported items missing from their personal belongings, court records state.

Court records state that a search warrant was obtained, and some of the items which were reported missing were discovered among Clay's personal belongings.

Preliminary hearing is scheduled for May 1.

An Iowa City man accused of firing bottle-rockets at passing motor vehicles was charged Wednesday with discharging fireworks, according to Johnson County District Court records.

According to court records, a witness stated that Laurence A. Madeo, 23, 120 N. Gilbert St., Apt. 3, was the sole individual who was shooting the fireworks.

Court records state that when police went to speak to Madeo, he was in the hall of his residence with a handful of bottle-rockets.

Preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 30.

An Iowa City man accused of stealing a television set and a VCR to pay for rent was charged with second-degree burglary and second-degree theft, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Court records state William J. Runge Jr., 18, 913 N. Gilbert St., stole the items from a local residence on Dec. 28. On March 4, Runge brought the items to a Hills residence for rent.

According to court records, the residents who received the items became concerned and called the Johnson County Deputy Sheriff.

On March 26, the sheriff learned the items were those stolen in a Dec. 28 burglary.

Preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 29.

The following people were arrested and charged in the Johnson County area with operating a vehicle while intoxicated:

Jeannette Ballas, 29, 49 Holiday Trailer Court, North Liberty, Iowa, was stopped April 10 in the area of Highway 6 and Rocky Shore Road.

Brent R. Linkin, 21, 1136 N. Dubuque St., Apt. 8, was stopped April 11 in the 300 block of South Dubuque Street.

Transit, crisis center hold bus food drive

Persons may ride either Iowa City Transit or Coralville Transit for free April 13 if they present the bus driver with a non-perishable food item. The food collected on the buses will be used to restock the shelves of the Crisis Center Food Bank.

This "Ride the Bus for Food" promotion is the kick-off of Crisis Center Week in the Iowa City-Coralville area. The Crisis Center is celebrating 21 years of service to the community.

Young inventors display creations in Des Moines

Inventions by more than 200 young inventors will be displayed April 13 in the 4th annual state Invention Convention at the Des Moines Convention Center, sponsored by Invent, Iowa Inc.

Several thousand of these budding inventors have their sights set on the state convention while developing projects reflecting their creative talents and participating in local invention conventions across the state that are conducted by Area Education Agencies through March 22. Selected invention entries will advance from the local to the state convention.

The non-profit, comprehensive program is administered by a volunteer board of directors and the UI's Connie Belin National Center for Gifted Education to assist educators in promoting the inventive process as part of regular kindergarten through eighth-grade curriculum.

Soviet economist to speak at UI

Sergei Shatalov, a Moscow economist visiting the UI, will speak on "The Current State of the Soviet Economy" April 12.

The lecture, which is free and open to the public, will be presented at 6:30 p.m. in the Grant Wood Room of the Union. The lecture is sponsored by the Economics Forum in the UI Department of Economics. Shatalov is a senior research fellow in the African Studies Institute, Moscow. His areas of research are Third World debt and Soviet economic reform. He is meeting with UI faculty and students over a period of four weeks and is a visiting research fellow in the UI Center for International and Comparative Studies.

History grad receives dissertation award

Jeffrey Ostler, who earned a doctorate in history from the UI last August, has been awarded the 1990 D.C. Priestersbach Dissertation Prize for excellence in doctoral research.

As a winner, Ostler became the UI's nominee and was one of five finalists in the national competition for the 1990 Council of Graduate Schools/University Microfilms International Dissertation Prize.

An assistant professor of history at the University of Oregon, Eugene, Ostler's award-winning dissertation is titled "The Fate of Populism: Agrarian Radicalism and State Politics in Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa, 1880-1892." He received $2,500 and a certificate for his accomplishments in a ceremony last month at the Union.

Ostler is the 10th recipient of the UI Graduate Council's highly coveted prize. History Associate Professor H. Shelton Stromquist served as thesis supervisor.

Health center accepts grant applications

The Center for International Rural and Environmental Health is currently accepting applications for Institutional Research Seed Grants of up to $10,000/year for up to two years to support interdisciplinary research in international rural and environmental health.

Interested applicants are encouraged to request application materials from Robin Ungar or Jim Merchant, 258 International Center, telephone 335-1443.

Boxes of food sit by the door of a grocery store, in an aerobics workout room, and on the city bus. These places are effective spots for the Iowa City Food Bank to encourage contributions, which will eventually make it into someone's kitchen.

The food bank, an arm of the Crisis Center, 321 E. First St., has given out assistance more than 10,000 times in the Johnson County area in the last three months. However, an increased demand for food has surpassed the program's budgeted stock this year, the Crisis Center's 21st anniversary.

"We have been exceptionally busy lately, probably due to the war and the recession," Crisis Center director Ellen McCabe said.

The food bank's five staff members and more than 100 volunteers are stepping up food-raising efforts during and after Crisis Center Week, April 13-21. To help restock the food bank's shelves, Iowa City residents are being asked to donate non-perishable food items in somewhat unconventional places.

Mayflower Residence Hall's aerobics sessions usually cost 25 cents, but UI students have been asked to instead bring food which will be donated to the food bank.

The Iowa City and Coralville transit systems are involved in a similar project all day Saturday, April 13, during which riders have been asked to make a food donation instead of paying the usual 50-cent fare.

People accessing the food bank are of all ages and from all walks of life, McCabe said. She said frequent shoppers include disabled people, elderly, the "working poor" and people with an unexpected financial burden.

No qualifications must be met, other than the testimony that assistance is needed, McCabe said.

"We try to fill in the cracks for people who don't qualify for other types of assistance," she said.

The food bank is designed to provide short-term emergency intervention and to hook people up with programs, such as food stamps, that can provide them with more permanent assistance.

Besides promotion of these benefits of the program, other events

Iowa City Crisis Center program assistant Deb Warner, left, and program aid Crystal Thirtle work on packaging bags of groceries for a three-to-four person household Wednesday. The center, 321 E. First St., offers the groceries as supplemental food for 150 households every week.

Crisis Center vital link for many in IC community

By Ann Riley
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Crisis Center provides crisis intervention counseling, a food bank and emergency assistance to those who feel they have nowhere else to turn.

More than 100 volunteers provided over 30,000 contact services last year, operating a 24-hour crisis and suicide line, and providing walk-in counseling services from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. every day.

"We also order pizzas," said Ellen McCabe, director of the center, referring to the message relay for hearing-impaired persons the center operates.

"We are a vital link for hearing-impaired persons," McCabe said. "They call to ask about car loans or sell their puppies. We have a TDD here and can pass on their calls or answer any questions they might have. One person called when the war was breaking out to find out what was going on. He couldn't understand the newscasts."

The Crisis Center, 321 E. First St., operates with a paid staff of five in addition to the volunteers, who must undergo a 60-hour training program before beginning work at the center.

"We have a mixed group of volunteers," McCabe said. "Some are students or UI professors; others are retired or semi-retired who have been volunteers for almost 20 years."

Due to the confidential nature of the calls they receive at the Crisis Center, volunteers remain anonymous.

"We don't want to be identified in the community at all," stated one volunteer, a UI junior who has been with the center since November.

"I really like volunteering. The people that call in are very genuine. You get a sense that you are really helping those who call in," she said.

Monitoring the phones is not always easy though.

"Sometimes I feel frustrated when people keep putting themselves in situations that are harmful to them; you just wish they could stop. But I can't tell them what to do. We can't give advice; we can only set up situations and ask people how they would react.

"We use a lot of empathy; we put people's feelings into concrete statements. In training there are certain techniques you learn, and we use those as guidelines," she said.

Volunteers deal with a variety of problems, from potential suicides to loneliness.

"We see a lot of relationship problems, or people with slight mental illnesses trying to deal with coming back into the community.

Most people who call or come into the center are just looking for someone to listen, she said. Volunteers try not to give advice about any topic, but encourage people to come up with their own solutions.

"A lot of people call in with questions about AIDS, asking if it is possible if they could have contracted the disease. We would never give information like that. I would refer them to the Free Medical Clinic or something similar. We give a lot of referrals; I would say about 75 percent of our calls end up in referrals to support groups, counseling centers or social groups.

"We are there just to talk to people about their feelings; we are not there to give answers."

Strike ends in 1 Soviet republic; miners continue to hold out

Soviet industrial workers at a mass rally in Lenin Square voted "Yes" Thursday to restate their demands for the resignations of the Republic government and President Mikhail Gorbachev.

By Brian Friedman
The Associated Press

MINSK, U.S.S.R. — The leaders of a strike in this Byelorussian capital suspended their walkout Thursday after the republic's government conceded to negotiate their political and economic demands.

But the strikers threatened to resume the walkout if their demands are not met or if any workers are punished because of the 36-hour protest. They planned to form a committee that could "set the whole republic on strike."

Strike leader Georgi Mukhin said Byelorussia's workers had won dignity and scored "a victory over fear."

The workers in Minsk and surrounding towns had demanded the resignation of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and other leaders in the national and republic governments, and a raise in wages to compensate for steep price increases that began April 2.

Meanwhile, an estimated 300,000 miners on strike nationwide said they will stay off the job until the government agrees to discuss their political demands. The miners also are demanding Gorbachev step down. The strikes have reflected the growing loss of confidence in Gorbachev and his promises to improve the lives of the Soviet Union's 290 million residents by transforming the economy with free-market reforms.

The Minsk strike began on Wednesday — a day after Gorbachev appealed for a nationwide moratorium on strikes. About 200,000 workers at 64 plants left their jobs in the city of 1.5 million.

On Thursday, about half as many plants were hit. But officials also reported strikes in the Byelorussian towns of Orsha, Vitebsk, Zhodino, Baranovichi, Lieda, Lagoisk, Borisov and Soligorsk.

Byelorussia, a western republic of 10.4 million people on the Polish border, is heavily industrialized and produces many of the country's trucks, tools, televisions, bicycles and agricultural machines.

Strike leader Mukhin said the government had agreed to recognize the strike committee as a legal organization, a status that would allow it to negotiate in talks scheduled to begin Friday. The committee also was to be given 15 minutes of air time on the republic's television station every evening. Mukhin used the committee's first air time to appeal for everyone to return to work. "Suspend the strike as we did in Minsk," he said in a raspy voice. "We are going to fight a powerful monster."

Mukhin urged workers to telephone the strike committee if they encountered any reprisals, such as firing or losing pay, for walking off the job.

On television later, Soligorsk miner Ivan Yurkevich called on strike leaders across the republic to convene in Minsk on Saturday to form the committee that would coordinate any future strikes.

The government had no official public reaction to the agreement, although leaders have emphasized that they can only talk about demands that are within their jurisdiction.

A reliable legislative source in Minsk said that Communist Party hard-liners in the legislature's leadership privately reprimanded Byelorussian Vice President Stanislav Shushkevich, a political centerist, for agreeing to the talks. Byelorussia has deep historical ties to Russia and traditionally has been loyal to the Kremlin.

Former senator takes up quest for '92 Democratic nomination

By John King
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Seven years after leaving Washington to battle cancer, Paul Tsongas returned Thursday to sound the economic alarm fueling his long-shot quest to recapture the White House for the Democrats.

"I am here because I fear for my country's economic security," the former Massachusetts senator said in explaining his bid for the 1992 Democratic nomination. "I am here because our country needs to be rallied."

Tsongas delivered a National Press Club speech designed to promote his economic views and bid for legitimacy in the eyes of a political and media establishment that views his quixotic candidacy as refreshing but unlikely to succeed.

"The odds don't bother me," said Tsongas, for now the only Democrat who says he's running for president.

Tsongas, who plans to formally announce his candidacy April 30, faces inevitable comparisons to 1988 Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis, as well as questions about his health, as he tries to win credibility as a candidate seven years after he last held office.

Tsongas served two terms in the House and one in the Senate before retiring in 1984 to fight cancer. He brought his doctor to Washington to declare him cured five years after a bone-marrow transplant and says his campaigning will include bike races and swim meets to convince skeptics he's healthy.

Great White plays Adler Monday night

By Brett Ratner
The Daily Iowan

Michael Lardie, guitarist/keyboardist/songwriter for Great White, is out to prove that thrash is a band genuine, concerned with music, not leather hairstyles and glitzy videos. "It doesn't matter what they call you at the end of the day, we just straight-ahead, blues-based rock & roll band," says Lardie.

"We don't want to be known as the world's greatest cover band."

Michael Lardie of Great White

Great White will headline over BulletBoys and Steelheart Monday, April 15 at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $18.50 and are available through TicketMaster outlets.

"Hooked," the band's latest release, is ample proof of Lardie's statement. The album is laden with grungy guitars and earthy lyrics, with no cheesy love ballads or "keyboard heavens" to be found. And Mark "I'd rather be dead than shred" Kendall's guitar licks keep getting better.

"We like people to know where our influences lie," says Lardie. "We're heavily influenced by '70s bands like Led Zep and Aerosmith."

New Kid to make public-service announcements

By Ivonne Rovira
The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Donn Wahlberg, lead singer and "big boy" of New Kids on the Block, agreed to make public-service announcements on such topics as fire safety and drugs in return for a potential dismissal of a charge stemming from a hotel fire.

Under an agreement reached Wednesday between prosecutors and Wahlberg's defense lawyers, a arson charge was reduced to criminal mischief against the 21-year-old singer. The case will be put on hold until Wahlberg completes the public-service announcements.

He originally faced up to 20 years in jail on the first-degree arson charge. Wahlberg was arrested March 27 after a hallway fire at the historic Seelbach Hotel, where he was staying. There were no injuries.

During a night hearing that was hastily announced, District Judge James Green lectured Wahlberg on the seriousness of the incident.

"I try not to say much in these situations... but this is a terrible situation, and you're a very lucky young man," Green said. "This is a great deal. I hope you make it proud."

As part of the agreement, Wahlberg "accepted responsibility" for the blaze.

"I want to apologize to the people of Louisville," said Wahlberg. "I think, as everyone agrees, this is the most unfortunate incident. It has been a very ugly incident."

He added, "I'm very excited and very much welcome doing these public-service announcements, which is what I've been doing, which is very much what my career is based on."

"Hooked," the band's latest release, is ample proof of Lardie's statement. The album is laden with grungy guitars and earthy lyrics, with no cheesy love ballads or "keyboard heavens" to be found. And Mark "I'd rather be dead than shred" Kendall's guitar licks keep getting better.

Great White (Audie Desbrow, Jack Russell, Michael Lardie, Tony Montana and Mark Kendall) will perform Monday night in Davenport.

a band that conveys a vibe of airtight togetherness. It's a quality to be expected in a group as enduring as Great White, who first started playing in the mid-'80s. Besides Lardie, the band includes guitarist Mark Kendall, drummer Audie Desbrow, vocalist Jack Russell and bassist Tony Montana.

"The puzzle definitely fits now," says Lardie. "We have reached a point where if anyone was missing, the band wouldn't sound nearly the same." He hopes for a lasting impression on the music world: "My goal is to be talking to you 10 years from now, asking what you think about the latest album."

Lardie looks forward to Great White's headliner status Monday night, since the band is afforded the full two hours to showcase their material: "We have over four albums' worth of songs to draw from, and this gives us the opportunity to play it."

Zeppelin fans, as well as fans of MTV's "Unplugged," should be forewarned that the band may not perform its much-celebrated version of "Babe I'm Gonna Leave You" at the concert. "We don't want to be known as the world's greatest cover band," says Lardie. He adds: "Too many bands try to play a Zeppelin song and try to make it their own. That doesn't work — by playing a Zeppelin song, you're making a strong statement already. If you're gonna do it, do it right."

"As far as Great White goes, if we hear a song that we think we can sound good on, we'll do it. Not too many people have heard of Ian Hunter (composer of the band's 1989 hit "Once Bitten, Twice Shy"), but we grew up on music like that and we thought that was a song that we could do well."

Fans can rest assured, however, that Great White will play the comical ditty "Wasted Rock Ranger"; in fact, the song has evolved into their traditional closer, complete with standup bass and cowboy acoustic guitars. "We like to send them away with a smile on their face," says Lardie.

UI faculty member gives recital

The Daily Iowan

Pianist Rene Lecuona, who joined the faculty of the UI School of Music in the fall of 1990, will present her Iowa City solo recital debut at 8 p.m. Sunday, April 14, in Clapp Recital Hall. The concert is free and open to the public.

Lecuona will play two large works, the "Sonata No. 6 in A Major, Op. 82," by Prokofiev, and the familiar and well-loved "Sonata in B Minor, Op. 58," of Chopin. Between these two dominating works will be a smaller-scale masterpiece, the "Impromptu in C Minor, Op. 90 no. 1," by Schubert.

Prokofiev's Sixth Sonata is an enormous four-movement work that lasts nearly 30 minutes. "The four-movement form borrowed from the classical symphony tells you it's a pretty heavy work," Lecuona said. "The style is neo-classical, but the sentiments are very much of the 20th century. For example, the sonata includes the strongest contrasts. It's sarcastic and then tender, heart-felt and then ironical, militaristic and then gentle.

"What holds all these contrasting qualities together is the use of traditional, neoclassical forms," Lecuona said.

The Schubert Impromptu is very different from the Prokofiev. "Like a lot of Schubert's instrumental music, it was inspired by music for the voice," Lecuona said. "It's a very delicate, lyrical kind of piece."

Music

She acknowledges that the Chopin B-minor Sonata is in almost every pianist's repertoire, but Lecuona has no doubt she will make her own statement when she performs it. "There are a lot of performing choices to be made in this piece," Lecuona said. "That gives each pianist an opportunity to create their own interpretation. As many people as I've heard play it, I've heard that many individual interpretations. But of course, I always aim to make my own statement when I play."

Rene Lecuona

A native of Corning, N.Y., Lecuona has given solo recitals in upstate New York, Indiana, Iowa and West Germany. She holds both bachelor's and master's degrees in piano performance from the School of Music at Indiana University.

Turning our backs again

Three red ribbons dangle from trees in front of Dolores McAndrew's home. As far as I know, she is the first to put out red ribbons, but I doubt if it will become a national trend.

Mrs. McAndrew, who lives in a Chicago suburb, says the red ribbons are her way of expressing her sympathy for Kurds and other Iraqi rebels who have been slaughtered by Saddam Hussein and her disgust at what she considers this country's indifference.

"I was so upset after watching TV and reading about the plight of the Kurds and other refugees," she says.

"It seems to me that we were encouraging the Kurds and the others to rebel against Saddam, but when they did, we just walked away."

"Now they're being massacred. I can't see that as being part of this country's policy, and it upsets me greatly. It makes me wonder what this war was readers, but it's true.

If they were smart, they wouldn't have tried to overthrow Saddam. When President Bush encouraged them to do just that, leading them to believe that we would help them, a smart Kurd would have said: "Uh-uh. Fool me once, it's your fault. Fool me twice, I'm the klutz."

Surely the Kurds remember what happened last time we stirred them up.

It was back when Richard Nixon was still president and we were pals with the Shah of Iran, a nasty, corrupt dictator, but our hand-picked, nasty, corrupt dictator.

The shah thought Iraq was getting too strong and might try to grab some border land, and that made him nervous. So we figured out a way to stir up trouble in Iraq so it wouldn't have time to bother the shah. We encouraged the Kurds to revolt and promised we'd slip them military aid. So the Kurds did, and we helped. This was all done on the sly, of course.

But eventually, the shah cut a deal with Iraq. That meant that a revolt by the Kurds was no longer necessary. So without so much as a thank-you card, we cut off all help to the Kurdish rebels. Almost immediately, Saddam Hussein, then the No. 2 thug in Iraq, went into Kurdish territory and really whopped them. (Incidentally, President Bush probably remembers this. About the time we pulled that prank on the Kurds, he became head spook at the CIA.)

As the saying goes: "You just can't teach an old Kurd spot old tricks."

Another reason we can't do anything to help the rebels is that it would really foul up the big show. Right now, production of the Big Show is right on schedule. Troops are returning. Gala airport scenes and parades are being televised. A special POW Day has been declared by the White House. There are medals to be handed out, heroes to be hailed and all sorts of special patriotic events leading up to the super-stupendous July 4 celebration.

So if we had done anything to help the rebels, it would have thrown the entire Big Show production schedule out of whack. It would be like stopping a movie in the middle and announcing: "We interrupt this show to rewrite the script." The audience would hiss and yell and really get mad.

Besides, there's nothing we can do now. Saddam already has crushed the rebels, either slaughtering them or chasing them out of the country or into the mountains. It's too late for us to tell him that we'll shoot down his helicopters or blow up his tanks and artillery if he uses them against the rebels. We let him keep the tools of his trade, and he used them.

So Mrs. McAndrew might as well take down her red ribbons. She should be commended for her decency, but to paraphrase a favorite expression of Jay McMullen, husband of former mayor Jane Byrne and keen political observer:

"Her problem is that she thinks it's all on the legit." No, Mrs. McAndrew, it ain't always on the legit.

about. Does it mean that Kuwait was worthy of being saved, but these people aren't?

"It got me mad, so I took a ribbon from a Christmas wreath and cut it into pieces and put it on the trees. The red represents the blood being shed."

And what will be accomplished by displaying the ribbons?

Mrs. McAndrew said she wasn't sure. But she said, "America is loaded with generous, wonderful and very compassionate people. It's time to start caring about the victims of the war and the people we encouraged to rebel."

Her compassion is admirable. But I'm afraid that she will be disappointed if she expects this country to do anything more than express sympathy for the victims of Saddam's massacre.

For one thing, there have been no polls that show any popular enthusiasm for helping Kurds. And that's to be expected. Until recently, how many Americans have ever heard of a Kurd?

Kuwait was an entirely different matter. As we all know, the vast majority of Americans have always loved Kuwait. In every war, they have always fought on our side. Remember learning in history class how Kuwait sent volunteers to help George Washington? Why, for years, little American children have said in their evening prayers: "And God bless Mommy and Daddy and Kuwait and the emir of Kuwait and his three wives and his young bimbos." So it was natural that Americans would want to fight for Kuwait.

Besides, Kurds aren't very smart. I regret having to say that, and I hope I haven't offended any Kurdish

LATIN AMERICAN TRADE

Time will tell

While the winds of war have been blowing in the war-ravaged Persian Gulf, winds of progress are raising high hopes for Latin America's economic future. Mexico's President Carlos Salinas de Gortari visited Canada and the United States earlier this week in an attempt to strengthen economic ties in light of President Bush's proposed common market between the three nations. Simultaneously, Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay and Paraguay created the "Mercosur", the Common Market of the Southern Cone, which ideally will emulate the European Economic Community. But both efforts are facing enormous obstacles in various fronts.

Last year, President Bush proposed the creation of an integrated Pan-American market, an idea that was well-received by many Latin American countries. Naturally, the project is not intended to become a mere relief plan that will aid poverty-stricken nations with billions of dollars with no benefits for the United States in return. The White House's intention is to integrate the U.S. economy with other Latin American economies, hoping to help the smaller nations compete more successfully in international markets. But so far only the three first co-signing countries, Chile, Mexico and Venezuela, have economies strong enough to join the market.

The first step would be to form a North American common market, which would include the United States, Canada and Mexico. This project, however, faces much opposition in the United States, mainly among labor unions. They fear that once the market is established, many U.S. industries will move their factories to Mexico, where labor is cheaper and environment control is not as strict. Hispanic workers in Chicago, one of this country's major industrial centers, are pessimistic about the possible market. They are afraid such an arrangement will cause a rise in unemployment. Entrepreneurs, however, are looking forward to higher profits and lower labor costs that the market promises to bring.

On the other hand, the "Treaty of Asuncion," signed in Paraguay by the presidents of Argentina, Brazil, Paraguay and Uruguay, is being compared in importance to the "Treaty of Rome," which gave birth to the European Economic Community in 1957. This assumption is rather ludicrous when the four-digit inflation that affects Argentina and Brazil and the small industrial capacity of Uruguay and Paraguay are compared to the prosperous economies of Western Europe. Argentina and Brazil are clearly the two giants in the agreement, which will create a market of 200 million people and exchange more than $5.5 billion by 1995. Chile, the other geographic member of the Southern Cone and the only truly successful market economy in the region, was invited earlier to become part of the treaty, but it says it will not join until the other countries' economies catch up and they lower their high import tariffs.

These initiatives seem to be the beginning of a more promising future. But President Bush's goal of an integrated Pan-American economy able to compete against the powerful EEC and Japan will never be fulfilled if the Latin American economies are unable to remain stable and maintain permanent growth levels. Only time will tell.

Racism is a function of societal power

I have been literally amazed during the past few days as I have watched the reactions to Todd Boyd's column unfold. However, I was most concerned and outraged when I read Maura Whalen's editorial. Since the response thus far has been quite one-sided, I feel a strong need to share another point of view. For some time now I have noticed that in many articles on racism or other forms of oppression, especially those on the editorial page, there continues to be a basic definitional problem.

Guest Opinion

Amy Reynolds

Racism is more than an individual act. Racism is an institutionalized act of prejudice. Its enactment is based on the fact that one group (whites) has the institutional power to enforce their prejudices. People of color do not have that kind of power in this country. Does that mean that people of color cannot be prejudiced or bigoted? No. Everyone has prejudices. Racism is different because of the power dynamic. Power is manifested in a number of ways. Institutional power has to do with who heads the government, who the majority of CEOs in U.S. firms are and who heads the faculty and administration of this university. The answer is that these institutions are dominated by white men. Cultural power has to do with who sets the norms and values in this culture and what is considered the right holiday to celebrate (Christmas instead of Kwanzaa), what is good music or art, and how should one express his or her emotions. In this society norms are based on white European values.

Racism is more than an individual act.

Of course, racism was not founded in this country, but this country was founded on racism. Whites did bring African slaves, took land away from Mexicans and American Indians, and brought in Asian men to work on the railroads while refusing to let their families join them. It is a part of our history we cannot and should not forget.

When Maura Whalen's white friend experienced a so-called racist incident, that's all it was — an isolated incident. Maybe he was discriminated against, maybe he did experience prejudice. Is that just or right? No. Of course it feels lousy to feel excluded or judged. Yet in this society he has the right to eat most anywhere and not feel embarrassed. People of color do not. The discrimination they experience is a daily assault on their personhood. As a white person, I am very dismayed when other whites get so caught up in their own fear or guilt that they cannot hear and cannot understand the reality of racism from the perspective of a person of color.

Why is it that whenever a black man expresses his anger and outrage, people get so upset and threatened? Not everyone has to agree with Todd Boyd. But please don't confuse a personal difference of opinion with a reason to discount the experience of racism in this society. Because whites dominate the power structure and set the cultural norms in this country that discriminate against people of color, we also are responsible for ending racism. Why not start today?

To the Editor:
The agenda of the Faculty Assembly on April 3 included the proposition of adding a three-hour cultural diversity requirement to the list of General Education Requirements.

At the assembly, many arguments were made against this addition while unfortunately few were made in favor of it. The arguments included the maintenance of ideological neutrality and the danger of political correctness. These arguments are irrelevant. Whether or not the goal of this university is to remain ideologically neutral or to foster political correctness should not be the focus of this debate. The issue at hand is one of education

To the Editor:
Thank you for publishing diverse selection of columns your "Viewpoints" editorial page. I very much enjoy reading the daily opinions.

However, I'd appreciate if you could explain how you choose your national syndicated column and how they are financed. I'd especially happy to hear what kind of deal you have with the Washington Post Writers Group as you publish at least two of their columnists every week.

To be even more precise in my inquiry: Does my tuition money go to George Will and Charles Krauthammer, your loyal students of Monday and Wednesday? It is often tiresome to read these paper tigers' wordy opinions as they get excited about "robust interventionism," "female-headed households," an "urban underclass weakness." It is particularly worrisome to serve as a source for their livelihood.

You really think radioactive drinking water is safe?

It seems that the more people know about Iowa City drinking water, the more customers Harmony Brook and other manufacturers of bottled water gain. I vaguely remember a time (long before all the articles on pesticides, nitrates, trihalomethanes and radioactivity in Iowa City were published) when a person could get bottled water at Econofoods with little inconvenience. Now the lines for bottled water stretch endlessly through the aisles.

The article that especially worried me dealt with the UI dumping "low-level" radioactive fluid down the drain. This fluid eventually reaches the Iowa River, the primary source of water for the UI community. To test levels of radioactivity in research labs, the UI gathers samples on filter paper by wiping various objects within the lab (door handles, table tops, the floor, etc.). The filter paper is then placed in a test fluid where the level of radioactivity can be determined. Once the fluid has been analyzed, it must be disposed of. According to state and federal guidelines, if the levels of radioactive elements, namely carbon-14 and tritium, are low enough, the UI is permitted to dump this fluid down the drain.

However, the testing procedure is further complicated by the fact that the UI currently uses two different types of test fluid, one biodegradable and the other non-biodegradable, the latter containing benzene, a hazardous carcinogenic compound. If the fluid contains benzene, then it is disposed of "out of state." Kind of like "out of state, out of mind." What I'd like to know is: Where exactly is out of state? Illinois? Oregon? The ocean? Zimbabwe or some other underdeveloped Third World nation? After many attempts, I was unable to discover exactly where the benzene is being shipped. The phrase "out of state" is annoying in its ambiguity, yet it seems to have a calming effect on the public. Why? Maybe because our own hazardous waste is not being dumped in our own backyard but in someone else's. However, Iowans may not experience this comfort much longer. If pending state legislation becomes law, the export of hazardous wastes will become illegal. What will we do with our hazardous waste then?

According to Bill Twaler, director of the UI Health Protection Office, each year the UI uses roughly three million test vials, each containing 10-20 ml of test fluid. That's roughly 30,000-60,000 liters of test fluid that is either transported "out of state" or dumped into the Iowa City water system.

So should we, as members of the Iowa City community, be concerned about the radioactive elements in our drinking water? The university assures us that these levels of carbon 14 and tritium are low enough to result in little, if any, health risk. Furthermore, the university is quick to point out that these elements occur naturally so no one has any reason to be alarmed. Right?

Wrong! I, for one, am alarmed at the prospect of ingesting increased dosages of carbon 14 and tritium for any extended period of time. Tritium is the heavy isotope of hydrogen, and carbon 14 is a heavy isotope of carbon. Because both carbon and hydrogen are integral to the human system, the radioactive isotopes of these elements can displace the naturally occurring elements in our bodies. If incorporation of the radioactive elements takes place in the DNA, it can cause mutations in genetic material, leading to cancer and birth defects.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, and hence the UI, argues that at levels slightly above background levels (levels of the substance that occur "naturally" in air or water), the incidence of cancer and birth defects will not increase. However, there are several fallacies in this line of thought: First, no evidence supports the idea of a threshold dose, a dosage below which there are no associated health risks. Evidence strongly indicates that at any level, the higher the dose, the greater risk of cancer and leukemia. Second, data on the cumulative effect of low doses of radiation over an extended period of time have not yet been developed. Third, because background levels were determined after the widespread use of nuclear weapons, nuclear testing and nuclear-generated power, they do not necessarily represent "natural" or safe levels of radioactivity in the environment. Logically, increasing the dose above a level that may already be unsafe will result in an increased risk of cancer and birth defects, especially for vulnerable groups such as young children, pregnant women, the sick and the elderly.

The NRC has stated that exposure to "low-level" radiation is of little concern. Workers in the Department of Energy nuclear plutonium production plant know first-hand that these levels are reason for concern. After 40 years of constant exposure to these "low" levels of radiation, the incidence of cancers, birth defects and abnormalities for this group of workers was much higher than that of the rest of the nation. This has forced the NRC to re-evaluate its guidelines for "low" levels of radioactivity.

Concerning radioactive elements in Iowa City drinking water, the question becomes: Do we accept this breach of public health, and, if not, who should be held accountable for it? Should it be the UI, for exhibiting a blatant disregard for community welfare by routing their radioactive waste back into the water system, even though they are following federal guidelines set by the NRC? Or should it be the NRC, for setting guidelines for "low" level radiation that are too liberal?

Regardless of who is at fault here, there is an underlying problem that extends beyond low-level radioactivity into many areas of environmental legislation. For a long time, people generally felt that if a government agency decided on a certain safety guideline, the guideline was safe. Too often environmental guidelines are a quick-fix, determined by legislators concerned with convenience and cost-cutting who fail to weigh the actual long-term health effects. It is becoming obvious that people can no longer blindly trust their local, state and national governments to make and enforce sound environmental regulations. People need to start thinking for themselves and making their voices heard. Write to the university administration. Call or write the NRC to oppose its current low-level radioactive waste policy.

Certain groups of people feel that the UI Environmental Coalition and other environmental groups overreact to trivial issues. Why the big fuss about a "little" bit of radioactivity in the drinking water? Our concern is the cumulative effect of prolonged exposure to many different toxins. Besides the water problem, every day we are exposed to dioxins, heavy metals and radioactive particles from numerous medical waste incinerators, graphite from tire incineration (which contributes to respiratory ailments), and dangerous chemicals from herbicides used on the Pentacrest lawn. Environmental groups like the UI Environmental Coalition respond to these health risks in an effort to improve the dangerous situations. Neither the UI nor the government can be fully trusted to protect human health. If we don't do something now, nobody will.

Chelsey Rasmussen is the president of the UI Environmental Coalition. Earth Alert! is an environmental awareness column that appears Fridays on the Viewpoints page.

Producer speaks on TV industry

By Beth Chacey
The Daily Iowan

UI alumna Marion Rees, television producer of such works as "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman" and "Love is Never Silent," spoke yesterday at the UI Old Capitol about the power of the images created by the media.

"As communicators we have the power to defraud or dignify the human experience," she said. "Each of us has to decide what our own personal images will say."

A 1951 graduate, Rees spoke of how she "stumbled into" the field of television after being intent on a career in sociology.

"Hollywood was an accident in a search for social work," she explained, recalling how she only took a secretarial job with NBC in 1952 in order to earn money for a bus ticket back home to Iowa.

She stayed with NBC and worked her way up the career ladder to her present position — owner of her own production company, Marion Rees Associates, Inc.

Her production of "Love is Never Silent" won an Emmy and her HBO film, "Between Friends," starring Carol Burnett and Elizabeth Taylor, won an ACE Cable award in 1988.

In the past, Rees has been associated with "All in the Family"

UI alumna Marion Rees

and "Sanford and Son," among others.

Despite her success in the television industry, Rees admitted that until several years ago, she perceived herself not as a recognized television producer but as a failed sociologist. Rees said a friend pointed out to her that she was essentially a practicing sociologist, but in a different forum.

Rees said she has chosen to base her career on her interest in sociology.

"The movies I've made for television, I realize, are each a reflection of values I hold dear, and issues of deep personal concern to me," Rees said.

The subject matter of her productions has included such social issues as civil rights, child abuse and substance abuse.

Professor compares U.S. wars

By Les May
The Daily Iowan

UI history Professor Stephen Vlastos said he believes there will be more wars.

In light of this, drawing parallels between the Vietnam War and the Persian Gulf war is important as a way of understanding how American public opinion is shaped during wars, Vlastos said at the last in a series of discussions on "War and Peace" at the Shambaugh House Honors Center.

In the Vietnam War, there was a close correlation between the increasing number of American casualties and the decline of the American public's initially high support for the war, Vlastos said.

However, other factors had an effect on public opinion in the Vietnam War, he said, like the lack of demonstrable progress. While casualties increased, it was harder to show that the stated goals of American intervention were being achieved.

In South Vietnam the government backed by the United States did not have widespread support from its people. But in the gulf war, Vlastos said, Americans could see their involvement as an effort to "liberate Kuwait."

"In the Persian Gulf war, these issues were clearer," Vlastos said. "Without much image management, the government was able to demonize (Saddam) Hussein since you could look at his history of repression and atrocities. It was not as easy with Ho Chi Minh. However one judges communism as an ideology, he did not fit the image of a monstrous leader of a totalitarian state."

While strict censorship occurred in the gulf war, there was no formal censorship in Vietnam, Vlastos said. One reason the public didn't support the war was because reporters were allowed to show whatever they saw, and when people saw the horrors of war, they turned against it, he said. Vlastos said none of these influences on public opinion were allowed to occur in the Persian Gulf war.

Festival celebrates Turkish culture

By Les May
The Daily Iowan

Recently, the public has been exposed to political news about Turkey because of the Persian Gulf war. But this Sunday the UI Turkish Students Association will show off the cultural side of their country at the "Turkish Night" festival at 7 p.m. in the International Center Lounge.

This first-ever festival of Turkish culture will include free Turkish folk dancing lessons, art exhibits, folktale readings for children, a slide show and the opportunity to play backgammon, a favorite Middle Eastern game.

Dishes to be served include dolmas, or stuffed grape leaves, and baklava, a sweet pastry.

Colleen Guler, T.S.A. member, said Turkish culture shares some similarities with the cultures of other Middle Eastern peoples. The Turks were influenced by Arabs while the region was united under the rule of the Ottoman Empire centuries ago. However, they have retained a unique culture that Americans may not be familiar with.

"We're trying to make the festival not a touristic kind of thing, but more educational," Guler said.

riillas were killed.

The attack by Saddam's forces came less than 24 hours after Washington announced it had warned the Baghdad government over the weekend not to launch air attacks against Kurdish areas.

The exodus of the Kurdish population continued. Scores of refugees, particularly babies and old people, are dying daily from exposure, malnutrition and disease.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, visiting Kuwait, said allied forces "accomplished every single mission" assigned to them.

"I have a great feeling of a great victory," said Schwarzkopf. "Anyone who dares even imply that we did not achieve a great victory obviously doesn't know what the hell he's talking about."

The formal cease-fire, to be signed later Thursday at the United Nations, will eventually free up nearly 100,000 American troops from the U.S. VII Corps occupying southern Iraq. But full withdrawal of the corps is unlikely to occur immediately.

The Germany-based U.S. 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment of 5,000 troops withdrew from southern Iraq this week in anticipation of the cease-fire. That leaves the U.S. 3rd Armored Division from Germany and the U.S. 1st Infantry Division from Fort Riley, Kan., to be withdrawn.

Fines

County and Municipal Employees to file a complaint with the OSHA, whose inspectors arrived on the day of the explosion. Though no one was injured, AFSCME area vice president Steve O'Donnell was at the site shortly before the explosion.

The documents sent to the Iowa OSHA by the UI show that university officials admit to exposing employees to oxymethylen oxide and sulfuric acid, both corrosives, and not having eye- and body-wash stations in one chemical room. They also admitted to not having safety railings at some sites. Officials also said employees dealing with hot ash had full face shields and proper gloves. However, they noted, coveralls with hoods were not available until March 8, after the second of two state inspections at the Power Plant.

The UI — represented by the Iowa attorney general — is also engaged in an appeal procedure against Environmental Protection Agency fines of $89,000 for record-keeping violations concerning PCBs at the Power Plant.

PCBs, polychlorinated biphenyls, are banned chemicals suspected of causing cancer and known to harm the environment.

Baker

Baker, too, is insisting that any negotiation be held on the basis of the resolutions, which were approved by the Security Council in 1967 and 1973. President Bush calls the U.S. policy a "territory for peace" formula.

There was no immediate word on what Assad told Baker. The Syrian's views could be critical for the outcome of the peace mission.

Assad wants to recover the Golan Heights from Israel. Until Syria's defeat in the 1967 war, villages in northern Israel were under periodic attack from the Golan Heights. Money from Saudi Arabia and other rich Arab countries has helped make it possible for the PLO to carry out guerrilla raids against Israel. But the Saudis were disappointed when the PLO backed Iraq in the Persian Gulf war.

Whatever the Saudis' motivation, a suspension of financial support to the PLO could build confidence in Israel that Arab attitudes are changing.

Baker has been trying to sell Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir on that idea in order to encourage him to risk giving up territory to the Arabs in a peace settlement.

Just how tough is life in softball conference?

Ask the coaches of the favorites Iowa and Michigan, and you it's tough, real tough. So two teams will come into a four-team weekend with 2-2 conference records. The Big Ten's two nationally-ranked No. 6 Iowa (29-6) and No. 18 Michigan (18-10) — meet in doubleheader Saturday in Ann Arbor, Mich. Pitches are scheduled for 3 p.m. Saturday.

Hawks v let down

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team has 11-2-1 since returning from a spring break trip to Florida, including taking three of four from Michigan. But going in four-game series against Indiana this weekend, the Hawkeyes who were picked to finish in the Big Ten cellar — seem to be keeping their feet on the ground.

"It could be easy (to look at Indiana), but I don't think team will," second baseman Larsen said. "We came in as underdogs; we were picked to finish in the bottom half of the conference. This team ... we want to prove that wrong."

The Hawkeyes and Hoosiers play doubleheaders both Saturday and Sunday beginning at 7 p.m. at Iowa Field.

Iowa is second in the Big Ten with a 3-1 record, while Indiana is close behind with a 2-2 conference tally. The Hoosiers took three of four from Indiana last weekend.

Women's golf hopes Columbus trip only a warmup

By Jay Nanda
The Daily Iowan

No matter which sport is in question, traveling to Ohio State is rarely something Big Ten teams to look forward to. But if the Iowa women's golf team has its way, they'll be going twice.

The Hawkeyes hit the road once again Saturday and Sunday for a tournament at Ohio State, hoping to do slightly better than their solid second-place finish last weekend at the 17-team Indiana Invite. And should the Hawkeyes continue their stellar play, they may get the opportunity to come back to Columbus — the site of the NCAA Championships May 23-26.

"This is a big tournament because this is the course where they'll play the national

"We can beat Indiana. We just have to play our own game."

Becky Fuglestad

championship," said head coach Diane Thomason.

This weekend could also be crucial because it will give Iowa another crack at beating traditionally-tough Indiana, the only team to outscore the Hawkeyes last weekend.

"We would like to get first place," said junior Becky Fuglestad. "We can beat Indiana. We just have to play our own game, shoot one shot at a time and not get ahead of yourself."

Another team to contend with will be Minnesota, who may be smarting after a setback to Iowa over Spring Break in Arizona.

"We really would like to beat Indiana but Minnesota's a big contender, too," said freshman Stacy Boville. "But we're doing really good."

Boville appeared to be someone to contend with herself last weekend in Indiana, as she shot an opening round of 79, just five over par, en route to a 246. That was good enough for third on the team behind Iowa's two seniors, Stacey Arnold and Shirley Trier.

"A 79 is my best this year," said Boville.

"It was concentration, basically."

Team focus evidently played an important role as well in Iowa's play last weekend, but may need to be improved upon in the putting aspect, which is something Thomason had expressed concerns about going in.

"I think we had putting troubles but this tournament we'll do better," said Boville.

"The putting game was really fast (last week)," said Fuglestad. "I need to work on my putting — it's a major part of the game."

And as long as the Hawkeyes continue to work on and better their overall game, winning the conference and earning a chance to see Columbus again could end up being more than just a goal.

"I think we can win Big Tens if we can just play our game," said Fuglestad.

No. 6 Iowa, No. 14 Michigan expect tough series

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Just how tough is life in the Big Ten softball conference?

Ask the coaches of the preseason league favorites Iowa and Michigan, and they'll tell you it's tough, real tough. So tough that the two teams will come into a four-game series this weekend with 2-2 conference records.

The Big Ten's two nationally-ranked teams — No. 6 Iowa (29-6) and No. 14 Michigan (18-10) — meet in doubleheaders today and Saturday in Ann Arbor, Mich. The first pitches are scheduled for 3 p.m. today and 1 p.m. Saturday.

With the conference's two nationally-ranked teams locking horns this weekend, the series could easily be seen as a Big Ten title bout. But neither coach is subscribing to that theory after their teams absorbed losses in their Big Ten openers.

The Wolverines lost two of four games to a young Indiana team two weeks ago in Bloomington, Ind. The Hoosiers have spurred to an early 6-3 conference record and into contention for the league title.

The Hawkeyes split four games with Minnesota at home last weekend in a series that Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said has established the Gophers as Big Ten contenders.

Add Ohio State — one of last year's defending co-champs — to the mix and five of the Big Ten's seven softball teams appear to have a shot at the conference title.

"In the Big Ten, anything goes," Michigan coach Carol Hutchins said. "It's just the emotion of the Big Ten. Every game counts and everyone on the field knows it."

"Every year we go (to Michigan), it's a battle every inning," Blevins said. "But that's mostly the case throughout the conference."

What the weekend series will be is a matchup between two of the league's better defensive teams. Michigan has a .961 fielding percentage, while Iowa's is .960.

That means it could be a low-scoring series, Blevins said.

"When you've got two solid defensive teams matched up, you're not going to see as many scoring opportunities," the Iowa coach said. "When you have them, you have to take advantage of them."

The Hawkeyes took advantage of their only scoring chance in the first meeting between the two teams this year. Iowa used a bunt single, a sacrifice, a stolen base and an infield hit to beat the Wolverines, 1-0 in eight innings, at the San Jose National Invitational Tournament.

"That was a great defensive game," Hutchins said. "It was a great test for us. We really didn't know what was going to happen. Going in, we knew that they had a great pitching staff, but I think we showed

Hawks vow not to let down vs. Indiana

The Iowa baseball team has gone 11-2-1 since returning from a 3-5 spring break trip to Florida, including taking three of four from Michigan. But going into a four-game series against Indiana this weekend, the Hawkeyes — who were picked to finish in the Big Ten cellar — seem to be keeping their feet on the ground.

"It could be easy (to look past Indiana), but I don't think this team will," second baseman Cory Larsen said. "We came in as underdogs; we were picked to finish in the bottom half of the conference. This team... wants to prove that wrong."

The Hawkeyes and Hoosiers will play doubleheaders both Saturday and Sunday beginning at 1 p.m. at Iowa Field.

Iowa is second in the Big Ten with a 3-1 record, while Indiana is close behind with a 5-2-1 conference tally. The Hoosiers took three of four from Illinois last weekend.

"Indiana had a good series against Illinois," Iowa pitcher Mark Stuhr said. "But if we keep playing the way we have since coming back from Florida, we should be in every ball game."

The Hawkeyes are 16-11-1 after crushing Augustana Tuesday and shutting out Grand View in two games Wednesday. But despite their successes this week, Stuhr said the Iowa players won't let down this weekend.

"Everyone was predicting us to be really bad," the righthander said. "That's the underlying factor. We're trying to prove that we're better than that. If people don't give us credit, we just have to keep playing well."

"We've worked too hard to improve since this fall to get cocky. We just have to play every game the best we can and take it from there."

The Hoosiers are led in hitting by Byron Bradley, who has a .408 batting average with four homers and 21 RBIs. Kevin Goins is hitting .389 with eight home runs and a team-leading 38 RBIs on the season.

In the Indiana pitching ranks, righthander Chris Newcomb is 6-1 with a 5.48 ERA. The only other Hoosier hurler with more than two wins is Steve Schaefer, who improved to 5-2 with a 2.68 ERA after throwing his sixth complete game in seven starts last weekend against the Illini.

Several Hawkeyes have been sharing the spotlight for their hitting, including center fielder Danan Hughes, third baseman Bobby Morris, first baseman Kevin Minchik and right fielder John Pratt.

Hughes is batting .327 with five home runs and 14 RBIs and has

Arkansas players appeal suspension

By Ron Fournier
The Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Four basketball players, who sources say were suspended from the team for a year following a sexual incident, filed appeals with the school Thursday, the University of Arkansas system president said.

B. Alan Sugg said he will make a decision on the appeals by Tuesday or Wednesday.

"I have complete authority," he said when asked if he had the power to overturn the disciplinary action taken on Monday.

The Associated Press reported Wednesday that the players, including second-team All-American Todd Day, cannot play or practice for a year because of a Feb. 27 sexual encounter with a 34-year-old Springdale, Ark., woman at the athletic dorm. The high-level university sources weren't specific about the reasons for the action.

"The minimum effect of this would be to prohibit all of the players involved from either playing or practicing next year — for the full year," one of the sources said.

"Appeals have been filed. They have been filed by all four players," Sugg said. He said the appeals were filed at the system's Fayetteville campus. He said he expected to receive a copy of the report and tape recordings of testimony on Friday.

The woman said she was sexually assaulted Feb. 27, and implicated four players. They admitted having sex with her but said she consented. The woman's attorney said his client didn't press charges because the prosecutor clearly wasn't interested in the case.

Extensive publicity given to the case could effect the disposition of the appeals, university spokesman Jim Treadway has said.

"You can see how this type of thing can effect the process. People are calling in and saying it's too harsh. If there's a great wave of people doing that it could effect the outcome of the decision," he said Wednesday. Treadway declined comment Thursday.

Jim Blair, chairman of the school's board of trustees, said he didn't think the publicity would hurt the appeals process. But he said he did want the issue to go away.

It was unclear how the appeals process works at the university, school officials said. Chancellor Dan Ferritor has removed himself from the process because his daughter is an academic counselor for the players. That left Sugg as the next man up the chain of command. Treadway and Blair didn't know if the board would hear any appeals of Sugg's ruling. Both said they expect the cases to be resolved soon, perhaps by next week.

OAKLAND, Calif. — Rickey Henderson was caught stealing and later pulled up lame to remain stuck one steal shy of tying Lou Brock's all-time career stolen base record, and the Oakland Athletics defeated Minnesota, 3-0.

Joe Sulasrski pitched seven shut-out innings in his major league debut as a late replacement for scheduled starter Eric Show. Moments after Sulasrski walked off after allowing five hits, Henderson limped away.

Henderson hit a grounder to shortstop in the seventh and made it two-thirds up the first base line before stopping to grab his left calf. He sat down and had to be helped by trainer Barry Weinberg before struggling off the field. Henderson left, and his status is day-to-day for Oakland's next game, Friday night at home against Seattle.

Henderson, who went 1-for-4 with a fourth-inning single, was thrown out by catcher Junior Ortiz at second base in his only attempt to tie Brock's record of 938. On Wednesday night, Henderson reached base once, and was picked off second.

Sulasrski, recalled from Tacoma of the Pacific Coast League hours before the game, struck out two and walked three. Dennis Eckersley pitched two innings for his first save. Scott Erickson took the loss.

Angels 5, Mariners 0

SEATTLE — Mark Langston, trying to rebound from the most disappointing season of his career, pitched six strong innings and the California Angels beat Seattle for a three-game sweep and their best start in 21 years.

Dave Winfield drove in three runs for the second straight day for the Angels, off to their best beginning since going 5-0 in 1970.

Langston went 10-17 last season after signing a five-year, $16 million contract. This time, Langston gave up four hits, walked two and struck out three, and Jeff Robinson pitched three innings for a save.

Oakland's Rickey Henderson is caught stealing by Twins second baseman Al Newman Thursday.

Brian Holman was the loser. Indians 6, Red Sox 4

CHICAGO — Lee Smith retired Shawon Dunston on a fly ball with the bases loaded to end the game and the St. Louis Cardinals stalled Chicago's two-run rally in the ninth inning Thursday to hold off the Cubs 5-4.

The Cardinals led 5-1 before Dunston hit an RBI single in the eighth off Scott Terry. In the ninth, two walks by Smith and a single by Ryne Sandberg loaded the bases with one out.

Mark Grace, who hit a solo homer earlier, hit a two-run single that made it 5-4 and put runners on first and second. After George Bell struck out, Andre Dawson got an infield single that loaded the bases. Smith got his second save of the season when Dunston hit a routine fly ball to right fielder Felix Jose.

Ken Hill (1-0) allowed four hits in six innings. He took a 4-0 lead and

Runners to go distance at Duncan

By Jim Viner
The Daily Iowan

Last weekend's SE-Motion Relays at Southeast Missouri State proved to be an excellent opportunity for Iowa's sprinters and throwers to open the outdoor season in nice warm weather. But while the warm weather was favorable to those "more explosive events," Coach Jerry Hassard used his distance personnel sparingly.

Women's Track

This weekend's Jim Duncan Invitational in Des Moines should provide Iowa's distance runners with more favorable conditions in an outdoor meet.

"We saved a lot of distance runners so they could open up this weekend at the Jim Duncan Invitational," Hassard said.

The meet features about thirty Division II and III teams, with about six or seven Division I schools competing, including Minnesota, Iowa State and host Drake.

"There'll be plenty of action," Hassard said. "The field of large schools is a little smaller, however." One Iowa distance runner who did open her season last weekend was senior Jeanne Kruckeberg. The three-time all-American and 1987 Iowa track MVP anchored the distance medley with a 4:54 clocking on the 1600 meter leg. She also competed in the open 1500 meter, but did not place.

"She was fatigued from the first race as she was just coming back," Hassard said.

Other standout performers for the team in this young outdoor season include Jodi Peterson (third in the discus at SE-Motion with a throw of 148-7"), and Nancy Tessmer (third in the high jump at SE-Motion with a jump of 5-8").

Tessmer will be defending her 1990 Jim Duncan title. Her winning jump 5-9" was also her best mark for the season. Junior Jennifer Brower will be defending her 1990 title in the 10000 meters in the meet as well.

Netters to face nemesis Minnesota

But men think their chances are better than ever

By Michael Watkins
The Daily Iowan

Last weekend, the Iowa men's tennis team faced its first real test of the Big Ten season against the likes of nationally-ranked Indiana and Ohio State, both top-four finishers in the conference last year.

"This weekend, things don't appear to be getting any easier for the 15-4 Hawkeyes as they compete in their fourth consecutive road match against yet another nationally-ranked Big Ten team — Minnesota."

"The match this weekend will definitely be a real severe test for us, both as individuals and as a team," said head coach Steve Houghton. "In our win last week over Ohio State, we ended a long-standing string of losses on their home courts with a consistent team effort. Hopefully, we can do the same thing this weekend in Minnesota."

For the Hawkeyes, however, matches on the Gopher's home courts in past years have proven to be anything but successful, including a dual-match meeting last season in which Minnesota, who would eventually finish in the top five at the conference championships, leveled Iowa 8-1. The loss was the Hawkeyes' second straight in the Big Ten and one of their worst of the season.

"We haven't exactly had a lot of success on their courts," Houghton said.

But Houghton thinks this weekend's confrontation with the 22nd-ranked Gophers could be different, especially after the Hawkeyes posted a 5-4 victory over the Buckeyes last Sunday and put in a strong 3-6 showing in a loss to No. 12 Indiana Saturday to go improve to 3-1 in Big Ten play.

"I think that we can win, but we have to play better than we did versus Indiana," Houghton said. "After the way we played against them, I think that the guys really believe that they can play on the same level with the best in the conference, which can only be to our advantage."

"But, we do have to be wary of Minnesota, particularly since they beat both Indiana and Ohio State last weekend in close contests."

Like both the Hoosiers and Buckeyes, the Gophers boast a well-balanced team from top to bottom, especially at the top two positions with nationally-ranked No. 1 player Kevin Werwei and second-seeded Brian Uihlein in the lineup. In the latest collegiate rankings, Werwei was ranked in the top 50 while Uihlein, a former top 50 player, was listed in the top 75.

For Iowa's top seed, freshman Klas Bergstrom, this Saturday's match against Minnesota marks his third straight meeting against a nationally-ranked player and his sixth of the season. Since the beginning of the spring semester, Bergstrom, a top-ranked Swedish player, is 1-4 versus top-75 players with three of the four losses coming in straight sets.

"Up and down, they are a solid group of players," Houghton said. "They don't have one particular player capable of blowing anyone off of the court, so every singles match will be a challenge."

"Minnesota is also very consistent in their doubles play, so there's no way that we can go into the doubles matches down 2-4 after singles and hope that we can pull it out victories in all three doubles matches. We have to play consistency in all phases of the match."

Lacrosse improves to 3-1 over weekend

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's lacrosse team split-contests last weekend, falling 10-8 to Wisconsin before beating Northwestern 11-7. The loss to the Badgers was the Hawkeyes' first of the year, but Iowa raised its record to 3-1 over the weekend.

According to team co-captain Mark St. Germain, the key to Iowa's success so far this season has been the defense's ability to size and check opposing offenses.

"We have always been a physical team,"

Germain said. "We can win games by abusing other teams."

But coach Rob Urstein doesn't dismiss the efforts of the offense, particularly the attacks, which accounted for 16 goals versus the Wildcats and Badgers.

"I thought Mike Morse, with seven goals, played especially well (last) weekend," Urstein said. "Generally, the offense is coming along well, but it takes longer to develop an efficient offense. We are still working on some new things."

In Saturday's match with Wisconsin, Iowa

trailed 8-5 but tied the game, 8-8, before giving up the Badgers' last two points in the final minutes.

In a rematch of last season's third-place game in the Northern Illinois Tournament, Iowa finishes out their Big Ten regular season as they square-off against Illinois Saturday at 11 a.m. They resume play Sunday, again facing Northwestern, to decide the second and third seeds for the following weekend's Big Ten tournament. Both contests will be played at the Fieldhouse Field across from Klotz tennis courts.

Runners hope to avenge UNI loss

By Jim Viner
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track and field team will be looking for revenge as they host Northern Iowa Saturday at noon on the Cretzmeyer track.

The Panthers have defeated the Hawkeyes in their last two meetings. Earlier this year the Panthers' 70 team points outscored Minnesota's 45 and Iowa's 38 in an indoor triangular in Cedar Falls.

They also narrowly defeated the Hawkeyes in Iowa City during last year's outdoor season, 80-71.

But Iowa coach Ted Wheeler thinks it's time his Hawkeyes turn the tables on the Panthers.

"Right now we're a good, solid team," Iowa head coach Ted Wheeler said. "With a successful team effort we should be able to win." Sophomore Anthuan Maybank, who battled injury throughout the indoor season, has returned to form, running the sprint medley and the 4x400 relay at the Sun Angel Invitational in Tempe, Ariz.

Wheeler had been using Maybank sparingly because of a leg injury, but after his performances last weekend, Maybank seems to be back to 100 percent.

"He's run well," Wheeler said. "We'll go ahead and run Anthuan

'Paradise Lost'; ratings regained

In the world of info-tainment news shows, the race to one-up the competition never ends as networks try to pull in viewers with the most eye-popping (or in the case of the recent spate of Spring Break features, bikini-popping) stories possible. So it came as no surprise last week when ABC's "20/20" turned to our old friend, the Prince of Lies, to boost ratings.

The show grabbed gobs of media attention with its airing of an actual Roman Catholic exorcism. After all, if Geraldo (a "20/20" alum) can make a big splash with a piece on Satanism, then it makes sense that booking the Light Bringer himself would certainly be a coup. It was, and the ratings for Friday's program took off like a bat out of Hell.

of today then to dust off a Medieval rite? All those cheap horror films have it exactly right, said the Catholic Church, and only we can save you! In other words, who you gonna call?

"20/20" did its part to keep the melodramatic ball rolling, showing scenes from "The Exorcist," accompanied by the obligatory intro from the "Carmina Burana." The point was clear: We form our expectations of reality from fantasy, thus we want our facts to look as much as possible like our fictions.

This became even more obvious as the footage of the actual exorcism began, when a family in Miami called "Father A," New York's No. 1 exorcist (he insisted on anonymity, presumably fearing that one of those demons he sent up the Styx may come looking for payback). The exorcist was Gina, a teenage girl who'd had a history of violent seizures accompanied by speaking in tongues and, her family claims, levitation (of course, like our good friends down in Fairfield, no one actually recorded such levitation on film). In pre-exorcism interviews Gina came off as a troubled girl, but then aren't all teen-agers a little troubled? Gina merely chose John Milton over Judy Blume to express her adolescent angst.

Before things got cooking, the "20/20" reporter solicited the opinion of a reverend psychiatrist who pointed out the obvious: Paranoid-schizophrenia would manifest itself in terms of one's belief systems. However, this was countered by a priest's observation: Sure she's schizophrenic, but where did the illness come from? Could it be... Satan? In the long run, "20/20" tried to present balanced secular explanations for everything shown, but the entertainment appeal of the girl's weird voices and contorted expressions quickly swept away the psychiatrists' and doctors' calm medical reasoning.

The actual exorcism included all the things you would expect. As Father A recited the ceremony, Gina retched, spoke in cartoon voices, rolled her eyes, wagged her tongue (more a sign of a Kiss fan than demonic possession), screamed and summoned up the in-house demons: Minga (the Merciless?) and Zion. This was accompanied by the priests' warnings of the dangers of an exorcism — innocent witnesses could become the banished demons' new host! We were also told that the last time they met with Gina, the demons threw pillows.

In the end, Gina was freed of her possessors; however, she did end up back in the hospital for more conventional psychiatric treatment, including heavy tranquilizers. The doctors noted that she responded to treatment better than she had before the exorcism, and Gina herself testified to her newfound inner peace. Of course, feed him enough anti-psychotic drugs and even Chuck Manson would feel pretty mellow.

In the end it was obvious that the exorcism removed a block in Gina's psyche that helped her toward recovery. And in that sense the "20/20" piece showed that though we may debate the existence of Satan, we can't deny the power of belief in him. The Dark One is a terrific sociological tool: He can be used as a scapegoat for societal and individual ills, releasing us from responsibility for the really icky stuff. Or he can be used as an excuse for the removal of art and ideas we find offensive. Or simply as a cattle prod, shocking and terrifying the sheep into getting with the program. Most of all, belief in Satan gives our lives great drama, providing an epic black-and-white struggle that diverts our attention from real life's annoying greys.

Not to mention the economic lesson, reaffirmed last week by "20/20" and the Roman Catholic Church: the selling of Satan really sells.

Collect 'em all: Rock cards arrive

By Larry McShane
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — So what if Sting's game is soccer or Madonna's a jogger? Both have joined baseball's boys of summer on bubble-gum cards, a collection that puts pop stars on the trading block with the kings of swing.

MusiCards, the rock and rap answer to the traditional cards, arrived in stores just before this week's opening day.

"Sports cards became what they have because the cards are a little window between the kids and their heroes," said Victor Shaffer, director of marketing for the cards' manufacturer, Pro Set. "Sports these days is entertainment; music is as well."

While not the first-ever music cards — that New Kids on the Block set is still available — they are the first cards not limited to a single performer, Shaffer said.

Jose Canseco only gets one card per year, but the most popular of the MusiCards bunch get multiples. Led Zeppelin, Janet Jackson, Madonna, George Michael, M.C. Hammer and Vanilla Ice have five cards apiece in the 260-card set.

Pro Set is hoping to tap a new market with its collectibles: pre-teen and teen-age girls.

Each card features a photo of the artists on the front, with a fact or two and a smaller picture on the back. For example, there's Eric Clapton: "Though Cream existed only two years, it played a profound role in the development of heavy rock."

Or Sting: "Since going solo in 1984, the seven-time Grammy Award winner has combined his musical career with work for Amnesty International and the indigenous people of the Amazon rain forest."

There are several notables who didn't get cards: Bruce Springsteen, Michael Jackson, The Rolling Stones, All the Beatles, solo or together, except John Lennon. A lack of artist approval was behind the absences, but Shaffer declined to discuss specifics, saying he didn't want to jinx future deals with these stars.

The folks included comprise a strange mélange of dinosaurs and dance divas and metal heads.

IN THE Zone

By Locke Peterseim

While the network was out to win a time slot, the Roman Catholic Church had its own agenda for allowing an exorcism to be performed, let alone shown on television. In March of last year, New York's John Cardinal O'Connor announced to the shock of the nation that the church had performed two exorcisms of late. Ostensibly he was demonstrating the presence of the Fiery Foe in the modern world (dragging out that old Satanic warhorse, Ozzy Osbourne, as another example); of course, his real reasons for the revelation were political and survival-oriented. Under attack for his stubborn views on birth control, homosexuality, AIDS, abortion and women priests, the church has been rapidly sliding into archaism. And what better way to show that you're in touch with the problems

Schafer of 'Gilligan' fame is dead at 90

The Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — Actress Natalie Schafer, known to generations of "Gilligan's Island" fans as the stranded millionaire's wife, Lovey, has died. She was 90.

Schafer died Wednesday of cancer at her home, said family spokesman Frank Lieberman.

Schafer played the wife of Thurston Howell III, portrayed by the late Jim Backus. They were among the marooned passengers on the charter boat "Minnow."

Bob Denver starred as Gilligan. Other cast members included Alan Hale Jr. as skipper Jonas Grumby and Tina Louise as Ginger Grant.

The show originally ran on CBS-TV from 1964 to 1967 and remains enormously popular in reruns.

There also were three reunion TV movies: "Rescue From Gilligan's Island" in 1978, "The Castaways on Gilligan's Island" in 1979 and "The Harlem Globetrotters on Gilligan's Island" in 1981.

Schafer also starred in the short-lived (1969-1970) drama series "The Survivors" with Lana Turner and Kevin McCarthy.

Survivors include longtime companion Maurice Hill, said Lieberman.

No funeral is planned.

Now you can afford to dream in color

Apple introduces the Macintosh LC— an affordable color Macintosh system that's perfect for students.

If you thought that finding a color Macintosh® system you could afford was just a dream, then the new, affordable Macintosh LC is a dream come true.

The Macintosh LC is rich in color. Unlike many computers that can display only 16 colors at once, the Macintosh LC expands your palette to 256 colors. It also comes with a microphone and new sound-input technology that lets you personalize your work by adding voice or other sounds.

Like every Macintosh computer, the LC is easy to set up and easy to master. And it runs thousands of available applications that all work in the same, consistent way—so once you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. The Macintosh LC even lets you share information with someone who uses a different type of computer—thanks to the versatile Apple® SuperDrive™, which can read from and write to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS/2, and

Apple II floppy disks

Take a look at the Macintosh LC and see what it gives you. Then pinch yourself.

It's better than a dream—it's a Macintosh..

Visit the Personal Computing Support Center, Room 229, Lindquist Center for a demonstration or call 335-5454 for more information.

This offer is available to U of I departments as well as students, faculty and staff.

Degree seeking students enrolled in a minimum of six credit hours are eligible to purchase a Macintosh through Weeg Computing Center. Purchase of equipment is for personal use in furtherance of professional/educational work while at the university.

The power to be your best.™
