

Tsongas throws hat into campaign ring

By Donald M. Rothberg
The Associated Press

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Paul Tsongas opened a long-shot campaign for the 1992 Democratic presidential nomination Tuesday with a call for a new economic nationalism and with an outsider's criticism of Washington.

Accusing successive Republican presidents of lacking leadership, the former Massachusetts senator said, "Enough of this Washington avoidance. Enough of this Washington mediocrity." Tsongas became the first Democrat to declare his candidacy.

He began his campaign at a rain-drenched hometown rally in Lowell, Mass., and then headed to nearby New Hampshire, the state that holds the nation's first presidential primary.

A dryer but smaller crowd heard the same speech in an auditorium at the Manchester campus of the University of New Hampshire.

"I feel like I'm home in New Hampshire," said Tsongas who grew up only a few miles from the state and then graduated from Dartmouth College.

From New Hampshire, Tsongas flew to Iowa, another early voting state.

Tsongas is likely to have the field to himself for the coming weeks and perhaps months.

Most better-known Democrats — Sens. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee and Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, and Govs. Mario Cuomo of New York and Douglas Wilder of Virginia — are holding off, probably until the fall, on announcing their 1992 intentions.

"For the moment, he (Tsongas) has an opportunity to fill a void," said former New Hampshire Democratic chairman Joseph Grandmaison, who stood at the back of the room to observe the Manchester speech. Grandmaison said Tsongas' outsider bid was a "type of candidacy that traditionally runs well in both Iowa and New Hampshire."

Tsongas' health could be an issue. He declined to seek re-election to a second Senate term in 1984 after he was diagnosed as suffering cancer of the lymphatic system. He underwent radical treatment and now says he is free of the disease.

His principal message is economic.

In an 85-page booklet in which he spelled out his positions on a range of issues, Tsongas advocated buying American products over foreign competitors because "I derive a quiet pleasure knowing that my money will remain in our economy and multiply. I instinctively understand that my economic well-being will eventually be determined by the economic well-being of every other American."

Courts

By Ann Marie Williams
The Daily Iowan

A Toddville, Iowa, man was charged Monday with aiding and abetting and forgery.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Christopher Ward, 20, no address given, gave his checkbook to a subject who forged his signature, although he admitted he was aware the account had been closed since November of 1990. Records state the defendant and two other subjects profited from the forgeries.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for May 18.

■ An Iowa City man was charged Monday with assault causing injury.

According to Johnson County District Court records, John D. Koop, 47, 2221 H St., assaulted a subject with an unknown object causing injury to the victim's nose and facial area. The assault occurred after a verbal altercation, records state.

A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for May 18.

■ A Fairfield, Iowa, man was charged Monday with possession of a schedule I controlled substance.

According to Johnson County District Court records, Mark A. Jackson, 32, 501 Bel Aire, Fairfield, was stopped for a traffic violation when an officer discovered the defendant had a suspended license. Records state during a pat-down search, the officer found a clear plastic bag containing a small amount of a green, leafy substance believed to be marijuana.

A preliminary hearing has been set for May 18.

■ According to Johnson County

District Court records, John F. Tyler, 28, 302 6th St., Coralville was charged Tuesday with operating while intoxicated. Records state the defendant was stopped Tuesday in the 100 block of East Market Street at 1:57 a.m.

■ According to Johnson County District Court records, Gary W. Spindle, 18, 808 C Ave. NW, Cedar Rapids, was charged Tuesday with operating while intoxicated.

Records state the defendant was stopped at Highway 6 and 1st Avenue at approximately 6:24 a.m. Tuesday.

Police

■ Six residential burglaries were reported to the Iowa City Police Department April 29. All the incidents occurred before 5:58 p.m.

The first burglary was reported at 420 Hutchinson Ave. at approximately 4:39 p.m. According to police records, the resident used a garage phone to telephone police while watching the thief flee from the scene.

The suspect was described as a white male, 5'10", 180 lbs., with short, dark hair. He was seen wearing a dark jacket, jeans and a pair of black and white tennis shoes.

The other five burglaries occurred at the following locations: Taft Speedway, address unknown; 1302 Carroll St.; 1002 E. College St.; 414

Hutchinson Ave.; 632 Hawkeye Drive.

■ On April 29 three bicycles were reported stolen, all between 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. The robberies occurred at 806 E. College St.; 530 S. Capitol St.; 211 N. Riverside Drive.

■ A suspicious person was reported to Iowa City Police April 29 at approximately 3:45 p.m. The suspect was seen taking pictures of girls sunbathing in Oak Grove Park, Dodge and Page streets.

Police received a call on April 30 from the Vine Tavern, 330 E. Prentiss St., at approximately 12:38 a.m. The caller said that there was an "out of control subject attacking people" in the bar. Police responded to the call but no injuries were reported.

Fulbright, other grants competition opens

The J. William Fulbright Foreign Scholarships Board is announcing the official opening of 1992-93 competition for grants for graduate study abroad offered under the Fulbright Program and by foreign governments, universities and private donors.

The purpose of these grants is to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and other countries through the exchange of persons, knowledge and skills.

Most grants offered provide round-trip transportation, tuition and maintenance for the tenure of the award and tuition waivers, if applicable. All grants include health insurance and accident insurance.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens at the time of application, and generally must hold a bachelor's degree or its equivalent before the beginning date of the grant.

For application forms and more information contact Fulbright Program Adviser Phil Carls at the Study Abroad Center, 28 International Center, 335-0353.

National Sight Saving Month begins today

"Use Foresight—Prevent Blindness" is the theme for this year's observance of National Sight Saving Month, which is May. Iowans are urged to take part in this 42nd annual effort to address preventable blindness.

The Iowa Society to Prevent Blindness estimates that nearly 50,000 individuals will become blind this year. With regular eye exams, early diagnosis and treatment of eye disorders, and use of protective eye wear, some 25,000 people could save their sight this year.

Across Iowa the campaign will include public education efforts via newspaper, television and radio; glaucoma and preschool vision screenings; and education efforts to promote eye safety and eye health.

The Iowa Society to Prevent Blindness is a national voluntary health agency that works to prevent the needless loss of sight through community service, education and research programs.

Library asks for public vote on tax levy

The Iowa City Public Library Board of Trustees voted last week to ask Iowa City voters to support a special operating levy for the library at the November 5 city election.

The funds would be used to maintain services and programs through additional staff, to restock and refurbish library collections and to maintain the physical plant. The levy, at $27 per $1000 assessed valuation, would add about $16.50 per year to the taxes of the average Iowa City home.

The Library Board's action came after two months of deliberations following the City Council's decision not to fund more library staff for the next fiscal year because of state limitations on levies for the general fund.

The measure needs approval by a majority of those voting.

Gifted and talented symposium planned

Researchers, teachers, administrators and students in gifted education will convene May 16-18 at the UI for the first biennial Henry B. and Jocelyn Wallace National Research Symposium on Talent Development.

The symposium, to be held in the Union, is sponsored by the Connie Belin National Center for Gifted Education and the Division of Continuing Education. A generous endowment from the Wallace Genetic Foundation makes the symposium possible.

Researchers from across the country will present their latest findings on talent development and gifted education. Presentations will address issues including gender roles and gifted children, the development of gifted children and the identification of talented minority students.

For more information, contact the Center for Conferences and Institutes, room 249 of the Union, at 335-3231.

Popular UI

By Leslie Yazel
The Daily Iowan

Julie Claus' transcript would make current UI English majors "break down and cry." Claus graduated in 1984, gliding through in four years taking the maximum allowable number of English classes before her senior year.

"I never had any trouble getting my classes," she said.

Claus is now a UI academic adviser and liaison with the English department, and finds getting an English degree is no longer a piece of cake, but rather a struggle for crumbs.

"I didn't get any English classes for (spring) semester," said UI junior Meredith Turner. "I went to five different classes trying to add them." Turner, who is a journalism and English double major, finally added an English class offered through Saturday and Evening Classes.

English isn't the only department facing the challenge of accommodating its students these days — many majors have faced this problem, and others are still struggling with it.

Defining the Problem

Many students blame the university for not providing enough sections when they are unable to get their classes. But administrators and faculty say the problem more often stems from growing demand for a particular major without an increase in faculty and resources for the department.

"In the 1980s, enrollment grew but the Liberal Arts College was unable to expand until 1986," said James Lindberg, associate dean of liberal arts.

Another problem arises when a large number of students enroll in one particular major during a short span of time. Lindberg said that when a cap on the number of business majors was approved by the Iowa state Board of Regents, some who were turned away from the business college entered the School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

The trend continued, and when a large influx of majors flooded the journalism program, the school implemented a formal application

Popular UI departments find it difficult to satisfy all students

"I never had any trouble getting my classes," she said.

Claus is now a UI academic adviser and liaison with the English department, and finds getting an English degree is no longer a piece of cake, but rather a struggle for crumbs.

English isn't the only department facing the challenge of accommodating its students these days — many majors have faced this problem, and others are still struggling with it.

Defining the Problem
Many students blame the university for not providing enough sections when they are unable to get their classes. But administrators and faculty say the problem more often stems from growing demand for a particular major without an increase in faculty and resources for the department.

"In the 1980s, enrollment grew but the Liberal Arts College was unable to expand until 1986," said James Lindberg, associate dean of liberal arts.

Another problem arises when a large number of students enroll in one particular major during a short span of time. Lindberg said that when a cap on the number of business majors was approved by the Iowa state Board of Regents, some who were turned away from the business college entered the School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

The trend continued, and when a large influx of majors flooded the journalism program, the school implemented a formal application procedure to manage the flow. Communication Studies was the next department to experience what Lindberg calls "spill-over," and now English has outgrown its available resources.

Two Conflicting Philosophies
Limited or restricted access usually involves designating students as "pre-majors" until they fulfill a minimum number of hours and maintain a minimum grade point in those courses.

To some it represents crowd control, but for others it goes against the purpose of a state institution.

"We invented a program of limited access," said Ken Starck, director of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication. The journalism school utilizes a program of "pre-registration" which allows majors to sign up for classes prior to UI registration.

"It was done in order to maintain our sanity — it was chaos around here before," he said, adding that the school had almost a thousand students declared as journalism majors in the early 1980s.

"We feel a commitment to the College of Liberal Arts, but we also felt we had an obligation to majors to maintain our program," Starck said.

Lindberg admits that a program of limited access is necessary when faculty, space, and equipment run short, and described journalism in the early 1980s as "literally swamped." But he also said there's a place to draw the line.

"We've had discussions with both English and Psychology because of their spectacular growth, but the college has discouraged them (from limiting access)," Lindberg said.

Lindberg said he follows the philosophy that "mainstream" courses should be available as electives to students who are not majors.

Claus agrees, and said while there are English courses that can benefit all majors, she feels the department has been negatively impacted by the "spill-over."

"It would be better if other departments didn't lock people out of majors," Claus said. "I think there are too many people majoring in English who aren't really English majors," admitting that she has advised students to look at English when they are not accepted into the major they first chose. Brooks Landon, former director of undergraduate studies, said limited access in English would be unfair. "If you can't be a journalism major, then the closest thing is English. We get a lot of those who have been turned away," he said. Ed Folsom, director of the General Education in Literature Program said, "The pressure to (limit access) is coming from departments that have already done it, but by instituting a minimum GPA or limited number of majors."

PALS offers practical experience for registration dilemmas

By Leslie Yazel
The Daily Iowan

Advisers, administrators and faculty have worked for years to help students get the classes they need — but now students are taking it into their own hands.

A group called Peer Assistants for Liberal Arts Students will begin next fall as a resource for students during registration.

The idea began as a class project for UI seniors Leslie Youngren and Ben Burger, who were taking Peer Assistance Counseling last fall. Both saw a need for the program — Youngren because of mistakes in her own registration choices.

"It might prevent some mistakes — in my case, I made some impractical decisions and realized them fairly late," said Youngren.

PALS will consist of an upper-class student from each major who will be accessible to freshmen and sophomores to answer question about the content of specific classes or the style or specialty of certain professors.

"Our main focus is to give professors a break," Youngren said. "A lot of time advisers don't know about specific departments, and freshmen and sophomores may feel apprehensive about asking professors."

"I've been here five years and I've been shuffled between three advisers," agreed Burger. "Sometimes you just get the rubber stamp, when really you need the inside track."

Burger and Youngren, who both graduate this spring, are putting together a handbook for the future student administrators of the program.

PALS volunteers will be trained through workshops involving role playing and "scavenger hunts." The volunteers will be required to learn about major requirements, facts about professors in the department, etc.

Youngren and Burger have taken their idea to the Liberal Arts deans, and have requested funding from the Liberal Arts Student Association. They hope to publish the names of the "student advisers" in the LASA newsletter and eventually in the Schedule of Courses booklet.

The program is expected to begin before spring semester registration next year.

Juliet Kaufmann, director of the UI Academic Advising Center, supports the idea.

"That sort of organization could be very supportive for students who want to know what kind of work is required for a particular class — something specific that an adviser may not necessarily know," she said.

Kaufmann also cautioned that while students can provide a different perspective than advisers, an "easy" class for one student may be much more challenging for another. "Is this a hard course? — you can't answer that if you don't know that student," she said.

Rapist

Like most people, he believes, he pictured a different scenario when he heard the word rape.

"It didn't even enter my mind that this was rape. Basically I had a different idea of what rape was," he said. "I pictured rape as something where some big scary guy with tattoos on his face jumps out of the bushes, throws a woman down and beats her."

He was shocked, he added, when a few hours after the woman left the apartment, three policemen showed up at his door with a warrant for his arrest.

At his hearing, he was charged with rape on the grounds of psychological coercion.

Tom moved to Iowa shortly after he was sentenced, and was automatically put in a sex offender treatment program as part of his probation. It was through the program, he said, that he learned the definition of rape.

"Rape is not just holding a woman down and forcing her to have sex," he said. "It's also when she says no, and you stay there and you pressure and pressure her — it's psychological rape."

While in the treatment program, Tom accepted responsibility for his crime and learned what effects his actions had on his victim. Sexual education and counseling were also part of his treatment.

The program he completed is much like the one at the Mount Pleasant Correctional Facility, the only complete sex offender treatment facility in Iowa.

Program treatment manager Dudley Allison said few, if any, commonalities are seen in acquaintance rape offenders. However, other types of sexual offenders, including violent rapists, do share some characteristics.

"They all seem to have had poor relationships with their same-sex parent, a lack of sexual knowledge and poor self-esteem," he said.

Ted Pillow, program director at Cedar Rapids' Four Oaks Youth Treatment Facility, said treatment programs are designed to address these problems.

"We must do a lot of cognitive restructuring. We try to change the distorted thinking process (rapists) used that has been so dysfunctional for them," he explained.

Rape Victim Advocacy Program Director Karla Miller said three characteristic types of rape are evident:

■ Anger rape: The offender feels he's misunderstood by society and has been cheated by life.

"Anger and frustration build and build, and the release comes from venting that rage," Miller said.

■ Power rape: The offender plans the rape ahead of time, fantasizing about an assault.

"His view of the attack is that he will be so great the victim will then comply. The kick for him is having control over the victim, in knowing she is helpless," she said.

■ Sadistic rape: This type, a com-

SEXUAL ABUSE

The Rape Victim Advocacy Program defines sexual abuse in the following ways:

■ Forced sexual intimacy of any kind.

■ Sex without consent or through the use of intimidation or force.

■ Sexual intimacies achieved through deception or the abuse of trust by men who may be acquaintances of the victim.

■ Sexual acts committed by more than one man in succession — gang rapes or "pulling the train."

■ Obscene phone calls, exhibitionism, window-peeping or street harassment.

■ Child molestation or incest.

bination of the previous two, involves complete control over a victim, including whether she lives or dies. This often has ritualistic overtones.

For example, Miller described one victim whose rapist washed her hair repeatedly. The issue here, she said, is survival. Ted Bundy and the Son of Sam were sadistic rapists.

Miller said rape occurs on a continuum, with the date rapist on one end and the sadistic rapist on the other. She said a potential rapist cannot be spotted based on his appearance, yet that is exactly how most women make judgements about trusting men.

"You can't go by looks," she emphasized. "What you should look for is behavior." Warning behaviors include being over-possessive, disrespecting personal space, and insisting on making decisions for the couple, even down to what they will order in a restaurant. Such actions may be a hint that the person has little respect for his partner's wishes, Miller said.

Tom agrees with this advice, saying women should be careful about what situations they let themselves get into, as well as how trusting they are of anyone they don't know well.

"If somebody met me on the street, they wouldn't have the slightest clue of what I have done, of what I have been through," he said. "I don't look like a rapist — I don't look the role, I don't act the role, and most people can't imagine me having to force a woman to do anything. We all need to work on our understanding of what rape is all about."

bank said it acted "in light of continued weakness in economic activity, especially in the industrial and capital goods areas, and evidence of abating inflationary pressures."

Economists said the Fed was probably influenced by lobbying from President Bush and others, who have called for lower rates, especially with a variety of economic indicators showing the bottom of the downturn has not been reached.

The government reported Tuesday that orders to U.S. factories for manufactured goods fell for a fifth month in a row in March. That report followed news last week that the overall economy, as measured by the gross national product, was contracting at an annual rate of 2.8 percent in the first three months of the year, almost twice the rate of fall recorded in the October-December period.

The widespread signs of weakness have called into question the forecast of the administration and many private economists that the downturn will be coming to an end in the current April-June quarter.

"The notion of a mid-year upturn looks more and more like a pipe dream," said Allen Sinai, chief economist at the Boston Co. "This further Fed easing may bring about a recovery by September, but even that isn't assured."

At the White House, Bush said he believed the Fed's action would give the nation's troubled economy "a kick" and would also brighten global economic prospects.

Bush took the unusual step on Sunday of personally lobbying finance officials from six key U.S. allies in an effort to get them to agree to a coordinated round of global interest rate cuts.

A 75-city rally tour to legalize marijuana stopped in Iowa City Tuesday.

A crowd of over 50 people gathered in the Union's Wheelroom to hear speakers and musicians from noon to 5 p.m. According to one of the speakers, Doug McVay, marijuana has medicinal benefits, industrial applications and is safer than other recreational drugs including alcohol and tobacco.

McVay said a petition being circulated around the country to legalize marijuana for medicinal purposes. He hopes over 1,000 people will sign the document and plans to present it to Congress. Another tour is planned for late September or early October.

DETROIT — General Motors and Ford, two of the nation's mightiest industrial corporations, reported a combined first-quarter loss exceeding $2 billion Tuesday, the most graphic evidence yet of how the spreading recession has devastated sales of new cars.

Neither automaker forecast a turnaround anytime soon.

The General Motors Corp. lost $1.2 billion, excluding two one-time gains, and Ford Motor Co. lost $884 million during the three-month period, the worst quarterly performance in that automaker's history.

Chrysler Corp., weakest of the Big Three, reports first-quarter results Wednesday. Combined Big Three first-quarter losses could exceed $2.5 billion, an industry record for any quarter.

Industry executives said they believed any comeback is likely to be slow, throwing into question whether any of the automakers will show a profit for 1991.

"For the full year, with this sort of start in the first quarter, it will be very difficult to achieve a profit," said David McCammon, Ford vice president and treasurer.

GM Chairman Robert Stempel said in assessing the results: "This is a time of extraordinary demands on our business, and General Motors faces the toughest and most competitive North American automotive market in the corporation's history."

In past quarters, GM and Ford profits overseas, mostly in Europe and South America, have compensated for the poor performance of their North American automotive businesses. But that didn't happen in the latest results, a reflection of economic downturns abroad.

Ford, for example, lost $208 million in overseas automobile operations, vs. earnings of $155 million last year. Most of the weakness was in Britain, where new car and

Death toll rises in Soviet quake

Officials call it a nightmare; Israel, Japan, France offer aid

By Andrew Katell
The Associated Press

KUTAISI, U.S.S.R. — Rescuers on Tuesday dug through a mountain village that one official said was "wiped off the map," hoping to find survivors among dozens of people buried alive in an earthquake.

Monday's quake in Soviet Georgia killed at least 80 people, injured 500, destroyed 40 schools and six hospitals, and left 80,000 homeless, said Georgian Prime Minister Tengiz Sigua.

By Tuesday night, rescuers were holding out little hope of finding survivors in collapsed homes and buildings in the towns and villages of north-central Georgia.

Sigua said after a helicopter tour that he expected the death toll to rise. He described flying over the village of Khakhieti, destroyed when a mountainside collapsed and buried 40 people alive.

"It was awful," Sigua said in an interview with The Associated Press in Kutaisi, about 36 miles west of Khakhieti. "Simply put, it's a nightmare."

"This village was wiped off the map," he said.

In the town of Sachkhere, a regional center, hundreds of homes were destroyed and makeshift tarpaulin tents were erected in a soccer field for 60 families. All electricity was knocked out.

One person was pulled alive from a wrecked building in the town Monday, and a group of rescuers arrived from Moscow to look for more survivors Tuesday night.

City official Alexander Cherbakov said they needn't have bothered. Noting that survivors were found for days in the rubble of the 1988 earthquake in neighboring Armenia, he said:

"Armenia was different... There were no hills there." Mountains of rock crushed homes in the Georgian towns, minimizing chances for survival.

The injured were being ferried out to hospitals elsewhere in the mountainous republic, while officials were shipping in busloads of water, food and tents for the homeless.

About 80 percent of the housing was destroyed in the affected area.

A strong earthquake hit Soviet Georgia Monday causing widespread damage, as shown in this video image taken from television, and killing at least 40 people, authorities said. The quake, with the epicenter near Dzhava, measured 7.1 on the Richter scale.

Big 3 auto industries site 1st quarter losses

By Frederick Standish
The Associated Press

DETROIT — General Motors and Ford, two of the nation's mightiest industrial corporations, reported a combined first-quarter loss exceeding $2 billion Tuesday, the most graphic evidence yet of how the spreading recession has devastated sales of new cars.

Neither automaker forecast a turnaround anytime soon.

The General Motors Corp. lost $1.2 billion, excluding two one-time gains, and Ford Motor Co. lost $884.4 million during the three-month period, the worst quarterly performance in that automaker's history.

Chrysler Corp., weakest of the Big Three, reports first-quarter results Wednesday. Combined Big Three first-quarter losses could exceed $2.5 billion, an industry record for any quarter.

Industry executives said they believed any comeback is likely to be slow, throwing into question whether any of the automakers will show a profit for 1991.

"For the full year, with this sort of start in the first quarter, it will be very difficult to achieve a profit," said David McCammon, Ford vice president and treasurer.

GM Chairman Robert Stempel said in assessing the results: "This is a time of extraordinary demands on our business, and General Motors faces the toughest and most competitive North American automotive market in the corporation's history."

In past quarters, GM and Ford profits overseas, mostly in Europe and South America, have compensated for the poor performance of their North American automotive businesses. But that didn't happen in the latest results, a reflection of economic downturns abroad.

Ford, for example, lost $208 million in overseas automobile operations, vs. earnings of $155 million last year. Most of the weakness was in Britain, where new car and truck sales have slumped even more than in the United States.

The U.S. automotive losses stemmed directly from slow sales, which translated into falling dealer orders, plant closures and layoffs.

Along with lost production and lost profits a company suffers when it shuts down a plant are supplemental unemployment benefits paid to temporarily idled employees.

McCammon said that in the first quarter, Ford operated plants at 63 percent of capacity. In the second quarter, he said, the company planned 91 percent capacity utilization, yet it didn't expect to make a profit.

By contrast, the company operated at nearly 100 percent capacity during much of the 1980s, when it became one of the world's most profitable automakers.

While describing big losses in their core automotive operations, GM and Ford reported profits in their financial businesses.

Ford said its Financial Services Group earned a record $271 million, up 42 percent from a year ago. On Monday, General Motors Acceptance Corp. said it made $306 million, up 3.3 percent, during the first quarter.

Still, the financial operations profits did little to help companies that rely basically on manufacturing to make money.

GM's first-quarter loss equaled $1.94 a share of common stock. During the first quarter of last year, GM earned $710 million. Ford's loss, equal to $1.88 a share, contrasted with $506.2 million earned a year earlier.

GM's revenue for the quarter dropped 3 percent to $29.2 billion this year from $30.1 billion last year. Ford's revenues fell 9.7 percent to $21.3 billion from $23.6 billion during the first quarter of 1990.

The last time any one of the Big Three reported a quarterly profit was in the third quarter of last year.

Awards honor student, faculty leadership

By Heidi Pederson
The Daily Iowan

Thirteen distinguished UI faculty and students were honored Tuesday night at the 74th annual William O. Finkbine Awards dinner.

The awards, endowed by the late William Finkbine, are among the most prestigious given out by the UI.

Tuesday night's dinner, held in the Union, featured speaker Mary Louise Smith, a UI graduate and former chairman of the Republican National Committee. Smith, who received the Finkbine Alumni Medallion, praised the idea behind the awards.

"I am keenly aware of the tradition of the Finkbine dinner itself, and the distinguished company winning an award puts me in," she said.

She also called on student award winners to continue using their demonstrated leadership abilities.

"These times require strong voices to lead everyday," she said. "The students present have clearly recognized the need for answers, and are capable of making a difference."

Award winners were:

John Fix
M.L. Huit Faculty Award
Fix, a faculty member in the Department of Physics and Astronomy since 1969, has taught nearly every astronomy course from the freshman to advanced-graduate level. In the early 1970s, he developed the Modern Astronomy course for non-science majors. He serves as vice president and president-elect for the UI faculty senate.

Larry Molnar
James Murray Faculty Award
Molnar began teaching as the Head Teaching Fellow for introductory science courses while at Harvard University. Since coming to the UI in 1988, he has taught several sections of Modern Astronomy as well as graduate courses in astrophysics.

Raed Abu-Hijleh
Philip Hubbard Human Rights Award
Abu-Hijleh, a senior majoring in electrical engineering, has been active in and served as president of the General Union of Palestine Students. He is also a member of The Union of International Students and the International Scholars Honor Society.

J. David Brown
Robert F. Ray Faculty Representative Scholarship
Hancher-Finkbine Medallion
Brown, a global studies and Russian major, has earned a total of seven varsity letters in cross country and track. The senior was a Presidential Scholar, National Merit Scholar, Rhodes Scholarship finalist and has been elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Kelly Lynn Poort
Distinguished Student Leader Award
Poort, a senior, will receive B.S. degrees in both electrical and biomedical engineering. She has been president of Alpha Eta Mu Beta, a historian of Mortar Board, and has been initiated into four honor societies and received numerous scholarships.

Iris Boon-Hwa Lee
Distinguished Student Leader Award
Lee, a senior English major, was one of nine juniors selected for Phi Beta Kappa, and won the prestigious Stevens Scholarship for the most outstanding junior Phi Beta Kappa student. She is one of three Honors Facilitators, a new teaching internship program.

Douglas Paul Livermore
Distinguished Student Leader Award
Livermore is a senior and at the top of his class in chemical engineering. He is president of Tau Beta Pi, the national engineering honor society, has conducted biochemical research as an Undergraduate Scholar Assistant and has interned for Exxon Company as a reservoir engineer.

Alan Law Jr.
Distinguished Student Leader Award
Law, a fourth-year dental student, has received numerous awards and scholarships, including the Richard A. Nelson Research Scholarship and the National Dean's List. He was one of only 20 nationally to receive a Five-Year Dentists-Scientists Award.

Cheryle Mae Wiedmeier
Distinguished Student Leader Award
Wiedmeier, a senior in the College of Law, has received the American Jurisprudence awards and the Edward H. Jones Scholarship. Upon graduation she will be inducted into the Order of the Coif, the national law school honor society.

Bradley Lamar Allen
Hancher-Finkbine Medallion
Allen, in his final year of the Medical Scientist Training Program, has co-authored and published several research publications, and has presented his findings at seminars in Helsinki, Finland and at Rockefeller University. He has also received numerous pre-clinical and clinical honors.

Lori Sue VanderLeest
Hancher-Finkbine Medallion
VanderLeest, a senior medical student, is president of the Medical Student Council. She is also a member of Phi Rho Sigma Medical Fraternity, Iowa City Alpha Phi Alumni Chapter and the American Medical Women's Association.

Dean William Hines
Hancher-Finkbine Faculty Medallion
Dean of the Law School since 1976, Hines teaches at least one class each semester. He has served on a number of university committees, including Faculty Senate and the Board in Control of Athletics. Hines' major areas of interest are property law and environmental law.

cated Tuesday that they believed the U.N. secretary-general should press Iraq to permit a U.N. police force to protect the Kurds and replace the 9,000 allied troops in northern Iraq.

The secretary-general, Javier Perez de Cuellar, was non-committal. Iraq has denounced the proposal as a violation of its sovereignty.

The U.N. sanctions committee deferred action on Iraq's requests to regain $1 billion in frozen bank assets worldwide. It also wants to sell about $1 billion worth of oil to finance purchase of food, medical supplies and humanitarian aid.

The economic sanctions were imposed on Iraq after its Aug. 2 takeover of Kuwait.

Also on Tuesday:
■ Turkish President Turgut Ozal accused Turkey's Western allies of not doing enough to help Kurdish refugees on the Turkish border, saying he wants more than "just oral support." But he thanked President Bush for having taken "a very courageous initiative."

■ The Iraqi Kurdistan Front, a coalition of Kurdish groups, urged the international community to guarantee the autonomy pact they hope to negotiate with Saddam. In a statement faxed from Cyprus to London, the front said it would soon send a delegation to Baghdad for further autonomy talks.

■ Iraq has told international regulators all its weapons-grade uranium is buried under rubble from allied bombings, U.S. officials said in Washington. Under terms of the U.N. cease-fire resolution that ended the gulf war, Iraq must disclose its stocks of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, allow their destruction and promise not to make more.

In Zakho, Ahmad Muhammad Yosef's eyes welled with tears as he toured his home, ransacked by Iraqis during the family's exile. Doors were kicked in and the rooms stripped of furniture, clothes and the television set.

But Yosef, a Kurdish patriarch of 12 grown children and their families, said he was happy to be back.

"America, Britain and France were sent by God," said the grizzled farmer. "George Bush is good. Because of him, we returned from the mountains."

Mud-splashed vehicles, many with smashed headlights and windshields, snaked down a winding mountain road from the Isikveren camp in Turkey. They were crammed with adults, children and even animals, with belongings bundled precariously high on top.

British troops ferried down several hundred refugees, and the French army led at least one caravan of cars and trucks.

By dusk on Tuesday, 2,000 men, 1,240 women and 1,160 children had passed through an allied checkpoint.

Star Hassan, an Iraqi Kurdish guerrilla, watched the refugees leaving. "They are very happy, but not very happy about the safety in Zakho, because we don't trust Saddam Hussein," he said.

Until Monday, the guerrillas had been blocking Kurdish refugees from leaving the mountains, saying it still was not safe to return.

But guerrilla leaders agreed at a meeting with allied generals Monday to stop blocking all the roads.

DES MOINES — U.S. children spending more time in the classroom, National Education Goals Panel finds.

"We do not spend enough time in school," Gov. Roy Romer, chairman of the panel, said Tuesday.

The panel, made up of government, Congress and White House representatives, met in Des Moines to discuss regional meeting in Des Moines to improve education.

Romer said the United States must place more emphasis on that education.

"As a culture, we are not accepting out there is doing a better job of children," Romer said at a meeting Tuesday.

One significant difference is the children spend in school, he said.

Three alarm fire damages complex

By Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

A three-alarm fire early Tuesday afternoon forced the evacuation of seven residents and caused an estimated $50,000 damage to an apartment complex located at 2430 Muscatine Ave.

According to the Iowa City Fire Department, seven engines and 45 firefighters responded to the alarm, which came at 1:59 p.m.

One apartment was totally destroyed, while five others received smoke and water damage. About half of the roof of the entire complex was also damaged in the blaze.

Although no injuries were reported, the five residents of the destroyed apartment were later relocated by the American Red Cross. Those five included Joanna Harris, Lester Nunn, and three children ages four through 11.

Officials determined the cause of the blaze was an unattended skillet left on the stove, which ignited some plastic laying nearby. The blaze then spread to the rest of the apartment.

National Education Goals Panel seeks to improve U.S. schools

By Tom Seery
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — U.S. children might end up spending more time in the classroom after the National Education Goals Panel finishes its work.

"We do not spend enough time in school," Colorado Gov. Roy Romer, chairman of the panel, said Tuesday.

The panel, made up of governors, members of Congress and White House representatives, held a regional meeting in Des Moines to discuss ideas for improving education.

Romer said the United States must respond to the increasing emphasis that other developed countries place on education.

"As a culture, we are not accepting that the world out there is doing a better job in educating children," Romer said at a meeting with reporters.

One significant difference is the amount of time children spend in school, he said.

"We need to look both at the length of the school day and the length of the school year," Romer said.

The meeting was the fourth of eight regional meetings the National Education Goals Panel will hold across the country.

Also at Tuesday's meeting were Govs. Terry Branstad of Iowa, Ben Nelson of Nebraska and John Ashcroft of Missouri. Branstad and Nelson appeared with Romer at the news conference, saying state budget problems should not hamper education spending.

"I think you'll find governors making education a priority, state by state," Branstad said.

"When you establish your budget and you look at the various needs and priorities in your state, you have to make education a top priority," Nelson said.

Branstad said states cannot count on federal funds to help education budgets.

"The primary source of resources is going to be state and local," he said.

The National Education Goals Panel was formed after President Bush and the nation's governors adopted a set of education goals last year. The panel will oversee development of a system to monitor education nationwide.

There is no attempt to develop a national education system of uniform testing of students nationwide, Branstad said.

Report: Terrorism down between 1988-90

WASHINGTON — The number of international terrorist incidents declined by almost 50 per cent between 1988 and 1990, according to a State Department report released Tuesday.

The report, titled "Patterns of Global Terrorism: 1990," said the United States was by far the most popular terrorist target with 197 anti-U.S. attacks.

All told, there were 455 terrorist incidents last year, compared with 533 in 1989 and 856 in 1988, the report said. It added that the number of victims killed dropped from 407 in 1989 to 193 last year. But the number of victims injured rose from 427 to 675.

State Department officials said that the mass hostage taking of Americans and others by Iraqi forces last fall did not qualify as a terrorist act because it was carried out by a government and not by a "sub-national or clandestine agent." Iraq eventually freed all the hostages.

At time the Persian Gulf crisis erupted, there were widespread predictions that there would be a marked increase in international terrorism, particularly against U.S. interests, if the allied coalition used military force against Iraq. This threat has not materialized.

The study said another major change was the sharp decline in terrorist incidents in the Middle East. Once the leader in such attacks, the figure in the Middle East last year was 63, compared with 162 in Latin America and 96 in Asia. No figures in this category were given for 1989.

Soldier returns, takes pen pal to prom

OMAHA, Neb. — A 23-year-old Navy corpsman returned from the Persian Gulf war in time to take his pen pal to her senior prom.

Maury Champoux was stationed in Bahrain when he received a letter addressed to any serviceman or servicewoman from Lynn Cornelius, 17, a senior at Omaha Bryan High School.

Champoux, who is from Nebraska, said he picked Cornelius' letter because it was from Omaha. They started corresponding, averaging a letter every two weeks.

Cornelius wrote that she was considering going to her prom alone.

"I told her if she didn't have a date I would be glad to escort her for the evening," Champoux said.

The two met in March when Champoux returned to Nebraska. Although Champoux is engaged to someone else, Cornelius asked him to escort her to Bryan's prom on Saturday.

True to his word, Champoux accepted the invitation.

Probation-violating contestant let go

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — A probation violator who was arrested in California after a former co-worker saw him on "The Price is Right" was let go by a judge impressed by his life as a fugitive.

Khari W. Fulton, 41, won't have to serve prison or probation time, Jefferson County Judge Laurence Higgins ruled Monday.

Fulton was convicted in 1984 of drug trafficking and was serving five years probation when he skipped town in 1986. He told the judge he moved to Los Angeles in 1986 because he couldn't find a job to support his four children.

"I didn't have a lot of options here," Fulton said. "I was unemployed."

A former co-worker told police she saw Fulton as a contestant last spring on the CBS game show "The Price is Right." Fulton was arrested in February in Los Angeles.

A prosecutor urged Higgins to make Fulton complete his probation in California, but the judge rejected the request.

Since leaving Kentucky, Fulton "hasn't violated the laws in any way," Higgins said. "He has worked continuously. He provides for his family. . . . What more could we ask of him?"

Fulton presented letters of support from his current employer and the company that hired him when he moved to California.

Nazi video games circulating in Europe

LOS ANGELES — Underground video games circulating among Austrian and German students test the ability to manage a Nazi death camp and to distinguish between Aryans and Jews, a Holocaust study center said.

Eight copies of the programs, designed for home computers, were obtained by the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles, and two were demonstrated for reporters Monday.

Rabbi Abraham Cooper, the center's associate dean, said the programs are based on the Holocaust but often substitute Turks, many of whom work in Germany, for Jews.

In one program, "KZ Manager," the player must sell gold fillings, lampshades and labor to earn enough money to buy gas and add gas chambers to kill Turks at the Treblinka death camp. "KZ" is an abbreviation of the German word for concentration camp.

The player must correctly answer questions about Turks or be taken by a Grim Reaper figure to the Buchenwald death camp.

"What you want to do now if you love playing computer games, you want to go right back in and you want to win," said Cooper. "It's a very shrewd psychology in terms of the design of the game."

El Salvadoran reforms emerge from peace talks

By Douglas Grant Mine
The Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — The leader of the opposition Christian Democratic Party on Tuesday hailed constitutional reforms as "a big step" toward peace.

But a top rebel commander characterized as "dangerous" the outgoing legislature's failure to respect an accord between government and guerrilla negotiators on an electoral system overhaul.

Late Monday, the 60-seat unicameral legislature — hours before the end of its three-year term — approved constitutional reforms affecting the armed forces, the judiciary and the electoral system.

Most of the changes emerged from three weeks of intense peace negotiations in April in Mexico City between representatives of the leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front and the rightist administration of President Alfredo Cristiani.

The 11-year-old civil war has killed an estimated 75,000 people.

The only reform approved Monday night that differed significantly from the document produced in Mexico dealt with formation of a new Supreme Electoral Tribunal.

The rebels had demanded expansion of the current electoral board from three to five members and other measures to guarantee its impartiality. The reforms approved by the legislature provided for expansion to five members, but retained most of the former — and politically partisan — mechanism for determining the tribunal's makeup.

Leonel Gonzalez, one of the FMLN's top five commanders, commented in a telephone interview Tuesday from Mexico with the local radio station YSU.

He said negotiators had agreed on means of assuring that, in the new Supreme Electoral Tribunal, "no party or coalition would dominate."

"But the content of what was agreed upon was totally changed to provide Arena with the possibility of maintaining a majority on the tribunal and exercising its presidency," said Gonzalez.

"These are substantial modifications that I would call dangerous," he said.

Monday night, another guerrilla leader told YSU that retention of the partisan structure of the electoral tribunal "eliminates all possibility of equitable and just political struggle in El Salvador."

"This constitutes a grave danger to the continuity of the entire process of negotiation," said Salvador Samayoa, one of the chief rebel peace negotiators.

Fidel Chavez Mena, head of the Christian Democrats, said in an Guerrilla commanders bid farewell to five government soldiers captured by FMLN rebels on the slopes of Guazapa Volcano, an insurgent bastion, last weekend. The soldiers were released to representatives of the International Red Cross.

interview Tuesday the constitutional reforms are "a historical achievement without precedent."

"They are a big step toward peace," he said.

The Christian Democrats governed from 1984-89.

He said the FMLN could not reasonably expect the legislature, which is independent of the executive branch, to rubber-stamp the entire document drafted in Mexico.

The reforms regarding the armed forces are designed to subordinate the hugely powerful and nearly autonomous military to elected civilian authority.

They include: separation of the police — now a militarized force encompassing combat infantry battalions — from the Defense Ministry; removal of the national intelligence agency from military control; and empowering the president to determine the size of the armed forces.

Other reforms included mechanisms for establishing independence of the judiciary and creation of the office of Public Defender for Human Rights.

Constitutional reform has been a principal item in the year-old U.N.-mediated peace negotiations.

It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe. You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. UI Playwrights Festival offers new work about Manson family

By Hank Olson
The Daily Iowan

Do you love psycho killers? Sure, we all do. And we're in luck, because as part of the 1991 Iowa Playwrights Festival, the UI Theatre Department will debut a new play about the Charles Manson "family" tonight.

UI graduate student Laura Quinn's "The White Album" will be performed in Theatre A of the Theatre Building at 6:30 and 9 p.m. A discussion with Quinn will follow the early performance. Admission is $5 for students and $6 for non-students.

Quinn said of the play, "It's about what happened in L.A. when the Manson family hit. I cover the obsession of one woman — Melissa — with Manson as she follows the trials, and the disintegration it causes in her marriage."

The three other main characters are Sadie Mae Glutz and Linda Kasabian, members of the Manson family, and a reporter doing a freelance feature on the murders.

Quinn said that interest in the killings is still very much alive. "Everybody's still interested in what happened. There's something

"There's something fascinating about Manson, perhaps because he could control all these other people."

Laura Quinn
author of "The White Album"

fascinating about Manson, perhaps because he could control all these other people. He never killed anyone; he sent others to kill for him. He had an incredible ability to manipulate other people. He would take good ideas and twist them to fit his purposes."

As she researched the killings, Quinn discovered just how large an impact Manson made on the Hollywood community. "Manson killed the beautiful people of Hollywood. Abigail Folger was an heiress; Sharon Tate was the girlfriend of Roman Polanski, one of the most powerful directors of the time. He got attention because he attacked Hollywood — it took the town two years to recover."

Manson's impact wasn't limited to the princes and princesses of tinsel town. Everyday people, like the character of Melissa, were also influenced. Director Marci Glotzer said, "For Melissa, Manson becomes an obsession. We're watching her journey. We're watching her try to hang on to the shreds of reality she has."

Quinn said that ultimately, "The White Album" explores more than a curiosity about the grotesque. It is also the tale of how one woman copes with unreasonable events that occur within her life. "Melissa discovers that there is no safety," she said. "The Manson family made no sense. That's the only way you can explain them."

Kantorei to perform spring concert

The Daily Iowan

Kantorei, the premier vocal ensemble of the UI School of Music, will perform its spring concert at 8 p.m. Friday, May 3, in Clapp Recital Hall on the UI campus.

The performance, conducted by UI School of Music graduate student Henry Schellenberg, will include motets by three early classical composers, Johann Joseph Fux, Antonio Caldara and Johann Michael Haydn, the younger brother of Joseph Haydn.

Fux was one of the great teachers and music theorists of the 18th century, being particularly known for his method of teaching musical counterpoint, which is the combination of several different musical lines. His techniques were widely taught well into the 19th century and were considered one of the cornerstones of any composer's training.

The motets of both Caldara and Haydn make use of Fux-style counterpoint.

Music

A second portion of the May 3 concert will be the Psalms for double choir, Op. 78, by Felix Mendelssohn.

For the final portion of the concert Schellenberg, a Canadian, has selected works by Canadian composers. These include a group of folk-song arrangements and a setting of the "Gloria" for two pianos and choir by Stuart Calvert.

Pianists for Calvert's "Gloria" will be Kantorei's principal accompanist, Gina Kruger, and Maria Teresa Madeira. Kruger will also accompany the choir in the folk song arrangements. Both pianists are graduate students in the UI School of Music.

The top choral group in the UI School of Music, Kantorei is filled by audition only. Most members of the group are graduate students in the School of Music. The ensemble presents a series of concerts each year on the UI campus, in addition to touring performances throughout the state. Last year they made a concert tour of Finland and the Soviet Union that included performances of the Mozart "Requiem" with the Leningrad Philharmonic.

'Home Alone' finally loses its hold

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Home Alone" finally fell from the box office Top 10 after a five-month run during which it became the third highest-grossing film in Hollywood history, behind "Star Wars" and "E.T. The Extraterrestrial."

"Oscar," Sylvester Stallone's new comedy, earned $5.1 million over the weekend to land in the No. 1 spot, Exhibitor Relations Co. reported Monday.

In second place for the week was the drama "A Kiss Before Dying," pairing Sean Young and Matt Dillon. It earned $4.3 million in its first weekend.

"Toy Soldiers," a drama featuring Louis Gossett Jr., opened in third place. It sold $4.2 million in tickets.

"Home Alone," starring Macaulay Culkin as a boy left alone to fend off burglars, fell off the charts. It has made $266.2 million, climbing past No. 3 at the all-time box office, "Return of the Jedi," which earned $263 million.

Here are the top movie ticket sales Friday through Sunday according to Exhibitor Relations, with distributor, weekend gross, number of theater screens, average per screen, total gross and number of weeks in release.

Figures are based on a combination of actual box-office receipts and studio projections where actual figures are not immediately available.

1. "Oscar," Disney, $5.1 million, 1,368 screens, $3,722 per screen, $5.1 million, one week.

2. "A Kiss Before Dying," Universal, $4.3 million, 1,523 screens, $2,855 per screen, $4.3 million, one week.

3. "Toy Soldiers," Tri-Star, $4.2 million, 1,350 screens, $3,098 per screen, $4.2 million, one week.

4. "Out for Justice," Warner Bros., $4 million, 2,004 screens, $2,001 per screen, $27.5 million, three weeks.

THE REAGAN YEARS

Let history judge

It has been a little more than two years since Ronald Reagan waved goodbye to the American people, boarded his Air Force helicopter for the last time and flew off into the horizon. It was the end of the Reagan era — an era in which the "Me Generation" became the "Mine Generation." It was an epoch that Reagan supporters still regard with nostalgia. The Reagan years, however, are over and are now subject to the analysis of history. Reaganauts everywhere are on the defensive.

History, like truth, incessantly changes to suit the needs of its culture and age. Through the gathering of historical facts and data, history is molded and reshaped in the spirit of the present age. Historical facts and data, however, are not free from subjectivity — and neither is history. The outlook of the present is vastly different when it is viewed in retrospect.

Ronald Reagan did not define the '80s. Rather, he was an extension of it. Americans wanted an instant stimulus and the Reagan era provided the quick fix: Greed was good, the Russians were evil. And the poor? Well, they were poor because they chose to be.

And so the '80s moved onward. Americans forced themselves to believe that nothing could go wrong. Nevermind the $3 trillion deficit; forget about dealing arms for hostages and presenting "Iranian moderates" with a cake and a Bible; disregard the nuclear arms buildup. And after all, it was the Reagan administration that toppled communism — not the internal pressures of a defunct system. It felt great to be an American after those awful Carter years.

Two years have passed since the Reagan administration ended. As a society we know much more about the Reagan era than we did two years ago. Decades from now as more facts are gathered, we will know vastly more.

With the advent of a "United States of Europe," the continuing economic prowess of Japan and the increasing international influence of the United Nations, the U.S. will have to redefine its role as a lesser nation-state in the world community. Accompanying this will be a reshaping of history, suitable to present needs. America will have to be much more diplomatic domestically and internationally in the next century, and the positive image of the Reagan years will continue to fade. Under the scope of history the "Teflon presidency" will chip, crack and erode.

The upcoming age may identify more with Jimmy Carter, who is already experiencing a rehabilitation in the press. Selflessness, concern and global-mindedness are attitudes more applicable in the upcoming decades. Carter's grave mistake while in office was not sending another helicopter. It cost him another term. It gave Reagan his first.

Reagan supporters will continue to defend their idol against such iconoclasm. Reaganauts are battling more than just Reagan-bashers, they are fighting an ever-changing history. A history that will judge and interpret Ronald Reagan and Reaganism.

Class to be taught

To the Editor:
Although I agree in large part with the views expressed by Teri Camery in her "Earth Alert!" article ["UI lacking in ecological education," April 26], I need to correct one specific inaccuracy that may have an immediate impact on student readers. Contrary to the statement in the article that "ecology... [has] already been dropped," the ecology course (37:110) will in fact be offered by the biology department in the fall of 1991. My pointing out this error is not a criticism of Camery's research, as this course (along with several others), was in fact dropped in early April owing to the decision not to fund the visiting faculty line used to teach it. However, funds to teach this course were restored by the dean of the College of Liberal Arts after a last-minute appeal from the Biology-Botany Curriculum Committee. Ecology will therefore be taught, and well taught, and I personally encourage environmentally conscious students to take it.

Full of holes

To the Editor:
Cynthia Taylor's April 24 article ["Global warming cause for concern"] has more holes in it than she says there are in the ozone layer.

First of all, the greenhouse effect is a theory, not a scientific fact, as she implies. In fact, the earth's temperature has decreased, not increased, since the industrial revolution, and furthermore, that rate of decrease has actually become greater in the last 20 years (according to the Wall Street Jour- nal of April 3, 1990).

Next, Taylor makes the irresponsible statement that "scientists" predict the earth's temperature will rise 5 degrees Fahrenheit by the year 2100. What "scientists"? She does not back her statement with any specific facts or attributions. In fact, the only "expert" she quotes is a law professor from New Zealand, who claims a 5 degree drop in the earth's temperature will bring on another ice age. Why is a law professor the only "expert" she could quote in an article on global warming? Maybe it is because no legitimate scientist would. In my opinion, and the evidence supports me, global warming is a farce, conceived by certain radical "environmentalists" to advance their own agendas, agendas of anti-traditional family values, anti-capitalism or anti-Americanism. Think I'm kidding? Take a look at what Taylor suggests are ways to "slow global warming": (1) Quit buying cars; (2) cut down on fossil fuel use; (3) stop cutting down trees (hitting the housing and paper industries, which incidentally are actually creating more forestland than they use); (4) stop population growth (suggesting abortion or other forms of contraception?).

One final point: Taylor has linked holes in the ozone with fluorocarbons. The fact is (again from the Wall Street Journal) that ozone holes are not of any significant size or risk and the holes that do occur occasionally have been caused by our own sun. That's right, 99 percent of ozone depletion occurs naturally, not by man. I suggest The Daily Iowan and Taylor go find some other "environmental threat" to scare people with. And when you do, you'll probably find me there, too.

Our government-sponsored war

Having spent the bulk of my college career actively destroying my credit rating, I normally avoid offering financial advice. I'll readily admit that I've made some questionable investments. (Like the time I got stoned and bought a kilo of fortune cookies.) Still, compared to certain federal governments, I'm a relative wizard of finance. It is within this context that I can offer you the following sure-thing-investment-tip for 1991: Heroin.

That's not a joke, just ask the Drug Enforcement Agency. According to the The New York Times, the DEA's own statistics show that global opium production has increased by more than 50 percent; that in New York City and Washington, D.C., the purity of heroin has increased by more than 300 percent; that street smack is so pure these days that hypodermic needles are no longer necessary — heroin can now be smoked or snorted. Its price (also according to DEA statistics) has fallen about 70 percent since 1983. One pure milligram of heroin currently sets a New York junkie back one dollar.

Felix Jimenez, chief of the DEA's heroin investigation section in Washington, arrived at this succinct conclusion: "When you have prices going down and purity going up, that's an indication that more heroin is available." More available, cheaper, of unprecedented purity... what do these factors really tell us? What message do they all but scream?

First, they indicate a booming and previously untapped market for heroin. Tens of millions of Americans recreationally alter their consciousness on a regular basis. But according to federal government statistics, only about 500,000 of them are warped enough to routinely stab their own bodies in order to catch a buzz. The elimination of the syringe from the heroin equation renders the substance significantly more acceptable to the average drug-inclined American. Granted, heroin may never shake its "sleazy" image or attain the "chic" that cocaine once had. But it's cheap, and that could prove enough to rocket this new form of an old drug to genuine popularity beside marijuana, cocaine and LSD in areas such as the college campus.

Second, and more important, the DEA's statistics should cause America to evaluate another investment: the War on Drugs. We should consider the following facts: Despite significant impurity; the creation of billions of dollars in taxable income currently untouchable in the illegal marketplace; the redirection of billions of dollars wasted each year on failed interdiction efforts toward addiction prevention and the effective funding of federal and local efforts to keep drugs from children; etc. Unfortunately, however, many of the same people who acknowledge these practical benefits of legalizing drugs are the equivalent of saying that drug use is acceptable, that it constitutes a surrendering of a nation to its criminal. Nothing is further from the truth.

Legalization should not be viewed as surrender, but merely as a strategic change in tactics. Education is a far more effective weapon than litigation. Furthermore, the worst case scenarios of illicit drug use by adults are considerably less tragic than those caused by our legal and government-subsidized tobacco industry. (The annual death toll from all illicit drugs combined currently amounts to less than one-tenth of annual tobacco-related deaths.)

Finally, anyone who is honestly concerned about the morality of drug legalization should recognize the fact that drug prohibition amounts to a government-granted monopoly on one of the most profitable industries in the world — to anyone corrupt enough to indulge in the necessary criminal tactics. The true "victim" of the drug war is not the addict cocaine addict who knowingly buys a dangerous drug in a legal market. It is the all-too-familiar child who catches a stray bullet on the way to school, in the crossfire of drug gangs, the government's invented game.

manpower (30 percent of the New York DEA's time is devoted to heroin cases), heroin is more prevalent than ever; despite our "no mercy" legislation aimed at traffickers of hard drugs, Jimenez says that "more and more people are getting involved in heroin trafficking"; despite the billions of dollars spent annually to curb or crush the flow of illicit drugs, those drugs are not disappearing, but are actually becoming cheaper, better, and more accessible.

None of this should come as a surprise to anyone familiar with the most fundamental law of economics: supply and demand. As long as a particular demand exist, there will be a supply to meet it. Legal or illegal. Many Americans are beginning to recognize the practical benefits of drug legalization: the introduction of FDA regulation to previously illegal narcotic production and the resulting decrease in domestic deaths due to substance

The decay of contemporary liberalism

The case of Timothy Maguire of Georgetown law school is significant not so much for what he said as for the school's panicked reaction to his having said it. Maguire said, in an article in the Georgetown Law Weekly, that the law school admits blacks with lower test scores than whites. The dean of the law school, Judith Areen, reacted with a letter attacking the article. Disciplinary proceedings against Maguire have begun. They could lead to his expulsion.

On what grounds? Breach of confidentiality. Maguire acquired the data on which he based his article from records he saw while working as a clerk in the admissions office. These records are said to be confidential.

But to prosecute Maguire on the grounds of confidentiality is to pervert the very notion. Confidentiality is a very discrete and circumscribed concept: It is a form of secrecy that is justified on the grounds of protecting individual privacy. One does not release confidential information about an individual because to do so is to invade his person.

Maguire's article reveals no names, releases no student's records. The only thing confidential here is the admissions policy of a powerful institution.

Charles Krauthammer

Webster's defines confidential as: "(1) marked by intimacy... (2) private, secret." On what grounds should the criteria for admission to a law school be private, secret? What justification is there in a free and open society for keeping such information hidden from public view? If Maguire's report is "misinformation," and if Dean Areen is as proud of her admissions policy as she claims in her letter, why does she decline to reveal it? Or does she fear public revulsion upon learning the racially-based nature of these admission criteria?

In its heroic age, American liberalism won great victories that left enduring legacies. Among them is the idea that public policy should be conducted in the open. Twenty years ago in the case of the Pentagon papers and Watergate, liberals were the first to applaud The Washington Post and others for exposing to public scrutiny what were then classified as secrets. We find it hard to appreciate today the risks involved then. This is largely because in time, and as a result of these courageous actions, the ideas of openness and freedom of information have become so ingrained in American public consciousness.

Judith Areen once worked for Ralph Nader. Naderism, above all else, stands for openness and honesty in public affairs. It is a sign of the moral decline of contemporary liberalism that a former Nader's Raider should not only see nothing wrong with keeping an admissions policy secret but should go after the person who dares to reveal it. Of course, the whole confidentiality charge is a phony. Areen would (justly) applaud The Washington Post if it breached the confidentiality of classified information in order to open debate or expose impropriety in government. And one can be sure that the Georgetown Law Center Black Law Students Association, which has been demanding Maguire's expulsion, would be applauding him had the secret files he discovered showed that blacks were the subject of discrimination rather than preferential treatment.

Moreover, the Maguire affair reveals a second, deeper aspect of the decay of contemporary liberalism. Among the most striking images of the protest to the Maguire article was that of a student carrying a poster entitled "Solidarity in Support of Diversity."

Thirty years ago the placards of those fighting for civil rights read "Solidarity in Support of Justice." In its heroic age, American liberalism stood for the simple idea, the very American idea, of justice... let diversity ring? It is the opponents of race-conscious policy who today speak in the name of the values that King championed.

Timothy Maguire is in trouble for violating secrecy and questioning diversity. He should claim that, like most Americans, he has been educated by heroic liberalism to distrust secrecy in public affairs and value justice and fairness above all else, particularly in matters of race. But to liberals like Areen, who have mortgaged any value that stands in the way of affirmative action and racial preference, such an appeal must seem like the distant echo of some archaic creed.

WASHINGTON — Iraq has told international regulators that all its weapons-grade uranium is buried under rubble from allied bombings, posing a daunting and dangerous task for international experts preparing to retrieve it.

U.S. officials say Iraq informed the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna, Austria, that the enriched uranium is located in the ruins of its two nuclear reactors at Tuwaitha, 20 miles southeast of Baghdad, and isn't emitting radiation.

But the technicians who will sift through the rubble will have to watch out for unexploded allied bombs, radiation from radio isotope research conducted by the Iraqis at the site and possible cracks in the protective casings of the uranium, the officials said.

The uranium would likely have been protected by stainless steel canisters, concrete shields and water pools. But experts say the powerful allied bombs might have cracked the casings and the only thing preventing radiation emissions may be the tons of concrete rubble covering them.

One small consolation, said a U.S. official, is that the amount of enriched uranium is small — about 48 pounds — and most of it is only slightly irradiated.

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Wartime provisions enacted by Taiwan in 1948 against China are to end Wednesday, President Lee Teng-hui announced.

Last week, Taiwan's National Assembly voted to abrogate the provisions, enacted four decades ago to suppress "the Communist rebellion" on the mainland.

This had allowed the ruling Nationalists to suspend certain constitutional rights and justify emergency measures. The Nationalists have ruled Taiwan since 1949, when they fled mainland China after losing a civil war to the communists.

conciliation with China in 1987 when Lee's predecessor, Chiang Ching-kuo, approved private visits between Taiwanese and Chinese and also sanctioned indirect trade between the rival sides.

An estimated 2 million Taiwanese since have visited China, and trade between Taiwan and China totaled $4 billion last year.

Lee, the first native Taiwanese to head the Nationalist government, has pushed through other political reforms to remove vestiges that remained from the Nationalists' rule of the mainland.

This included the forced retirement of aging conservative stalwarts of the Nationalist Party who were elected in China four decades ago and continued to hold their seats to support the Nationalist claim to be China's rightful ruler.

Experts seek buried uranium

Bombs, radiation among dangers in searching Iraqi ruins

By Ruth Sinai
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Iraq has told international regulators that all its weapons-grade uranium is buried under rubble from allied bombings, posing a daunting and dangerous task for international experts preparing to retrieve it.

U.S. officials say Iraq informed the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna, Austria, that the enriched uranium is located in the ruins of its two nuclear reactors at Tuwaitha, 20 miles south-east of Baghdad, and isn't emitting radiation.

But the technicians who will sift through the rubble will have to watch out for unexploded allied bombs, radiation from radio isotope research conducted by the Iraqis at the site and possible cracks in the protective casings of the uranium, the officials said.

The uranium would likely have been protected by stainless steel canisters, concrete shields and water pools. But experts say the powerful allied bombs might have cracked the casings and the only thing preventing radiation emissions may be the tons of concrete rubble covering them.

One small consolation, said a U.S. official, is that the amount of enriched uranium is small — about 48 pounds — and most of it is only slightly irradiated.

Under the terms of the U.N. cease-fire resolution that ended the gulf war, Iraq must come clean about its stocks of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, allow their destruction and promise not to make more.

In a letter to the IAEA on April 18, Iraq said it did not possess any nuclear weapons or nuclear facilities.

"They were playing dumb, so the IAEA wrote back and gave them some clear definitions of what we wanted," said one official who spoke only on the condition of anonymity.

"They were playing dumb, so the IAEA wrote back and gave them some clear definitions of what we wanted."

IAEA official

Iraq's second response several days ago "was quite detailed and explicit" about the location and condition of the fuel, he said.

But Iraq "wasn't particularly receptive" to another IAEA request for information about its suspected nuclear research facilities at Tuwaitha and other sites, the official said.

Intelligence estimates say Iraq had laboratories for extracting plutonium from uranium and for developing a process of enriching uranium through a chain of gas centrifuges it was seeking to buy abroad.

The official said U.S. bombers attacked and damaged all the known nuclear research sites. He said the IAEA inspection team that is expected to visit these facilities under terms of the U.N. mandate isn't likely to find any weapons-grade material or significant research facilities intact.

Under the terms of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, of which it is a signatory, Iraq has allowed IAEA inspectors to periodically inspect the enriched uranium it received in the last decade from France and the Soviet Union for use in three research reactors. One of the reactors was demolished by Israeli bombers in 1980.

President Bush said last fall that Iraq could use the uranium to make a crude bomb. U.S. officials said they were concerned Iraq might move the material — a step it would have had to report to Vienna — in preparation for the war.

"We don't know why they didn't do it. If I were Saddam Hussein, I would have," said the official.

The IAEA is drawing up a plan for inspecting the Iraqi sites and removing the enriched uranium.

The director of the agency, Hans Blix, visited Washington last week to discuss the many problems involved in the operation.

He complained that the agency was short of funds because the United States, which accounts for 25 percent of the IAEA budget, pays its contribution in the fall due to limitations of the congressional appropriations process.

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Hector Villeneuve drove in a career-high four runs with a three-run homer, a double and a single Tuesday night as Mike Bielecki and the Chicago Cubs beat the Houston Astros 10-3.

Villeneuve's first home run of the season capped a four-run third inning. He came off the disabled list three days ago after sustaining a fracture in his left hand.

Bielecki (4-1) won his third start of the season and allowed six hits in the six innings. His other two decisions came in relief.

With two outs in the third, Mark Grace walked and scored on a double by George Bell. Andre Dawson was walked intentionally before Villeneuve, who went into the game with a .111 average, homered into the left-field bleachers off Mark Portugal (2-1).

Gary Scott led off the eighth with his first major league homer and the Cubs added another run on Doug Dasenczo's grounder.

Reds 4, Pirates 3

CINCINNATI — Hal Morris and Mariano Duncan homered off struggling Cy Young Award winner Doug Drabek and Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh 4-3 Tuesday night in the first meeting of defending National League division champions.

Major Leagues

The Reds and Pirates are both in first place this season. Cincinnati won last year's playoff in six games.

Duncan's first homer off Drabek (1-4) snapped a 3-3 tie in the sixth and sent the Pirates to only their second loss in 10 games.

Tom Browning (3-1) allowed four hits, including solo homers by Andy Van Slyke and Jose Lind, in 7½ innings. Rob Dibble struck out the last four batters for his fifth save.

Phillies 11, Giants 9

PHILADELPHIA — John Kruk homered, drove in four runs and tied Mike Schmidt's team record of 20 RBIs in April as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Francisco Giants 11-9 Tuesday night for their fourth straight victory.

The Phillies trailed 9-3 before Dale Murphy and Ricky Jordan hit consecutive home runs off Bud Black in the fifth inning. Charlie Hayes' two-run homer capped a six-run rally in the sixth.

Joe Boever (1-1) pitched 1½ scoreless innings. Mitch Williams worked the ninth for his fifth save.

In the sixth, pinch hitter John Morris and Lenny Dykstra walked, and Francisco Oliveras replaced Black. One out later, Kruk hit his fourth home run of the year and Murphy singled, bringing on reliever Jeff Brantley (0-1).

Red Sox 7, Twins 5

MINNEAPOLIS — Carlos Quintana hit his first home run since last July 30, a two-out, three-run shot in the eighth inning Tuesday night, leading the Boston Red Sox to a 7-5 victory over Minnesota and snapping the Twins' five-game winning streak.

Despite allowing Dan Gladden's seventh-inning go-ahead double, Jeff Gray (1-1) won in relief of Matt Young, who is still looking for his first victory after coming to Boston as a free agent. Ex-Twin Jeff Reardon pitched the final 1½ innings for his eighth save.

Steve Bedrosian (2-1) lost for the first time since arriving in Minnesota in an offseason trade with San Francisco.

Let's say you're the head coach of women's track and field at a major university in 1991. You want to set some goals for your athletes. What would they be?

Well, you'd probably want your athletes to improve their performances throughout the season. Maybe even to the point of setting a school record.

And if they accomplished that, how about placing highly in the conference meet? That's a lofty goal.

Let's set the sights even higher. The NCAA's. Qualifying for the national championships. An opportunity to be recognized as one of the top collegiate athletes in the nation. What could be more exciting than that?

How about the TAC/Mobil Senior Women's Track and Field Championships? Your athletes would compete against the best competition in the entire country, athletes who are at the world-class level.

As we're setting goals, let's go all the way. Let's have our athletes set their sights on the most prestigious competition of all: the Olympic Games. To have an athlete qualify for the Olympic trials, with an opportunity to represent our country in the greatest athletic competition ever, would certainly be a worthy mark to shoot for.

These goals aren't dreams to the University of Iowa women's track and field team in 1991, they're reality. The Hawkeyes have three athletes whose performances admit them to these various levels of competition.

Sophomore Lisa Van Steenwyk of Inwood, Iowa, has set a new school record this season and provisionally qualified for the NCAA's in two events.

Lakers, 76ers complete sweeps

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Chicago completed a 3-0 playoff sweep of the New York Knicks as Michael Jordan scored 14 of his 33 points during a 29-11 second-half spurt that carried the Bulls to a 103-94 victory Tuesday night.

The Bulls, with their 10th consecutive win over the Knicks and seventh straight this season, advanced to the second round of the Eastern Conference playoffs against the Philadelphia 76ers, who swept the Milwaukee Bucks. Will Perdue made it easy for the Bulls near the end, scoring 14 of his 16 in the last 13 minutes.

The Bulls extended the margin to 86-71 with 10:04 left in the game on a jumper and free throw by Jordan, who relied on jump shots rather than his characteristic swooping moves to the basket.

Jordan had nine baskets on jumpers, four on layups and one dunk, while teammate Scottie Pippen took over the flamboyant role with five layups and five dunks to account for all but one of his 21 points. Kiki Vandeweghe and Patrick Ewing scored 20 points each for the Knicks.

76ers 121, Bucks 100

PHILADELPHIA — Charles Barkley, leaping off a left knee encased in a brace, had 30 points and 12 rebounds as the Philadelphia beat Milwaukee to sweep their first-round playoff series.

In addition to Barkley, who has worn a brace since returning from a sprain, Hersey Hawkins scored 26 points, Armon Gilliam 18 and Ron Anderson 16 in the 76ers first sweep of a playoff series since facing Milwaukee in 1985.

Philadelphia fell behind by seven points early in the first period but surged ahead with a 16-4 rally and never trailed thereafter.

Alvin Robertson led Milwaukee with 26 points and Frank Brickowski added 23.

Pistons 103, Hawks 91

ATLANTA — Joe Dumars and Isiah Thomas sparked Detroit's comeback from a 17-point second-quarter deficit, leading the Pistons to a 2-1 advantage over the Atlanta Hawks.

The Hawks led 46-29 on a pair of free throws by Dominique Wilkins — his first points of the game — with 5:30 left in the first half before the Pistons began chipping away, starting with a 3-point basket by Mark Aguirre.

Dumars, who scored 30 points, and Thomas added eight in the comeback that saw the Pistons take the lead for good at 66-64 on Dumars' second consecutive 3-pointer with 3:40 left in the third quarter.

Thomas finished with 19 points and 13 assists and Vinnie Johnson scored 13 of his 17 points in the second quarter. Kevin Willis led the Hawks with 24 points while Wilkins, hounded by Dennis Rodman throughout the game, had 18.

Lakers 94, Rockets 90

HOUSTON — Byron Scott hit a jumper with 16.9 seconds to play and Magic Johnson had 24 of his 38 points in the second half, leading the Los Angeles Lakers to a 94-90 victory Tuesday night and a sweep of the Houston Rockets.

The Rockets called a timeout after Scott's 18-footer from the baseline and missed a chance when they could not get the ball inbounded and it went over to the Lakers. Hakeem Olajuwon missed a 3-point attempt with 8.6 seconds to go.

Olajuwon had 21 points and 17 rebounds, and Otis Thorpe added 21 points, including 17 in the first half. James Worthy scored 22 points for the Lakers, who won their first two games at home.

The Lakers outscored the Rockets 16-8 to start the third quarter and held a 55-54 lead with 6:51 to go in the period following a three-point play by Johnson.

Softball still looking for elusive 44th victory

By Brian Gaul
The Daily Iowan

Iowa softball catcher Diane Pohl doesn't like the word "slump," but even she will admit that that's what the Hawkeyes are in right now.

The sixth-ranked Hawkeyes lost for the third time in five games when Northwestern beat them, 4-1 in 10 innings, in the first game of a doubleheader Tuesday at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

The second game of the twinbill was suspended in the third inning when Northwestern center fielder Shannon Walsh had to be taken to the hospital after an outfield collision.

The game will be completed at 2 p.m. today and will be followed by the regularly-scheduled doubleheader between the two teams.

Iowa, one of the Big Ten co-leaders just one week ago, fell 2½ games behind Minnesota in the league race. The Hawkeyes are 43-9 overall and 12-5 in league play.

"I think it's a combination of playing scared and pressing too hard," Pohl said of the recent skid. "When things are going bad, you press harder and harder. That's why they call them slumps."

"It's been a mystery to me why we've played in this fashion," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said. "I've been severely disappointed to have a team that's having an outstanding season put in such a poor performance coming down to the wire."

The Hawkeyes led the opener 1-0 on Kim Davis' third-inning infield single before Northwestern tied it against Hawkeye starter Terri McFarland in the sixth inning.

Kate Shilstone, the Wildcats' ninth-place batter, lined a lead-off double to the left-center field gap, went to third base on a wild pitch and scored the tying run on Dena Petersen's sacrifice fly.

Two outs later, Missi Gyde's single to short center finished McFarland, who struck out nine and allowed four hits in 5½ innings. Karen Jackson relieved and retired Anne Carpenter on a ground out to end the inning.

After that, neither team put together much of a threat until the international tiebreaker came into effect in the 10th inning.

Weilbrenner plays the unlikely hero

Iowa pitcher Dave Weilbrenner never thought he would score a run, much less a winning run. But it was Weilbrenner that crossed the plate Tuesday to give the Hawkeyes a 7-6 win — and a doubleheader sweep — over Iowa State.

With two out in the bottom of the seventh and the score 6-6, Weilbrenner was put in at second to pinch run for Kevin Minchik. John Pratt then hit a sharp single to right field to score the Hawkeye pitcher.

"I didn't feel any pressure," Pratt said. "The game was already tied up, so it was (Iowa State pitcher Mike Maurer) who was under pressure. I knew he was coming fastball, so I swung at the first pitch that looked good. I got lucky."

"It was kind of shocking," Weilbrenner said. "When Coach (Duane Banks) told me to warm up, I thought I might be pitching. But he told me to make sure my legs were stretched out because I was running. I thought he was going to put one of the position players like Mike Bradley or Tom Anderson in, but then I decided he was looking for raw speed and put me in."

Iowa, which won the first game 18-1, scored five runs off three hits in the last inning to overcome a 6-2 deficit and give sophomore Chris Schutte his first-ever college win in relief of Greg Stephens.

The Hawkeyes (23-22-1) will travel to Cap Timm Field in Ames today for a nine-inning game beginning team a runner on second base to start the inning, and the Wildcats opened the 10th with Walsh as their baserunner.

A lead-off single by Erin McKenney put runners on first and third, and Jackson then walked Shilstone to load the bases.

That brought up Peterson, who hit another sacrifice fly to put Northwestern in front. Walsh beat center fielder Amy Johnson's throw home on the play and shook the ball loose from Pohl, which allowed McKenney to score.

The Wildcats added an insurance run on Gyde's line single to center later in the inning.

The Hawkeyes were unable to rally in the bottom of the inning.

Walsh, who suffered lacerations on her face, was taken by ambulance to University Hospitals where she was listed in good condition Tuesday night. Gyde was dazed by the collision but wasn't seriously injured.

The coaches, officials and administrators conferred on the field after the incident and decided to postpone the game.

"(The suspension) was based on the emotional state of the teams," Blevins said. "I would be hard-pressed not to be compassionate and understanding in a situation like that. In all likelihood, the game couldn't have been completed anyway (because of darkness)."

Jim Gantner had four hits as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Chicago White Sox 8-2 Tuesday night. Billy Spiers added three hits to the 13-hit Milwaukee attack in support of Chris Bosio (3-2). Bosio was in trouble in each of the first four innings and gave up a bases-loaded sacrifice fly to Matt Merullo in the third. Bosio lasted five innings, giving up five hits. Greg Vaughn hit a bases-loaded double off Alex Fernandez (2-2) in the bottom of the first to give the Brewers a 2-0 lead.

Baseball

at 2 p.m.
Iowa State (27-21 overall) jumped out to a 4-0 lead off Stephens in Tuesday's nightcap before the Hawkeyes appeared on the scoreboard in the third inning.

The Hawkeyes scored their first run in the bottom of the third when Shane Simon was walked, advanced to second when Cory Larsen was walked and crossed the plate when Larsen was forced at second and Darrin Pohar overthrew the first baseman for an error.

Iowa added one run in the fifth on a walk by Curt Martin, double by Simon and sacrifice grounder by Larsen that scored Martin.

Neither team then scored until the Hawkeyes' five-run explosion in the bottom of the seventh.

Simon was passed to begin the inning and Larsen reached on a fielder's choice. Danan Hughes and pinch-hitter Tim Killeen were then walked to load the bases.

That led to Bobby Morris' first hit of the game, a single that scored Larsen and Hughes, followed by a double by Kevin Minchik that brought Killeen and Morris home and tied the game.

After Brett Backlund struck out, Minchik was replaced by Weibrenner and Pratt hit his game-winning single.

Mauer (0-2) took the loss in one-third of an inning of relief for Matt Ruess.

"This was a tough day," Iowa State coach Bobby Randall said. "Ruess pitched well until the seventh. He'd just never been in that situation. We walked them back into the game. But we played a good game."

The Cyclones returned to Ames Monday night about 10 p.m. after playing a doubleheader at Kansas and are scheduled for a four-game series at Nebraska this weekend. So Randall opted to leave several key players, including his regular first, second and third basemen and all but four pitchers, in Ames Tuesday.

"It's not like we came with the 'B' team," Randall said. "But we had two freshman pitchers who haven't been in those situations before. And Iowa's a good team; they never let us shake them."

In the opener Tuesday, Iowa rocked Cyclone hurlers Dan Kasperski and Doug Harris for 18 runs on 15 hits, including six home runs.

The Hawkeyes sent 14 batters to the plate in the second, accumulating nine runs. Backlund doubled and tripled in his two at-bats while Minchik singled twice in the inning.

But the home run train started rolling in the third. Iowa put up four runs in that inning, when Hughes walked and stole second,

Morris singled to score the Hawkeye center fielder, Minchik hit a one-bagger to advance Morris and Backlund knocked them all in with a home run.

Killeen led off the next inning with a solo homer to give Iowa a 14-1 lead. But that wasn't enough for a Hawkeye squad just of a 1-3 trip to Ohio State.

Morris and Minchik led off the fifth with consecutive homers over the right-field fence, followed by a one-out smash over the same wall by Pratt.

Hughes then led off the sixth with his seventh homer of the year to give the Hawkeyes the 18-1 win — their biggest margin of victory this season.

Jim Nahas (3-1) threw a two-hitter to get the win for Iowa.

"We've been playing great baseball," Randall said. "But the first game got away from us. Once it got going, we couldn't stop it."

discuss at last weekend's Drake Relays met both the provisional qualifying marks for the NCAA Championships. Her throw of 159 feet and one inch in the discus was the best ever in University of Iowa history, bettering Gail Smith's throw of 158'-2" in 1983.

Van Steenwyk's 48'-4 1/4" effort in the shot was 1 1/2" better than the NCAA provisional qualifying mark of 48'-2 1/4". It was also over two inches better than her previous personal record.

Van Steenwyk's performances are even more impressive when one looks at her top performances from the 1990 season. Last year her top throws were 46'-9" in the shot and 141'-3" in the discus. This dramatic improvement is very promising in light of the fact that this is only Van Steenwyk's second year of collegiate competition.

Iowa hurdler Beverly Powell has not only provisionally qualified for the NCAA Championships, but has also provisionally qualified for the Olympic trials.

Powell's time of 59.63 in the 400 meter hurdles at Drake put her well under the provisional qualifying marks for both competitions. Those times are 59.85 for the Olympic trials and 59.80 for the NCAAs.

Powell may also be on the verge of challenging the all-time Iowa mark in her event. She is just .45 second off Chris Davenport's 1981 time of 59.18.

Powell's times in her senior year have dropped considerably from her previous 1990 personal record of 60.45. That time was good enough for eighth at last year's Big Ten outdoor meet.

The biggest story on the Iowa team so far this season, however, is that of junior Jennifer Brower. Brower turned in a personal best 34:18.56 in the 10000 meters at Drake, making her an automatic qualifier for both the NCAA championships and the TAC/Mobil Senior Women's Track and Field championships. The automatic qualifying times for the NCAAs and the TAC meet are 34:20 and 34:20.14, respectively.

Brower is also a provisional qualifier for the Olympic trials as well. The provisional qualifying time for the trials is 34:25.00.

One new school record, three provisional qualifications and one automatic qualification for the NCAA Championships, an automatic qualification for the TAC meet and two Olympic trials provisional qualifiers. It's been quite a year for the UI women's track and field team, and with the Minnesota Invitational and Big Ten meet still ahead, who knows what could happen? Stay tuned.

Schueler honored as Hawkeyes' MVP

IOWA CITY — Guard Stephanie Schueler was named the Iowa women's basketball team's Most Valuable Player, one of eight MVP awards handed out at a banquet Monday.

Schueler, a 5-3 senior from Sioux Falls, S.D., led Iowa in steals with an average of 2.6 per game and assists (3.3). She was second on the Hawkeye squad in scoring with an 11.7 average.

Sportsbriefs

Schueler earned first team all-Big Ten honors as Iowa finished with a 21-9 overall record and finished second in the conference at 13-5 record.

Other MVP awards announced at the women's sports banquet went to:

Field hockey, Andrea Wieland; gymnastics, Michelle Cahal; swimming, Katy Ketoff and Tracy Golden; tennis, Catherine Wilson and Tracey Donelly; track and field/cross country, Tami Hoskins; Volleyball, Barb Willis and Janet Moylan.

Senior Ginger Lorentson, a three-time academic all-Big Ten selection for volleyball, and junior Catherine Wilson, a member of the tennis team, were awarded the Lou Ginsberg Humanitarian Award, given to women athletes who show concern for the welfare of others.

Angels fire general manger Port

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Mike Port, who was unable to assemble a pennant winner in six seasons as general manager of the California Angels, was fired Tuesday.

Port, who has worked for the Angels since 1977, was replaced by assistant GM Dan O'Brien. Since the end of last season, O'Brien has taken over increased responsibility for the day-to-day operations of the team.

Despite lavish spending on free agents, the Angels finished with a sub-.500 record three times during Port's tenure. Last season, they finished fourth in the American League West with an 80-82 record.

The Angels are 9-10 this season, but have lost six of their last seven. Team president Richard Brown said Port was fired because of "philosophical differences," not the Angels' disappointing start.

"We would have done this even had we been 15-4 or 19-0," Brown said.

Spartans' Hickman pleads innocent

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — Michigan State basketball player Parish Hickman pleaded innocent Tuesday to federal drug charges.

Hickman was formally arraigned in U.S. District Court with conspiracy to distribute cocaine, possession with intent to distribute and attempting to distribute following a federal grand jury indictment. Each of the three counts carry a penalty of 5-40 years in prison and up to a $2 million fine.

Hickman, 21, and Maurice Pointer of Southfield allegedly tried to sell 2.2 pounds of cocaine to an undercover drug agent. Hickman was arrested April 8. He has been free on bond.

Hickman, of Detroit, just completed his junior year of eligibility. He was suspended by the university after the charges were filed.

Herb! Herb! Herb!
It's Herb Ritts, photog extraordinaire, that we're starting with today. (Then we'll go on to real herbs.)
If you pick up a magazine with a celeb on its cover these days, chances are the photo is by Herb Ritts. The MTV generation is probably more familiar with his videos for Jane Jackson ("Love Will Never Drive Without You") and Madonna ("Cherish"). This "little, sexy guy" — as Cindy Crawford called him — has, according to Rolling Stone, redefined glamor photography during the last decade.
Fine, you say, but where's the trivia? Well, a quick look at the story of Ritts' breakthrough should suffice.
At one time, Herb was a sales rep for his parents' furniture company in California. In his spare time he took pictures of his friends, one of whom happened to be Richard Gere. It happened that Herb and Richard were driving through the desert one day (circa 1979) when they ran out of gas. They decided to walk to the nearest gas station, and on the way Herb found the opportunity to shoot a few frames.
The result? Sultry shots of Rugged Richard squinting in his macho way against the killing rays (and probably contemplating the chances of his sun-dried body parts going to a higher auction claim than that which bought Napoleon's).
In the end, of course, Herb and Richard made it to safety — and shots from the now-famous desert session made it to the pages of Vogue.
But there is a final twist: Rumor (aired on MTV, among other places) has it that one of the photos captured a rather, well, candid moment — namely, Gere defecating on the sand. This resulted in considerable "help" from the hapless Richard in promoting Ritts' rise to fame.

Herb! Herb! Herb!

It's Herb Ritts, photog extraordinaire, that we're starting with today. (Then we'll go on to real herbs.)

If you pick up a magazine with a celeb on its cover these days, chances are the photo is by Herb Ritts. The MTV generation is probably more familiar with his videos for Janet Jackson ("Love Will Never Drive You Without You") and Madonna ("Cherish"). This "little, sexy guy" — as Cindy Crawford called him — has, according to Rolling Stone, redefined glamor photography during the last decade.

Fine, you say, but where's the trivia? Well, a quick look at the history of Ritts' breakthrough should suffice.

At one time, Herb was a sales rep for his parents' furniture company in California. In his spare time he took pictures of his friends, one of whom happened to be Richard Gere. It happened that Herb and Richard were driving through the desert one day (circa 1979) when they ran out of gas. They decided to walk to the nearest gas station, and on the way Herb found the opportunity to shoot a few frames.

The result? Sultry shots of Rugged Richard squinting in his macho way against the killing rays (and probably contemplating the chances of his sun-dried body parts going to a higher auction claim than that which bought Napoleon's).

In the end, of course, Herb and Richard made it to safety — and shots from the now-famous desert session made it to the pages of Vogue.

But there is a final twist: Rumor (aired on MTV, among other places) has it that one of the photos captured a rather, well, candid moment — namely, Gere defecating on the sand. This resulted in considerable "help" from the hapless Richard in promoting Ritts' rise to fame.

His name's in this column (no, it's not Richard Gere).

The bottom line is, Ritts was soon loaded with all sorts of heavy-duty assignments — Tom Cruise, Mick Jagger, Don Johnson, even the Dalai Lama! — before he'd had time to learn some of photography's basics. But he coped well, and is not in terrible need of selling furniture these days.

And now for some real herbs. Habitual readers of The Tribune know that I advocate complete comprehension in popular music, as in everything else. I hate unresolved mysteries resulting from subliminal lyrics or enigmatic titles. (God knows we don't want another Charles Manson on our hands.) So when I came across "Kaya," an album by Bob Marley and the Wailers, my first thought was: what the heck did "Kaya" mean? Well, here it is, in the potmeister's own words (from a transcription of a 1978 recorded interview):

"Erb. Man sometimes seh Kaya because he sell 'erb in the yard and people seh he can't come in because he sell 'erb so he seh Kaya."

That's Jamaica, of course. So warm, so cool.

Harpist fired for excessive loudness

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Symphony Orchestra has fired its harpist, saying she played fortissimo during the pianissimo. The harpist, however, denies she's heavy-handed.

Judith Beattie Ryan says it's all part of a five-year plan to kick her out of her chair.

When she was told April 18 she had been fired for insubordination, Ryan, a 22-year veteran of the symphony, already had been informed that her contract would not be renewed because of incompetence, her lawyer said Tuesday.

Ryan was insubordinate because she played too loudly during quiet passages of Stephen Paulus' "Concerto for Orchestra" the previous weekend, said Thomas Bacchetti, the symphony's executive director.

Music Director Yoel Levi repeatedly admonished Ryan, Bacchetti said.

"That left Mr. Levi with no choice but to believe she willfully disregarded his directions," Bacchetti said.

Levi was wielding the baton during the April 11-13 performances. If he thought the harp too loud, he didn't do anything about it, said Ryan's attorney, Debra Schwartz.

"She claims she played it exactly as she was instructed," Schwartz said. "He made no attempt to get her to play it any differently. And she's got witnesses."

And that includes the audience, Schwartz said.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution's review of the April 11 performance

"(The director) made no attempt to get her to play it any differently. And she's got witnesses."

Debra Schwartz
attorney of fired harpist

praised the orchestra for playing the piece "with precision and panache."

It didn't mention the harp.

Ryan declined to talk with reporters about her firing, but her lawyer contends musicianship has nothing to do with the dispute.

In 1986, then-music director Robert Shaw tried to fire Ryan for musical incompetence, but an arbitrator from the Chicago Symphony Orchestra upheld her ability.

In October 1989, Levi notified Ryan that her contract would be allowed to expire this summer, again because of musical incompetence.

Ryan, 44, again filed for arbitration, and filed an age discrimination complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

An arbitrator had been selected and the EEOC complaint was pending when Ryan was fired, Schwartz said. The musicians' contract with the symphony says that insubordination is the only grounds for immediate dismissal.

"She allegedly played a solo passage too loud. We think that's an artistic dispute; it has nothing to do with insubordination," the lawyer said.

In the meantime, the harpless symphony is hiring others for programs in which a harpist is needed.

Pacers' Schrempf best off the bench

By Hank Lowenkrantz
The Associated Press

NBA

INDIANAPOLIS — Playing pro basketball hasn't been a lifelong dream of Detlef Schrempf, the versatile Indiana Pacers forward named the NBA's Sixth Man Award winner on Tuesday.

"I never thought about playing until I was in college," Schrempf said. In fact, he didn't even start playing the game until he was a 13-year-old recovering from a soccer injury in Germany.

He came to the United States as an exchange student and was offered a scholarship at Washington after averaging 15.9 points and 12 rebounds in leading Centralia High School to a state Class AA championship.

"When I went to college, I thought I had a chance of making it and I worked towards that," said the 28-year-old Schrempf, who beat Dan Majerle of the Phoenix Suns by one vote in balloting by a nationwide panel of 96 sports writers and broadcasters, three from each league city and 15 representing the national media.

The 6-foot-10 Schrempf received 38 votes in the closest vote in the award's nine-year history. Previously, the closest race was in 1989, when Eddie Johnson, then with Phoenix, beat Thurl Bailey of the Utah Jazz by seven votes.

Schrempf, runnerup last year to Rickey Pierce, then with Milwaukee, averaged 16.1 points, a team-high 8 rebounds and a career-high 3.7 assists per game this season in helping the Pacers to their second straight playoff berth. He also shot a career-high .520 from the field, .818 from the free throw line and .375 from 3-point range. He played 32.1 minutes per game after coming off the bench in 79 of the Pacers' 82 games.

"I like the full-court, running up and down style of basketball that we're playing," said Schrempf. "I'm allowed to do more things with the basketball, like when I get the defensive rebound I can take it down the court and break something."

"I enjoy doing that. It's one of my strong points and Bo (coach Bob Hill) is letting me do it."

Majerle, the Suns' 6-6 forward-guard, averaged 13.6 points, 5.4 rebounds and 2.8 assists per game, coming off the bench in 70 of 77 games. Boston's Kevin McHale, the 1984-85 winner, was third with eight votes. Pierce, a two-time winner, finished fourth with six votes.

"He's just so special, I could talk about him for an hour," Hill said of Schrempf. "His attitude, his work ethic, his professionalism, his discipline, the fact that he can play so many positions on the floor creates an advantage for us right in and night out."

Pacers spurn overconfidence

By Hank Lowenkron
The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — It took 15 years for the Indiana Pacers to record their first NBA playoff road victory. Now, they have higher goals as they return home against the Boston Celtics, with their best-of-5 series tied 1-1.

After splitting two games at Boston, the teams meet in Games 3 and 4 at Market Square Arena, where the Pacers have beaten the Celtics five consecutive times.

The Celtics need a victory either Wednesday or Friday to avoid first-round elimination for the third consecutive year, while Indiana is looking for a homecourt sweep to win its first NBA playoff series since entering the league in 1976. The fifth game, if necessary, will be at Boston on Sunday.

The Pacers, whose 2-9 playoff record is the worst in the league, took the homecourt advantage away from Boston with a 130-118 victory at Boston Garden Sunday, as Chuck Person set a postseason record with seven 3-point field goals while scoring 39 points.

"It's only an advantage if we come out and don't assume anything and play hard and play together," Indiana coach Bob Hill said of playing the next two games at home, where the Pacers won 29 times this season, the franchise's high in the NBA. "If we just come out and think that we're going to win, then we're going to lose."

The Pacers shot nearly 58 percent (50-of-87) Sunday, held Boston to 44 percent, and outrebounded the Celtics 41-37.

"I think they want to try to slow us down," Hill said. "They're a running team. . . . But I don't think they're going to force the run like we do. I think they'll be more apt to play half-court and go to their strengths inside and make it a battle of the boards."

"We have to keep running. That's important for us."

"The series isn't over by a long shot," said Boston coach Chris Ford, who kept his team at home for two days of practice before traveling to Indiana Tuesday night.

"They're a great team, an institution," Hill said of the Celtics, who won the Atlantic Division with a 56-26 record and are seeking their 17th NBA championship. "We talked before we went to Boston that if we were able to get one of those games, that we had to learn from our past history that we couldn't get satisfied."

Indiana has used its running game to score 250 points in the two playoff games and defeated the Celtics 121-109 and 115-109 in their two regular-season games at home.

"We have to play better perimeter defense," said Boston's Kevin McHale, who did not play in either regular-season game at Indiana.

Larry Bird, who always draws a large contingent of rooters for himself and the Celtics in his home state, agreed.

"We've been around a lot of years, we've been here before," said Bird, who has 39 points, 18 rebounds and 22 assists while playing 81 minutes in the two playoff games despite back pain that kept him out of seven of the last eight regular season games.

"We just have to . . . come back a little harder. I think we can."

Dettlef Schrempf, winner of the NBA Sixth Man Award, is guarded by Boston's Ed Pickney during the Pacers' series-tying upset Sunday.

Grogan thinks he can help

The Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — Steve Grogan preferred to call it a beginning, not an end.

"I know I can still play football," said Grogan, who was released by the New England Patriots on Friday, at a Foxboro Stadium press conference Monday. "I'm not over the hill in that respect. But I'm not leaving with any ill feelings because I know it's time for changes and I don't fit into those changes."

Grogan, 37, the Patriots' all-time leading passer, said he has not retired from football because he still believes he can play a valuable role as a backup quarterback for another NFL team.

"My medical history may scare some people off," said the 16-year NFL veteran, "but I still want to leave the door open. I think I can still contribute in the right situation and the right place."

The Patriots will enter the 1991 season with second-year QB Tom Hodson as the incumbent, and Plan B acquisition Hugh Millen, signed away from Atlanta, challenging him. Maryland's Scott Zolak was selected in the fourth round of this year's draft, making both Grogan and 10-year veteran Marc Wilson expendable.

Wilson announced his retirement Friday. "I had a long talk with Joe Mendes (Patriots vice president of player development) last week, and he felt it would be better for me to retire. But for me, that was like closing all the doors," said Grogan. "I don't think I have anything left to prove or accomplish, but I still think I can play football."

Grogan started four games last year, but was plagued by neck, back and elbow injuries for most of the season. He has thrown for 26,886 yards since joining the Patriots in 1975, completing 1,879 of 3,593 passes, including 182 touchdowns and 208 interceptions. He also rushed for 2,164 yards on 445 carries, 10th on the Patriots' all-time list.

"I know how my body feels, and if my body told me I couldn't play the game any more, I'd walk away," he said. "But it's not telling me that yet."

A fifth-round draft choice out of Kansas State in 1975, Grogan replaced injured starter Jim Plunkett late in the season. The next year, with Plunkett having been traded to San Francisco, Grogan led the Patriots to their first playoff berth in the post-merger NFL.

"In 1976, we turned it all around," he said. "I was a nobody from nowhere and we went 11-3 and made the playoffs. Then in 1985, I was all but written off and I came off the bench. We got a winning streak going and got to the Super Bowl."

Grogan was booed as frequently as he was cheered in his earlier years with the Patriots. But as years passed and challengers for his job failed, he became a fan favorite, respected and admired for his toughness. His teammates also seemed to respond more positively to his leadership.

"It's going to be hard to drive by here and not be able to come in and know everybody in here," Grogan said. "But I feel I've given everything I had to the New England Patriots, and they've given me back just as much and more."

A former UI director of Campus Programs used fictitious invoices and altered receipts to withdraw at least $39,000 from the university over the past three years, according to a preliminary state audit released Wednesday.

Kevin Taylor, who resigned on April 12, withdrew large amounts of money from a cash advance system to be spent on inflated or false Student Commission of Prog-

The Student Assembly Budgeting and Auditing Committee froze the UI Environmental Coalition's budget Wednesday pending a hearing to determine if the UIEC breached its contract with the UI Student Assembly.

SABAC charges the UIEC violated the UISA constitution by making a political statement and having an off-campus bank account. The political statement charges stem from a new UIEC T-shirt that reads, in part, "Save the Environment, Don't Re-elect Branstad."

"The UIEC is sorry about the T-shirts; they were not intended in a bad manner," said Teri Camery, a spokeswoman for UIEC at the meeting.

The UISA constitution states a group cannot use student funds to make a political statement, and student groups cannot keep off-campus bank accounts without permission of Dean of Students Phillip Jones and a majority vote of the UISA.

Camery said Jones and Assistant Director of the Office of Campus Programs Jim Niblock had authorized the UIEC to use an off-campus account, and that UISA funds had not been used to print the shirts.

The hearing will be held Thursday to decide whether UIEC funds will remain frozen.

The UISA also passed its interim annual budget for fiscal 1992 at its meeting Wednesday night. The $215,700.07 budget will allocate funds to over 60 student groups for the period between July 1 and Oct. 31, 1991.

"We did what we set out to do—pass a budget," said UISA President Matt Wise. "Everything tonight was done with intelligent and logical debate, a great improvement over last year. No one lost their head."

MANPURA, Bangladesh — As many as 25,000 people may have died in a devastating cyclone that rampaged across the southeastern coast of this impoverished nation, a news agency reported Wednesday.

The government said it knew of only about 3,000 deaths in Tuesday's eight-hour storm, but acknowledged its reports were incomplete due to severe communications problems. Many of the affected islands were still under water.

United News of Bangladesh, quoting radio reports received in Dhaka, said 25,000 people died — mostly on the coastal islands of Kutubdia, Maheshkali, Sandwip and Chakori that are home to hundreds of thousands of farmers and fishermen. Tens of thousands of people were missing, the news agency said.
