56% of Iowans oppose Harkin bid UI prof says campaign may tarnish legitimacy of caucuses

Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

Recent poll results showing Iowans' unfavorable reaction to Sen. Tom Harkin's presidential ambitions may not dissuade him from running — but even a favorable reaction won't help him in a national campaign, according to a local expert on politics and polls.

The results of the poll conducted for five Iowa television stations showed 56 percent of those surveyed opposed Harkin seeking the nomination, with only 29 percent in favor.

"It doesn't necessarily mean that they think he's not qualified," said Arthur Miller, a UI professor of political science and public polling expert. "But he was just re-elected to the Senate, so people would probably rather have him representing them in the Senate instead of going around the country running for president."

The same problem, Miller said, plagued Michael Dukakis in 1988, when many Massachusetts residents felt his presidential campaign distracted him from the state's problems.

Miller acknowledged the possibility that Harkin will run and win big in the Iowa caucuses next February. But victory in his home state wouldn't mean automatic success in subsequent contests.

"He's not going to gain a great deal of momentum from winning Iowa, since it would be what everyone expected," Miller said. "Only if someone is able to come from behind, and win unexpectedly, is it a boost."

Harkin's candidacy could have a detrimental effect on the Iowa caucuses themselves, said Miller.

"The other candidates might say, 'Well, he's a favorite son, so out of collegial respect for him we'll just pass up the caucuses and let him have Iowa.' I would be more concerned about that than about the possibility of any of them trying to prove they could beat Harkin in his home state."

Miller is director of the Iowa Social Science Institute, founder of the The Heartland Poll and former director of American National Election Studies. He is co-author of "American Politics in the Heartland" (1990).

coincided with the start of court-martial proceedings against Sgt. David Bobbitt and others for desertion and missing movement that were held at Marine Camp Lejeune.

Scanning the area where he had heard the movement, Sergeant David Bobbitt turned back to his men and signaled. The Fox Company platoon rose from their cover and advanced in small systematic waves, positioning themselves behind him in a somewhat staggered V-formation. It was a cold morning and the Marines were on the edge of a grove of trees that lowered down to a small clearing and a low-lying swale. Behind the swale's high grass was some activity, a muffled rustling sound, that Bobbitt's eyes strained to make out. He could hear the sound but couldn't make out anything in the grass. As the last of his men in the back perimeter fell into place, the activity stopped and the grove turned silent. Whatever was hidden in the high grass was now aware of the platoon's presence. Whatever was hidden in the high

Military dependents, natives flee Pinatubo

Robert H. Ried
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — The U.S. military began removing all 20,000 dependents from the Philippines on Sunday, and tens of thousands of Filipinos trekked along ash-clogged roads to escape Mount Pinatubo's devastation.

At least 56 people were killed since the volcano began erupting June 9 for the first time in 600 years. Several minor eruptions were reported Sunday, but scientists said they no longer feared a cataclysmic explosion in which the mountain could blow itself apart.

Thousands evacuated in the Philippines as Mount Pinatubo blows. Page 5.

The exodus of refugees through the rice-producing region of central Luzon was reminiscent of scenes from World War II. Thousands of cars, buses and trucks, most of them caked with sticky ash, inched along jammed roads toward Manila.

The vehicles were flanked by endless columns of refugees carrying children and bundles of supplies on their backs. Some rode water buffaloes or ox-carts, but thousands were on foot. Others, including the elderly and children, hitched rides on the backs of commercial trucks.

The U.S. military had announced plans to send families of Clark Air Base personnel back to the United States to relieve congestion at Subic Bay naval base, where they were taken June 10.

On Sunday, however, the evacuation was expanded to include families from Subic Bay and the adjacent Cubi Point naval air station because of damage caused by the tons of volcanic ash spewed out by Mount Pinatubo's thunderous eruptions Saturday.

Navy officials said about 100 buildings, many of them temporary warehouses, were damaged by falling ash. A Filipino civilian and the daughter of an American enlisted man were killed when a roof collapsed late Saturday at Subic, officials said.

About 900 spouses and children of Air Force personnel sailed Sunday from Subic Bay aboard the cruiser USS Arkansas and two frigates, the USS Rodney M. Davis and the USS Curtis, Navy spokesman Lt. Cdr. Kevin Mukri said.

They were bound for Cebu, about 350 miles south of Manila, where they were scheduled to board planes for the United States. Airports on Luzon were closed due to the ash, which can cause jet engines to fail.

Protesters take to IC streets, clash with choice supporters

Steve Cruse
The Daily Iowan

About 150 anti-abortion demonstrators marched through downtown Iowa City and confronted pro-choice supporters at local reproductive health clinics Saturday morning.

Police were on hand along the march route, which included stops at the Family Planning Clinic in the UI's Westlawn Building, the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St. and the Planned Parenthood clinic, 2 S. Linn St. No arrests were made.

The anti-abortion marchers reached the Emma Goldman Clinic around 11 a.m. and were greeted by symbolic coat hangers tossed in their path by those in front of the clinic. The protesters stood on the sidewalk in front of the building for about 15 minutes.

While there was some verbal sparring between the two sides, for the most part people let their banners and pickets do the talking: "Abortion: America's Holocaust" and "Who Speaks for Unborn Women?"

On one side, and "Nostalgic Menopausal Women for Choice" and a sandwich board reading "Private Property: Pseudo-Christians Keep

Out" on the other.

The anti-abortion demonstrators sang several songs, including "Amazing Grace" and the national anthem — during which the pro-choice supporters joined in.

A brief scuffle broke out toward the end of the demonstration as several abortion protesters rushed the clinic doors in an attempt to enter the building and were blocked by clinic employees and other pro-choice supporters. After being ordered by police to leave the premises, the marchers proceeded to the Planned Parenthood clinic downtown.

Mary Manix, center supervisor at Planned Parenthood, said the protesters did not attempt to enter the building there. Though the anti-abortion demonstration fell short of its anticipated 500-800 participants, it did manage to block traffic on Iowa Avenue downtown after leaving Planned Parenthood.

The demonstration was organized by the Iowa Coalition for Traditional Values, a local anti-abortion group. Larry Johnson, the group's leader, said the march had been instigated by two recent local developments.

"Planned Parenthood has opened another killing field in Iowa City,"

During Clinic Access Day at the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, 227 N. Dubuque St., about 150 anti-abortion demonstrators picketed the clinic

Saturday, blocking the clinic for about 15 minutes. The Access Day was designed to promote abortion rights and safer sex.

Johnson said, referring to the recently opened downtown clinic. "There's a tremendous profit in killing babies, and they wanted to get in on the action."

Wisconsin Democrats give Harkin a warm reception

Jodie DeJonge
The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Wisconsin Democrats gave Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin four standing ovations Saturday during their state convention, shouting "92, 92" as he left the stage.

Harkin, who is expected to make a Labor Day announcement of his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1992, told delegates that voters are "fed up with Reagan-Bush-Quayle government of greed, selfishness and privilege."

"We need a president who knows that the threat to national security is not halfway across the world but halfway down the street," he said.

Harkin spoke to more than 700 people who gathered for a speech-packed convention that featured four potential presidential candidates.

The audience included placard-waving supporters of prospective candidates to run next year against Sen. Robert Kastner, R-Wis.

Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, also looked upon as a presidential candidate, spoke to delegates from a balloon-strewn downtown park.

Clinton, 44, denied contemplating a presidential run.

Candidate deficit hurts Iowans

State businesses could lose $50 million in potential profits

Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — Ron Hoyt sits amid the trappings of presidential politics and tries to put the best face on the candidate drought afflicting Iowa's cottage campaign industry.

"We're not crying about it," said Hoyt, who runs a printing business. "We're not going to starve to death."

Still, Hoyt wistfully recalls the days when people named Gephardt and Biden and Dukakis lined up to get their views and names before Iowa activists.

That meant signs and banners and brochures and leaflets, all music to a printer's ear.

"We printed a lot of position papers, on agriculture, on aging, on whatever... they wanted to have a position on," Hoyt said. "Last time, we probably did about $150,000 in gross business with the candidates. This time we'd probably be lucky to have done $200 worth."

It's a familiar complaint.

"We're set, ready to go and waiting for the candidates," said Morris Knopf, a lawyer who heads the Iowa Caucus Project.

"There is some disappointment that it isn't happening," he said. "I think there are people at all levels who miss the opportunity to be there."

There's more than civics lessons and good government at work in Iowa's presidential caucuses, set for February. As the nation's first test of presidential strength, those caucuses have grown to be part of the state's culture.

In past years, big-name politicians routinely trooped through the state, bringing hordes of reporters and aides and campaign staffers who rented cars and hotel rooms and kept bartenders busy.

Some estimated the economic impact to the state at more than $50 million.

This presidential election season, however, the effort by politicians is conspicuous by its absence.

Former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas has flitted through the state a couple of times, as has Virginia Gov. Douglas Wilder and a handful of others mentioned as potential Democratic candidates.

It doesn't qualify as the sort of campaign deluge Iowans have grown to expect. President Bush's popularity and the testing of the Democratic waters by home-state Sen. Tom Harkin have put a damper on all that.

The Caucus Project, the brainchild of the Greater Des Moines Chamber of Commerce, is designed to serve as a sort of civic cheerleader promoting the virtues of the state's largest city in the hope some visiting press corps members will write about it.

It has yet to open an office.

Regents support UI budget

Ann Riley
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa state Board of Regents is expected to approve the preliminary UI 1992 fiscal year budget at their monthly meeting Wednesday in Ames.

The $265,971,906 proposed budget would support key areas in the UI's strategic planning, such as improving undergraduate education and utilizing more full-time faculty to teach undergraduate courses.

Consistent with Gov. Terry Branstad's legislation, the regents plan to extend current merit system pay plans and suspend all step increases and salary adjustments until further funds are provided by the state.

The proposed budget is $662,712 less than the revised 1991 fiscal year budget, and more cuts are possible. The regents' proposal states that if a 2.5 percent across-the-board state budget cut were enacted, the UI budget would be reduced by an additional $4.4 million.

The board is also expected to approve a 4 percent increase in rates at the UI Hospitals and Clinics and a 6 percent rate increase for the Psychiatric Hospital and the Hospital School.

The three regent universities will also present reports regarding capital improvement projects to the board Wednesday. The Iowa state legislature provided $20 million in Academic Building Revenue Bonds for fire and environmental safety precautions at the UI, Iowa State and University of Northern Iowa.

The UI will propose spending $2,798,050 to replace the roof of the Main Library, the Chemistry-Botany Building, Van Allen Hall, Hardin Health Sciences Library, the Music Building, Bowen Science Building, the Dental Science Building and the Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Center.

In addition, the UI earmarked $2.5 million for modifications to the Water Plant that would prevent sludge from water purification treatment from discharging into the Iowa River.

The regents will also vote on the appointment of Derek Willard as interim vice-president for research. Willard has served as associate vice-president for research since 1984, and if approved will receive a $105,000 salary effective June 1.

Also slated for discussion at Wednesday's meeting is discussion of the UI's phased retirement plan. The regents will vote on whether to discontinue or modify the plan for fall of 1991.

An Iowa City Press-Citizen vending machine was set on fire by an Iowa City man June 14 at 2:54 a.m. at the New Pioneer Co-op Fresh Food Market parking lot, 22 S. Van Buren St., according to Iowa City Police Department records.

Robert M. Flax, 21, 112 E. Bloomington St., was arrested and charged with third-degree arson, records said.

The fire was started by a lighted match thrown into the vending machine, said fire department records.

Ten to 12 newspapers were destroyed and approximately $100 in damage was done to the vending machine before flames were extinguished by the fire department. There was no damage done to the Co-op building.

Law prof to fill interim positions

The Daily Iowan

UI law Professor Gregory Williams has been appointed to interim positions of associate vice president for academic affairs and director of Opportunity at Iowa.

The appointments are effective July 1 and will continue until a personnel search is conducted, most likely this fall, said UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Peter Nathan. Filling the positions vacated with the recent retirement of Philip Hubbard was a university priority to continue the momentum generated by Hubbard, he said.

"Greg Williams has done a splendid job working with (Dean) Bill Hines to diversify the faculty and students in the College of Law. I am convinced he can assist us in academic affairs to better work with the collegiate deans to achieve the same goals for the university," Nathan said.

"I am flattered to be selected to follow in the footsteps of Dr. Hubbard. He's made tremendous contributions to the university," Williams said, adding that he plans to continue the policies and practices established by his predecessor in the Opportunity at Iowa office. It is charged with facilitating the recruitment and retention of minority students and faculty, and enhancing cultural diversity at the UI.

grass would change Sergeant Bobbitt's life forever.

After a long pause Bobbitt stood up and, with his gun held out in front of his body, he began to move through the grove in a crouch, over trot, serpentine around the trees, side-stepping, his eyes completely fixed on the high grass as he neared the clearing.

CAMP LEJEUNE MARINE BASE, N.C. — At 3 a.m. on April 17, the night before Bobbitt's final day of court-martial proceedings, Private Marquis Leacock jumped down from his bunk, screamed, then sprinted full throttle through the squad bay toward the end of the barracks. When he reached the wall he turned around and sprinted back, crying out as his bare feet carried him the length of the barracks.

His incoherent cries echoed off of the barracks' walls and sent chills down the backs of the men in his platoon. No one stopped him, not even the Marine at the desk on fire-watch. They knew what was happening and just prayed that he'd get a grip.

Bobbitt, who had earlier spent most of the evening giving away valuables ("Who wants my Walkman? Who wants my Brylcreem?"), sadly looked on from under his blankets at the "poor skinny Marine" whose desertion trial was scheduled to follow his own.

"Marquis was losin' it," Lance Corporal Douglas Deboer recalled later that day. "I couldn't understand what he said, but he was sure rattled, really having a tough time deciding and all. Scary."

It was a decision to take or reject a pre-trial agreement and plead guilty to desertion and missing movement, charges that carry a maximum seven-year prison term, and in extreme cases, the death penalty. Like the rest of his platoon, the problem Leacock had was that, as a conscientious objector, he felt innocent of the charges.

One week earlier Leacock was smiling when he confessed, "Y know, it's a hairy decision. A very hairy decision. Just gotta weigh out all the possibilities."

But he had changed his mind about the pre-trial agreement so many times during the two weeks before his trial that it got to be a sort of joke with the peace activists and the rest of the Marines in his CO-Deserter Platoon. One Marine said that Leacock had sent five separate faxes to his attorney in New York City within a three-hour period, each fax rescinding the previous one after an apparent "change of mind."

But it was no joke to Leacock. It became an obsession that occupied his thoughts every free minute of the day and only intensified as his trial date neared.

At reveille on his trial day Leacock was a jittery basket of nerves. Silent and sullen he stood tall during roll call, like a ticking time bomb. By 11 a.m. he was in constant motion, pacing the halls outside of Bobbitt's courtroom, stopping, turning, winding about in a North Carolina heat that forgave little movement.

"Goddammit Marquis, do you want the pre-trial or not?" Ron Kuby, his defense attorney, yelled during lunch recess. Kuby was sweating and looked exhausted from the intensity and length of Bobbitt's trial.

At 2:30 p.m., during Bobbitt's final recess, Leacock sat alone on a folding metal chair and stared down at the floor. His skinny legs were drawn up high, elbows resting on his knees, while his cupped hands covered his eyes like aviator's goggles. He was breathing in and out, short and choppy breaths, his chest pulsating like a baby sparrow's.

Mumbled fragmented words spilled out of his quivering lips in a soft, almost whining sigh, and they explained nothing except his nervous system was overloaded and misfiring. All of the projected possibilities, all of the consequences of taking either decision were spinning around in his head, out of control, twisting, contorting, bend-

"They were all around me, the bastards, like a bunch of deranged wolves. Then they started laughing. Why would anyone want to kill something like that?"

ing back on themselves, and he couldn't get a grasp of any of them.

"They ain't gon' lemme take it," he yelled and sprang up from the chair and ran through the double doors out to the main hallway. In a few seconds he ran back through the doors and said, "They ain't gon' lem fight it. Th' ain't gon' lemme..." Then he broke down and cried.

He was whisked away by some peace activists and his trial was canceled and had to be rescheduled.

One hour later the military police were escorting Sergeant Bobbitt to a van that would carry him to the Camp Lejeune brig for a 14-month sentence. He had taken the pre-trial agreement, and looked relieved the trial was all over.

"Do I hold a grudge?" Bobbitt repeated a reporter's question. "Yeah. But it's like holding a grudge against a rock. The Marines are too stupid to know what they're doing."

The clearing was a few feet ahead and Bobbitt's stride grew longer as he passed the last set of trees and tread on the soft grass. His heavy pack bounced up and down on his back and his body was sweating in the camouflage fatigues as he crossed the soft tract of land toward the swale. His eyes were still fixed on the high grass where waiting along Lejeune Boulevard for the bus parade of returning troops. Above her was a sign for Mallorie's Fine Furniture that read "GOD BLESS AMERICA! Mon-Fri 9 to 5, Sat 1 to 5" and just beyond that Lejeune Pawnshop's sign read "WELCOME HOME HEROES! Victory Sale! Up to 65 percent off and NO MONEY DOWN!"

"Right now," Hutchenson added, "I feel like we are the United States of America, and that's som'in' we ain't bin fr a right good while. This is the first time in 45 years that we welcomed home our troops, and it's about time."

Her smile turned sour when the CO's desertion trials were brought up. "I don't think that there is such a thing as a conscientious objector when we've got an all-volunteer army. This is not a 9-to-5 job being in the service, and they should think long and hard before they sign up. And I think that it's too much of a convenience that their conscience started bothering 'em once there was a threat of war and when there wasn't a threat of war it didn't bother 'em to draw their pay."

Many of the people on the highway called the CO's "cowards" or "hypocrites," while others, Marine and Navy veterans, felt ashamed of them and said they should get "booted out of the country."

"That really makes me seethe inside when I hear about it," Charles Jones said, a short, portly World War II veteran from New York with an uneven smile.

"Because hey, I put my part in and these boys put their part in, why couldn't they put their part in? You know what nobody realizes, is that every single person in these United States is here and alive and free because somebody for generations back fought for them and won."

"I'd like to see those deserters go over and see what these enemies do to the women and children. They would be so sick that they'd never say 'I won't fight again.' You wouldn't see any more conscientious objectors I tell ya," Jones added.

The movement was heard and his hands gripped his rifle tightly. Down, down, down. Hitting the cold ground. Dirt in his mouth. Looking up. Very close. Right on the edge now.

"I just got back from being over there in a hole just thinking about these guys, these CO's over here doing nothing, and it just burned me up inside," Private John West, from Cincinnati, Ohio, said the day before Bobbitt's trial started.

"Basically what it boils down to is the fact that they signed the same contract I did, of volunteering their services to uphold the duty of America, and if that duty called to kill or be killed, then you do it. Period. No ifs, ands or buts," West added.

It was an untimely week for a desertion trial. Eight Navy ships with more than 8,000 Marines returning from the Persian Gulf war had docked at Morehead City port where an estimated 100,000 people gathered to welcome them home. Thousands more lined the highway to Jacksonville, N.C. and Camp Lejeune, waving "Welcome Home Heroes" signs, American flags, and crying in an outpouring of emotion that one woman described as "the greatest moment in her life."

"I feel proud," Pat Hutchenson from Jacksonville, N.C., said while Bobbitt looked back to his platoon and signaled. A group of men ran down the incline and positioned themselves behind trees in order to cover him before he entered the swale. He got up slowly, and took a deep breath, then he stepped in, pushing the thick stalks back with his rifle, his eyes bouncing left and right, scanning, searching, waiting for whatever was hiding inside the dense vegetation. A few more feet in and he saw it.

The rest of the platoon waited for a sign from their sergeant, but Bobbitt never came out. After a minute the front group headed into the tall grass. Bobbitt was inside about five yards kneeling down in the grass petting a baby fawn shivering in the cold morning air.

"They check out what the Sarge found."

"Kill it Sarge."

"Break its neck. Bash it with your rifle."

"C'mon Sarge, grease the lil' motherfucker."

The rest of the platoon had straggled into the high grass and surrounded Bobbitt and the fawn, laughing in disbelief at their Marine Sergeant's behavior. They started closing in and poking the fawn with their rifles, so Bobbitt picked up the fawn and walked it out of the high grass and scared it away.

"They were all around me, the bastards, like a bunch of deranged wolves," Bobbitt bitterly recalled. "Then they started laughing. Why would anyone want to kill something like that? How could anyone kill something that beautiful?"

For weeks after the event Bobbitt was teased and heckled by his peers. It left him with so many questions unanswered and such a disdain for the Marine Corps that he had to be admitted to a psychiatric hospital for severe depression.

Editor's note: James Dyer is a graduate student in the UI School of Journalism. He spent over three weeks at Camp Lejeune during the first desertion trials on a grant from The National Fund for Investigative Journalism.

Summer Reading Series Live from Prairie Lights on WSUI-am 910

June 14 - Michelle Edwards, children's book author and illustrator, will read from her newest book Chicken Man. What appeals most immediately about the new book is color. "I wanted the paint to reflect the deep elemental colors of farm life; the ochres, siennas, sepias, bright yellows, reds and blues." 7 pm.

June 14 - Mary Morris, author of Nothing to Declare, Bus of Dreams and other books, will read from her latest travel account Wall to Wall: from Beijing to Berlin by Rail hailed by the Washington Post and other reviews. Said Cosmopolitan, "Morris is one gutsy woman and one fantastic writer." 8 pm.

June 21 - Paul Cohen and Shannon Smith, this year's winners of the annual Prairie Lights Fiction and Poetry Contests, will read from their prize winning works. 8 pm.

June 28 - Ocala Wings will read from her first novel Singin' the Sun Up, "a blending of cultures, flavors, textures and scents that encourages a deep and abiding love for the Earth." 8 pm.

July 12 - Evelyn Birkby, hostess of Shenandoah, Iowa's Neighboring on the Air: Cooking with KMA Radio Homemakers will conduct one of her regular programs. Portrayed in a recent New Yorker article, this program is also detailed in a book length study just published by University of Iowa Press. 8 pm.

July 19 - The Jamais Vu Papers will be read by its authors, Wim and Pat Perrin. "Ain't jamais been a book so new-view and nouveau view-riche with probable realities in the cybernetic world of Science, Myth and Magic," Timothy Leary. 8pm.

July 26 - James A. Autry, poet and executive at Meredith Publishing in Des Moines, will read from Nights Under a Tin Roof: Recollections of a Southern Boyhood and Life After Mississippi. 8 pm.

All Prairie Lights Readings are free and are followed by author signing sessions. The readings are held on the second floor of Prairie Lights and are broadcast live on WSUI-am 910. It is the only regularly broadcast live reading series in the United States.

As Virginia Woolf might have said about being read to: "It stings us wide awake and fixes us in a trance, which is not sleep but rather an intensification of life."

Political pandering

Last Friday marked the end of a 100-day period George Bush gave Congress to pass his transportation and crime bills. Not surprisingly, Congress did not meet this deadline, but Bush is wrong to think that this has cleared him of blame for inaction on the domestic front. His 100-day ultimatum was nothing more than a media stunt designed to divert attention from his own dismal domestic agenda.

Since taking office, Bush has made no bones about the fact that he prefers dealing with foreign policy rather than domestic issues. As president, he has earned a reputation as an international politician, constantly globetrotting to meet with foreign heads of state. As a result of this focus on matters beyond America's shores, a number of problems here at home have not been tackled by the president. Now, with an election looming and post-Desert Storm euphoria waning, Bush realizes his vulnerability on the domestic front. To divert attention from this situation Bush established the 100-day deadline for Congress in hopes of making it appear that Congress was to blame for the dearth of domestic legislation. Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell wondered aloud why Bush had suddenly chosen to deal with these issues after 872 days in office and called the ultimatum a cynical political maneuver.

The president's action leaves little room for other interpretations. To remain dormant on domestic legislation for two and a half years and suddenly expect Congress to rubber stamp major legislation is unrealistic. Such a feat was achieved by Franklin Roosevelt, but the current state of the nation bears little resemblance to that of the 1930s. In short, the practice of issuing deadlines for congressional passage of legislation is inconsistent with the way our government functions and the way a president should act.

In attempting to cover up his lack of leadership on the domestic front, the president has instead highlighted this weakness. Rather than drawing arbitrary lines in the sand and daring Congress not to cross, Bush and his advisers would do well to concentrate their energies on working with Congress to develop and pass quality legislation on crime, transportation and the myriad other problems within America's borders.

CLARK AIR BASE

A dormant relic

It has become increasingly clear that the United States must devote more money toward domestic problems and less on foreign affairs; the United States cannot continue to police the entire world community while preserving a decent standard of living for its citizens. Therefore, opportunities to shift resources away from Cold War entanglements should not be squandered.

Currently, the United States is negotiating with the Philippines over a new lease on Clark Air Base. The United States was prepared to pay $360 million for a 10-year lease, while the Filipino government was asking $825 million for a seven-year lease.

But because of the recent eruption of Mount Pinatubo, this could all change. Clark is now closed, and nobody is sure when conditions will warrant a safe return. (Volcanologists say future eruptions could occur at anytime or Pinatubo might remain dormant for many years.)

At one time, Clark Air Base was an important part of the Pacific security structure. But the utility of the base is now questionable. As The New York Times reported, there are no longer any American jet fighters assigned to Clark and American officials admit that many of the functions performed at the base could easily be transferred to other military installations.

In addition to these factors, many Filipinos find the American military presence unacceptable. While the Aquino government relies on the American military for financial and political support, anti-American sentiment continues to erupt because of resentment over the lack of access to the large tract of land occupied by Clark.

The United States cannot afford the cost of maintaining Clark Air Base, especially in view of the uncertainty posed by Mount Pinatubo. Rather than wasting money to retain an option for the base, the United States should close this Cold War relic and be thankful that world events no longer dictate the expenditure of such vast resources on a base situated halfway around the world.

Choose to act or lose your choice

I leaned against a sign in front of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women on Saturday in the aftermath of an unsuccessful "pro-life" attempt to gain entrance to the facility using a 3-year-old child as a human battering ram. I experienced a road-to-Damascus epiphany, a rare moment of supreme understanding. These people, I realized, will stop at nothing to force their point on the rest of us. Today's column is about why they won't go away, and what the rest of us should do about them. (I've stopped referring to "pro-lifers" as anything other than "them," denoting an unusual but very emphatic point of exasperation on my part.)

About the little person caught in the middle: She was pushed there by her mother (who was, as the wry saying goes, "right behind" her). A group of them sprang from an illegal, stopped position in front of the clinic in an attempt to bust through the locals positioned in front of the door. This woman apparently has greatness in mind for her offspring. She thrust the youngster ahead of their approaching ranks, causing the child to be wedged, horribly but with a symbolism I found most arresting, between us and them. By way of editorial comment, I hereby declare my belief that this woman will indeed be richly rewarded for her actions — in the pits of Hell.

They shoved, they pushed, they yelled and got yelled at, and finally they sat. Only at that point did the police move in to make the ritual announcement that they were trespassing on private property, had been asked to leave and would be arrested if they did not obey. They left. We stayed, sharing one nervous smoke among several people. This is what happens all the time. See how silly it all is?

I looked around when they stalled their march. They clearly blocked access to the front door of the clinic. The police didn't flinch. I thought of Iowa City's many fine downtown merchants who operate legal places of business under the protection of local authorities. If a group targeted Ewers Men's Store, for example, to protest working conditions in the Bolivian textile industry, how long would their presence be tolerated? For how many minutes would their rights to assembly and free speech be allowed to impinge on the right of a business to remain open and free of obstruction? Quicker than you can say baby-killer, the protesters would be removed. Bet on it. But it didn't happen that way at the Goldman Clinic last weekend. If I was an Iowa City merchant, I'd abandon abortion politics and think of the precedent that was set. Your business' right to remain open without hindrance was not upheld by local law enforcement. That right is apparently not guaranteed in this town. Granted, the time span was short and the issue here is one that inflames a good deal of passion, but the best way to defuse that passion is to meet it with a chill blast. So here it is: The Emma Goldman Clinic has as much right to dispense its widely varied services as Ewers has to sell men's socks. Any obstruction to one is an insult and a threat to the other. Think about it.

Kim Painter

Then do more than think. This is important because last week, while we were all getting a life, they had some red letter days. It is now true that federally funded clinics can lose dollars if physicians do not read verbatim from a script that says, among other things, that "abortion is not an appropriate method of family planning" and denies referral to any abortion provider. Now this is clever. Who's stupid enough to use abortion as a method of family planning? The only people addled enough to think of it as such are those willing to martyr their living children to stop it. It's an option. It's an option of last resort, typically, and one that women should always have the right to choose.

It is also true that they revealed the name of a youngster (14) who had utilized a clinic's abortion services. This act was so reprehensible in nature that I, for one, possess an insufficient vocabulary of rage to elaborate on it.

I believe with all my heart in the options afforded within a free society. I also adhere to its numerous obligations, one of which is compromise. A good faith effort to reach a workable solution to issues of reproductive health care is all I want from these people. And I don't get it. I don't see it anywhere. I look, and I look all over for it. I see us come up with RU486. I hear them say "abortion is not the 'abortion pill.'" Norplant is offered. They say "no." Preventive tactics, then. If abortion is unacceptable to them, can we work together to render it unnecessary? Sex education, with frank discussion of reproductive facts and sexual responsibility, seems a good place to start. They refuse.

There are words in our language for abandoning established rules of discourse, for turning one's back on constructive compromise. When we see such behavior exhibited in our cultures, we call it religious extremism. When we see people attempt to impose peculiar religious beliefs on the majority, and when they use violence and personal intimidation to silence opponents, we call it terrorism.

I spent seven solid minutes face-to-face with terrorism Saturday at the Emma Goldman Clinic. They have rendered themselves so high we can't get over them, so low we can't get under them and so big we can't get around them. There's only one place left to get with them. Right in their faces. That's where I intend to spend a good deal of my time in the coming months. If you have chips to call in with city council members, clergy or commerce organizations, now's the time to call them all in. We'd better start getting tired of this sick behavior. We'd better start calling it what it is.

I know that not all people who oppose abortion are willing to break windows, bones and social contracts to stop it. But many are. And they are terrorists. Our law enforcement resources, our political and legal machinery, and our personal energy should focus intently on eliminating this threat so the rest of us can continue the search for solutions unhindered. The only way to do that is to be firm enough to convince them that they haven't got a chance. And we'd better be convincing: Our freedom depends on it.

Kim Painter's column appears Mondays on the Viewpoints page.

A piece of the wreck — Chicago style

One of these days, Tommy is going to be a success. Right now he's only a flunky messenger at a Chicago law firm. But he's going to rise above that because he has that rare quality: He knows an opportunity when he sees it.

Such as the other morning. Tommy happened to be nearby when a city bus and a truck collided. Nobody was killed, but about 18 passengers were banged up.

What did Tommy do? Did he stand there on the curb and gawk, the way most people do when they see an accident? Or just shrug and go about his business?

You bet he didn't. Tommy went into action. No, he didn't rush aboard and try to rescue someone or anything like that. The firemen were already there taking care of the injured.

What Tommy did was slip into the bus through the side door, flop into a seat and begin groaning as if in excruciating pain.

"We saw him," one of the amused firemen said later. "He came sneaking in the back while we were taking people off through the front door. He was a pretty good actor, too."

Although they knew he was faking, the firemen treated him as if he were really injured. Tommy moaned and groaned all the way to the hospital.

The doctors gave him some pain pills, and Tommy took the rest of the day off from work and went home to rest and, presumably, ponder the size of his personal injury lawsuit.

When he phoned and told him that the firemen had seen him creeping aboard the bus, he just said:

"Hmmm. It must have been somebody else." Well, that's possible. As any cop or fireman will tell you, at any big accident involving public transportation, the injury list just keeps growing.

"I remember when I was at a train crash a few years ago," a policeman told me. "There were dozens of people jumping from the other platform, trying to get into the wrecked train. It was an amazing sight.

"Another time, I saw a cab get rear-ended with a couple of little old ladies in it. These ladies were just sitting there waiting for the police to come and make out a report, and then these guys who had been on the sidewalk and saw the accident jumped into the cab and started holding their necks and moaning. They almost pushed the old ladies out into the street."

Mike Royko

A fireman recalled an accident on an elevated train.

"We had a ladder that was kind of hard to maneuver, and I was trying to get it up. There were a few spectators standing there on the sidewalk, and I asked them to give me a hand with it.

"So a few of the guys give me a hand and I climb up and I go in the train, helping some of the people out.

"I'm up there a little while, and I see this guy stretched out over the seat like he's close to death. And it's one of the guys who helped me put up the ladder.

"I told him, 'Hey, clown, get out of here.' He gets up and walks out. But he says to me, 'You'll hear from my attorney.'"

But for initiative, you can't beat the crowd that was in a scruffy tavern the day a car slammed into a bus right in front of the place.

A bus supervisor who was there said, "You never saw a tavern clear out like that. They were coming out in droves and trying to get on the bus or lying down in the street. One minute they were all inside, sitting on bar stools and drinking. The next minute they were outside, flat on their backs, holding their necks and yelling, 'Whiplash, I got whiplash.'"

"Another time I arrived at the scene of an elevated accident, and I couldn't believe what I was seeing. People were actually shimmying up the structure to get in on the accident. They could have broken their necks to fake a broken neck."

Is it worth the effort? Well, somewhere out there is a guy I knew years ago when he was having trouble making the rent. I'm told he is now a millionaire.

I was sure he'd do OK the day he showed up wearing a neck brace. He said he'd been sitting in his car, waiting for the light to change when he glanced in his rear-view mirror and saw a couple in the Cadillac behind him having a quarrel.

He also saw that the car was creeping forward, but the driver, distracted by his conversation, wasn't paying attention.

When the Cadillac's bumper touched his bumper, he was ready. His door snapped open and he went flying into the street, writhing with agony.

He phoned his brother-in-law, an attorney, from the emergency room and the lawsuit was filed within the week.

I don't know if that started him on his road to financial success.

But it was an early indication that he had — what shall we call it? — the right stuff. Chicago style.

Mount Pinatubo continues to erupt Sunday but at a much less intensity than in previous days. At least four volcano-related tremors rocked Manila and western Luzon, but there were no reports of damage.

Raymundo Punongbayan, director of the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology, said that the effects had not been as great as had been feared.

But Rolando Rimando, a scientist at the institute, said the volcano was still in its "eruptive" phase and would continue to pose a danger.

Fears of a gigantic explosion increased after scientists discovered a nearly two-mile fissure in the south side of the volcano between two craters.

Punongbayan said he might recommend reducing the 25-mile danger zone around the volcano. He would wait until an aerial inspection of the volcano, possible Monday.

On Sunday, the government evacuated the cities of Olongapo, San Fernando and Angeles.

Pledge-a-Picketer fundraising campaign which solicits donations based on the number of individuals who picket the clinic each month. Clinic Access Day was organized in response to the anti-abortion march which had been announced earlier in the week. Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic, said Saturday's Clinic Access Day may be the "first annual" such event.

"We've become more and more concerned as abortion clinics have come under attack," Sand said. "Clinics that provide abortions are a key component to the pro-choice movement."

At least four volcano-related earthquakes rocked Manila and southwestern Luzon, but there were no reports of damage.

An earthmover clears a fallen tree off the main street of Olongapo, 50 miles northwest of Manila, Saturday morning. Trees and utility poles fell to the ground from piling volcano ash.

Raymundo Punongbayan, director of the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology, said portions of the volcano had broken off during Saturday's eruptions but the effects had not been as grave as had been feared.

But Rolando Rimando, a scientist at the institute, said the volcano was still in its "eruptive stage" and would continue to pose a danger.

On Sunday, the government began evacuating the cities of Olongapo, San Fernando and Angeles, but washed-out bridges, ash-clogged highways and a lack of transport slowed the effort.

Officials said they had only about 300 buses and trucks to move more than 500,000 people in the three cities. Tens of thousands took to the roads on their own to seek haven farther from the volcano.

RPN television reported that 100,000 refugees arrived in Manila alone.

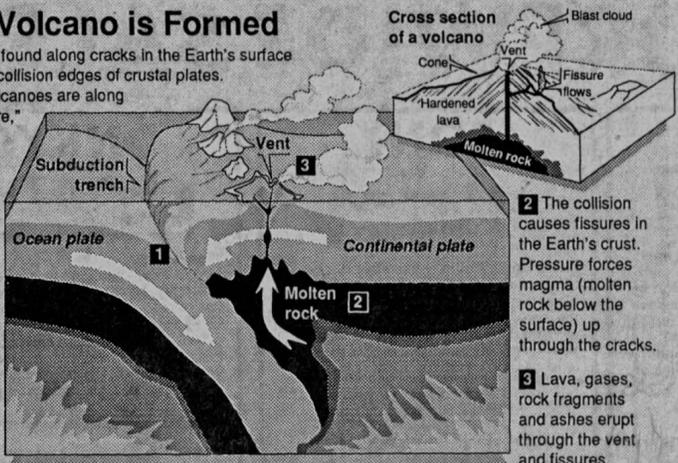

Fortunato de Hora, director of the Office of Civil Defense, said it was impossible to determine how many people had fled their homes but that the number must be "in the hundreds of thousands."

How a Volcano is Formed

Volcanoes are found along cracks in the Earth's surface and along the collision edges of crustal plates. Most active volcanoes are along the "Ring of Fire," the boundary that forms the Pacific plate.

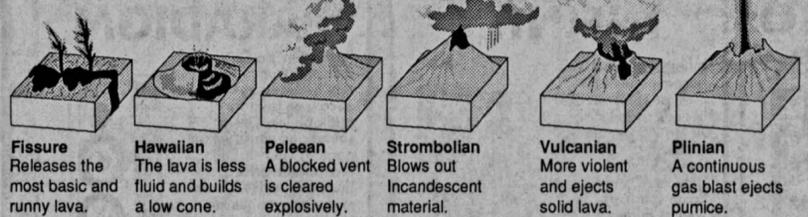

1 A subduction zone is created when an ocean plate crashes against a continental plate, and is pushed or "subducted" underneath.

2 The collision causes fissures in the Earth's crust. Pressure forces magma (molten rock below the surface) up through the cracks.
 3 Lava, gases, rock fragments and ashes erupt through the vent and fissures.

Some forms of eruptions

Many volcanoes tend to discharge liquid lava in their youth and erupt explosively as they age.

Fissure Releases the most basic and runny lava.
Hawaiian The lava is less fluid and builds a low cone.
Peleean A blocked vent is cleared explosively.
Strombolian Blows out incandescent material.
Vulcanian More violent and ejects solid lava.
Plinian A continuous gas blast ejects pumice.

India's Congress Party regaining voter support

Arthur Max
The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — The Congress Party appeared to be heading back to power Sunday as election returns indicated voters had become disillusioned with the two ineffective governments that replaced it.

Sympathy for the party's assassinated leader, former Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, was also credited for the party's poll success.

Early returns indicated the Congress Party will fall short of a majority and need to find partners for a coalition government. But unlike the 1989 election when it faced a united opposition, no other alternative alliance was likely to emerge among the other factions.

The impact of Gandhi's assassination will become clear only after an analysis of the hundreds of millions of ballots in this nation of 844 million. About 40 percent of districts voted May 20, the day before Gandhi was killed. The rest of the voting was last week.

Tamil militants from Sri Lanka are suspected in the killing, in which a woman activated a bomb next to Gandhi while he campaigned in southern India.

"The traumatic death of Mr. Gandhi appears to have made a critical difference" in several states, said Jaipal Reddy, spokesman of the rival Janata Dal Party.

The election was the deadliest in India's history, with more than 290 people killed in campaign violence. Two more people were killed Sunday in Baroda, a city in Gujarat state, in rioting between Hindus and Muslims, Press Trust of India reported.

Elections in Punjab state were delayed until June 22 so that security forces from around the country could be moved there to protest voters from Sikh insurgents. Sikh militants opposed to the election killed at least 80 people Saturday in attacks on two trains.

With 47 of 511 contested seats declared, Congress won 36, the Hindu right-wing Bharatiya Janata Party won 10, and the Communist Party took 1.

India television was broadcasting results Sunday from 391 constituencies and counting indicated the Congress Party was leading in 191 of them. Smaller Congress-allied parties were leading in 11.

The Bharatiya Janata Party led in 84 constituencies, and the Janata Dal was ahead in 34. The Communist Party led in 23 and small parties allied with Janata Dal were ahead in 19 districts. Independents made up the balance.

Prannoy Roy, an election analyst for India television, predicted Congress will win about 210 seats, 13 more than in the 1989 election but 46 seats short of a majority.

In 1989, the Congress government under Gandhi lost its overwhelming parliamentary majority amid allegations that political leaders received huge kickbacks on defense contracts.

Congress was replaced by a minority government headed by V.P. Singh, who resigned 11 months later.

Bush speaks out for Chinese reform

Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — President Bush defended his renewal of trade benefits for China before an Asian-American audience Sunday, saying he was more interested in reform in Beijing than "empty feel-good rhetoric" about its human rights abuses.

"Our policy relies on an obvious fact: To influence China, one cannot isolate China," Bush said, hoping to derail plans in Congress to attach strict conditions to Beijing's trade privileges.

On a related front, the White House announced Bush had implemented a previously announced decision to impose restrictions on exports of high-performance computers and ban the transfer of technology for satellites launched on Chinese rockets.

The White House said the steps were taken because of China's missile sales to other countries. It said two Chinese companies had transferred missile technology to Pakistan, and that the United States would impose sanctions on those companies, identified as the China Precision Machinery Import-Export Corp. and China Great Wall Industry Corp.

"We have expressed urgent concern to the Chinese government about exports of missile technology," a White House statement said.

Undersecretary of State Reginald Bartholomew will discuss those concerns during a trip to China beginning Monday, the statement said.

Bush defended his trade policy in remarks prepared for an Asian-American salute to Bush and his wife Barbara in Orange County's Fountain Valley.

Later, Bush was to speak in Los Angeles at a dinner honoring actor-muscleman Arnold Schwarzenegger for his efforts on behalf of the Simon Wiesenthal Center, which is dedicated to remembrance of the Holocaust.

On the third day of a busy weekend in California, Bush also attended church and squeezed in a tennis game. He was in such a hurry to get to the courts after church that he left behind his military aide who carries the nuclear war codes. The aide jumped in another car and caught up quickly.

Bush's China policy is a source of friction with many lawmakers, Republicans and Democrats alike who argue the president is too lenient on Beijing's aging, hard-line leaders.

Despite continuing abuses in China, Bush announced three weeks ago that he was extending for another year the most-favored-nation trade status for Beijing, allowing it to sell goods to the United States under the lower quotas and tariffs possible.

Many members of Congress believe the best way to force change in China is through penalties and strict linkage of benefits with improvements in human rights.

Bush, who continued most-favored status for China despite the 1989 killing of pro-democracy demonstrators in Tiananmen Square, said his policy has paid off.

Police apprehend man who kidnapped 21-month-old baby

The Associated Press

SALUDA, S.C. — A man accused of shooting a woman, abducting her child and wounding two police officers surrendered Sunday after a 10-hour standoff, authorities said.

None of the injuries was life-threatening.

John Keith Warren, who held the 21-month-old child hostage in a house that was under construction, gave up when the boy became agitated and started crying, said State Law Enforcement Division

Chief Robert Stewart.

Warren, 28, faces charges of assault and battery with intent to kill, said Greenwood County Sheriff Sam Riley.

The boy, Ryan Oggenfuss, was treated at a hospital and released Sunday. He was suffering from chicken pox, and sustained a few scratches on his legs, the hospital said.

On Friday, Warren and the boy's mother, Stephanie Oggenfuss, got into an argument at her home near the town of Ninety Six, Riley said.

Hundreds of thousands of Filipinos made refugees by Mount Pinatubo

Eileen Guerrero
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines—Lightning flashed, the earth rolled in constant tremors and ash rained down from the blackened sky. Metal roofs collapsed in homes as people huddled through the night from the thunderous eruptions of Mount Pinatubo.

Cesar Jamorawon thought it a punishment from God, and early Sunday gathered his wife and four children to join hundreds of thousands of people who were fleeing the volcano's devastation.

Long columns of refugees, many carrying children and belongings on their backs, trekked southward toward Manila and Olongapo for food and shelter.

Volcanic ash, sometimes 14 inches deep, was piled up along the highways like snow in winter. Heavy rains turned the ash into a soupy goo that made walking arduous.

Jamorawon said he realized his family would have to flee their village near Clark Air Base when the corrugated roof of their home began to buckle Saturday night under the weight of the ash.

Jamorawon's wife, Nida, shouted for the children to leave the room. An instant later, the ceiling collapsed.

"I thought it was the end of the world," Jamorawon said. "I thought that this must be a punishment from God because the world has forgotten him. I have never experienced a graver crisis than this in my life."

The next morning, they packed belongings and set out on foot for three hours through the muddy, ash-covered roads toward the North Expressway, the main highway to Manila, 50 miles to the south.

Jamorawon could barely keep up because his left leg was crippled by polio. Along the way, several buses passed but refused to stop for the stragglers.

"I was praying for a bus to stop," Nida Jamorawon said. "Suddenly a bus appeared and stopped."

The bus, which had been sent by the government to pick up refugees, drove the Jamorawons to a sports stadium in Quezon City, where about 10,000 people were in temporary shelters late Sunday.

Among the others at the stadium were Lilia Ellorig, her two children and six grandchildren. They had been brought from Olongapo, home to the U.S. Navy's Subic Bay base 50 miles to the west.

"We were sleeping when our ceiling caved in," said Ellorig, 59. "The children and I were covered with ash and water."

She gathered the family members and fled to a neighbor's house. But the neighbor's ceiling fell in, too. The next morning, they walked for several hours toward Manila until the driver of a cargo truck gave them a ride.

People at the stadium whiled away the time relaxing and sleeping on the stone bleachers and standing in long lines for simple meals of rice, noodles and an occasional sardine.

It was unclear how long they and other refugees would remain in emergency shelters. Volunteer relief workers at the stadium had no idea who was in charge or what plans had been drafted.

U.S. servicemen and their families evacuated from the nearby U.S. Clark Air Force Base move in driving ash rain from the annex building to a safer main building of a seaside hotel in Subic bay Sunday. A few hundred Americans were housed in the hotel during eruptions of Mount Pinatubo.

Dzhava death toll rises with third earthquake

Ann Imse
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Soviet television on Sunday showed the Georgian mountain resort of Dzhava as piles of rubble amid trees, one day after the area was struck by an earthquake for the third time in six weeks.

"Dzhava exists only on the map," the announcer said of the town of 11,000.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said the overall death toll rose to eight from Saturday's earthquake in the southern republic and small aftershocks continued to rattle the mountains.

The earthquake, which measured 6.3 on the Richter scale, also injured about 200 people, Tass quoted civil defense officials as saying.

It destroyed about 80 percent of the buildings across the Gori and Tskinali regions, Soviet media said.

The television cameras panned over caved-in roofs and showed stone houses reduced to mounds of rock in Dzhava, which had already been badly damaged in a larger April 29 quake.

That quake, which measured 7.0 on the Richter scale, killed more than 100 people in Georgia, left 100,000 homeless and was followed by several severe aftershocks.

Tass said Sunday that the Gori regional government had issued a call for 2,000 tents, food and tankers for drinking water.

In addition to recent earthquakes, the area is also wracked by ethnic violence between Georgians and South Ossetians. Tass said Sunday that authorities had increased patrols on the Georgian Military Highway, the only main road connecting Russia with central Georgia, to check for weapons.

Shevardnadze remark causes split opinions

Wants to form alternate political party

Thomas Ginsberg
The Associated Press

MOSCOW — Eduard Shevardnadze's remark that he might form a new political party has drawn applause from radicals but attacks from Communists who fear he could split their ranks.

The hard-line newspaper Sovietskaya Rossia tried Saturday to discredit the former foreign minister, accusing him of turning the Soviet Union into a "second-rate country" during his five-year tenure and "spitting on the motherland" in recent speeches.

The chairman of the party's Control Commission, Evgeny Vagin, said Friday on the evening television news program "Vremya" that Shevardnadze's statements resulted in a "sharp reaction" from many Communists.

"According to them, this is a call (for) the split of the party," he said.

The state news agency Tass reported that Vagin's commission planned to investigate Shevardnadze's remarks.

But a leading reformist newspaper, Komsomolskaya Pravda, came to Shevardnadze's defense. It said Saturday that "in the public's eyes, this (suggestion) will bring E. Shevardnadze authority and respect."

Shevardnadze's remarks came in an interview published Wednesday with the Vienna daily Kurier, in which he said the Soviets "should have created an opposition a few years ago."

Tass said Shevardnadze spoke of the need to "create a democratic party that would act 'parallel' with" the Communist Party.

Shevardnadze defended his suggestion at a lecture Wednesday in Vienna, saying he expected the Communist reaction and was undaunted.

"I have the right to say my opinion," Shevardnadze said.

After returning to Moscow on Saturday, he also told republican-owned Russian Television that his former ally Gorbachev probably would not defend him against the party investigation.

"Such investigations are initiated with the sanction of the general secretary," Shevardnadze said.

Soviet reformers, including Moscow Mayor Gavriil Popov, have seized on his comments to urge the creation of a powerful new political force. They want to capitalize on Boris Yeltsin's resounding victory over Communist candidates Wednesday in Russia's first presidential election.

Popov told reporters on Thursday that the unity shown by fractious reformers during the election "has great meaning ... for the formation of a strong party that could become an alternative to the Communist Party."

Shevardnadze left office Dec. 20 under pressure from hard-line opponents of his reformist policies. Since then, he has created the Foreign Policy Association, a group of former officials seeking to influence policy. Other countries have similar groups.

The 63-year-old Georgian remains a member of the party's policy-making Central Committee.

The reformist Komsomolskaya Pravda said the criticism reflected the party's panic at losing the Wednesday elections, in which Popov was re-elected and reformist leader Anatoly Sobchak was elected mayor of Leningrad.

"I'm glad to see Moses score like this, but we are going to need more rebounds out of him to win our games," said Garst coach Kevin Mooreland. "We are a small team that needs to get every rebound we can, and we will have to get back on defense better, too."

PHILADELPHIA — Jeff Reed's sacrifice fly with one out in the ninth inning snapped a tie and the surging Cincinnati Reds went on for an 8-6 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies on Sunday to sweep the three-game series.
The Reds have won four in a row and seven of their last eight games to keep the pressure on Los Angeles in the NL West.

With the score tied at 8, Bill Ripken and Cal Ripken singled in the seventh and Milligan drew a walk from Duane Ward (0-3) that loaded the bases. Gomez singled home the go-ahead run and Orsulak, batting for Bob Melvin, hit his first career grand slam.
Todd Frohworth (1-0) allowed one hit over three innings for the victory.
Red Sox 2, Angels 0
BOSTON — Tom Bolton gave up five hits in eight innings as the Boston Red Sox beat California for their third straight victory over the slumping Angels.
Bolton (6-4) snapped his three-game losing streak, striking out three and walking one. Jeff Reardon completed Boston's major league-leading seventh shutout for his 17th save as the Red Sox won for the fifth time in six games.

U.S. Open

Stewart, meanwhile, played his second to the fringe, some 25 feet away.
Stewart missed his long birdie putt and watched in dismay as the ball slid 5 feet beyond. Simpson then missed his long par putt.
But there was still work to do. Stewart had that tricky 5-footer for par and Simpson faced a 2-footer for bogey.
Both holed out and the playoff was on.
The playoff will be the third in four years at the Open. Curtis Strange beat Nick Faldo by four strokes in 1988 and Hale Irwin needed a 19th hole on Monday last year to beat Mike Donald.
"Wall, here we are: another year, another playoff," Simpson said.
"I'm a little disappointed I didn't win, but Payne had a lot of chances to win, too. Man, it was something out there."
Both Simpson's critical misses, the tee shots on the 16th and 18th that set up the bogeys, were the result of pulled 1-iron shots he said.
But, he noted, Stewart could have won it, too.
"I dodged some bullets out there the last three holes when Payne missed the birdies," Simpson said.
And Stewart took a similar view, looking to the mistakes of his opponent in what was, essentially, match play.
"The last three holes," Stewart said, "I needed to make something happen, and Scott helped me a little."
They started the day tied for the lead, and Stewart made the first move with a 3-4 foot birdie putt on the third.
That put him one in front and he seemed poised to go two in front when Simpson went from bunker to rough on the par-3 fourth hole.
Simpson, however, chipped in from 35 feet for par and remained only one behind.
Simpson pulled even when Stewart chipped up the sixth and made bogey, then went ahead with a

Navratilova wins Edgbaston
BIRMINGHAM, England — Martina Navratilova defeated Natalia Zvereva to win Sunday's final in the $150,000 Edgbaston women's grass-court tournament, regaining the title she captured in 1989.
Top-seed Navratilova beat the fourth-seeded Zvereva 6-4, 7-6 (8-6) to claim the $27,000 first prize and her 155th tournament title.
The victory, which she accomplished without dropping a set all week, took her within two of Chris Evert's record of 157 tournament championships.
"I should break the record if I stay healthy," she said. "I wanted match play, which I got, and I'm healthy and I'm not tired. If I can come through Eastbourne without pulling anything, I'm ready for Wimbledon."

Walker wins Lady Keystone
HERSHEY, Pa. — Colleen Walker followed an eagle and a birdie with a safe par on the final hole for a 5-under-par 67 on Sunday and a two-stroke victory in the LPGA's $400,000 Lady Keystone Open.
Walker, who took home $60,000, finished 54 holes on the 6,348-yard West Course of the Hershey Country Club with a 9-under-par 207 total, good for her first win of the season and fourth in nine years on tour.
Beth Daniel could have tied Walker on the final hole with a birdie, but her approach shot flew the green and she bogeyed to finish with a 70, tied with Kris Tschetter, who had a final-round 68.
Second-round leaders Barb Mucha and Jody Anschutz faded in the middle of the final round. They had a two-shot lead on the field through five holes before running into problems.

Fielder hit a two-run homer in the third inning, giving him a major league-leading 51 RBIs. Skeeter Barnes added his second home run in three days since being called up from Triple-A Toledo.
Gullickson (8-3) pitched eight innings, allowing two runs on 10 hits. Paul Gibson gave up Henry Cotto's RBI single in the ninth, and retired Pete O'Brien with the bases loaded on a grounder to end the game.
Pat Rice (1-1) lasted just 2 1/2 innings in his second start. He gave up five runs on just three hits.

McEnroe puts U.S. over top

Mike Recht
The Associated Press

NEWPORT, R.I. — John McEnroe, his temper and his touch warming for greater tests ahead, beat Emilio Sanchez 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 Sunday as the United States completed a 4-1 victory over Spain in the Davis Cup quarterfinals.

Rick Leach, filling in for injured Brad Gilbert in the final match on the grass at Newport Casino, lost the final match to Tomas Carbonell, 7-6 (7-1), 5-7, 6-4.

McEnroe and Gilbert won Friday's opening singles, and Leach and Jim Pugh won Saturday's doubles for a 3-0 lead and send the Americans into the semifinals against Germany in September in Kansas City.

Davis Cup

McEnroe served, volleyed and cursed to his third three-set victory over Sanchez without a loss.

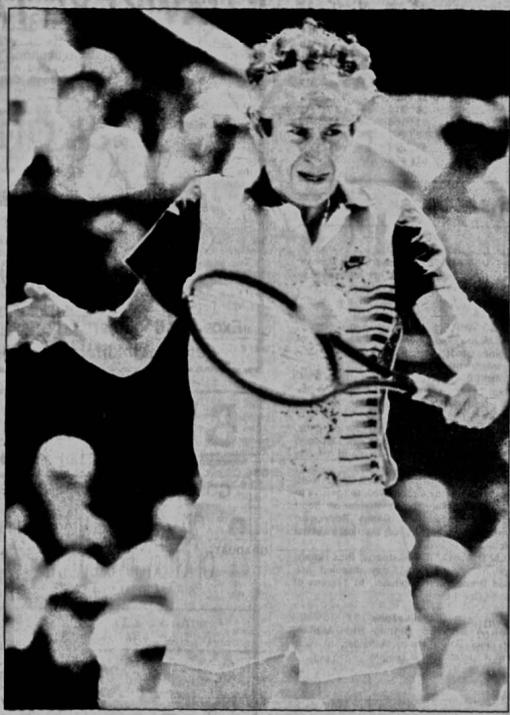

He hit 68 percent of his first serves and won an amazing 40 of 44 first service points. At the net, he won 58 of 74 points as he rounds into form for another try in two weeks at Wimbledon, which he last won for the third time in 1984.

"I think I'm headed in the right direction," he said. "I'm optimistic about my chances."

Sanchez, ranked 12th in the world, gave the 32-year-old McEnroe, ranked 14th, that chance.

"He still has his touch. He always hits the ball clean," the Spaniard said.

But he said winning seven matches in two weeks takes a lot of stamina.

McEnroe says he's "headed in the right direction" again.

"He could make it if he doesn't lose many sets," he said. "If he's fresh and has his good day, he has a chance" against hard-hitters, such as Boris Becker and Stefan Edberg, who have won five of the last six Wimbledon.

"I'd like him to win. It would be a credit for tennis and for himself."

After losing his serve for the only time in the fourth game of the second set to allow Sanchez to even the match, McEnroe was virtually unbeatable.

In the final set, he lost only two points on serve, both on double faults. In return, he got the only break of the set in the eighth game after losing two break points and his temper.

He had disputed several close calls earlier, and he erupted on another after returning a volley into the net to give Sanchez a deuce.

McEnroe cursed the linesman, threw his racket and then whacked it on the sideline barrier.

But he followed with a backhand passing shot and a lunging forehand pass.

McEnroe closed out the match with an easy smash at the net, an ace, a backhand volley and a service winner.

"My experience on grass put me through at the end," McEnroe said.

With Gilbert sidelined by an injured toe suffered in Friday's match, Leach was a last-minute substitute in the final match.

Fittipaldi wins at Detroit

Mike Harris
The Associated Press

DETROIT — Emerson Fittipaldi came away with his first victory of the season Sunday in the Detroit Grand Prix, a race featuring a bizarre incident involving Mario and Michael Andretti and a safety truck that caused a stoppage of nearly an hour.

The Brazilian, who also won here in 1989 on the way to the CART driving championship, held off a determined effort by series point leader Bobby Rahal over the final dozen laps on the tight 2.5-mile, 17-turn circuit winding through the streets of downtown Detroit.

Following the 50-minute delay, Fittipaldi held the lead over Rahal but drove the last seven laps of the 62-lap event almost entirely one-handed.

"I had a good lead after the restart but with seven laps to go my car starting jumping out of gear," Fittipaldi said. "I had to drive with my left hand and I had to hold the gearshift with my right hand. It was very difficult to be quick that way."

Still, he managed to beat Rahal to the finish line by 0.29-seconds — less than two car lengths — relegating Rahal to his fourth second-place finish of the season.

The wild incident that interrupted the race began innocently enough, with Dennis Vitolo, already far off the leaders' pace, stopped in the fourth turn, a blind, slow right-hander. The transmission was frozen and the corner workers could not push it out of the way, so one of CART's two safety trucks drove to the site and pulled in front of the stalled car to tow it back around to the pits.

The car was hooked up and the truck was just about to pull away when Mario Andretti, near the back of the lead lap after a flat tire slowed him in the early going, came around the turn hard and slid into the back of the safety vehicle, the nose of his car under the truck and the rear partially blocking the track.

Several cars, including that of leader Fittipaldi, made it through the narrow space, but second-place Michael Andretti, the pole-winner and defending race champion, skidded into Vitolo's stopped car.

That pretty much blocked the track and Rahal, running third, had to come to a full stop to keep from hitting anyone. CART officials then red-flagged the rest of the field while the mess was cleared.

Fittipaldi, who averaged 83 mph in the victory, earned the 1991 victory of his Indy-car career and became the sixth winner in many CART events this season. He was the first win for the 44-year-old Fittipaldi since the October at Nazareth, Pa.

I'm not a GM, but I played one in the DI

The dog days of summer have hit this one horse town and the Cubs and Cards are already out of it. So are the Royals. If not for the courage of the fearless Twins, the season would be lost.

But rather than spend a summer of futilely cheering your favorite team into fourth place, indulge yourself. Tune out reality and tune into fantasy. Appoint yourself general manager.

The Daily Iowan is giving local baseball fans a forum to vent their frustration. "Til Trade Ya..." will be a once-a-week feature that allows you to invent a possible baseball trade. Send us your trade and the reasoning behind it and we'll put it in the paper. It's your chance to show Iowa City what a genius you are.

You won't win anything, but what the hell else are you going to do your time this summer?

We start as soon as we get a suggestion, so you're on deck. Send your trades to: "Til Trade Ya..." The Daily Iowan, 201 N. Communications Center, Iowa City, Iowa, 52242.

And don't kid yourself, the Cards really are out of it. We could hear you moaning. But don't complain, make a trade, and put 'em in first place!

Stewart, Simpson reach a no-decision

Bob Green
The Associated Press

CHASKA, Minn. — Payne Stewart and Scott Simpson packed all the drama into the last three holes Sunday, but could not reach a decision.

So, with a tie after the regulation 72, they'll return to the Hazeltine National Golf Club Monday for an 18-hole playoff for the 91st U.S. Open Golf Championship.

Stewart and Simpson, locked into a head-to-head battle, completed four rounds in 6-under-par 282 and each played the final round in par 72.

Just as he did in Saturday's third round, Simpson blew a 2-stroke lead with bogeys on the 16th and 18th holes to set up the playoff. Each had ample opportunity to win it outright.

While the scorecard will show that it was Simpson's lapses at the end that sent them to an extra day, Stewart also let a potential victory get away.

Wearing the colors of the Minnesota Vikings — four-time losers in the Super Bowl — Stewart had makeable birdie putts on three of the last four holes.

As it turned out, any one would have won it for him.

But Stewart, who had stayed in the chase only through some gritty, par-saving putts earlier in the round, was 0-for-3 on the birdie efforts down the stretch.

"I hit a lot of good putts," Stewart said. "It just wasn't a day to make birdies. I guess it was a day to make pars."

And Simpson, a winner of this title in 1987, appeared to be doing just that.

The methodical man, playing with something approaching metronome regularity, was reeling off par after par, scores that became more and more valuable as the round wore on.

Then he got to 16 — that not-so-sweet, rebuilt 16th, a little horror of a hole that has served as the critical stretch of real estate in this event.

With a two-shot lead in hand, he let his tee shot drift to the left, just enough to be in trouble. His next squirted left again, well short of the hole and still deep in the bluegrass.

His third just made the hole. Two putts from 35 feet cut the lead to one.

It could have been even at that point, but Stewart failed on a 10-foot birdie putt.

Another potential birdie, from about 5 feet, eluded Stewart on the par-3 17th, and they went to the final hole with Simpson leading by one.

Again, Simpson's drive got away to the left. He had no chance to reach the green on the long, uphill finishing hole, and played back to the fairway.

He put his third some 20 feet below the cup and needed that, for See U.S. Open, Page 8

Cardinals baffled by Bob Ojeda

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Bob Ojeda pitched a four-hitter for his first complete game in two seasons as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the St. Louis Cardinals 7-2 on Sunday.

Ojeda (6-4) outdueled Ken Hill (6-4) for the second time in 12 days, walking three and striking out six. He also beat Hill 1-0 in St. Louis with 7 1-3 innings of four-hit ball.

With St. Louis leading 2-1 in the sixth, Lenny Harris followed singles by Darryl Strawberry and Eddie Murray by grounding a hit-and-run RBI single to right. Gary Carter then lined another hit-and-run single to right to end an 0-for-12 slump and put the Dodgers ahead.

Murray capped a four-run seventh inning with a three-run homer off rookie Tim Lincecum. Murray's homer, his seventh, also came on a hit-and-run.

SAN DIEGO — Jerald Clark, replacing the injured Fred McGriff at first base, hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning Sunday to lead the San Diego Padres past the Chicago Cubs 4-2.

Clark, who has five RBIs in the last two games, hit a 1-1 fastball from Greg Maddux (6-4) over the left-field wall to give the Padres a 3-2 lead.

San Diego rookie Jose Melendez (2-2) pitched seven innings, giving up two runs on six hits for the victory. Larry Andersen finished for his second save.

Maddux, who hit his first major league homer in the third, allowed three runs and four hits in six innings in falling to 8-2 lifetime against the Padres.

Expos 7, Braves 6
MONTREAL — Former Expo Otis Nixon set a National League record with six stolen bases, but it wasn't enough as Montreal rallied for three runs in the sixth inning to beat the Atlanta Braves 7-6 Sunday.

Nixon singled in the ninth and stole second and third, but was stranded as the Expos swept the three-game series. Nixon tied the major league record for steals in a game set by Eddie Collins of the Philadelphia A's in 1912.

Delino DeShields snapped a sixth-inning tie with a two-run double and Ivan Calderon contributed three hits and an RBI.

Spike Owen drew a one-out walk from Mike Stanton (2-1) and Junior Naoa singled. Both runners advanced on Rick Mahler's wild pitch before Owen scored on a chopper by Marquis Grissom, beating second baseman Jeff Blauser's throw to the plate with a fadeaway slide.

Bill Sampen (4-1) pitched two innings in relief for the victory and Barry Jones got the last three outs for his fourth save.

Astros 5, Mets 4
NEW YORK — The Houston Astros won a series in New York for the first time since May 1984 as Mark Portugal and two relievers held on to beat the Mets 5-4 Sunday.

The Astros have won four of seven games against the Mets over the last 10 days, including two of three at Shea Stadium.

Portugal (6-2) pitched six innings and gave up three runs and seven hits. Jim Corsi worked two innings and Al Osuna finished for his fifth save.

If Sunday's games were any indication of things to come, there will be a lot of offensive excitement in the Prime Time League this summer.

All of the matchups generated plenty of scoring and fast-breaking play, and there was even a little defense as the league kicked off its fifth year.

Perhaps the most interesting contest of the day matched the team of 1st National Bank against team No. 2, a sponsorless and coachless squad. 1st National boasted a lineup that included former Hawkeye Bill Jones as well as former Iowa State Cyclone Mike Born. No. 2 had a well-stocked team also, led by Iowa's Acie Earl, Northern Iowa's Cam Johnson and Sunday no-show Brian Garner. However, many of the heroics came from Jay Webb, who started at center for 1st National opposite teammate Earl. Webb scored 32 points, many off strong inside moves, leading his team to 115-102 victory.

The game began slowly, with both teams showing a little rustiness, but picked up near the middle of the first half when 1st National went on a 26-10 run to take a 41-32 lead. Nine of the points came from Webb inside, while Born drained long jumpers from the outside. Born finished with 26 points including four 3-pointers.

1st National stretched the lead to 52-38 with three minutes left in the first half, but No. 2 responded with a 9-4 run to make the score 56-47 at halftime.

A Born 3-pointer put 1st National up 61-49 early in the second half, but Earl scored seven straight points to lead an 11-4 spurt and close the gap to 65-60. Seconds later, however, Born nailed another long trey and 1st National was never seriously threatened the rest of the way, lead bulging at one point to

PRIME TIME HAWKS

■ Jay Webb went 15-for-21 from the floor for 32 points for victorious First National Bank.

■ Val Barnes and James Moses each scored 42 points in losing efforts for Nike of Iowa and Garst Seed Company, respectively.

■ Rodell Davis scored 20 and pulled down seven rebounds in a win for The Airliner.

■ Troy Skinner scored 26 for victorious Iowa City Ready Mix.

■ Paul Lusk scored 21 in a win for Hawk-I Feed and Relay Station.

■ Acie Earl went 15-for-33 and scored 32 points in a losing cause.

■ Brig Tubbs scored 17 points and grabbed 13 rebounds for Rhodes & Associates/Koser General Store.

Webb and Earl each scored 32 points, but Webb was almost unstoppable down low, hitting 15-for-21 field goals and scrambling after every loose rebound. Earl also hit 15 shots, but it took him 33 attempts.

Ex-Hawkeye Jones scored 11 points in the first half, but was scoreless in the second after being hit in the face underneath the basket.

"We have good chemistry on this team," said Webb. "All of the guys pass the ball around and do the little things for us to win."

"This is a lot different than under coach Davis where Acie might be more motivated defensively," Webb added.

The other games followed much of the same pattern, with offensive outbursts coming from many of the current Hawkeys.

CLEVELAND — Kirby Puckett has been playing baseball too long to get too giddy about the Minnesota Twins' 15-game winning streak.

"I know this game definitely has a way of humbling you. As good as things are going, they can turn around and go just as bad," Puckett said Sunday after the Twins scored twice in the 10th to beat the Cleveland Indians 4-2.

Minnesota moved into sole possession of first place in the American League West for the first time since 1987, the year it won the World Series. The Twins are one-half game ahead of Oakland, which lost 11-7 in Milwaukee.

The streak is the longest in the majors since Kansas City won 16 straight in 1977. Texas won 14 in a row in May this year.

The American League record of 19 was set by Chicago in 1906 and matched by New York in 1947. The major-league record is 26, set by the New York Giants in 1916.

"We know that sooner or later we're going to lose," Puckett said. "It's inevitable. But hopefully we'll continue to play good ball and go from there."

Al Newman drew a one-out walk in the 10th from Shawn Hillegas (2-1). Puckett, who homered earlier, singled him to third and Chili Davis followed with a sacrifice fly. Brian Harper singled home Puckett, who had taken second on Davis' fly.

Rick Aguilera (2-2) got the win despite yielding the tying run in the eighth inning. He walked leadoff pinch-hitter Carlos Baerga, who went to third on a one-out single by Alex Cole. Felix Fermin then singled to right, tying it 2-2. It was Aguilera's fourth blown save in 21 opportunities.

TWINS NOTES

■ Minnesota's winning streak began June 1, making the Twins perfect for June, traditionally their worst month.

■ Seven of the wins in Minnesota's 15-game winning streak have come against the Indians.

■ Rookie Scott Leius went 0-for-3 against the Indians Sunday, ending his hitting streak at seven games.

■ Brian Harper was 2-for-5 Sunday, raising his batting average to .343.

inning for the Royals this season, bettering their six-run inning against Baltimore last Tuesday. It was their fifth victory in the last six games and pulled them into a fifth-place tie with the White Sox.

Mark Gubicza (3-3) struggled for the win and departed after five innings, allowing seven hits and four runs. Alex Fernandez (2-7) retired the first four batters and was unable to get another out.

Brian Harper bobbles the throw and Felix Fermin scores Sunday.

Orioles 13, Blue Jays 8

TORONTO — Pinch hitter Joe Orsulak's grand slam capped a five-run burst in the seventh inning, leading the Baltimore Orioles past the Toronto Blue Jays.

Cal Ripken, Randy Milligan and Leo Gomez also hit home runs. Baltimore's Joe Carter homered, two doubles and drove in four runs for the Blue Jays. See American, Page 8

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Parliament abolished South Africa's major apartheid law Monday, a period of more than four decades when all citizens were classified by race.

"Now it belongs to history," F.W. de Klerk told Parliament after repealing the Population Registration Act. "Now everybody is free of it."

Juliet asked Romeo, "What name? A rose by any other name would smell as sweet."

Robert "Chug" Wilson was talking about something less than roses when he asked Johnson County Board of Supervisors to change the name of a road on which his business is located.

The name is presently Dingleberry Road. But Wilson wants it to be either "Orchard Lane" or "Old Quarry Road," an old quarry located near the road is located just north of state 80, off state Route 1.

"The name, Dingleberry is intolerable," Wilson said. "I know what dingleberry means, embarrassing to put it as an address on your business card or Christmas cards every year."

"The history of the name is a white man's insulting label for Native Americans who lived on the road," Wilson said. "Later, Wilson elaborated: "They were bootleggers who would plow furrows and pu

Sgt. David Bobbitt stood doorway outside of a Lejeune courtroom during recess of his desertion trial, took long drags from his cigarette. His face was covered with sweat and his eyes, normally a bright blue, were tired and hollow, giving him the appearance of extreme fatigue. Sgt. Bobbitt appeared relieved that the hours of court-martial proceedings were ending.

All of the last-minute foul play was finished — the awkward handshakes became full backslapping, ultimately in a warm, more solemn manner everyone just stood in a muggy hallway and waited for the judge to call court back to order.

To the left of Bobbitt stood Sgt. Marsh from the War I League. Marsh, who had worn a T-shirt into court, read "US Out of Central America" and received a letter from the Marine Corps. "I had received a letter from the Marine Corps that said that wearing a colorful T-shirt of that nature was not tolerated in the future."

That morning the defiant who sported a Marine-style "right" crewcut, arriving as he walked into the courtroom wearing a colorful T-shirt that read "Another Skin Peace" picturing Gandhi.

Marsh was 2 inches from the judge saying, "You have to stand the significance of International being present these conscientious objections." Bobbitt continued through Marsh's rhetoric and smoking his cigarette. It didn't matter to him if Mary descended down
