Currently the department has 15 clerical employees, of whom five are being laid off. But because of the layoffs, there will still be a core of people who will continue to work when students return at the beginning of the semester.

"Things really start to build up at that time because we bring in our spring water samples," Eyman said. "They all have to be sorted, transferred, run on the equipment, organized and then assigned to offices. It's being an interesting team." [The name is cut off].

Eyman said he did not know if anyone would be transferred into the department to help with the work. He said the school was still looking for a solution.

Environmental group publishes report listing state's worst industrial polluters

A group of Iowa farmers who legally release millions of tons of manure into the environment wants to alert the public, a researcher said yesterday, that many of the state's biggest producers of toxic wastes are not being regulated.

The Iowa Pork Producers, which represents 90 percent of Iowa's hog farmers, said in a report released today that 10 of the state's largest pork producers are not being regulated under federal law.

The report, which was compiled by the Iowa Pork Producers and the Iowa Pork Industry Council, said the 10 producers are responsible for about 40 percent of the state's pork production.

The report said the 10 producers are also responsible for about 70 percent of the state's waste water discharge.

The pork industry said it would work with the state to improve the regulation of waste water discharge.

Lower demand brings slight drop in gas prices

The survey reported prices of all major fuels dropped from their June levels, with the largest declines coming at full-service stations. Gas prices fell seven cents a gallon for unleaded regular, six cents a gallon for unleaded mid-grade, and eight cents a gallon for diesel. Full-service fuel sold for 97 cents a gallon, while diesel was 92 cents a gallon. With the drop, fuel sales increased in July.

Iowans given a choice

This spring the Iowa legislature passed a law granting health care proxy decisions to either a durable power of attorney or a family member. The law is an important and overdue reform in the treatment of terminally ill persons, whether it be a matter of Alzheimer's disease or some other serious illness.

Legal power of attorney would place vital decisions on health care in the hands of a family member or trusted acquaintance rather than the already overburdened medical community.

A law such as this is long overdue. The logic and motivation is inescapable: in many significant medical decisions the doctors are not authorized to appoint or to substitute themselves. The doctor's loyalty is to the patient and to his or her wishes. If the patient is too ill to speak for himself, then the family member or trusted acquaintance is the only person who can be trusted to speak with authority for the patient.

The durable power of attorney would allow a person to appoint a person of his or her choosing to speak for them in the event they become unable to speak for themselves.

Legal power of attorney would place vital decisions on health care in the hands of a family member or trusted acquaintance rather than the already overburdened medical community.

Reported rape statistics fail to represent vicimization of women

Thank you, Jim Rogers, for your called and written viewpoint about rape statistics. There are a lot of myths and misrepresentations about rape statistics, the most important being the false one about how many rape cases are reported to the police. Far from there being few, it is true that there are a lot of unreported cases. In fact, many people who are raped feel so ashamed and embarrassed that they do not report it at all. And many others who do report it to the police are disappointed when the police do not prosecute or do not prosecute vigorously.

The point is that we need to do a lot more to prevent rape, and we need to do a lot more to help the victims of rape. We need to be more open and honest about the problem of rape, and we need to be more supportive of the victims of rape. We need to do more to help the victims of rape, and we need to do more to prevent rape.

Conditions for the Right of a Person to Manage His or Her Own Life: The Case of End-of-Life Decisions

In this article, I examine the conditions for the right of a person to manage his or her own life, particularly in the context of end-of-life decisions. I argue that the right to manage one's own life includes the right to make decisions about one's own health care, including the right to refuse medical treatment.

The right to manage one's own life is a fundamental right that should be protected. It is a right that should be protected in all contexts, including in the context of end-of-life decisions. The right to manage one's own life includes the right to make decisions about one's own health care, including the right to refuse medical treatment.

Reform platform to split policy-makers

Thomas Ginberg
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The draft of a split platform expected to be released by the Democratic National Committee on Tuesday morning has run into a lively debate ahead of the national convention later this month.

The platform draft, which was released on Monday, outlines a two-pronged approach to governing the country, aiming to address both domestic and international issues.

The platform calls for increased investments in education, healthcare, and infrastructure, as well as a strong commitment to addressing climate change through policies aimed at reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

Internationally, the platform pledges to work towards a more peaceful world, emphasizing the importance of diplomacy and humanitarian efforts.

The draft also includes a strong emphasis on civil rights and social justice, recognizing the need for systemic changes to address long-standing inequalities.

The proposed platform is expected to be the subject of heated discussions among Democratic Party leaders, as they work to reconcile their diverse agendas and ensure the platform appeals to a broad base of voters.

Comments are welcomed and encouraged. However, please refrain from profanity, personal attacks, or excessive profanity.

The draft platform is expected to be finalized in the coming weeks, with the full version to be presented at the Democratic National Convention in August.

Bill's Bruce Smith out of pre season after surgery

Iowa City, Iowa — The Buffalo Bills are dealing the severity of an early knee injury to star linebacker Bruce Smith for at least another two weeks, Monday's team doctors announced Monday by Dr. James Andrews, who separated the knee ligaments and smoothed the surface of the knee joint during surgery at the Bills' training camp.

The holes the 4gers have to fill are a lot of places, including the offensive line. The offensive line is still muddled, with the left guard position still up in the air. The 4gers are downplaying the severity of the injury, saying it's a minor sprain and that Smith will be back in a week or two.
