Botched tour package costs UISA over $30,000

Ann Riley
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Assembly lost $30,692.48 on a Rose Bowl tour package because of mismanagement in the Office of Campus Programs, according to UISA President Matt Wise.

In November of 1990, former UISA President Mark Havlicek told UISA senators the assembly was facilitating a travel package for the upcoming Rose Bowl that would allow UI students to obtain airfare and tickets to the game, Wise said. Havlicek reportedly told senators that sponsoring the package would not cost the assembly any money, and the senate did not vote on the matter.

"From our knowledge the package was all Kevin Taylor and Mark Havlicek's idea," Wise said. "No one in UISA ever knew any of the details. They were told it was a no-risk option."

Wise said Havlicek and former Director of the Office of Campus Programs Kevin Taylor approved a $140,000 voucher to charter a plane, and then attempted to break the contract when not enough students reserved seats to fill the plane.

Because the deadline to cancel the plane was missed by one day, the UISA had to pay a travel agency over $30,000 for breaking the contract.

"Most of the expenses came from when Taylor and Havlicek realized the package was not feasible and tried to get out. The $30,692.48 is basically the penalty for pulling out of the contract late," Wise said.

Havlicek and Taylor were unavailable for comment.

The UISA would have had to pay an additional $70,000 to the travel agency if the Department of Athletics had not taken over the charter of the plane, Wise said. Because the department was able to use the plane Havlicek and Taylor reserved, the UISA was then only responsible for the fee for breaking the contract and for the initial plane deposit.

Taylor, who resigned in May and has since been charged in connection with the embezzlement of $39,364.49 of university funds, was the only administrator to See Rose Bowl, Page 6

College St. fountain flows again

Larry Offner
The Daily Iowan

The College Street plaza fountain is again cascading around the feet of frolicking children, after being turned on last Tuesday for the first time in nine months.

The fountain was turned off in September of 1990 when the city learned that it came under a 1989 state law covering swimming pools and spas. As such, it had to be chlorinated and equipped with a filter, skimmer and recirculation system.

State Rep. Mary Neuhauser, D-Iowa City, introduced a bill in the last legislative session to exempt "decorative fountains" from the state legislation. Gov.

Terry Branstad signed the bill on April 30 of this year.

The 1989 law defines swimming pool as "an artificial basin... constructed for swimming, wading or diving..." Neuhauser's bill exempted from this definition any "decorative fountain which does not serve primarily as a wading or swimming pool."

Plant employees face safety exams

Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

The UI and the state of Iowa last week reached a settlement on the amount of fines for safety violations at the UI Power Plant, but according to a power plant employee, another problem has emerged.

The tentative agreement between the UI and the state labor commission lowered the UI's fines from $37,720 to $19,070 after some of the violations were downgraded from "willful" to "serious."

"I don't care how much they get fined as long as they improve the situation," said plant employee Frank Janaszak, who is vice president of the union's blue collar division and a member of the employee safety committee. He said the UI has taken steps to correct some violations, such as using a different kind of coal to prevent explosions like the one that occurred at a power plant silo in February.

But Janaszak also said the UI has indicated it may start giving safety tests to power plant employees — the same employees, he said, who called attention to the violations in the first place. While such tests have not yet been given, he said they would unfairly place workers' jobs at risk.

"The university is retaliating against the employees," said Janaszak. "They have given us warning

Iowa Festival starts 2 weeks of fun in IC

The Daily Iowan

The third annual Iowa Festival began Saturday in Iowa City with an afternoon outdoor festival at City Park and an evening arts expo on the riverbank.

This weekend's events mark the start of two weeks of cultural events, art and entertainment, revolving around the theme "Where Creativity Begins."

Concerts, garden tours, art exhibits and children's activities are some of the highlights of the festival this year.

The festival, which will run until June 23, is a joint effort supported in part by grants from the Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce, the Department of Cultural Affairs, Iowa Community Cultural Grant program, the Iowa Arts Council.

People killed, homes ruined as Japanese volcano erupts

Blackouts occur in 2 cities

Eric Talmadge
The Associated Press

TOKYO — Mount Unzen, a volcano that claimed at least 37 lives less than a week ago, burst to life again Saturday, spewing superhot debris that set homes on fire and blacking out a nearby city of 45,000.

There were no reports of injuries in Saturday evening's eruption, but it was much more intense than the deadly one Monday. Thousands of people were evacuated from areas near the mountain before the latest eruption.

Lightning bolts danced in dark gray plumes of smoke and ash that belched out as the massive eruption sent debris and gas down the 4,452-foot-tall mountain's east slope.

About 60 houses burst into flames after being engulfed by superheated gases, rock and ash, a Nagasaki police official said Sunday.

The eruption also cut off electricity to the Pacific coastal city of Shimabara, at the foot of the mountain about 600 miles southwest of Tokyo.

A light rain fell Saturday night but failed to set off mud slides, as had been feared, the police official said. No new evacuation orders were issued since Saturday, when 8,500 people were ordered out of the area.

The gases, rock and ash flowed down the mountainside and stopped at a highway about 1.5 miles from the Pacific, police and television reports said.

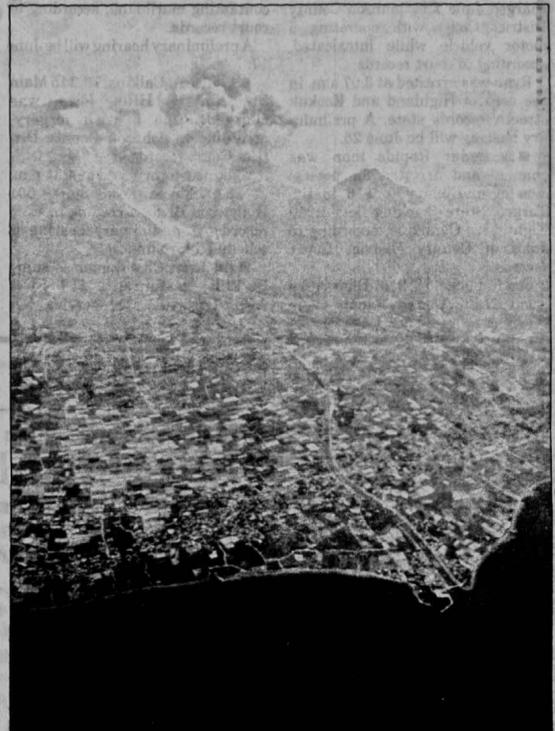

The national Meteorological Agency reported that the eruption occurred at 7:51 p.m. (6:51 a.m. EDT) and was followed by a smaller burst about two hours later.

Volcano experts said they did not expect another major eruption overnight but stressed that the volcano was still very active.

"When the mountain quiets down, magma inside is still rising to the top," Daisuke Shimozuru, chairman of the Coordinating Committee for the Prediction of Volcanic Eruptions, told a news conference. "It is possible that in the future... areas even farther away may be within the mountain's reach."

Most of Shimabara was blacked out soon after the eruption, but electricity was restored in about 15 minutes. Officials said they did not know the specific cause of the blackout but said it was connected to the eruption.

Scientists at the national Meteorological Agency's Mount Unzen Observatory reported seven pyroclastic flows in the five hours leading up to an eruption late in the afternoon that preceded the evening blast.

Pyroclastic flows involve extremely hot gas, rock and other volcanic material racing down the mountainside at great speed.

According to the Meteorological Agency, volcanic cinders of up to nearly a quarter-inch in diameter rained down on Shimabara.

Regular television broadcasts were interrupted as networks showed fires burning along the Mizunashi River, where earlier pyroclastic flows had hit.

Debris was also spewed toward Shimabara's neighboring town of Fukae, an area that had been left untouched by earlier activity.

Just before the eruption, officials had widened their evacuation order to include Fukae and some districts in Shimabara, increasing the number of people affected from

UIHC doctor charged with cocaine theft

Heather Pitzel
The Daily Iowan

Dr. James Folk, UI professor of ophthalmology, has been charged by the Iowa Board of Medical Examiners with falsifying drug records to obtain a 10 percent cocaine solution for his personal use while practicing medicine and surgery.

According to a complaint filed by the board, the charges also state "that on several occasions between January 1989 and February 1991, (Folk) excessively used drugs and narcotics."

Narcotics control systems in the UI Hospitals and Clinics first identified the problem and officials immediately notified the state board, according to a statement by the UIHC.

Folk, 37, voluntarily entered rehabilitation therapy and completed the initial phase of a substance abuse program in Rochester, Minn. He is currently participating in continuing counseling, according to hospital officials.

Dr. Thomas Weingeist, professor and head of the department of ophthalmology, "expressed confidence that the problem was identified and addressed before it adversely affected Dr. Folk's high standards of patient care," according to the hospital statement. Weingeist stated he believes Folk continues to provide patient care at the highest level.

Folk, also president of the Iowa Academy of Ophthalmology, is nationally known for his research in macular degeneration-deterioration of the center of the eye's retina.

The state medical board has scheduled a hearing for Sept. 4, and if found to be in violation of board rules or Iowa law, Folk could have his license revoked or suspended and be fined up to $10,000.

Iowans' reactions mixed in poll on Harkin's possible candidacy

The Associated Press

DES MOINES—More than half of Iowans say they'd vote for President Bush for president even if his opponent was Iowa's own Sen. Tom Harkin, according to the Iowa Poll. Still, Harkin retains a high job approval rating and a majority of Democrats say he should try to get the party's nomination for president.

The copyright Des Moines Register poll shows 56 percent of eligible voters favored Bush over Harkin, with 31 percent saying they'd vote for the senator. Thirteen percent said they won't vote or aren't sure.

Iowans are split on whether Harkin should pursue the Democratic nomination. Thirty-nine percent say he should and 44 percent say he should give it up, while 17 percent aren't sure.

Harkin has taken several trips to New Hampshire, the state with the nation's first presidential primary, to see if there is interest in his candidacy.

"I want to see if the message resonates, and I want to see if the messenger resonates," said Harkin. The Iowa Democrat, who was elected to a second six-year term in the Senate last fall, said he will make up his mind later.

Iowa attracts grad students

UI reports 18.5 percent increase in applications this year

The Associated Press

CEDAR RAPIDS—Extra recruiting and a sour job market are credited with an increase in applications for graduate school next fall at Iowa's three public universities and Drake University, the state's largest private college.

Academic departments at the University of Northern Iowa are "reaching out further to audiences that they haven't reached before," said UNI's Philip Paton, an associate registrar. "They're describing their programs better and advising students of the advantages."

UNI reports a 66 percent increase in applications, up to 378 so far. It's hard to predict graduate enrollment, however, since schools reject many applications, and some who are accepted don't attend.

Officials at the four schools said some of the applicants have decided to stay in school rather than hunt around for a job at a time when the economy is down. But others said college graduates increasingly see the need for an advanced degree.

"It's a credential that carries weight in the marketplace," said Alan Cabbage, director of marketing for Drake. "The undergraduate degree is still very much a ticket to a good job. But a graduate degree is a ticket to a better job."

Drake's applications grew from 234 to 277 for full-time graduate study and from 248 to 370 for part-time study. Drake's graduate enrollment runs 130 full-time to nearly 3,000 part-time students.

The UI's 18.5 percent application increase is based on 7,567 at this time last year to 8,970 as of the end of May. Nearly 9,000 of the school's 27,000 students are in graduate programs.

At Iowa State University, applications are up about 10 percent, from 4,600 last year to about 5,100 at the end of May.

UI faculty members honored

The Daily Iowan

Two long-time members of the UI faculty, Russell Ross and Dee Norton, have been named the 1991 recipients of the Michael J. Brody Award for Faculty Excellence in Service to the University and the State of Iowa.

Ross, a professor of political science, has been a member of the UI faculty since 1946. Norton, a professor of psychology, has been a member of that UI department since 1957.

This is the second year the award has been given and the first year its name honors the memory of Michael J. Brody, UI professor of pharmacology, who died Dec. 2, 1990. Brody had achieved an international reputation for his research into hypertension and was also active in campus affairs, having served as president of the UI Faculty Senate and as president of PROFS—Public Representation of the Faculty Senate.

"Professors Norton and Ross are excellent choices for this year's awards," said John Fix, president of the UI Faculty Senate and professor of physics and astronomy. "Throughout their careers they've been involved in the kinds of service this award is intended to recognize."

Thomas D. Bane, 22, 863 Page St., was charged June 6 in Johnson County District Court with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, according to court records.

Bane was arrested at 12:41 a.m. at 700 S. Dubuque St. A preliminary hearing will be held June 27.

Amy J. Ryan, 19, Route 5, was charged June 7 in Johnson County District Court with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, according to court records.

Ryan was arrested at 3:07 a.m. in the area of Highland and Keokuk streets, records state. A preliminary hearing will be June 25.

A Cedar Rapids man was charged and arrested for possession of marijuana June 6 in the Target Store parking lot, 2050 Eighth St., Coralville, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Jon R. Lucke, 18, 2107 Blairsferry Road N.E., Cedar Rapids, was stopped by police and asked to show identification, records state. While speaking with an officer, the defendant asked to throw away a stick of gum he was chewing into the garbage, according to records. At the same time, he reached into his pocket and also threw something else away, according to police reports. The officer became suspicious and immediately checked the garbage and found a plastic bag containing marijuana, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing will be June 17.

Louise A. Calkins, 19, 115 Main St., Apt. 1, Hills, Iowa, was charged June 6 with forgery, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Calkins was arrested at 4:31 p.m. at the Hy-Vee Food Store, 501 Hollywood Blvd., according to state records. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for June 27.

An Iowa City woman is suing Perkins Restaurant, 819 First Ave., Coralville, for serving her contaminated food on Aug. 31.

Ruth A. Johnson filed the suit June 5 in Johnson County District Court and requested a jury trial. According to court records, Johnson said she became ill after eating at the restaurant in August 1990. In her statement, Johnson said the restaurant was negligent in the preparation of the food because some foods were prepared by the employees' bare hands.

Records state Johnson said several of the employees were tested positive for salmonella, which she also contracted.

Johnson is suing for pain and suffering, mental anguish, loss of earnings, medical expenses and loss of enjoyment of life.

UI buildings receive architectural awards

The North Campus Parking and Chilled Water Facility and the UI Engineering Research facility have won awards of excellence from the American Institute of Architects.

The two were among 20 projects featured in the seventh annual review of Midwestern architecture, published in the Spring 1991 issue of Iowa Architect magazine.

The parking and chilled water facility won a Central States Region Design Award and a State of Iowa award. The UI engineering facility won a State of Iowa award.

Oakdale Hospital cited for water violation

In compliance with the Iowa Administrative Code, the Oakdale Hospital Water System Public Water Supply has issued a public notification of a monitoring violation of its water testing schedule. The water system is required to collect one sample every five years for synthetic organic chemicals. The sample was to be taken by March 31, 1991, but was inadvertently overlooked until June 4, 1991. The Oakdale Hospital Water System has stated it regrets the mistake and will ensure the testing schedule is followed in the future.

Dr. Science launches new radio program at UI

The man America knows as Dr. Science is producing a different kind of radio show.

Dan Coffey of Ducks Breath Mystery Theatre will launch this fall a series of 26 half-hour programs to be called The Iowa Radio Project. The new show is not necessarily a comedy show, and nothing at all like "Ask Dr. Science," a 90-second daily feature heard on 150 public radio stations around the country, according to Coffey.

"The Iowa Radio Project is a half-hour radio show that's the product of the comic, poetic and dramatic vision of Iowans," Coffey said. "It reflects the talent and vision of people who choose to live and work in a non-urban setting."

UI law professor honored at Duke

UI law Professor W.H. Knight was given Duke University Law School's "Distinguished Teacher" award for the 1990-91 school year.

Knight was a visiting professor at Duke for the spring semester this last year. While at Duke, he taught courses in contract law and banking law, subjects he also teaches at the UI.

Recipients for the award are chosen through a student vote.

Recent Problems caused by local dam

Heidi Pederson
The Daily Iowan

Although the Iowa River's recent flooding and the increased outflow rate from the Coralville Dam caused local inconveniences, these problems are minor compared with the major flooding that would have occurred if the dam had not been built, said Coralville Lake Park Manager Gary Thompson.

After several days of heavy rains, water outflow from the dam was increased to a near-record 12,000 cubic feet per second, causing floodwaters to invade many normally dry areas of City Park, as well as the section of Dubuque Street near Mayflower Residence Hall. But Thompson called these minor inconveniences.

"There has been one other time when we had to release 10,000 cfs back in 1969, and then several times over the years when we had to release 10,000 cfs," he said. "Thirteen thousand cfs will get into some homes downstream and 10,000 cfs will get into farmland from their point of view, yes—it's a problem. But if the dam hadn't been built, maybe they would have had 20,000 cfs to deal with."

Construction on the Coralville Dam, which began in 1949, was authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1938 as a way of moderating water levels on the Iowa River. However, progress on the project was interrupted due to the Korean War and the dam wasn't completed until 1958. Managed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the dam began operation in 1959.

The dam was designed for several purposes, according to Thompson. "Its primary use is for flood control," he said. "It stores floodwaters coming down the Iowa River and releases them at a controlled rate. Another purpose is to store water in the spring in case of drought, to assure downstream that we have enough water to compensate for any dry weather."

Recent IC flooding really only 'inconvenient'

Problems curbed by local dam

Heidi Pederson

Although the Iowa River's recent flooding and the increased outflow rate from the Coralville Dam caused local inconveniences, these problems are minor compared with the major flooding that would have occurred if the dam had not been built, said Coralville Lake Park Manager Gary Thompson.

3,084 square miles of land upstream. Downstream it protects 1,703 miles of land from flood waters, as well as playing an important role in the flood control system for the Mississippi River.

Various factors determine what the outflow rate from the dam should be, Thompson said, including weather forecasts, rainfall and the actions of various streams and creeks. This information is combined with what is known about the level of water currently in the reservoir to determine how much more water the lake can handle without overflowing into its concrete spillway.

The dam's job is to slow down water that has rushed into the reservoir. If water gets into the spillway, Thompson said, it would no longer be under control. This water would then rush downstream and cause extensive flooding.

Thompson said the outflow rate was increased to 12,000 cfs because of the recent rains, and he said this should be sufficient.

"Right now it would appear that we're going to be able to hold things pretty close to 12,000 cfs, and that will be as high as we'll have to go," he said. "But histori-

CIVIL RIGHTS

Politics As Usual

Race. Civil rights. Discrimination. Issues from the past, right? Wrong. Despite the belief that these problems were resolved long ago, such questions remain at the forefront of American politics and may prove to be the defining issues of the 1992 presidential campaign.

In recent weeks a number of such issues have been on the front page. On June 3, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that people cannot be peremptorily excluded from juries in civil cases on the basis of race. This decision follows on the heels of a similar ruling by the Supreme Court regarding criminal trials. Congressional attempts to pass a civil rights bill have also dominated the news in past weeks. Add to these the simmering controversy over police brutality in Los Angeles, and the 1991 version of America doesn't appear greatly different than that of 1964.

The pervasiveness of these issues is matched by the difficulty of reaching consensus on solutions. The gridlock in Congress centers on the question of whether the Democrats' civil rights bill would encourage hiring by the numbers — quotas. This debate shows little hope of speedy resolution. Further contributing to the stalemate is a substitute bill, offered by the Bush administration, that fails to reverse recent Supreme Court rulings limiting legal recourse for victims of discriminatory hiring practices.

As long as race-baiting and name-calling by politicians continues, any civil rights bill is in jeopardy. President Bush has distilled his arguments against the bill into a single phrase, branding it a "quota bill." This simplistic characterization may be little more than a scare tactic for attracting white middle-class voters to the Republican Party in 1992.

Bush has demonstrated that he does not desire meaningful change in this area, favoring instead — quite literally — business as usual. If Bush delivers on his promise to veto the Democrat's civil rights bill, expect an ugly campaign in 1992.

HEALTH CARE

Equitable Distribution

The United States is one of two industrialized nations in the world that lacks a national health-care system. As a result, 37 million Americans are without both public and private medical insurance, and another 60 million Americans are underinsured. Congressional Democrats have recently unveiled a proposal that would redress some of the hardships caused by this American failure. While the plan will not completely rectify the current situation, it is a good start toward the establishment of a truly equitable American health-care system.

Under the Democratic proposal, businesses that do not provide employees with adequate health insurance will be required to pay into a government fund. The money from this fund will then be used to insure these employees. Unemployed individuals will be covered by a public plan that is financed through existing private insurance companies.

Apart from the obvious ethical concerns addressed by this proposal, there are a number of economic advantages associated with it. First, the plan will encourage the development of state insurance consortiums. This will greatly simplify the current system and thereby decrease the enormous administrative overhead faced by the health-care industry. (Currently, there are approximately 1,500 insurance companies — almost all of which have their own application forms and filing procedures.)

Second, by providing health insurance to individuals that are uninsured or lack adequate insurance, the plan will promote the use of preventive health-care services. Finally, the plan will encourage a number of cost containment measures: limitations on the purchase of high technology equipment, elimination of excessive medical procedures and the establishment of set rates for different medical procedures.

Together, these regulations will ensure reasonably priced health care. According to the General Accounting Office, this proposal will save American consumers approximately $78 billion over the next five years. But more importantly, it will provide all Americans with the comfort of knowing that when a serious accident or illness befalls them, they will not be forced to forego the necessary medical treatment simply because they cannot afford it.

Editor's note

Welcome back to the UI for the 1991 summer session. With a new year comes a new editor for The Daily Iowan and with that a new feel to things. Along the way there will be subtle changes made to improve the quality of the paper. What will not change is the DI's commitment to the best and most uncompromising coverage of the UI community.

To complement this aspect of the DI, there will be a renewed attempt to improve the coverage of the Iowa City community. Life exists beyond the confines of the campus, and we intend to keep readers abreast of both.

Certain features are available for readers to express their opinions — Letters to the Editor, Guest Opinions and other features on the Viewpoints page. Please make use of these options.

Readers are also encouraged to call us with questions, concerns and news tips. The Daily Iowan will continue to run the names and phone numbers of section editors at the front of each section, as well as in the Calendar section on Page 2.

HIV/AIDS: an exercise in denial

The sorry, surly economic legacy of the Reagan years has only begun to slap people around. Its sting is now being felt in Iowa, where a peculiar inability to balance the state's books in accordance with acceptable accounting procedures has left us broke. Our governor, long known affectionately throughout the state as "Brain-dead," is now reduced to saying things like "You'd better go find yourself a higher paying job" when state employees express concern over his willingness to renege on binding arbitration.

Is this heaven? No, it's not even the heartland anymore. The Legislature should move quickly things: "Oh, Oh my God. I'm really sorry. That's awful. You take care of yourself." I hung up the phone and noted dates and times of the visitation in my calendar while my mind traveled to my closets for a quick inventory of black apparel. In short, a numbness settled over my psyche, leaving the entire incident covered under a blanket of emotional snow.

A day later, as I told another friend about the death, a rupture in my emotional lining let all the chill out as the truth punctured my denial. I had almost managed to forget the death of another friend from AIDS three months earlier, a man I watched lugging an oxygen tank around until he had barely enough energy left to lug himself around. At our last meeting, which happened to be a reception, he was ashen. His face was that pasty gray color health-care professionals recognize instantly as an advertisement for imminent death. It was even whispered to me: "I hate to say it, but that man is not long for this world." He talked and laughed, then wheezed and coughed, holding a plate of appetizers in his trembling, bony hand. When he left he hugged me goodbye. Then he moved toward the door with his children busting around him.

Still there are people who say AIDS isn't going to hit Iowa. Because of the terrifying ignorance on the state's campuses, an attitude among state health-care officials that AIDS education is offensive to the general public and should be avoided or delayed, and weak-kneed vetoes from the governor's office for vital funding, people are able to deny that AIDS will be a problem in this state.

But AIDS is already a problem in this state. I thought two friends in three months were a lot and said as much last week to the man who held my arm as we stood looking into a casket. "I've known two men who've died from this damned disease." He leveled his eyes at me in a look I know well. I think of it as his Garfield the cat look, a glare of skepticism indicating a desire to smack the recipient of the look alongside the head for being ridiculous. In an intense whisper he said, "This is my 14th."

I looked around at all the children and families who'd been touched by this man while he lived. I saw people I knew independently of the deceased, people who hugged me and cried, and as I looked I saw the ripple of AIDS grow wider and wider.

In a state that has practiced some of the heaviest AIDS denial in the country, we've moved from lack of preventive funding to lack of funding for those who have developed symptoms and need help.

Those who could do something in Iowa to remedy past inaction don't seem to care. The only help to come down the pike was squeezed from Capitol Hill with the passage of the Ryan White "Care" bill. That money will be distributed. But the hour is late, and it's hard not to be a little bitter. I'm already sick of funerals, and all I can think of is how many more I'll have to attend before it's over.

There are people in Brandstad's administration who could have prevented some of the suffering. There are people who should go to jail for willfully ignoring a public health menace. Today it's too late. But back when we were pretending Iowa had money, it would have been nice if some sense of decency had prevailed. But thanks anyway, Governor. Thanks for the increase in pari-mutuel betting, innovative lottery games, dog racing tracks and riverboat slot machines. You've never met me, but we'll probably rub elbows soon over the dead body of some mutual friend. It'll be my pleasure to thank you in person for having the backbone to turn down the $120,000 appropriation for AIDS. I look forward to telling you how proud we all are.

Kim Painter's column appears Mondays on the Viewpoints page.

Kim Painter

to dub it ledgerland before someone else does, especially with regard to human services. Established programs grow thin, while newer agencies simply starve from birth. Nowhere is this more true than in the area of services for people with HIV/AIDS.

A recent Des Moines Register article on our budget woes declared, in the next-to-last paragraph, "He also vetoed a $120,000 appropriation to assist AIDS sufferers, which had been a high priority of gay and lesbian groups."

Read it and weep. In a state that has practiced some of the heaviest AIDS denial in the country, we've moved from lack of preventive funding to lack of funding for those who have developed symptoms and need help. Politically, the move was expedient for Brandstad. He maintains distance from those evil, family-destroying queers who've been showing up too often in the Register lately, while cementing Iowans' rampant denial of AIDS.

Let me tell you about HIV/AIDS in Iowa. Last week I received a phone call at work from a friend telling me that another friend had died of AIDS. I sighed and said all the right

Doing a good turn for the do-gooders

As he raised his stein, Slat Grobnik's hand was shaking. "Worst day I had in years," he said. "The do-gooders finally got me."

What would they want with the likes of you? "At work. I come back from vacation and I get a cup of coffee like I always do and I light up a smoke like I always do but the foreman comes over and she says 'Put that filthy thing out.' I tell her to mind her own business. She says: 'That is my business. This is now a smoke-free company.'"

Yes, that is a growing trend in American business.

"I couldn't believe it. So I told her, hey, where I sit, I'm so far away from everybody else, I could make a bonfire and cook marshmallows or roast a pig and nobody would notice it. I ain't bothering anybody."

That is not the point. They are not only protecting non-smoking workers from the secondhand smoke, but they are protecting you from yourself.

"That's what she told me. And I told her I don't need nobody to protect me from me. What I do to me is up to me, and they ought to butt out. And that's when I asked her about her fat can."

Her what?

"Yeah. I told her, 'Hey, you're kind of a tubbo, ain't you?'"

I'm shocked. That's a terrible thing to say to someone.

"Why? All that extra weight she's packing can't be good for her health. Ask any doc. I told her that I'd bet a sawbuck her cholesterol and blood pressure were higher than mine. Or than Porky Pig's. And maybe that's why she takes so many sick days, which ain't efficient, so that's bad for the rest of us, right? So she goes waddling away and tells me that she's going to report me to the department boss. I told her, yeah, if you can squeeze through his doorway."

Did she?

"Yeah, and he comes over and tells me that I can't talk to her that way, that her feelings are hurt and I better not do it again. I told him that I was just doing her and the company a favor."

Mike Royko

By ridiculing her weight problem?

"That's what the department supervisor asked too. I said, yeah, I'm trying to help. If we're gonna have healthy workers, we can't have blubber butts like her on the payroll. And I asked him when he's gonna start putting people on the scales and firing them for being overweight. Then I told him that he's starting to get a gut on him, too, and that he ought to lose 30 pounds, get some exercise and knock off the hooch after work."

You told the boss that?

"Yeah. I told him I seen him come in this joint lots of times and belt them down until he's cross-eyed, and the next day his face is red as a beet, and that trying to work with a hangover ain't efficient and that costs the company money, so where does an inebriated poozer like him get off telling me I can't smoke?"

You are walking on thin ice.

"He said that, too, and he reported me to the division vice president, and the vice president came down to tell me I better straighten out. I told him I was just trying to be a good company guy, looking out for everybody's health and well-being so they'll be better workers. And I asked him if he was still sneaking around bonkin' that secretary who works in supply."

You asked him that? Are you crazy?

"Yeah, that's what he said too. So I told him, hey, word gets around, ya' know? And I told him that what he was doing wasn't a good idea, bein' that he's a married guy with kids, and if his wife found out she'd go flippo out and haul him to court and pluck him like a chicken, and he loses the house and the car and pays child support and winds up living in a furnished room, and with all that stress and misery on his mind there ain't no way he can give the company 110 percent, so borra' that secretary is inefficient and counterproductive and unfair to all the other employees, even if it is fun."

What did he say?

"He didn't say nothin'. I think he went to the men's room to sneak a smoke."

Well, how are you going to cope with the smoking ban?

"Oh, that's no problem, I was quitting anyway."

Then why did you cause so much trouble?

"I wasn't causing trouble. I want to help them as much as they're helping me."

Taylor pleads not guilty

Kevin Taylor, former director of the UI Office of Campus Programs, pleaded not guilty May 29 to charges in connection with the embezzlement of over $39,000 of university funds.

The charges stem from a state auditor's investigation that revealed cash funds had been misappropriated from SCOPE, a UI organization that sponsors concerts. SCOPE operates under the Office of Campus Programs, which Taylor directed since 1987.

Taylor resigned April 12 and was charged May 7 with first-degree theft, falsifying public documents

A Mercy Hospital medical technician found dead in a locked hospital restroom may have died from a drug overdose, according to Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White.

David Owen, 35, was found by a custodian at 3:30 a.m. March 19. White's statement was the first official comment on the cause of Owen's death.

Hours before he was found, Owen operated a heart-lung machine during an open-heart surgery. White said Owen's death was either a suicide or an accidental overdose of a controlled substance.

The investigation into Owen's death is continuing, according to Iowa City Police Capt. Patricia

Regents approve computer fee

The Iowa state Board of Regents approved a university-wide mandatory student computer fee at its monthly meeting May 15. The $40 per semester fee will be effective this fall and will be included on a student's university bill.

The fee is expected to generate approximately $2.1 million in fiscal year 1992, an increase of $1.54 million over income from the current program fees.

The charge will replace the computing fees of $35 per semester in the College of Business and $30 per semester in the College of Law, and students in all other colleges will also be charged. The College of Engineering's $100 per semester fee will be maintained.

The regents also approved the UI's proposed distribution of tuition designated for student activities, student services and building fees for the 1991-92 academic year.

This allocation is not in addition to a student's tuition, but is a designated portion of it as determined in consultation with the UI Student Association.

Based on current enrollment projections, the UI expects the allotment to be $3.2 million, approximately $100,000 less than was received in 1990-91.

Public safety chief retires

The UI Department of Public Safety is without a chief after the retirement of Chief Donald Hogan on June 5.

Hogan joined the Iowa City police force in 1962. He is a Navy veteran and a native of Iowa City, and attended police recruit and traffic schools. He is retiring after 12 years with the campus security department.

Director of Public Safety William Fuhrmeister will be acting as chief until a replacement can be hired. Applications for the position will be accepted until July 31.

Media boss wins top-dog contest: $3.8 million leads Iowa salary list

The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Media executive Lloyd Schermer was the only Iowa executive to earn more than $1 million last year, with money from delayed compensation pushing his pay to $3.89 million.

A survey by the Des Moines Register also showed that the average pay for top executives of publicly held companies was $408,000, slightly less than the 1989 average of $414,000.

Slightly more than a third of the executives receiving raises, 36 percent, had raises of at least $10,000; 42 percent had raises exceeding the inflation level of 6.1 percent. But 44 percent had no raises or took pay cuts, according to the survey.

Publicly held companies are required to report the numbers. The survey did not include executives of privately held companies. Schermer stepped down last month as chief executive of Davenport-based Lee Enterprises, which owns dozens of newspapers, television stations, special publications and printing plants. Its holdings include the Quad-City Times, the Mason City Globe-Gazette and the Ottumwa Courier.

Schermer's base compensation was $679,306, but he also received $3.2 million when a deferred compensation plan was eliminated and its benefits were distributed in cash. Other Lee executives took pay cuts of up to 22 percent, according to company documents. Schermer declined comment.

While none of the other Iowa executives made more than $1 million, several officials of companies that have substantial Iowa operations exceeded that level.

Among them are Charles Harper, who made $3.76 million as chairman of ConAgra, Inc.; Richard Kovacevich, president of Norwest Corp., $2.85 million; Lloyd Johnson, Norwest chairman, $2.83 million; Robert Peterson, chairman of IBP Inc., $2.42 million; and Robert Hanson, chairman of Deere & Co., $2.27 million.

The second-highest paid Iowa executive was Daniel Krumm, chairman of Maytag Corp. of Newton. Maytag earned $32.6 million less in 1990 than in 1989, and Krumm's $925,531 compensation was 25 percent less than he made the year before.

"If our performances hadn't been as good over the last several years, you wouldn't have those individuals showing up on your list," said Stephen Hansen, senior vice president of Norwest. "They would be paid substantially less."

He said compensations lag behind performance and that it takes a lot of money to hire top executives.

But Jim Stewart, president of United Auto Workers Local 838 in Waterloo, said Hansen, the Deere chairman, is overpaid.

Coming Home, continued — Iowa Guard unit set to return

The Associated Press

JOHNSTON, Iowa — The first group of soldiers from the Iowa Army National Guard's 224th Engineer Battalion is scheduled to arrive in Wisconsin early this week, military officials said.

Lt. Col. Robert King of the Guard said 354 soldiers of the southeastern Iowa battalion's 700 soldiers will arrive at Volk Field near Fort McCoy, Wis., on three flights Monday evening and Tuesday.

The engineer battalion, activated Jan. 25, includes soldiers from detachments based in Centerville, Muscatine, Mount Pleasant and Keokuk.

The group deployed to Germany from Fort McCoy on Feb. 5 and served as a backup engineer battalion to the 8th Infantry Division (Mechanized) in Germany. The division's organic engineer battalion was deployed to Saudi Arabia. King said the 354 soldiers are expected to arrive back in their hometowns late this week. He said homecoming celebrations are still being planned.

The rest of the battalion's soldiers are expected to return to the United States sometime late next week.

A navy escort ship was being sent to Shimabara to assist in evacuations should eruptions make roads impassable.

On Saturday morning, military helicopters renewed their search for four people still listed as missing and presumed killed in the eruption on Monday.

The latest eruptions, however, kept them from recovering any bodies.

The bodies of 27 people killed in Monday's blast have been recovered. Six other people who had been hospitalized have since died of burns. If the four missing are included, that would bring the death toll to 37.

Police had earlier set the toll at at least 38, based on sightings of bodies from the air.

Unzen's last major eruption was in 1792, and is believed to have created a landslide and tidal waves that killed 15,000 people, making it the worst volcano-related disaster ever in Japan.

The volcano came back to life in November. Monday's eruption was the worst in Japan since 1926, Wise blames poor management for the loss.

"Our finances are just a mess," Wise said. "If we had our own treasurer, this never would have happened. Taylor is not supposed to sign contracts. Someone in the business office is supposed to do that, or at least co-sign. In some people's mind the Office of Campus Programs should be responsible for absorbing the loss, but that won't help us now. This is a bad lesson."

Wise said a situation like this could happen again in the future, but Dean of Students Phillip Jones told him the administration was going to keep a close eye on UISA contracts from now on. All UISA contracts pass through Jones' office. Jones was out of town and unavailable for comment. Belinda Marner, assistant to Jones, said the policy for monitoring financial contracts is currently under review.

"There are stop measures in place now. We are reviewing all that this summer and making revisions," Marner said. "Since this is a new arrangement, we are looking at the manual to see if there are any things that need to be changed."

Marner said she did not know why the contracts were signed by Taylor instead of someone in the business office. The UISA currently pays $27,000 a year for a treasurer in the OCP and $24,000 to the business office for a bookkeeper.

"We are paying $60,000 a year to have our books kept and we expect them to be kept well, and they're not," Wise said. "If they were, this would have never happened."

Currently the UISA is trying to get approval from the administration to hire three treasurers of their own.

Graduate and Professional Student Senate Executive Officer Al Beardsley does not believe the UISA should absorb the cost for missing the deadline.

"It doesn't seem quite right to me that the students should have to cover for an administration that screwed up," Beardsley said.

that if you don't pass the test the first time, you get reprimanded, and if you don't pass it the second time, you're fired." He added that employees have taken, and passed, similar tests before.

James Christensen, head of the UI Physical Plant — which oversees the power plant — said that such tests are necessary to ensure employee safety.

"In any kind of safety program, you need to have tests to be sure that people understand the material," Christensen said. "What will happen to people who don't pass the test I can't speculate, but you need to make sure the comprehension is there."

The fines against the UI were imposed after state officials inspected the power plant in February and March. The inspections revealed a number of violations of the Occupational Health and Safety Act, including situations that exposed employees to fire and explosions in coal silos, bunkers and bins, and to a switch gear panel box door that carried 480 volts of power.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — A cleaner confessed to killing young women, police said Sunday, and his arrest relieved residents shaken by the latest murder in their university town.

Alan Robert Davis, 29, was without bond Sunday on two-degree murder counts after he said he admitted strangling two University of Florida students. Davis, who lives with his wife and her four children in nearby Berry, was picked up for questioning by authorities Saturday night and confessed during six hours of interrogation, police said.

Davis cleaned the victims' apartments and then killed them, investigators said. They said the murders remain unclear.

Davis is charged in the deaths of Thursday of Eleanor Anne C. 20, of Fort Myers, and Caroline McKishnie, 22, of Braintree. Grace was a sophomore student in psychology, and McKishnie was a graduate student majoring in education.

Davis appeared Sunday in court where a judge appointed a public defender to represent him. His wife, Tammy, 30, attended arraignment but had no comment.

Other family members described Davis as a hard-working farmer, who deeply cared for his stepchildren.

"There is no way in the world I would do it. He's not the kind of guy to try and strike out," Terry Redemsky, his brother-in-law, said.

Authorities have emphasized the killings were not connected to the August 1990 serial murders of four women and a man. Their bodies were discovered over a three-day period at the beginning of the fall semester.

In addition, a college woman missing since February 1989 in the Casablanca condominium complex, the latest slayings occurred, police said. The arrest seemed to ease fears of students, still shocked by the crimes last August.

"I will go home and sleep better," said 20-year-old Hamen of Tampa. "We're relieved."

But Sue Pessman wasn't convinced the worrying was over. "I would be very relieved if it would prove without a doubt that he's innocent," said the 24-year-old student.

Bush offers chance for Mideast peace conference

The Associated Press
JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Sunday that President Bush had offered Israel a tradeoff: If it freezes new settlements in occupied Arab lands, its conditions for convening a peace conference could be met.

Shamir also insisted Sunday that Israel have a say in the choice of the Palestinians who will attend a U.S.-sponsored Middle East peace conference.

The Palestinians would be part of a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation, but Shamir told reporters "the Palestinian component must be agreed (to) by us."

He said this was stipulated in the Camp David accords, which govern the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty and lay down guidelines for an overall Middle East peace.

Shamir's letter to Bush was in response to letters the president sent to prospective conference participants in an attempt to pinpoint which obstacles remained and how they could be overcome.

Israeli radio stations said Shamir raised the Palestinian issue in his letter to Bush. Officials have refused to divulge any portion of the correspondence.

Asked about newspaper reports that Bush offered Israel a tradeoff, Shamir said, "there is some mention in his message that if we could propose the freezing of settlements, maybe there would be no need for those things you are not happy with."

He did not say how he responded to the offer.

Shamir aide Avi Pazner said the demand for a say on the Palestinian representatives was aimed at excluding the Palestine Liberation Organization from peace talks.

Palestinians consider the PLO their representative. Israel maintains it is a terrorist group.

Until now, the issues that have received the most attention have been Syria's insistence that the conference meet regularly and that the United Nations participate.

Israel wants a one-time meeting to be followed by direct negotiations. It sees the Arabs' readiness to meet it face-to-face, without outside participants, as a test of their acceptance of Israel's existence.

It says the United Nations is biased, citing a 1975 resolution that denounces Israel's founding ideology, Zionism, as racist.

The Arabs seek U.N. participation as a means of forcing Israel to accept its calls for ceding land.

The Hadashot daily, quoting political sources in Jerusalem, reported Sunday that Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev were considering a dramatic ice-breaking move of inviting Middle East nations to a peace conference without resolving procedural disputes.

Alan Robert Davis, 29, of Newberry, Fla., is led from the Alachua County Sheriff's Department early Sunday morning after being charged with two counts of first-degree murder. The victims were both students at the University of Florida in Gainesville.

Man arrested for murder of 2 Gainesville women

Ron Word
The Associated Press
GAINESVILLE, Fla. — A carpet cleaner confessed to killing two young women, police said Sunday, and his arrest relieved residents shaken by the latest murders in their university town.

Alan Robert Davis, 29, was jailed without bond Sunday on two first-degree murder counts after police said he admitted strangling the two University of Florida students.

Davis, who lives with his wife and her four children in nearby Newberry, was picked up for questioning by authorities Saturday evening and confessed during nearly six hours of interrogation, police said.

Davis cleaned the victims' apartment and then killed them, investigators said. They said the motive remains unclear.

Davis is charged in the deaths Thursday of Eleanor Anne Grace, 20, of Fort Myers, and Carla Marie McKishnie, 22, of Brandon. Grace was a sophomore studying psychology, and McKishnie was a graduate student majoring in education.

Davis appeared Sunday in court, where a judge appointed a public defender to represent him. Davis' wife, Tammy, 30, attended the arraignment but had no comment.

Other family members described Davis as a hard-working family man, who deeply cared for his four stepchildren.

"There is no way in the world he would do it. He's not the kind of guy to try and strike out," said Terry Redemsky, his brother-in-law.

Authorities have emphasized that the killings were not connected to the August 1990 serial murders of four women and a man. Their bodies were discovered over a three-day period at the beginning of the fall semester.

In addition, a college woman missing since February 1989 lived in the Casablanca condominiums, where the latest slayings occurred.

The arrest seemed to ease the fears of students, still shocked by the crimes last August.

"I will go home and sleep a lot better," said 20-year-old Dean Hamen of Tampa. "We're all relieved."

But Sue Pessman wasn't convinced the worrying was over.

"I would be very relieved if they would prove without a doubt it was him," said the 24-year-old student from Boca Raton.

Assistant State Attorney Rob Groeb said the case would be taken before a grand jury within the next two to three weeks, and prosecutors would seek two first-degree murder indictments.

In addition to the confession, "we have physical evidence linking this particular suspect to the crime," said Lt. Spencer Mann, spokesman for the sheriff's office.

Mann said there was "no clear-cut motive for these homicides. We have some possibilities. We are not going to share them."

A sworn complaint released by authorities said Davis confessed to punching Grace into unconsciousness about noon Thursday, strangling McKishnie, then returning to further choke Grace.

Both were found Friday fully clothed, and there was no evidence of sexual assault.

Davis, an employee of Rainbow International Carpet Dyeing and Cleaning Co. in Gainesville, was brought in for questioning after an unidentified person called the sheriff's office Saturday afternoon.

The 6-foot, 194-pound suspect was moved from the sheriff's office to the jail about 1:35 a.m. while a crowd of about 100 reporters, photographers and television cameramen watched.

Authorities said Davis had one other arrest in Gainesville, in 1989 for resisting arrest with violence.

Davis' sister-in-law said she can't believe he is guilty.

"He had to be provoked real bad because he's not a violent man," said Cheryl Parrish, who lives in nearby Archer.

Parrish said Davis had mentioned either Friday or Saturday to family members that he had cleaned the carpet at the condo where the murders occurred.

"He said he did the carpet for the blonde girl (Grace), and she was very much alive when he left," she said.

Following Davis' arraignment, university President John Lombardi held a news conference and urged students to continue to be careful.

"We feel a sense of relief, and our confidence in the ability of our law enforcement agencies is validated," Lombardi said. "We are pleased with the speedy resolution to what is a tragic situation, but this only reinforces the need to have students understand the risks in life."

Lombardi maintained that Gainesville remains safer than most places.

Kuwaiti court sentences man to death

Neil MacFarquhar
The Associated Press
KUWAIT CITY — The first death sentence imposed on a defendant accused of collaborating with Iraq was greeted with indifference Sunday by many Kuwaitis, most too busy restocking their houses to follow the trials.

The acting prosecutor-general also said that more such sentences would follow because he had asked for the death penalty for virtually all of the 300 alleged collaborators currently facing a martial law court.

Human rights groups have strongly criticized the 3-week-old trials, saying the decisions of the five-judge panel seem entirely based on pretrial investigations, rather than the examination of witnesses by prosecution and defense in open court.

"A death sentence? There wasn't one," said Masad Ahmed, a 45-year-old government employee picking over new tires and batteries in an outdoor car market.

"There was? Well, if people were really collaborating and hurting Kuwait, they should hang."

The martial law court on Saturday condemned a stateless man who never had a chance to speak to his court-appointed lawyer.

Mankhi al-Shimmiri, a 33-year-old radar technician in the Kuwaiti air force, was accused of joining Iraq's Popular Army and providing information to the Iraqis during their seven-month occupation.

Al-Shimmiri confessed to volunteering for the army, wearing the Iraqi uniform and other offenses. No witnesses were heard during his trial, nor was the evidence against him presented out loud.

"I know it's a harsh judgment, but legally it's right," said Nabeel al-Wuguyan, a lawyer for other defendants.

There is no appeal under martial law, which was first imposed at the Feb. 26 liberation for three months, then extended a month. But Crown Prince Saad al-Abdullah al-Sabah, the martial law governor, must approve all sentences.

"I hope Sheik Saad, by his mercy, will save his life," said al-Shimmiri's defense lawyer, Abdul Latif al-Seif. He said he had been too busy with other cases and reorganizing his ransacked office to meet al-Shimmiri.

The acting prosecutor-general, Hamid al-Othman, meanwhile, said all the more than 200 defendants who have appeared in court so far have faced the death penalty, the maximum for collaboration.

"We've asked for the death penalty in each case. In this case it was taken. It's not an unusual sentence," he said.

Most of the 200 cases, however, have been postponed to give defense lawyers a chance to read the prosecutor's files.

Defense lawyers said Al-shimmiri's sentence would make their jobs that much harder, especially in cases like his where defendants don't deny their confession.

Yet the confessions have raised questions, since many of the defendants who have appeared in court since the trials started May 19 said they were beaten or tortured during investigations by security forces after the allies liberated Kuwait on Feb. 26.

On Saturday, a prominent defense attorney, Doukhi al-Hasban, said that a number of Kuwaiti security officers will go on trial soon for torturing defendants accused of collaboration with the Iraqis.

Pope warns Poles of new challenge as 9-day journey home winds up

John Daniszewski
The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland — Pope John Paul II capped a nine-day trip home with an emotional sermon at an outdoor Mass on Sunday, telling fellow Poles they face "a new test of freedom" with the fall of communism.

Earlier in the day, he assured leaders of Poland's remaining Jewish community that the Roman Catholic Church would step up its battle against anti-Semitism. But he rejected their request that the Vatican establish formal ties with Israel.

Later Sunday, John Paul met with bishops, priests and nuns and urged them to continue fighting for passage of a bill before Parliament that would outlaw abortions. He praised those members of Parliament seeking to reverse a 1956 law implemented by the Communists permitting abortion on demand.

At least 300,000 people crowded Warsaw's Agrykola Park for the Mass held around a pond, the last by the pope before he left on an evening flight to Rome at the end of a 12-city tour of his native land. The capital's faithful clambered over barriers and hung from trees to catch a glimpse of the 71-year-old pontiff.

President Lech Walesa and his wife, Danuta, Prime Minister Jan Krzysztof Bielecki and other top officials also attended the Mass.

The pope said Poles and other Eastern Europeans should not take lightly the freedom they won with the fall of Communist regimes.

"We cannot simply possess freedom; we must constantly fight for it. We fight for it by putting it to good use and using it in the cause of truth," he said.

"I love my nation. I was not indifferent... to the oppression endured by it. Now, I am not indifferent to the new test of freedom before which we all stand."

He urged Poles not to be overwhelmed by the economic hardships and other problems accompanying the transition to democracy.

Before flying out of Warsaw's airport, he compared the challenges facing Poland to the "crossing of the Red Sea."

Throughout his fourth visit since he became pope in 1978, he urged East Europeans to cope with their new freedoms not by blindly imitating permissive Western morality but by building their lives on the solid "rock" of the Ten Commandments.

Discarding his hectic timetable and ignoring anxious security guards, the pope went over to hundreds of well-wishers at the airport to bid them farewell before boarding his plane. He arrived back in Rome late Sunday.

At his meeting with six Jewish leaders at the Vatican Embassy, John Paul acknowledged that Jewish-Catholic relations in Poland had been poisoned by the "evil in our mutual history" and urged both sides to "salvage and renew the good things."

"Unfortunately, both the good and evil that occurred between us was crushed by the genocide, inconceivable in its severity, to which the Jewish nation fell prey," he said.

About 1.5 million Jews were killed by the Nazis at the Auschwitz death camp in Poland. Only a few thousand Jews still live in Poland, compared with 3.5 million before World War II.

The 30-minute meeting was one of the highlights of the pope's tour because of the continuing tensions in Catholic-Jewish relations in Poland and protests over John Paul's remarks last week drawing a parallel between abortion and the deaths of 6 million Jews in the Nazi Holocaust.

Pope John Paul II shares a laugh with Polish President Lech Walesa and his wife, Danuta, in the entrance hall at Belvedere Palace Saturday. The pope had a private meeting with Walesa before continuing with his schedule in Warsaw. Sunday was the last day of his 9-day visit to Poland.

A spokesman for the Jewish delegation, Konstanty Gebert, said the pope described the founding of a modern state of Israel as "an act of historical justice." But he quoted the pope as saying the situation in the Middle East was not favorable for the Vatican to have formal relations with the Jewish state, although he expressed hope for a breakthrough in the peace process.

The Vatican has cited the lack of a Palestinian homeland, Israeli occupation of Arab territory and the need for international guarantees.

Crash cans train chief in Pakistan

Zahid Hussain
The Associated Press

KARACHI, Pakistan — The prime minister suspended Pakistan's railway chief Sunday after the crash of a crowded express train that killed 100 people and injured more than 200.

A station master and four other station employees also were suspended pending the outcome of the investigation into Saturday's crash.

Some lawmakers have complained the railway system is plagued with outdated equipment and poorly trained workers. Three of the country's deadliest train accidents have occurred within 45 miles of each other in the past 18 months, government officials said.

Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif ordered the suspensions, including that of Zafarullah Qureshi, the general manager of the system. Although investigators had not ruled out sabotage, they said they suspected the crash of the 18-car "Taz Gam" express train early Saturday was caused by staff negligence.

A station master and four other station employees also were suspended pending the outcome of the investigation. A preliminary report on the crash was expected by Friday.

At least 35 people were still in serious or critical condition, hospital officials and rescue workers said.

The Taz Gam, Pakistan's top passenger train, ramed into a parked freight train in the station at Ghotki, 400 miles north of Karachi in southern Sindh Province.

The crash brought new calls from lawmakers and other government officials, including President Ghulam Ishaq Khan, for Pakistan's railway to be revamped and modernized. The system was developed by the British before the 1947 partition of the Indian subcontinent, and many lawmakers contend it has not been properly maintained.

There are frequent complaints that many employees, especially in the small village railway stations like Ghotki, are poorly trained. Critics also say controls that move the tracks are manual rather than electronic, increasing the risk of human error.

A $50 million microwave signaling system was recently installed with the help of the World Bank but is not working properly, officials said.

Investigators suspect the Taz Gam got the green light to pass through the Ghotki station rather than the warning light that another train was sitting on the track.

The train was carrying about 800 passengers on a 21-hour, 900-mile trip from the southern port city of Karachi to the eastern border city of Lahore and then to the federal capital of Islamabad.

The express was moving at about 65 mph when it slammed into the parked freight train, which was loading fertilizer at the station, said investigators, who agreed to discuss the crash only if granted anonymity.

Investigators said the driver survived the crash and told authorities he had been given the green light to pass through the station.

Gag order imposed in Kennedy-Smith case; pretrial publicity may require venue change

Dan Sewell
The Associated Press

PALM BEACH, Fla. — Extensive pretrial publicity about the alleged rape at the Kennedy estate has raised the possibility that the trial may be moved.

One prominent attorney says a change of location could be needed, and the trial judge says she worries about similarities between this case and that of a man whose murder conviction was overturned 25 years ago because of prejudicial publicity.

Palm Beach County Circuit Judge Mary Lupo summoned attorneys for both sides Friday and said she fears the publicity could "make empanelling a jury extremely difficult. . . I think we're almost at the point of a clear and present danger."

For now, Lupo is trying to control the publicity with a gag order forbidding out-of-court comments by virtually all participants in the trial of William Kennedy Smith, 30. She told attorneys to present her with details for a modified gag order by noon Monday.

The judge said coverage of the Kennedy estate case "very closely parallels that extended in the Sheppard case." The U.S. Supreme Court in 1966 reversed the 1954 conviction of Cleveland osteopath Samuel Sheppard in the murder of his wife, saying the trial judge failed "to protect Sheppard sufficiently from the massive, pervasive and prejudicial publicity."

Sheppard was acquitted in his second trial.

"You would be no better off anywhere else in this case."

F. Lee Bailey

Smith's attorneys have said they will file a motion this week to dismiss the second-degree sexual battery and misdemeanor battery charges against him in the alleged assault on a 29-year-old Jupiter, Fla., woman. They claim prejudicial publicity and one-sided handling of the case by police and prosecutors have jeopardized Smith's right to a fair trial.

Smith, who has pleaded innocent, is the nephew of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. Smith's attorneys haven't indicated whether they would seek a change of venue, or location, for the Aug. 5 trial, but an attorney not involved in the case said a change of venue could be needed.

"I think it's getting to a point to be a problem," said Robert Harper, a veteran Tallahassee attorney whose clients have included executed serial killer Ted Bundy.

He noted that it's unnecessary to find jurors who have never heard of a case. The standard is whether their pretrial knowledge has caused them to form an opinion on guilt or innocence.

Harper said in cases in which he's sought a change of venue, he sometimes had a research team survey the community and also collected examples of news media coverage.

F. Lee Bailey, who won Sheppard's new trial and has been watching the Smith case from his West Palm Beach office, said he knows from his travels the case is being followed across the nation.

In high-profile cases he's handled, such as that of publishing heiress Patty Hearst, the trials weren't moved because the publicity was nationwide and the question arose, "Where can you move it to?"

"You would be no better off anywhere else in this case," Bailey said. Bailey said the publicity in the Smith case doesn't compare to that for Sheppard, whom he said was subjected to a series of front-page editorials in a now-defunct Cleveland newspaper expressing belief in his guilt.

The publicity in Smith's case has been relatively balanced, Bailey said.

Both sides have complained about publicity on information that likely will be inadmissible as evidence, such as details about the alleged victim's past and lie-detector results police say indicated she was telling the truth.

Bailey said as an alternative to changing venue, judges can order lengthy postponements.

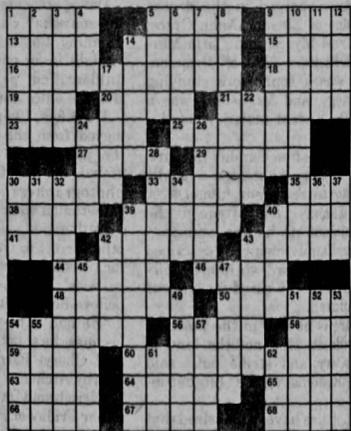

Harper said he has found that pretrial publicity usually isn't as pervasive as expected.

"It's amazing how many people will testify they haven't heard of a case — they say they only read Ann Landers, or the sports, or the comics," Harper said.

The Lakers finished with 36.6 percent shooting and are averaging 89.7 points per game in the Finals.

"We saw how well they did with their post-up play in the first game," Jordan said. "We've done a really good job rotating and double-teaming since then."

"They've taken the ball out of my hands very successfully," Johnson said. "They've done it better than anyone we've played."

No team has ever recovered from a 3-1 deficit to win the Finals, a fact noted by Los Angeles coach Mike Dunleavy.

"We're in a ditch, not just a hole," Dunleavy said. "We know no one's come back from a 3-1 deficit. Somebody's got to do it sometime. We hope we're the team."

Iowa announces basketball schedule

Di wire services

Iowa has announced its 1991-92 basketball schedule, highlighted by the ninth annual Ames Hawkeye Classic Dec. 6-7, when Bowling Green, Louisiana Tech and Army will come to town.

Sportsbriefs

Other non-conference opponents include Maryland-Eastern Shore, Western Illinois, Centenary and a winter break trip to the South Florida Classic, where the Hawkeyes will join Butler and Northeastern Illinois as guests.

The Hawkeyes will also defend their "state title" against intrastate rivals Iowa State, Northern Iowa and Drake.

reacted to the announcement, baseball coach and member of the search committee Duane Banks and Hawkeye wrestling coach Dan Gable were both pleased with Bowlsby's appointment.

"We told him it was probably the second-most important job; that football coach is the most-important job. I'm not sure if he appreciated that or not.

By winning Wednesday, Chicago also could equal Detroit's 15-2 record in the 1989 playoffs as the best since the postseason format was changed in 1984.

The Bulls' victory was the seventh straight on the road in the playoffs by an Eastern Conference team over a Western Conference team in the last three years. The Pistons won two straight at the Forum in the 1989 Finals to complete a four-game sweep of the Lakers.

Chicago now has won two consecutive postseason games here after losing its first 13 at the Forum from 1968 through 1973. The Bulls lost four playoff series to Los Angeles in that span.

The Bulls led 52-44 at halftime behind Jordan's 11 points in the second quarter, including a jumper at the buzzer. Los Angeles made only five of 20 shots in the period.

The Lakers went 5-for-6 from the free-throw line, but missed all eight of their field-goal attempts in the first six minutes of the quarter as Chicago turned a one-point deficit into a 39-33 lead.

A jumper and rebound basket by Cliff Levingston gave the Bulls their largest lead of the half, 50-40, with 2:45 left.

Divac, who scored a playoff career-high 24 points in Game 3, had nine in the first 4:41 of Sunday's game, but the Bulls opened a 17-11 lead as the rest of the Lakers started 1-for-6.

Jordan showed the only obvious sign of pain in his bruised right toe when he limped after dunking the ball while being fouled by Perkins. But Jordan converted the free throw, giving Chicago a 22-13 advantage with 5:10 left in the quarter.

Worthy then scored six points during a 15-5 spurt as the Lakers finished the period with a 28-27 edge.

ChiSox sweep Royals behind hot McDowell

The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jack McDowell retired the first 18 batters and finished with a four-hitter as Chicago beat Kansas City, 8-2, for its first three-game sweep at Royals Stadium since 1974.

McDowell (7-3), who two-hit Detroit on April 13, had three strikeouts and two walks while pitching the White Sox to their fourth straight victory.

The 6-foot-5 right-hander lost his no-hit bid and shutout in the seventh inning. Gary Thurman hit a soft single into right leading off, then Kirk Gibson drew the Royals' first walk. After George Brett flied out, Jim Eisenreich hit an RBI single into center field.

Dan Pasqua doubled leading off and gave McDowell a 1-0 lead when Matt Merullo singled him home.

Twins 9, Indians 2
MINNEAPOLIS — Jack Morris gave up two runs and five hits in eight innings as Minnesota defeated Cleveland for its eighth consecutive victory.

Morris (7-5) won his fourth consecutive game, and has pitched into the eighth inning in his last four starts. He improved his lifetime record against the Indians to 28-9, needing ninth-inning relief help from Steve Bedrosian.

Yankees 6, Rangers 4
NEW YORK — Rookie Pat Kelly hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning to give the red-hot New York Yankees a 6-4 victory over Texas on Sunday, sending the reeling Rangers to their seventh straight defeat.

John Habyan (4-1), the third of four Yankees pitchers was the winner and Steve Farr pitched a hitless ninth for his sixth save.

Kelly's homer, the second of his major league career, came off former Yankee great Rich Gossage (4-1) after Alvaro Espinoza singled with one out in the eighth. The Rangers blew a 4-1 lead.

Mariners 6, Brewers 1
SEATTLE — Brian Holman pitched a five-hitter as Seattle beat Milwaukee to complete a three-game sweep and send the Brewers to their seventh straight loss.

Angels 7, Tigers 3
ANAHEIM, Calif. — Chuck Finley gave up one run and struck out nine in 6 1/2 innings to become the American League's first 10-game winner this season as California beat Detroit.

Finley (10-2) joined Atlanta's Tom Glavine as the majors' only 10-game winners. He now has 83 strike outs, second in the AL to Roger Clemens' 88.

Hershiser wins battle of comebacks vs. Jackson National

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Orel Hershiser, taking a huge stride in his comeback, pitched and batted the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 6-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Sunday.

Hershiser (1-1) allowed two runs, six hits, walked one and struck out six in seven innings for his 100th career victory. Jay Howell got the last three outs.

It was Hershiser's first win since April 19, 1990, before he underwent surgery to reconstruct his right shoulder in a revolutionary procedure.

He lost his first start on May 29 to Houston, 8-2, and pitched 6 1/2 scoreless innings in a game the Dodgers eventually lost, 3-2, to St. Louis last Tuesday.

Hershiser also had key singles in the fifth inning when the Dodgers scored a pair to tie the score and in the seventh when they broke the tie with three runs.

Danny Jackson (0-2) took the loss in his first appearance after coming off the disabled list. Jackson, on the DL since April 20 with a groin injury, gave up 11 hits and five runs in 6 1/2 innings.

Astros 1, Mets 0
HOUSTON — Pete Harnisch pitched a three-hitter and struck out a career-high 11 as Houston edged New York.

Harnisch, who came to Houston from Baltimore to the Glenn Davis trade, tossed his first major league shutout. The only run he needed came on Ken Caminiti's RBI double in the sixth off David Cone (6-4).

Cone gave up three hits in seven innings and struck out eight, increasing his NL lead to 82.

Braves 8, Expos 6
ATLANTA — David Justice hit two two-run homers to help Tom Glavine become the major league's first 10-game winner with his eighth victory in a row as Atlanta beat Montreal.

Justice broke a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning with his second two-run shot off Mark

Gardner (1-3).
Glavine (10-2) became the first Atlanta pitcher to win eight in a row since Pasqual Perez won nine in a row over a two-season span in 1982-83. Phil Niekro won eight in succession during the 1982 season.

Padres 5, Pirates 3
PITTSBURGH — Tony Gwynn extended his hitting streak to 15 games with a triple and tie-breaking single, leading San Diego over Pittsburgh.

The streaking Padres have won eight of their last 10 games, including two straight over the Pirates. The Padres' two victories match their season total of a year ago, when the Pirates won 10 of 12 from San Diego.

Andy Benes (4-6) gave up six hits and three runs in 8 1/2 innings. Zane Smith (7-4) lost his second straight start.

Gwynn is hitting .439 (25-for-57) during his hitting streak, the longest in the National League this season.

Reds 6, Phillies 3
CINCINNATI — Glenn Braggs hit a pair of sacrifice flies to erase a two-run deficit and Barry Larkin homered and singled in a run as Cincinnati rallied past Philadelphia.

Chris Sabo had an RBI single, a double and a triple off Terry Mulholland (6-5) to help the Reds overcome a 2-0 first-inning deficit.

Tom Browning (8-4) gave up a pair of runs on four hits in the first inning, then checked the Phillies on just two hits over the next five to get his fourth victory in his last five starts.

Giants 3, Cardinals 2
ST. LOUIS — Kevin Bass' two-run single broke an eighth-inning tie as San Francisco beat St. Louis for the Giants' sixth victory in their last eight games.

Andre Agassi congratulates Jim Courier after losing in five sets in the French Open Sunday.

Courier tops Agassi on clay

The Associated Press

PARIS — In a match that changed course as often as the stormy weather, Jim Courier rallied in the last two sets Sunday to win a French Open slugfest and again deprive boyhood rival Andre Agassi of his first Grand Slam title.

On a day mixing rain, sunshine and strong winds that caused virtual sandstorms on the clay courts, Courier won 3-6, 6-4, 2-6, 6-1, 6-4 in his first Grand Slam final.

The first all-American final at Roland Garros since 1954 ended on an ace by Courier, who flopped backward onto the soft clay in triumph. He ran under the stands to celebrate with coach Jose Higueras and then tossed his white baseball cap to a fan.

"There have been lots of happy moments in my life and there will be lots more, but at the moment this is the happiest," said Courier, who started the year ranked 25th but now will jump to No. 4 — dropping Agassi to fifth. "For me this is extraordinarily special."

The 20-year-old Courier had never reached the quarterfinals of a Grand Slam tournament before last week, but he was more poised than Agassi after a pair of second-set rain delays. While the Floridian seemed to relax after the breaks, Agassi never was able to regain control of the match.

"I felt like if it hadn't rained, I could have kept my momentum, but who knows how long that would have lasted?" Agassi said.

Courier, who now has won all four of his career finals, pocketed $451,660 dollars — more than he made all of last year. Agassi won $225,830.

For Agassi, it was the second straight year he had lost a French Open final to an underdog. He lost in four sets last year to Andres Gomez, and then lost to Pete Sampras in the U.S. Open final last September.

Like Courier on Sunday, Gomez and Sampras were playing in their first Grand Slam finals when they defeated Agassi.

"Who knows how many shots you have? I've been fortunate to have three finals, but it's disappointing," said Agassi. "The pessimistic side of me will always have questions."

Courier and women's champion Monica Seles, who defeated Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 6-3, 6-4 on Saturday for her second consecutive title, are both former Bollettieri pupils who broke away for personal and professional reasons.

"I got a bit lucky, but sometimes that's what it takes," he said. Then, looking at Agassi, he said: "Sorry."

Bowlsby returns to Iowa City as new athletic director

Marc Morehouse
 The Daily Iowan

The little guy up the road became the big man on campus Friday when UI President Hunter Rawlings announced that Bob Bowlsby would become Iowa's new athletic director.

Bowlsby, 39, has been athletic director at the University of Northern Iowa since 1984 and was picked from a group of three other finalists including Fred Mims, UI associate athletic director. Other finalists were Gary Cunningham, Fresno State's athletic director and Eugene Smith, athletic director at Eastern Michigan.

When Bowlsby landed the AD job at Northern Iowa he was only 32-years-old, making him the youngest AD in Division I.

Bowlsby will succeed Chalmers "Bump" Elliott, who is to retire the post Aug. 1. Elliott announced his retirement Feb. 22 after 20 years of distinguished service at the UI.

"He's one of the grand gentlemen of the business," Bowlsby said of the outgoing Iowa AD. "I am very much humbled by the opportunity as his successor."

Reports leaked out of Fresno, Calif., late Wednesday that Cunningham had been offered the job. Those reports were confirmed by Rawlings at Friday's press conference, but Rawlings said Cunningham decided to turn down the Iowa post because of personal reasons.

Bowlsby was on his way home for lunch late Friday morning when his office phoned to tell him the UI President's office had called, giving Bowlsby a pretty good idea that he would be offered the job.

"University presidents call with good news and search committee chairs usually call with bad news," said Bowlsby, who hadn't given up hope on the Iowa job after hearing about the offer to Cunningham. Which is understandable considering the secrecy surrounding Cunningham's reaction to the offer.

Cunningham spent the entire day and night Thursday struggling with the decision and finally decided to stay at Fresno State at 6 a.m. Friday morning. Early in the search process, Cunningham said he was happy at Fresno State and that it would take a "special" situation to pull him away. He said Iowa was just that special situation.

"I did have a sincere interest in Iowa," Cunningham said at a press conference in Fresno on Friday. He said some "unfinished business" finally weighted his decision in favor of staying at Fresno State.

Some of that unfinished business included the expansion of the Bulldogs' football stadium and the possibility of building a new basketball arena.

But in Iowa City there was little talk about a "second choice" as Bowlsby, accompanied by his wife and four children, attended the press conference at Carver-Hawkeye smiling ear-to-ear.

"In eight years at the University of Northern Iowa Bob Bowlsby has built strength across the board in their athletic program," Rawlings said.

The AD job was probably the last thing on Bowlsby's mind when he started his first job at Iowa as a pop vendor at Kinnick Stadium.

"I think it was the first job I ever got paid for," Bowlsby said.

New Iowa AD Bob Bowlsby.

Certainly Bowlsby was paid less as a pop vendor than the $95,000 he'll receive as Iowa's AD — $15,000 less than what Iowa reportedly offered Cunningham.

Bowlsby received his Master's degree in recreation administration from the UI in 1978. He went on to become Iowa's assistant director of recreational services before moving upstate to take an INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Michael Jordan's bruised big toe is nothing compared to the hurt the Chicago Bulls are putting on the Los Angeles Lakers.

Jordan, playing with a slit cut out of the front of his highly commercialized sneakers, shook off the effects of the injured toe on his right foot by leading the Bulls to a 97-82 victory Sunday night and a 3-1 lead in the NBA Finals.

"Right now, the toe feels good," Jordan said. "That's what winning will do for you. It took me a few minutes to get over the pain and soreness, but it wasn't bad at all once I got loose."

"I didn't even dream this would happen," the Lakers' Magic Johnson said. "I was anticipating a great series, not being dominated like this."

Jordan, who later switched back to his regular shoe, led Chicago with 28 points, the 16th consecutive time he's led his team in scoring. He also had 13 assists, his third game in double figures in the Finals.

"I didn't have enough confidence in my cutting, so I went back to a good shoe for more stability," he said.

The Bulls are now one victory away from the first NBA championship in their 25-year history. The Lakers have won 11 titles, five fewer than the Boston Celtics.

"No one could have thought that we would dominate a team of the Lakers' stature," Jordan said. "Before the series started, we didn't think we would be in a three-games-to-one situation."

Vlade Divac scored 27 points, his career high as a pro, and Johnson had 22 points and 11 assists.

John Paxson scored 15 points and Horace Grant and Scottie Pippen 14 each for the Bulls, who have allowed 91.7 points a game in the playoffs.

James Worthy had 12 points for the Lakers, but did not play the final 14 minutes after aggravating the ankle injury that occurred in the Western Conference finals. Sam Perkins, the hero of the Lakers' opening game victory, missed 14 of 15 shots.

"In the second half, it got to the point where I was unable to do anything I needed to do," Worthy said. "I was doing more damage than helping the team. I'm not sure about playing (on Wednesday)."

The Lakers hit only 29.3 percent of their shots in the middle two quarters as they continued to be frustrated by Chicago's defense, which has allowed more than 100

Anderson in 8th, Backlund in 44th

It may not have been the best season for the Iowa baseball team, but that didn't keep the professional scouts away.

The Hawkeyes finished the 1991 season with a disappointing 26-28 record (11-17 and 9th in the Big Ten), but two Iowa players — junior pitcher/infielders Tom Anderson and Brett Backlund — were chosen in the Major League Baseball draft earlier this June.

Anderson was taken in the eighth round by the Houston Astros, and after several days of negotiations, he opted to forego his senior season at Iowa and signed with the club.

"It feels pretty good," Anderson said. "I was hoping to go in the top 15 rounds, and if it was in the top 10, I was pretty sure I'd sign."

Anderson, who would only say he was happy with the terms of his contract, is at mini-camp in Kissimmee, Fla., this week and is expected to report to the Astros' rookie team in Auburn, N.Y., after that.

Anderson was 7-5 with a 3.92 ERA this season. The right-hander threw 82.7 innings in 13 starts.

Backlund's case wasn't as clear-cut. The right-hander was contacted by the Cincinnati Reds just before the 19th round and told by the scout that they wanted to take him in that round. But the Reds offered him just a year of school or the cash equivalent and Backlund, having two years of school left, turned them down.

"He told me that they had wanted to take me in the top 15 rounds," Backlund said. "But I had talked to them before the draft and said I didn't know what it would take for me to sign. So I guess they didn't want to take a chance."

The Reds used their pick in the 44th round to draft Backlund, but are now waiting to see if they sign their higher picks before making him an offer.

Backlund is on his way to Alaska today to compete for the Fairbanks Gold Panners in the Alaska Central Baseball League, but will stay in touch with Reds in the next few weeks.

"He told me they'd be in touch in about a week and a half to two weeks," Backlund said. "I'll just have to wait and see what they offer before I make any decisions."

Backlund, the Hawkeyes ace this season, was 8-4 with a 3.88 ERA. He struck out 94 batters to lead the Big Ten and break the Iowa record of 84, set in 1977 by current Kansas City Royal hurler Mike Boddicker. Backlund also led the conference in innings pitched with 102.

Backlund is also a decent hitting prospect, having helped offensively with a .300 batting average in conference play this year. He also hit four home runs, five doubles and a triple for a .537 slugging percentage.

Prime Time drafts on Wednesday

James Arnold
 The Daily Iowan

Wednesday marks the beginning of prime time for Iowa City when twelve locally sponsored teams draft from a pool of players including past, present and future Hawkeyes.

NBA players Brad Lohaus of the Milwaukee Bucks, Bobby Hansen of the Sacramento Kings, Matt Bullard of the Houston Rockets and Les Jensen of the Golden State Warriors are scheduled to see some action this summer, as well as twelve of Tom Davis's 1990-1991 NCAA qualifying team.

League organizer Randy Larson said seeing former Iowa greats mix it up on the court is not the only reason to attend the games. He said Wade Lookingbill and Paul Lusk will be making their first appearances since going down with injuries last season.

"Lusk has been playing a little," Larson said. "People will be able to see them make their recoveries."

All of the current Hawkeye basketball players will compete, Larson said, except for redshirt freshman Phil Chime and sophomore Jim Bartles. Acie Earl, Val Barnes, Kevin Smith and others will see their first Prime Time action this summer after having scheduling problems in previous summers.

"Acie will be there so people can see how he is progressing, and all the other guys, too," Larson said.

Others expected to be drafted on Wednesday include former Hawkeyes Bill Jones, Kent Hill and Al Lorenzen, former Iowa State Cyclones Tom Scheffer and Mike Bourne and former Northern Iowa Panthers Troy Mullenberg and Steve Phylife.

Area high school preps usually fill out the rosters. Russ Milard, Iowa's only recruit for next season and a product of Cedar Rapids Washington, is expected to play in the league, but scheduling problems may keep him off the court this summer.

"The whole idea is to get more structured sets of games," Larson said. "The games are generally pretty competitive."

The average attendance in the past, according to Larson, has been around 250 per game, but as many as 1,000 have filled the gym at City High here in Iowa City.

"We have always had pretty good crowds," Larson said. "I think it helps the level of play. It makes it tougher to ease up."

Prime Time games are played on Sundays, Wednesdays and alternating Fridays at the City High gym. The league has expanded the number of games to three per night and admission is free.

Last August, Fitzpatrick's took the title game from Hills Bank 115-111. Hawkeye Troy Skinner, former UNI player Nick Nurse and Frank Molak from Missouri-Kansas City outshot a team that featured Lohaus and former Hawkeye Jeff Moe.

Former Iowa pitcher Tom Anderson was an eighth-round pick by the Houston Astros in the Major League Baseball draft last week. He signed with the club, foregoing his senior year with the Hawkeyes.

NEW YORK — Gulf war veterans got a welcome home hug Monday from New York City: an embrace that included a parade through Canyon of Heroes, hearty cheers, few jeers and tons of confetti.

"I've been in seven parades since February," said Air Force Sgt. Kelly Young, "and I've never seen people on roofs, people in trees, people on top of cars, people hanging out of windows, toilet paper flying. . . Nothing can top this."

Hundreds of thousands of people lined the 18-block route from Battery past City Hall to participate in "Operation Welcome Home."

Festival

Theater plays, concerts in the library and jazz bands plus lunch crowd are only some during the Iowa Festival.

"The aim of the festival is unique and very talented people," Marcie Oltman, arts coordinator for the Area Chamber of Commerce, said. "The festival will run June 8 and will run through June 15."

Iowa Festival serves as a venue for artistic programs into one event.

The festival emerged as an annual weeklong event held in the Mall highlighting local talent. The Art Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, local organizations joined together
