Trial begins in Porter's sexual assault case

Iowa defensive back Marquis Porter appeared in court Monday as jury selection and opening statements were completed in his trial for third-degree sexual assault.

Janet Lyness, prosecuting assistant county attorney, will argue that the victim never consented to sexual involvement and was sexually assaulted by the defendant. Defense attorney will argue that after the defendant and the victim met casually through mutual friends, she consented to engage in sex.

The trial will reconvene today at 9 a.m.

Fire damages Iowa City Fire Department engine

An Iowa City fire engine caught fire Friday after returning from Cedar Rapids for repairs.

Fire fighters in the station at 301 Emerald St. observed smoke coming from the grill of the engine and extinguished the fire with a portable extinguisher, according to a fire marshal's report.

The fire was caused by wires in contact with the exhaust manifold in the engine and was contained to the wire loom of the engine. Damage was estimated at $200.

AIDS activist Belinda Mason dies at 33

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Belinda Mason, the only AIDS-infected member of the National Commission on AIDS and an outspoken critic of President Bush's AIDS research policy, died Monday of complications from the disease. She was 33.

Mason, who contracted the disease through a blood transfusion, died of AIDS-related pneumonia at Vanderbilt University Medical Center in Nashville, said hospital spokesman Doug Williams.

Mason had become a national symbol for AIDS sufferers, said Carisa Cunningham, a spokeswoman for the Washington-based AIDS Action Council.

U.N. reports Iraqi-Kurdish fighting

GENEVA (AP) — The United Nations said Monday it has received reports of "serious clashes" over the weekend in northern Iraq between government forces and Kurdish rebels.

A statement from the office of Sadruddin Aga Khan, the U.N. envoy in charge of humanitarian efforts in the Persian Gulf, said the situation "is apparently tense, and there is a possibility of further confrontation in the area."

An official in Sadruddin's Geneva office said he could not provide casualty figures.

The Ministry of Information in Baghdad has barred reporters from visiting northern Iraq for the time being, the statement said.

Security Council will admit Baltic republics

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Security Council will vote this week to admit the Baltic States to the United Nations, 51 years after they were extinguished as independent states and annexed by the Soviet Union, officials said Monday.

U.N. Spokesman Fredrick Edkhard said that the council would vote Wednesday or Thursday to admit Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, but formal membership awaits the vote of the General Assembly next week.

The council is expected to waive the standard waiting period and rush the application through so that the Baltics can be seated when the 46th General Assembly convenes Sept. 17.

Senate to question Thomas

James Rowley
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Clarence Thomas will speak for himself today after a summer of vigorous political campaigning by supporters and opponents of his nomination to the Supreme Court. "There's a fight on," President Bush declared on the eve of Thomas' confirmation hearing.

"I am confident we're going to win it," Bush said as Thomas and his questioners made final preparations for Senate Judiciary Committee consideration of the nomination.

After two months of avoiding public stands while others attacked and defended him,

Thomas will be asked to detail his views on contentious subjects as he makes his case for confirmation to take Thurgood Marshall's place on the high court.

Like Marshall, Thomas is black, but he has staked out conservative positions in sharp contrast to Marshall's staunch liberalism. So there will be tough questions from liberal Democrats concerned about how Thomas, 43, would vote on such issues as abortion, privacy and civil rights.

Yet, Bush suggested that Thomas should not be pinned down on how he might vote on specific issues.

Bush said that when he nominated Thomas "the administration applied no litmus test on specific issues that might come before the Supreme Court. We did not question Judge Thomas on possible decisions or cases that could come before the court."

"Similarly, I have confidence that the Judiciary Committee will want to preserve the independence of the court as it explores the record of Judge Thomas," the president said in a written statement.

Supporters of Thomas have highlighted his rise from a poor black family in segregated Georgia to important positions in Washington, where he chaired the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and became a federal appellate judge.

ABORTION

IC conflict continues with rally, picketing

Loren Keller
Daily Iowan

The local struggle over abortion continued Monday as abortion rights supporters gathered on the Pentacrest for a rally and several anti-abortion demonstrators picketed two women's clinics.

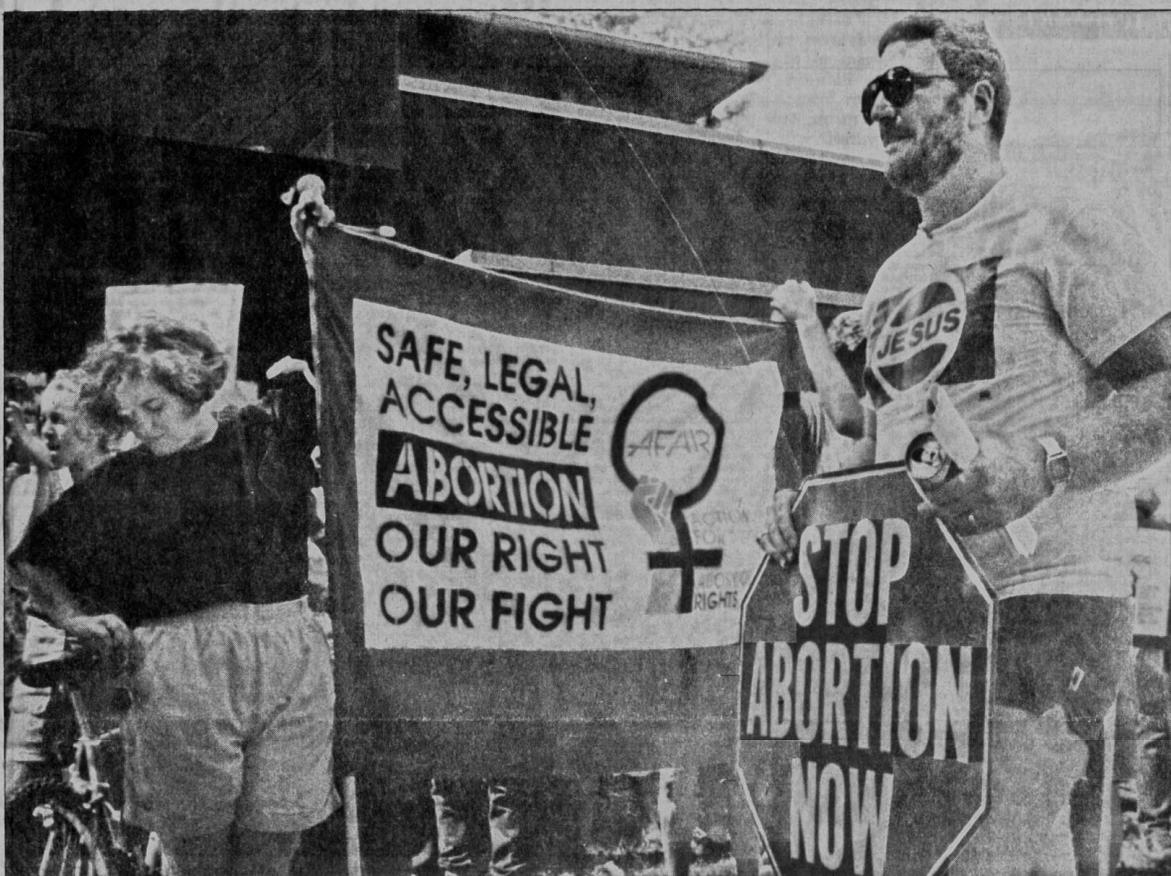

The Pentacrest rally, sponsored by Action for Abortion Rights, was attended by about 200 supporters and onlookers and featured four speakers.

One of the speakers was Mary Manix of Planned Parenthood in Iowa City. She spoke about the impact of the "gag rule," which makes it illegal for health professionals in federally funded family planning clinics to counsel abortion.

"Inside the clinics they are trying to limit what we say, but out here we can say whatever we want," she said.

Other speakers at the rally included Gayle Sand of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, Papusa Molina of the Women's Resource and Action Center, and Kristi Nelson, a UI professor of social work.

AFAR Chairwoman Dana Cloud declared the rally a success. She said support for the group has grown from 30 people to a phone list of about 250.

"We will be as pro-active as possible and not revolve around what a small bunch of religious zealots are doing," Cloud said.

Meanwhile, about 12 anti-abortion advocates demonstrated at the

Emma Goldman Clinic, 227 N. Dubuque St., and later at Planned Parenthood, 2 S. Linn St. The demonstration, which began about the same time as the AFAR rally, was quiet and involved no arrests.

SCOPE

Concerts unaffected by misuse of funds

Jessica Davidson
Daily Iowan

It's "business as usual" this semester for the UI's student-run entertainment organization, despite recent problems involving misappropriation of funds.

"We'll be continuing business as usual," said Chad Nicholls, director of the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment, which brings concerts to the UI. "The missing funds haven't affected how SCOPE operates in the least."

Although SCOPE hasn't yet set up a schedule for this semester, Nicholls said, "We're looking forward to a lot of good concerts this year."

Last week Kevin Taylor, former director of UI Campus Programs, pleaded guilty to first-degree theft and falsifying public documents. According to an auditor's report released earlier this year, over $58,000 was embezzled through Taylor's office.

The funds were misappropriated through cash advances issued to Taylor by the UI cashier's office — ostensibly for distribution to SCOPE.

Nicholls said many people who "don't read beyond the headlines" are not aware that SCOPE as an organization was not involved in the embezzlement and has not been charged with any wrongdoing. He worries that the mere mention of SCOPE in association with the crime could be misconstrued.

"We had nothing to do with what Kevin Taylor did," Nicholls said. "A lot of times that's not made clear, but it's nothing that the students have done. We were as surprised as anyone else."

Nicholls said the UI administration has been concerned with SCOPE's future.

"They've really helped us," Nicholls said. "We've worked all summer with the dean of students and the rest of the administration to get things going again."

Nicholls said SCOPE's reputation has not been sullied among other concert promoters and music agencies.

"We maintain a good relationship with them," he said. "They understand and are going to keep doing business with the University of Iowa."

Nicholls said SCOPE has not been affected by the loss of the funds since the money was not taken

SOVIET UNION

Tadzhikistan follows other independents

Deborah Seward
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Tadzhikistan declared its independence on Monday, becoming the eighth Soviet republic to do so since last month's brief coup against Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

"We can't lag behind other republics. Everybody is declaring independence so we are as well," said Aleyev Abdodezhad, parliamentary spokesman in the Soviet Central Asian republic of 5.1 million people.

Eleven republics have opted for independence — eight since the coup, including Azerbaijan, where incumbent President Ayaz Mutalibov won 90 percent of the vote Sunday as the sole candidate in an election of the old Soviet school.

The majority of the Soviet republics have seized the chance to retrieve the independence they lost with the expansion of Communist power since the Aug. 19-21 coup collapsed and with their fears of military intervention vanished.

The Kremlin has already granted the Baltic republics of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania their independence.

But Monday's declaration by a special session of Tadzhikistan's Parliament was largely symbolic since most of the republics, including the Tadzhiks, have agreed to transform the Soviet Union into a loose confederation of sovereign states.

ANC, Inkatha to sign accord

Greg Myre
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Frenzied factional fighting raged in black townships for a second day Monday, and the death toll in the year's worst outbreak of political violence rose to 65.

Nelson Mandela, president of the African National Congress, said that despite the fighting his organization would sign a peace accord Saturday with its rival, the Inkatha Freedom Party, and the white-led government.

Inkatha also said it would sign the agreement, which is aimed at stopping factional fighting that has killed about 6,000 blacks since 1986.

Previous agreements have not slowed the fighting.

Both Inkatha and the ANC have opposed the racist apartheid system but differ over tactics and plans for a future South Africa. The left-leaning ANC favors government control of the economy, while Inkatha champions a free market.

In one incident Monday, gunmen shot up a black commuter train outside Johannesburg, killing four people and wounding three. The dead and wounded were thrown from the moving train, police said.

Police declared four Johannesburg townships "unrest areas," which gives authorities expanded powers to halt violence.

Fighting also was reported in Natal province in eastern South Africa.

The outbreak of violence began Sunday when gunmen ambushed a political procession of Inkatha members in Tokoza township, killing 23 people. As word of the attack spread, blacks took to the streets to battle political foes with guns, grenades, knives and spears. At least 57 people were killed around Johannesburg in the two days of fighting, police said.

INTERPRETERS

UI short on hearing impaired services

Christine Spiegel
Special to The Daily Iowan

Interpreters and other services for the deaf are in short supply in the Iowa City area, according to one interpreter at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Ozzie Diaz-Duque, a part-time faculty interpreter for the hearing impaired at the UIHC, said the UI does not encourage or attract students with hearing impairments.

"(The) university is required by law to provide interpreters for a student in the classroom when needed," Diaz-Duque said. "The UI has not shown any commitment to recruit deaf students ... and because there are few hearing impaired students, there is not a need for interpreters."

The hospitals have a "language bank" that they turn to when they need interpreters. It consists of 100 free-lance interpreters of all languages, 17 of which are certified in sign language. Diaz-Duque is the only staff member who knows sign language.

Charlie Anderson, director of the Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Clinic and a UI professor of audiology and speech language pathology, said although there are no "audiologically deaf" students attending the UI, there are students with hearing impairments who do not require in-class assistance so no interpreters are provided at this time.

Programs have been arranged for deaf students in the past through the Speech and Hearing Clinic, Anderson said. The clinic is not connected with the hospitals, but they do have a training clinic for interpreters.

The reason there are few hearing impaired students attending the UI, according to Anderson, is that there are other universities in the area that attract deaf students.

The University of Minnesota, for example, has a faculty with one professor and several other staff employees who are certified interpreters for the deaf.

Diaz-Duque said the lack of provided services for the hearing impaired has kept those students away from the UI.

"Obviously, when services are not provided for a person, no matter what the disability, he or she is not going to feel that organization is doing all it can. Considering the importance of the hospitals, it is a must to have interpreters on hand, even if we do go outside to get them most of the time. Maybe that's the one thing the university should reconsider."

Hospital figures from July 1, 1989, to June 30, 1990, show the UIHC provided interpreters for 181 deaf or hearing impaired persons in that year.

The UIHC offers telephones for the deaf, or TDDs, closed-captioning units, light alarms, door lights and baby alarms for deaf and hearing impaired patients.

Diaz-Duque said the hospitals also turn to Deaf Services of Iowa when they are in need of interpreters. Offices in Cedar Rapids and Des Moines will send interpreters when requested.

Many people apply for the job of an interpreter because they find it glamorous or exciting, Diaz-Duque said, but they don't really know what interpreting is about.

"They think it's just something pretty they see people doing on television to a song or something that looks fun," Diaz-Duque said.

He said people don't realize sign language is a language like Spanish or any other foreign language, and it takes as much practice and skill to use and know it properly.

State law requires that a person have a certification in sign language or the equivalent in experience or education to become an interpreter for the hearing impaired, Diaz-Duque said.

Greg Jensen, associate director of UIHC Social Services, said to work as an interpreter in the hospitals a person must know interpreting techniques, be familiar with medical knowledge, go through an evaluation and attend workshops as part of the program.

Diaz-Duque noted that law requires competent people and stressed the importance of hospital interpreters needing to know medical terminology.

"You can kill someone by interpreting the wrong thing," he said.

SEXUAL ASSAULT AWARENESS WEEK

1-4 Women will be a victim of sexual assault while in college. When thinking about personal safety, consider the following:

Examine your feelings and needs regarding sex. It's okay to have sex. It's okay not to have sex. You decide.

Know your sexual limits and communicate them clearly. Say "Yes" when you mean "Yes" and "No" when you mean "No." It is your body. Be clear and firm with your partner about what you want and don't want.

Be assertive. Men often interpret passive behavior as acceptance or approval. Don't worry about hurting his feelings if he is ignoring yours. Being assertive in a positive way is difficult for many women and can be developed through training and practice.

Be alert and in charge. Know that drugs and alcohol can affect you and your partner's ability to make responsible decisions. Alcohol is involved in up to 75% of acquaintance rapes. While it is not your fault if assaulted while drinking, it certainly puts you at higher risk. Plan ahead to be able to get yourself home safely. Don't rely on men to take care of you.

Trust your feelings. If a situation feels bad or if you begin to feel nervous about the way your date is behaving, trust your feelings and attempt to get away. Don't worry about creating a scene.

Flynn proposes candidate-mayor forum

The Boston mayor wants Democratic candidates to take a closer look at home to better understand domestic issues.

Ceci Connolly
Associated Press

BOSTON — Mayor Raymond Flynn thinks the 1992 Democratic presidential candidates would do well to adopt his style of man-on-the-street politics.

In a letter sent to eight Democrats Sunday, Flynn invited the likely contenders to address a conference of the nation's mayors. But before they speak, he wants each to visit a homeless shelter, soup kitchen, job-training site or drug rehabilitation center.

"I want them to look right into the face of poverty and need in America," Flynn said in an interview Sunday. "I think people will respond to the problems of the country if they actually see them."

Flynn, the head of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, has written to his fellow city chiefs saying he also would invite President Bush to speak at the January conference.

"This invitation is contingent upon his acceptance of my previous request for a meeting of our leadership with the president," Flynn wrote.

Bush has not responded to Flynn's offer for a domestic summit with a group of mayors.

"At some point in time, the president will have to respond to the concerns of the people of America in moving forward with a domestic agenda," the Boston mayor said.

Lorraine Voles, press secretary to Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin, said he has toured drug treatment facilities and job-training programs before. If he formally joins the race, "he would visit more sites," said Voles.

She said she did not know yet if Harkin would attend the conference. Harkin disclosed this weekend that he has told his staff he will run for the nomination and has a public announcement set for next weekend.

"I can appreciate what the mayor is trying to do," Voles said.

"I guess they're just trying to make candidates more aware of urban problems. I think they'll find that most statewide officeholders have already made visits like that and are very aware of those problems and deal with those situations every day," she said.

Flynn, who won the national post in June, is juggling those duties with a run for a third term in Boston. He received a boost this weekend when 100 minority leaders endorsed his candidacy. A recent poll shows Flynn with a 71 percent favorability rating, making him perhaps the most popular politician in the state. He has two opponents in the Sept. 24 primary.

In the weekend letters, Flynn also asked the mayors to host town meetings with the candidates and "consider the option of running as regional, state or local 'favorite son' or 'favorite daughter' candidates."

Because only two Democrats have entered the race, Flynn said mayors might be better off "accumulating a number of uncommitted 'jobs and justice' delegates."

Former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas said he plans to participate in the January mayors' meeting in Washington.

"As someone who has lived in a city during economic decline, I understand the problems facing mayors across the country," said Tsongas, who grew up in Lowell.

Tsongas praised Flynn and attacked Bush in a statement released Sunday.

"Until George Bush recognizes the problem, the fiscal emergencies facing our cities won't be solved," he said.

Voles said Harkin is well aware of urban problems and projects because he serves on a subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee that provides money for such efforts. And being from Iowa does not mean he is sheltered from troubles that plague cities.

"That is not a problem that just affects urban areas," said Voles.

A spokesman for New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said he would consider the invitation.

Iowa farmer chose hogs over baseball

Roger Munns
Associated Press

DES MOINES — John Hill has no doubt he made the right decision four decades ago becoming a hog farmer and giving up a shot at the big leagues.

Still, he can't help but wonder what might have been.

"It's one of those questions I'll ask the good Lord when I get there," he laughed. "It interests me in a way, but I've had a good life here."

He has raised several thousand hogs, sheep and cattle over the years. He milked cows, baled hay, sheered sheep, hired out as a carpenter, bought his aunt's farm near Kanawha, Iowa, and expanded it, and married, and raised four children.

"The Lord has blessed us where we are," he said. "I'm satisfied with the way my life turned out."

It might have been different if Hall of Famer Roy Campanella hadn't smashed one of Hill's pitches for a sharp single to center many years ago. Hill was among 12 rookies invited to the Brooklyn Dodgers' spring camp in Florida in 1949, and it was his job to pitch against the big leaguers in intra-squad games.

"I can remember Campanella hitting a line drive about a foot from my right ear. He hit it so cotton picking hard I didn't even have time to get my glove up," said Hill, now 63.

"I also remember picking him off first base. They were saying, 'Better watch that guy; he's got a pretty good move to first.'"

But Campanella wasn't the only one to send Hill's offerings rocketing in various directions, and the Iowa farm boy was disappointed with his showing.

"I know I didn't show up too well down there. I knew I was a better pitcher than I came off. When you're young like that, you over-throw and your curve doesn't come off too good."

Hill wasn't accustomed to failure on the mound.

In high school, he and brother Harold led Corwith to a state championship in 1943 and in 1947 at age 19, he started pitching for the Dodgers' lowest minor league team in Virginia. He went 12-6 the first year and had an 18-3 record before losing the final two games the next year.

The invitation to show his stuff to the big league club the next spring gave Hill a chance to rub shoulders with some of the biggest names in the game: Pee Wee Reese, Gil Hodges, Duke Snyder and Jackie Robinson, the man who broke the major league color barrier in 1947.

"When I see these athletes on TV, I look back and say I knew the guy who opened the door. I couldn't help but admire him for what (abuse) he took. He's probably my most admired man today," Hill said.

Impatient to advance, Hill wanted to go to the Dodger's top farm team but was offered a contract to play one level below that, in Miami Beach.

Waiting for him back home was a young lady he had met at age 18 and courted by mail, an 80-acre farm he could rent, a construction job and a chance to pitch for Bancroft in the old Iowa State League for $500 a month.

"It was kind of a tough decision," he admits. "I suppose money was part of it. The $500 was 2½ times what I could make in the minors. And baseball isn't too good if you're married in the minors. The minor leagues are for single guys." And at Bancroft, "I only had to pitch every four games, and I only had to go to games I pitched."

So he bade the Dodgers farewell and came home to farm and pitch.

"We had a pretty humble beginning" on that 80 acres. "Even back then, they said you couldn't make a living on 80 acres." The farm was eventually enlarged to its current 220 acres, much of it still devoted to raising hogs.

He continued to pitch for six years until there wasn't anyone to pitch for.

"The league sort of disintegrated. When everybody quit paying, I quit playing. I suppose I was about 27 when I ran out of places that were paying," he said.

It's hard to tell what might have happened if he had stayed single and stayed with the Dodgers.

"I would have gotten drafted and sent to Korea most likely," he said. Married men weren't drafted at first, and by the time they were, Hill and Evelyn had their first child, again making him ineligible for involuntary induction.

SCHOOL BOARD

Proposal for new school to be discussed

William Pepper
Daily Iowan

Tonight's Iowa City School Board meeting promises to finally lay to rest speculation about the district's proposed new construction project.

Superintendent Barb Grohe will recommend a site on which the district could build a $3.4 million, 20-classroom elementary school.

Grohe has declined to detail the project further except to say that the district has been negotiating with an undisclosed party for a piece of land on the west side of town.

At a community forum Sunday, Grohe added that district boundaries will be adjusted to shift a number of students into the new school. She said this would minimize the change that would be made, but maximize the efficiency of that change.

Enrollment studies made by the district in conjunction with the UI Department of Geography show that the rapid growth of the city is causing schools to become too crowded. The district currently has about 9,200 students. That figure is expected to rise to about 10,000 by the end of the decade.

The district plans to fund the new school through the proposed $11.1 million bond referendum, which Iowa City voters will decide on Oct. 15.

The district has made do in the past with temporary classrooms constructed on individual school grounds. Twenty-seven of these structures are currently in use, six or seven of which are moved to different locations each summer at a cost of $5,000 per move.

In other business, polls are open today for voters to fill the two school board seats open for election. Current board member Alan Leff and newcomer George Matheson are the candidates seeking to fill the seats. Board member Fran Malloy is not seeking re-election.

School board Treasurer Jerry Palmer said the results of the election would not be addressed by the board at the meeting.

Results will not be available until the polls close today and the results are confirmed by the Johnson County Commissioner's office.

CITY COUNCIL

Curbside recycling supported

Lesley Kennedy
Daily Iowan

Iowa City has gone as far as it can go in terms of garbage accumulation, according to Chris Weir of Environmental Advocates.

"A curbside recycling program is what this city is ready for," she said.

Weir spoke at the Iowa City City Council work session Monday night on creating a curbside recycling program for the city. The City council decided to support the program and will vote on a specific plan in the near future.

Solid Waste Management Planner Brad Neumann said in his review of current material collection and landfill reduction that curbside collection is recommended as Iowa City's residential collection method of recycling.

"With curbside collection included in the city's overall recycling program, the city's contribution to landfill reduction is projected to increase by 40 percent," Neumann said.

Councilor Randy Larson said that putting recyclable products in with regular garbage should be against the law.

"I want everyone to have to do it. I want people drug into the '90s, like it or not. We have to make it mandatory," he said.

To begin curbside recycling, a base fee would have to be implemented for the extra pick-up. While the council was in agreement that such a program and a fee is needed, there was disagreement on how it should be done.

Councilor Susan Horowitz said that people are happy with the current drop off method where people take their own recyclables to the proper places. Larson said that it should be up to the individual to decide how they want to recycle.

There was some question on how the Sanitation Department could tell if there were recyclable products in garbage bags.

"How can you enforce it?" Councilor Naomi Novick said. "If I'm putting my garbage out in a black bag, how are you going to know that I don't have newsprint or other recyclables mixed in with the waste? Are you going to inspect every bag?"

Councilor Karen Kubby favored spot checking to ensure residents weren't intermingling recyclables with waste and favored issuing tickets to residents who did so.

abortion rights supporters marched to the clinic immediately after the rally and stood in front. The anti-abortion demonstrators paced the sidewalk for another 10 minutes before leaving for Planned Parenthood and were followed by about 25 abortion rights advocates.

Though no arrests were made and no physical confrontations occurred, several individual arguments broke out among the two sides.

Larry Johnson, director of the Cedar Rapids-based Iowa Coalition for Traditional Values, an anti-abortion group, said the organization's members were not intent on arrest or confrontation.

Johnson questioned the intent of the injunction against the protesters obtained last week by the Emma Goldman Clinic.

"They're trying to intimidate us with the injunction," he said. "It's an attempt to chill our constitutional rights."

Johnson said Planned Parenthood didn't want the abortion rights activists in front of the clinic because of their "outlandish appearance, foul language and the way they act" and said that the clinic had "shut down" for the day.

Planned Parenthood Center Supervisor Mary Manix dismissed the comment and said the clinic carried on business as usual Monday.

Manix said the clinic hasn't decided yet whether it will also seek an injunction against the anti-abortion advocates.

"As long as they are reasonable and try not to block the clinic, they have that right (to protest), and we support that right," Manix said.

Though no members of Operation

Rescue were involved in the protests, a handful of Operation Life-Iowa members were here, according to member Jay Huddle. The Iowa City chapter of the anti-abortion group has just started and is not affiliated with Operation Rescue.

"Operation Life-Iowa is here to stay, and we're not going to stop until every one of (the clinics) is shut down," Huddle said. He would not specify how many members the group has.

Huddle declared victory for the group, saying the Emma Goldman Clinic had canceled Monday's abortion appointments as a result of the anti-abortion demonstrators' presence.

Sand, however, said no appointments were canceled, and business was carried on as usual.

directly from the organization's operating budget — the majority of which comes from mandatory student fees, which he said has not changed this year.

Nicholls said SCOPE and the UI administration have developed some new rules this year to keep a closer eye on the system.

Dean of Students Phillip Jones said a basic policy of no cash advances for concert expenses was put into effect after the audit last spring and "worked fine" for the Whitney Houston show in April.

Nicholls said the prohibition of cash advances will not hinder

SCOPE's operation because Taylor was the only one to use that option.

A second new rule involves a 60-point checklist that must be filled out and approved by Jones' office before each concert. Jones said this "systematic planning mechanism" includes a budget proposal.

"It gets the business aspects in line," Jones said.

A similar checklist is completed at the end of every show.

"It makes sure everyone who should get paid, does," Jones said.

Another new practice, Jones said, requires Student Services to OK every group that SCOPE schedules and allows only those concerts with a "minimal risk of financial loss."

He added that there are no specific guidelines for determining a performer's "risk of financial loss" and that this will be decided on a case-by-case basis. Concerts that do not rely on SCOPE for advertising — such as last February's Paul Simon show — would not fall under this restriction.

"We must repair the system," Jones said. "While this was a negative experience for all involved, we should use it as a means of learning for the students, learning proper business skills and accountability."

Genscher of Germany said in Moscow on Monday that his country was prepared to establish relations with all sovereign republics in the current Soviet Union.

Tadzhikistan's sluggish response to change after the coup, and opposition charges of intimidation in the weekend election in Azerbaijan show how some of the predominantly Muslim republics have trailed other republics in achieving political reform.

Tadzhikistan is to hold a presidential election on Oct. 27. Former President Kakhar Makhkamov resigned Aug. 31 after the republic's legislature passed a vote of no-confidence in him for not vigorously opposing last month's coup attempt against Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

A mountainous republic bordering China and Afghanistan, Tadzhikistan has the highest birth rate in the Soviet Union.

U.S.-PHILIPPINES

Last vote stalls in hope of better offer

Philippine senators are saying the bases agreement as is has no hope of being ratified.

Eileen Guerrero
Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — A majority of Philippine senators voted Monday to reject a new lease for a U.S. naval base, but the legislators said they may defer a final decision in hopes Washington will reopen negotiations.

In Washington, President Bush said "we've made our best offer" and "there'll be no change on the part of the United States." Defense Secretary Richard Cheney said if the agreement fails to win ratification, "We're gone."

Under the agreement, the U.S. would give up Clark Air Force base next year but keep the Subic Bay naval base for 10 more years in return for $203 million in annual aid. Some senators have said the compensation is inadequate.

On Monday, police broke up a rally of about 50 who oppose U.S. bases and who tried to burn an American flag outside the U.S. Embassy. There were no reports of arrests or serious injuries.

President Corazon Aquino plans to lead a march today to support the bases agreement her administration made with American negotiators.

Two-thirds of the 23-member Senate must ratify the agreement before the current lease on the two installations expires Sept. 16.

During a closed-door session Monday, senators voted 12-11 to oppose the agreement but delayed the final vote.

"There's no chance the treaty will be ratified anymore," said Sen. Alberto Romulo, a supporter of the bases agreement.

Senate sources said a final vote may not be taken until after the lease expires. The sources said many senators hope the United States will ask for at least a year to vacate the bases. During that time, negotiations could resume, possibly under the new Philippine administration to be elected in May.

"Speaking only for myself, the Americans can take their time," said Sen. Rene Saguisag, a bases opponent. "One year, two years, three years. . . Anything can be undone by the next administration."

Most Filipinos are believed to support the U.S. military presence, although no reliable polls have been taken since details of the new bases agreement were made public. Most businesses in Olongapo, a city of more than 300,000 people, rely heavily on the nearby Subic Bay naval base.

A strong minority in the media, academia and the government oppose the U.S. presence as an infringement on national sovereignty.

Leftists plan a rally against the bases today. Communist guerrillas have offered the government a cease-fire in their 22-year insurgency if the bases agreement is rejected.

The United States agreed to abandon Clark because of damage suffered during the eruptions of Mount Pinatubo.

YUGOSLAVIA

Macedonia votes independence; fighting continues with 5 deaths

Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — The Yugoslav federation suffered another blow Monday when early returns in a Macedonian plebiscite said the republic's voters overwhelmingly supported declaring independence.

Even before the first returns were released from Sunday's referendum, tens of thousands of Macedonians partied in the streets to celebrate leaving the union.

But Macedonian leaders stressed they would try to work out new ties with Yugoslavia as part of a loose confederation of sovereign states, rather than the complete independence sought by Croatia and Slovenia.

Intense fighting continued in Croatia between Croat militiamen and Serb rebels. In a potentially dangerous escalation of tension, Yugoslav troops clashed with soldiers from neighboring Albania along their mountainous international border, and five people were reported killed.

In Belgrade, federal Premier Ante Markovic announced a Cabinet reshuffle. But with the six feuding Yugoslav republics paying little heed to the federal government, the move was not likely to affect the crisis.

Preliminary returns from Sunday's referendum in Macedonia showed 74 percent of the votes counted backed secession, the Tanjug news agency reported from Skopje, the republic's capital.

Macedonia, the southernmost region of Yugoslavia and the poorest, is expected to follow Croatia and Slovenia in abandoning the federation. But its leaders hope to avoid completely severing ties because they fear neighboring Greece and Bulgaria, which have sizable Macedonian minorities, might raise claims to Macedonian territory.

The firefight on the Albanian border killed four Albanian soldiers and one civilian, Belgrade Radio said. No Yugoslav casualties were reported.

The report said the fighting began when a group of Albanians tried to cross into Yugoslavia near Dragas, a village 180 miles south of Belgrade. Hundreds of Albanians have crossed the border to escape economic hardship in Albania.

The incident was likely to worsen tensions between Albania and Serbia, the biggest Yugoslav republic and leader of the fight to prevent Croatia's secession. Albania contends the Serbs are mistreating the nearly 2 million ethnic Albanians in the Serbian-ruled province of Kosovo.

Most of Kostajnica, the last major Croat stronghold in the republic's central Banija region, was controlled by Serb guerrillas and the estimated 1,000 Croat defenders appeared to be surrounded, Tanjug reported.

Kiro Gligorov, president of the Yugoslav republic of Macedonia, casts his ballot during a referendum for independence as well wishers look on in the republic's capital Skopje Sunday.

WHEATFIELD MYSTERY

Two Englishmen 'fess up to elaborate practical joke

At long last the enigma of the geometric patterns in the wheatfields comes to light.

Associated Press

LONDON — A newspaper said today the mysterious wheatfield circles in southern England that have baffled scientists for years were a hoax created by two men who have come forward to claim responsibility.

The tabloid Today said Douglas Bower and David Chorley of Southampton contacted the newspaper and gave detailed information about how they planned and executed each design since the late 1970s. The newspaper said it paid no money in connection with the story.

Some people were convinced the circles were created by extraterrestrials. Patrick Delgado, author of two books on that theme, said it looked as if he and many others had been duped.

Bower said he had lived in Australia during a period when similar circles were put in crops in Queensland "as a joke," Today said.

The two men hit on the idea of doing it in England while sitting in a pub "wondering what we could do for a bit of a laugh," Bower was quoted as saying.

Today said it had checked the men's circle-making skills in a field and then invited Delgado to see the result. His response, the story said, "No human could have done this."

The men used four-foot planks with rope reins to flatten the wheat and produce circles, the story said. Straight lines were made using a simple wire "gunsight" on a baseball cap that allowed the men to walk while aiming at a distant object, it said.

The wheat was bent down rather than broken so farmers could still harvest the crop, Today said.

The vast circles and geometric patterns were "a great con and a great dirty trick," Delgado told Press Association, the British domestic news agency. "I was taken for a ride like many other people. But if it wasn't me who was duped, it would have been someone else later on. This was obviously a great joke lasting years, but somewhere or another it would have been exposed," Delgado was quoted as saying.

Today said the two men, both in their 60s, were tired of people making money from the circles — an apparent reference to books that have been sold on the subject.

3. You don't have to be a computer science major to set one up.

Just plug everything together, flip the "on" switch, and you're ready to roll.

4. It's a breeze to copy information and paste it into another document.

To copy this chart, simply use the mouse to choose the Copy command.

To place the chart in another document, just choose the Paste command.

5. All Macintosh programs work in the same way.

Learn to use one Macintosh program, and you've learned the basics of using them all. For example, the commands you use, such as Open, Close, Copy, Paste, Save, Cut, Print, and Undo, are found in the same place—every time.

6. It can grow with you.

This week you're majoring in philosophy, next week it's nuclear physics. After all, no one knows exactly what the future will bring. That's why millions of students have found that investing in a Macintosh is a smart move. Because Macintosh can immediately help you do whatever you do—better. And if, come tomorrow, you find that you want to do something different, no problem. It's easy to upgrade your Macintosh to help you rise to the challenge.

7. It's great for college and beyond.

Doing your work faster, better, and more creatively is also a plus in the working world—and that's precisely why Macintosh computers are used in 74 percent of Fortune 1000 companies.*

MIDEAST PEACE

Loan guarantees threaten the fabric of proposed talks

It appears that President George Bush and congressional leaders have finally found an issue that they can agree upon, much to the dismay of Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

The issue is whether or not the United States should grant Israel $10 billion worth of loan guarantees to provide housing and jobs for up to 1 million Soviet immigrants expected to enter Israel over the next five years.

Neither President Bush nor congressional leaders dispute the importance of helping the Israeli government make the necessary arrangements to provide new Soviet immigrants a Jewish homecoming. But to their credit, Bush and Congress understand the damaging ramifications of granting Israel these loan guarantees because of the upcoming peace talks.

Shamir's literal demand that the United States sign a $10 billion loan guarantee enabling Israel to quickly settle new Jewish immigrants on disputed territory is counterproductive to the always tenuous prospects for "peace" in the Middle East.

The confrontational approach used by Shamir on the loan issue is disheartening when considering that there is no stauncher Israeli ally in the world than the United States. Since Israel became a sovereign state in 1948, the United States has provided Israel with billions of dollars in economic aid and the world's most sophisticated military hardware to provide for its defense. It is presumptuous of Shamir to assume the United States will continue to write Israel blank checks when the United States' foreign aid program is already overextended and facing serious new demands as a result of the recent events in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Given the fact that Arab/Israeli history is characterized by confrontation and written in blood, Shamir may believe settlement of the occupied territories is in the best interest of his people. But the unique diplomatic role of the United States as a participant in a Middle Eastern peace process requires the Bush administration take a position that promotes peace. If Prime Minister Shamir does not realize that granting this loan guarantee will jeopardize the prospects for peace, it is reassuring to know that President Bush and congressional leaders do, even if it means confronting a long-time ally.

United States could learn from its own rhetoric

To the Editor:

I wonder why Jim Rogers' fiery, fist-shaking victory parade ["America's demise: just a liberal dream," Sept. 5] never discussed exactly what the United States won. The last paragraph implied that the U.S. had won the right to become "the model for her former communist enemy," but he didn't appear to be too anxious to examine the model.

When Lech Walesa commented that Poland had the "chance to be the America of the East," he sure as hell wasn't looking at any education, urban renewal, health care, environment, criminal justice or crime prevention model we had to offer. He was making a bid for bucks. Foreign leaders are not unaware that our cherished capitalist economic system has become a tad tarnished of late, too.

U.S. auto manufacturers got soaked for $3 billion this year alone, and 30 percent of all passenger cars sold in this country were Japanese made. The unregulated savings and loan industry heard the Reagan / Bush message and is now stiffing the taxpayer to the tune of $500 billion, not to mention the latest multibillion dollar investment firm scandal. But the real capper is our "truly spectacular victory" involving a multitrillion dollar defense complex holding entire civilian populations hostage to nuclear weapons, still. This is our model?

If there is a "self-willed myopia" among U.S. citizenry, it comes from people like you, Jim Rogers. Patriotism isn't Operation Desert T-shirts and "whoever has the most guns wins" mind-sets. It demands critical thinking and the willingness to help right the inevitable wrongs of society as a community. Eliminating the rhetoric that says we forced the demise of communism and living in a way consistent with what we say our values are just might be the first step in selling democracy to other countries.

GUEST OPINION: MARGARET GOURLAY

Cheerfully looking forward to old age

This essay is about what your life will be like eight years from now.

The essay was written by a veterinarian who works in a small town near Iowa City. Eight years ago she was where you are now — recently transferred from Iowa State University, majoring in microbiology, minoring in English, trying to make sense of the world and figure out what to do with the rest of her life. In the time since then, she has seen her life change, and her friends' lives change. She is thinking about the eight years you are about to live and wants to tell you some of the lessons you might learn in that time:

■ You will figure out that exciting things happen rarely or never. The author is past waiting for the day when Mel Gibson will walk into the clinic, asking for a distemper vaccination for his dog. She doesn't know whether Mel Gibson even owns a dog. The point is that in the next eight years, you will brush your teeth, fill your car's fuel tank, buy losing Lotto tickets enough times to teach you that day-to-day life is quite predictable.

■ You will procrastinate less. Sometime after age 25, it occurs to you that you won't want to take out garbage tomorrow any more than you want to take it out today. Sometime after age 27, you start taking out the garbage today. Your actions will be based less on feelings and more on logic. Except after a bad day at work when you're deciding whether to eat a chef's salad or a slice of chocolate suicide cake, or both for supper.

■ You will forgive your parents for past wrongs. If you've really begun to grow up, you will realize most of the things you've blamed them for were not their fault. You will begin to understand the great sacrifices they made for you.

■ You will, hopefully, love your family more. They have known you longer than anyone else in the world, and you will either love them more or be a fool to let old grudges get in the way of your love for them now.

■ You will begin to approach people with the assumption that they, like you, are doing their damndest to get by in life.

■ You will realize how unimportant you are. Some person or event will give you this perspective. For the author, it happened after a preceptorship in a clinic in England the summer after her sophomore year in veterinary school.

Your idea of success will be your ability to pay your monthly rent, student loan payment and car loan payment and still have something leftover to send to Mastercard.

On the plane home to the States, she felt the impact of leaving a nation full of lives that would continue on very well without her.

■ You will realize how important you are. You will most likely learn this in your first job after graduation. Forget the days when you could skip a lecture on campus and not be noticed. You will be expected to be at the office every day, and if you aren't, you will get into trouble.

■ You will get tired more easily and more often.

■ You will get lonely more easily and more often.

■ You will no longer hope to be famous someday. Your idea of success will be your ability to pay your monthly rent, student loan payment and car loan payment and still have something leftover to send to Mastercard. The other type of success you will strive for is in your relationships with others. You will understand what commitment means, in a marriage or a partnership, and though it frightens you, you will find this a stability in life that you need. Someday you will let someone you love down, and it will be a bigger, deeper failure than your worst exam grade in college.

■ You will wonder about God more often. If you attend church, you may begin to really listen to the sermons for the first time or become more involved in church activities. If you don't attend church, you may wonder if you should, or if God cares whether you do.

■ You will see brief moments of absolute goodness in people that will make you hopeful about the world. Other times you will see ugly selfish behavior that will temper your concept of reality.

■ You will, out of necessity, learn to stand up for yourself. The necessity may be having to buy your first new car. After one and one-half weeks of bargaining, the salesman and you come within $100 of each other, and neither of you will budge. You walk out on him. Two days later, he calls and offers to go $50 lower. At this point, you, out of necessity, learn to compromise. You say OK.

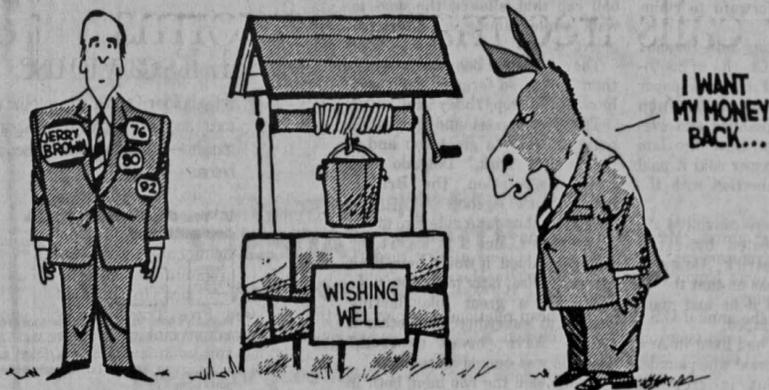

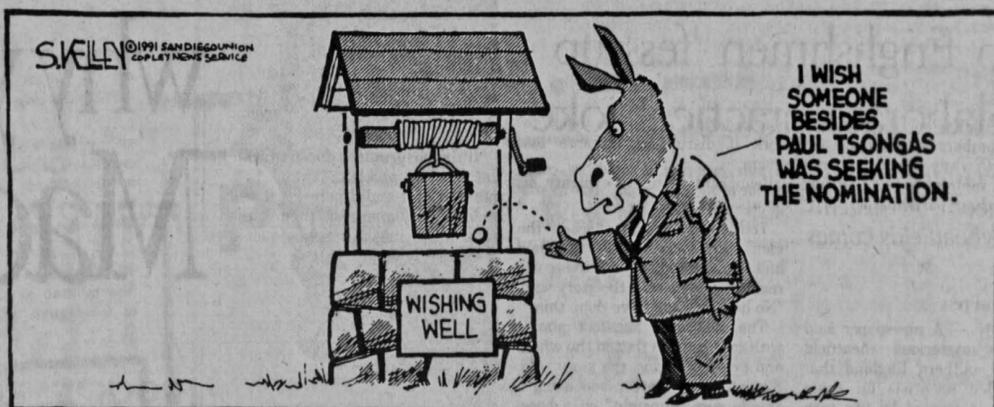

■ You will better understand who you are. You won't necessarily like yourself better, but you will understand more and will be better at judging what you can and can't do.

■ You will begin giving younger people advice and be surprised that they don't take it seriously.

Robert Louis Stevenson wrote, "Life is not a matter of holding good cards, but of playing a poor hand well." If you play your cards right, eight years from now you will look back on your life with few regrets, and you'll have all sorts of good ideas about what to do with the eight years after.

Soviets make history while America dithers

Moscow has just staged the most important historical event of the half-century. In Washington the response has been a series of debates that ranged from the irrelevant to the embarrassing.

First, there was the Baltic debate. Arguing about the timing of U.S. recognition of Baltic independence was the political equivalent of make-work. It made absolutely no difference to the fate of Baltic independence whether the United States would be the first or the 50th to recognize it.

Another absurd concern was whether Boris Yeltsin was being anti-democratic by disbanding the Communist Party and shutting down (temporarily, it turned out) Pravda and a few other pro-coup publications. Only a naïf or an ignoramus could believe that the Soviet Communist Party was a political party in anything but name. It was an apparatus for the arbitrary seizure and distribution of power and privilege. Its closest parallel in the West is not a party but a drug cartel or Mafia family. If it had been located within the boundaries of the United States, it would have been prosecuted under the racketeering laws.

As for Pravda, for decades its masthead read: "Organ of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union." It was not a newspaper. It was a newsletter of the party bosses. If it is now being reborn under new leadership as a real newspaper, fine. But shutting down the old Pravda and the old party were entirely reasonable acts.

Democracies should tolerate those who would abolish democracy only so long as they are weak. The United States, for example, tolerates its Nazis and communists because they can do little more than amuse and distract. Were they ever to become a real threat to achieve power, it would be entirely proper for democrats to forcibly suppress them in the name of democracy. To do otherwise would be not tolerance but folly.

Third, we had a rekindling of the eternal American debate about defense spending. On Aug. 29, the president said that the Russian revolution made possible a restructuring of American defenses. On the same day, Defense Secretary Cheney warned that instability in the Soviet Union was a reason not to accelerate cuts in the defense budget. This was read by some as something of a contradiction. In fact, Bush and Cheney were simply focusing on the two possible outcomes of the Soviet convulsion.

Soviet democracy could go the way of Poland. On the other hand, it could go the way of Yugoslavia (civil war) or Romania (party dictatorship under a new name). It is not all clear that the bad guys are finished. "It will be a near miracle if (the cause of freedom and radical reform) triumphs peacefully, without the application of force," writes Walter Laqueur in the New Republic. "Some elements of the old Communist Party will transform themselves into Social Democrats, but others will join forces with the extreme nationalists, and this may pave the way for a second coming of National Bolshevism."

Maybe, maybe not. No one knows. Yet there already are voices, like that of Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., calling for a 50 percent cut in defense spending. It is the height of irresponsibility to cut our defenses on the assumption that things will go well. Let's at least wait to see if Russian democracy survives the winter.

There is one debate we should be having about Soviet events that we are not: Namely, is it not time to get serious about strategic defense? The one clear lesson of the Soviet coup is that we live in a world of nuclear instability and cannot indefinitely rely on deterrence for our safety. For three days in August, Gorbachev's "football" (the briefcase with the nuclear launch codes) was in the hands of desperate people. Two of them were reportedly drunk much of the time, a third was distraught enough by the coup's failure to shoot himself. These are not people on whom one can rely for rationality, even if in this particular case they made no irrational moves toward the United States. (They certainly made many other irrational moves.)

Moreover, with the breakup of the Soviet center, thousands of nuclear weapons will devolve to the republics. They may be repatriated to Russia. They may not. And even if they are, some might be lost, stolen or hidden away.

Until now the nightmare of nuclear proliferation consisted of a fixed number of states growing number of which acquire nuclear weapons. We must now contemplate a new proliferation nightmare: A fixed number of nuclear weapons (the Soviet arsenal) divvied up among a growing number of states (the Soviet republics). In either case it amounts to putting more fingers on the button. And the more fingers, the more chances that one will belong to a lunatic.

The only answer to this growing threat is some kind of defense to protect the United States from nuclear attack. If things turn out well, we may indeed be able to radically reduce the defense budget, make huge cuts in strategic arms, perhaps even abolish tactical nukes altogether. But we should never again be as vulnerable as we were this August. The day, the rationale, for nuclear nakedness is long gone.

Montana may need surgery

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Joe Montana was told Monday he may need surgery to repair a torn elbow tendon and for the first time, the San Francisco 49ers' team doctor raised the possibility the injury could end his career.

Montana has been on injured reserve since the start of the season and hasn't thrown a pass in more than a month. It's a virtual certainty he will miss more than the first four games of the season, as originally projected.

Dr. Michael Dillingham said he met earlier in the day with Montana, 35, and brought up the subject of surgery.

No decision has been made on the surgery and the current plan is to continue with a regimen of rest and some exercises. If an operation was required, Montana would be out eight to 16 weeks.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

Nebraska imposes sanctions on itself

LINCOLN, Neb. — The University of Nebraska said Monday it is imposing several penalties on its basketball program in the wake of one of the program's best seasons.

The school's investigation followed allegations that two players violated NCAA rules by receiving extra benefits in the form of car loans.

The university said an internal investigation found no wrongdoing by coaches but the school is responsible for its players and will make changes in some of its scholarships and programs.

The results of the investigation also have been forwarded to the NCAA, said Al Papik, Nebraska assistant athletic director for compliance.

The penalties include a reduction of one basketball scholarship for the 1991-92 scholarship year and implementation of a program that will require all student-athletes to disclose the terms of acquisition of any automobile in their possession.

The school also will make one fewer official visit of prospective athletes for the 1991-92 academic year.

East Coast, Metro lose automatic bids

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — Thirty automatic berths to the NCAA basketball tournament were extended to conference champions on Monday, meaning there will be no play-in games to make the 64-team field.

Last season 33 conferences were eligible for automatic berths necessitating the play-in games between schools from the six conferences ranked lowest by the NCAA's computer.

The East Coast, Metro and American South conferences all lost their automatic bids for the upcoming tournament, the first two by failing to meet criteria established by the NCAA Division I Men's Basketball Committee regarding membership and the third by merging with the Sun Belt Conference.

Tyson indicted for rape

Doug Richardson
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Mike Tyson was indicted Monday on charges of raping a teen-age beauty pageant contestant in a hotel room early this summer.

If convicted, Tyson, the former undisputed heavyweight champion, faces a maximum sentence of 63 years in prison. Promoters said the four-count indictment won't affect Tyson's Nov. 8 title fight in Las Vegas against champion Evander Holyfield. But the Nevada State Athletic Commission said it would meet soon to decide whether to allow the fight.

Marion County prosecutor Jeffrey Modisett said Tyson was expected to return to Indianapolis this week for a court appearance and to post bond. An arrest warrant was issued and bond was set at $30,000.

The grand jury charged Tyson with one count of rape, two counts of criminal deviate conduct and one count of confinement.

Don King, a fight promoter and Tyson adviser, wasn't available for comment. However, King spokesman John Solberg released a statement:

"It's unfortunate he was indicted. We're confident when all the facts are fully developed he'll be found innocent of all charges. Mike will continue to train and prepare to fight Evander Holyfield on Nov. 8."

Solberg said Tyson was in Las Vegas but wouldn't be available for comment.

Tyson's Washington, D.C., lawyer, Vincent J. Fuller, was on the telephone and unavailable for comment. However, his office issued a statement saying: "We regret that the Marion County, Ind., grand jury has indicted our client, Michael Tyson. However, we remain confident of his innocence and look forward to his ultimate vindication."

"We anticipated that this was going to happen," said Dan Duva, a Holyfield adviser and promoter of the upcoming title fight. "It's not a surprise."

Duva said that when the fight was formally announced on Wednesday in New York, it "was with full understanding of the likelihood this could occur."

"Tyson has a contractual and constitutional right to fight and we intend to honor that," Duva said. "Certainly it would be better if it didn't happen, but we have to deal with it."

Rich Rose, president of sports for Caesars World Inc., said, "We're going ahead with the fight. It's that simple."

Asked if he was concerned about the impact of the indictment on the fight, Rose said, "Absolutely not. Whatever he has allegedly done is a separate situation which no one else can control. I still think you have the two best in their sport attempting to decide who is the ultimate in their sport."

Holyfield's manager, Shelly Finkel, asked if the fight was still on, said, "Yes it is."

Rival promoter Bob Arum called for the Nevada State Athletic Commission to strip Tyson's boxing license, and cited an obscure passage in the state regulation allowing a fight to proceed.

Pirates win slug-fest with Cubs, 12-10

Associated Press

CHICAGO — It was just one of those days at Wrigley Field.

Pinch-hitter Orlando Merced hit a three-run homer with one out in the ninth inning, rallying the Pittsburgh Pirates, who once led 6-0, to a 12-10 victory over the Chicago Cubs on Monday. Merced's homer was one of six in the game.

"It's a great feeling for me to go out there and do something for the team," Merced said. "It was a matter of hitting the ball in the air and the wind is going to take it."

The first-place Pirates trailed 10-8 entering the ninth when Don Slaught drew a one-out walk off loser Dave Smith (0-6). Jose Lind followed with a single, sending Slaught to third. Merced, batting for reliever Stan Belinda, hit his eighth homer, over the right-field bleachers, putting the Pirates ahead. It was Smith's six blown save opportunity.

Belinda (5-5) got the victory, working 1 1/2 innings, allowing two hits and two runs. Rosario Rodriguez pitched the ninth inning for his third save.

"The pitching wasn't good on either side," Cubs manager Jim Essian said. "There were a lot of wind-blown homers, but Merced's wasn't one of them."

Andre Dawson hit a two-run homer, highlighting a three-run seventh inning that gave the Cubs a 9-7 lead.

"It was one of those days when whoever is going to bat last is likely to win. I was hoping to have enough runs. The Cubs know that being down six runs is nothing on a day like this," Pirates manager Jim Leyland said.

Strawberry's RBI single tied it 4-all in the fourth, and his three-run double an inning later sent the Dodgers to their third straight win and their ninth in 11 games. He also had an RBI grounder amid a three-run seventh.

Los Angeles maintained a half-game lead over Atlanta, which beat San Francisco 8-3 Monday night.

There was one troubling development for the Dodgers: starter Tim Lincecum had to leave the game in the second inning with pulled groin muscles. Kevin Gross (9-10) got the win despite giving up four runs in three innings. John Wetteland got the last three outs.

ATLANTA — David Justice drove into a career-high five runs with a pair of homers and a single and John Smoltz won his 10th game since the All-Star break as the Atlanta Braves defeated the San Francisco Giants 8-3 Monday night for their fourth consecutive victory.

Atlanta entered the game trailing first-place Los Angeles by one-half game in the NL West.

Smoltz (12-13) won his fourth straight and is 10-2 since July 12.

He pitched seven innings and gave up one run and five hits.

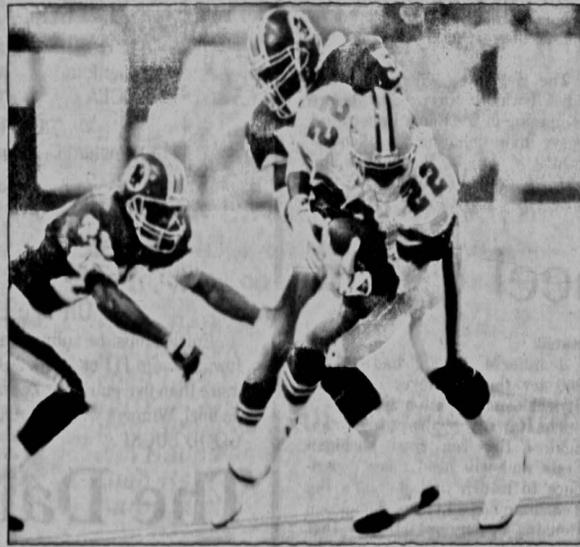

Atlanta scored four runs in the first inning off Bud Black (10-15), who lost for the sixth time in seven decisions.

MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL

'Skins hold off careless Dallas

Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — The Washington Redskins had to use some schoolyard trickery to end their Monday night hex.

The Redskins (2-0) snapped a six-game Monday night losing streak by parlaying a fake punt into the game-deciding touchdown in a 33-31 victory over their most pesky rival, the Dallas Cowboys.

Brian Mitchell ran for three yards for a first down on fourth-and-one from the Washington 48 to set up Gerald Riggs 1-yard scoring run with 12:48 left in the fourth quarter. The touchdown came after completions of 23 and 18 yards by Mark Rypien.

The victory put Washington (2-0) into a first-place tie with the Phoenix Cardinals in the NFC East. The Redskins are 18-16 on Monday night while Dallas is 19-17.

Chip Lohmiller's fourth field goal, a 46-yarder with 5:39 to play, gave Washington a nine-point lead.

Lohmiller's third field goal, a 45-yarder, gave Washington its first lead of the game 23-21 at 11:53 in the third quarter but Dallas (1-1) regained the lead on a 51-yard field goal by Ken Willis at 6:08.

The Cowboys and Redskins hooked up in a wild-scoring track meet in the first half, with Dallas leading 21-20 after enough offense for two games.

Troy Aikman threw three touchdown passes, the last to Michael Irvin from six yards out with two seconds to go, and Emmitt Smith broke four tackles on a dazzling 75-yard touchdown run for Dallas. It was the Cowboys' longest touchdown run since Herschel Walker went 84 yards against Philadelphia in 1986.

Rypien was equally brilliant, hitting tight end Jimmie Johnson with a 3-yard scoring toss and finding Art Monk all alone behind Issiac Holt for a 37-yard touchdown pass. Lohmiller kicked field goals of 53 and 52 yards.

Smith, who got an upset stomach after the touchdown run, came back to take a 5-yard scoring pass from Aikman. It was the first touchdown pass Smith had ever caught including three years at Florida.

On the Line Winners

Bruce Beasley Wins six movie passes from Campus Theaters because he said Texas Tech would beat Cal State-Fullerton 44-9. They won 41-7. Good job. He also wins an On the Line T-shirt.
Winners of just T-shirts are:
 Amanda Cookman, Mary Skopec, Larry Cookman, Steve Wombacher, Hillary Sherwood, Andy Kovacevich, Kevin Van Auken, Tyler McNeil, Jim Whetstone and Angela Erian.
 All winners were 10-0. Also 10-0, and receiving honorable mentions, were Brian J. Albrecht, Gary Hout and Al Stroh. The tie-breaker score killed them, but I'm sure they'll end up winning at some point this year.

 innings as the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Phillies Monday night, snapping a five-game losing streak.
 Rookie Andy Ashby (0-3) gave up five hits in 4 1/2 innings. The Phillies spoiled Olivares' bid for his first major-league shutout when Charlie Hayes hit a two-run homer with two out in the ninth. Lee Smith finished for his 38th save.
 Olivares struck out six and walked two and also contributed an RBI single to help chase Ashby.
Expos 4, Mets 3
NEW YORK — Montreal snapped a nine-game losing streak to New York as Mike Fitzgerald had a two-run single to lead the Expos past the Mets 4-3 Monday night for their fifth straight victory.
 The Expos have won nine of their last 10 games and have a chance of catching the Mets, who lost their fifth straight game.

 Brian Barnes (4-6) pitched five innings for the victory. The left-hander gave up two runs and three hits. Bill Sampen pitched 2 1/2 innings and Jeff Fassero finished for his seventh save, getting a double play to end the game with runners on first and third.
 David Cone (12-12) gave up four runs on eight hits.
Padres 3, Astros 0
HOUSTON — Andy Benes pitched five-hit ball over 7 1/2 innings to win his eighth straight decision as the San Diego Padres beat the Houston Astros Monday night.
 It was the Padres' sixth straight victory, equaling their season high.
 Benes' winning streak matches the longest in the National League this season, with Tom Glavine and Kelly Downs also winning eight decisions in a row. Benes (12-10) hasn't lost since July 15, and in his last five starts has allowed only 23 hits and three runs in 39 1/2 innings. Craig Lefferts struck out three in 1 1/2 innings for his 20th save.

 Houston has been shut out 15 times this season, the most in the National League.
Red Sox 4, Indians 3
CLEVELAND — The smallest crowd at Cleveland Stadium in 27 years saw the Boston Red Sox win their sixth straight game, beating the Indians 4-3 Monday night on Tom Brunansky's sacrifice fly in the ninth inning.
 Only 1,695 fans attended at the 74,483-seat ballpark. It was the smallest crowd in Cleveland since 1,564 watched a game against Oakland on April 24, 1974.

 The Red Sox matched their longest winning streak of the season and moved within five games of AL East-leading Toronto, which was idle.
Orioles 8, Yankees 0
BALTIMORE — Bob Milacki again beat New York, pitching a five-hitter Monday night that led the Baltimore Orioles over the Yankees 8-0.
 Milacki (9-8) struck out five and walked one in his first shutout of the season and fifth of his career. He is the only Baltimore starter with a winning record, and improved to 5-0 lifetime against the Yankees.
 Chito Martinez hit his 11th homer of the season off Scott Sanderson (14-9) in the fifth inning for the game's first runs.

TYSON: Indicted

 ing such action if a fighter "is arrested or convicted on a charge involving moral turpitude."
 "We have certain rules and regulations we have to abide by," commission vice chairman Luther Mack said. "We have to meet as a total commission and take a look at it. We will decide it at that time."
 The grand jury announced its decision before Marion Superior Court Judge Patricia J. Gifford.
 Rob Smith, a spokesman for the prosecutor's office, said Tyson would be expected to surrender to authorities.
 "We wouldn't fly someone out there and actually arrest him and make a big deal out of it," Smith said earlier Monday. "He would report on his own."

 The charges stem from a complaint lodged against Tyson by a contestant in the Miss Black America pageant. The 18-year-old woman alleged that Tyson raped her July 19 in a downtown hotel.
 Tyson has denied the accusation.
 Tyson was in Indianapolis to make promotional appearances for Indiana Black Expo. Tonya Woodard, public relations manager for Indiana Black Expo, said the organization had scheduled a press conference Tuesday.
 Modisett said the state would attempt to prove that Tyson came to Indianapolis in mid-July specifically to meet contestants in the pageant.

 "At some point, Michael Tyson met the victim and got her to agree to go out with him. The victim was led to believe her meeting with Tyson was going to be platonic. When she refused his advances, Tyson forced non-consensual sexual relations with her," Modisett said.
 "The evidence clearly showed it was by force. It was non-consensual sex against her will," he said.
 Modisett said the deviate conduct counts stemmed from alleged oral sex without consent and digital penetration. He said the confinement charge is routine in a rape case.

 The grand jury began its investigation Aug. 12. Since then, more than two dozen witnesses have testified before the panel, including Tyson and his accuser.
 Tyson and King flew into Indianapolis from Cleveland on Aug. 30 so the boxer could testify. They waited several hours at a downtown hotel while Tyson's bodyguard, Dale Edwards, also of Cleveland, testified.
 Following Tyson's testimony, several witnesses were asked to testify again before the panel, which ended its investigation on Friday.

Netters take second at All-Iowa tourney

The Daily Iowan
 The Iowa volleyball team finished second in the All-Iowa Classic in Des Moines last Sunday, giving Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt her second victory of the new season.
 The Hawkeyes defeated host Drake 3-1 (15-12, 15-13, 10-15, 17-16) in the opening round before falling to Iowa State in the championship. The Cyclones won 3-0 (15-12, 15-4, 15-7), improving their record to 5-1. Iowa slipped to 2-3 for the year.

 Iowa's Trista Schoenbeck and Michelle Haywood were named to the All-Iowa Classic All-Tournament team for their performances. Schoenbeck had nine kills against Iowa State, while Haywood had 16 kills, seven digs and three service aces against Drake.
 Hawkeye Courtney Gillis had a career-high 17 kills, 17 digs and three service aces against Drake and Michelle Buckner recorded 54 assists against the Bulldogs.

 "It's clear that Iowa State was stronger on the block," Schoenstedt said. "To Iowa State's credit they hit hard and through our blocks. This shows a lot of experience. At one time we had three freshmen, two sophomores and a junior on the court. Obviously that is good news for our future."

 "We have to learn to play with people through the length of a match, not just in spurts."
 The Hawkeyes will have a few days back in Iowa City before competing in the Eddie Bauer First Serve Invitational next weekend in Seattle. Colorado, Pepperdine and host Washington will also participate.

Linksters place 16th at Lady Tarheel Open

Curtis Riggs
 Daily Iowan
 The Iowa women's golf team took 16th place at the 18-team Lady Tar Tournament in Chapel Hill, N.C., over the weekend.
 Mary Jo Rollins set the pace for the linksters by shooting a 242 in the 54-hole affair. She was followed by Judy Bornholdt, who fired a 243, and Stacy Boville, who shot a 244 for the tourney.

 Host team North Carolina won the tournament with team scores of 300-300-295 for a total of 895. Iowa's scores were 343-326-314 for a 983 total.
 Minnesota placed third. Other Big Ten teams participating were Indiana (eighth), Penn State (10th) and Illinois, which finished 12th.
 Renee Helken of Illinois captured medalist honors with a three-day score of 214.

 The Hawkeyes got off to a rocky start on Saturday, shooting 343. "Obviously we were disappointed the first day," coach Diane Thomason said. "We just played with a really young team."
 By Monday, however, the Hawkeyes had settled down and shaved 19 strokes off of their first day's score. "On Monday we beat some very good teams," Thomason stated.

 Jennifer McCullough had a total of 250 for the Hawkeyes and Erin Strieck came in with a 262.
 The Hawkeyes will next see action against Big Ten rival Michigan State and will need more experience to return to last year's Big Ten championship form. Thomason remains upbeat but stresses that "it will take some time for us to be where we want to be. We will not be a real fast-starting team."

NFL TRENDS

Bills, Oilers stand alone

AFC's unbeaten won't meet in regular season

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

A win by the Kansas City Chiefs over the Oilers in Houston next Monday night could set up a Chiefs-Buffalo Bills Monday nighter in Week 6 that could pack 'em in.

But there is no meeting in the regular season between the Oilers and the Bills, who have THAT look after two games — the only two unbeaten teams left in the AFC. If, as Warren Moon maintains, this is the year that Houston must get to the Super Bowl before age catches up with it, it's doing a pretty good job of showing Super Bowl form early.

The 77 points in wins over the Los Angeles Raiders and Cincinnati Bengals isn't unexpected. Holding the Raiders and Bengals to 24 points is — particularly since Houston ranked 26th in total defense last season. The Oilers got a touchdown on a 52-yard interception return by Lamar Lathon, emerging in his second year into what he was supposed to be in his first, and the acquisition of Lee Williams from San Diego gives them another bona fide pass rusher to go with Sean Jones, William Fuller and Ray Childress.

Contrast that with Buffalo, an irresistible force but a movable object.

The Bills were 52-34 winners over Pittsburgh Sunday and have now scored 86 points and gained 1,119 yards in their two games. But they've also given up 65 points, albeit without Bruce Smith, and allowed another 152 yards on the ground Sunday, reminiscent of the failing that cost them the Super Bowl to the New York Giants.

Still ...
"They made us look like little kids out there," the Steelers' Rod Woodson said after Jim Kelly threw for six touchdowns, four to Don Beebe, proving that there's more to the Kelly's arsenal than Thurman Thomas, Andre Reed, James Lofton and Butch Rolle. (You know, Butch Rolle, the third-string tight end whose last nine receptions have been for touchdowns.)

THE TRADE
Let's give it one more season before we say definitively that the Dallas Cowboys put it to the Minnesota Vikings in the Herschel Walker trade. After all, Mike Lynn, the man who made the deal, said that if it put Minnesota in a Super Bowl, it was worth it.

Walker, given a chance to run from a single-back set, gained 125 yards in 25 carries against the Falcons Sunday as the Vikings broke an 11-game outdoor losing streak that dated back to November 1989.

It was also Walker's first 100-yard game with the Vikings since his first one — against Green Bay nearly two years ago.

All this against an eight-man line, although sometimes the wrong eight-man line.

"They stunt on a lot of plays," said tackle Tim Irwin. "A lot of times we just caught them going the other way, and that gave Herschel room."

ON THE OTHER HAND ...

Mark Higgs would have come a lot cheaper than Walker.

Higgs, Plan B'd from Dallas to Philadelphia to Miami, had 111 yards Sunday in the Dolphins' 17-6 win over the Indianapolis Colts. That gives him 257 yards in two games, or six more than he had in his previous three NFL seasons.

NO REPEAT SYNDROME

Bill Walsh used to say it about his San Francisco 49ers in years (like 1982 and 1985) when they failed to repeat as Super Bowl winners.

"It's just a little edge you lose ... not a big one. The other teams are gunning for you and the little things that win games just aren't there."

Example: In Sunday's 19-13 loss to the Los Angeles Rams, the Giants turned the ball over three times — two fumbles and an interception. Last season, they had only 14 turnovers in 14 games, second-best in NFL history.

Moreover, the Giants were coming off an emotional Monday night win over the 49ers and were facing Jeff Fisher, the Rams' new defensive coordinator. Fisher came from the Philadelphia Eagles, where he (and Buddy Ryan) had beaten New York in five of six games.

But even the Rams conceded the Giants had much to do with the loss.

"We may have caught them flat," said coach John Robinson.

SPEAKING OF WHICH ...

The last time the Rams played the Giants in the Meadowlands was two years ago in a playoff game.

The final score: 19-13 Rams in overtime, the game in which Flipper Anderson caught the winning TD pass and continued right into the tunnel to the dressing room. Sunday's score: 19-13.

TURNOVERS

How have the Phoenix Cardinals scored 50 points in two games with Tom Tupa at quarterback?

Turnovers, turnovers.

After getting seven in the opener against the Rams, Phoenix got six more Sunday to beat the Eagles 26-10, even while Tupa was going just 6-of-19. But he did get 219 yards with those six completions, one of which was a 51-yard TD connection with Johnny Johnson.

Coach Joe Bugel called his quarterback, who will fill in all season for the injured Timm Rosenbach, "a real winner." But the real winners are Freddie Joe Nunn, Tim McDonald and the Phoenix defense, which are plus-11 in turnovers, a rate that would give them an unheard-of plus-88 for the season.

AND ... MORE TURNOVERS

Last season, Steve DeBerg threw just four interceptions in 16 games.

On Sunday, he threw two in the fourth quarter to end drives toward what might have been the tying touchdown in the Chiefs' 17-10 loss to the Saints.

"When you're behind and they know you have to throw, it makes it much harder," DeBerg said after Kansas City fell behind 17-0 and had to open up its "prevent offense."

HALFSIES

In two games, the Chiefs haven't scored in the first half.

In two games, the Chiefs haven't allowed a point in the second half.

Not surprisingly, they're 1-1.

TREND?

The Saints' win in Kansas City marked the first time they've been 2-0 in their 25-year history.

On the other hand, this was only their fifth shot at it — they had only won their opener four times before.

HIGH FIRST-ROUNDERS

Broderick Thomas, the fifth player taken in the 1989 draft, hasn't exactly lived up to that pick.

On Sunday, after the Tampa Bay Bucs' 21-20 loss to the Chicago Bears, Thomas was crying in front of his locker — he twice was called for unsportsmanlike conduct to continue Chicago scoring drives. Overall, Tampa Bay was flagged 11 times for 131 yards that gave the Bears seven of their 20 first downs.

"I screwed us out of a game," Thomas said.

IOWA STATE

Pedersen ready for Iowa duel in Ames

Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

AMES — The waiting is almost over for Chris Pedersen.

In his final year of college football, the Iowa State quarterback finally will get to play against Iowa.

The game with Iowa is always an emotional affair for the Cyclones, and it's particularly meaningful for Pedersen. He has lived in Iowa all his life, his father, Jim, played at Iowa under Ray Nagel in the late 1960s and he has good friends now playing for the Hawkeyes.

"I've been thinking about it for a long time," Pedersen said. "But I can't overthink about it. I've just got to play my game."

Pedersen had expected to be the starting quarterback in last year's game with Iowa. But he hurt his knee the week before at Minnesota and had to sit and watch as freshman Bob Utter quarterbacked the Cyclones in a 43-35 loss.

This year, Pedersen has survived Iowa State's only game intact and he's ready to step in to the highly charged atmosphere that surrounds the Iowa-Iowa State series.

More than 54,000 people are expected to jam Cyclone Stadium for Saturday's game, which will be televised on a statewide network.

"There's going to be a lot of hoopla. That kind of goes with the game, I guess," Pedersen said. "I don't really try to get into that very much. I know I've got a job to do. I've got to go out and try to lead the offense and make things successful, and that's what I'm going to try to concentrate on."

Pedersen directed Iowa State to a 42-13 victory over Eastern Illinois in its opener last Saturday, compiling 232 total yards while playing about three-fourths of the game.

The 6-foot-3, 222-pounder from Ankeny completed 10 of 14 passes for 168 yards and ran 11 times for 64 yards and scored a touchdown. Nothing flashy, just a solid, all-around performance.

"Playing a game like that before the Iowa game, you hate to take any chances and let something stupid happen so there's people you have to worry about (being healthy) going into the game," Pedersen said.

"I'm happy we got a victory. We got some stuff on film, so now we can break it out and see how we can improve and then go out and play Iowa."

Iowa, ranked 14th nationally, whipped Hawaii 53-10 in its opener. Two of Pedersen's friends from Ankeny, Greg Allen and Matt Whitaker, play for the Hawkeyes. Both are tight ends.

Pedersen is looking forward to seeing them at the game.

Ankeny native Chris Pedersen will finally get his chance to play Iowa, starting for Iowa State Saturday when No. 14 Iowa travels to Ames.

"I'm kind of glad those guys play offense and I don't have to be out there with them," he said. "But those are two great guys and they're really special. They're good friends of mine. I get to talk to them about what life's like over there for them and they get to find out what life's like for me up here."

"It's just nice to see they're doing well over there. It's nice to see my teammates from high school are having some success."

An encouraging note in the opener for Iowa State was the Cyclones' ability to score from short range.

They had trouble scoring from inside the 10 a year ago, but on Saturday, Iowa State had four touchdown runs of 4 yards or less.

"That's good to see the line can explode off and push some people back and that we've got the guys that can run it through there," Pedersen said. "I like how this team plays. We're out there playing hard. Nobody was giving up or thought it was over."

"This team's got a good attitude about how hard they play."

Mets worried about Doc's rotator cuff

Jim Donaghy
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden expects to be back in top form next season even though his rotator cuff injury is the one that often puts a pitcher's career in jeopardy.

Gooden spoke to the media Monday, two days after Dr. James Parkes repaired torn cartilage and a partially torn rotator cuff in the right-hander's shoulder.

The Mets' front office and Gooden were stunned when Parkes told them of the rotator cuff problem, a potentially disabling injury.

"I'm just happy and satisfied no further surgery will take place," Gooden said. "I just have to start exercising, keep the faith and work hard."

Gooden can begin soft-tossing in eight to 12 weeks and will continue an exercise rehabilitation program throughout the winter. Parkes said Gooden should be ready for the start of spring training in mid-February.

But no one can be sure how the injury will change Gooden's 94 mph fastball and wicked curve. A loss in speed off the fastball would force Gooden to seek alternative styles of pitching.

Mets shortstop Kevin Elster, who had a torn labrum in his right shoulder repaired after last season, doesn't expect Gooden to be back at the start of the 1992 season.

"Doc's going to be out a while next year — I mean a long time," Elster said. "Don't expect any miracles from Doc next year."

Gooden doesn't expect any miracles, but he does expect to be back by the start of next season.

"I don't have any fears. I don't doubt myself," said Gooden, who has a 132-53 lifetime record. "I'll be ready for regular workouts by spring training. Every individual is different, everybody's work habit is different. I just have to worry about Dwight Gooden."

The Mets are also worried about Gooden, particularly since he starts a three-year $15.45 million contract in 1992.

Gooden finished the 1991 season with a 13-7 record and 3.60 ERA. Since joining the Mets in 1984, he has been one of the special pitchers in the game and the Mets' soft-spoken leader.

The Mets and Gooden both hit hard times this season, though, as the club collapsed after the All-Star break and Gooden's career is now in jeopardy.

"It's been a long year," Gooden said. "But it's almost over and things will get better."

Gooden first complained of tightness in his shoulder during a start against St. Louis on Aug. 22. Although he pitched five scoreless innings against the Cardinals, he walked five and his velocity decreased each inning.

After the game, the Mets said Gooden was removed for precautionary reasons and he said the shoulder would be fine.

But after throwing on the sidelines in Cincinnati, Gooden's next two starts were scratched. He was placed on the 15-day disabled list on Sept. 2.

A magnetic resonance imaging test proved inconclusive, so Gooden underwent an arthro-CAT scan on Sept. 4. The scan showed a "stripping" away of the anterior capsule from the socket in his right shoulder. The anterior capsule encases the shoulder joint and contains fluid that lubricates it.

Gooden was finally asked if he was prepared to face the end of his brilliant career at the age of 26.

"No," he said flatly, "I'm not prepared for that."

Rap superstar-turned-actor Ice Cube raps with his co-stars Cuba Gooding Jr. and Larry Fishburne (Cowboy Curtis of the infamous "Pee Wee's Playhouse") in John Singleton's provocative drama about growing up in black urban America, "Boyz N the Hood."

'Boyz' to shake up suburbanites

Kristen Carr
Daily Iowan

The morning after homey Doughboy (Ice Cube) sees his older brother killed, he laments, "Either they don't know, don't care or don't show what's goin' on in the hood." Thanks to 23-year-old rookie director John Singleton, we now know.

Set in southern Los Angeles, the first half hour of "Boyz N the Hood" is "Stand By Me" relocated to a suburban hell where violence surfaces with the day-to-day regularity of a mailman. "Boyz" makes racism seem like the least of the obstacles facing young African-Americans trying to make it out of neighborhood war zones patrolled regularly by both police helicopters and cruising, crack-funded BMWs. The first thing to hit the screen is the statistic that one of every 21 black males will meet a violent death. Tailing this quotation is a matter-of-fact statement that most of the murderers are also black males.

Of the four boys followed from junior high through high school, Tre (Cuba Gooding Jr.) is the most likely to be among the lucky 20. He's kept on the straight and narrow by his father, Furious Styles (Larry Fishburne). Furious is the ideal father figure that exists only as a shadowy presence in the lives of Tre's peers. Possessing a Malcolm X-ray vision of what's right and wrong, Furious' speeches on safe sex and the evils of gentrification sets him up as a Good Guy — a position which doesn't leave much room for subtle character definition.

Most of Tre's clique suffer from cardboard characterizations: the golden boy, Ricky (Morris Chestnut), aiming for a football scholarship, and his ne'er do well brother (Ice Cube) whose temper continually lands him in prison. The dialogue is raw and real — no one seems to have much of a sense of humor; what little there is carries a bitter aftertaste.

Inevitably, Singleton is being compared to Spike Lee. They're both black males under 30, but the similarities end there. Cinematically speaking, Singleton owes more to "ABC Afterschool Specials" than he does to Lee. He refuses to cut away from the main plot. This relentless chronicling of a chain of events stands him in best stead during the death of Tre's best friend (I doubt I gave away any secret plot twists — it's obvious from the start that Ricky's in the "only the good die young" category.) Singleton refuses to end the murder scene with the corpse lying on the pavement in a pool of blood — his camera never flinches when the body is taken home and the family howls their grief over the loss.

The reason this movie should be seen is the shock it'll give the suburb-born and bred. Singleton's loss of his filmmaking virginity is ultimately like many other first times — clumsy, a little overrated, but ultimately very affecting.

MUSIC

Hancher '91 takes off with Take 6

Brett Ratner
Daily Iowan

UI pop, jazz, vocal and gospel enthusiasts will be treated to Christian music's premiere a cappella group as Take 6 kicks off the 1991 Hancher Season tonight at 8.

Take 6, a sextet composed of Mark and Joey Kibble, David Thomas, Cedric Dent, Alvin Chea and Claude McKnight III, has quickly risen from obscurity to garner a Grammy, a wide-ranging audience and collaborations with some of music's biggest superstars.

Take 6 incorporates jazz, pop, gospel, doo-wop, Caribbean and classical influences into their own unique style ("contemporary Christian a cappella pop jazz," as the members call it). This hybrid of styles won over a following that extends far beyond the traditional realm of contemporary Christian music.

The group has worked with a range of artists as varied as their influences. In a fairly short time, the group has logged an impressive amount of studio time with stars ranging from jazz virtuoso Branford Marsalis to folk/pop singer James Taylor to Stevie Wonder to country/pop singer k.d. Lang.

Take 6's music has also been featured on T.V. shows such as "Murphy Brown," as well as the Spike Lee movie "Do the Right Thing."

With a track record as impressive as this, the group's performance tonight promises to open up the '91 Hancher season, as well as Hancher's Jazz Series, in style.

While it is safe to say that the Hancher performance should feature selections from the Grammy-winning gold record "So Much 2 Say," it is unfortunate that the audience will not be treated to the inspiring, yet un-seasonal, renditions of traditional Christmas carols found on the soon to be released "He is Christmas."

Tickets are available at Hancher Box office for $18, $16 and $13. Tickets are also available for a discount as part of the '91-'92 Jazz Series package.

Family, friends remember Redding

Associated Press

MACON, Ga. — Otis Redding would have turned 50 Monday, and in his hometown, family and friends remembered the legendary soul singer as someone who still lives in the hearts of his fans.

"It's almost like Otis never really left us," said Zelma Redding, his widow. "I mean, his impact on music was just so great."

"Not a lot of people can die and still be alive in the hearts of so many people," she said.

Redding died Dec. 10, 1967, when his private plane crashed into Lake Monona near Madison, Wis., en route to a concert. He was 26.

In his short career, Redding was a soul singer, songwriter, producer and musician who ranked with such greats as Elvis Presley, James Brown and Little Richard.

"Dock of the Bay," written by Redding and guitarist Steve Cropper, reached No. 1 several months after his death. His other hits include "I've Been Loving You Too Long," "Respect," "Try a Little Tenderness" and "Tramp."

Remembering Redding is remembering the roots of soul music, said singer-turned-minister Joe Simon, who sang at Redding's funeral.

"Otis made R&B, soul singers, acceptable to the masses," Simon said. "Otis brought soul music to white kids. He was one of the first to cross over."

Born in Dawson, Ga., Redding grew up in a west Macon housing project. He eventually settled on a ranch outside Macon, where he was buried and where his widow still lives.

Thousands of visitors trek to the spot annually to pay their respects.

"Think about all we've missed since he has been gone," said rock critic and author Dave Marsh.
