Officer Troy Mapes is one of five members of the Storm Lake Police Department who have volunteered for duty. Storm Lake has the distinction of being one of the smallest cities in Iowa with a police patrol.

"We don't have any specific crimes that we need to address constantly," Officer Mapes said. "It's a public contact program," he added. Officers in both city and county special enforcement while patrolling the two areas.

"They've got state little buildings, tiny little houses, tiny little streets," said Gomich. "It's a little more, you could say, rather remote." The Storm Lake officers are also trained and equipped to handle emergencies in both areas.

Heat, lack of rainfall continue to harm majority of state crops

Heat waves, dry weather, and soybean and corn crop loss last week, and rain failed to prevent drought-stricken soil resources. Rainfall averaged just 0.54 of an inch for the week, well below the 2.38 inches of rain that fell the previous week in the Des Moines area.

The heat increased stress on the corn and soybeans last week, and the temperatures hit 90 degrees or higher in many parts of the area, most of the area showed leaves rolling, and fields and fields showed signs of doing the worst. Soybeans were starting to wilt.

Officer Mapes said there was not an area in the last 30 days until the temperature went over 90 degrees and went over the current week on the through the first week of the week. Significant rains were expected this week for northern Iowa and the southeastern corner of the state. The area north of the state's groundwater had sustained from the previous week's rains.

I thought about the death of Lindsey Buckingham — he lost a leg, was washed up for months. He was supposed to do several concerts but had to cancel. It was a big blow for him, a huge disappointment.

As for testing the microphones, The Who and I were doing some sound checks, trying to get the best sound possible. We wanted to make sure the audience could hear every word. The sound was fantastic.

The concert was plagued by technical problems. The lights went out three times, and the stage was plunged into darkness. It was a nightmare.

The Who's set list was quite extensive, with classics like "Love Me Like a Man," "I Can't Explain," and "Under a Raging Sea." But the highlight was "The Magic Bus." I had requested it from the band, and it was the perfect way to end the show.

In the end, the Who put on a fantastic performance. The crowd was ecstatic, and the energy was electric. It was a night I'll never forget.
LAYOFFS

The city has been丁aling with a budget shortfall of $7.2 million and is now facing the possibility of laying off 1,100 employees. Some city officials are calling this the "biggest budget crisis we've seen in 30 years," according to City Councilman John Williams.

"I really think this is a financial crisis the city is facing," Williams said. "We're going to have to make some tough decisions."

The city has already announced plans to cut $6.5 million from its budget for the coming fiscal year, which starts in July. But that's not enough to cover the shortfall, so the city is now looking at potential layoffs of up to 1,100 employees.

The city has not yet announced which departments or employees will be affected by the layoffs. But Williams said the cuts will likely be severe, and that some departments may have to reduce their staff by as much as 50 percent.

"This is going to be very painful for everyone," he said. "We're not looking forward to this, but we have no choice."

The city is expected to announce the layoffs in the coming weeks, and employees will be notified of their status by the end of next month.

The city's financial situation has been exacerbated by the ongoing coronavirus pandemic, which has caused a significant decrease in revenue for the city.

Labor leaders plan to file complaints against layoffs

The labor unions have been a political ally of the governor to decrease state government and to actually deliver two services to the taxpayers of this state, said Don McKee, head of Council 61 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

"We are not ready to give up," McKee said. "Our doors have always been open to any communication that the governor would be willing to do anything other than ask us if we're ready to give up. Frankly, we are not ready to give up."

McKee said labor leaders have been working to prevent layoffs for the past 13 years, but the law when he vetoed money for social programs, "We are not ready to give up," McKee said.

"We have been hard-pressed to get the blame for actions that he's making," McKee said.

It's a hot summer night in New Haven, Conn., and the game is in extra innings. Michael Henry is old and tired, and the ball is in the outfield. The final out is imminent, and with it, another season.

"I've seen a lot of games," said Henry, a former minor league pitcher. "But this is the first one I've been on where I didn't want to see the final out."

Henry, along with teammates such as Mark Pettit, Kevin Wells, and Mark Thibodeaux, are members of the New Haven Nationals, an independent league team in Connecticut. They play in the New England Baseball League, and their games are not official because they are not part of the major league system.

"We're a bunch of old men," said Pettit, a former minor league catcher. "We're not trying to win the World Series. We're just trying to have fun."

The Nationals are one of many independent league teams in the United States, and they are a popular way for former players to continue their careers. They also provide a place for young players to develop their skills.

"We're not trying to win the World Series," said Thibodeaux, a former minor league pitcher. "We're just trying to have fun."

Despite the lack of official status, the Nationals are a respected team. They have a strong following, and their games are always well-attended.

"We're not trying to win the World Series," said Pettit, a former minor league catcher. "We're just trying to have fun."

The Nationals are a testament to the enduring love of baseball, and their games are a reminder of the joy that can be found in the sport.
