Game show host Convy dies of cancer at 57

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Emmy award-winning game show host Bert Convy died Monday after a long battle with cancer. He was 57.

Convy died at his home in suburban Brentwood with his wife, Catherine, at his bedside, manager Howard Hinderstein said.

He was diagnosed with a brain tumor in April 1990, Hinderstein said. Convy had been admitted to Cedars Sinai Medical Center after collapsing during a visit to his mother, who was hospitalized for a stroke.

Revenge motive behind killing of Joliet guard

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Inmates who took three guards hostage at a state prison were retaliating for the killing of a fellow gang member by a guard, officials said Monday.

The eight inmates involved in Sunday's hostage-taking at Stateville Correctional Center belonged to the same Chicago-area street gang as the slain inmate, said Howard Peters, state corrections director.

On Saturday night, in another cellblock, convicted murderer Rinaldo Aponte stabbed a guard several times and was fatally shot by a guard after ignoring orders to halt and a warning shot.

Alzheimer's drug fails to get FDA approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first drug to be proposed for approval for treatment of Alzheimer's disease failed to win the endorsement of an advisory panel to the Food and Drug Administration on Monday.

The panel, by an 8-0 vote, adopted instead a statement saying the tests made to date were "an insufficient demonstration of clinical effectiveness" of the drug Tacrine.

The panel left open the question of whether the FDA should permit patients to have access to the drug while its safety and efficacy are tested further.

Baker sent on Mideast quest for peace talks

LONDON (AP) — President Bush, declaring he had reached a "breakthrough" in Mideast peacemaking, directed Secretary of State James Baker on Monday to return to the region in a renewed drive to set up Arab-Israeli peace talks.

Bush said he was prompted by a "good response" from Syrian President Hafez Assad on arranging a Mideast peace conference. Now, Bush said, Israel will be tested.

"They've made statements to us of wanting to do these things, and now here will be a good test," the president told reporters after he had dinner with the leaders of six other industrialized democracies attending an economic summit meeting.

Late-night rampage kills 19 at Nairobi school

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Boys at a Roman Catholic boarding school went on a late-night rampage at a dormitory and killed 19 girls, according to news reports Monday.

The Daily Nation said 67 girls were injured in the assault Saturday night at St. Kizito Mixed Secondary School in Meru, 105 miles northeast of Nairobi. Some of the injured girls said they were raped.

The newspaper said the girls were either strangled or suffocated during the attack by more than 300 boys. Students at the school range in age from 14 to 19.

According to the newspaper, the boys were angry because the girls had refused to join in a demonstration against the headmaster, James Lanyon, over the boys' exclusion from an athletic competition Friday.

Pearl sued by Illini's Thomas

Iowa/Illinois recruitment battle sparks suit over recorded calls

John Shipley
Daily Iowan

Illinois basketball player Deon Thomas is suing Iowa assistant Bruce Pearl over tape recordings of phone calls between the two, which Pearl made during a 1989 recruiting battle between Illinois and Iowa.

The suit, filed in Champaign, Ill., County Circuit Court, charges that Pearl broke Illinois and federal phone tapping laws, invaded Thomas' privacy and altered the tape recordings before disclosing them to the NCAA.

The 6-foot-9-inch sophomore is seeking more than $25,000 in damages for the personal turmoil and damage to his reputation that the tape recordings caused him. One recording allegedly trapped Thomas into admitting an inducement of $80,000 and a car to play for the Illini.

Pearl was reached at his office Monday but said he had to reserve comment until he knew more details of the suit.

"I can't make any comment until I see what the lawsuit says," Pearl said. "And I haven't seen it yet."

Chemicals may hurt foliage on trail

Steve Cruse
Daily Iowan

The use of herbicides and other chemicals in the development of the Hoover Nature Trail is excessive, ineffective and dangerous to wildlife, says a member of the trail's organization.

Richard (Sandy) Rhodes, a volunteer worker on the trail and adjunct assistant professor of geology at the UI, says many prairie plants have been unnecessarily destroyed by the herbicides. He characterizes the present application procedure as "overkill," with a 22-foot wide "swath" being cut for a trail only 10-feet wide.

"It's an environmental atrocity," says Rhodes, who outlined his concerns in a July 10 letter to the HNT board of directors. "Why the hell is a nature trail doing this?"

Other problems with trail development, he says, include land damage from a soil sterilant, negative effects of chemicals on some animal species such as native land snails and "spray drift," or the inadvertent blowing of herbicides into surrounding areas.

The trail, a 75-mile former railway line extending from Keokuk to Cedar Rapids, has been partially purchased by Hoover Nature Trail, Inc., a non-profit organization based in West Liberty, Iowa. HNT plans to purchase the entire trail eventually and develop it for hiking, jogging, biking and cross-country skiing.

trail has most recently been performed along segments between the towns of Oasis and West Branch, and between Conesville and Nichols. About 20 miles of the trail have so far been opened for public use, with additional segments scheduled to open in September.

Milly Gregg, executive director of HNT, said Monday she had not yet seen Rhodes' letter. Treating the trail with herbicides, she said, is necessary to allow for proper drainage from the trail's compacted gravel surface.

"This is something that all the trails in Iowa are doing," she said.

"If you don't destroy the weeds, then they will grow again under the gravel."

Gregg said that she has spoken with Rhodes about his concerns. "I See HERBICIDE, Page 5

Superpowers' meeting seems unlikely in July

LONDON — President Bush kept his long-delayed Moscow summit with Mikhail Gorbachev on hold Monday but said he was still hopeful negotiators could clear the way by resolving the last "highly technical" sticking point on a strategic missile-reduction treaty.

AFSCME salary increases could force layoffs at UI

Heather Pitzel
Daily Iowan

If mandated union salary increases are implemented, the UI may lay off more than 100 employees.

The UI was notified last week by Gov. Terry Branstad to identify employees covered by the AFSCME contract who would be laid off if mandated salary increases are implemented.

AFSCME, the American Federation of State, County and Muni-pal Employees union, won an arbitration case to increase salaries on Feb. 28. However, the arbitrator's decision is currently being litigated.

Salary raises would translate into a $2 million loss from the UI's General Fund because the university received no new funding for the raises, according to Mary Jo Small, associate vice president of finance and university services.

If salaries are increased, the UI may be forced to lay off more than

Soviet economy 1st issue of summit

Gorbachev will probably get a communiqué voicing G7 support in lieu of a financial bailout.

Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

LONDON — President Bush and America's rich allies opened their 17th annual economic summit Monday and plunged immediately into debate over Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's appeal for help to rescue his failing economy. A top U.S. official declared that massive aid was "not in the cards."

In the absence of a financial bailout, the leaders were considering a political communiqué expressing strong support for economic reforms in the Soviet Union and "new thinking" in its foreign policy, a diplomatic source said.

The communiqué, to be released today, says the West is willing to help the Soviets move to a more open, democratic society and free-market economy. Yet any pledges of tangible assistance will be put off until the summit's final statement on Wednesday, the source said.

On another topic, the political communiqué makes a veiled overture for the removal of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, saying the people of his country "deserve the opportunity to choose their leadership openly and democratically."

It also emphasizes the Western leaders' stance that sanctions must be maintained against Iraq until it complies with all U.N. resolutions,

Recent rain improves Iowa harvests

Corn and soybeans in the north and southwest parts of the state benefit from recent weather.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Rains and cooler weather across parts of Iowa helped corn and soybeans last week, but the central third of the state stayed dry.

The weekly report on crops and weather from the agriculture department said the cooler, wetter weather helped crops in the north and southwest while corn in central and southeast Iowa was curling and firing.

Northern Iowa reported crop damage from strong winds July 7.

Across Iowa, 50 percent of the corn has tasseled, ahead of the normal for this time of year of 40 percent. Silk is showing on 29 percent of the corn, ahead of the normal of 25 percent.

Statewide, the corn crop was rated 9 percent excellent, 53 percent good, 35 percent fair and 3 percent poor.

Soybeans continue to catch up, with 89 percent of the crop cultivated for the first time, behind the normal of 94 percent, and 36 percent of the crop is blooming, less than the normal of 50 percent.

Soybeans have set pods on 12 percent of the crop; normal for this time of year is 11 percent.

The soybean crop is rated 6 percent excellent, 56 percent good, 35 percent fair and 3 percent poor.

Topsoil moisture levels improved from last week, with 62 percent rated short, 36 percent rated adequate and 2 percent rated surplus. Last week topsoils were 79 percent short and 21 percent adequate.

Subsoils were rated 17 percent short of moisture, 79 percent adequate and 4 percent surplus. Last week the subsoil moisture was rated 15 percent short, 79 percent adequate and 6 percent surplus.

Temperatures last week averaged 1 degree to 3 degrees below normal, breaking a string of nine consecutive weeks of above normal temperatures. Temperatures ranged from 91 degrees at the Quad Cities on Friday to 49 degrees at Decorah on Sunday.

Rain last week varied from a trace at Maquoketa to 6.1 inches at Blockton in southwest Iowa. The statewide average for the week was .87 of an inch, nearly matching the normal for the week of .89 of an inch.

Livestock across the state were in mostly good condition. Pastures were rated 80 percent of normal.

The oat harvest is 30 percent complete, ahead of the norm of 24 percent. The oat crop was rated 1 percent excellent, 31 percent good, 43 percent fair, 20 percent poor and 5 percent very poor.

The hay crop was rated 5 percent excellent, 43 percent good, 38 percent fair and 14 percent poor.

Professor/artist captures Council Bluffs scene

Leonard Johnson sets up shop on a downtown street in the shade.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa — On most mornings this week, Leonard Johnson's studio has been a stool in the shade of a tree on the east side of Council Bluffs' City Hall.

For nine months every year, Johnson, 54, is an associate professor of English at Grace College of the Bible in Omaha, Neb. But in the summer, he's an artist — a hobby he's enjoyed for 25 years.

Born near Enid, Okla., Johnson moved to Council Bluffs 18 years ago to go to work at the Omaha college.

He has painted for a quarter of a century, but his current project is his first Council Bluffs cityscape. He is doing an oil painting of restored buildings along the east side of Council Bluffs' South Main Street.

The project came about by accident, Johnson said.

Several weeks ago, after deciding to do an oil painting of the city's Carnegie Library building, Johnson walked through the area looking for the right angle for his painting.

"I came around the corner by City Hall and saw the colors and shapes of the Creston House and the buildings on either side of it," Johnson said. The library project went to the back of his sketchbook.

Johnson, who paints only with oils, does landscapes and still lifes on canvas but uses pieces of old weathered barn wood for paintings of animals.

"I enjoy doing the paintings on wood. The surface of the wood actually becomes part of the medium," he said.

Johnson said he still plans to do a painting of the library building. He also plans a painting of an abandoned grain elevator.

He has sold some of his work, exhibited at the college where he teaches and given his paintings away as gifts. But he considers his painting a means of relaxing.

"It will give me something to do when I retire," Johnson said.

RVAP: Rape reports hold steady

The year-end narrative shows 85 rapes were reported and 506 crisis calls were made in fiscal 1991.

Heather Chase

According to a recent report released by the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, there was a slight decline in the number of reported rapes and crisis calls made in fiscal year 1991.

Eighty-five rapes were reported to RVAP in 1991, compared to 88 the year before. Crisis calls numbered 506 last fiscal year, while there were 525 calls made in 1990.

These figures are the result of RVAP's year-end narrative, which compiles 1991 statistics and those from the past five years.

The report, submitted by RVAP Director Diane Funk, details the number of client office visits, prevention/education programs and Women's Transit Authority rides.

Also categorized are incident occurrences of crimes such as assault, harassment, exhibitionism, child molestation, domestic violence and incest.

An extensive breakdown of characteristics of rapes reported to the rape crisis line shows that in the 1991 fiscal year, a majority of rapes occurred at the residence of the victim and were committed by an acquaintance. Over 50 percent of rapes reported to the center were not reported to police.

In the narrative, Funk, who replaced Karla Miller as director in June, describes the year as "full of changes."

Also mentioned in the report was RVAP's expansion into the upper floor of its present building to allow more office space. Funk wrote, "It has helped our one-on-one counseling immensely as we now have much more private space."

'Corrected' population count would not affect redistricting

The 1.1 percent increase would not have allowed Iowa to reclaim its congressional seat.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa's reapportionment plan would not have changed if the Census Bureau switched to figures based on a "corrected" survey, a legislative researcher said Monday.

The corrected count showed Iowa with about 31,000 more people than were counted in the 1990 census, or about 1.1 percent more than the official count of 2,776,755.

The "extra" people in the new count would not have been enough for Iowa to reclaim a congressional seat that the state is losing.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher on Monday refused to correct the 1990 census that overlooked more than 5 million people nationwide.

Mosbacher said to adjust the count would be to "abandon a 200-year tradition of how we actually count people." The government has never jettisoned official census numbers in favor of population estimates in the two centuries that it has been counting Americans.

Legislative Service Bureau Researcher Gary Rudicil said that Iowa law requires the use of the official count anyway. "The way the law is written, it says the census means the actual head count is what is to be used for redistricting. What the Census Bureau was looking at is a statistical adjustment, which is not a head count. It looks like it would not be valid here," Rudicil said.

This spring, Iowa became one of the first states to complete reapportionment, which shifts political boundary lines to conform to shifting populations. Iowa lost population over the 10 years and lost one of its six congressmen as a result.

The new map divides the state into five congressional districts. It also redesigns the 150 state House and Senate boundary lines.

Rudicil said there is no way to tell whether the official head count or the estimate based on the survey is more accurate. "Nobody said the census would be 100 percent accurate," he said.

Monday's decision is unlikely to be the final word on the subject. More than 30 governments, organizations and individuals have filed suits in New York to force federal officials to change the numbers.

But other lawsuits, like one in Wisconsin, ask courts to forbid any changes.

UI faculty win research money

This year's total of more than $109 million in grants and contracts breaks previous records.

Ann Riley
Daily Iowan

The UI won $109.6 million in external research grants and contracts last year, breaking all previous university records for research support.

UI President Hunter Rawlings announced the figures Monday, stating the record number of grants was a tribute to the quality of faculty, doctoral and post-doctoral students.

"It is especially meaningful in a period of declining state revenue that our faculty went out and earned these grants," Rawlings said.

The 1990-91 fiscal year was the fifth consecutive year the UI won more than $100 million in external support, bringing the total amount awarded to the UI since 1967 to more than $1.6 billion.

The UI is currently ranked 16th among public research universities in amount of federal grants awarded and is third in the Big Ten in research support productivity per faculty member.

Rawlings said the research funding will benefit not only the UI, but Iowa City, Johnson County and the state of Iowa.

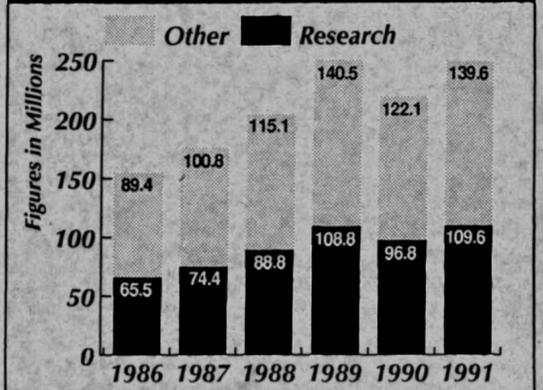

"It is significant to recognize a great number of Iowans are employed through these grants," Rawlings said. "The principal use of the funds is to employ students in good jobs."

Derek Willard, UI acting vice president for research, said the most lasting contribution of the grants is not the dollar amount but the effect the awards have on students.

"Our primary product is graduates who go into the state well-educated and trained and ready to take a place out in the community," Willard said. "This is a very good indicator of the vitality of research at the UI."

next year is very favorable. Approximately 2,000 research proposals developed by UI faculty are currently pending, and the success of those proposals will be reflected in next year's totals.

Willard said the recent cuts in state funding have forced faculty to redefine proposals.

"You must put the money you make to strong places where you think you can make a breakthrough," Willard said. "This is definitely a leaner year."

Overall external support awarded to the UI, including funds for research, training, fellowships and other miscellaneous services for fiscal year 1991, totaled $139,557,314. This amount represents a 14 percent increase over 1990 and is just short of the all-time record of $140.5 million won in 1989.

Skin Art in vogue at Hall Mall store

Mandy Crane
Daily Iowan

How soon until someone can lick it? Phoebe Kessler, 18, Iowa City, recently asked that question after getting her navel pierced.

That's right — her navel.

Now dangling from the top of the young woman's "innie" is a small, steel hoop. She later wants to attach a small bell to it, giving a whole new meaning to the words "belly button."

"I've wanted to do it for a long time," Kessler said as she watched the piercer, Zem Sedriks, get his materials ready.

Sedriks does piercings for the Albino Rhino, one of the newer alternative-styled stores in the Hall Mall, 114 E. College St. The shop is run by Random Hospodarsky and her partner, Paul Valerio, who also runs Moon Mystique in the Hall Mall.

Albino Rhino specializes in alternative magazines, skull sculptures, Manic Panic hair dye and jewelry. Hospodarsky also uses the shop as a studio for henna tattoos and jacket painting. The partners have recently received an OK to offer real tattoos in a few months.

So far the piercings have been one of the bigger, and certainly more interesting, attractions.

Kessler started her piercing initiation by signing a release form and receiving a list of suggestions on proper care of a newly pierced anatomy part. The suggestions included daily cleaning regimens and proper eating habits.

"It really helps," Hospodarsky said.

"I know it will hurt," Kessler said before the procedure. "I've psyched myself up for it. I know it won't hurt nearly as bad as when I got my tattoo."

"The worst thing that can happen is that it won't accept it," Hospodarsky said matter-of-factly about the skin surrounding the pierce. She also explained that only "innie" navels are acceptable for piercings. "Outies" don't work as well.

Sedriks' tools are simple — a tumbler full of Q-Tips and cotton balls, a box full of latex gloves, corks and sterilizing solutions, a surgical clamp, and, of course, the needle. There is no anesthetic, only antiseptic.

Kessler's navel was washed and then swabbed with antiseptic. Sedriks then used a marker to show points of entry and exit of the pierce on her navel. Then he fastened the clamp.

"I don't want to look," Kessler said with her hands over her face. Sedriks picked up the piercing needle, a HUGE-looking thing that resembles a finishing nail, so much so that the Health Department later visited the shop to make sure that it was indeed a needle being used and not a carpentry instrument.

At the crucial moment a customer walked in the door to buy a magazine. Kessler quickly told to come back later. Kessler continued to blindly ramble about Madonna's movie, "Truth or Dare," in an effort to ignore the pain.

The needle was removed, and the ring was put in place. Kessler looked ready to pass out. She later moved from her chair to a place she could stretch out on the floor.

Seconds later another customer walked in requesting to have his nipple pierced. Sedriks cleaned up, and the young man had a seat.

Gripping a hacky sack, the customer watched as Sedriks stuck his needle through the surgical clamp and the nipple, replacing the needle with what is known in piercing crowds as a barbell stud.

Sedriks also pierces other body parts including noses, lips and, well, other areas.

Piercings at the Albino Rhino cost $12 plus the jewelry. Rings like Kessler's average around $30.

For the less courageous and pain wimps, there are the henna tattoos.

Henna tattoos are painless and only last about two weeks. Hospodarsky uses the same old kind of henna that is used for red highlights in hair. She makes a thick paste and then draws the design on the skin with toothpicks.

The design is allowed to dry and then wrapped in cotton. In the Middle East, where the designs are traditional for brides and body decor, the tattoos are wrapped with scarves.

The henna is scraped off the next day and if the dye takes, the design remains on the skin for several days — just enough time to freak out parents and friends.

'ROOMS WITH VIEWS'

How do you spell 'relief'? L-O-N-G-O

Mailing a letter in this town can be an artistic experience.

Lindsay Alan Park
Daily Iowan

Despite Iowa City's current wealth of art-laden interiors, I'd like to open this week's column by discussing my favorite piece of public sculpture on display "forever" in that room with the grandest view of all — the great outdoors.

If you're thinking I'm going to talk about the black angel, Old Jet, or the Pedestrian Mall's shockingly public Three Ladies Pissing, think again. Too much has been said about these landmarks already.

But when was the last time anyone paid deserved attention to New York artist Robert Longo's terrific cast-aluminum relief sculpture, "Sleep" (1984). If you've ever mailed a letter at the Iowa City branch of the United States Post Office, 400 S. Clinton St., you know the piece I mean. There on the building's west wall next to the north entrance is a monumental silver slab evocative of a panel from a Hellenistic Greek frieze. Perfect for the "Athens of the Midwest," no?

For Longo the piece is unusual in mood but not style. The bulk of his sculpture has a louder, rock 'n' roll feverishness that is missing in the serene "Sleep." The scale, composition and use of media, however, have a precedent in the central panel of his tense triptych, "Corporate Wars: Walls of Influence" (1982). Here are the same deeply gouged and modeled human figures threatening to pierce a surface skin of soft metal.

With its nuclear family subject matter (father, mother and quite literally — through cropping of figures — 2.2 children), "Sleep" is one of the few artworks that both Jesse Helms AND the rest of us can love.

The piece is attractive for several reasons. First is the compositional flow of the sculptural elements. Abstracted as shapes, the family members' limbs and bodies extend continuously into one another. Not only are we led around the panel visually, but we also get a beautiful suggestion of a family's interdependence and connectedness — for better or worse.

The circuitous flow reinforces and centrally isolates the oval-shaped face of the father, who is obviously the anchor of the group. But far from glorifying patriarchy, the gentle intimacy of "Sleep" offers an appealing alternative to the aloof or abusive parenting that many of us know from real life.

While the piece could stir nostalgia for a non-existent memory of a picnic, I know, but the idea makes the piece a bit more exciting and seems more in line with the rest of Longo's art.

If nothing else, the monochromaticism and monumentality help emphasize the idea of "nuclear" as in living under the threat of atomic weapons. Further, the embeddedcinematic allusion, the closed-eye, sideways oval of the father's face could well be influenced by the flickering final frames of "Looking for Mr. Goodbar."

Finally, to clear up any possible confusion, the metal structure strategically placed on the concrete to the right of the panel is NOT part of Longo's piece, but yet another of our fair city's poorly designed bike racks. We'll discuss those some other time.

Upstairs at Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co., 126 Washington St., are two photography shows on display at least through July 20. "Portraits in Gold 1985-1990" by Tracy Ullman (NO, not the actress, now GO HOME!) is an attractively aggressive collection of portraits seemingly of the artist's friends, titled with first names like "Dawn" and "Grant."

Also on display is an untitled collection of 16-inches square chrome prints by Michael Tierney which manipulate images of brick, glass, rope and burlap to produce a surreal foundry of a burning warehouse without a single lick of actual flame in sight.

"Sleep" is one of the few artworks that both Jesse Helms AND the rest of us can love.

Something about the father's face reminds me, too, of Harrison Ford imprisoned in that big slab at the end of "The Empire Strikes Back."

picnicking family contentedly dozing on a blanket in the grass, some darker interpretations are startlingly plausible.

Word around the Post Office, for example, is that "Sleep" depicts a Jonestown family after a round of cyanide Kool-Aid. Sort of spoils the

Stamey, Holsapple team performs tonight at Gabe's

Mandy Crane
Daily Iowan

A quiet but rewarding evening is in store tonight for those making the climb to Gabe's Oasis.

Chris Stamey and Peter Holsapple perform tonight at Gabe's, hitting the stage between 11:30 and midnight with music from the recently released LP Mavericks. Opening for Stamey and Holsapple is Iowa City's Big Citizen.

Stamey and Holsapple first joined efforts in pop sounds in the early 1980s as the dBs. Stamey left the band before the release of one of the top party albums of the last decade, Like This, with well-known dBs works such as "Spy in the House of Love" and "Amplifier."

Stamey released some solo works that received modest to brilliant reviews in college circles, and Holsapple stayed with the dBs until their collapse in 1989.

Reunited eight years later in the summer of 1990, Stamey and Holsapple, as it says in their liner notes, "decided to make a record together."

The result is Mavericks, a collection of pop/folk tunes that highlights the best each musician has to offer — Holsapple's memorable melodies and harmonies, and Stamey's thoughtful imagery.

Stamey and Holsapple's current tour has taken them to Midwestern pop venues such as Columbus, Ohio; Toronto; and Chicago. Fans report the concerts as gentle, with most of the works coming from Mavericks and little from either artist's solo efforts or dBs works.

The album indicates a folksy sound with occasional pop breaks, including a very '60s sounding "Geometry." Other highlights include Stamey's "I Want to Break Your Heart," deeply reflecting work on his 1987 solo album, It's Alright, and Holsapple's "The Child in You," a song seemingly written for every Peter Pan in Iowa City.

Tickets are $7 at the door. Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., opens its doors at 8 p.m.

100 people, but Small did not know exactly which departments would be affected.

Small said employees who draw their salaries from General Funds and are also under the AFSCME contract are targeted for possible layoffs.

In a release, UI President Hunter Rawlings said he is "concerned about the effects this action will have on the university's educational, research and service programs and on the lives of staff and faculty in the university community."

"The UI will be guided by the regents in timing (of the layoffs), and they may be coordinating with the rest of state government," Small explained.

Richard Vohs, Branstad's press secretary, said state agency positions would be affected by layoffs because money for salary increases is taken out of the state's General Fund.

"This doesn't apply to union members only. There are non-union members who are also covered by the contract," Vohs said.

Even if the courts rule against salary increases, Vohs said there may be layoffs anyway. "If the state wins in District Court, unions could appeal to the Supreme Court. The state could lose one year from now, and we should be prepared for that possibility."

Vohs said that if the state lost in one year, back pay and interest funding for employees covered by the AFSCME contract would be unavailable.

AFSCME officials could not be reached for comment. Small said representatives from AFSCME, the governor's office and the State Department of Personnel met yesterday.

SUMMIT: Talks begin

ish clearly are in that supportive mode, and I think most countries recognizing the terrible danger of this man going forward with a nuclear program would be of the same mind."

Bush spoke to reporters at the ambassador's residence following a dinner meeting — at the historic Tower of London — where the heads of state discussed political hot spots around the world as they ended the first day of the economic summit.

The leaders of the world's seven biggest industrial democracies — the United States, Japan, Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada — were all smiles in bright sunshine for the traditional "class photo" that always opens the summit.

Then they dug into three hours of discussion of their differences on such sober topics as Soviet economic troubles, impediments to free trade and other problems confronting the global economy.

U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, in a briefing on the first meeting of the summit partners, sought to lower expectations of an expensive Western aid package for Moscow.

"If you are talking about the kind of grand bargain mentioned before, that's not in the cards," Brady said. He was referring to a suggestion of aid approaching $25 billion or more a year.

The U.S. official said one item on which the United States and its economic allies likely could agree was bestowing on the Soviet Union an associate membership in the International Monetary Fund — giving it access to technical advice but not direct loans from that body.

With much of the attention focused on the Soviet Union, Brady said there had been some talk at the first session that "preoccupation with problems in the Soviet Union should not lessen" any movement to help emerging democracies of Eastern Europe.

But French President Francois Mitterrand told his summit partners that Gorbachev "would be the major item" at the meeting, a French spokesman said.

On other topics, Bush expressed optimism about concluding a nuclear arms treaty with Moscow and praised the acceptance by Syria of a U.S. proposal for a Middle East peace conference, calling it a "good response." He said he was sending Secretary of State James Baker to the Mideast for new talks.

On the arms control talks, Bush said Baker had told him there was only one issue left to be resolved. "It's encouraging — one point remaining but an important one," Bush said. Quick resolution would mean a Bush-Gorbachev summit later this month in Moscow to sign the treaty.

While Germany, backed by France and Italy, is pushing strongly for a major economic package for the Soviets, the United States and the other summit countries favor a much more cautious approach.

Gorbachev was scheduled to arrive in London today and was to make a personal appeal for assistance Wednesday at the conclusion of the summit.

Government denies requests to increase U.S. Census total

Tim Bovee
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The government on Monday rejected demands by cities and states that it add 5.3 million Americans to the 1990 census. The decision will cost urban areas millions of dollars in federal aid.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher acknowledged that the census had missed about 2 percent of the population, but said that wasn't enough to justify replacing it with an estimate based on a survey of about 165,000 households.

The census in its 200-year history has never been adjusted with statistical estimates. "I couldn't change the historical and traditional way of taking the census to go with a sort of moving target," Mosbacher said.

Mosbacher decided to keep the population count, 248.7 million, as official.

In doing so, he overruled seven Census Bureau specialists who wanted to correct the census by adding in the 5.3 million people missed in the 1990 head count. Even the census director, Barbara Bryant, favored the estimate as a more accurate overall tally of the nation.

But Mosbacher said he did not believe the corrected figures would be accurate at the local level, where key decisions about legislative districts are made.

Mosbacher's decision not to add those people into the census "cheats every county, city and town out of hundreds of millions of dollars in federal grants," said Texas Gov. Ann Richards. "It means fewer police, fewer teachers and fewer miles of paved highway for the people of this state."

People in inner cities, blacks, Hispanics and Southerners were more likely to be overlooked than residents of smaller communities, whites, Asian-Americans and Midwesterners.

If added to the population, those people would have meant big money for the cities and states where they live. For example, the city of Cleveland, with about 505,000 people, stands to lose $1.1 million a year as a result of Mosbacher's decision, said City Planner Michael Andrezejewski.

Overall, the amount of federal money depending on the census, directly and indirectly, totaled about $59 billion in 1989, said Michael Murray, an economist at Bates College in Lewisville, Maine.

New York City and 31 other cities, states, organizations and individuals had asked a federal court in New York to order the census corrected. That court had ordered Mosbacher to decide by Monday what to do about the census' count. "Given today's disturbing developments, we will now resume that litigation immediately," said New York Mayor David Dinkins. He said the decision deals the city financial wounds "we can hardly sustain when we are already crippled by a national recession and rapidly growing public needs." Mosbacher said he made his decision after considering the evidence, not politics. But Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., said the decision had politics etched all over it. "Basically, the people not being counted are people who are not supportive of their political goals," Dixon said. "They're not counting minority groups in urban areas of America." Mosbacher "knows full well that unadjusted numbers will detrimentally affect the Latino community's ability to participate fully in society," said Arturo Vargas.

Iraq ready to defend itself in face of military action

Kathy Evans
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq said Monday it was taking steps to defend itself against a possible United States strike on its military and nuclear sites following repeated warnings to tell all about its nuclear program.

Also Monday, President Saddam Hussein said in a statement he is cooperating with nuclear inspections mandated by the Persian Gulf war cease-fire. He proposed independent examinations by either the Arab League or Egypt.

Asked at a news conference about the threat of U.S. military action, Prime Minister Saadoun Hammadi declared, "Such a possibility exists; we cannot rule out the probability."

Britain, France and the United States have declared their readiness to use force to stop Iraq from acquiring nuclear weapons.

Sources in Baghdad, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the armed forces and civil defense units went on full alert three days ago.

Hammadi accused the United States and its Western allies of using "fabricated pretexts to launch a premeditated attack" on Iraq despite its willingness to cooperate fully with U.N. inspectors.

The senior U.S. commander in Saudi Arabia, Lt. Gen. William Pagonis, said Monday in Dubai that a U.S. military strike against Iraqi nuclear facilities would not slow withdrawal of American troops from the gulf.

"Military action against Iraq will not change our schedule," said Pagonis. He has about 22,000 U.S. service personnel left in Saudi Arabia. In addition, 3,700 soldiers remain in Kuwait at Kuwaiti request. The last 3,170 allied troops on Monday left northern Iraq, where they had been protecting the Kurds.

The five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council — the United States, Soviet Union, France, Britain and China — warned Baghdad on Friday it would face serious consequences if it did not fully disclose its nuclear program by July 25.

The United States says Iraq is trying to develop a nuclear bomb. Iraq denies it, saying its three secret programs to enrich uranium were for peaceful purposes.

"Iraq's technical and military capabilities are known, and we will defend ourselves to the best of our capabilities," Hammadi said.

Saddam said Monday that "Iraq has presented a detailed list of all the weapons it possesses as required by the Security Council resolution and destroyed all equipment prohibited by the resolution."

Administration says deficit will exceed $282 billion

Dave Skidmore
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration's midyear budget review Monday forecast back-to-back record deficits this year and next, blaming the tidal wave of red ink on the bailout of bankrupt banks and savings and loans.

In a good news-bad news report to Congress, Office of Management and Budget Director Richard Darman said the deficit in fiscal year 1991 ending Sept. 30 will be $282.2 billion — $35.9 billion less than the administration projected in February. But, the deficit will swell to $348.3 billion in 1992 — $67.4 billion more than forecast five months ago, the report said.

Both deficits, if realized, would surpass the previous yearly record of $221.1 billion set in 1986.

In a break with past practice, the report projects substantial budget deficits through 1996. Both the Bush and Reagan administrations repeatedly and incorrectly have forecast the deficit to disappear within a few years.

The new extended forecasts (and the now-outdated February projections) are: 1993, $245.7 billion ($201.5 billion); 1994, $132.1 billion ($61.8 billion); 1995, $73.6 billion ($2.9 billion), and 1996, $55.5 billion ($19.9 billion surplus).

Unlike last year, when the threat of automatic spending cuts under the Gramm-Rudman budget law loomed, the deficit projections are creating little stir.

An accord reached last fall between the administration and Congress for all practical purposes scrapped the targets. The agreement instead requires new spending be offset with either new taxes or offsetting cuts elsewhere in the budget. "People seem to have some faith that Congress and the administration are a little different now. In some sense they seem to be writing the current deficit off, saying, 'That was a horrible year, but it'll get better,'" said economist Paul Getman of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

Darman, in an accompanying letter to House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., pinned much of the revision in 1991 and 1992 on unexpected swings in spending for the Persian Gulf war and financial institution rescues.

In the current year, the war will actually prove to be a moneymaker for the government, which expects to collect $48.2 billion from its allies and spend only $24.2 billion, the report said.

Meanwhile, a delay by Congress in funding S&L bailouts will reduce the cost of that program this year but push up the cost next year. Total financial institution bailout spending, including the continuing cost of assistance agreements to S&Ls rescued before 1989, should be $83.5 billion this year and $118 billion in 1992.

Soviets warn that economic turmoil could reverberate throughout world

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

LONDON — Mikhail Gorbachev's advance team, in a warm-up for the Soviet leader's plea for Western aid, warned Monday that the whole world could suffer if he is rebuffed.

"If we do not achieve close cooperation between the Soviet Union and other nations there could be turmoil — not only in the Soviet Union but elsewhere," said Vladimir Shcherbakov, the first deputy prime minister.

The Soviets also dangled an offer to convert up to 80 percent of their defense plants to civilian use. And they suggested Western investors would profit if a pool of $10 billion to $12 billion were created to help in converting Soviet rubles to hard currency.

The Soviet officials' session at their embassy was staged to counter rising skepticism, especially in the British press, that the West would benefit if the rich nations threw a lifeline to Gorbachev.

Gorbachev arrives tonight with a detailed plea for help to rally his faltering economy. He will address the seven leaders on Wednesday, after the summit officially concludes, and also will meet with Bush and the others separately.

As another inducement for Western help, the Soviet official said Gorbachev's program also envisions a pool of $10 billion to $12 billion to assist in making the Russian currency, which has virtually no worth elsewhere, convertible.

Monday's Answer: Wilbur Wood started both ends of a doubleheader for the White Sox in 1973.

Illini's Thomas sues Iowa coach Pearl

John Shipley
Daily Iowan

Illinois basketball player Deon Thomas filed a civil suit Monday against Iowa assistant coach Bruce Pearl over tape-recorded phone calls that resulted in the subsequent NCAA investigation and the probation of the Illini basketball program.

The suit, filed by attorney J. Stephen Beckett in Champaign, Ill., County Circuit Court, charges that Pearl broke Illinois and federal phone tapping laws, invaded Thomas' privacy and edited tape-recorded phone conversations between the two, which were later disclosed and damaged Thomas' reputation.

"The allegations are that illicit, covert tape recordings of telephone conversations occurred and that there was disclosure of those tape recordings after they had been altered, edited or otherwise rendered inaccurate," said Beckett from his Champaign office.

"The transcripts of those telephone conversations resulted in false and misleading information about Deon, invaded his personal life and caused him great turmoil," he said.

Thomas is seeking more than $25,000 in damages.

"Deon Thomas is entitled to the recovery of money damages, compensatory and punitive, reasonable attorney's fees and costs," said Beckett.

Pearl was reached at his office Monday but said he had to reserve comment until he knew more details of the suit.

"I can't make any comment until I see what the lawsuit says," Pearl said. "And I haven't seen it yet."

Illinois was placed on three years' probation last November after a 16-month investigation that was touched off when Pearl apparently turned Illinois in to the NCAA for recruiting violations centering on Thomas, then a 6-foot-9-inch star from Chicago Simeon High School.

Pearl made the recording in 1989 after Thomas canceled his recruiting trip to Iowa City immediately following a visit to Champaign. Both Iowa and Illinois had been at the top of a long list of schools battling for Thomas, who was rated by most recruiting magazines as the No. 1 prep player in the country.

The main evidence Pearl presented to the NCAA was a tape recording of a phone call between himself and Thomas in which the prep star allegedly admitted that Illinois assistant Jimmy Collins offered him $80,000 and a car to play basketball for the Illini.

Announcing the probation, the NCAA said "significant violations occurred," but the allegations concerning the recruitment of Thomas were never substantiated. Also unsubstantiated were charges from Notre Dame forward LaPhonso Ellis, who said Illinois had offered him a similar money/car deal when he was a prep player from East St. Louis, Ill.

Because of the NCAA investigation, Thomas was redshirted his freshman year. Thomas played last year and scored 12 points on 5-of-6 shooting in a win at Iowa City.

Beckett said the suit had nothing to do with either the UI or Illinois and stressed that Pearl is the lone defendant listed in the suit.

This time, Phillips cleans up

Associated Press

DETROIT—Tony Phillips is used to setting the table for Detroit's big guys. Monday night he wiped it clean.

Phillips led off the ninth inning with Detroit's fourth home run of the game, lifting the Tigers to an 8-7 victory over the Texas Rangers.

"That's only the second game-winner I can ever remember hitting," Phillips said. "That was a thrill."

Phillips hit a full count pitch from Mike Jeffcoat (3-2) into the second deck in left field for his eighth homer of the season.

"I knew I hit it real well, so I watched it just for a second," Phillips said. "I don't get many times to watch."

Mike Henneman (6-2), now 31-6 in Tiger Stadium, pitched a perfect ninth inning. Jeffcoat retired three batters in the eighth.

"I was trying to get a fastball in under his hands," Jeffcoat said. "Instead, I threw it in the middle of his hands."

"But, you know, sometimes you throw it down the middle and they miss it and sometimes you throw it under their hands and they'll hit it out. It's a funny game."

Lloyd Moseby, Mickey Tettleton and Lou Whitaker also homered as the Tigers increased their major league-leading total to 114. Ruben Sierra and Jeff Huson homered for the Rangers.

Sierra hit a three-run homer in the Texas first before there were any outs. Rusty Meacham walked Julio Franco on four pitches, Rafael Palmeiro followed with a single and Sierra hit his 13th home run.

"They just out-homered us," Texas manager Bobby Valentine said. "This was a homer kind of a night. But it was a good game on both parts. They came back from three down and we came back from three runs down. But, they batted last."

Twins 11, Brewers
MILWAUKEE — Scott Erickson struggled in his return from the disabled list, but the Minnesota Twins survived on home runs by Greg Gagne and Shane Mack to beat the Milwaukee Brewers.

Erickson gave up four hits, four walks and a hit batter in four innings, and left with an 8-5 lead. Greg Vaughn hit a solo home run in the third inning and Franklin Stubbs hit a grand slam in the fourth.

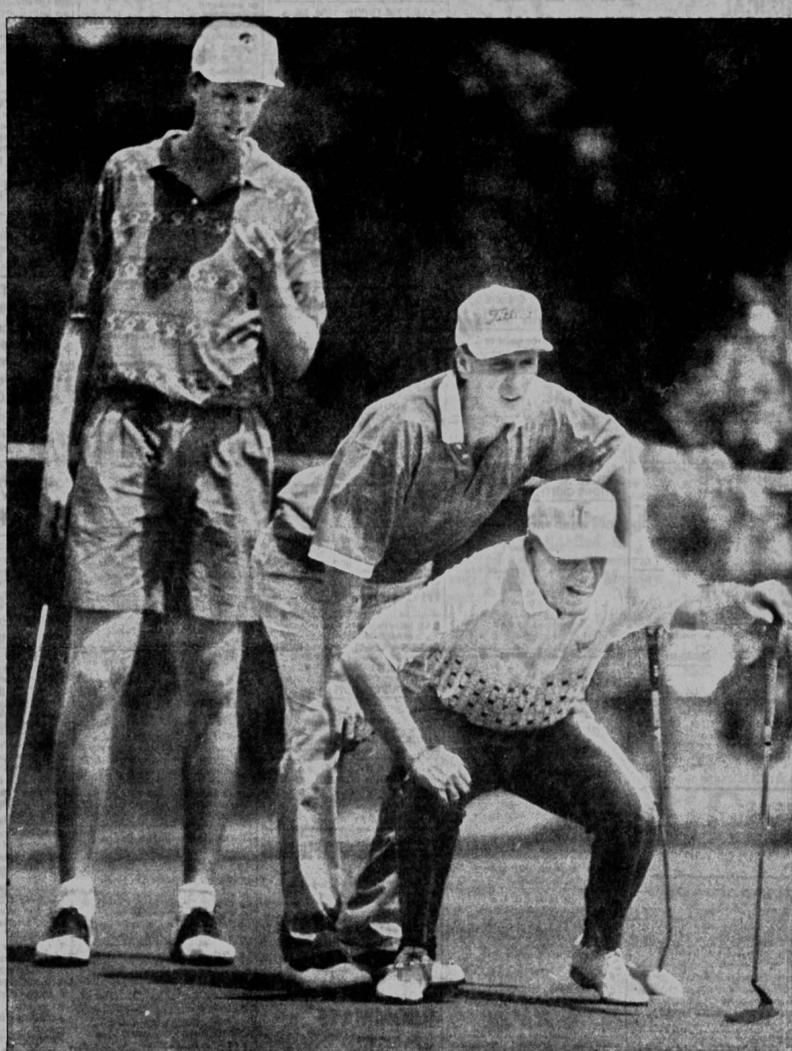

Erickson went into the game with a 12-3 record and a major league-leading 1.83 ERA. He was sidelined with a sore elbow, and activated earlier Monday. He lost his previous start June 29 to Chicago, ending his 12-game winning streak.

Mark Guthrie (6-5) pitched two innings for the victory and Steve Bedrosian got his fourth save. Jim Hunter (0-3) was the loser. White Sox 7, Red Sox 1

CHICAGO — Frank Thomas hit two home runs and Carlton Fisk capped a five-run sixth inning with a two-run double, leading Ramon Garcia and the Chicago White Sox over Boston. The Red Sox lost for the fifth time in six games.

Thomas tied the game at 1 with a homer into the center-field seats in the third inning and then put the White Sox ahead with his 16th homer over the left-field wall in the fifth. It was his first two-homer game, with both coming off Mike Gardiner (3-3).

Hogan Tour may boost local boy

James Arnold
Daily Iowan

The Ben Hogan Tour is designed for certain types of players, most of them with the goal of joining the PGA. At Finkbine Monday, Iowa City-born Greg Peterson looked like the PGA was his next stop.

Although the Finkbine course had been altered to make it tougher for the Hogan Tour by narrowing the fairways and making the hole placement more difficult, Peterson shot a one-over-par 72. His score was in the top four for the day. It wasn't the lowest score, but Peterson was happy with it.

"It was pretty good considering some of the things I did out there," Peterson said.

This is Peterson's first year on the tour after playing last year on the Asian Tour, and around the southern U.S. previously during his career. The seven-year pro said he has been in the money this season, but has yet to carve his name into the top five.

Shooting with almost no help from the amateurs playing along with him — who scored a dismal best-ball round of 67 — Peterson took on the hometown course on which he should have an advantage.

"I enjoy playing on the midwestern courses with the nice grass and I'm used to the heat," he said. "I did most of my golfing growing up at High Point."

Rick Klatt, of UI Sports Promotions, said players like Peterson, Waterloo native Clark Burroughs and Ottumwan Robert Wilkin should enjoy playing at home in Iowa.

BEN HOGAN

"It is very nice from the their standpoint, because it gives them the opportunity to showcase their talent," Klatt said. "And they are probably thinking they know it better than other players."

The main goal of the Hogan tour, Klatt said, is to give the younger players an opportunity to play professionally. Other players use it to regain the form which got them into the PGA. Still others are winding down their PGA careers and hoping to join the Seniors Tour once they reach the minimum age.

"80 percent (of the Hogan players) are younger men working their way up hoping to win a tournament to get the competitive edge," Klatt said.

The top five money winners each year on the Hogan tour become PGA players automatically. After a decent Pro-Am outing, maybe Peterson is ready to move on.

"You have to putt well (at Finkbine)," he said. "But that is the key every week."

Maddux finally wins again, keeps Cubs surging

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Greg Maddux won his first game since June 9, and Chico Walker had three RBIs and scored twice as the surging Chicago Cubs cooled off the Atlanta Braves 6-4 Monday night.

Walker scored a run and had a two-run double, and Luis Salazar homered as the Cubs chased Pete Smith (1-3), who failed to record an out in the second inning. Walker, who had three hits, also singled in a run in the sixth, and later scored when Andre Dawson drew a bases-loaded walk from Rick Mahler.

Maddux (7-6) gave up a two-out double to Terry Pendleton in the first, and retired the next 12 batters before Brian Hunter's single in the fifth. Maddux allowed six hits and struck out five in 6 1/2 innings while snapping a three-game losing streak.

Paul Assenmacher, the fourth Chicago pitcher, worked the final inning for his ninth save. He struck out the side while walking one as the Cubs won their fourth straight game and seventh in nine while snapping Atlanta's four-game winning streak since the All-Star break.

Pirates 8, Astros 0

PIITTSBURGH — Randy Tomlin had his first career shutout, and Andy Van Slyke and Bobby Bonilla combined for seven RBIs as the Pittsburgh Pirates won their sixth straight game, beating the Houston Astros 8-0 Monday night.

Tomlin (4-3), given a 6-0 lead after two innings, pitched a five-hitter for his first victory since May 7 and the Pirates' 13th in 17 games.

Tomlin struck out six and walked four in handing Houston its fourth straight loss.

Mishaps still helping LeMond

QUIMPER, France — Greg LeMond's nearest rival in the Tour de France succumbed to a fever Monday, allowing the American to retain his overall lead in the Tour de France for the third straight stage.

An unexplained illness swept through Dutch rider Erik Breukink's PDM team, forcing five of his eight teammates to quit the 10th stage. Breukink himself rode with a 100 degree fever and struggled to finish the stage. He dropped to third, 73 seconds behind LeMond.

"It's too bad that Breukink left this morning feeling bad and so did the others," said Jaw Gisber, the PDM team manager. "I hope that by tomorrow they won't be too weak so that they can carry on the race."

The situation is bad enough that the remaining three members of the team are considering dropping out.

"We'll decide tomorrow morning if the team will take part in the race," Gisber said. "But if they still have some temperature in the morning, the riders won't start the race."

Breukink agreed with his manager's assessment.

"If I'm not feeling well tomorrow I'm not going to take part in the race," Breukink said. "Today it was very difficult, especially the first 80 kilometers (50 miles)."

Overall, LeMond has a 1:09 lead over Soviet rider Djamolidine Abdoujapalov, who passed Breukink for second.

"It's difficult to give a diagnostic as to why the riders woke up with fever," said Dr. Gerard Porte, the chief physician of the Tour de France organization.

Jonathan Boyer, PDM press relations officer, confirmed that the illness hit all the team's riders.

Kennedy mentioned rape to nephew, man says

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A restaurant customer told police he overheard Sen. Edward Kennedy telling his nephew after an alleged attack at the family estate that the younger man could be accused of rape, a statement released Tuesday shows.

The customer told police he heard the senator saying to William Kennedy Smith "and she'll say it's rape" on the Sunday morning after Smith allegedly attacked the woman at the family's Palm Beach compound.

However, the witness made it clear he didn't know in what context the senator's statement was made, nor whether it was a declarative sentence or a question. Another statement contradicted other accounts that have put Kennedy at the restaurant with his son, Patrick, not his nephew.

In his sworn statement to police, Kennedy said he didn't find out details of the allegation against Smith until later that Sunday and that he believed it involved only sexual harassment.

Weed killer spill poisons California waters

DUNSMUIR, Calif. (AP) — Thousands of gallons of weed killer that had spilled from a derailed tanker car drifted toward the state's largest reservoir Tuesday, prompting a warning to boaters and fishermen.

The spill, at least 13 miles long, was expected to reach the Sacramento River arm of Lake Shasta late Tuesday. Since Sunday night the spill has killed thousands of fish and sickened scores of people. Boaters and fishermen were advised to avoid the arm of the reservoir, and business leaders said the spill threatened the area's summer tourist and sport fishing industries.

U.S. may abandon Clark Air Force in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The United States has tentatively decided to abandon Clark Air Base because of volcanic damage but still wants to keep Subic Bay base, U.S. and Philippine sources said Tuesday.

U.S. and Philippine negotiators resumed talks Tuesday on extending the lease on the two bases, which expires Sept. 16.

U.S. officials made no comment on what they will offer for continued use of Subic, the Navy's largest supply depot overseas. E. Senate President Jovito Salonga said the Americans offered $200 million a year.

Both bases were severely damaged when Mount Pinatubo erupted last month, killing more than 300 people. The volcano continued to spew ash Tuesday and scientists say it may remain active for three years.

Croatia demands cease-fire monitoring team

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — Croatia on Tuesday demanded a European Community team monitoring a cease-fire in Slovenia also be sent to Croatia, the scope of ongoing ethnic violence.

A Croatian policeman was killed in a mortar attack Tuesday and members of a foreign TV crew, including an American, came under fire and were slightly injured while filming in the Croatian country.

Yugoslavia's eight-member presidency had scheduled another meeting Tuesday to discuss the Yugoslav crisis, but the meeting collapsed when several republics refused to attend.

The pro-Western republics of Croatia and Slovenia declared independence June 25.
