Gas leak disrupts 3 campus buildings

Work crew severs line, admits fault

All Riley

Construction workers accidentally cut a natural gas line on Jefferson Street Friday, causing the evacuation of several buildings and the temporary closure of the area.

The natural gas line was severed at 11:07 a.m. by construction crews preparing the site for the new business building on Jefferson. Following the accident, the area was evacuated and traffic was rerouted.

According to Steve Leger, superintendent of the Iowa City Street Department, the company was working on Jefferson Street Friday when the accident occurred. Leger said the area was under construction and gas and electrical lines were being removed.

Leger said the accident was caused by the workers accidentally cutting the gas line. He said the company was working on the site at the time of the accident and was unaware of the situation.

Leger said the area was closed to traffic for about an hour while crews worked to repair the gas line. He said the area was expected to be reopened by 1 p.m.

Biking group rides for women's rights

Reproductive Freedom Riders share their views across the country as they cycle to Washington state.

Heidi Peterson

Daily Iowan

"I think it's thrilling like any other day you might see riding around on a bike," Peterson said. "But if there's others out just like you, it makes it even more fun." The 23-year-old rider in Iowa City is a huge supporter of reproductive freedom and women's rights. After being part of a Grant Wood ing, she's seen the importance of having female voices in leadership positions.

The trip to Washington began on May 16th, when practically every young man and woman aimed at seeing a male speaker. The group of 40 members consists of mostly women, and the riders were inspired by the 2011 Women's Reproductive Bill of Rights, which will be delivered to the Statehouse Sunday night.

The group is led by a 21-year-old rider named Kari Dittmer, who says the band gets a lot of money from the city.

Bo knows how to be on during All-Star game

By DAVE GIBSON

Although he won't be on the field, Bo Jackson will be part of Thursday's All-Star game.

Jackson, who signed a new second-generation Nike commercial that will be shown during All-Star coverage of the game, will be part of the Boeing hoped-to-be-a-20 Styx in a 2000 commercial that will be shown during CMG coverage of the game.

The Bo Town, which includes a driving scene by George Foreman, opens with Jackson as the lead in a 20-second, Vangelic-language commercial for Boeing's new commercial transportation, the Boeing 757.

"Bo doesn't deserve the money, but he looks pretty healthy in a gray sweatshirt and white shorts," Jackson says.

In May, but he kept them off camera while the ad was being shot.

"We're very sensitive about his situation, as we didn't ask him to do anything at stresses," said Jackson's agent, Shelly Leibowitz.

The second-year player has signed a two-year contract with the Boston Celtics, who plan to use him in a television commercial for their new Nike shoes.

"I don't think he'll be on the field," Jackson said. "I think he's probably going to be up there for the commercial."

Indians continue pop pow in last

Check Mello

Advertisements

The Cleveland Indians continued their offensive attack last week, as they added another three home runs to their season total. The Indians, who have dominated the American League East this season, have some of the best hitters in the league. With the addition of new players like Mike Piazza and Barry Bonds, the Indians are looking to make a big splash in the upcoming season.

The Longest Drive

The longest drive of the season was hit by Cleveland's slugger, Jim Thome. Thome's home run was a tremendous single into the left field stands, a distance of 450 feet. The hit was witnessed by thousands of fans, who were all in awe of the impressive feat.

Errors in the Box

Despite the Indians' strong offense, they have had some issues with errors in the field. However, the team is working hard to improve their defense and become even more dominant this season.

Bell signs with Raiders

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Los Angeles Raiders have signed second- round draft choice and former Humboldt State player Eric Bell in the increasing trend toward the Canadian league.

Bell, who was spotted on his first day, but arrived in Oakland for tomorrow's first practice, said he was interested in joining the Raiders, picked by Oakland for the second round in the 1983 draft.

"I'm happy to be here," Bell said. "I've been hearing good things about the Raiders and I'm looking forward to starting my career."
