Summit yields unprecedented unity

Gorbachev: 'New winds are blowing'

Michael Putzel
Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Bush and Mikhail Gorbachev voiced unprecedented solidarity Wednesday as they concluded a summit that produced a landmark arms control treaty and a striking initiative to prod peace in the Middle East.

"We take a significant step forward in dispelling a half century of mistrust," Bush said as he and Gorbachev signed the long-negotiated Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty in the Kremlin.

Even so, the pact marked the first time that the superpowers had agreed to actually reduce the number of transcontinental nuclear weapons in their arsenals. If ratified by the Senate and the Supreme Soviet, the 700-page treaty would reduce these stockpiles by 30 percent.

President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev exchange texts of the START arms reduction treaty which they signed Wednesday in Moscow as part of the superpower summit.

"It is an event of global significance," Gorbachev said at the ceremony at Vladimir Hall in the Kremlin. He said the pact would begin "dismantling the infrastructure of fear that has ruled the world."

The treaty followed a 1987 pact under which both the Soviet Union and the United States destroyed hundreds of intermediate-range nuclear weapons — those with a range of several hundred miles. Bush and Gorbachev signed the START pact Friday with pens made of metal from U.S. and Soviet missiles destroyed as part of that 1987 treaty.

Superpowers will launch Mideast talks

Barry Schweid
Associated Press

MOSCOW — The United States and the Soviet Union announced on Wednesday they intend to convene a Middle East peace conference in October to launch face-to-face negotiations between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

"This historic opportunity must not be lost," the two powers said in a joint statement. It was issued even though Israel has not yet said whether it will agree to President Bush's terms for the conference.

Bush is sending Secretary of State James Baker to Jerusalem today to try to clear the last stumbling block — a dispute over which Palestinian Arabs would attend.

Separately, Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh said he would go to Israel soon and take with him the documents required for a re-establishment of formal Soviet relations with Israel — conditioned on Israel agreeing to attend the peace conference.

LAYOFFS

Some dismissed UI workers may keep jobs

Ann Riley
Daily Iowan

If all goes well, some of the 124 UI employees laid off last week may still have jobs, according to Kathy Shaffer, Local 12 president of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees union.

Shaffer is working with the UI administration to discover alternatives to layoffs for meeting current statewide budget restrictions.

Kevin Ward, UI employee relations coordinator, said he met with Shaffer Monday to discuss a variety of concerns that AFSCME members had regarding repositioning. The 124 employees who received layoff notices July 22 had the option of bumping employees with less seniority who did not receive a layoff notice or applying for repositioning at the UI.

Of the 42 Physical Plant workers who received layoff notices last May, 36 have been repositioned. Shaffer doesn't think the numbers will be that high this time around.

Ward said the repositioning and bumping process had just begun, and it will take some time before persons who received layoff notices receive new job assignments.

"We are trying to find placements as the jobs become available," Ward said. "Some may be through bumping or repositioning."

Ward said people who wish to bump other employees have been identified, but notifications of who will be laid off as a result will not be issued immediately.

A similar compromise between union leaders and the administration of the University of Northern Iowa has reduced the number of layoffs there, according to Peter Hanson, AFSCME Local 2659 president.

"We are not violating any rules. We are just doing some things creatively with money to reduce the number of layoffs," Hanson said.

AFSCME is working with the UI administration to discover alternative ways to reduce costs. Hanson said Gov. Terry Branstad "earmarked bodies only" to reduce the state budget and did not consider the effects of the layoffs on the Iowa state Board of Regents institutions.

"Layoffs are the only way Branstad would accept the revenue," Hanson said. "He is being very vindictive."

Katie Fairbank

CAMDEN, S.C. — An Amtrak train carrying nearly 450 people derailed Wednesday and sideswiped a parked freight car, killing at least seven and injuring at least 78, authorities said.

It was the worst Amtrak accident since 16 people were killed in a 1987 wreck in Chase, Md., and the nation's third major train derailment in two weeks.

The 18-car Silver Star was en route to New York from Miami with 426 passengers when the accident occurred about 5 a.m. during a downpour. Hospitals reported treating 78 people and at least five were in critical condition. There were about 20 crew members, none of whom were hurt, officials said.

"It was devastating. It was awful," said passenger Stephen Clark of Philadelphia. He said he was thrown onto the tracks during the six-car derailment. He said the person next to him died.

"I'm breathing, praise the Lord," Clark said.

Five men and two women were killed in the crash, said Hugh Munn, spokesman for the State Law Enforcement Division.

However, Claire Austin, spokeswoman for the Federal Railroad Administration in Washington, insisted that 13 people had died. "There's no doubt about it," she said. She said some had died in hospitals, but hospitals contacted by The Associated Press did not

Judge awards Kennedy Smith indefinite delay of assault trial

Dan Sewell
Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A judge Wednesday postponed William Kennedy Smith's sexual assault trial indefinitely, rejecting objections from prosecutors and the woman who says Smith raped her.

In their motion for a delay, defense lawyers pointed to recent disclosures about three new prosecution witnesses who claim Smith sexually attacked them.

This latest raft of publicity has really worked to deny Mr. Smith a fair trial," attorney Roy Black said.

Lead prosecutor Moira Lasch urged that the trial start as scheduled on Aug. 5. And the woman who says Smith attacked her "would strenuously object to any continuance in this case," said her lawyer, David Roth.

Judge Mary Lupo granted a delay and didn't schedule a new trial date.

Smith, nephew of Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., has denied charges he raped the 29-year-old woman from nearby Jupiter early March 30.

Trial focuses on Schlote's use of antidepressant drug

Joleen Mahaffey
and Heather Chase
Daily Iowan

Wednesday's testimony at the attempted murder trial of John J. Schlote continued to focus on the defendant's use of the antidepressant drug, Prozac, during the attempted strangulation of his wife.

The couple separated in October 1990 and shortly after, John Schlote, 23, Coralville, was charged with assault after backhanding his wife during an argument in a car.

A no contact order was issued against Schlote, allowing the couple to only have contact with each other during exchanges of their 2-year-old daughter.

On Dec. 3, 1990, Schlote went over to Mrs. Schlote's home to pick up their daughter for the weekend. An argument escalated, and Schlote attempted to strangle his wife with the tie from his bathrobe.

According to Schlote's testimony, he wanted to remain at the scene and make sure his wife was not injured after the assault, but she ordered him to leave.

He later turned himself in to authorities. Schlote was placed in a high-security ward at the Johnson County Jail due to his suicidal tendencies.

During yesterday's trial, Schlote's lawyer, Davis Foster, brought forth two men who stated they had sexual relations with Mrs. Schlote during her marriage.

A medical expert for the defense will testify today whether Schlote was capable of forming intent to kill his wife, according to Foster.

Other expert witnesses will testify throughout the day, with closing arguments scheduled for Friday, Foster said.

ALA: City's smog level threat to human health

Heidi Pederson
Daily Iowan

Iowa City is one of at least 68 metropolitan areas in which federal smog standards are a threat to human health, according to the American Lung Association.

Research, especially results obtained in the past five years, suggests smog levels that meet federal standards can still be harmful to humans, according to Ron White, director of environmental health at the ALA's Washington, D.C., Government Relations office. The ALA is threatening to sue unless the EPA reviews the current smog standard within 60 days.

"(The ALA's) lawsuit threat is about getting the EPA to review the new research and then look at the current smog standards," White said. "Then, if they don't lower it, the next issue is to debate whether current levels need to be changed."

According to the Clean Air Act—a law which dictates how environmental policy, including air pollution regulation, must be approached—federal smog standards must be reviewed every five years. White said federal standards have not been studied since 1979.

The federal smog standard was raised in 1979, White said. Research done since that time, he added, points to the need to lower allowable levels.

"Recent research has demonstrated not only short-term effects but several, harmful long-term effects of exposure to (smog) levels below federal standards," White said. These long-term effects include shortness of breath, wheezing, coughing, loss of lung efficiency and lung inflammation.

"The lawsuit threat is about getting the EPA to review the new research and then look at the current smog standards."

Ron White, ALA

White said the ALA has not yet received a written response from the EPA, adding that politics will play a role in the government's response.

"Lowering the federal level has significant policy implications because other interests (such as those of businesses) are involved," he said. "That's been the issue here more than human health. We're dealing with an administration that doesn't look kindly on issues of strict environmental standards."

Johnson County Health Department official Joel Bolkcom said he wasn't aware of the potential lawsuit and hasn't received any complaints about smog levels from local groups but said the ALA's claims do have merit.

"If the ALA said lower levels are needed, they know what they're talking about," said Bolkcom, assistant for consumer affairs. But he added the ALA will probably have a battle on its hands.

"There has been a lot of skepticism about the Clean Air Act and the time frame in which we'll see improvements (in pollution levels)—if we ever see improvements."

UI RESEARCH

Poplar trees benefit environment, economy

Monica Phillips
Daily Iowan

As a result of research at the UI, farmers and business persons may be entering a new field that not only benefits their pocketbooks but the environment as well.

The research project uses poplar trees to significantly reduce the amount of pollutants entering water supplies and explores the possibility of using the wood as an alternative heating source, said Louis Licht, associate research scientist at the UI's Department of Civil and Environmental Engineering.

"We wanted a crop that was simultaneously productive enough to pay its way—which essentially means compete with corn—while it produced the desired environmental benefits," Licht said. While living in Oregon in 1979, Licht was introduced to the benefits of the poplar tree while working on an alternative energy development commission.

The poplar project began in 1988 at the Amana Society Farms in Amana, Iowa. Buffer plots of more than 1,000 trees were planted between streams and crop fields.

Environmentally, the trees' deep roots are important, as they absorb and help with the breakdown of nitrogen, phosphorous, herbicides and pesticides. Although some of the chemicals are beneficial to crops, "We don't want it in our water supplies," Licht said.

From June through September of last year, 200 samples measuring nitrate levels were taken in the near-surface groundwater along the buffers.

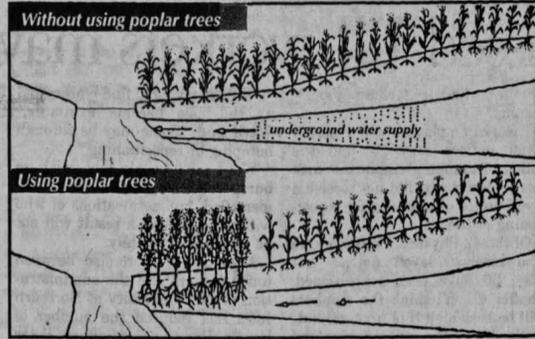

The results showed that 150 milligrams of nitrate per liter were measured near the front of the buffer but only three milligrams left the buffer zone. Licht said the Environmental Protection Agency considers no more than 45 milligrams of nitrate per liter acceptable drinking water.

Additional benefits of the trees include adding wildlife habitat, intercepting eroded soils and providing a windbreak.

Poplars are also being used on landfill caps in Oregon. Licht explained that since each tree needs 300 to 400 pounds of water to grow eight ounces, the amount of groundwater entering the landfill and leaving contaminated can be reduced.

"We're removing a lot of water in strategic places. It's a very important thing because the water moves the pollutants," Licht said. Using this principal, trees have also been planted near abandoned ore mines in South Dakota and near cattle feed lots in western Iowa, he added.

Poplars were chosen over other trees for several reasons, Licht said. First, they grow extremely fast. In three years most poplars average over 17 feet. In addition, the trees have performed root initials beneath the bark. This means by sticking a stem in the ground, it will grow roots, Licht said.

Poplar trees grow well in wet areas and, once cut, they will grow back from the stump. They also have the advantage of being able to clone themselves—once a tree with good characteristics is found, replicas will grow from the original branches, he explained.

But in addition to the positive environmental effects, the trees may have economic benefits, too. Currently, Licht is examining the possibility of using poplar wood as an alternative heating fuel, which could open a new market to farmers and other businesses.

Licht hopes this marketability will encourage farmers to plant the trees. "The whole idea is not that the farmer gives (farmland) up, but he manages it in an alternative way which is still profitable," Licht said.

A quick cash turnaround may appeal to farmers, as most poplars are ready to harvest in three years. However, Licht said only a portion can be harvested at a time. The cut stumps must have time to regrow before the remainder is harvested.

Another appeal is the simplicity. "It's a tree," he said. "You don't have to be a rocket scientist. Anybody can do it."

Authorities Wednesday identified the dead men as Dene A. Mullet, 48, of Kalona and Walter Jay Kempf, 49, of Wellman. They were found by Ron Figgins, 40, as he rode his motorcycle from his mobile home at the end of the tar-covered lane back to his job in Riverside after a lunch break.

Figgins said he knew the men.

Shimp said one man was found in a grassy ditch beside the lane and the other was in the lane near a late-model pickup truck.

State Division of Criminal Investigation agents and Washington County sheriff's deputies are investigating the deaths together, said Washington County Sheriff Yale Jarvis.

Passerby discovers 2 men dead on farm lane

RIVERSIDE, Iowa—Authorities were investigating the shooting deaths of two men whose bodies were found on a farm lane.

A passerby found the bodies just before 1 p.m. Tuesday along a dead-end county road south of Iowa 22 near the southeast Iowa city. The men apparently died just a short time before they were found, and authorities were investigating the case as a murder-suicide.

Washington County Medical Examiner Dennis Shimp, who was to perform the autopsy in Burlington, said that was possible.

"We're not sure yet," he said. "We'll have to wait until the autopsy results are done."

RARE BOOK THEFT

Blumberg fined, sentenced to nearly 6 years

Mary Neubauer
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A federal judge Wednesday sentenced Stephen Blumberg to five years, 11 months in jail for stealing thousands of dollars worth of rare books, antique windows and musical instruments.

The sentence is the maximum allowed under federal sentencing guidelines.

Federal Judge Harold Viator also imposed a $200,000 fine and ordered Blumberg to pay $200 to the federal crime victims' fund.

Blumberg, 43, of St. Paul, Minn., was convicted in April on four theft-related counts, including one of possessing 21,000 stolen rare books from hundreds of libraries across the country and Canada. The other charges dealt with stolen antique windows and musical instruments.

Blumberg, a slight, stooped, pale man with unkempt graying hair, was not called to testify at his sentencing.

An FBI agent who has worked with him in identifying the books' owners said he believes Blumberg has made an honest effort.

"I found no indication that he was attempting to deceive or misidentify the books at all," said Des Moines FBI agent David Oxler.

Oxler said he and another agent accompanied Blumberg to an Omaha warehouse every day for nearly two months to attempt to identify book owners. Oxler estimated there are as many as 25,000 books in the Omaha warehouse.

During the two months, Oxler said, Blumberg was able to identify the institutions from which he stole about 4,400 of the books.

Oxler said Blumberg also determined that another 3,200 of the books were stolen but said Blumberg couldn't identify their owners.

Blumberg said he owns 10,700 of the books, Oxler said.

Blumberg clearly remembers where he bought many of the less valuable books in the collection, Oxler said. He said Blumberg remembered the town, date and "little old lady" from which he bought one book.

But Blumberg cannot remember the owners of most of the valuable books in the warehouse.

"His only explanation, and I've had to accept this, was that since he had had personal contact with the little old lady, he had an independent recollection," Oxler said.

Ken Nesheim, a rare book librarian called by the defense, estimated the value of the books in the warehouse at $5 million.

Stephen Blumberg, right, is escorted by a federal marshal as he arrives for sentencing Wednesday morning at the Federal Courthouse in Des Moines.

ISU neighbors remember Dahmer being 'different'

Associated Press

AMES — Neighbors remember Jeffrey Dahmer's blue eyes. And his fair hair. And a vague feeling there was something different about the little boy who lived in student housing with his parents at Iowa State University.

Dahmer, now a 31-year-old Milwaukee resident, has told Milwaukee police he killed at least 17 men and mutilated their bodies. It is believed Dahmer killed his first victim shortly after graduating from high school, and authorities suspect him of a string of killings throughout the country and perhaps in Germany.

Faye Cole, now of Starkville, Miss., lived near the Dahmers in the early 1960s.

The Dahmers, like the Dahmers, lived in Pammel Court, a student housing complex where graduate students with young families lived.

Faye Cole said she remembers Jeffrey Dahmer's "beautiful blue eyes" and his strange manner. She said he didn't carry himself like other children and his eyes, though lovely, were different.

"Even then, you had an inkling there was something wrong with him," Cole told the Des Moines Register in an interview.

Cole has a picture of Dahmer attending her 3-year-old son's birthday party. Dahmer, who would have been about 5, "just looks puzzled," she said.

"He just looks out of it. The other kids are blowing horns and whatever, and he just looks dazed and confused," she said.

Cole said her son didn't like Dahmer, but she didn't know why. She said her son couldn't say "Dahmer" so he used his toddler word for pajamas.

"He'd say he didn't like 'that of Jeff Jammers,'" Cole recalled.

The Dahmers lived in Pammel Court while Jeffrey's father, Lionel, earned his Ph.D. in chemistry. Cole said Lionel Dahmer was proud of a new car and to her seemed "more concerned with keeping the dust off his car than he was with anything else."

Jeffrey Dahmer

Another Pammel Court neighbor, Norma Hensley, who still lives in Ames, said the Dahmer family was quiet and kept to itself.

Hensley said she lived across the street from the Dahmers, and her older son baby-sat Jeffrey Dahmer a few times. She recalls very little about Jeffrey Dahmer, other than a foggy memory of his pale, blond hair.

Hensley said she remembers Joyce Dahmer more clearly.

Department of Otolaryngology named best in the nation by doctors' survey

Heidi Pederson
Daily Iowan

UI Hospitals and Clinics have been listed as one of the eight best medical institutions in the Midwest, according to a U.S. News & World Report survey.

In addition, the magazine's Tuesday edition named the hospital's Department of Otolaryngology — ear, nose and throat medicine — as the best in the nation.

"We are extremely pleased with (the ranking)," said hospital Administrator William Petasnick. "It's quite an honor, and I'm sure it's a tremendous source of pride not only to the hospital but to the entire state as well."

In its annual survey of America's best hospitals, U.S. News & World Report asked approximately 1,000 doctors nationwide to name the best hospitals in 15 different medical specialties.

Along with UIHC, other Midwest institutions named included the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.; Barnes Hospital in St. Louis, Mo.; the Menninger Clinic in Topeka, Kan.; University of Chicago Hospitals; and the University of Michigan Hospitals. Petasnick said those named share common traits.

"If you look at these hospitals, you can see certain qualities that distinguish them," he said. "For one, their people are very committed — they have a clear sense of vision and unifying elements. Second, they share a high level of support from the legislature. Also, they have very exceptional facilities that allow people to function effectively."

Dr. Brian McCabe, head of UIHC's Otolaryngology Department, said the Iowa City community has played a part in his department's success.

"I attribute (the ranking) to great support by the College of Medicine, the hospital and a fine, dedicated staff. It's a very great honor," he said.

The department, which provides $7.5 million in services annually, is recognized for its research on cochlear implants for the deaf and for cleft palate surgery.

McCabe said the recognition from the survey will benefit the hospital. "It will undoubtedly increase patients because people want to come where they have the best chance of being helped, especially in advanced and difficult cases," he said.

The ranking, according to Petasnick, shows the hospital has reached its 20-year goal to become a top institution.

"This is a basic confirmation that our plans, dreams and goals have been achieved," he said.

Video reigns - MTV turns 10

"If the medium is the message, the user is the content." — Marshall McLuhan.
 "Too much is never enough." — MTV slogan.

Scott Williams
 Associated Press

There may come a day when we hear music and look around us for the video screen. Maybe we already do.

Music Television, cable's 24-hour music video network, is 10 years old today.

It started in a basement in Fort Lee, N.J., at 12:01 a.m. EDT with a music video by The Buggles and their sole hit, "Video Killed the Radio Star."

"It's definitely a new kind of television," said Tom Freston, chairman and chief executive officer of MTV Networks, parent of MTV's sister companies, Nickelodeon-Nick at Nite and VH-1, the music video for older, grayer rockers.

"It was a totally new format, a new use for television," Freston said in a telephone interview Monday from his limousine. "It was an experimental, visual playground with a popular beat."

Its initial slogan, "You'll never look at music the same way again," has become its self-fulfilling prophecy. And in that lies the reality of what MTV has become.

Today, MTV boasts upwards of 56.6 million subscribers over 7,430 affiliates, hitting the 12- to 34-year-old age group with rock, Dolby-B noise reduction and nine minutes of advertising (seven national, two local) per hour.

MTV is much, much more than "an advertiser-supported, basic cable service of MTV Networks." It is a dominant force in popular culture. It is ubiquitous.

MTV has changed the way rock music is made, sold and appreciated. As The Washington Post has noted, in May of 1981, 23 of Billboard magazine's "Hot 100" had videos; in 1989, it was 97 out of 100.

MTV's visual style and frenetic pace have influenced TV series like "Miami Vice" and "Crime Story." Even low-key movies like "When Harry Met Sally" spawn video clips.

MTV has been studied thoroughly. Critics, pop sociologists, cultural anthropologists and writers "viewing with alarm" have studied it, poked and pinched and prodded it. Sometimes they have even watched it.

The most perceptive of them have identified both MTV's peculiarity and its appeal.

Marshall McLuhan, that great theorist of media, died without having seen MTV, but he'd have understood it immediately.

MTV, he would have said, removes music from the immediacy and presence of "hot" media like radio and home stereo, and repackages it as a product for the low-resolution, distant, "cool" medium of television.

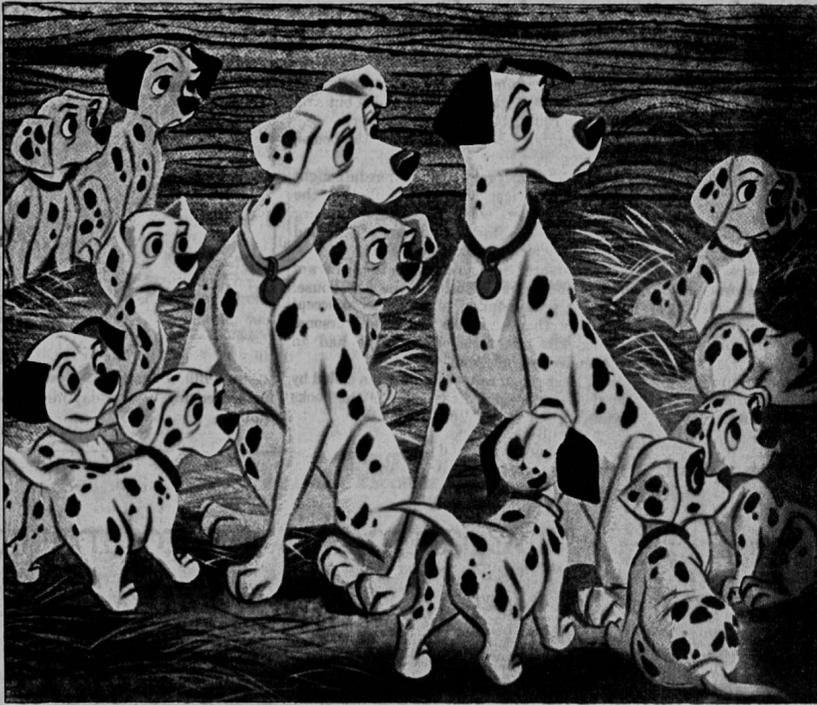

"You'll never look at music the same way again" was literally true. MTV made us look at music.

Even though your TV's loudspeaker is much better than it was 10 years ago, it still can't approach the performance of a home stereo; even if you pipe MTV's cable signal through your stereo system, it's not digital audio.

No, the sound of MTV has never been as important as the LOOK of it.

Zapping the eye with a quick fix of colored electricity, endlessly selling to consumer appetites, it never can be more than a product.

MOVIE REVIEW

Pongo and Perdita puzzle over the plenitude of puppies in Walt Disney's "101 Dalmatians," showing at Cinema I and II. The dogs run up against the evil Cruella De Vil and her thugs in London.

101 pups help cool dog days

Janice Pocengal
 Daily Iowan

What's there not to like in a movie about dogs that watch television, love their father and eat Kanine Krispies?

Walt Disney's re-release of the classic film "101 Dalmatians" is set in an almost-perfect world. Not only can animals talk and reason just like humans, but for them the world lacks any ambiguity. Characteristics such as virtue, honesty and courage are sure to bring a happily-ever-after ending. Villains surface long enough to test themselves against morally correct heroes and then they disappear, usually forever. And there is such a thing as forever in Disney stories.

But kindness and niceness, along with nearly 100 wide-eyed puppies, would still leave the story dry if it weren't for the colorful villains who are allowed to indulge in just about anything they choose.

Take Cruella De Vil — she's not nice. Her goal is to steal enough Dalmatian puppies to make a dogs skin coat. De Vil, with a stunning half-black and half-white hairdo, races around in an extra-long roadster, driving off cliffs only to come out unscathed.

Two thugs who work for De Vil steal the puppies by roughing up the nanny in charge of the house and locking her in the attic. Father dog, Pongo, must start a search to get the dogs back. What he doesn't know is that he will find 84 pups in addition to his own 15 being held hostage.

If wondering how the puppies may be saved can't keep you glued to the screen and you start to realize that the kids in the theater are having all the fun, maybe the music will help. That, along with the animation, is one of the best features of the film.

The film is backed by some excellent blues, courtesy of Pongo's human pet, Roger. His first big hit is a swankier song about Cruella De Vil that Roger performs best when he's angry. The animation casts the streets of London with a surreal glow. It's never-never-land and the characters only follow suit.

Despite sentimentalism and predictability, the film had some otherwise interesting characters. Take Roger, Pongo's owner, for example. He's a musician, unmarried and a bit oblivious. He marries Anita after a well-meaning Pongo intentionally knocks both humans into a pond during an evening walk.

De Vil stands on her own as a villainess and serves as the Disney counterpart to the psycho-killer in "The Silence of the Lambs" who wanted a skin suit, too, but kidnapped size 14 women instead of dogs. Kids in the theater seemed especially pleased with the movie in spite of Cruella's evilness.

Fortunately, it's not long before the puppies are home and safe, just in time for Christmas. The happily-ever-after story ends in just over 90 minutes.

There were a few questions left unanswered, like what happened to De Vil and her thugs, or how the 101 dogs would fit into a London flat? But those are best left for the cynic to answer. After all, it is a Disney film.

Don't go home! There's plenty to do in Iowa City

Mandy Crane
 Daily Iowan

Finals are over and Pee-wee Herman has been, shall we say, exposed — there's no better time to celebrate the weekend in Iowa City.

Since the next entertainment page of the DI won't be out until the end of the month, shows and happenings during the interim are included in this update.

■ Making a rare Iowa appearance at the I.C. Yacht Club, 13 S. Linn St., later this month are The Samples, a fine Colorado group with a ska sound and considerable college radio airplay. Ricky Webb, multipurpose employee at the club, calls the group "tougher than hell." Join Ricky and his friends Wednesday, Aug. 21. Tickets are $5 in advance, $7 at the door.

■ For a great concert this weekend, experience the House of Large Sizes from Cedar Falls. With a punk-garage sound and a considerable following, every HOLEs (as friends call them) show is a guaranteed invitation to slam with the best of them. Wear your shoulder pads and enjoy the pit at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., Friday night.

■ The Bijou bades adieu for the summer this weekend with the wrap-up of the Audrey Hepburn series with "Robin and Marian" and the French New Wave masterpiece "Les Cousins." Many consider "Robin" to be the comeback film for Hepburn. It plays tonight at 7 and Friday at 9 p.m. "Les Cousins" plays tonight at 9 and Friday at 7 p.m.

■ If another Robin Hood moves you, "Robin Hood — Prince of Thieves" continues at the Englert Theatre, 221 E. Washington St., for another week. Pick of the week is "Bill and Ted's Bogus Journey," the sequel to their excellent adventure, now showing at Campus Theatres in the Old Capitol Center. Few stupid films can be this amusing.

RECORD REVIEW

Less popular than Jesus, Tape-beatles keep trying

Lindsay Alan Park
 Daily Iowan
Music with Sound
 The Tape-beatles
 DOVEntertainment Inc.
 CD $14, Cassette $7

The Tape-beatles are you — only better.

Gosh, I'm clever, aren't I? Well, actually I stole this comment from the liner notes of Music with Sound to illustrate how Iowa City's pre-fab five use their latest record to cozy up to unwary listeners before conking them over the head with a cleverly packaged life-improvement manifesto.

Though listeners bear the brunt of the assault, the real enemies, we're told, are those who try to assert ownership of ideas and musical expression through copyright laws. Since the Tape-beatles dismiss all supposed creativity and originality as merely coming from artists' unconscious eclecticism in a common culture, the band naturally treats such greedy, legally sanctioned attempts to stake out territory as outrageous.

So what better course could a group of studio wizards follow but to become the ultimate samplin' fools in the underground cultural resistance movement against royalty gluttons like ex-Beatle Paul McCartney?

Thus, band members Linda Morgan Brown, Lloyd Dunn, John Heck, Ralph Johnson and Paul Neff have shunned musical instruments, singing and songwriting, opting instead to pirate copyrighted recordings and broadcasts, which they have been slicing, splicing and cloning into Andy Warhol-style commodities since the band formed in 1986.

Music with Sound, the current collection of 31 flavorful sound collages and fragments, comes off like an Orwellian consumer report. As we sift together through the aural junkyard of the airwaves and recording industry, our Tape-beatle tourguides terrify us by highlighting the sheer volume of junk we let into our systems.

Indeed, as the cut "Earlids" tries to teach us, selective screening of what we hear is essential to preserve our sanity. This raises the question of what side of the screen Music with Sound belongs on. Is the pop vehicle for the Tape-beatles' critical artistic theory worth listening to in itself or is it just one of those "little games of little alienated people," a scientific voice describes in one of the denser, more complex cuts, "The Tide or the Wind?"

Well, if you're looking for dance tunes, you won't find them here (with the somewhat catchy exception of the industrially grinding "Positive Will"). But if you want socio-political commentary, Music with Sound belongs in your collection.

Rarely have the authoritarian voices of doctors, hypnotists, evangelists, political commentators and advertisers sounded so self-righteous and obnoxious as here, being distorted by constant repetition and juxtaposition with other absurdities. Worst of all are the motivational self-help messages ("I want it, and I'll have it"), which are intoned so repulsively that you can almost visualize the "millionaire" businessman behind them, in his flowered shirt and lei sipping margaritas.

As happens with most other art records, first listeners to Music with Sound will cling to the most easily recognizable tidbits of ear-friendly music before plunging deeper. Certainly the Beatles' samples of hacksawing violins from "Eleanor Rigby" (in "Do You Think It's an Accident") and the kazoo band from "Good Morning, Good Morning" (in "I Can't Help You at All; Sorry") provide a necessary foothold. More instant fun can be had with the record's lone vocal piece, a 30-second James Taylor-esque fragment called "Scientists Are Working."

A final product note to potential Tape-beatle consumers: The band is putting the final touches on a full-length videotape version of Music with Sound, to be available soon. Judging from a recent live "performance" by the band, I'd wager that the video version may be definitive, and therefore, worth waiting for.

IN THE ZONE

Put those summer films to rest; here's next year's best

Locke Peterseim
 Daily Iowan

Well, another summer movie season is winding down, its blockbuster load shot and running down its leg. I know this often leaves true movie fans feeling a bit empty, wondering, "Was it worth it? Should I have stood in all those opening night lines and paid all that money? Did I fall for the hype? Did I expect too much? Will the movie industry still respect me next summer? Will it call me? Should I have these roses checked?"

The answer is, of course, a resounding "Don't worry! After all, there's always next summer!" Though we may have lost our summer blockbuster virginity many years ago at "Jaws" or "Star Wars," that's no reason we shouldn't continue to recklessly try to recapture that initial thrill, summer after summer. Along those optimistic lines, let's shake off this summer's disappointments with a look at next summer's predicted Big Hits!

■ "Terminator 3 — My Dinner with Arnie" — When "T2" director James Cameron said "T3 without me" it frightened an industry hoping to further milk its cash cow. But in stepped director Wallace Shawn to save the day! This time the good Terminator (Arnold Schwarzenegger) is unable to stop the bad Terminator (Spaulding Gray) from destroying the Earth. After a nuclear firestorm reduces the planet to a giant cinder in the film's first 10 minutes, only the two terminators are left alive. They then carry on a two-hour conversation about life, death, God, the role and rights of the individual in society, and which direction toilet paper should unroll. The effects budget is expected to top $200 million, mostly going to computer generate a simulated thought-process for Schwarzenegger.

■ "Jesus Christ — Rebel Guy" — Looking back at the successes of "Batman," "Dick Tracy" and "Robin Hood," the industry went in search of yet another pop-culture icon whose name and story would be an instant summer sell. After rejecting the Beatles because McCartney insisted on playing himself, they settled for their second choice. The studio is quick to point out that this will not be a controversial film; in fact, co-producer Peter Gubers says, "We're going to try to get away from the whole religious thing and just concentrate on the action-adventure appeal of the story." Kevin Costner has been signed to play Jesus, though he refuses to wear the traditional robes, insisting they look "girly." (Instead, he'll be outfitted in a sleek blue and white wet suit. Responding to critics' charges that such wear would lack historical verisimilitude, Costner snapped, "Hey, he does full-immersion baptisms and walks on water and stuff, right?") There have also been changes in the story in order to make it more "lively and upbeat," including an effect-laden attack on the Temple by Jesus and his disciples to rescue Mary Magdalene (Julia Roberts) who's been kidnapped by the evil King Herod (Alan Rickman), and a new ending in which Jesus' disciples save him from the cross using Apache assault helicopters. Co-stars include Jack Nicholson as Pontius Pilate, Warren Beatty as John the Baptist, Keanu Reeves, Johnny Depp, Richard Grieco, Patrick Dempsey and Christian Slater as Matthew, Mark, Luke, John and Peter and Crispin Glover as Judas. Watch for the coming promotional campaign, "If he's gonna die for their sins, he's gonna take a few with him!"

■ "A New Leash On Life" — Everyone loves to cry at schmaltzy movies about near-death lessons of emotional renewal, scream at lost-in-the-outdoors thrillers, relate to middle-age bonding stories and coo at cute dogs, so why not combine all four? In the tradition of "Regarding Henry," "The Doctor," "Deliverance," "Southern Comfort," "Diner," "The Big Chill," "Benji" and "Turner and Hootch," this tear-jerker gives us five egomaniac film moguls who take a rafting trip down the fading Colorado river only to all suffer sudden attacks of Epstein-Barr Syndrome. They're saved from their lethargy, not to mention violent Earth-Firsters, by a pack of wild, but friendly, dogs. Their new canine pals teach them not only how to survive in the wilderness, but also a little something about being good, environmentally aware, beings. Starring Jerry Bruckheimer as Mike Ovitz, Don Simpson as Joel Silver, Mike Ovitz as Jon Peters, Joel Silver as Jerry Bruckheimer and Jon Peters as Don Simpson.

■ "Theodore and Louis" — In the wake of the recent spate of male-bashing films comes this table-turning movie. It follows the male-bonding adventures of two guys (Billy Crystal and Sylvester Stallone) who've lost touch with their manhood. They hit the road when Theodore (Crystal) calls a waitress "honey" after she tried to make him feel guilty about ordering red meat. "Ted and Lou" also promises an emotionally shattering climax in a sweat lodge. Screenplay by Robert Bly, soundtrack by Mickey Hart.

■ "The Willy Wonka Killer" — Taking a double cue from the box-office success of "The Silence of the Lambs" and today's headlines, this thriller follows chocolate-factory employee Jeffrey Dahmer (Woody Harrelson) on his gruesome reign of terror. The ad campaign features the soon-to-be-famous tease line, "Phew! These aren't chocolate covered cherries!"

The number of layoffs at the UNI Physical Plant will not be reduced, however, Hanson said. He said custodial services at UNI were already short-handed.

"These cuts are going to be reflected in services real quick," Hanson said. "If somebody is sick, there will be nobody to cover for them. Floors, buildings will go undone."

Similar losses at the UI Physical Plant were partly responsible for Tuesday's resignation by James Christenson, director of the Physical Plant.

MIDEAST: Bush, Gorbachev announce peace conference

Baker will also go to Jordan, which is willing to form a joint delegation with Palestinians, and to Tunisia, Algeria and Morocco as well. The three North African states are not directly involved in the dispute, although Morocco has sought to play a mediator's role between Israel and the Arabs.

The Palestine Liberation Organization has its headquarters in Tunisia. The Bush administration has ruled out PLO participation in the peace talks.

Bush, at a joint news conference with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev at the conclusion of their summit meeting, said invitations to the conference would be issued at least 10 days in advance. Although he did not say so, the likely site is Washington.

In Jerusalem, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's spokesman, Yossi Achmeir, said the government would not compromise on the Palestinian issue or make any move "liable to be seen as a concession."

Shamir has tried to exclude Palestinians living in East Jerusalem from the talks. His purpose is to give not even symbolic support to the idea that Israel's annexation of East Jerusalem at the end of the 1967 Six-Day War is negotiable.

The Palestinians, however, insist on the right to name their own representatives and to use the peace conference as a vehicle to demand establishment of a state carved out of land held by Israel, with Jerusalem as the capital.

The calling of a peace conference under U.S.-Soviet sponsorship marks a major step in post-Cold War cooperation between the superpowers.

The Soviets broke ties with Israel in 1967 to show support for its friends in the Arab world. Under Gorbachev, however, the Soviets exchanged diplomats with Israel and the two countries are operating just below the level of normal relations.

"This historic opportunity must not be lost," Bush said at the news conference, with Gorbachev at his side. But, he said, "peace cannot be imposed. It can only result from direct negotiations between the parties."

Gorbachev agreed in the joint statement, which also said "the United States and the Soviet Union pledge to do their utmost to promote and sustain the peace-making process."

"We have a window of opportunity in order to really achieve progress in this very sensitive area," Gorbachev said at the news conference.

Bush acknowledged, meanwhile, that Israel had not yet accepted the U.S.-Soviet formula for direct talks with a Palestinian delegation. But, he added, "I'd say I'm a little more optimistic today."

Baker's trip to the Middle East will be his sixth since the Persian Gulf war in February. On his last venture he gained the approval of Syria, Jordan and Lebanon to Bush's terms for a peace conference.

The main term is that Israel should relinquish territory the Arabs lost in the 1967 war in exchange for recognition.

There were several freight cars on the parallel track, but the Amtrak train apparently only hit one.

He and other officials declined to speculate that the rain was a factor.

The freight car, loaded with coal, sand and woodchips, cut deeply into the left side of the rear passenger car, knocking out several seats and peeling back the car's aluminum skin for about 25 feet.

The two tracks were about 10 feet apart.

"There is no indication the train was being operated improperly," said Clifford Black, a spokesman at Amtrak headquarters in Washington. He said the crew had boarded at Jacksonville, Fla., and had been on the job about five hours when the crash occurred.

He said there was no indication there was a problem with the condition of the track at the derailment scene, in a wooded area near Camden, a town of 7,500 about 30 miles northeast of Columbia in central South Carolina.

Before the treaty signing, the two leaders drove to Gorbachev's dacha, or country house, outside Moscow for talks on thorny issues that still separate the superpowers, as well as broader issues such as the future of arms control and integration of the Soviet Union into the international economic community.

It was a warm, sunny day in the woods, and Gorbachev said that when he asked a top U.S. official how he felt, the American replied, "like at home."

"That's the kind of atmosphere we worked in," Gorbachev said.

At a wrap-up joint news conference, Bush and Gorbachev spoke warmly about each other and of a budding relationship between the two nations that was sweeping away the remnants of the Cold War.

"I felt a feeling of solidarity in this," the Soviet president said after his eighth summit with a U.S. president, his fourth with Bush.

"Today... we understand better the value of our cooperation, the fact that this is necessary," Gorbachev added. "So perhaps this is not a question of platonic love, but a deep understanding of the fact that as countries and states we need each other today and tomorrow."

The Soviet Union's dire financial straits and the political unrest in the country were never far from the surface.

In the pre-dawn hours, there was a bloody reminder of the tensions between the central Soviet government and the independence-minded Baltic republics. Officials said armed attackers killed six Lithuanian guards and wounded two others at a border post run by the secessionist Lithuanian government.

Gorbachev suggested the raid was carried out by people who don't want a negotiated settlement, and he promised an investigation and efforts "to avoid such excesses."

The Soviet government considers the border posts illegal, and attacks on them have in the past been carried out by Interior Ministry troops. But Bush appeared to accept his counterpart's assurance that the raid was not ordered by central authorities.

Bush reiterated the U.S. view that the Baltic republics should be granted freedom from Moscow. "I had an opportunity to express my views to President Gorbachev on the whole question of the Baltic states," he said. "I don't think it's fair to link a border incident, before you know what happened, to that question, however."

Gorbachev, while still showing some displeasure that the United States was not doing more in the way of economic aid, said his country was ready to join Western industrialized nations and "to play by the rules of the game."

Croatia suffers setback in ethnic violence

Roland Prinz
Associated Press

SISAK, Yugoslavia — Croatia's security forces, leading a convoy of 1,000 fearful villagers to safety, abandoned a strategically vital stronghold to Serbian militants Wednesday in a major military setback.

While the 3½-mile convoy wound through territory held by hostile ethnic Serbs toward this industrial city, Croatian authorities mobilized more troops and the federal leadership sought an elusive formula for peace.

European Community officials arrived in Belgrade on Wednesday seeking a truce in Croatia, which declared independence June 25 and has been convulsed with Serbian-Croatian violence that has left 50 people dead since last week.

Croatia's police and national guard were forced to abandon Kostajnica, 70 miles southeast of the Croatian capital, Zagreb, after federal air force jets strafed and army troops rained down heavy mortar fire on the town of 4,000 people, Croatian radio said. A Croatian policeman was reportedly killed and several townsfolk injured.

Wednesday evening, the retreating convoy crawled along toward Sisak at 25 miles per hour. It included anything that moved — cars, trucks, vans and buses — and worried Croats from neighboring villages swelled its ranks along the way, said Associated Press photographer Franz Pammer.

The fleeing Croats took a circuitous route nearly five times longer than the 18-mile distance between Kostajnica and Sisak, a city of 40,000, because so much territory lay in Serbian hands.

Wednesday's withdrawal was a major setback in the Croats' struggle with their Serbian foes, who are supported by neighboring Serbia, the fragmenting federation's largest republic. Kostajnica lies uncomfortably close to Zagreb, and Croatian officials had vowed to defend it at all costs.

Kostajnica was also the last Croatian stronghold in the Banija region, which lies between the Croatian Serbs' stronghold of Krajinna and Slavonia — Croatia's rich agricultural eastern region, parts of which are also held by Serbian militants.

The retreat should allow ethnic Serbs and army troops to move freely between southern Croatia and Serbia, the news agency Tanjug said.

Croatia accuses the federal army,

Associated Press

led by a Serb-dominated officer corps, of siding with Serbian militias in the fighting. Federal generals say their troops are in Croatia to separate the warring parties.

Serbian militiamen have been moving north toward Sisak, seizing control of small villages and advancing Wednesday as far as Komarevo, just 3 miles southeast of Sisak, said Mate Piskor, local correspondent for Zagreb's Vjesnik daily.

Speculation has centered on the possibility that Serbian militias were making a last-minute land grab to build a powerful bargaining position in the case of a truce.

JORDAN: Playing his second favorite game

"I think there are a lot of professionals who want to play and, being that there are a lot of professionals that haven't played and I've played, I don't mind giving the other guys an opportunity," he said Tuesday.
Jordan played for coach Bob Knight on the U.S. team that won the gold medal in 1984 at Los Angeles. He previously expressed uncertainty about whether he would compete in the 1992 Games in Barcelona, Spain.

"Right now it's a closed door for me," he said. "I love the Olympics, I love representing my country. But with my schedule and my golf time in the summertime..."
Jordan's poor outing on Wednesday apparently wasn't poor enough to change his mind about the Olympics. When asked whether, in light of the struggle on the links, he was reconsidering, Jordan replied, "That's old news already."
Jordan, bitten by the golf bug less than 10 years ago, already has lowered his handicap to a respectable 6. However, he admitted Wednesday to being demoralized by his showing, and not simply because he has expressed a desire to play competitive golf after he retires from basketball.

Western Golf Association tournament director Peter de Young came under fire in Golf Digest magazine for extending Jordan an exemption into the championship that has been won in the past by such golfing luminaries as Nicklaus, Curtis Strange and Lanny Wad-kins. For that reason, Jordan had hoped to play better.

"But I'm not going to say I'll throw my clubs in the water and keep on walking — not yet anyway."
At least the day wasn't a total washout. Earlier, NBC announced that Jordan would be the guest host on Saturday Night Live early in the fall TV season.
"I'm looking forward to that," he said, winking and flashing his million-dollar smile. "But I'll probably be just as nervous."

the second for a 1-0 lead. But Fielder tied it in the bottom half and Deer connected with two outs for his 21st home run.
Blue Jays 3, Indians 1
TORONTO — Jimmy Key won for the first time in eight starts and the Toronto Blue Jays ended a four-game losing streak, beating the Cleveland Indians 3-1 Wednesday night.

Key (11-6) pitched a six-hitter, walked one and struck out four in eight innings. He had four losses and three no-decisions since his last victory on June 13, 1-0 over Cleveland.
Tom Henke pitched the ninth and stayed perfect in 21 save chances. Cleveland lost its fourth straight game.

Royals 5, Brewers 4
MILWAUKEE — Brian McRae had three hits and drove in one run Wednesday night as the Kansas City Royals beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4.
The Royals chased Chris Bosio (7-8) with four runs in the third inning. McRae's RBI single in the fourth made it 5-1.

Luis Aquino (5-2) allowed three runs in 6 1-3 innings. Jeff Montgomery pitched 1 1-3 innings for his 20th save.
George Brett, Jim Eisenreich and Brent Mayne singled home runs in the third and another scored on Bill Pecota's RBI grounder. Bosio lasted just 2 2-3 innings, his shortest outing of the season.

and a $1,000 fine because Dibble threw a ball into the stands after a game April 28 and hit a fan, injuring his elbow.
Phillies 6, Padres 3
PHILADELPHIA — Wes Chamberlain drove in a career-high six runs with a pair of two-run homers Wednesday night as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Diego Padres 6-3.
Chamberlain was just 5-for-24 before his second-inning single. He homered in the fourth and sixth off Greg Harris (2-3) and singled in the seventh.
Bruce Ruffin (2-3) allowed two runs and six hits in seven innings and struck out seven as the Phillies won their second straight following a seven-game losing streak.
Roger McDowell and Joe Boever finished with three-hit relief.
Harris gave up six runs and seven hits in five-plus innings, but just three runs were earned.

Chamberlain was the fourth Phillie to drive in six runs in the 21-year history of Veterans Stadium. Mike Schmidt, Von Hayes and Juan Samuel also accomplished the feat. The club record is eight RBIs by four players.
Braves 8, Pirates 6
ATLANTA — Deion Sanders, making his farewell baseball appearance of the season, hit a three-run homer in a six-run fifth inning Wednesday night as the Atlanta Braves beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-6 for a four-game sweep.
It was the fifth consecutive loss for the Pirates, who still have the best record in baseball at 60-39 despite losing nine of 12 games to the Braves.
Sanders, who also plays cornerback for the Atlanta Falcons, is scheduled to report to their training camp Thursday.

Atlanta trailed 6-2 in the third after Barry Bonds hit a three-run homer, his 16th, and Mike LaValiere followed with a solo shot off John Smoltz (6-12). Sanders started center field in place of Ron Gant, who sat out a one-game suspension. Sanders hit his fourth home run off Rick Reed following singles by Greg Olson and Otis Nixon.
Mike Stanton gained his second save of the season with 2 2-3 innings of scoreless relief.
Astros 9, Cardinals 5
HOUSTON — Ken Caminiti hit a two-run double in a four-run first inning and Jeff Bagwell homered for the second consecutive game as the Houston Astros beat the St. Louis Cardinals 9-5 Wednesday night.
Darryl Kile (4-6) gave up one run and five hits in six innings and struck out four as he ended his four-game losing streak. Dean Wilkins pitched 2 2-3 innings for his first save.

Bob Tewksbury (7-7) allowed five runs and four hits in four innings.
Houston, which won its fourth straight, took the lead in the first when Steve Finley tripled and scored on first baseman Gerald Perry's fielding error. Jeff Bagwell singled, Caminiti hit his double off the glove of right fielder Felix Jose and Andujar Cedeno singled in a run for a 4-0 lead.
Luis Gonzalez hit his 10th homer in the third, giving the Astros home runs in four consecutive games for the first time this season.
Tom Pagnozzi hit an RBI triple in the fourth and Bagwell hit his 10th home run in the fifth, putting Houston ahead 6-1.

MAJOR LEAGUES

The joke's on the NL as Nixon steals show

Tom Saladino
Associated Press

ATLANTA — All Otis Nixon ever wanted was a chance to play regularly in the major leagues. After eight years, it finally happened.

On April Fool's day, the Montreal Expos traded Nixon to the Atlanta Braves. He thought it was a joke, but the joke has been on the rest of the National League.

Nixon, a part-time player since 1983 after being the New York Yankees' No. 1 draft choice in the 1979 secondary phase, had a career-high 19-game hitting streak going into tonight's game against the Pittsburgh Pirates. A lifetime .228 hitter, he is second in the league in hitting at .335.

He also leads the league with 58 stolen bases, an Atlanta record. No. 58 came Tuesday night against the Pirates in a 10-3 victory and broke the franchise record set in 1913 by Ralph Myers.

Nixon was presented the base as a crowd of 27,099 stood and cheered. "It was a great feeling, the fans giving me a standing ovation," Nixon said.

Nixon has played with the Yankees, the Cleveland Indians and the Expos, but never had more than 271 at-bats in a season. This year, he already has 284.

"When we first got him, I didn't think he'd play every day," manager Bobby Cox said. "I figured he'd get 200-250 at-bats, be used as a defensive replacement and primarily as a pinch runner.

"We figured he'd be a big weapon on the bench. But we got more. He's a regular now and the guy that makes our offense go. He has just been super."

Nixon could always run. He stole 94 bases with Columbus of the International League in 1983.

But hitting was another story. Enter Hal McRae, the Kansas City Royals' manager, who was a hitting instructor with Montreal when Nixon was there.

"I always bring up the name of Hal McRae," Nixon said. "Harry Walker also worked with my hitting, but I love Hal's theory on hitting. I worked two years with him."

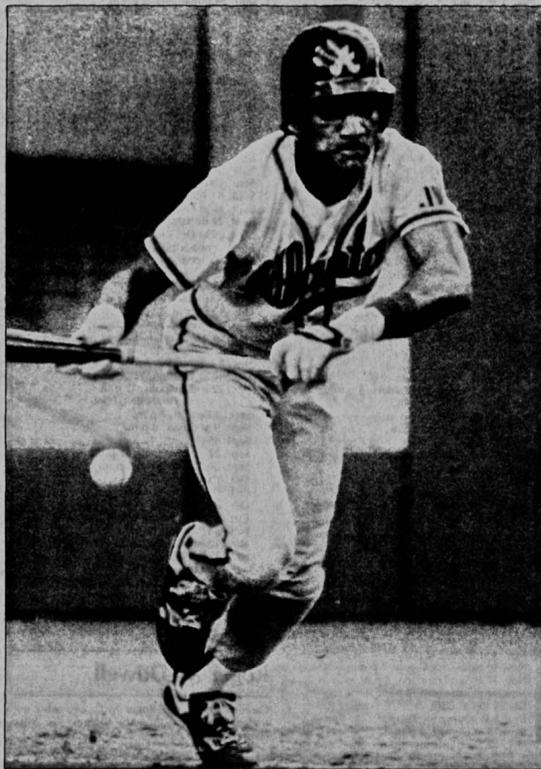

How come it didn't work until now?

"It couldn't happen until I got a shot at playing every day," Nixon said. "I knew I could hit if I got a chance, but the opportunity was not there until I came here."

The opportunity arose when left fielder Lonnie Smith opened the season on the disabled list and right fielder Dave Justice went on the disabled list in June.

"I got my break because of the injuries," Nixon said. "But I also did the job every time I went out there."

"I always wondered what I could do if I played every day. It's something I've thought about that Brave Otis Nixon hasn't been afraid to take on the starting outfield role in Atlanta. He has swiped 58 bases and hit .335 this season.

since 1984. Playing really does make a difference."

At 32, Nixon does not appear to be slowing down. His closest pursuer in the stolen base race is Montreal's Marquis Grissom with 47.

"Right now, I'm out there on a regular basis and having a lot of fun. We're all having fun."

McRae may have described him most aptly, Nixon said. "He called me a late bloomer."

Road back gets longer for Card reliever Worrell

R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Sooner or later, Todd Worrell will pitch again.

Right now, it looks like later.

Worrell hasn't pitched for the St. Louis Cardinals since Sept. 6, 1989, and it's likely he won't get the chance this season now that he's scheduled to undergo arthroscopic to relieve irritation in his right shoulder.

His shoulder trouble comes after a battle back from elbow surgery.

The longer it goes, the more difficult it is for Worrell, 31, to keep his frustrations bottled up.

"It's easy to fall into that trap and get depressed," Worrell said. "It doesn't do me any good, though."

"You can look back and wonder why and ask a million and one questions, but the facts are the shoulder's irritated and we need to move forward and do what's needed to get me back on the mound."

Worrell, who had elbow surgery in April 1990 to repair ligament damage, has seemingly been close to returning a couple of times.

In his first spring training appearance in March, he needed only five pitches to retire the side. At that time, the Cardinals were optimistic that they could have a bullpen stopper tandem of Lee Smith and Worrell by June.

Arguably, it would have been the finest duo in the major leagues. Smith leads the major leagues with 26 saves, and Worrell has saved 30 or more games in three of his four full seasons.

"June was a very conservative timetable," manager Joe Torre said.

Or so he thought.

As soon as the elbow had been rehabilitated, the shoulder problems began. A rehabilitation stint with Triple A Louisville in May had to be cut short because of tightness. The day last week he announced he wanted surgery was on the eve of a simulated game that could have been the final test.

Worrell wanted to be back out there, but he couldn't ignore the ever-present ache in his shoulder. He also knew he'd never be able to work on a daily basis, a must for a relief pitcher.

"It hurts just walking around, and that tends to work on you," Worrell said. "I need to know once and for all what the problem is."

Now, after the surgery it'll be back to rehab for Worrell, who has a 2.64 career ERA and 126 career saves — one shy of Bruce Sutter's team career mark.

"Hopefully it'll be nothing major and all I'll have to do is spend time to let it heal," Worrell said. "I know some of the minor procedures allow guys to get back pretty quickly, at least to start playing catch and throwing."

Worrell's fairly confident the procedure will go smoothly because he was able to throw 90 mph fastballs before it.

"There's no way you can throw the ball that hard and not have the shoulder feel like it's falling off if there's something seriously wrong," Worrell said.

Worrell will be a free agent after the season, and he's anxious to make his return. But Torre doesn't know if it would be a good idea to rush it after all this time, even if the Cardinals are still in the NL East race.

SportsBriefs

BASEBALL

Dibble suspension upheld by NL boss

NEW YORK — Rob Dibble's four-game suspension and $1,000 fine for hitting a fan with a ball was upheld yesterday by National League president Bill White.

The Cincinnati reliever, who has been involved in several controversial incidents this season, will begin serving the suspension immediately unless he appeals to commissioner Fay Vincent.

Ron Gant suspended

ATLANTA — Atlanta centerfielder Ron Gant withdrew his appeal of a one-day suspension for bumping umpire Gary Darling and will sit out Wednesday night's game against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Gant drew the suspension after he was ejected from a July 4 game against Cincinnati, arguing a third strike call and then bumping Darling.

Gant is hitting .258 with 20 homers and 59 RBI.

"I decided to withdraw the appeal this afternoon," Gant said. "The day off will give me a chance to rest my knee."

Griffey Sr. done for year

SEATTLE — The 19-year major league career of Ken Griffey Sr. is in jeopardy.

Griffey said he wants to continue playing with his All-Star center fielder son, Ken Jr., in Seattle, but he is battling a bulging disk in his neck that will require surgery as well as his age. He will be 42 next April.

"I'll be back," he said with a smile Tuesday night when he announced his impending surgery, "if only to see Junior play."

Griffey said he didn't want to announce his retirement. He said he wants to play with the Mariners next season if he's healthy.

He played in 30 games in his 19th big league season, hitting .282 with one homer and nine RBIs.

Another Griffey son, 20-year-old Craig, signed a minor league contract with the Mariners this year.

Garcia goes under knife

MIAMI — Former major league second baseman Damaso Garcia is expected to make a full recovery after undergoing surgery to remove a malignant brain tumor, his doctor said.

Garcia, 36, will begin speech therapy to correct a slur resulting from the tumor.

Garcia was a second baseman for the Toronto Blue Jays for most of the 1980s before closing his career with Atlanta and Montreal.

Dodgers trade for McDowell

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers, trying to bolster their bullpen for the postseason, traded for Philadelphia reliever Roger McDowell on Wednesday night.

The Dodgers sent pitcher Mike Hartley and minor league outfielder Braulio Castillo to the Phillies. The deal came shortly before the midnight trading deadline.

McDowell was 3-6 with three saves and a 3.10 ERA for the Phillies. The right-hander will join a bullpen in which ace Jay Howell recently came off the disabled list. The trade came with the Dodgers leading the National League West by four games over Atlanta.

Hartley is 2-0 with a 4.42 ERA in a team-leading 40 appearances this season. Castillo was with Double-A San Antonio.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich. — Michael Jordan is saying 'no' to the Olympics. But he said 'yes' to a stint as a guest host on Saturday Night Live, and maybe to his chances of surviving the cut in his first competitive golf tournament.

Playing on a different surface, wearing long pants instead of shorts, and hitting the ball rather than flying with it to the hole, pro basketball's most celebrated athlete shot a disappointing 85 Wednesday in the first round of the prestigious Western Amateur Championship.

Jordan was plagued by rattling nerves and a balky putter, managing just one birdie to offset a slew of bogeys.

"I've always been known as a really confident athlete... but the last time I was this nervous," he said, "had to be when I was starting college in 1982. I never really got over it."

"In pro basketball, if my jump shot isn't falling, I go to the layup. You can't do that in golf."

Michael Jordan

"This is all new to me," he added. "In pro basketball, if my jump shot isn't falling, I go to the layup. You can't do that in golf."

Jordan toured the 6,884-yard, par-71 Point O'Woods Golf and Country Club layout with reigning U.S. Amateur and two-time NCAA champion Phil Mickelson and Ohio State golfer Chris Smith. Mickelson shrugged off a double-bogey at No. 13 to finish with a 67 and grab the early lead in the two days of qualifying before 16 golfers start match play Saturday. Smith shot 74.

Mickelson, a 21-year-old left-hander and senior at Arizona State who won the regular PGA Tour earlier this year, said it was as thrilling to be paired with Jordan as it was to play alongside Jack Nicklaus, to whom he has often been compared.

"I call him charisma on legs," Mickelson joked, "but he was definitely a little nervous out there. It was kind of nice to know that he's human."

Jordan's threesome drew the largest gallery of the day and at one point, fans tried to charge up his game by telling him to pretend the ball was Dennis Rodman, the Detroit Piston forward who often plays Jordan's defensive shadow.

"That was encouraging," Jordan recalled, "but I can't hit a golf ball that far."

After playing a practice round with Mickelson a day earlier, Jordan ended speculation about whether he would seek a spot on the U.S. Olympic basketball team.

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Robin Ventura hit a grand slam with two outs in the ninth inning, his second home run of the game, and the Chicago White Sox rallied past the Texas Rangers 10-8 Wednesday night for the seventh straight victory.

Ventura got four hits, and his game-winner came against Rich Gossage (4-2). He hit his 16th home run of the season, including 12 in July.

Pinch hitter Craig Grebeck drew a leadoff walk from Kenny Rogers in the ninth and Ron Karkovice singled. After Joey Cora bunted into a forceout, Gossage relieved and retired Carlton Fisk on a popup. Tim Lincecum walked to load the bases and Ventura hit his second slam of the season into the right-field bleachers.

Ventura hit a solo home run in the third inning and Frank Thomas homered for the third straight game for Chicago. Donn Pall (4-1) was the winner.

Texas broke a 5-all tie in the eighth on a solo homer by Dean Palmer off Melido Perez and a two-run shot by Rafael Palmeiro. Thomas hit his 20th home run in the bottom of the eighth off Rogers.

Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the first on a bases-loaded wild pitch by Kevin Brown. Jeff Carter, making his debut for the White Sox, retired the first six batters before Texas tied it in the third on two singles and a double-play grounder.

Ventura homered to start the third and singles by Thomas, Dan Pasqua and Lance Johnson led to two more runs.

Carter walked Franco to start the fourth and Ruben Sierra met Perez with his 15th home run. Palmeiro singled, Kevin Reimer doubled and Steve Buechele singled home both runners for a 5-4 lead.

NEW YORK (AP) — Kent Hrbek hit a grand slam and Chili Davis and Shane Mack also homered during an eight-run second inning

Mack hit a two-run homer and Hrbek added an RBI single in the sixth for an 11-1 lead. Randy Bush singled home another run in the ninth.

Tigers 3, Angels 1
DETROIT — Cecil Fielder hit two more home runs and took over the major league lead with 29, leading the Detroit Tigers over the California Angels 3-1 Wednesday night.

Rob Deer homered for Detroit's other run as the Tigers prevented Mark Langston (14-5) from becoming the first 15-game winner in baseball. Ex-Tiger Lance Parrish homered for the only run off Walt Terrell (7-9).

Fielder led off the second inning with a drive into the left-field stands, and then connected again in the eighth, breaking a tie with Jose Canseco for most in the majors.

Terrell scattered seven hits, walked none and struck out five in his third complete game of the season. It was his first complete game victory since Sept. 27, 1988.

Counselors console survivors of bus accident

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — Grief counselors consoled survivors Thursday after a bus with a Girl Scout contingent careened off a mountain road and rolled down a rocky slope, killing seven and injuring dozens.

"They were doing pretty well, but they're just trying to cope," said the Rev. Malachy McGinn, who was with the girls at Desert Hospital.

The chartered yellow school bus apparently lost its brakes, causing Wednesday's crash.

Parkinson's disease linked to body defect

BAR HARBOR, Maine (AP) — Scientists may have tracked down the long-sought cause of Parkinson's disease with the discovery of a defect in the "energy factories" in muscles of people with the ailment, a researcher said Thursday.

Parkinson's disease, marked by shaking of the hands and a shuffling gait, afflicts some 500,000 older Americans.

The patients suffer from death of brain cells in the portion of brain that causes movement, but the reason for the brain cell loss has not been known.

If the researchers have indeed found the cause, the discovery could lead to simple methods of preventing the disease.

Gas tax increase for highways in jeopardy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 5-cent gasoline tax increase hit a potentially lethal snag Thursday when House Democratic leaders agreed to allow lawmakers to vote on whether they want pork-barrel highway projects enough to raise taxes.

House Speaker Thomas Foley, who favors the tax boost and the transportation spending it would finance, reluctantly bowed to Republicans' demands that they be allowed a shot at stripping away the tax.

"If you want to vote against the gas tax, the bill should be scaled down accordingly," Foley cautioned. That means that without the tax increase many of the more than 450 highway "demonstration projects" across the country would have to be eliminated from the $153.5 billion, five-year transportation bill.

House committee rejects abortion legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House committee narrowly rejected legislation Thursday that would have required many girls seeking abortions to notify a parent within two days of requesting the procedure.

The House Energy and Commerce Committee, which oversees the government's family planning program, rejected the proposal by a mostly party-line 23-20 vote. It was the first clear congressional defeat suffered by advocates of parental notification for abortions, said lobbyists and committee aides.

"The majority in this committee are in favor of abortion anyway, so it's not surprising," Rep. Thomas Bliley, R-Va., who sponsored the measure, said after the vote.
