The Astro Theatre, 212 E. Washington St., is to house First National Bank's loan department. It will be torn down showing its last movie Sunday. The final showing is Madonna's "Truth or Dare."

Astro to close doors this weekend forever

Madonna stars in oldest theater's last show

The Astro Theatre, perhaps best known for its yearly Halloween showings of the "Rocky Horror Picture Show," will be closing its doors for the last time Sunday night.

The theater, located at 212 E. Washington St., will show its final movie 9:30 p.m. Sunday — the Madonna documentary "Truth or Dare."

There may be some poetic justice in the fact that ultramodern Madonna will close Iowa City's oldest movie theater. Though Kim Davis, manager of Iowa City theaters, calls it simply a coincidence that "Truth or Dare" was chosen for play this weekend, Astro employee Rick Davis said Madonna will provide just the "bang" to take the theater into history.

Therefore, Rick Davis and other Astro employees have received permission from the Iowa City manager to host a Madonna Party for Sunday's final showing. Patrons will be invited to dress up in their best Material Girl attire and will be allowed to dance in the aisles during the concert segments of the film.

"We'll be enforcing all the usual rules of people being quiet during the speaking parts, but we also want people to feel a little more free to express themselves," Rick Davis said. "It'll be like 'Rocky Horror' without the mess."

"This is really more for the employees than anyone else," Davis added. "We all love the Astro, and we just wanted it to go out with a bang instead of a whimper."

First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St., has purchased the Astro and plans to tear it down. See Astro, Page 6

IC gays to celebrate national Pride Month

Activists intend to educate, unify

What do Andy Warhol, Tchaikovsky and Janis Joplin have in common?

They were all gay, lesbian or bisexual.

Iowa City gays and lesbians are joining others across the country to celebrate national Pride Month. Locally, discussions, cultural events and other activities are being held to unite the gay community and highlight its diversity.

"It gives people who are lesbian, gay and bisexual a chance to celebrate who they are, feel good about themselves and come together as a community," said Brett Beemyn, member of the Iowa City Lesbian and Gay Pride Committee.

Julie Phye, also a member of the committee, said the unification of the gay community through Pride Month activities "gives you strength and gives you pride about who you are."

This weekend a rally on the Pentacrest and a march through Iowa City will give the local gay community the opportunity to "inform, educate and celebrate," according to Beemyn.

"We want to show our diversity," added Phye. "We need to show the larger community that we don't have anything to be ashamed of, that we're proud of who we are."

"A lot of people would like us to just be quiet," she said.

"We are not going to hide in some closet," agreed Beemyn. "Lesbian and gay rights are crucial; they can't be ignored or downplayed. It's

Local highway to be modified

Larry Offner
The Daily iowan

The Coralville Committee of the Iowa City Area Chamber of Commerce held a forum at the Coralville Library Thursday evening for public discussion of two options to reduce accidents along a portion of the Coralville Strip. The road in question is that portion of U.S. Highway 6 from Rocky Shore / Hawkins Drive west to First Avenue in Coralville.

Dick Kautz of the district office of the Iowa Department of Transportation told a crowd of about 40 that the road had the sixth-highest accident rate in the state with 53 accidents last year.

"Because the rate is so high, it does qualify for Federal Highway Administration safety funds," said Kautz. He stated that about 90 percent of the cost of the project would come from those funds.

Kautz outlined two options to reduce accidents. The first would be a frontage road immediately to the north of Highway 6 with one entrance at traffic signals approximately in the center of the strip. It would cost approximately $2.2 million and reduce accidents by an estimated 44 percent, he said.

Two businesses, Donutland and the adjacent car wash, would have to be acquired. This cost had already been figured into the estimate, according to Kautz. Under this option, the UI would be granted an entrance to its property south of Highway 6.

The second option would be to add a fifth lane to the north side of Highway 6 and make the middle lane on the strip a left-turn lane. This would cost about $1.4 million and reduce accidents an estimated 31 percent, Kautz said. Under this option, the university would not be granted an entrance to its property.

"The Federal Highway Administration has said they will fund either option," Kautz said. "No decision has been made. The final decision will be made by the (Iowa) Department of Transportation, but there will be no project without the concurrence of the city of Coralville. They will be designing and

U.S., Soviet summit unlikely; arms treaty still not finalized

Ruth Sinai
The Associated Press

BERLIN — The United States and the Soviet Union failed Thursday to overcome the remaining hurdles to a landmark arms control treaty, clouding prospects for a summer summit between Presidents Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev.

But Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh, emerging from nearly two hours of talks, gave differing assessments of the progress they made on the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty. Baker said "three major issues" are holding up completion of the treaty, which would reduce by 30 percent the number of nuclear missiles, bombers and submarines that can span the distance between the United States and the Soviet Union.

President Bush has made completion of the treaty, which has been under on-and-off negotiation for nine years, a condition for a summit with Gorbachev.

"We are right where we were when we last met, with respect to a summit," said Baker, answering reporters' questions with Bessmertnykh at his side in the garden of the U.S. ambassador's residence. The two foreign ministers, meeting at the end of a 35-nation Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe, last held talks on the treaty in Geneva on June 8.

Bessmertnykh, however, said he and Baker "made considerable progress" on the treaty. And he added, "I think we can close all the outstanding issues in the coming weeks."

The Soviet minister said he and Baker had discussed an agenda for a summit, once it's held, and some agreements that would be signed there.

New law will grant police more power

James H. Rubin
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court bolstered police powers in the war on drugs Thursday, ruling that officers may board buses and ask any passenger to consent to a search.

Voting 6-3 in a case from Florida, the justices said the increasingly widespread law-enforcement tactic does not violate the rights of passengers as long as they feel free to refuse the police request.

Police don't need a court warrant or a suspicion that a crime has been committed to ask passengers to submit to searches, the court said.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor wrote for the court that the ruling applies to trains, planes and other forms of public transportation. The ruling, she said, was not a significant departure from past decisions that say police don't "seize" people just by talking to them or requesting cooperation.

"No seizure occurs... so long as the officers do not convey a message that compliance with their request is required," O'Connor said.

But the court's dissenters condemned what they said is the court's growing tolerance of abusive police behavior.

"Officers who conduct suspicious, dragnet-style sweeps put passengers to the choice of cooperating or of exiting their buses and possibly being stranded in unfamiliar locations," Justice Thurgood Marshall said. "This choice is no choice at all."

The court, expected to conclude its 1990-91 term next week, also announced these decisions:

Cuts may reach $100 million

Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES—Gov. Terry Branstad says the spending cuts he's about to order are likely to approach $100 million.

The governor made it clear during the closing days of this year's legislative session that he would order across-the-board spending cuts, but he hasn't put a number on the level, saying only that state spending needs to be reduced by 2 or 3 percent.

A 2 percent reduction would amount to $66 million; 3 percent cuts would be $99 million.

Speaking after an appearance before broadcast executives, the governor said officials should count on the bigger number.

"We're probably looking more toward 3 percent than 2 percent,"

Branstad said. "I don't like to do this, but I think it's the only responsible thing to do."

Many officials have been planning on the bigger cut, and Branstad spokesman Richard Vohs said "for planning purposes, that's probably a good idea."

The announcement is expected within the next two weeks. Vohs said, "95 percent of the work is done."

"We're going to wait, probably, until the last day of the fiscal year, which is June 30, so we can have the best information possible," Branstad said.

Branstad rarely tips his hand on such decisions. His hinting at the final figure is a strong signal he has made up his mind.

The cuts will have deep ramifications for state and local government. Much of the state's $3.3 billion budget goes to local governments where it is included with property taxes in local budgets.

For example, $1.2 billion goes to elementary and secondary schools as a major part of education spending in the state. A 3 percent reduction would cost those schools $36 million.

Branstad said he already has cut $44 million from the budget through selective vetoes and said state agencies will see deeper cuts than will aid to local governments.

A 3 percent spending cut would reduce a local government budget by as little as 1.5 percent, he said. That's because the state money is only a part of the local budget.

"Those reductions will not be as big a reduction as we've taken in state agency budgets," Branstad said.

Vohs said the cutback will give

many local officials new budget headaches by forcing them to choose between cutting programs or raising local taxes.

Sen. Harkin considers presidential bid

Meetings with Democratic Party insiders 'very, very warm'

Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin's testing of the Democratic presidential waters has been aided by "very, very warm" meetings with party insiders and financial heavyweights, the senator said Thursday.

"I think they're giving me a very, very serious look right now," Harkin said. "There's a common thread in the Democratic Party, and I think I'm touching that thread."

Harkin, just elected last year to a second term in the Senate, has said he wants to spend the summer sampling sentiment to see if there's support for a presidential campaign. He has promised a decision around Labor Day.

In recent weeks, he's met in Washington with major financial figures within the party and at a retreat in Virginia with party officials and other potential candidates. In a telephone conference with Iowa reporters, Harkin said he came away from those meetings heartened that he's getting a serious look from important Democrats.

"It sure has bolstered my efforts," Harkin said. "I got a very, very warm response. I couldn't have been happier."

The meetings are important for Harkin. As part of testing the presidential waters, he has spent time in states that hold early presidential tests.

Harkin has made several swings through New Hampshire, where the first primary is held, and has scheduled time at home in Iowa, where the February precinct caucuses open the campaign.

While he seeks to sample support among voters, he also must raise money from big party contributors and interest groups. Harkin has not been a major player in the national political scene in the past

"I think they're giving me a very, very serious look right now."

Tom Harkin
U.S. senator

and a part of his chore is convincing party insiders he's a serious contender.

The meetings have helped accomplish that, Harkin said. He said he has gotten offers to help raise money.

"A lot of people around the country have really been responding," Harkin said.

Harkin is one of a handful of Democrats who are making public soundings about a bid, though there is a list of potential candidates.

Professor studies trash Garbage gives clues to Aztec civilization

Natalie Glass
The Daily Iowan

Most people probably don't think that garbage is of any special significance. But Thomas Charlton, a UI anthropology professor, has found otherwise.

He studies what might have been considered garbage by ancient peoples to learn more about their civilizations.

"You may lie in a document about how much you drink, but all they need to do is to look in your garbage to find the truth," Charlton said.

Studying garbage has been one aspect of his research into the Aztec Indians of Mexico. Charlton has been examining the formation of the Aztec state since the late 1300s. Through his work, he has found that while there is a lot of information written about Aztecs who lived in their capital city, there isn't much known about the less-populated areas of the Aztec empire.

"We're trying to balance the historical record," he said.

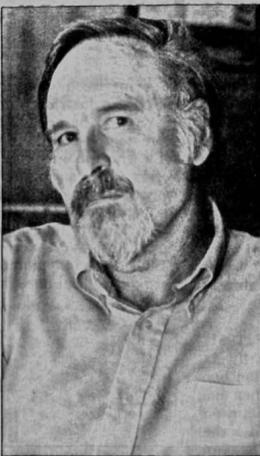

Charlton's interest in Mexico began when he was an undergraduate at the University of Toronto. One of his professors brought artifacts into the classroom from an expedition in Mexico.

"I'm interested in more complex cultures than you usually find around here or in other parts of North America," he said. "Mexico was one of the two areas in the New World where there had been individual development of early civilizations."

Charlton recently received a $90,000 award from the National Endowment for the Humanities to help finance his project, which is titled "Processes of Aztec State Formation in the Northeastern Basin of Mexico."

For the project, which is a collaborative effort with Deborah Nichols of Dartmouth College, Charlton will be working in Mexico for a portion of the next two years.

Charlton will continue his work in Mexico this July until the grant begins in January. His work involves dating artifacts from the Aztec city of Otumba.

Combining the glory of football, the flow of soccer and the non-violence of basketball, Ultimate Frisbee may be just what the name implies — the ultimate team sport.

"It's a great sport," said Marc Weinberger, who plays for the UI Ultimate Club. "You should play. Everyone should play."

Weinberger's enthusiasm for Ultimate is matched by that of his teammate, Erik Bloom. The two fifth-year seniors have played on Iowa's team since it began last summer.

As Bloom explained, Ultimate is more than simply tossing a Frisbee around for fun.

"It's a very athletic sport. It takes a lot of running, which can be tiring," he said. "And of course, you have to be able to throw the disk, but anyone can learn that in a couple of days."

According to Paul Chang, the founder and coach of the UI's Ultimate team, the game is phenomenally popular on both coasts.

"If this was California, you would not be writing about Ultimate, you would be playing it. In San Francisco, everyone plays. There are games every day all year round," he said.

In an attempt to recruit new members to the team and to offer an opportunity for others to learn the sport, Chang and members of the team have started a summer Ultimate league. Every Tuesday night, approximately 40 people, from beginners to experienced players, meet at Philip G. Hubbard Park to play Ultimate. Both Bloom and Chang are surprised by the number of people who are showing an interest in the game.

"I was skeptical at first," Chang said, "but so far, each Tuesday there are more and more people."

Chang, a faculty member at the UI School of Medicine, started playing Ultimate as an undergraduate at Harvard and continued to play during medical school at Stanford. When he came to Iowa, the first question he asked was, "Is there Ultimate here?"

"The first thing I wanted to do when I came here was to establish an Ultimate team," he said. "I found that people here are better athletes than out West, and they are more disciplined." These two qualities, Chang said, made his job of teaching the basic skills much easier.

In only one year of practice, the eight-member team made it to the quarterfinals of the national championship tournament last spring at Purdue.

"It was a remarkable achievement for such a small and young team," said Chang. He is certain that if they would have had more players, they would have succeeded further in the tournament.

Encouraged by the team's success, Chang is now setting higher goals for next year. His goal for this summer is to make the game more accessible and get more people involved. He invites anyone, male or female, jock or not, to try the sport.

"You can contribute and have fun at any level," he said. "There is no strong advantage to being male. You don't have to have the physical tools to compete like you do in football."

Ultimate is different from other Frisbee games in that it is a combination of what Chang calls the "best elements of football, basketball and soccer."

"From football you get the touch-down pass, from basketball you get non-contact and from soccer you get the continuous flow," he said.

Bloom said this mixture makes the game fun to play. "It's exciting because the game is non-stop; you are continuously running until someone scores."

In addition, Chang said, "Everyone has a glory position. Everyone can throw, catch and score. And no one gets bruised or beat up in the process."

As a coach, Chang emphasizes the motto of the Ultimate Players Association: "spirit of the game."

"This means we never discriminate. We never have tryouts for the team. And we use no officials. All fouls are resolved by the players," he said.

"Everyone has a role in Ultimate. It is a real team effort — you cannot win without complete team cooperation," he said.

Iowa riverboat gambling totals exceed projection for 1st time

DES MOINES — Eleven weeks into limited-stakes betting aboard Iowa riverboat casinos, the take from slot machines and gambling tables for the first time exceeded owners' projections for the season to date, regulators say.

From the April 1 start of legalized gambling on Iowa waterways through the end of last week, bettors had left behind $14,208,648, the Iowa Racing and Gaming Commission reported Thursday. Boat owners had projected the take as of June 16 would be $14,028,276.

The figures also disclosed that the performance of Iowa riverboats, exceeded weekly projections for a fifth straight week last week, rising 11 percent to $1,707,710. Owners had projected a weekly take of $1,383,271.

The figures reflected operations of four boats but exceeded projections based on operations of five boats. Figures were not available from the newest casino boat — the Mississippi Belle II, based in Clinton, which was projected to take in $46,569 from 1,865 passengers.

ABORTION PROTESTS

Abhorrent tactics

Where does freedom of expression end and the right to privacy begin? Last week anti-abortion activists ruthlessly crossed that line when they publicly displayed, on picket signs, the full names of two women scheduled to undergo abortions that day at a Livonia, Mich., clinic.

Any supporter of individual rights and freedoms should be appalled and horrified at such a blatant invasion of privacy.

This latest weapon in the anti-abortion arsenal is more frightening than any clinic bombing might be. Not only does the use of a patient's name violate the sanctity of medical records and confidentiality policies, but it demonstrates that some anti-abortionists feel they have the right to publicly chastise those who do not live in accordance with their views — a dangerous precept.

Those who decide to have an abortion do so with the expectation it is a private decision about a very personal matter.

The decision to have an abortion is a very difficult one for most women. Those who decide to have an abortion do so with the expectation it is a private decision about a very personal matter. The two women exploited for the anti-abortionist cause — one of whom is a 14-year-old girl — will surely suffer emotionally as a result.

The use of names is an attempt to deter women from having abortions by threatening to expose them to public scrutiny — thus subjecting them to harassment and judgment about something that is no one's business but their own.

American women should not have to live in fear of retribution when making a private, personal and legal decision such as whether or not to have a child.

A clear message should be sent to anti-abortion activists everywhere that such methods of protest are cruel, callous and absolutely unacceptable.

Mitch submits summer reading list

I just finished reading The New York Times Book Review. I was a bit disappointed, not only because it took me until Wednesday to finish it, but because there just wasn't all that much light summer fare to choose from. That is, sex and violence. So I decided to write the sort of column that one could take to the beach. At least, if the beach ever comes up for air. Below are excerpts from novels I would write if I had that sort of attention span.

The Reagan White House, A Completely Stoned Account

by Mitch "Witty" Kelly
Interview with Elizabeth Dole, May 8, 1991: "... So the GIP and Cap Wienberger finally got into it at the cabinet meeting. But neither one could really prove for sure that the other one had the bigger flap of turkey wobble skin on their neck. So Cap screamed, 'What did the Bethesda reports say?' And, of course, Reagan retorted, 'I don't remember.' So Cap got all honked off and started beaming the President with Jelly Bellies. By this time I was pretty fed up and so I said I was gonna have Bob beat the s-t out of them. Well, out of the blue, Nancy comes flying into the meeting on, I swear to God, a broom (which by the way was a good deal more full figured than its passenger). Then she just sort of hovered there in the middle of the room and cackled, 'I'll get you, my pretty, and your little dog, too!'"

War's Red Bellow, Steel's Grey Dawn (A man and his acronyms)

By Mitch Clancy
Lt. Colonel Mitchell Martin sat fidgeting at the controls of his M-1A1 main battle tank. He knew that in the next 10 minutes the elite Yakov brigade would be ramming the pride of Russian tank warfare through the smoldering steel and green grass of the Ruhr Valley. He also knew that his tank platoon, Delta Bravo Greco-Roman, would be outmanned and out-gunned. What he didn't know was whether the M-1A1's highly gripping and almost lyrically superior technology that had made the military-industrial complex almost comically rich would be enough to beat the odds. And more to the point, he wondered almost wistfully who was going to play him in the movie version. He was hoping for William Hurt. They were both losing their hair in the same distinguished way.

But Martin didn't have time to think about that. Those T-72s were going to be hitting the Killing Zone any minute now, and he knew with all his soul he was going to have to get in a Vietnam flashback before they did. Son of a Bitch, but if he wasn't going to draw some serious analogies before this whole weird mess was over.

Time streaked across Martin's mind like a Backfire Bomber, or a Hind D ground support copter, depending on what kind of a techno-hardware nutcase you, the reader, happen to be. He remembered how at the end all his friends, all those shiny brass buttons — the men he had become one soul with in the crucible called West Point — had become nothing more than cheap Velcro fasteners smeared with the mud of Da Nang. He'd blamed it on the type of careerist senior officer he's sworn in blood never to become. Because all of them looked and acted way too much like Brian Keith ..."

Desire's Heaving, Swollen Sea
A historical novel by Mitch Rosebud
"... Count Michelle Martin was a 25 year old muscular nobleman cum buccaneer cum explorer with the sort of sexual virility one might expect from Man-o-War. But just because he might, now and then, become a tearing off some succulent young woman's rippling, exceptionally low-cut satin dress and to making love to her with the rocking, sensuous rhythm the waves would sometimes make as they pounded violently against his proud ship The Well-rigged, just because he was all man, well, that didn't mean he wasn't also a sensitive, caring 17th-century kind of guy.

So it had hurt Michelle deeply, much more deeply than any of the 57 dueling scars that dominated his exceptionally arousing body, when Chastity Mangowet had told him about Victor. She had stood there on the poop deck, underneath what several hours of research at the public library had revealed to be the mizzenmast, and had said she was leaving him for Victor. Not Victor! Sure, both proud men looked exactly like pre-industrial Chippenhales. And yes, they both had the sort of moves (hubba-hubba) that would put anyone in the modern world to shame (with the possible exception of humor columnists). But that's where the similarity ended!

She had told him of her plans weeping proud tears and biting haughty lips endowed with the fullness of noble lineage. She always did that when she was being defiant and yet vulnerable, with a certain high-spiritedness softened by the innocence of a child, and boy did that ever burn his biscuits. And yet it made him ache with a simile involving either fire or a springtime thaw that presently escapes this author. And so, though the good Captain knew full well that by the end of the novel he would have only one more scene deserving the old highlighter treatment than Victor, he found himself not caring. He loved her, dammit ..."

Referendum offers needed improvement

The referendum issue that the Iowa City City Council has put before the voters is neither a small issue nor an unimportant one for our citizens. The $4.9 million cost for the new park and sports complex and renovation of Napoleon Park will be totally paid for in only 10 years, but will serve the whole community for generations to come.

This is a forward-looking proposal, as well as one which resolves serious problems now being experienced. It is also a proposal based on years of careful study.

In 1986, when Iowa City purchased a 160-acre tract for a new waste water treatment plant, 105 acres were set aside for future park and recreation use, specifically for additional playing fields. Even then, five years ago, it was recognized that both soccer and softball would soon outgrow current facilities.

A detailed program statement for the new complex was developed and adopted by the Parks and Recreation Commission in 1988. The City Council budgeted funds in FY 1990 for conceptual plans and cost estimates for both the new facility and Napoleon Park. Original cost estimates of $6.3 million have been reduced by 22 percent to $4.9 million through careful paring of the scope and specifications. Additional ways to reduce costs will be sought during the final design phase.

The two projects together received the No. 1 priority ranking out of over 30 identified program and facility needs during the commission's 1990 strategic planning process.

There are several specific reasons for citizens to vote "YES" June 25: First, softball and soccer programs have outgrown current facilities, and there are no other available sites that will meet current and future needs.

Guest Opinion

John Watson

Second, the conditions of current playing fields, in particular those used for youth sports, are very poor. Some are an embarrassment. Our young people deserve safe and adequate facilities. They don't have them.

Third, nine of the current soccer fields, the busiest nine used by the youngest players, are located in neighborhood parks which were never designed, located or intended for the intensive use now being experienced. Problems with parking, traffic congestion, wear and tear, and safety have become acute.

Fourth, there will be direct and indirect economic benefits to the community. The most direct and immediate impact will come from tournaments that these facilities will attract. The Iowa City Convention and Visitors Bureau projects that a 100 team soccer tournament, which will be quite feasible, will generate expenditures of about $300,000 at our hotels, restaurants and shops. Similar tournaments for adult and girls softball, with a turnover or multiplier of 2.5, will have an economic impact of well over $1 million per year.

Finally, Iowa City is a vibrant and growing community (fastest growing by far of the 10 largest cities in Iowa). It enjoys a sound and expanding economic base, an excellent AAA bond rating, low crime rate and low tax rate (only two of the 10 largest cities have a lower tax rate). Iowa City is a community that takes pride in the quality of life it offers its citizens, as well as the many excellent public facilities such as our library, Senior Center, schools, downtown area, parks, swimming pools, and other cultural and recreational assets.

That same consideration and quality has not been offered to the thousands of children and adults who enjoy soccer and softball, and the tens of thousands yet to come. Your "YES" vote on June 25 will help rectify that.

John Watson is chairman of the Iowa City Parks and Recreation Commission.

Students pay the price

To the Editor:

Once again the Board of Regents has set out to make students pay for the mistakes of a poorly managed university. On top of rising tuition and a new $30 Student Health fee, a mandatory computer fee of $40 a semester will be imposed upon students, both undergraduate and graduate, this fall. This fee will be imposed upon everyone, regardless of actual computer usage.

On one hand, this is an unfair imposition upon persons who do not utilize UI computers. To use myself as an example, I purchased a PC from WEEG Computing Center here at Iowa and paid a $75 support fee at the time. As far as I am concerned, my dues are taken care of. As for using computers during registration (which one indirectly uses even when going to the Registration Center), I thought that was part of the logic behind paying tuition — a student pays tuition to be able to register and take part in all the other things tuition covers. I use myself as an example to show that just as there are many students who do use UI computers, there are many who do not. If concerns truly sit behind the university's inability to continue providing free access to computers, then it would seem a system of charge per use could be easily instigated. Instead this is just another excuse for a bailout that is to be provided by the students.

The real problem lies behind the university doing an insufficient job of regulating its spending habits (as evidenced by the recent revelation of the exorbitant amount of money wasted on the failed UISA Rose Bowl venture and the lack of supervision in following where that money went). I agree with Mr. Kenyon, who in his editorial raised the question of whether or not students should ask to see just where their money is going.

If the Board of Regents is concerned about the financial problems of the UI, perhaps they should spend more time closely examining the reasons that lie behind the problems, rather than making students perform cleanup duties while cleaning out their own pockets.

Remove the gags

To the Editor:

If you had a medical problem, you would expect your physician to explain all of the treatment options which were available so that you could make an informed decision. A recent Supreme Court ruling makes it impossible for a clinic which receives Title X funds to provide information on all of the choices available to pregnant women.

On May 23, 1991, the Supreme Court upheld the Rust vs. Sullivan Gag Rule decision on pregnancy option counseling. The ruling prevents any discussion of abortion as an option, even if the patient asks for information about pregnancy termination, or even if abortion would be considered medically necessary for the health of the woman.

The key issue here is not abortion, but freedom of speech and the right to quality medical care. Health care providers who wish to continue receiving Title X funds are placed in a position where they must censor medical information. They will be unable to present all options, even though abortion is a legally available choice. They do not ask to advocate or encourage abortion, but simply to present it as one possibility among several choices.

Freedom of speech is guarded by the Bill of Rights, but health-care workers in clinics that receive federal assistance are being told they cannot speak freely about standard medical options. Freedom of information regarding health-care choices is in jeopardy for certain segments of the population.

If the Supreme Court gag rule remains in effect, Title X clinics and their clients will be caught in a no-win situation. If clinics decide to continue objective counseling and present all the options, they will lose federal funding. This means that clinics will have to increase the charges for their services or cut back on the care they provide. In either case, low-income patients will find medical care harder to obtain and more expensive. If clinics decide to follow the guidelines and restrict information, they may be liable for malpractice, and patients will no longer be able to make a truly informed decision.

This ruling ultimately reinforces a double standard of medical care. Those who can afford to see private physicians will still be given all their options, but those with fewer resources will be further restricted. The poorer segments of the population already have unequal access to quality medical care. The Supreme Court ruling means they also now have unequal access to complete information.

A legislative battle is now being fought to prevent these injustices. The Chaffee Bill S323 in the Senate and the Porter-Wyden Bill HR392 in the House of Representatives would overturn the gag rule by changing the language of the Title X funding regulations. We urge you to write to Sens. Harkin and Grassley and Rep. Nagle asking them to support these bills.

If you had to make an important decision, wouldn't you want to know all the facts? What you don't know can hurt you. Fight the gag order.

Painter questioned

To the Editor:

What disturbs me is not so much the emotion-laden, "chip-on-the-shoulder" type of rhetoric that Kim Painter uses to advance her viewpoints, but the apparent hypocrisy implied by her arguments.

First, the argument that people shouldn't attempt to impose their particular beliefs on the majority: The assumptions implied in this argument are 1) that Kim is part of the majority 2) that people with her beliefs are in the majority 3) that the majority is right. I'm sure Ms. Painter would not use this argument when speaking up for gay/lesbian rights issues.

The second is focus on "rights." I'd venture to say that "pro-choicers" are as fanatical, absolute and religious (terms normally applied to "pro-lifers") about defending the right of sexual expression, be it homosexual, heterosexual or premarital, as the "pro-lifer" (or "them" as in Kim's editorial) are about the need to balance the right to choose with the rights of the unborn.

Hearken now

To the Editor:

In past troubled times, leaders such as FDR and Harry Truman have shown us that government, like a hammer, is a tool that can be used wisely. With the government's help, they were able to build great things, such as libraries, schools and hospitals. But George Bush has proven that the tool of government can also be used to hit someone on the head. The real thousand points of light are the stars we see from being hit over the head with the deficit, the savings and loan crisis, high unemployment and runaway inflation.

It's time we shifted national priorities from policing the world to addressing domestic needs. What's been good for Waterloo, Waverly and Winterset is what we need in the White House: Tom Harkin. Growing up on a family farm, having a deaf brother and seeing his father denied health care because of money have made Sen. Harkin sensitive to the concerns of everyday Americans. I cite his writing of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) as an example of his sensitivity and dedication to one deserving, but long forgotten group of Americans. For 20 years, through speeches and public policy, Sen. Harkin has reaffirmed his commitment to education, health care, labor and farmers.

Many argue that George Bush can't be beaten in '92. But I've seen no poll that shows that voters support exclusive, elitist economic policies. Our country and the Democratic Party can win next year with an enthusiastic pro-fills candidate.

We need Tom Harkin to become our next president.

Iowa City and the UI both forbid discrimination on the basis of sexual preference in their civil rights policies.

"I think overall it's pretty open here, more than in other places I've lived," Phye said. "But it still has its conservative pockets."

Beemyn said the perception that Iowa City is an open-minded and tolerant community is a misconception.

"There is still a great deal of hostility toward the lesbian and gay community," he said.

June is celebrated nationally as Gay Pride Month in commemoration of the 1969 Stonewall Riots in New York City — considered by many to be the beginning of the gay and lesbian civil rights movement. At that time, it was illegal to be homosexual and illegal to go to a gay bar.

The riots began when police raided the Stonewall Bar, and gays and lesbians fought the arrests, rioting in the streets for two days.

Lesbian and Gay Pride celebrations have been going on in Iowa City since 1985 — last year more than 300 people attended the Pride Week march and rally. Phye estimates this weekend's rally and march will have an even larger turnout.

Beemyn urges local gays, lesbians, bisexuals and supporters to attend this weekend's activities.

"We certainly encourage people who are straight but not narrow to participate in events to show solidarity and support for the gay, lesbian and bisexual community.

"The (gay) community often seems invisible," he added. "This is a chance to be seen and heard."

Baker

Soviets were rolling back on parts of another treaty signed last November which will cut the number of troops, tanks and other non-nuclear weapons in Europe.

The problems over that treaty were recently resolved, but Baker said Thursday they had sidetracked progress on the START agreement.

He also sought to hold the Soviets to promises given by former Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze at a meeting with Baker last December, saying the outstanding issues could not be ignored because "they constitute part of a broader package" agreed to at the time.

Baker identified the three problems as having to do with what types of reconfigured missiles would be allowed under the treaty, how warheads removed from certain missiles would be counted.

Baker said an exchange of letters earlier this month between Bush and Gorbachev had considerably narrowed the gap on the first issue but not on the other two.

administering the project."

Kelly Hayworth, Coralville city administrator, said that the matter would soon be placed on the city council agenda.

Contacted at the meeting, Larry Wilson of the UT's Department of Planning and Administrative Services said, "That's quite a large piece of property (to the south of Highway 6), and the university would like to keep its options open. We'll be talking to the city of Coralville as this moves along."

Supervisors approve Johnson County S.E.A.T.S. contract

Larry Offner
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors approved Thursday the service contract for fiscal year 1992 between Johnson County S.E.A.T.S. (Special Elderly and Handicapped Transportation Service) and the East Central Iowa Council of Governments. The board also approved the fiscal year 1992 equipment lease between S.E.A.T.S. and the council.

According to S.E.A.T.S. Director Larry Olson, the East Central Iowa Council of Governments consists of Washington, Iowa, Benton, Jones, Linn and Johnson counties. Each year, the council reports to and requests funding from the state for the special transportation needs of the member counties. These are the services provided for in the contract approved by the board Thursday.

"The contract does not require any money to change hands," said Olson. "It spells out the services to be provided by the council."

Contacted later, Olson said, "S.E.A.T.S. vehicles and radios are leased to us by the council. The lease (approved Thursday by the board) requires no exchange of money.

It provides for paperwork and how we are to care for the equipment." Regular bus service, such as that provided by Iowa City and Coralville Transit systems, are administered through the Johnson County Council of Governments, according to Olson.

"S.E.A.T.S. has 21 vans and small buses," Olson said. Earlier he had told the board that he may have an opportunity to acquire an underused van from Linn County.

"Linn County put less than 10,000 miles on the van last year," said Olson. "When that happens, the state may question the council's funding for next year. As the council owns the vans, it can shift them around among the counties. We average about 18,000 miles per year on our equipment."

"Linn County has a most unique paint scheme on their vans," Olson told the board. "We may have to incur an expense in repainting it."

In other business, Carol Thompson, director of the Iowa Department of Human Services Johnson County Office, discussed upcoming cuts in the department's budget. Final determination will not be made until after July 1, but the department will be closing its 16 district offices around the state.

Office space for district employees will become the responsibility of the county offices, Thompson told the board. This will cause an as yet undetermined increase in the county offices' expenses.

Contacted later, Thompson said that administration of the Juvenile Justice system has been returned to the counties by the state. Last year, the statewide operating deficit for the system was approximately $6 million, according to Thompson.

Astro

down to make room for the bank's expansion. The bank will take possession of the theater's building July 1.

Central States Theatres, the company that owns all movie theaters in Iowa City, sold the Astro last year, said Kim Davis.

"This was a corporate business decision," he said. "The Astro was not sold because business was really bad or attendance had dropped off."

The Astro, as the last of the single-screen houses in Iowa City, represents the end of an era in moviegoing.

"They don't build theaters like this anymore," Kim Davis said. "They've all gone to multiplex houses. Times change. It's finally caught up with the Astro."

Come Monday morning, Iowa City will be left with seven movie screens. A four-plex theater, also owned by Central States Theatres, is planned to open in Coralville in early November. The theaters will be located on Highway 6 next to the Hills Bank.

Some seats in the Astro have already been sold to private buyers. Other remains of the theater will be transferred to the new complex in Coralville or be used in the Iowa City area.

Kim Davis said a few Astro employees have already left. "That's one of the unfortunate things about what's happening here," Kim Davis said, adding that an attempt will be made to integrate remaining employees into jobs at other theaters.

Courts

Reinstated unanimously a $10 million libel lawsuit by a psychologist who accuses a staff writer for The New Yorker magazine of making up quotes attributed to him. But the decision provided considerable legal protection for writers and reporters who misquote someone, either accidentally or intentionally.

Ruled 6-3 in cases from Louisiana and Texas that a key provision of a federal law protecting minority voting power applies to the election of state and local judges.

Ruled that states may force their judges to retire at age 70. The court, by a 7-2 vote, said state judges aren't protected by the federal law against age bias.

Revived, by a 6-3 vote, a liquor company's bid to recover $2.4 million it paid in Georgia taxes under a law later found to be unconstitutional. The decision could have enormous impact for the treasuries of all 50 states.

The bus-search ruling was an expected development by an increasingly conservative court that steadily is giving police more power to conduct searches without warrants or probable cause to suspect a crime.

The court relied in part on a 1984 decision that permitted immigration officials to "raid" factories in search of illegal immigrants. The court also has let police in airport terminals question people who look like drug couriers.

University of Miami law Professor Mary Coombs, representing the American Civil Liberties Union, said Thursday's decision "in theory is not bad."

But, she said, what it means is that "in the real world police will keep on making life inconvenient, difficult and oppressive for bus passengers who don't have any drugs."

The court overturned a Florida Supreme Court ruling that Broward County sheriff's officers violated the rights of passenger Terrence Bostick when they boarded a Miami bus bound for Atlanta during a brief stop in Fort Lauderdale. Officers said he consented to a search of his travel bags, and they found cocaine in one of them.

The justices ordered new lower court hearings to determine whether Bostick reasonably believed he had to comply with the police search-request or could have refused with impunity.

"Our cases make it clear that a seizure does not occur simply because a police officer approaches an individual and asks a few questions," O'Connor wrote. "The mere fact that Bostick did not feel free to leave the bus does not mean that the police seized him."

Bush welcomes Yeltsin, supports Gorbachev

Terence Hunt
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush warmly welcomed radical reformer Boris Yeltsin to the White House on Thursday, but immediately reaffirmed U.S. support for the man often targeted by the Russian president's criticism — Mikhail Gorbachev.

"I want to be very clear about this: The United States will continue to maintain the closest possible official relationship with the Soviet government of President Gorbachev," Bush told Yeltsin in a Rose Garden ceremony at the opening of their talks.

Yeltsin listened attentively but impassively as Bush spoke about his rival. After the public welcoming, Bush and Yeltsin met for 1 1/2 hours and then the Soviet official called on Vice President Dan Quayle.

The White House hoped Bush's meeting would be a boost for the economic and political reforms championed by Yeltsin. For Yeltsin, it provided a world stage where he could underscore support for democracy, free enterprise, free elections and the rule of law.

Yeltsin, capping a triumphant visit to Washington, arrived at the White House in a chauffeur-driven limousine led by a procession of motorcycle police. It was in sharp contrast to his 1989 visit, when Bush refused to give Yeltsin a formal appointment, though he did see him briefly.

Congratulating him on his election as Russian president, Bush said, "He won by a landslide."

"We have been heartened and encouraged by President Yeltsin's commitment to democratic values and free-market principles, and we look forward to working with him," Bush said.

At the same time, Bush underscored his support for Gorbachev, who is struggling to keep his nation from political and economic chaos.

Bush said Yeltsin, in the first minutes of their meeting, told him that "he and President Gorbachev are in very close contact and working cooperatively together to achieve these ends."

"He knows that I have great respect for President Gorbachev as I do for him," Bush said. "And our ability to work together has produced, I think, enormous benefits for both of our countries, and it has served the cause of world peace and stability in the world."

"So let's not forget that it was President Gorbachev's courageous policies of glasnost and perestroika that were the pivotal factors enabling us to end the Cold War and make Europe whole and free," Bush said.

He added that he wants good relations with the Soviet government "and certainly the republic governments. And certainly, obviously, with this dramatic election, that includes Russia, the largest of them all."

Yeltsin told Bush that his election — which was the first presidential balloting in Russia's 1,000-year history — was a mandate for democracy and "profound economic and social reform."

Yet, Yeltsin said, "We still have forces back at home that want to go back to the times of stagnation."

"I assure you this will not happen," the populist leader told Bush through an interpreter. "Russia, which accounts for 70 percent of the gross national product of the Soviet Union, is firmly committed to democracy and will not allow any reversion."

Yeltsin's Russian federation has urged a cutoff of all Soviet foreign aid, including money for Cuba. Bush, replying to a reporter's question, said, "They know that we've had differences on Cuba, and it wouldn't hurt my feelings a bit if they cut off all foreign aid to Cuba."

As he left the White House, Yeltsin told reporters, "it was a very interesting meeting, very constructive one." He said they talked about solving problems, such as the need to train managerial personnel and problems of banking and transportation.

In addition to Bush, Yeltsin met with Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher and a group of American business executives to discuss expanding trade and investment in the Russian republic. He also stopped at the Pentagon for talks with Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said Yeltsin advocated that the federal government be in charge of the armed forces but that the Russian republic have control of the defense industries.

The spokesman said Cheney "didn't express any reaction" to Yeltsin's argument and that overall there wasn't much "give and take" during the session. "It was more or less, here's what we're up to, (and) here's what we're up to," Williams said.

In preparation for Yeltsin's visit, Bush met over breakfast with former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who was always wary of Soviet promises.

Berlin regains status of German capital in final step of reunification

The Associated Press

BONN, Germany — Lawmakers voted Thursday to return Germany's seat of power to Berlin, its historic home, and strip Bonn of the status of provisional capital it has held since the end of World War II.

The narrow vote, a finishing touch to last year's reunification of Germany, followed months of bitter debate. While many Germans promoted cosmopolitan Berlin as the natural capital in a prosperous, united Europe, others feared the choice would threaten Bonn economically and evoke memories of Berlin as the former Nazi capital.

Berliners poured into the streets to celebrate with champagne and fireworks. Cars jammed the Kurfuerstendamm shopping boulevard, honking their horns. Some Germans rode on the hoods of cars, and others leaned out the windows to hoot and holler their happiness.

"Berlin won, Berlin won!" two young men shouted from the window of an East German Trabant car.

In Bonn, a crowd of 10,000 people jamming the tiny market square watched sadly as the vote was broadcast on a giant television screen.

Lawmakers in the Bundestag, Parliament's decision-making lower house, chose Berlin by a 337-320 vote.

Under the proposal approved Thursday, the Chancellery, ministries and the Bundestag will transfer to Berlin. The Bundestag and the chancellor are expected to move after four years, after the Reichstag, Germany's former imperial Parliament, is renovated.

The overall transfer is expected to take 10 to 12 years.

Parliament's upper house, the Bundesrat, will remain in Bonn, as will thousands of ministry workers and other bureaucrats.

Berlin Mayor Eberhard Diepgen said at a party, "The vote was a very happy moment, and I felt like a heavy burden had fallen from me."

The Bundesrat is to vote July 5 to ratify the Bundestag's decision, but it is unlikely to block the lower house.

Some Berliners worried that moving the bureaucracy from Bonn would spoil the free-wheeling, offbeat atmosphere in Berlin.

"Berlin is kaput," said Alwin Nachtweh, 41, who sells chunks of the Berlin Wall and Communist memorabilia from a concession stand where Checkpoint Charlie once stood.

"The culture, the freedom, the sense of escape here — it's all going to go. Big business will take over. This decision was made by Mercedes-Benz," he said.

Peter Proese, a 55-year-old retiree, disagreed.

"Does having the capital spoil Paris?" he asked.

Lawmakers considered five proposals Thursday.

U.S. to withdraw Air Force troops from Philippines

Eileen Guerrero
The Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — The U.S. Air Force decided Thursday to withdraw most of its troops from the Philippines because volcanic eruptions of Mount Pinatubo damaged Clark Air Base, U.S. officials said.

The decision cast further doubt on the future of American bases in the Philippines and suggested that Clark was extensively damaged and will be inoperable for months.

The 4,795-foot volcano spewed more ash over Clark, 10 miles to the east, in seven explosions Thursday. The death toll from more than two weeks of eruptions rose to 268.

Television reports said several buildings near the volcano collapsed under tons of ash. Several tremors were recorded, one of which registered 4 on the Richter scale. The tremors indicate magma may again be rising to the surface of the crater.

Officials also announced that Manila's international and domestic airports would be closed between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. Friday so workers could clear ash and debris.

Navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Kevin Mukri announced that 4,500 of the 7,000 Air Force personnel would be returned to the United States until repairs are completed at Clark.

About 1,500 airmen will remain to guard Clark and 1,000 others will stay at the Subic Bay naval base, Mukri said.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams said the military was removing 20,000 personnel. He could not confirm whether the Air Force troops would be withdrawn.

A U.S. Air Force spokesman in Washington, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said officials are considering withdrawing many active duty military personnel, but "no decisions have been made."

Nearly 15,000 American troops, dependents and civilian employees moved from Clark to Subic on June 10. But until Thursday, the evacuation of Americans from the Philippines affected primarily military dependents.

The evacuation Mukri announced Thursday does not include Navy and Marine Corps personnel at Subic Bay, 25 miles southwest of the volcano.

But U.S. officials said Subic was also extensively damaged, and the presence of additional Air Force troops made it difficult for the Navy to clean up and support the Pacific fleet.

The eruptions damaged at least 160 buildings at Subic, according to U.S. officials. Damage at Clark has not been totally assessed, but Air Force officials and journalists who visited Tuesday said it looked like a desert, with at least six inches of ash covering the runways.

Air Force officials must decide whether it is cost-effective to repair Clark if the volcano remains active, as scientists predict, and if the Philippines refuses to allow American forces to stay after the lease on their bases expires Sept. 16.

President Corazon Aquino said the Americans had not communicated any change in their position, which is that they want to continue access to Clark and Subic.

Talks on an extension broke down in May over compensation and the duration of the agreement. The president of the Philippines' Senate, Jovito Salonga, said an agreement had nearly been completed just before the volcano erupted, with the only outstanding issue being Philippine jurisdiction over American service members.

The eruption of Mount Pinatubo has also sabotaged plans to convert Clark into an international airport and commercial center if it was not retained by the U.S. military.

The volcano has had other adverse effects on U.S.-Philippine ties.

In Olongapo, the home of the Subic Bay naval base, Mayor Richard Gordon has sharply criticized the commander, Rear Adm. Thomas Mercer, for allegedly refusing to allow Filipinos to pass through the garrison to escape the volcano last weekend.

Gordon accused Mercer of "callousness and insensitivity," and refused to accept a shipment of apples from Mercer for distribution to Olongapo residents.

Colombian drug lord Escobar behind bars

Extradition ban led to surrender

Steven Gutkin
The Associated Press

MEDELLIN, Colombia — Colombia's most wanted fugitive was safely tucked away in a luxurious prison Thursday after surrendering under terms that had many of his countrymen in an uproar.

Pablo Escobar, the 41-year-old leader of the Medellin cocaine cartel, is suspected of masterminding the terror campaign that killed hundreds of people as the government pressed the largest manhunt in the nation's history.

He surrendered on Wednesday, just hours after a government panel voted to ban extraditions in the new constitution. Escobar is wanted in the United States on charges of murder and drug trafficking.

A day after his surrender, government officials refused to say what, if any, charges might be brought against him. They also declined to say when he would be questioned or even if a prosecuting team was being readied.

Although Escobar has been charged with complicity in the Aug. 18, 1989, murder of presidential candidate Sen. Luis Carlos Galan, it was unclear Thursday if he had confessed to any crime.

Confessing to one crime was a requirement for the leniency given to other suspected drug traffickers.

The war on Escobar and other acknowledged drug lords began after the assassination of Galan, who ran on a platform demanding strong action against the cartels. But even with Escobar's surrender and imprisonment, the controversy was far from over.

"Terror Has Won," the El Espectador newspaper said in a banner

A soldier watches the hills surrounding the jail housing Pablo Escobar in Envigado, Colombia, Thursday. The billionaire drug lord surrendered to authorities Wednesday, hours after an assembly rewriting the country's constitution voted to prohibit the extradition of Colombian nationals.

headline Thursday. Accompanying the story was a list of the terrorist attacks blamed on Escobar and his henchmen.

The daily, whose publisher and five other employees were murdered by suspected Escobar associates, lashed out at the new draft constitution banning extraditions.

But newspapers near Escobar's home base of Medellin, home of the main drug cartel, applauded the leniency plan that persuaded the multimillionaire to surrender after three years in hiding.

"A Triumph For Justice," El Mundo declared. El Colombiano headlined its Thursday editions: "A Step Toward Peace."

Residents of Antioquia state, of which Medellin is the capital, flooded the governor's office with calls congratulating the government on Escobar's surrender, said Acting Gov. Ivan Echaverry.

Escobar was whisked by helicopter Wednesday to a luxury jail in his home town of Envigado, near Medellin.

Bystanders shouted "Viva Colombia" as they watched the drug lord arrive with companions John Jairo Velazquez, Carlos Aguilar and Otomiel Gonzalez Franco, who also surrendered.

Escobar has free run of the facilities. The prison boasts huge bedrooms with walk-in closets and private baths.

McEnroe knows he's a longshot

Shelley Anslow
The Associated Press

MANCHESTER, England—John McEnroe has no illusions about his chances of winning Wimbledon.

"I'm certainly one of the longshots," he said.

McEnroe is preparing for what could be one of his last attempts at the title he won in 1981, 1983 and 1984.

"I would guess that I'll probably play this year and next year and that's probably going to be about it," McEnroe said. "I've played a lot of tournaments over the years and some things are more difficult now — the traveling and getting up for matches.

"I don't want to feel like I'm cheating the public. I want to feel like every time I step on the court I'm really into it."

That wasn't the case Wednesday when McEnroe lost 7-6, 7-6 to Italy's Cristiano Caratti in the first round of the Manchester Open, the final men's warmup before Wimbledon, which opens Monday.

McEnroe threw his racket several times, drawing a warning for racket abuse. The match provided plenty of fodder for Britain's tabloids, which blared headlines such as "McEnrow!" and "Angry Mac's Back in the Old Routine."

McEnroe arrived in England after helping the United States defeat Spain in the Davis Cup, and about a month after his wife, actress Tatum O'Neal, gave birth to their third child.

His original plan was to play at Queen's Club in London as part of his Wimbledon warmup, but the Gulf War meant the Davis Cup had to be rescheduled and the two events clashed.

"When I was named to the Davis

McEnroe thanks a higher power for his Davis Cup success last week.

Wimbledon

Cup team it was apparent that this would be a difficult transition," the 32-year-old McEnroe said. "I wasn't necessarily expecting too much here because you build up for Davis Cup and for Wimbledon but that puts the tournament in between in a difficult situation."

McEnroe will have to play his very best at Wimbledon. He is in the same bracket as defending champion Stefan Edberg, U.S. Open champ Pete Sampras, former Wimbledon champs Jimmy Connors and Pat

Cash and the dangerous Goran Ivanisevic.

The Wimbledon committee usually goes its own way when it comes to seedings, but this year it followed the rankings. That means that a clay-court specialist like Emilio Sanchez of Spain is the No. 11 seed, whereas McEnroe is No. 16.

"It surprised me that they didn't make changes when they announced the seedings," McEnroe said. "It's the first year I can remember that they didn't."

After his Manchester defeat, McEnroe headed to London to practice at Wimbledon for his first-round match against Brazil's Jaime Oncins.

Defense rules in NHL draft

John F. Bonfatti
The Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — After center Eric Lindros becomes the first pick in the NHL draft on Saturday, seven defensemen are lined up behind him and should be taken within the next nine selections.

The crop of defensemen includes an American who most likely will play with the U.S. Olympic team, an 18-year-old with a slapshot some have compared to the rocket possessed by Calgary's Al MacInnis, and a 6-foot-3, 220-pound player who is the NHL's prototype size-wise at the position.

The consensus around the NHL is that the expansion San Jose Sharks, who have the second pick after the Quebec Nordiques, will take the American, Boston University's Scott Lachance.

Lachance, expected to play with the U.S. Olympic team in Albertville, France this winter, would join the Sharks toward the end of the season, giving the team a boost at the gate midway through its initial season.

At 6-1, 190 pounds, Lachance isn't overly large by NHL defenseman standards, but talent evaluators say he is strong on his skates.

Lachance is considered exceptionally sound in his own end and, although he only scored 5 goals and 19 assists as a freshman with the Terriers, he is more than adept at bringing the puck out of his own zone and following up on the offensive forays of others.

His standing increased significantly after his play against some of the world's best young players at the 1991 World Junior Championships.

Either the Sharks, if they pass on Lachance, or the New Jersey Devils, who own the third pick, will almost certainly take the only other forward among the top six prospects, Pat Falloon of the Western Hockey League's Spokane Chiefs.

Falloon, 5-11, 192 pounds, may not be immediately ready for the NHL, but scouts think it won't be long before he's enjoying the kind of offensive success in the NHL that he's had at the junior level.

The right wing-center scored 60 goals and 64 assists in 71 games two years ago and increased his productivity last year, adding four more goals and 10 more assists in 10 fewer games.

Like Lachance, there's a good possibility Falloon will play in the 1992 Olympics, with Dave King's Canadian national team.

The chances are excellent that the next six picks will be defensemen. They are Scott Niedermayer, Aaron Ward, Philippe Boucher, Brent Bilodeau, Richard Matvi-chuk and Darcy Werenka.

Niedermayer is a rushing defenseman who has benefited from the hockey version of the run-and-shoot offense practiced by the WHL's Kamloops Blazers.

In 57 games with the Blazers last year, he had 26 goals and 56 assists. As a 15-year-old bantam player three years ago, he scored 55 goals in 62 games.

Bilodeau, of the WHL's Seattle Thunderbirds, has the size (6-3, 220 pounds) general managers covet, but scouts are divided on whether he has an aggressive-enough temperament to take advantage of his huge frame.

No one knocked Ward's abrasiveness last year as a freshman at Michigan. The 6-2, 200-pound player collected 126 penalty minutes and is known for his aggressive play. Boucher, 6-2, 190 pounds, terrorized Quebec Major Junior Hockey League goaltenders last year with his low, heavy shot from the point. He scored 21 goals and added 46 assists in his first junior season with the Granby Bisons.

Matvichuk is the same size as Boucher and also possesses a booming slapshot that he used to a team-high 22 assists in power plays last year with the WHL's Saskatoon Blades.

Werenka isn't quite as big as Boucher or Matvichuk but is known for his work clearing traffic in the slot for the WHL Lethbridge Hurricanes. Thanks in part to more power-play time, he increased his point total from 19 to 50 in his second year as a junior.

The player most likely to break the string of defensemen is left wing Patrick Poulin of the QMJHL's St-Hyacinthe Laser, who had 32 goals and 38 assists last year.

He has all the necessary offensive skills — skating, stickhandling and shooting — but some scouts say he doesn't play with consistent intensity.

Three other forwards in the Quebec League, which is known for its offensive concentration, could also go in the first round.

Martin Lapointe of the Laval Titans has averaged 43 goals in each of his last two seasons. Rene Corbet scored 25 last year for the Drummondville Voltigeurs but 53 in 42 games as a midget the year before, and Yanic Perreault has scored 53, 51 and 87 goals in his last three seasons with the Trois Rivieres Draveurs.

The top Europeans eligible for the draft are Swedish forwards Markus Naslund, Niklas Sundblad and Peter Forsberg, and Czech forward Martin Rucinsky.

The goaltending crop is considered extremely thin. In a report by the league's Central Scouting Bureau that detailed 45 top prospects, only four were goalies.

Letterman slow to pull trigger

Arthur Rostein
The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Talk about missing a shot at baseball immortality. David Letterman may be miffing it big time. Almost like walking in the winning run after having the batter 0-and-2.

It's enough to make No. 1 on his Top 10 List — the one for why he shouldn't pitch against the Houston Astros: "I forgot to mail, phone or fax in my R.S.V.P."

A week-and-a-half after being invited to pitch for the Pacific Coast League's Tucson Toros in its July 1 exhibition against the parent Houston Astros, there's still no word from Letterman — the guy who's been making a pitch for months about strutting his stuff in the bigs.

The host of NBC's "Late Night With David Letterman" has been offering his services "to any major league team" wanting an inning of shutout ball.

He has said he might not strike out everyone or get the batters out in order but has guaranteed a scoreless inning.

So Rick Holtzman, owner of the Class AAA Toros, Fed Ex'd an invitation to start against the Astros at Hi Corbett Field. And Jon Ruby, general manager of the local NBC-TV affiliate, also faxed a letter last week urging him to show up.

Neither had received a reply as of Thursday.

And Letterman's office has been no help, with a spokeswoman saying her boss would not be available to talk.

The invitation said Letterman would stay on the mound at the mercy of Toros manager Bob Skinner. It also invited him to hit in a pregame home run hitting contest and to work the play-by-play broadcast.

"It's time to put up or shut up!" Toros general manager Mike Feder said. "He's been whining for two months, and now he's got the chance. . . . Now we are calling his bluff, and await the final verdict."

Feder said he has been told Letterman's staff contends it is considering offers to pitch for other minor league teams, but he added, "To the best of my knowledge, they've not gotten an offer to pitch against a major league team."

"I doubt if he'll get another chance to pitch against a major league team," Feder said.

Feder then gave his Top 10 reasons why Letterman should appear:

- In the heat of the Arizona desert he can get his old arm loose.
- It might be 108 degrees that day, but it's a dry heat.
- So he can visit the birthplace of his idol . . . Gary Shandling.
- He enjoys public humiliation.
- Pete Rose bet Lenny Dykstra that Letterman wouldn't show.
- So he'll have a real reason to wear a baseball cap in public.
- He won't be invited to have lunch with Dan Quayle that day.
- To be eligible for a Lite beer commercial with other great athletes such as Bob Uecker, Marv Throneberry and Rodney Dangerfield.
- No one else wants him.
- He'd be lounging poolside on Monday — his day off.

Viverito not interested in Bowlsby's old job

The Associated Press

CEDAR FALLS — Gateway Conference Commissioner Patty Viverito says she's not interested in succeeding Bob Bowlsby as Northern Iowa's athletic director.

Viverito has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the UNI job, which opened when Bowlsby was named athletic director at Iowa earlier this month.

"I'm flattered that people think I would be able to fill Bob's shoes there, but no, I don't intend to pursue it," Viverito said from her St. Louis, Mo., office. "I think my time and efforts are better spent at the conference level."

Viverito will join the Missouri Valley Conference staff next year. That office also is in St. Louis.

"My husband has a good job here and we've got two young children who aren't in school yet," Viverito said. "My roots are kind of cemented in St. Louis for the next few years."

Viverito said she'll miss working with Bowlsby, who was one of the leaders in forming the Gateway's football division. She also said she's confident that UNI will find a good athletic director.

"It's like Bob said himself—a fine institution attracts fine people, and Northern Iowa is a fine institution," she said.

Although she's not interested in the job, Viverito said other women are qualified to head up the UNI athletic program. The University of Washington recently hired Barbara Hedges as athletic director.

"There are a lot of good women out there and apparently they are going to get their opportunity," Viverito said.

Australian Ian Baker-Finch shot a 62, 9-under-par Thursday to take the lead at the Anheuser-Busch Classic, matching the club record.

Baker-Finch's 62 not 'good enough'

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — At Geiberger, consider yourself fortunate.

Ian Baker-Finch matched the course record with a 9-under-par 62 in Thursday's opening round of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic. Then he lamented about what could have been.

"I missed five other birdie putts from 10 feet in," Baker-Finch said. Had he made three of those, the personable Australian would have tied the PGA Tour single-round scoring record Geiberger established with a 59 at the 1977 Memphis Classic.

"I've been setting some plans and goals recently, and I was thinking the other night how I'd really like to break 60," said Baker-Finch, whose previous low round was a 63. "And I realized you can't think about breaking 60 until you've shot 62 or 61. So I was thinking I wanted to lower my achievement level."

"Now I can start thinking about 61, and hopefully I can eventually think about getting to less than 60. But 62's a goal achieved."

Baker-Finch birdied six of his last seven holes at Kingsmill Golf Club to tie the course record set by Mike Sullivan a year ago on the 6,776-yard layout along the James River.

Bob Gilder, who began his round about the time Baker-Finch was finishing his, also avoided any bogeys in carding an 8-under 63.

"It's tough to go out there and see that," Gilder said of glancing at the leader boards early in his round. "It works on your mind a little bit."

Dan Pohl, continuing his recovery from major back surgery that kept him off the tour last year, had a 64. Also at that figure was Mike Reid.

Pohl said he needs 45 minutes of treatment and exercise before he can even step on the practice tee each day.

"I can't even anticipate what I might do tomorrow," he said. "I'm sure I'm probably the most surprised person here."

Roger Maltbie, Blaine McCallister and Dudley Hart carded 65s.

Sullivan was joined at 66 by Sam Randolph, Chris Perry, Mike Hulbert, Brad Fabel and Scott Hoch.

Baker-Finch's round was another example of his strong play since leaving Sanctuary Cove, Australia, and joining the American tour full time in 1989.

He has not missed a cut in 12 events this season, and his streak of 19 consecutive tournaments in the money is second on the tour only to the 20 of Corey Pavin.

Baker-Finch is 25th on the 1991 money list, fourth in driving accuracy, fifth in putting and seventh with a scoring average of 69.92.

But when he began his round Thursday morning on Kingsmill's 10th tee, it initially didn't appear as if something special would happen.

He missed the green with his approach shots on the 10th and 11th holes, both par-4s, and had to make par putts of 6 and 4 feet, respectively.

"Obviously," he recalled, "I wasn't thinking about making 62 at this stage."

He sank an 18-footer for birdie on the 395-yard 12th, then missed 10-foot birdie putts on the next two holes.

Baker-Finch reached the fringe of the green in two at the 506-yard 15th and chipped in for an eagle.

He missed a 9-footer for birdie at

Angels win in ol' brawl game

The Associated Press

DETROIT — Dave Parker's tie-breaking, two-run homer in the seventh inning sent the California Angels past the Detroit Tigers 7-5 Thursday night in a game interrupted by a bench-clearing, beanball battle.

California rookie Luis Sojo was hit in the head by a pitch from Dan Gakeler in the fourth inning, and was admitted to a hospital with a mild concussion. In the bottom of the fourth, Chuck Finley was ejected after hitting Detroit's Mickey Tettleton in the leg with his first pitch.

The dugouts emptied after Tettleton was hit, but no punches were thrown. Angels manager Doug Rader argued the ejection.

California had hit only one home run in 89 innings before Parker connected. His fourth home run of the season landed in the second deck in center field and came off Paul Gibson (2-4).

Reliever Joe Grahe (1-1) pitched 4½ innings. Bryan Harvey got two outs for his 18th save.

Rangers 7, White Sox 3

CHICAGO — Ruben Sierra sparked a five-run rally in the ninth inning with a two-run homer against Bobby Thigpen as the Texas Rangers defeated the Chicago White Sox 7-3 Thursday night.

Chicago starter Jack McDowell pitched three-hit ball for eight innings and left with a 3-2 lead. Thigpen (3-2), who converted 57 of 65 save opportunities last year, blew his fifth save in 18 chances. Julio Franco followed Sierra's go-ahead homer with another home run off Thigpen. Nineteen-year-old Ivan Rodriguez, married earlier in the day after being called up from Tulsa, added a two-run single off Melido Perez to complete the scoring.

Reliever Mike Jeffcoat (3-1) was the winner, pitching the final 2½ innings in relief of starter Kevin Brown.

Brewers 4, Mariners 0

MILWAUKEE — Jaime Navarro pitched a four-hitter for his second career shutout Thursday night as the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the Seattle Mariners 4-0.

Navarro (7-4) struck out four and walked two. He gave up four singles in his team-high fourth complete game and second shutout of the season.

The Mariners put runners on first and second with one out in the seventh inning, but shortstop Dale Sveum caught Omar Vizquel's line drive and threw to first base, doubling off Dave Cochrane.

The Brewers bunched four singles and a walk off Brian Holman (7-7) in the second for a 2-0 lead.

Greg Vaughn and Franklin Stubbs singled with one out and Darryl Hamilton's bloop single to left scored a run. Holman's errant pickoff throw to second skipped between Stubbs' legs and advanced the runners. Sveum walked to load the bases and

The Brewers added another run in the third when Stubbs grounded into a double play with the bases loaded. Stubbs singled home a run in the seventh.

Blue Jays 6, Yankees 1

TORONTO — Joe Carter hit two solo home runs and the Toronto Blue Jays ended a four-game losing streak, beating the New York Yankees 6-1 Thursday night.

Carter went 3-for-4 and scored three times. He homered in the third inning and hit his 14th home run in the fifth.

Todd Stottlemyre (8-2) gave up eight hits, including Matt Nokes' home run, in eight innings. He walked none and struck out two.

Tim Leary (3-7) lasted only 4½ innings. He gave up all six runs on six hits.

Carter singled with two outs in the first inning and scored when Rance Mulliniks singled and center fielder Roberto Kelly bobbled the ball for an error. Mulliniks reached second on the play, John Olerud walked and Greg Myers hit a two-run double.

Nokes hit his 10th home run in the second. But Carter's home runs made it 5-1 and the Blue Jays added another run in the fifth when Olerud doubled, Myers singled and third baseman Pat Kelly made a throwing error.

Apparently, grass is for Sanchez Vicario

Rob Gloster
The Associated Press

EASTBOURNE, England — She once proclaimed "grass is for the cows." Now, Arantxa Sanchez Vicario is nearly as overpowering on the slick surface as on her beloved clay courts.

The 19-year-old Spaniard, known mostly for her success at the French Open, has improved her serve-and-volley game enough to be one of the top challengers at Wimbledon starting Monday.

Sanchez Vicario, the 1989 French Open champ and runnerup to Monica Seles this year at the clay-court Grand Slam event, crushed Pam Shriver 6-0, 6-1 on the Eastbourne grass Thursday to reach the semifinals.

Her defeat of Shriver, a grass-court veteran, was just as convincing as her 6-0, 6-2 victory in the French Open semifinals two weeks ago over Steffi Graf — the most lopsided defeat of the German's career.

"She surprised me how well she played on grass," Shriver said. "I think the biggest thing that really surprised me was the pace of the ball off her racket. I can't remember a racket head traveling through the ball that quickly. There's no way to judge a shot, you have to guess."

Shriver, a three-time Wimbledon semifinalist, said Sanchez Vicario's speed, improving first serve and good backhand volleys make her a tough grass-court opponent.

"For someone to beat Arantxa they have to play a very fine match," Shriver said. "Very seldom does she have a bad day — she's either good or she's great."

Sanchez Vicario reached the quarterfinals at Wimbledon in 1989, shortly after joking that grass was a place for farm animals and not tennis players. But she has lost in the first round in her three other visits there.

"After going to the quarterfinals of Wimbledon I realized I could play well on grass," Sanchez Vicario said. "I know I can play on different surfaces and that I can serve and volley."

Sanchez Vicario won the first 11 games of her match against Shriver, slashing hard groundstrokes past the American when she tried to approach the net and using her exceptional speed to cover the whole court.

Shriver became so exasperated in the second set that she started mimicking Sanchez Vicario and raised her arms in mock triumph when she finally won the 12th game after saving two match points.

Sanchez Vicario, ranked fifth worldwide, has reached the semifinals in each of the 10 tournaments she has played this year. She won a grass-court event in Newport, Rhode Island, last summer and said she is confident on a surface that once terrified her.

"Right now it would be like a dream to win Wimbledon, but I hope I can do it in the future," she said. "But I know nothing is impossible. I know that I have a good volley and my serve is much better this year."

Win in 11th gives Montreal 7-2 extra-inning record

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Dennis Martinez anchored a combined three-hitter and Marquis Grissom singled home an 11th-inning run Thursday night as the Montreal Expos beat the Cincinnati Reds 1-0 for their seventh consecutive victory.

Martinez gave up two hits over the first eight innings, Barry Jones (3-4) gave up one in the next two, and Scott Ruskin pitched the 11th for his fifth save, giving Montreal a 7-2 record in extra-inning games this season.

Spike Owen led off the 11th with the Expos' sixth hit of the game off Don Carman (0-1), the fourth Cincinnati pitcher. Bret Barberie sacrificed him to second, and Grissom lined an RBI single to right.

Martinez, whose ERA dropped to 1.87, retired the first 17 batters he faced before Jose Rijo lined a single up the middle with two outs in the sixth. He gave up just one more hit, a soft single in the eighth by Todd Benzinger, as he extended his streak of consecutive scoreless innings to 24. Rijo matched Martinez in stinginess for the first six innings.

Thursday night.

Chamberlain, who played in 18 games for the Phillies in 1990 and saw brief action in April, was recalled from Scranton-Wilkes-Barre of the International League on June 15. He is 10-for-24 in six games since returning.

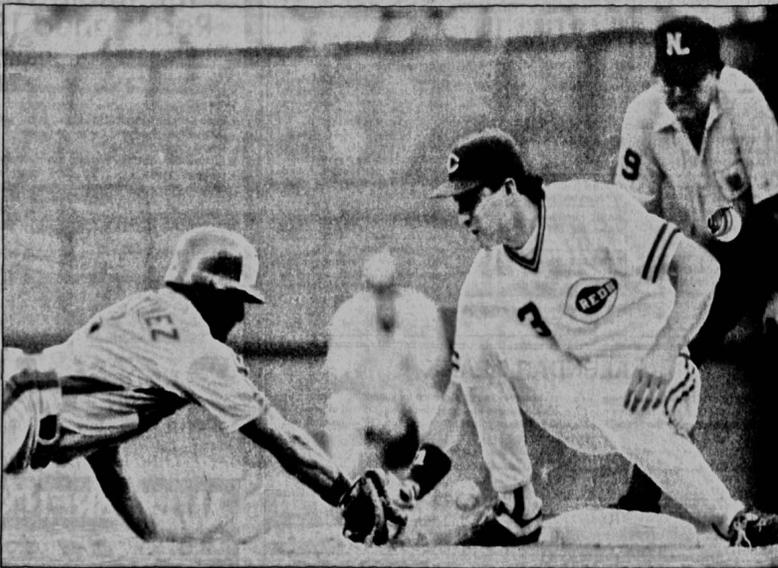

Danny Cox (2-1), who came off the disabled list on June 17, gave up two runs and three hits in 5½ innings. Roger McDowell pitched two innings and Mitch Williams got the last three outs, allowing a run, to send the Astros to their fourth straight loss.

With the score 2-2, Chamberlain doubled with one out in the third, went to third on Kruk's single and scored on Dale Murphy's grounder.

The Phillies chased Jimmy Jones (4-3) in the fourth inning. John Morris led off with a single, went to third on Wally Backman's single and scored on Mickey Morandini's fielder's choice. Morandini stole second and scored on Chamberlain's double.

Kruk, who had three hits, added a two-run single in the ninth.

SARDAW, Iraq — Iraqi leader Massoud Barzani says he has reached an agreement with the government on a plan to hold regional and national elections in the next few months and nationwide year.

But Jalal Talabani, leader of the second-largest Iraqi Kurdistan group after Barzani, said there was no such agreement.
