Audit: Official misappropriated $39,000 from UI

By Jim Snyder
The Daily Iowan

A former UI director of Campus Programs used fictitious invoices and altered receipts to withdraw at least $39,000 from the university over the past three years, according to a preliminary state audit released Wednesday.

Kevin Taylor, who resigned on April 12, withdrew large amounts of money from a cash advance system to be spent on inflated or false Student Commission of Programming and Entertainment programs, the audit said.

And according to State Auditor Richard Johnson, an additional $20,000 could come up missing as the investigation into the accounts of the Office of Campus Programs, which SCOPE is a part of, continues over the next two to three weeks. Johnson said although the audit is not finalized due to difficulties of receiving documents from out-of-state companies, the report was released to aid law enforcement officials in their investigations.

According to the report, which was sparked six weeks ago by discrepancies found in a routine audit of university funds, the misappropriations began in October 1987, but $30,767 of the total has been withdrawn over the past nine months. In addition, $9,924 was missing from two advances Taylor still had in his possession when the audit commenced, bringing the total amount of misappropriated funds to more than $49,000.

All of this apparently occurred without attracting the attention of university officials.

According to UI Vice President of University Relations Ann Rhodes, an increase in SCOPE profits could have been the reason no one at the university noticed what amounts to a $39,000 increase in SCOPE's budget. SCOPE is a student-run organization that sponsors concerts and other campus events.

"Very few" university employees have access to the UI's cash advance system, but Taylor's job duties required him to have such access, Rhodes said. She added that a UI Business Office clerk routinely matches cash withdrawals to receipts, but there is still reliance on the honesty of the official.

"We make an assumption that people with the authority to withdraw money from the cash advance system are doing so in good faith," Rhodes said. "I don't think there is any system in the world that is good enough to immediately detect every incident of dishonesty."

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White, who will use the preliminary audit report to determine what legal action to take, said he had not yet seen the audit and could not comment further Wednesday afternoon.

Taylor could not be reached for comment, and his attorney James McCarragher refused to comment until he had an opportunity to see the audit and talk with Taylor.

According to the report, the UI cash system is in place to allow university departments to request

Environment group has assets frozen

UISA approves budget, allocates funds

By Ann Riley
The Daily Iowan

The Student Assembly Budgeting and Auditing Committee froze the UI Environmental Coalition's budget Wednesday pending a hearing to determine if the UIEC breached its contract with the UI Student Assembly.

SABAC charges the UIEC violated the UISA constitution by making a political statement and having an off-campus bank account. The political statement charges stem from a new UIEC T-shirt that reads, in part, "Save the Environment, Don't Re-elect Branstad."

"The UIEC is sorry about the T-shirts; they were not intended in a bad manner," said Teri Camery, a spokeswoman for UIEC at the meeting.

The UISA constitution states a group cannot use student funds to make a political statement, and student groups cannot keep off-campus bank accounts without permission of Dean of Students Phillip Jones and a majority vote of the UISA.

Camery said Jones and Assistant Director of the Office of Campus Programs Jim Niblock had authorized the UIEC to use an off-campus account, and that UISA funds had not been used to print the shirts.

The hearing will be held Thursday to decide whether UIEC funds will remain frozen.

"We did what we set out to do — pass a budget," said UISA President Matt Wise. "Everything tonight was done with intelligent and logical debate, a great improvement over last year. No one lost their head."

"I didn't think it would be as clean and happy as it was," agreed SABAC chairman David Belyn.

Funding for the Rape Victim Advocacy Program was a major topic of budget debate at the meeting. The UISA recommended $3,371.45 for the program, compared to the $17,641 the group requested.

"If we don't get any more funding, RVAP will for all purposes cease to exist," said Karla Miller, RVAP director.

Problems regarding the RVAP recommended allocation arose from the UISA's method of ranking groups to determine funding. RVAP has a high target size, half of the campus, but a low service effectiveness, which lowers their ranking.

"RVAP has, in my opinion, fallen through the budgeting cracks," Wise said.

After lengthy debate, the assembly voted to earmark $3,000 out of a supplemental account for RVAP.

"We really wanted to fund them, and we tried as best we could," Belyn said. "But they grouped everything into a general fund, which lowered their ranking."

RVAP offers several services to the UI and Iowa City community, including the Women's Transit Authority, the Rape Crisis line and presents rape prevention and education programs. The UISA funds approximately 98 percent of the total RVAP budget.

"We have been funded by the (UISA) since 1974, and what we get from the senate allows us to attract other funding," Miller said. "This issue isn't how many services we provide — this protocol does not provide for this kind of service."

Also heavily debated was the salary of a maintenance manager for the Commission for Cooperative Housing.

Members of the co-op who were present argued for the necessity of a paid maintenance manager, but Art students went on strike from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Wednesday to oppose budget cuts in the department.

Art students' strike protests budget cuts

By Marc Morehouse
The Daily Iowan

"Cut the Crap and not the Classes" was the sentiment as about 300 people gathered Wednesday at the Art Building, voicing concern about proposed cuts in the School of Art and Art History's budget.

With four people collecting signatures of support for the art program and a spray-painted mannequin hung by a noose in the background, the hour-long Student Art Strike hoped to send a clear message to state legislators and Gov. Terry Branstad.

"I want Gov. Terry Branstad to come to my class — Governor, if you can hear me in Des Moines — please come to my class and explain why," said Steven Vroom, who teaches Colloquium and Understanding Visual Art. Vroom said the state is "starting to cut into the muscle and bone" of the school, adding that any more cuts could "effectively close" the school.

After the strike at the Art Building, Strike for the Arts committee members met with Gerhard Loewenberg, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, to discuss remedies.

The committee also talked to Branstad's press secretary, Richard Voss, to invite Branstad to visit art classes at the UI. Voss said Branstad supports "full funding for the regents' institutions," but said his schedule would not permit a visit to the UI.

Some of the proposed cuts include:

- The elimination of the research assistant at the UI Museum of Art.
- Three teaching assistantships, one in jewelry and metal work, one in photography and one in sculpture would all be eliminated.
- Postponing the entire undergraduate sculpture program for at least one year.
- Eliminating or postponing the

Bangladesh cyclone causes destruction

By Farid Hossain
The Associated Press

MANPURA, Bangladesh — As many as 25,000 people may have died in a devastating cyclone that rampaged across the southeastern coast of this impoverished nation, a news agency reported Wednesday.

The government said it knew of only about 3,000 deaths in Tuesday's eight-hour storm, but acknowledged its reports were incomplete due to severe communications problems. Many of the affected islands were still under water.

United News of Bangladesh, quoting radio reports received in Dhaka, said 25,000 people died — mostly on the coastal islands of Kutubdia, Maheshkali, Sandwip and Chakori that are home to hundreds of thousands of farmers and fishermen. Tens of thousands of people were missing, the news agency said.

A cyclone that struck the same area in 1970 claimed about 500,000 lives. Bangladesh gained independence from Pakistan a year later.

The government began an operation to provide essentials to the millions of survivors, officials said. At least 12 helicopters dispatched from Dhaka flew in and out of the affected area, dropping packets of food, bottles of water and clothing, they said.

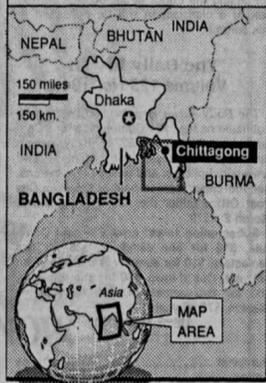

Relief Secretary Hashimuddin Ahmed said the government could confirm only 2,977 deaths from the storm, which at its height included wind-whipped 20-foot waves sweeping over the low-lying coastal islands. Most of the toll was gathered from officials on the mainland, he said.

An official with the Red Crescent, the Muslim equivalent of the Red Cross, also said the death toll could be as high as 25,000.

"Based on the reports from our officials, it's possible so many people have died," said the official, who asked his name not be used.

State Information Minister Nurul Huda said he was not in a position to deny the news agency's report, but that the government would maintain its toll for now.

Justice system factors into decision of rape victims not to report crime

By Heidi Pederson
The Daily Iowan

Experts agree rape is one of the most underreported crimes — and many speculate the criminal justice system is partly to blame.

In rape cases, the victim is often traumatized not only by the stigma of the crime — the suggestion she may have somehow "asked for it" or provoked the attack — but also by the trial process itself, when she is forced to relive the attack and accompanying feelings of helplessness, fear and anger.

And that makes the decision whether or not to report a rape and file charges a very difficult one to make.

If a rape victim decides to report and press charges, she must often fight an extensive legal battle. The deposition and trial period is usually lengthy, and comes at a time when the victim is trying to heal emotional wounds and continue on with her life.

Fourth in a five-part series

Assistant Johnson County Attorney Janet Lyness said these problems within the legal system have become obvious to her through her experiences prosecuting rape cases.

"Something that has become apparent to me is that the victim is often revictimized by the system," she said. "Having to go through the deposition, then having to go to the trial — just the length of time it takes to get the case through court can be really, really hard on her."

Lyness said the length of the trial can delay the victim's emotional recovery.

"She wants to get on with her life, and she can't because this is hanging over her head. It's a painful thing," she said.

Rape, classified as sexual abuse under the Iowa Code of Law, is unique in that there are often no witnesses to the crime. According to Cedar Rapids Assistant Public Defender Duane Rohovit, this means the court must rely on other aspects of the case.

All of Slater to remain open this fall

By Chris Pothoven
The Daily Iowan

Despite circulating stories, the top five floors of Slater Residence Hall will not be closed, UI residence halls officials said Wednesday.

"It is just a rumor," said David Coleman, assistant director, Grand Avenue Residence Halls. "It's not true."

"People are already assigned to the floors," added George Droll, director of Residence Services.

Earlier in the week, residents of Slater heard rumors from their RAs that they would need to find a new place to live, even though they had already received their housing assignments for next year, said Troy Rew, a fifth-floor Slater resident.

"We were told that they're going to close the top five floors," he said. Rew added that the rumors also stated that the first three floors would be used to house UI football players, while floors four through seven would be female-only floors.

"We were kind of upset about that, because we sent in our applications and we're planning to live there again," Rew said.

Tony Roberson, fifth-floor Slater RA, said he had received no official notification about the change. "The residents probably heard the same rumors I did," he said.

Some students even started a petition protesting the action, said Slater resident Jim Fus. He said several men from Slater's seventh floor had taken the petition to two directors of Residence Services.

However, both directors told the students that it was a false rumor, Fus said.

Gunmen get cash from Coralville restaurant

The Daily Iowan

Two men carrying guns robbed an employee from Kentucky Fried Chicken in Coralville Tuesday night. At approximately 10:30 p.m., the employee was leaving the store with the nightly bank deposit. As he approached his vehicle, he was confronted by two men, each armed with a handgun, who demanded that he turn over the nightly bank deposit, the Coralville police reported.

After turning over an undetermined amount of cash, the employee was ordered to leave the area. The two gunmen then fled the scene. There were no shots fired and no one was injured.

University News Services

James Van Allen, UI Regent Distinguished Professor of Physics, is the 1991 recipient of the National Science Board's Vannevar Bush Award.

The award, consisting of a medal struck for the occasion and a citation, will be presented May 8 at the Department of State in Washington D.C. during the annual dinner of the NSB, the policy-making body of the National Science Foundation.

In announcing the award, Mary Good, NSB chair and senior vice president of technology for Allied-Signal, Inc., said, "Dr. Van Allen has pioneered with vision, boldness and drive, the discovery and exploration of new frontiers in space science. His career as a scientist and mentor reflect hard work, frugality and devotion to education."

The NSB established the Vannevar Bush Award in 1980 to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the establishment of the National Science Foundation. The award is presented periodically to a person who has made outstanding contributions in science and technology that are significant to the welfare of the United States.

The UI Council on the Status of Women has vacant memberships beginning 9/91.

Rawlings to award five scholarships

UI President Hunter Rawlings will award five Presidential Scholarships for Study Abroad in a special ceremony today.

The scholarships of $1,000 each have been awarded since 1983 to UI undergraduates to pursue their studies overseas. Past recipients have studied in lands diverse as Poland and Costa Rica.

This year's recipients, their majors, and country of study are: Jennifer Savarirayan, dance and Asian studies, India; Heidi Artherholt, Japanese, Japan; Catherine Cashner, Russian, Soviet Union; Mardell Gallmeyer, Spanish, Spain; and Leandro Torres, psychology, England.

VA Medical Center welcomes back Wirka

Iowa City resident Dave Wirka recently returned home from serving with the inactive ready reserve of the Nebraska National Guard, 110th Medical Company.

He served his country at Madigan

Army Medical Center in Tacoma, Wash., and at Ft. Leonard Wood Army Community Hospital in Missouri. Wirka had been called back to duty as a medic and worked as a respiratory therapist.

He was welcomed back to the Iowa City VA Medical Center by Secretary Edward Derwinski and Senator Charles Grassley, who assisted in unveiling a sign which will bear the 17 names of those VA employees activated during Operation Desert Storm. Wirka is the first employee to return.

Tickets on sale for Harley concerts

Award-winning recording artist and storyteller Bill Harley will present two concerts June 9 at Clapp Recital Hall at 1 and 3 p.m. These family-oriented concerts are for all ages and are sponsored by the Iowa City Public Library and the Library's Foundation.

A nationally recognized family entertainer, Harley has won critical acclaim for his ability to entertain adults and children alike with a unique blend of song and story.

He has released seven recordings of family music and stories, three of which have been awarded the Parent's Choice Gold Awards.

Tickets for both concerts went on sale May 1 and must be purchased in advance, due to limited seating. The $5 tickets can be purchased at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St.; the Hills Bank & Trust Company, 1404 S. Gilbert St.; and the Hancher Box Office.

Project GREEN holds garden plant sale

The 21st sale of perennial garden plants sponsored by Project GREEN will be held from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. May 4 on the concourse of Carver Hawkeye Arena.

Thousands of perennial plants, including many varieties of flowers, small trees and shrubs will be displayed in groups according to plant habit and garden conditions. All plants are donated by local gardeners from their own gardens for this sale to benefit Project GREEN's landscaping projects.

Project GREEN is a citizens' beautification group which raises funds to improve the visual environment and provide educational programs on gardening and landscaping.

UI hosts dance, cheerleading camps

The UI will host special camps for dance teams and cheerleaders July 16-19.

The camps are open to all high school, junior high school and middle school cheerleaders, pom pon squads, drill teams and dance teams.

Instructors will be provided by the Universal Dance Association and the Universal Cheerleaders Association. Dance camp participants will receive in-depth instruction in jazz, pom pon, high kick and novelty routines. Cheerleaders will be instructed in new cheers, sidelines chants, pom pons, tumbling, conditioning and safety. There will also be private coaching sessions each day.

For further details, contact the Universal Cheerleaders Association, 1-800-238-0296, or the UI Summer Sports Camp office, 335-9714.

Sierra Club names Iowa polluters

Cynthia Taylor
The Daily Iowan

United Technologies Automotive, formerly Sheller-Globe Corporation of Iowa City is one of the state's largest polluters, according to a report released this week by the Sierra Club's Iowa chapter, a state environmental group.

"Toxic Pollution in Iowa" reported that United Technologies Automotive, Highway 6 E., released 441 pounds of toxic chemicals in 1989, earning the company a 10th-place ranking.

The state's 15 largest polluters together released more than 31 million pounds of toxic chemicals in 1989.

GM Company, based in Knoxville is Iowa's top polluter, releasing 536,066 pounds of toxic chemicals.

Ann Knisley, spokesperson for United Technologies Automotive, said the 1989 figure represents a 20 percent decrease in toxic chemical emissions from 1988's figure.

The decrease is due to efforts to substitute non-hazardous materials for hazardous chemicals, Knisley said.

For example, the company is investigating how to use water-based paint to eliminate the need for toxic paint solvents, which make up about three-fourths of all toxic air emissions. The process, however, may take some time.

"Any changes we make have to be certified by our customers," Knisley said.

The majority of the chemicals from United Technologies Automotive polluted the environment through emissions, but smaller amounts were released by shipping waste elsewhere for disposal and through the public sewage system.

Sierra Club names Iowa polluters

Cynthia Taylor
The Daily Iowan

United Technologies Automotive, formerly Sheller-Globe Corporation, of Iowa City is one of the state's largest polluters, according to a report released this week by the Sierra Club's Iowa chapter, a statewide environmental group.

"Toxic Pollution in Iowa" reported that United Technologies Automotive, Highway 6 E., released 441 pounds of toxic chemicals in 1989, earning the company a 10th-place ranking.

The state's 15 largest polluters together released more than 31 million pounds of toxic chemicals in 1989.

ALCOA Company, based in Knoxville, was Iowa's top polluter, releasing 536,066 pounds of toxic chemicals.

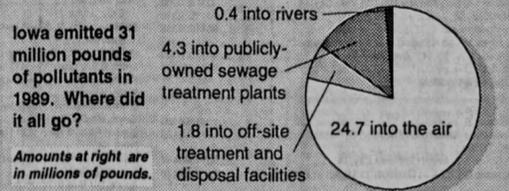

Ann Knisley, spokesperson for United Technologies Automotive, said the 1989 figure represents a 10 percent decrease in toxic chemical emissions from 1988's figure. The decrease is due to efforts to substitute non-hazardous materials for hazardous chemicals, Knisley said.

For example, the company is investigating how to use water-based paint to eliminate the need for toxic paint solvents, which make up about three-fourths of all toxic air emissions. The process, however, may take some time.

"Any changes we make have to be certified by our customers," Knisley said.

The majority of the chemicals from United Technologies Automotive reached the environment through emissions, but smaller amounts were released by shipping waste somewhere for disposal and through the public sewage system.

Several of the toxic pollutants released by United Technologies Automotive may cause birth defects or cancer.

"Citizens living in communities where the largest, most toxic emitters operate, live with an increased risk of adverse health effects from these companies' emissions," said Joe Bolcom, clean air coordinator for the Sierra Club's Iowa chapter.

Bolcom said a common misperception is that recent amendments to the Federal Clean Air Act are going to solve Iowa's hazardous air pollution problem. However, Iowa's air pollution standards are actually going to be weakened by new federal guidelines.

Iowa's current standard of allowing one cancer fatality in one million for exposure to carcinogenic air pollutants will be replaced by the Clean Air Act standard of one cancer in 10,000.

"Iowa needs to have the authority to set its own standards for chemicals known or suspected of causing cancer," Bolcom said.

Grassroots group influences lawn care ad modification

By N. Aziz Gökdemir
The Daily Iowan

A lawn care company operating in the Iowa City area voluntarily agreed to modify advertisements that claim its products are safe to the environment. The decision came as a result of a recently concluded investigation by the Iowa Attorney General's office.

All American Turf Beauty Inc., based in Van Meter, Iowa, changed the advertisements because a report released by Attorney General Bonnie Campbell found the ads to be misleading.

Campbell said Wednesday the investigation also found problems with the advertisements of two other lawn care companies that operate in the area — one stopped making the claims that were under investigation, and it was decided the problems associated with the third company were not substantial enough to warrant action.

The investigation was in response to a Sept. 7, 1990, complaint filed by local grassroots organization Environmental Advocates against All American, Chemlawn Services Corp., and Spring Green Lawn and Tree Care. The complaint stated that EA believed the companies had included false and misleading claims in their advertisements.

Chemlawn is based in Columbus, Ohio, and Spring Green is based in Columbus Junction, Iowa.

In the announcement of the investigation results, Campbell said, "Registration of a pesticide with the Environmental Protection Agency is not a guarantee of a product's safety. Even registered pesticides can be dangerous."

"Since the EPA doesn't decide conclusively what is safe, we consider sales claims of pesticide safety with great suspicion."

In the case of All American, an agreement was reached wherein the company said it will stop making unsubstantiated claims that imply pesticides benefit the environment.

Titling a brochure "Lush Lawns for Lovers of the Environment," All American had made claims in its advertisements that its products are "practically nontoxic to people, pets and the environment."

The company has withdrawn those claims, Campbell said.

The investigation also concluded that Chemlawn had made unsubstantiated claims in implying that registration with the EPA was a sign of effectiveness, and its products were not poisonous except to weeds and insects.

No formal action is being taken because Chemlawn discontinued those claims in its 1991 Iowa advertising.

Campbell said, "It's not clear whether Chemlawn made these changes on their own or as a result of our investigation, but we will continue to monitor their advertising to ensure they are not repeated."

Again, no formal action is being taken with Spring Green because the problems were not substantial, Campbell said.

"(The problems) were very minor," Bill Roach, attorney general spokesman, said. "We advised them of the concern about one problem, and it was resolved."

Rape

"The difference is that since sexual abuse often doesn't take place in front of others, the credibility of the witnesses and the circumstances surrounding how the victim and the alleged perpetrator have gotten together are important," Rohovit said.

According to Christy Munson, victim-witness coordinator for Johnson County, one of two "standard" defenses is usually used by the defendant in rape cases. One defense — alibi or question of identity — is utilized less frequently now that sophisticated scientific tests such as DNA, blood and semen typing have become acceptable in court.

"With the new tests and the chemical evidence, we can more easily pin down the identity of the attacker," Munson said.

The most commonly used defense, she said, is the question of whether or not the victim consented. This defense is where the lack of witnesses comes into play.

"(Rape) is often just between two people, so when it comes into court it's one person's word against another's," Munson said. "I would think a defense attorney would see this as the most favorable defense, because it is sometimes difficult for

GREAT IOWA TREASURE HUNT

Since November, 1990, more than $4.7 million in abandoned money belonging to more than 16,000 people has been reported to the Office of the Treasurer of State. All the names listed in this ad are reported as being owed $25.00 or more. The abandoned money could be forgotten savings or checking accounts, utility refunds or deposits, or uncashed benefit checks or lost stocks. The treasurer also receives abandoned safe deposit box contents. If you are named in this ad or are an heir to one of these people, fill out the coupon below and send it to the Treasurer's Office. You will be directed to the company holding the money for nearly all these funds are still being held by the companies who reported them. If the rightful owner does not claim the money in 65 days, the money will be turned over to the Treasurer's Office where it can be claimed by the rightful owner at any time.

Rape

a jury to convict with just one person's word against another's." But Iowa City attorney Leon Spies, who has dealt with several rape cases, said there are no such standard patterns among attorneys.

"Each case is different and the circumstances obviously are different," Spies said. "The defense used would depend on the nature of the case and the character of the accused and of the victim."

Rape cases are difficult to prosecute for two reasons, according to Lyness. One reason is that it is often difficult for a victim to testify due to the traumatic nature of the assault. The other is because juries still find it difficult to believe that rape occurs, she said.

"(The jury) sees the defendant sitting there, looking very normal and just like one of them, and it's hard to believe that this person would do something as bad as what's being described," she said.

The defense often tries to take advantage of the special nature of rape cases, Lyness added, by asking for continuances in the case — which often results in the victim becoming frustrated with the legal system and perhaps deciding to drop charges.

The defense also commonly pries into the victim's background, questioning such things as her character, reputation and even what she was wearing at the time of the assault, Lyness said. This is often an attempt to imply that the victim somehow provoked the assault.

"Sometimes the only defense they have is to put the victim on trial, so they do it. And I think it's grossly unfair," Lyness said. "Maybe they do it less than they did 15 years ago, but they still do it. It's much more subtle now. It's more talking about her lifestyle or putting more emphasis on her past relationship with the defendant than the victim would say was there."

One rape victim said this is precisely why she didn't press charges. "I knew the defense counsel would dredge things up from my past — things that have no relevance, but could be manipulated to damage my credibility," she said.

Spies, however, disagrees about the role such information plays in the defense of a rape case.

"Seldom is it very productive to get into the past, and jurors object to it," he said. "Everybody has been more sensitized to the human relations aspect of the law."

The attitudes of juries have been changing in recent years, Rohovit added.

"More and more juries are viewing rape as a crime of violence as opposed to sex," he said. "They no longer view women as enticing rape."

Rohovit said there are a number of reasons for this change, including the increased publicity of sexual assaults such as the Nancy Ziegenmeyer rape case. Ziegenmeyer told the story of her rape to The Des Moines Register and the series of articles that resulted won a 1991 Pulitzer Prize.

But Munson said justice often isn't an easy thing to evaluate when it comes to rape cases.

"You can never replace what's taken away in a violent act," she said. "The damage can't be repaired through any kind of justice process, so I guess in that way it's not a victim justice system, it's a criminal justice system."

Independent politician courts poor, minorities in his bid for presidency

By James Arnold
The Daily Iowan

Calling for the minorities of America to join together behind his "Project New Tomorrow," Ron Daniels spoke Wednesday in hopes of receiving positive response to his proposed 1992 independent presidential campaign.

The former executive director of the National Rainbow Coalition and deputy campaign manager of Jesse Jackson's 1988 campaign, Daniels said the U.S. is a growing democracy, but there is room for improvement.

"America is not a finished product," he said. "When we look at where we are now in this country, we still have before us the struggle of finishing the unfinished democracy."

Daniels said the Reagan era showed the inequality of the American democracy.

"Ronnie never was able to get an Academy Award in legitimate theater. We would have to say, in retrospect, that he deserves the Academy Award of the century for being president of the United States," he said. "What we are now reaping is the bitter harvest. A harvest which now has one-half of one percent of the people in control of nearly thirty percent of the total wealth."

The United States is a great nation for some, Daniels said, but there are many people who aren't as lucky, including the poor, the homeless, the illiterate, the African-Americans and others.

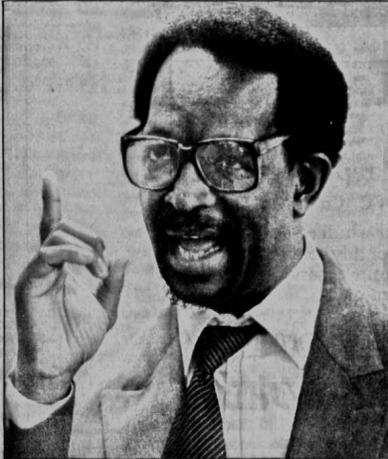

"It's great for some," he said. "If you are part of the 37 million people who have no health insurance it's not quite so good."

As a possible independent candidate, Daniels said the other political parties aren't meeting the nation's needs.

"Unfortunately we have two political parties," he said. "One political party which is openly for the rich, the Republicans. (And another party which) in the last decade, the Democratic party, professes to be the party of the poor and working people... but has been utterly intimidated into inaction."

The goal of the campaign, Daniels said, isn't necessarily to get him into the White House. He said he hopes to create a movement.

"We need a new sense of national purpose, and a new sense of national direction," he said. "More important than me being president of the United States is to offer an alternative, get you to see what is wrong with America, and what can be right with America."

Daniels said he hopes to rally many minority groups to the campaign including possibly offering a female Native American as vice president. He hopes to bring many progressive political groups to a national convention in 1992, meeting the same time as the two major political parties. He also hopes his movement is able to run in local campaigns by 1993.

He said although no black candidate has ever won even a major party's support, being an African-American presidential candidate is not a liability for success.

"It is not about fighting the power, but about taking the power," he said. "One thing that Jesse Jackson taught me was people will listen to you no matter who you are."

American art historian position for at least one year.

Eliminating or postponing one painting and drawing faculty position for one year.

In a statement released to the media, Loewenberg said he "understands students' concern about the availability of courses needed for graduation." He also said it was impossible to offer all the elective students wanted to take, but he did promise that no student's graduation would be delayed by the unavailability of courses.

At the core of the students' and the committee's concerns are classes which fall under the heading "status pending" in the Schedule of Courses.

Courses labeled as pending may not be available to students. Art students are not allowed to register for these classes and one adviser said "it's not likely" these courses would be offered.

Currently there are 117 "status pending" courses offered in the UI College of Liberal Arts for the fall 1991 semester — 22 are art classes.

According to Vroom, two of the three General Education Requirement classes in art history might also be labeled status pending as well as several upper-division classes in design.

"I can't register for any upper-level classes because they're either closed or status pending," said Anne Franklin, founding member of the Strike for the Arts committee. "It's becoming virtually impossible to graduate in four years."

"Art students are, in most cases, unable to register on the day they are supposed to," Vroom said. "The cancer (status pending classes) is spreading, art students need to preregister."

Many of the students attending the strike said they felt cheated by the UI. Some senior art majors said they have been forced to spend an extra year in school because they couldn't get required classes.

Cathy Stanek, a fifth-year senior, said her extra year could have been avoided if she had been able to enroll in a graphic design class.

"I transferred to Iowa because it is such a good school," Stanek said. "But now I feel I've lost a year of my life."

Vroom said several students have approached him, begging him to "pull strings" or do whatever he could to help them get into their needed classes.

"I've had students crying in my office, and begging for any help I could offer them."

For UI graduate student James Lewis, the Art School budgeting problems are more serious than simply getting into the classes. The UI is the only school in the Big Ten that charges graduate assistants tuition which adds economic strain. For Lewis, it's a matter of feeding his family.

"I feel conned," he said. "I'm seriously thinking about leaving the school because I will not stay in an environment that takes food away from my child."

funds to be "used as a petty cash fund for the purpose of making small payments to vendors." Taylor, however, held as many as seven advances totaling $81,200 at one time. In addition, Taylor used cash to pay for "rentals of furniture, spotlights and stage curtains, payments to entertainers, limousine service, restaurant bills and other promotional activities which could have and should have been paid by university check through the voucher system," the report said.

The audit went on to document 35 instances where invoices or receipts explaining withdrawals from the UI cash advance system were altered, totally fictitious or duplicated in order to misappropriate SCOPE funds.

"The assumption was that these were proper expenditures and the amounts paid were valid," Rhodes said. "It was only when the state auditor went back and compared the vendors' receipts to what had been submitted for payment that it was clear these alterations had been made."

Johnson said the university is not doing enough to prevent this kind of misappropriation.

"If the controls are adequate, why would the university allow $81,000 to be withdrawn at one time?" Johnson asked. "Usually only $2,000 to $4,000 is taken from the cash account."

Johnson said his office's final report will make recommendations to the UI to safeguard against the abuse of the cash advance system.

According to Todd Stewart, who interviewed Taylor about the misappropriations for the auditor's office, Taylor said he was the sole person who handled the cash advances in that office.

Stewart said Taylor reproduced documents with the letterhead of a vendor on a computer system he had access to at the Union.

For instance, on February 5, 1991, Taylor submitted a fictitious receipt of $2,300 that was to have been paid to J.C.'s Cafe for catering services for The Replacements before they appeared in concert at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Johnson said the employees of the Coralville business were "surprised" to hear of the alleged transaction.

In another instance, Taylor inflated the cost for equipment rental to be paid to Blackhawk Lighting Co., of Dubuque, Ia., from $450 to $2,450, amounting to $2,000 of misappropriated funds, the audit states.

The audit marks the second time in a year that the Office of Campus Programs has been investigated by the state. Dean of Students Phillip Jones, who oversees the office, refused to comment on the audit's findings.

Last April, state officials uncovered spending abuses by student body president Juan "Pepe" Rojas-Cardona and others. The report also blasted the UI's internal audit investigation, saying it overlooked "extravagant" spending practices and questionable reimbursements. Taylor had approved all of the travel and meal claims.

SCOPE members declined to comment on Wednesday's audit.

UISA

the UISA cut $960 of the allocated $1929 because the amount equaled a rent subsidy for the 31 residents of the Commission's quarters — a "personal good" prohibited under the UISA bylaws.

Wise also discussed the status of the current UISA budget at the meeting, and problems with a Rose Bowl package the UISA sponsored this year.

"We have about $1,000 to last us till the end of June, which, if last year's senate is any indication, is nowhere near enough," Wise said. "We are going to try and make do so as to not go in debt, but it won't be easy."

The UISA participated in a Rose Bowl program that, according to Wise, was not supposed to cost the UISA anything. The assembly lost about $30,000 in the deal because a contract deadline was missed.

"We are looking into it, trying to find who is responsible," Wise said.

Student Organization Budget Allocations for fiscal year 1992

The UI Student Assembly approved the following budget allocations (including supplemental funding) for student organizations last night:

Class II programs — Including the UISA legislative and executive branch expenses and salaries, Student Judicial Court, Student Activities Board, GSS, LASA, Daycare Commission, RVAP, Riverfest and others.

In the world of corporate America, high-powered, high-profile women executives are few and far between. Sallie Bingham tried to change that, and as a result caused one of the biggest turmoils in American business during the last decade.

Bingham, a playwright and bestselling author, is one of the featured guests visiting the UI Playwrights Workshop this week as part of the 1991 Iowa Playwrights Festival. She has visited several Workshop classes to offer advice on writing.

Bingham's autobiography, "Patriarchal Rule and Prejudice," was released in paperback this week. It is the saga of her family — owner of a rich and powerful communication empire in the South — and the position of Bingham women in family history.

In the book Bingham describes the patriarchal rule of her family, and the connections between violence and sexism within families and the nation. While on her family company's board of directors, Bingham refused to take a traditional passive role — to be the "token female," as she puts it — and tried to take a more assertive role in the business. Her actions led to demands from other board members that she resign; her refusal to step down caused a national scandal and internal family power struggle, ultimately leading to the dissolution of the communication empire in 1986.

Corporate tumult detailed in Bingham autobiography

By Ann Riley
The Daily Iowan

In the world of corporate America, high-powered, high-profile women executives are few and far between. Sallie Bingham tried to change that, and as a result caused one of the biggest turmoils in American business during the last decade.

Bingham, a playwright and best-selling author, is one of the featured guests visiting the UI Playwrights Workshop this week as part of the 1991 Iowa Playwrights Festival. She has visited several Workshop classes to offer advice on writing.

Bingham's autobiography, "Passion and Prejudice," was released in paperback this week. It is the saga of her family — owner of a rich and powerful communications empire in the South — and the position of Bingham women in family history.

In the book Bingham describes the patriarchal rule of her family, and the connections between violence and sexism within families and the nation. While on her family company's board of directors, Bingham refused to take a traditional passive role — to be the "token female," as she puts it — and tried to take a more assertive role in the business. Her actions led to demands from other board members that she resign; her refusal to step down caused a national scandal and internal family power struggle, ultimately leading to the dissolution of the communications empire in 1986.

In spite of the turmoil, Bingham doesn't regret her actions.

"It is crucial for women to talk about so-called secrets in order to overcome them," Bingham said. "These are the kinds of stories women need to hear."

Bingham's family responded to "Passion and Prejudice" with an extensive rebuttal (weight: 11 pounds) mailed to nearly every magazine in the country — except, Bingham notes, feminist publications, which her family scorns or ignores.

"My relationship with my mother and brothers has not changed much since the publication of the book. We are pretty close to what we always were — polite, but not very close," Bingham said. "My real family is my three sons, thank goodness."

Bingham said she has heard from women in family businesses who want to share their own experiences in the male business world.

"The key is to speak up. Women are usually minority shareholders who always complied with what the men in the company want," she said. "Now they are trying to become real contributors. I think that will cause a change."

"An enormous number of women own stock. We could make a change in corporate America, the great power that runs this country."

In 1986 Bingham founded the Kentucky Foundation for Women with the money she acquired from the sale of her family's business properties. The foundation offers private financial support for women in the arts and publishes The American Voice, a feminist literary quarterly.

"We are trying to do a lot of fairly subversive things (with the quarterly) — creating a feminist magazine that doesn't look like one," she said. "That is our attempt to escape the ghetto, escape the mold, to try to get people to buy the magazine who wouldn't normally."

Meanwhile, Bingham continues to produce plays and fiction. Her other works include the novel "After Such Knowledge," the short story collections "The Touching Hand" and "The Way It Is Now," and eight plays. She has taught creative writing and playwriting at the University of Louisville, and was book editor of The Louisville Courier-Journal from 1982 to 1985.

Bingham's introduction to theater was less than fortuitous. While in a Harvard writing class as an undergraduate, she agreed to appear in a classmate's play without knowing anything about the role. It turned out that she had to play a simple-minded stripper in a traveling burlesque show — an experience made even more traumatic by the presence of her family in the audience.

"I was turned off from theater for twenty years," she said.

Bingham is currently finishing her play "Postcard Collector," about the life of expatriate poet H.D., who lived in London during the 1920s and '30s.

Video, bamboo, 'labanotation' featured in UI dance concerts

By Gabrielle Mullarkey
The Daily Iowan

The UI Department of Dance is springing into May with two concerts in the North Hall Space / Place Theatre.

The regular Space / Place Concert, performed twice a year, takes place on May 3 and 4, starting at 8 p.m. Tickets are $3, with children admitted free.

On May 5 in the same venue, two major dance works are to be premiered at the concert "Group Progress," also starting at 8 p.m. Admission is $2, and children are admitted free.

The Space / Place presentations will consist of 10 works, embracing group, duet and solo performances. Pieces were selected by a committee which hosts informal "construction site showings" throughout each semester to view new works.

The concert diversity ranges from a comedy duet titled "Mating Rituals of Mr. Moose," by Jeff Curtis, to an abstract group piece, choreographed by Susan Rieger, focusing on the interdependence of swinging motions.

Two pieces from the concert are reconstructions from "labanotation," the name given to symbols developed by master dance theorist Rudolf von Laban to denote movement through space.

Linda Crist, an assistant professor of dance, has reconstructed the Chinese work "Bamboo Grove" from labanotation. "Just as music is symbolized on a written page, labanotation is a means of recording movement with symbols," explained Crist.

"Bamboo Grove" was choreographed in 1988 by the Taiwanese artist Ming-Shen Ku, and Crist is the first person to reconstruct it from its recently notated form as a labanotation score. Each dancer uses a bamboo pole as an integral part of the dance. "The theme of the piece is pride in one's cultural heritage and the pole symbolizes the inescapable nature of this heritage," said Crist.

The other labanotation piece is "Brahms Waltzes," reconstructed by undergraduate Carol Maxwell.

A stream-of-consciousness interpretation flows into the concert at three separate junctures. "Stream of Consciousness," performed by Carol Maxwell and choreographed by dance senior Jennifer Savarirayan, combines classical and modern Indian dance rhythms. Savarirayan's aim was to "define movement" rather than mimic the formalism of much Indian classical dance, that develops a finite story through hand and body gestures.

Also in the May 3 and 4 concerts is a film piece by UI student Bruce Johnson. The piece, "Touch the World," will be shown at the end of the first act. It incorporates dance to deal with several topics, including homelessness and drug addiction. Sixteen UI students appear in "Touch the World," which was choreographed by UI graduate student Debbie Belue.

The aim of the piece, Johnson says, is to "provide awareness for these situations, and to show that there's hope for improving them."

The "Group Progress" concert on May 5 will see the debut of a major collaborative piece between composer Dana Honn, choreographer Dalienne Majors and artist Tiera, performed by 12 dancers.

Supported partly by a grant from the UI Fine Arts Council, the dance portrays the four elements of wind, fire, water and earth through experimental use of light, color, movement and sound. Honn's original score incorporates the dancers' voices and movements on the floor.

"Each member of the trio is trying to cross their own barrier into each other's realms," said Majors, an MFA student due to graduate this year, who qualified in dance at the Juilliard School of dance, music and theater in New York.

Crossing into complementary zones, composer Honn has choreographed some of the sections and Majors has developed an idea suggested by artist Tiera, where a dancer works with a ladder.

The second part of the program is an expanded form of Susan Rieger's swinging piece, using the seven dancers from the previous concert. A videotape of rehearsals for the piece will be shown to the audience arriving at the theater. Dance senior Rieger wanted "to look more closely at the process than the final product."

Inspired by an article in The Daily Iowan about the physics of swinging, Rieger interviewed members of the UI Physics faculty, combining scientific background with her own interest in how "mood swings become extreme when you move somewhere new and don't have a support network. I felt it would answer so much to have an understanding of momentum, free turns and runs."

The final piece of "Group Progress" is a double duet of four dancers titled "Innate Response," by dance graduate student Laurie Fields.

1992 ELECTION

Waiting game

Former Massachusetts senator Paul Tsongas officially entered the race for the 1992 Democratic presidential nomination Tuesday, becoming the only Democrat officially seeking the nomination. In 1988, when the campaign of Michael Dukakis began to falter, Democrats said wait until '92. But 1992 will not be their year. In fact, the best strategy for the Democrats in '92 will be to wait until '96.

Currently, President Bush is one of the most popular presidents in history, and there is no downfall in sight. Bush has been very successful at delegating his authority and insulating himself from political fallout. He has endeared himself to the American public by striving to appear as the champion of truth, justice and the American way.

Though Bush has been faced with potential problems — a slight recession, a huge budget deficit and the plight of the House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, Sen. Al Gore, and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo all seem interested in the Democratic nomination, but are biding their time. They seem to realize that Bush's teflon exterior will make him a landslide winner in '92 unless some unforeseen catastrophe befalls him.

Kurds — the president, in the best tradition of his predecessor, has been able to sidestep or delegate responsibility for these issues. The recession has not trickled down to the consumer yet, and Bush has left it to the Federal Reserve to curtail the problem through reductions in interest rates. The budget deficit is an ongoing problem that no one expects any one administration to solve, but Bush successfully passed off the hard medicine of budget cuts and tax increases as necessary and just. And responsibility for the Kurds was recently taken over by the United Nations, leaving Bush's war victory unblemished.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, Sen. Al Gore, and New York Gov. Mario Cuomo all seem interested in the Democratic nomination, but are biding their time. They seem to realize that Bush's teflon exterior will make him a landslide winner in '92 unless some unforeseen catastrophe befalls him. In light of Bush's success, it would be best if these Democratic big guns saved their verbal ammunition and war chests for '96.

The 1996 election promises to give the Democrats a fighting chance at winning the presidency because of the way Bush has controlled the Republican party. The president has been the only Republican in the limelight. Other notable Republicans and future presidential hopefuls such as Phil Gramm, Robert Dole and Jack Kemp have been pushed off the printed page and out of the public eye. The public's lack of recognition of the Republican contenders for '96 may allow the Democrats to steal the show. So for now, the most hopeful Democratic contenders should sit and wait.

Few readers give career advice

Two weeks ago, I had one of those once-in-a-lifetime column ideas. It was an advice column in reverse. There are a good half-dozen advice columns in this country, but all of them give it. I was willing to take it. As anyone who has an older sister knows, with advice, it is better to give than to receive. (My sister once told me that if I wanted to be cool, I should walk like the guys in "The White Shadow." For weeks I looked like my knees were on backwards.) So it was indeed a monumental sacrifice on my part to give people this opportunity.

I also offered a free T-shirt to the best letter writer. Ladies and gentleman, Manhattan was purchased for a pittance because the Founding Fathers knew about merchandising. The Joffrey Ballet, in its recent visit here, had people putting up with the sort of comically stereotypical East Coast snootiness that would get you killed if you acted that way while you were actually on the East Coast. And how did they get away with it? They had with them a case of the coolest T-shirts that this reporter has ever seen.

So I was shocked and dismayed when I got a grand total of one and one-half letters. The half came from a young woman by the name of Amy. She had an attack of shyness. She begged me, with brown eyes filled with the judgment of God, not to print her letter. Very sad. But I am not an unfeeling man. Therefore, I have changed Amy's name to one of those time-honored journalistic pseudonyms and I have made up a letter with which to replace it.

Dear Mitch,
You were born to stud. I thought so even before I found out you are even better looking than that Apollo-like caricature.

What with Frazier Crane, Captain Piccard and Dick Cheney all becoming sex symbols, it is high time you cashed in on that distinguished (not to be confused with extinguished) hairline of yours.

Now is the time. American gigolos are no longer required to work to the tune of Blondie songs.
Yours,
Jane Indianlettergiver

The winner of the first annual Find-a-Life contest is none other than my bartender. (He really is; I am not kidding.) Not only was his letter by far the longest, but in my 20 odd years on this planet, I have never seen guy handwriting so immaculate. Most women write with the soft flowing curves of a butter cookie. (Yeah, I don't know where that came from either.) Men continually write with the sort of precision that a murder victim would use in his own pool of blood. But not Dan Wiesman. The man is a human laser printer. Even the right margin was uniform. It was incredible.

Here are some excerpts:

"Dear Mr. Martin,
Sometimes in order to save one's life, Mitch, one has to put it on the line. And personally I can think of no better life to put on the line than yours. This is why I believe a career in the Mafia would suit you well . . .

Mitch Martin

"[The chief advantages of being in the Mafia are] playing cards all day long with big sweaty men who smell faintly of olive oil, and front row seats whenever Sinatra is in town. . . .

"When one knows that every day could very likely be one's last, one tends to notice the precious, smaller pleasures in life — the sound of a gentle rain falling, the uncommon beauty of a summer's rose, or even the simple joy one gets from sitting on certain foreign objects. I know, Mitch, that you probably enjoy sitting on certain foreign objects as it is, but . . .

"Perhaps it is only through your experience with the Mafia that you could change the weaseling and complaining nature displayed weekly in your column that many Iowa Citizens have learned to detest with all their hearts . . .

"So think about it. The Mafia is looking for few good men, but I'm sure they'd be willing to settle for a low-life twerp such as yourself . . ."

Dan, you've made me an offer I can refuse. You see, I'm ethnically unfit. That is unless there's going to be a Danish Mafia sometime soon. I doubt it. No one wants to get stuck in a Danish restaurant and end up face down in the apple skiver. Plus we have no pizza joints to use as fronts for drugs and money laundering. We'd have to use furniture stores. Very thin furniture stores. It would kill morale. And we don't have any really tough sayings, like "revenge is a dish best served cold." We'd have to say stuff like, "Henrik. I want you should go take out Ib who has been most displeasing to the family. And remember, 'a man who cuts his own firewood is twice warmed!'"

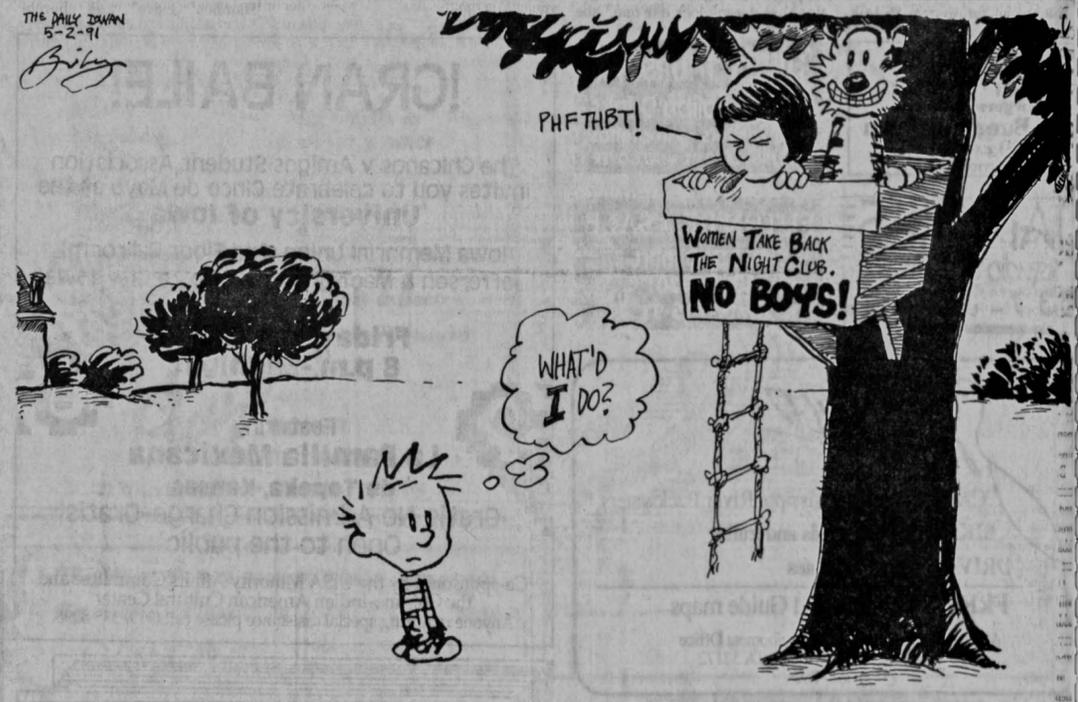

But at least Dan gave it a shot. I am very disappointed with the rest of you. Still, I must press on.

I thought up a new career, no thanks to you Meanies. You know that one friend you have that's a really great guy, but every time you see him all you want to say is, "Bob, I love you like a brother, but you have the Bush Gardens coming out of your nostrils." Problem is, Bob, I hate you forever if you said that. So you try to ignore it. And then you see Bob outside the yogurt shop. And he's gotten a double scoop. There are little bits of raspberry yogurt globules hanging from each and every nosehair so that it looks like some Pepto Bismal had exactly the wrong effect on his upset stomach.

So what I would do, for a nominal fee, is come up to Bob and say, "Hi Stranger! Some of your friends really care and so they have sent me to tell you how much you are currently grossing them out, nose hair-wise."

I know, it's profiting from other people's misfortune, like towing cars or the Reagan Administration. But if that's the way I end up, we know who's fault it is.

Don't we?
Mitch Martin's column appears Thursdays on the Viewpoints page.

Daum closure restricts access to quiet house

To the Editor:

On Wednesday, April 18, the Board of Regents decided to close Daum Residence Hall. This plan makes financial sense, but represents a loss to the university community. It is not the building that creates character, but it is the people who live in it. The people who choose to live in Daum almost always do so because of the total quiet house option. They are usually conscientious, hard workers. This cannot be said of the wide variety of people who choose non-quiet housing. Students should be given the option of a total quiet house. Single quiet floors cannot duplicate or replace a total quiet house option.

Sexes must 'take back the night' together

To the Editor:

"Women Take Back The Night" used to be a favorite spring ritual of mine, where I could rejuvenate feelings of empowerment, strength and hope for women's rights. Sadly, this has been shattered. Last Friday night, I attended the rally in College Green Park. As in the past three years, my male partner accompanied me — not because I dragged him along, or required his presence, but because he wants to understand the discrimination and violence against women that he himself has never had to experience. This year, men were not allowed. It was a much smaller gathering than previous years, about 25 percent of the usual turnout. But there were several men present. The first speaker asked that a circle be formed, which men could not join (but they could remain outside the circle). Because I do not feel comfortable with this kind of separatism, I stayed with my partner, clearly outside the circle. This alone made me angry — I was there to feel empowered by the overwhelming presence of strong and caring women, yet those same women made me feel unwelcome by their glares and stares at me, simply because I was with a man.

We came to listen to the speakers, yet the first hour was spent listening to reasons why men were not allowed, none of which was convincing. I know many men that do not practice sexism, and some women that do — you cannot judge someone's ideals by gender alone. Those women who believe that only women, or even only lesbians, can help in this struggle are sadly mistaken. To exclude men that are sympathetic does more damage than good, because they no longer want to align themselves with feminism (as proven by the low turnout) and therefore place themselves on the other "side." There were moments that night when I could envision those same women burning male effigies and advocating violence against men (one speaker suggested that throwing bricks through a man's windows would make him think "there must be something wrong with me"). This is not the solution; it merely exchanges one type of discrimination and violence for another. I truly believe that the solution lies in unifying towards a central goal of equality, not revenge, and in changing the society as best we can, by teaching our children (and men and women) not to support sexism, racism, separatism, etc.

There was one incident, however, which made me think about the "no men" rule. While Karla Miller was speaking, two young obnoxious men walked defiantly into the area, and one stepped right up into the circle. He was asked by a seated woman to leave, or at least to move back. When he did not, a bunch of women gathered around him, stared at him, and asked him to move back. It was a beautiful display of female empowerment. They did not touch him, but he did move back until they were satisfied. That is why men are not allowed — he was obviously not interested in women's issues, but in causing trouble. Yet he was easy to spot. Neither my partner, nor the other men standing quietly on the outskirts were approached in that manner, probably because they did not present a threat. A friend of mine came up with a reasonable alternative for next year — a man must be invited by a woman. And if such a man clearly causes a disruption, he should be asked to leave. Women can obviously handle such a man. This was quite encouraging to see such a peaceful confrontation.

The point of this letter is that if a man has the guts to attend such a female-dominated rally, he is either very devoted, in which case he should not be alienated; or he should not get attention, in which case he would be ejected. So next year, please think about what you are doing before you cast out the very men, and even women, who are part of the solution to discrimination and violence against women.

Northern Ireland not British-ruled, but integral part of U. K.

To the Editor:

Your use of the term "British-ruled" in relation to Northern Ireland ("Irish citizens hope for unity," April 24) is both a misnomer and misleading. "British-ruled" implies colonial status for the province, as much as if I were to refer to the state of Iowa as "American-ruled."

Northern Ireland is as much an integral part of the United Kingdom as Texas, Alaska or Hawaii are of the United States. To you it may be no more than a semantic point, but there is a lot more at stake for me.

We should not condone use of mood-altering chemicals

To the Editor:

I disagree with Larry Burch's opinion about legalizing marijuana in the DI ("Legalize it," April 29). Much of Burch's argument for legalization seems to be based on a view of marijuana as a benevolent, recreational drug which is less harmful than alcohol or nicotine. I have no doubt that those who advocate the legalization of marijuana are not at all interested in the medicinal or fibrous qualities of the herb, as Burch claims, but rather in the intoxicating effect of high potency THC. Looked at in this light, marijuana proves to be equally as problematic as alcohol and nicotine.

Marijuana is now being proven to be capable of producing "dependency" as described in the "Diagnostic and Statistical Manual, Third Edition Revised" of the American Psychiatric Association (DSM-III-R). It is also commonly being treated in chemical dependency centers as a primary addiction. So when we consider legalization of marijuana, we are talking about Cannabis indica, the highly potent intoxicant which can and does cause as many health and social problems as ethanol and not low ditch weed or glaucouma medicine.

It seems to me that rather than debate legalization of marijuana or prohibition of alcohol or tobacco for that matter, we should use our creative energy to promote a reduction in demand for mood-altering chemicals including alcohol and nicotine. What is it about us, our culture, system, government that makes the ingestion of mood-altering chemicals (toxic substances) so attractive that we are now experiencing a drug/alcohol plague in this country? Can we live without intoxicating ourselves?

Banks cut to stimulate

By Rob Wells
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major banks Wednesday cut their prime lending rates by half a point, to a three-year low of 8.5 percent, a day after the Federal Reserve trimmed two key interest rates to help pull the nation out of recession.

Economists said the lower rates should help revive the sagging economy but warned that cheaper credit alone wasn't enough to turn the economy around.

"It was the third cut this year in the prime, which is used to calculate a variety of consumer and business loans and reflects a bank's cost of borrowing money.

The prime stood at 10 percent in January. It was lowered by half a point to 9.5 percent on Jan. 2, then another half point to 9 percent on Feb. 1.

President Bush quickly praised the banks' action: "That's going to be very good for the economy." He predicted the recession would be over "fairly soon."

Michael Boskin, chairman of the president's Council of Economic

Recession

By John D. McClain
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's estimate of economic activity rose a percent in March, but the second monthly gain left private economists convinced the end of the recession is still far off.

"Many analysts believe the economy will not recover until the second half of 1991," said the 11-month average post-World War II downturns. The recession began in July.

"I still don't see anything in the economy that would sustain a recovery," said Robert Brusca, an economist with Securities in New York. He said the slump would continue until late in the quarter.

Richard Rahn, chief economist of the Chamber of Commerce, predicted the recession would continue throughout the year, but would be even longer than the 1981-82 downturn — the most severe

Bush pushes for free-trade agreement

By Christopher Connell
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush, fighting for the ability to get trade pacts through Congress intact, told lawmakers Wednesday he wouldn't sacrifice the environment or U.S. workers' rights in a free-trade agreement with Mexico.

Bush said he would name environmentalists to trade advisory panels and provide retraining and other protection for workers who lose jobs as trade barriers with Mexico are lowered.

U.S. and Mexican officials, he said, will undertake joint projects to address worker safety, child labor, environmental protection and other thorny issues.

Mexico already has tough environmental and labor laws on the books, Bush said, and a free-trade agreement will boost prosperity and give the country the resources to enforce those rules more strictly.

Bush marshaled his arguments in a 85-page white paper responding to letters from Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, R-Ill., and House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., raising concerns about the agreement.

Banks cut prime rates to stimulate economy

By Rob Wells
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Major banks Wednesday cut their prime lending rates by half a point, to a three-year low of 8.5 percent, a day after the Federal Reserve trimmed two key interest rates to help pull the nation out of recession.

Economists said the lower rates should help revive the sagging economy but warned that cheaper credit alone wasn't enough to turn the economy around.

"It was the third cut this year in the prime, which is used to calculate a variety of consumer and business loans and reflects a bank's cost of borrowing money."

The prime stood at 10 percent in January. It was lowered by half a point to 9.5 percent on Jan. 2, then another half point to 9 percent on Feb. 1.

President Bush quickly praised the banks' action: "That's going to be very good for the economy." He predicted the recession would be over "fairly soon."

Michael Boskin, chairman of the president's Council of Economic

Advisers, also welcomed the reduction, agreeing that the economy was "about to turn around."

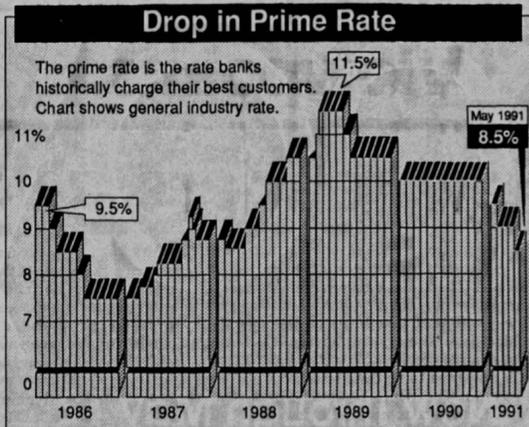

The cut followed an announcement by the Fed on Tuesday that it was lowering the discount rate one-half point to 5.5 percent — the lowest rate in 15 years. The discount rate is the interest the central bank charges on loans to member banks.

Also Tuesday, the Fed lowered the federal funds rate, to 5.75 percent from 6 percent, by injecting money into the banking system. The Fed fund rate is the interest banks charge each other for overnight loans.

By executing its two most powerful weapons in monetary policy, the Fed generated tremendous pressure on banks to cut their lending rates, economists said.

Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., the nation's fourth-largest bank, was the first to drop the prime Wednesday. It was quickly followed by other banking giants, including Citibank, Chemical Bank, Chase Manhattan, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. and First National Bank of Chicago.

Economists say the lower rates will help jump-start the economy by making borrowing costs cheaper. The groups likely to benefit most from the reduction are individuals who borrow against the equity in their homes and, to a lesser extent, those with car loans linked to the prime.

The prime rate is the rate banks historically charge their best customers. Chart shows general industry rate.

But economists also cautioned that a full economic revival demands more than cuts in interest rates. "You can reduce interest rates, but if consumers are not confident, and if they're not increasing their borrowing, then it doesn't matter," said Hugh Johnson, senior vice president of First Albany Corp.

Also, many consumers may not be in the position to increase their borrowing because they already are saddled with hefty mortgages and large credit card bills — all legacies of the free-spending '80s, economists say.

The financial markets were mixed following the prime cuts.

Recession lingers despite hopeful signs

By John D. McClain
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government's gauge of future economic activity rose a moderate 0.5 percent in March, but the second straight monthly gain left private economists far from convinced the end of the recession was at hand.

"Many analysts believe the economy won't recover until the second half of 1991, which would surpass the 11-month average length of post-World War II downturns. The recession began in July."

"I still don't see anything in the general economy that would sustain a recovery," said Robert Brusca, an economist with Nikko Securities in New York. He suggested the slump would continue until late in the third quarter.

Richard Rahn, chief economist for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, predicted the recession would continue throughout the year. If so, it would be even longer than the 16-month 1981-82 downturn — the most severe since the Great Depression. Still, the Bush administration was sticking with its forecast that the recession would be shorter and milder than the average downturn since World War II and would end in the next few months.

"The economy is about to turn around," Michael Boskin, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, told an organization of business editors and writers.

And President Bush said he was pleased that the Federal Reserve and major banks were lowering their interest rates.

"I think that's going to be very good for the economy of the United States of America," Bush told the business editors in a separate appearance.

The gain in the Commerce Department's Index of Leading Economic Indicators followed a revised 1.2 percent advance in February, even stronger than the 1.1 percent estimate first reported in April.

But the improvement was confined primarily to the financial side, and economists said the index needed more broad-based strength before it pointed to an end to the 10-month-old recession.

In fact, nearly two-thirds of the positive contributions to the index came from a survey measuring consumer confidence immediately after the gulf war. Surveys released Tuesday showed consumer confidence fell back the next month.

Other sources of strength were growth in the money supply, a boost in stock prices and an increase in building permits.

But even the 11 forward-looking indicators were negative. Most illustrated the weakness persisting in the manufacturing sector, a weakness cited Tuesday by the Federal Reserve when it lowered interest rates to stimulate economic growth.

The negative indicators were a drop in factory orders for consumer goods, an increase in weekly unemployment claims, a shorter work week, declining orders for new plants and equipment, fewer unfilled factory orders, a decline in prices of raw materials suggesting slack demand and faster delivery times indicating the weakness in orders.

Wimbledon in need of a 'girlcott'

As anyone who's ever seen "Bridge on the River Kwai" knows, the English are a goofy lot. We Americans watch angrily as Alec Guinness stubbornly refuses to help his fellow officers blow up the bridge and his men have built for the Japanese and think exactly what Yankee William Holden finally blurted out:

"Kill him!" Well, Wimbledon officials Tuesday reaffirmed what we already knew about the English when the All England Club refused to pay women participating in their little tennis tournament the same amount as they will pay the men. They pay men more, by the way. Half a million dollars more.

The total payout for the male winners will be $3.7 million, while the women will receive an aggregate payout of $3.1. The winner of the men's singles bracket will win $408,000; the winner of the women's side takes home $367,000.

Recently the Women's Tennis Association demanded equal pay for women winners in all Grand Slam events as a condition for acceptance of a Women's Grand Slam Cup, which the men already have. The U.S. and Australian Opens offer the same prize money for men and women, leaving the French Open and Wimbledon to join them in the 20th Century.

Wimbledon chairman John Curry explained: "We think we are very fair and reasonable. Every year we sit down and think about it. It's not a decision taken lightly."

The sentiments of Bill Holden spring immediately to mind. But after a good 30 seconds of thought, the more appropriate "Boycott!" seem obvious.

For the All England Club to slap women in the face any harder, a truncheon would be required. Unfortunately, WTA executive director Gerry Smith has already said a boycott is out of the question.

"We are not threatening boycott or any action at all," he said. "We hope Wimbledon will recognize that the women tennis pros provide at least equal tennis entertainment as the men and should receive equal pay."

Hey, Gerry, try "Take your strawberries and cream and shove 'em up your ass."

Wimbledon will recognize women tennis players as equal partners when they make Wimbledon realize that just as many people, if not more, watch women play tennis as they do men. Let's face it, when John McEnroe starts playing his brother for money, there's something amiss the world of men's tennis.

Women players should boycott Wimbledon and then see how many people show up. Not only would the All England Club lose a lot of money, it would be publicly embarrassed world-wide.

Tennis aficionados may point to the fact that in Grand Slam events men play best-of-five matches while women play best-of-three. The reasoning behind such ground rules, I suppose, is that men are stronger than women and can endure more physical exertion.

Let's say this is true and women would drop like flies if subjected to such torture. It follows that men are paid more because they are, on the whole, physically stronger than women. Other than the blatantly obvious primitivism of such a policy, it ignores that fact that the men's game and the women's game are two different entities and implies that women's tennis is a weak imitation of the men's game.

Others may argue that, indeed, male pros do bring in more money than women pros; that the men's game is more exciting and more people like to watch. Okay, let's see. Boycott Wimbledon. See how many people would show up. One thing is certain: it wouldn't be as many people as would show up with the women playing.

They say Wimbledon is the most prestigious event a tennis player can win. But how prestigious would it be if only half the players actually deigned to show up?

Hawkeye bats big but Cyclones' even bigger

By Erica Welland
 The Daily Iowan

AMES — The Iowa baseball team isn't known as a power-hitting team. But Iowa State seems to bring out the Hawkeyes' big sticks.

After hitting six home runs Tuesday against the Cyclones at Iowa Field, the Hawkeyes knocked four more out of Cap Timm Field in Ames Wednesday.

The big bats helped the Hawkeyes sweep a doubleheader Tuesday, but this time, the Cyclones countered with some heavy hitting of their own, edging Iowa 16-14 in a nine-inning game that saw the Hawkeyes blow leads of 3-1, 9-7 and 13-7.

"Yesterday was a bad feeling; today was a great feeling," Iowa State coach Bobby Randall said. "This was a hard-fought game. It was fun."

"That was ugly," Iowa coach Duane Banks said. "I was telling Bobby (Randall) that I think we have to work on our kicking game. I knew a lot of runs would score; with the wind blowing out, everything was sailing out."

The Hawkeyes jumped out to a 3-1 lead in the second inning when Kevin Minchik reached on a fielding error by Iowa State first baseman Craig Gronowski and advanced when Tim Killeen walked.

John Pratt then knocked them in with a home run. The Hawkeyes added another run in the top of the third when Bobby Morris hit a solo shot over the right-center field fence.

But the Cyclones came out strong in the bottom of the third, rocking pitcher Hank Osborn for six runs on seven hits for a 7-4 lead.

Iowa wasn't ready to lie down yet, though, putting up five runs in the fourth to take a 9-7 advantage.

Killeen was walked to start the inning, followed by a single by Pratt. Matt Johnson then bunted to advance both runners, who scored on a double by Jay Polson.

Danan Hughes singled to advance Polson, and both went home when Morris tripled to right-center. The Hawkeye freshman then scored on a wild pitch by Cyclone starter Mike Bentley.

The Hawkeyes pulled out to a 13-7 lead with four runs on six hits in the fifth. Killeen led off the inning with a solo homer and two outs later, Polson launched a shot over the left-center field fence. Cory Larsen and Hughes followed with consecutive doubles and Morris singled to bring Hughes home.

But beginning in the bottom of the sixth, it was the Cyclones' turn to pile up the runs. Iowa State scored four in that frame off reliever Matt Birmingham to pull within two of Iowa, 13-11.

In the seventh, sophomore Mark Stuhr replaced Birmingham on the hill, but gave up two singles and walked two without getting an out in his short stint.

Dave Weilbrenner then took the reins and Iowa pinch-runner Pam Palmore is forced out at second by Northwestern's Dena Petersen on an attempted sacrifice bunt in the sixth inning of Iowa's 3-0 win over Northwestern. The win set the record for the Iowa Softball wins in a season at 44.

Bench gives softball needed punch

By Brian Gaul
 The Daily Iowan

With most of usual starters on the Iowa softball team in a hitting slump, Coach Gayle Blevins looked to her bench for an offensive spark on Wednesday.

The bench responded. Kathleen Kueny, a reserve second baseman, went 4-for-8 in three games as a designated player. She scored once and drove in two runs, including the game-winner in Wednesday's third game.

"I knew my time would come," said Kueny, who had batted only 34 times before Wednesday. "Any way I can help the team to win, I will."

Amy Hartsock, a backup outfielder, added a pinch-hit, run-scoring single that broke a scoreless tie in the second game.

"We were looking for people who would take advantage of their opportunities," Blevins said. "When you look at Kathleen Kueny, she's someone who hasn't had as many opportunities. She could have used that as an excuse for not hitting, but she didn't do that. She took advantage of her opportunity."

Iowa took advantage of the bench production and strong pitching to sweep three games from Northwestern at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.

The Hawkeyes won the completion of a suspended game, 3-0, for its school-record 44th victory. The previous high for wins was 43 last year.

Iowa then swept the scheduled doubleheader, 2-0 and 2-1.

The sixth-ranked Hawkeyes improved to 46-9 overall and 15-5 in the Big Ten. Northwestern fell to 14-30 and 3-13.

The Wildcats played without outfielders Missi Gyde and Shannon Walsh, who were injured in a head-on collision in the outfield on Tuesday.

Walsh, who has a broken nose and lacerations on her face, flew back to Evanston, Ill., after her release from University Hospitals on Wednesday.

Gyde watched the games from the bench. "She couldn't play today," Wildcat coach Sharon Drysdale said. "She has a bad arm and a bad headache."

That left Drysdale with only 10 available players.

"I was real happy with how we played, especially after yesterday," Drysdale said. "We had just started to come around and play well yesterday, and to lose two players — that's tough."

Celts break the Market Square jinx

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Boston picked the right time to snap a five-game losing streak at Market Square Arena, beating the Indiana Pacers 112-105 on Wednesday night to take a 2-1 lead in their first-round playoff series.

Kevin McHale scored 16 of his 22 points in the second quarter when Boston took the lead for good. The Celtics, who have been eliminated in the opening round of the playoffs the past two years, can wrap up the best-of-5 series with a victory on Friday night.

A fifth game, if necessary, would be Sunday at the Boston Garden.

The Celtics, who hadn't won in Indianapolis since March 16, 1989, shut down Chuck Person, who scored 39 points and set an NBA playoff record with seven 3-pointers in Indiana's 130-118 victory at Boston on Sunday. Person, who had 62 points in the first two games, didn't make a field goal after hitting his first two shots and finished with only 6 points on 2-for-8 shooting.

Boston also kept the ball away from Reggie Miller in the first half, limiting him to one point. He added 19 in the second half to lead the Pacers with 20, but six came on a pair of 3-pointers after the outcome had been decided.

McHale, who has 67 points in the first three games, made back-to-back jumpers to put Boston ahead to stay 35-31. The baskets ignited a 12-4 spurt that gave the Celtics a 43-35 lead.

The Pacers, who were out-rebounded in the quarter 13-6, cut their deficit to 45-40 on Detlef Schrempf's basket with 4:53 left in the first half. But they didn't get another field goal before halftime as the Celtics used a 15-5 run for a 60-45 lead.

The Pacers shot only 16-for-43 in the first half, compared to Boston's 26-for-44.

The final score was as close as Indiana came in the second half. Indiana, which lost for the 10th time in 12 playoff games, cut its deficit to 80-73 on Randy Wittman's jumper with 11:01 to play, but then made only one field goal until Vern Fleming scored on a layup with 4:28 remaining.

Ryan unleashes No. 7 No-hits Blue Jays in best performance ever

The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Nolan Ryan pitched his seventh no-hitter Wednesday night in the most dominating performance of his amazing quarter-century career.

Ryan, 44, struck out 16 and shut down the best-hitting team in the major leagues as the Texas Rangers beat the Toronto Blue Jays 3-0.

Ryan, who became the oldest to pitch a no-hitter last season with his record sixth against Oakland, allowed only two runners, and neither made it past first base. He walked Kelly Gruber on a 3-2 pitch in the first inning and walked Joe Carter on another full-count pitch in the seventh.

The Blue Jays, leading the majors with a .276 average, did not hit a single ball hard and flailed helplessly at his assortment of fastballs, sharp curves and changeups. The closest they came to hit was in the sixth on Manuel Lee's bloop to center field, which Gary Pettis caught on the run at his shoetops.

The crowd of 33,439 chanted "No-ian! No-ian!" as he took the mound in the ninth, and Ryan (2-2) did not disappoint his hometown fans. He retired Lee and Devon White on routine grounders and finished his gem by striking out a swinging Roberto Alomar.

Brewers 10, White Sox 9

MILWAUKEE — Willie Randolph singled home the winning run with two outs in the 19th inning Wednesday and the Milwaukee Brewers outlasted the Chicago White Sox 10-9 in the longest American League game since the same two teams played 25 innings in 1984.

The game took 6 hours, 5 minutes and was the longest ever involving the Brewers at County Stadium. Twice the Brewers had played 17 innings at home.

Randolph, whose two-out, RBI single capped a three-run rally in the 15th that prolonged the day, won it against Wayne Edwards (0-1), the seventh Chicago pitcher.

Jim Gantner singled with one out and stole second, B.J. Surhoff was intentionally walked and Bill Spiers flied out, with Gantner moving to third. After Paul Molitor was intentionally walked to load the bases, Randolph singled.

Don August (2-2), the sixth Milwaukee pitcher, went five innings for the victory. He gave up three runs in the 15th, including an RBI single lined off his neck by Ozzie Guillen.

Frank Thomas hit his fourth homer, a two-run shot in the third.

Athletics 7, Yankees 4
 OAKLAND, Calif. — Rickey Henderson surpassed Lou Brock as baseball's career stolen base leader with his 939th steal Wednesday as the Oakland Athletics beat the New York Yankees 7-4.

Dave Henderson hit his league-leading seventh home run, Earnest Riles went 4-for-5 with four RBIs, and Mike Moore improved his record to 4-0 as the A's beat New York for the 16th consecutive time since Sept. 9, 1989.

Rickey Henderson, after being thrown out at second base in the first inning, stole third base in the fourth to break Brock's record in 1,615 games. It took Brock 2,616 games between 1961-79 to set the mark.

Drysdale was happy because her team stayed with Iowa in all three games. The Hawkeyes needed stong outings from pitchers Terri McFarland and Karen Jackson to come up with victories.

Jackson pitched 8 1/2 shutout innings and picked up two wins. McFarland allowed one run in 8 1/2 innings.

Blevins shuffled the two hurlers regularly during the afternoon.

Jackson completed a four-hitter in the suspended game, then started the second contest. McFarland replaced her after three innings and finished a combined four-hit shutout.

McFarland then started the final game, but she was relieved by Jackson with two out in the fifth inning and the Wildcats rallying. Center fielder Kim Davis threw out Kate Shilstone at home plate to end the threat.

McFarland warmed up again in the seventh inning after Kueny had given the Hawkeyes the lead in the sixth, but she wasn't needed. Jackson retired the side on eight pitches.

"I was ready to bring (McFarland) in again in relief," Blevins said. "It wasn't that Terri was pitching that badly when I took her out. I just wanted to give them a different look."

The Hawkeyes need the efforts of the pitchers because they continued to struggle on offense. Iowa scored only eight runs in the four-game series.

"It puts more burden on (a pitcher) when the offense struggles," Blevins said. "You can't afford to give up a hit or an extra-base hit because the offense isn't carrying the load."

Baseball

promptly gave up a triple, double and sacrifice grounder before ending the inning.

By that time, the damage was done and Iowa managed to score only one more run, losing the game 16-14.

In the bottom of the seventh, Johnson and Polson hit consecutive singles, and advanced to second Henderson broke for third on a 1-0 pitch from Tim Leary to Baines, and dove into third head-first, easily beating Matt Nokes' throw, which bounced before reaching third baseman Randy Velarde.

Henderson pulled up the base and held it up above his head while pumping his fist in triumph to the cheers of the crowd. The game was held up for five minutes by a ceremony.

Leary (2-1) gave up six hits and five runs in 3 1/2 innings. He walked seven and struck out five.

Twins 1, Red Sox 0

MINNEAPOLIS — Scott Erickson pitched a two-hitter and struck out career-high seven in his second consecutive shutout, and Dan Gladden hit a solo homer as the Minnesota Twins beat the Boston Red Sox 1-0 Wednesday night.

Erickson (3-2), who pitched a five-hitter for his first major-league shutout Friday against Seattle, held the Red Sox hitless through 5 1/2 innings before Jody Reed's bloop single to left field. Erickson walked one while extending his scoreless streak to 22 innings.

Cubs 11, Astros 8

CHICAGO — Hector Villanueva hit two home runs and Andre Dawson added a three-run homer Wednesday, powering the Chicago Cubs to an 11-8 victory over the Houston Astros.

Dawson and Villanueva hit consecutive homers in a five-run first inning for the Cubs, who won their seventh straight home game. Villanueva homered again in the third after Dawson doubled off loser Jim Deshaies (0-3).

The homers gave Villanueva five straight hits, including a homer, double and single in his last three at-bats Tuesday night. He grounded out in the fourth inning to break the string.

Winner Greg Maddux (3-1) went eight innings, giving up nine hits and seven runs, four of them earned.

Rookie Luis Gonzalez hit a pair of two-run homers for the Astros — his first two homers in the majors.

Braves 5, Cardinals 4

ST. LOUIS — Dave Justice broke a 10th-inning tie with a run-scoring groundout as the Atlanta Braves snapped a three-game losing streak.

Mike Perez (0-2) walked Otis Nixon with one out in the 10th inning and Jeff Treadway's single sent Nixon to third. Scott Terry relieved with a 2-0 count on Ron Gant and completed the walk. Second baseman Geronimo Pena then made a diving stop on Justice's grounder, but his only play was at first base.

Kent Mercker (1-1), the third Atlanta pitcher, gained the victory by holding the Cardinals to one hit in the final 1 1/2 innings.

Atlanta took a 4-0 lead in the third inning on Lonnie Smith's RBI single and Sid Bream's three-run homer off Bryn Smith.

Pirates 6, Reds 4

CINCINNATI — Barry Bonds singled home the tying run in the eighth inning and executed a double steal with Bobby Bonilla for the game winner as the Pittsburgh Pirates rallied for a 6-4 victory Wednesday night over the Cincinnati Reds.

Randy Myers (0-2) failed to hold a one-run lead in the eighth, blowing a save for the second time in five chances. A single by Andy Van Slyke, a walk to Bonilla, and Bonds' single tied it 4-4.

Myers then caught Bonds breaking for second, but Bonds beat the throw from first baseman Hal Morris as Bonilla took off for home and easily scored the winning run.

Stan Belinda (2-1) gave up the Reds' go-ahead run in the seventh on Barry Larkin's triple, the shortstop's fourth hit of the game. Bob Kipper and Bob Landrum finished for the Pirates, with Landrum recording his third save.

Padres 8, Mets 7

NEW YORK — Bruce Hurst improved to 3-0 and singled in a run as the San Diego Padres beat Frank Viola and the New York Mets 8-7 Wednesday night to snap a four-game losing streak.

Fred McGriff, who hit his third home run to lead off the fifth inning, also had a pair of singles and finished with three RBIs.

Hurst scattered 10 hits in 7 1/2 innings, in raising his career record to 4-1 against the Mets.

Viola (3-1), dropping 1-4 lifetime against the Padres, saw his ERA soar from 0.86 to 1.93. The left-hander gave up five runs and eight hits in six-plus innings in failing to hold a 3-0 lead.

Phillies 4, Giants 1

PHILADELPHIA — Tommy Greene, an emergency starter when Jose DeJesus showed up with a sore back, pitched six shutout innings and drove in a run as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Francisco Giants 4-1 Wednesday night for their fifth straight victory.

Greene (1-0) gave up two hits, struck out five and walked two as the Phillies won five in a row for the first time since Aug. 19-22, 1987. It was the first start of the season for Greene who had pitched 20 1/2 innings in relief. Mike LaCrosse (1-2) took the loss.

Joe Boever took over for Greene in the seventh inning after the Phillies pinch hit for the right-hander. The Giants scored a run in the eighth off Boever on Will Clark's RBI single and Roger McDowell got the last three outs for his first save.

Boston starter Greg Harris, who had not pitched more than six innings in any of his four previous starts, allowed only three hits in seven while striking out six and walking two.

Jeff Gray (1-2) came on in the eighth and gave up Gladden's second homer to lead off the inning.

and third on a sacrifice grounder by pinch-hitter Mike Bradley.

Hughes then threaten with a fly to deep right-center. But Iowa State right fielder Dan Culhane made a sprawling catch, crushing the Hawkeyes' thoughts of rallying.

"That was the kind of game that whoever has the last at-bat has the advantage," Randall said. "But our right fielder made a great play on a ball that could have been a triple and started everything going again."

Despite the loss, Morris shined for the Hawkeyes, going 3-for-6 with a homer, triple and single accounting for four RBIs.

"I didn't hit totally at the right times," Morris said, referring to not being able to get anything going in the end of the game.

"Some of them were falling in for me; it was nice for a change."

"We made some mental mistakes. It's really disappointing, especially to lose to Iowa State. It's not something we'll forget for a while."

Rothstein resigns as Miami Heat coach

MIAMI — Citing the emotional toll of coaching an expansion team, Ron Rothstein resigned Wednesday as coach of the Miami Heat.

Reports of Rothstein's imminent departure began before the end of the season. Rothstein's announcement came at a news conference after he met with Heat managing partner Lewis Schaffel and limited partner Billy Cunningham.

that anymore.

Rothstein, whose contract expires in July, said he turned down an extension earlier this year.

NCAA basketball rules the same

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Following what one member said was "a lot of aggressive debate," the men's and women's NCAA basketball committees voted Wednesday to keep the 3-point arc at 19 feet, 9 inches.

Both committees debated moving the 3-point arc out from 19-9 to 20-6, which is the international 3-point range.

In addition, the men's committee ended two days of meetings by agreeing to continue with the 10th-foul, two-shot rule.

But in a change that is sure to be hailed by defensive-minded coaches, the committees decreed the shot clock — 45 seconds for men, 30 for women — no longer will be reset when an attempted shot leaves a player's hand. Instead, it will be reset only when the ball touches the rim.

Bubba Baker retires from football

CLEVELAND — Defensive end Al "Bubba" Baker of the Cleveland Browns announced his retirement Wednesday, saying he didn't think he had what it would take to make the team this year.

Baker, 35, was with the Detroit Lions when he was named the 1978 NFL Defensive Rookie of the Year. He moved to St. Louis for three years in 1986, then played a year with the Browns. In 1988 he went to Minnesota, then returned to Cleveland for the 1990 season, in which the Browns went 3-13.

He recorded 133 career quarterback sacks, including 65 1/2 since sacks were made an official statistic in 1982.

Baker was at the Browns mini-camp last weekend and said he thought retirement was inevitable.

"I could see me getting halfway through training camp and just having a physical breakdown," he said.

Sportsbriefs

The move pre-empted a decision by the front office on his fate; reports that he would be fired were first published more than two weeks ago.

"As we talked, it became very apparent to me how draining this thing has been to me and my family," Rothstein said, his voice breaking. "I'm just not going to put my family through OAKLAND, Calif. — Rickey Henderson finally swiped Lou Brock's record, diving head first into his 939th stolen base Wednesday for career steal No. 939.

Henderson ran his way into the record book in the fourth inning against the New York Yankees getting off a five-minute celebration for baseball's new steal king. "Lou Brock was a great base stealer, but today I'm the greatest of all time," Henderson said to the crowd of approximately 35,000 in the Oakland Coliseum.

Henderson ran into the record books with amazing speed. He set the record in 1,154 attempts in 12 seasons, while Brock needed 1,242 attempts over 19 years. It took T. Cobb 24 years to set the old American League record of 891 stolen bases that Henderson surpassed last May 29.

Brock then came on the field and fans gave Henderson a standing ovation. Henderson's Oakland teammates stood and applauded on the top step of the dugout. The Yankees, the team that traded Henderson back to the Athletics in 1989, just stood around.

"It's always been said that competition among men is one of the oldest practices known to man," Brock said. "Today, you might be the greatest competitor that ever ran the bases and I congratulate you. You are a legend in your own time."

Henderson, with a big grin on his face, then addressed the fans.

"Took a long time, huh?" Henderson said.

He thanked everyone, from the fans, to his mother, family and loved ones to former managers including Tom Trebelhorn and the late Billy Martin.

"Lou Brock was a symbol of great base stealing," he said, "but today I am the greatest of all time."

Henderson, whose pursuit was delayed this season by a stint on the disabled list, walked in the first inning, but was thrown out trying to steal second by Nokes.

In the fourth, he reached on a grounder that went through shortstop Alvaro Espinoza's leg for an error, took second on an infield single by Dave Henderson and remained there for Jose Canseco's flyout and took off for third on a 1-0 pitch with Harold Baines batting.

He was greeted with a hug by third base coach Rene Lachemann, then received embraces from his mother Bobbie, Brock, Lou Brock Jr. and Oakland manager Tony La Russa. Dave Stewart, Henderson's friend since childhood, then gave him a bear hug.

It was the 216th steal of third base for Henderson, his 42nd against the Yankees and his third off Nokes.

Henderson, who has credited Davey Lopes and Trebelhorn for making him the base stealer he is, had warm words for Martin, who died in December 1989.

"I love ya, Billy," Henderson said to the crowd. "I wish you were here."

T-shirts, depicting Henderson in various poses over the number 939, were put on sale at concession stands throughout the Oakland Coliseum immediately after he stole the record-tying base on Sunday against California. Henderson ordered six dozen for himself to give to teammates.

Henderson also passed out "I Was There" certificates bearing the OAKLAND, Calif. — Rickey Henderson finally swiped Lou Brock's record, diving head first into history Wednesday for career steal No. 939.

Henderson ran his way into the record book in the fourth inning against the New York Yankees, setting off a five-minute celebration for baseball's new steal king.

"Lou Brock was a great base stealer, but today I'm the greatest of all time," Henderson said to the crowd of approximately 35,000 in the Oakland Coliseum.

stamp "Compliments of Rickey Henderson" to members of the media while answering questions before Tuesday's game. Henderson instructed reporters to fill in the date themselves.

Henderson has led the majors in steals five times and topped the AL in steals 10 times.

"You have to make a perfect throw to get him," Cleveland catcher Sandy Alomar said. "Even when you make a perfect throw, it's a bang-bang play. . . . If you throw him out one out of 10 times you're doing good."

Jim Sundberg would certainly agree. Henderson stole his first base in the majors off the Texas Rangers' catcher on June 24, 1979. Before Sundberg retired two years ago, Henderson victimized him 54 more times, including 10 steals during a three-game series in 1983.

"One night I felt like coming out and digging a sand pit around first base," Sundberg said. "I believe I was one of the best-throwing catchers when I played. I probably wasn't intimidated by anybody in my career except Rickey Henderson."

Henderson set the single-season standard for steals with 130 in 1982, breaking Brock's mark of 118 in 1974.

"That was an extremely exciting time for me," Henderson said. "People said Brock's record would never be broken."

When Henderson broke Cobb's AL career record, he gave the base to Trebelhorn, who managed Henderson during his first two seasons in the minor leagues, at Boise in 1976 and Modesto in 1977.

"He taught me a lot about pitchers and jumps," Henderson said.

"There is nothing really great that I did except try and make sure he understood measured leads, how far he could get off, and what he had to do in both directions," Trebelhorn said.

Pistons in phase one

Three-peat realistic only after beating Hawks

By Ed Shearer
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Detroit Pistons are one victory away from completing phase one of their "three-peat."

The Pistons have a 2-1 lead in their best-of-5 first-round series and can finish it Thursday night against the Atlanta Hawks, a team Detroit has dominated in recent years, winning 14 of their last 18 meetings.

The Pistons took the series lead Tuesday night with a 103-91 victory, overcoming a 17-point first-half deficit that the Hawks built with emotional play before a hometown crowd.

Detroit is trying to become the third team in NBA history to win three straight titles. But Pistons coach Chuck Daly is looking no further than Thursday night.

"It will be the same type of game all over again," Daly said. "This series is far from over. Basically we have unfinished business."

"We're going to try to wrap this up Thursday," Detroit's Bill Laimbeer said. "It should be the same kind of game — lots of emotion, lots of physical play."

NBA playoffs

The Hawks, who lost all five regular-season games to the Pistons, scored an upset in the series-opener Friday night at Auburn Hills, Mich. But Detroit squared the series two nights later before the action moved to The Omni, where Atlanta reeled off a franchise-record 22 straight victories during one stretch this season.

"I'm delighted to be 2-1 in the series, considering the way our offense has struggled," Detroit's Dennis Rodman said. "We'd better wake up, but no matter how we're struggling on offense, the defense does the job just about every time."

Rodman is the key defender for the Pistons. He shadowed Atlanta star Dominique Wilkins throughout the last two games, holding him to 20 points in Game 2 and 18 in the third game.

Wilkins isn't ready for the season to end yet. He says the Hawks aren't finished.

"They said that at the beginning," he said. "Everybody said we didn't have a chance."

Associated Press
Dennis Rodman helps out fellow-Piston Bill Laimbeer as Atlanta's Duane Ferrell attempts to score in Detroit's 103-91 win over the Hawks at the Omni Tuesday.

They said we'd be swept. It's not over until it's over. It's either put up or go home."

Detroit's path to a third straight championship won't be easy. The Pistons finished third in the Eastern Conference, and would have to win three best-of-7 series after beating the Hawks to join the Minneapolis Lakers (1952-54) and Boston Celtics (1959-66) as the only teams to win three NBA titles in a row.

The Hawks are hoping to put a little added pressure on them by winning Game 4.

"If we don't think we can win Thursday, we have no chance," Hawks coach Bob Weiss said. "If we can win one and take it to a one-game series, it's a win a lot of pressure on Detroit."

Play shows friendship in letters

By Staci Sturrock
The Daily Iowan

The 1991 Iowa Playwrights Festival continues tonight with Kate Aspengren's "Dear Mrs. Martin," a one-act play tracing the relationship of a woman and her housekeeper. Rebecca Gilman directs.

Mrs. Martin (Judalyn Martin) and her housekeeper Gloria (Rachael Lindhart) communicate through notes they leave each other in passing. Through the letters they develop a friendship.

Aspengren based the play on the relationship between her own mother and her cleaning woman, as well as the death of her father two years ago. After his death, she says, "it was interesting to see where support came from. Sometimes the better friendships come from unexpected places."

She admits that "it's hard not to make it sound like a Hallmark card," which is part of the reason she is working with Gilman. "You could look at this as sentimental, but that's not how Rebecca saw it, and that's not how it should be done," she says.

Gilman says that what keeps the play from becoming maudlin is Aspengren's "biting, dry sense of humor. Just when she's on the verge of sentimentality that might not seem real, she pulls us back. The characters never take themselves too seriously, so we never take them too seriously, and they can laugh at themselves."

Although "Dear Mrs. Martin" possesses a traditional linear narrative, Gilman says that it is not traditional in a naturalistic way because the story is told through letters: "Their friendship develops even though they (rarely) meet onstage."

Iowa Playwrights Festival

Gilman says that one of the delights of seeing "Dear Mrs. Martin" is that it "creates a world so rich in detail, so fun to enter into. It leaves you with a sense of hope, but not an unrealistic one."

"Dear Mrs. Martin" will be performed 6:30 and 9 p.m. in Theatre B of the UI Theatre Building. Admission is $6 for non-students and $5 for students.

Dey changes mind; Billy Joel criticized

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Susan Dey's character on "L.A. Law" left the firm in last week's episode, but it looks like she's not going to leave the 5-year-old show.

Dey, who plays attorney Grace Van Owen, has signed on for the 1991-92 season, Twentieth Television said Tuesday. Dey earlier had said she would leave the show after this year along with co-stars Harry Hamlin and Jimmy Smits.

"It is not easy to leave five years of history with the best actors, crew and creative team on television, and I am happy for the opportunity to return," Dey said. She has won three Emmy nominations for the role.

Hamlin and Smits may return in guest appearances next season, the company said.

In last week's episode of "L.A. Law," the characters portrayed by Hamlin, Smits and Dey left their law firm to start their own practice.

FAIRFIELD, Conn. — Grammy-winner Billy Joel wrote, "Catholic girls start much too late" — lyrics some say should bar him from getting an honorary degree and giving a commencement speech at a Jesuit college.

Joel was selected by Fairfield University to give the speech and get the degree on May 19.

"An honorary degree says that this person is someone our students should emulate," said the Rev. Thomas Regan, a philosophy professor. He called Joel "blatantly anti-Catholic."

Regan pointed to the 1977 hit "Only the Good Die Young," in which Joel sings, "I'd rather laugh with the sinners than cry with the saints. The sinners are much more fun."

Joel's supporters argue that he also has written about suicide prevention, environmental preservation and world peace.

"Joel has a social awareness that scores a lot of points in my book," said the Rev. Simon Harak, a Jesuit who teaches religion. "And besides that, the man is a stunning artist." Most students are excited about Joel's visit.

LOS ANGELES — Actor Kiefer Sutherland and "Pretty Woman" star Julia Roberts are planning a June wedding.

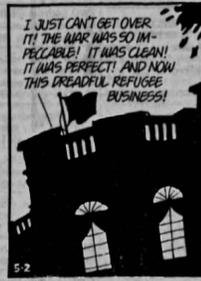

The couple met in 1989 while filming "Flatliners" and have been together since.

They will marry in Los Angeles on June 10, the couple's publicist, Pat Kingsley, said Wednesday.

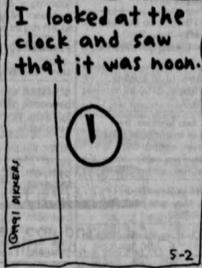

Roberts was at work on the Steven Spielberg film "Hook," in which she plays Tinkerbell.

A decision to pursue criminal against former UI Director of C Programs Kevin Taylor will not be until early next week, Johnson Attorney Patrick White said Thursday. According to State Auditor Richard Taylor was responsible for $39,000 missing from the director's and an additional $20,000 could be when a final audit is completed three weeks.

Cyclone

surpasses thousand Survivors search among bodies w

DHAKA, Bangladesh — The bodies of thousands of victims killed in a devastating cyclone washed up Thursday on the shores of Bangladesh as the government struggled to provide relief to millions of survivors. The official death toll for Tuesday's cyclone, the most powerful to hit this impoverished nation, is $7,543. But tens of thousands are missing on low-lying islands and coastal deltas, and Prime Minister Khaleda Zia said at least 100,000 people, and possibly more, could have been killed. "It is a vast devastation, and the loss of human lives could exceed 100,000," Zia said on state-owned television. "The information is incomplete. ... We fear (the toll) would go up much more. I pray to Allah it's not true." She announced special prayers would be held Friday, the Muslim Sabbath, to mourn the victims, and

Allies take more land for Kurds

INISHAK, Iraq — U.S., British, French and Dutch forces plunged 10 miles deeper into northern Iraq in Thursday, taking control of a zone that includes a bombed airfield and four of Saddam Hussein's palatial villas. The push eastward, which the Iraqi government was notified about Wednesday, created a 10-mile strip along the Turkish-Iraqi border where Iraqi Kurds who have fled to the mountains can return without fear, U.S. Lt. Gen. John Shalikashvili told reporters. The zone extends south from the Turkish border up to 30 miles. Iraqi forces were withdrawing from the zone as allied troops advanced, Shalikashvili said. "Everything is going very, very well," he said. Moving out at 7 a.m. from the Allies' original security zone around 2,500 allied troops traveled in convoys of light-armed vehicles, jeeps, trucks and Humvees.
