County 'hobby farm' ordinance fails to pass

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors, in a 2-2 vote with one absence, failed to pass a proposed "hobby farm" ordinance Thursday. The ordinance would have allowed up to 30 head of livestock on any parcel of land from three to 40 acres and not less than 1,000 feet from the nearest residence.

A parcel with more than 30 head on less than 40 acres would have been defined as a "feed lot." The owner would have been required to apply to the county for a conditional use permit.

Because of the tie vote, the proposed ordinance will be discussed by the board again Tuesday and voted on again Thursday. If the ordinance passes, any existing operation which falls into the newly defined category of "feed lot," also known as a confinement, will be exempt.

Heavy rains cause flooding in Texas

DEL RIO, Texas (AP) — Homeowners and campers headed for higher ground Thursday after heavy rain doused parts of southwestern Texas and water rose in the Rio Grande and Lake Amistad.

The rain and accompanying cool temperatures also threatened the cotton crop in a major agricultural area of western Texas. A cool front dropped temperatures into the 40s in western Texas and the 50s in the Del Rio area.

Officials said Thursday they were trying to locate a man who was canoeing down the Pecos River from Pandale to Lake Amistad. The man was spotted from the air Wednesday by U.S. Border Patrol agents, but his whereabouts were unknown Thursday.

CDC proposes AIDS tests for hospital patients

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials Thursday proposed widespread AIDS tests for hospital patients.

The recommendation came in a draft report the Centers for Disease Control is circulating for comment from health experts.

The report proposes that medical hospitals "routinely offer and encourage" tests for HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. Such tests would be by patient consent, and the results furnished to them in confidence.

Salvadoran opposing sides meet for negotiations

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Representatives of the Salvadoran government and the guerrilla army with which it is locked in combat met face-to-face Thursday in a negotiation session at the United Nations.

A U.N. statement said both sides responded favorably to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar's ideas for reintegrating the guerrillas into society.

On Wednesday night, rebel leaders said they also were encouraged by progress in the talks and announced a unilateral cease-fire.

Israel accuses U.S. of favoring Arabs

ERUSALEM (AP) — Israel accused the United States Thursday of tilting to the Arabs in its eagerness to draw them to a Mideast peace conference and said that could be an obstacle to peace.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir claimed Washington had triggered "euphoria in the Arab world" by delaying Israel's request for housing loan guarantees for the sake of the peace conference.

UI lists more potential cuts

Leslie Yazel
Daily Iowan

In an effort to maintain and build up certain programs, the UI announced Thursday almost 50 programs being considered for phase-out or elimination.

A report from the Strategic Planning Steering Group outlined the potential cuts of academic and non-academic units, and included suggestions to sell off certain services and make others self-sufficient.

The final word on the recommended cuts will be announced in November, allowing time for students, faculty and staff to respond to the proposed changes. The report will be put before the Iowa state Board of Regents Dec. 1.

The strategic plan came about after the Board of Regents mandated the three regents institutions prioritize their departments and programs. This fall marks the one-year anniversary of that plan.

The group remained aware of three areas the UI wants to strengthen — undergraduate education, selected professional and graduate programs, and the diversity of the university community — when identifying programs and services to cut.

Targets for the cuts include the College of Business Administration, the Department of Social Work, the Department of Dental Hygiene, Library and Information Sciences, the Department of Home Economics, the Division of Physical Education, and the School of Art and Art History. The sale of Finkbine Golf Course was also in the proposal.

Students and faculty involved in programs chosen for elimination will not be left hanging, according to a release accompanying the report. Students will be able to complete their major prior to elimination of the degree program, and tenured faculty will be offered positions in related departments.

The report stresses that funds retained from the reduction of programs should stay within the UI's budget.

Palestinians pressed to attend talks

AMMAN, Jordan — Secretary of State James Baker and King Hussein on Thursday jointly urged the Palestinians to attend a Mideast peace conference, saying they have the most to lose by not seizing an opportunity that the Jordanian leader said "may not come again, ever."

Baker said the United States was prepared to go ahead with the conference regardless of Palestinian participation. Hussein, whose populace is about half Palestinian, declined to say whether Jordan would do so — calling the question premature — but declared "the time has come for people to act."

"We would be prepared to sponsor a conference that could proceed

IRAQ

U.S. officials work to dispel rumors of war

Susanne M. Schafer

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration tried to quell talk of a new war with Iraq on Thursday, a day after raising the possibility of sending U.S. planes to protect U.N. inspectors. President Bush denied he was spoiling for a fight and the Pentagon said, "Nobody is going anywhere."

Bush denounced Iraqi President Saddam Hussein as a "brutal dictator," but only in the course of a quick reference to the gulf war during a speech on domestic matters.

The president had said Wednesday he was "fed up" with Saddam and ready to back up his frustration by deploying U.S. aircraft if Iraq continued to interfere with U.N. teams searching for its weapons of mass destruction.

But no one was making threats on Thursday.

Told that Iraq's state-run news media had accused the United States of "spreading false information... to justify its resumption of aggression," Bush told reporters in Los Angeles, "I'm not looking for a fight with anybody."

President George Bush

Defense Department spokesman Pete Williams refused to comment on the alert status of any U.S. forces, saying the Pentagon doesn't comment on "contingency plans."

Williams added, however, "No orders have been issued to carry out any plan with respect to an Iraqi contingency... All I can say is, there are no troops moving. Nobody is going anywhere."

He did say that U.S. Patriot missiles — and the troops that fire them — will be leaving bases in Europe soon for Saudi Arabia.

Queried about the sudden deployment of the Patriots, Williams said

MINORITIES

'Moderate policy' maintained in luring more students into graduate programs

Jude Sunderbruch
Daily Iowan

In many fields of study, African-Americans continue to enter UI graduate schools and in some cases their numbers are increasing.

As affirmative action comes into the national spotlight with conservatives calling for its abandonment and liberal forces working to maintain it, the UI continues with its moderate policy of actively recruiting minorities but never setting quotas, according to James Jakobsen, associate dean of the UI Graduate College.

James Thomas from the UI College of Law concurred by saying that the law school as well as the UI wants "to create diversity, whenever, however possible... but not to the detriment of others." He continued by saying that affirmative action "can be best described as an avenue of opportunity."

Several different methods are used at the UI to recruit minorities to its graduate programs. These include forums, visits to historically black universities and other more traditional approaches such as distributing viewbooks geared toward prospective graduate students.

In addition, the UI participates in a number of other minority recruitment activities at the graduate level, including a name exchange program among Big Ten schools and the University of Chicago.

One of the most notable of these schools' activities is the Minority Fellowship Program. In this program students apply using a common application for the fellowship, and if successful they are awarded a four-year fellowship they may use at any participating university they are accepted at.

"No one is as far along as the law school," noted Willis Greer, associate dean for graduate programs at the College of Business Administration, referring to minority recruitment. He continued by saying that the medical school was second and "the rest of us have a long way to go."

Toward that goal, the business school has done several things to attract minorities to its program. Each year around the country, forums are held for prospective MBA students who currently have full-time positions in the nation's work force.

The UI consistently sends representatives to these forums, and Greer noted, "When we go to a city with a substantial minority population... we take a minority student with us."

He observed that often minority students feel more comfortable talking to someone they can more easily identify with.

However, Greer said that business has not been a field that has been particularly attractive to minorities.

Approximately 7 percent of the students in the UI's MBA program are minorities, according to Greer. He recalled that in the past there have never been any problems or tensions in the classroom between students of different cultural backgrounds.

Greer also said that through efforts such as Intro Week — a new MBA initiative that groups students of various educational, employment and cultural histories together in case-study groups the

Diversity librarian encourages students to utilize UI's multicultural resources

Jessica Davidson

Hundreds of voices from around the globe have gathered in the UI Main Library to share their diverse cultural experiences. If you're wondering where this esteemed gathering is taking place, don't ask for the library's conference room — just look in the stacks.

William Wellburn started last year as the UI's diversity librarian, working with UI offices and student organizations and making students aware of the multicultural resources available.

"When it comes to diversity there are so many opinions, such a diversity of thought, you want to look at things from a variety of different perspectives," he said. "The best way to do that is to read."

Wellburn said college years are crucial to minority students. He said books like Ralph Ellison's "Invisible Man" or American Indian trickster stories can help students as they form their own ethnic and cultural identity.

"It's important that they have the opportunity to reach out and learn what it means to be African-American, Native American," he said.

Wellburn said he is particularly interested in working with student cultural centers.

"What they're doing would be enriched by knowing where the information is," he said.

Wellburn emphasized that diversity resources are not just for minority students — especially considering the increasing cultural diversity across the country.

"In Manhattan (New York) cultural diversity hits you at every corner," Wellburn said. "If you're not comfortable with a minority community, don't think about moving to California."

Wellburn said his job consists of making students — especially students whose high schools may not have had an extensive library

CRISIS CENTER

Program combats suicide in schools

Chris Pothoven
Daily Iowan

The numbers are frightening. Last year almost 5,000 adolescents in the United States decided the only way to escape the pressures and problems of life was through the act of suicide, representing a 300 percent increase from figures in the 1950s. And for every one successful suicide, there are an estimated six to 10 attempts.

Thanks to a grant from the Gannett Foundation, the Crisis Center, 321 E. First St., hopes to combat this problem by working with Iowa City schools to develop a suicide outreach program dealing with both the prevention and post-vention aspects of suicide.

Although such a program is still in the planning stages, Carol Mertens, suicide outreach counselor at the Crisis Center, said part of it will include a preventive education mechanism.

"The basis behind the program is to build an awareness that suicide can happen to people around you," she said.

An important part of the program will be educating students about the warning signs of suicide and how and where to get help for peers who are exhibiting such signs, said Vince Matulionis, Crisis Center coordinator of services.

"A lot of times adolescents will not go to the help of professionals such as counselors," he said. "Often they go to friends.

Many adolescents attempt "low-lethality" means of suicide, also called suicide gestures, as a means of trying to communicate their problems to others, Matulionis said.

"If these people don't have their problems addressed, they will continue to try more and more lethal methods," he said.

Preventive efforts are based on the fact that most people who attempt suicide do not really wish to die, Mertens said.

"Only when we are aware of the warning signs of suicide and ways to help the suicidal person can we be truly effective in helping them through a crisis which may never reach such proportions again," she said.

The outreach program will be customized to fit each school, Mertens said, as many already have some form of suicide outreach programs.

"We'll go into the schools with the attitude of 'How can we help you?'" she said.

Mertens also hopes to give all teachers training in crisis management, with those teachers on crisis teams receiving more in-depth training.

Post-vention will also form a major part of the outreach program so that a school would know how to deal with a major crisis, she said. Most schools also have some type of crisis program, but Mertens said the Crisis Center will try to coordinate them into a network.

"We're trying to get together a citywide plan that will probably involve the whole community," Mertens said. "The idea behind it is to promote a link between the community and the school system."

The post-vention program would emphasize dealing with suicide but would also focus on the possibilities of other major crises in the community such as a factory accident in which the parents or relatives of several children were injured, she said.

Besides working with the schools, the Crisis Center has also begun offering support groups for survivors of suicides to help them work through the grief they face, Mertens said.

"The group is designed to be a support system for someone who has lost a loved one to suicide," she said. "It helps them work through some of the issues they face."

Currently two groups are meeting, with three to five people in each. They meet weekly for eight to 10 weeks, Mertens said.

Although she said any death produces grief, the fact that suicide is a self-imposed death makes it a high-grief situation.

There are individual differences in the feelings produced by grief, but some common ones include anger, guilt and questioning, "Why did this happen?" Mertens said. A support group offers a place to share these feelings.

"It's a place where people feel safe to talk about the suicide," she said. "A group is small, otherwise it loses some of the personal aspect."

Mertens said there are two main problems survivors face. One is trying to come to terms with the death and put it in perspective, a task which she said can never be totally completed.

Publications bests budget, retains services

Jude Sunderbruch
Daily Iowan

In spite of budget cutbacks, the publications department of the UI Office of University Relations has been able to maintain the majority of its services.

Approximately $3,000 to $5,000 was cut from the publications budget this year, according to Joanne Fritz, UI director of relations. This was part of a $151,500 cut in the Office of University Relations budget or "about 11 percent over the year before," she noted.

The little-known publications department, located in the old Iowa City Public Library, 307 E. College St., is responsible for publishing several newsletters and many of the UI's brochures.

These include FYI, a staff and faculty newsletter, Spectator, a free alumni newsletter, and Parent Times, a UI parents' newsletter, according to Greg Johnson, a publications staff member.

The head of the publications department is Susan Kostick, managing editor and assistant director of university relations. She supervises 10 full-time professionals who work on the newsletters and the department's other projects.

The publications department also publishes Iowa's Resource, a directory of UI services for other government organizations and citizens of Iowa, and Facts, a brochure for visitors and for use at conferences.

The publications department is also assigned other responsibilities by the office. These include producing individual departmental brochures and some admissions materials, such as the UI Viewbook.

The budget for each job is split between the office, which provides the employee time and the cost of computer resources, and the contracting department, which pays the actual production cost.

In some cases, if a project is beyond the scope or budget of the publications department the job is either handled by the UI Printing Department or contracted to a free-lance publisher.

In the recent wave of budget cuts, the department took many different steps to reduce costs.

A dramatic savings occurred by switching the department to desktop publishing. Using this method of production saves a lot on typesetting costs. Each staff member has access to a Macintosh computer that is tied into a network, and the work is transferred to a hard disk where designers can access and lay out the publication using giant computer screens and advanced Macintosh computers.

The finished publication is transferred to disk and is then printed by either a contractor or the Printing Department, depending on the publication.

Efforts are being made to comply with special postal regulations that will reduce postage rates, according to Laurie Finn, editor of the Spectator.

These efforts are complicated by a lack of nine-digit zip codes in the UI mailing list and regulations concerning frequency of publications.

Charles Drum, editor of FYI, saw his budget reduced from $30,000 last year to $17,911. To compensate, "emeritus professors and friends of the university" who used to receive the newsletter no longer do, he said.

FORUM

U.N. to hold environmental conference

Kim Dykshorn
Daily Iowan

Protecting the atmosphere, oceans and land resources, managing hazardous wastes, and improving the quality of life and human health are among the issues to be discussed Sept 22-25 at the UNA-USA Environment and Development Conference in Des Moines.

This two-part conference, organized by the United Nations Associations of the United States, Canada and Iowa, begins Sunday with the Midwest Public Hearing on Environment and Development followed by an International Forum on World Environmental Law and Institutions Monday through Wednesday.

At the public hearing, regional speakers representing over 30 grassroots organizations will present testimony in their area of expertise. Rather than simply stating environmental problems, the speakers will emphasize innovative approaches, actions, solutions or policies on three topics:

"It is an opportunity for people at the state and local level to be involved in the issues."

Elizabeth Rawlings, UNA member energy, sustainable agriculture and ways to strengthen institutions to implement goals for development.

According to Dorothy Paul, executive director of the Iowa division of the UNA, the purpose of the hearing is to discuss "innovative solutions of what needs to be done, how to do it and what institutions can do to get it done."

Five UI professors are scheduled to speak at the public hearing. R. Rajagopal, professor of geography, and Eleanor Anstey, professor of social work, will testify on sustainable agriculture; Jerald Schnoor, professor of civil and environmental engineering, and William Klink, professor of physics and astronomy, will testify on energy; and Burns Weston, Bessie Dutton Murray Professor of Law, will deliver the welcome.

Keynote speakers at the hearing are Albert Gore, Democratic U.S. senator from Tennessee, and Maurice Strong, secretary-general of the 1992 U.N. Conference on Environment and Development. Gore will present the noontime address, "The Environmental Challenge," and Strong will give the closing remarks.

Elizabeth Rawlings, a member of the Iowa Division of the UNA since May, expects the hearing to generate a lot of interest in environmental issues regionally and statewide.

"This conference gives us the chance to learn from experts. It is an opportunity for people at the state and local level to be involved in the issues and raise their concerns," she said.

The hearing is a kickoff to the three-day international forum Monday through Wednesday. This invitation-only event will feature 25 environmental and public policy experts from around the world. The experts will discuss the issues to be addressed at the U.N. "Earth Summit" conference in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, in June 1992.

The forum is the first international forum to be held in the United States, according to Paul. She said Des Moines was chosen as the site for the conference because "there's a mindset that everything happens on the East and West coasts. There are a lot of high-level global experts in the Midwest."

Paul is predicting about 250 to attend the hearing, which will be held in the House chambers at the State Capitol on Sunday from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. It is free and open to the public.

Iowa City remembers America's POWs, MIAs

By Heidi Sunderbruch
Daily Iowan

A ceremony was held Thursday to honor America's prisoners of war and those missing in action at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Iowa City.

The ceremony began with a prelude and a flag procession provided by the Arnold Air Society, whose members are from the UI Air Force ROTC unit. The national anthem was sung to the 65 people gathered for the event in the VA chapel. After the anthem, the Pledge of Allegiance was recited by the audience.

The audience included former POWs, hospital staff members and others. Some former POWs worearrison caps, and one wore his Combat Infantryman Badge on his hat. In addition, several members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the American Legion were present.

Gerald Williams, associate director, gave the opening welcome to the somber audience. He spoke of the MIAs still in Southeast Asia and of the inhumane treatment

POWs suffer. Williams urged families to pull together and help their former POWs "fight the memory and scars of their imprisonment."

Maria Gaines, a hospital employee and daughter of former POW George Spraggins, spoke about her father. She noted that she never really knew her father was a prisoner of war, only that he was "a career Army officer... a good provider." Spraggins is buried in Arlington National Cemetery.

Gaines recounted her conversations with other POWs at the hospital and found that one had been in the same German POW camp as her father at the same time. The camp on the North Sea was liberated by Soviet forces, she said. She urged POWs to "share your experience" with their families.

The ceremony continued with a presentation of Iowa MIAs, a benediction and the "Battle Hymn of the Republic." Refreshments were served in the lobby of the center by members of the Marion American Legion Auxiliary, provided courtesy of the Voluntary Service.

Construction crews clear the way for the Hoover Nature Trail. A ceremony and events are planned for Saturday to commemorate completion of the trail.

'Trail Blazer Rally' planned to celebrate nature path

By Larry Offner
Daily Iowan

A "Trail Blazer Rally" to celebrate the completion of the Hoover Nature Trail link from West Branch to Oasis will be held Saturday, Sept. 21. The all-day rally will be held in West Branch and along the trail, beginning with a shelter-raising downtown at 8 a.m., said HNT Director Gwenne Hayes.

A "bird walk," which involves listening for bird calls along the trail, will be conducted by the Johnson County Bird Song Project and will also begin at 8 a.m., said Hayes. "Trail Adventures," which points out sites along the trail, will follow at 9 a.m. Afternoon events include a Raptor Center display, live snakes, a birdhouse contest, hay rides and bus tours to a prairie and a quarry.

At 4 p.m., Gov. Branstad will present three Community Economic Preparedness Awards to West Branch and will preside over a post-setting ceremony along the trail. A celebrity box lunch auction will immediately follow in which individuals will bid to have dinner with Iowa celebrities.

"This is the first trailblazer rally," said Hayes. "We hope to have one for each section of the trail we open."

She added that evening activities will include a street dance, a braat and burger fry, and a night hike at 7 p.m.

Job Service open house introduces new computer equipment, services

By Heidi Pederson
Daily Iowan

Job Service of Iowa's newest employment search material and equipment was on display at an open house Thursday.

The event, said Office Manager Jim Bullington, was held to showcase the local chapter's recent acquisitions, which will allow the office to better serve the community.

"We have a number of new services to offer, including a couple of new computer programs," he said. "We now have a series of PCs that allow people to do their own resumes, and there's also a self-counseling program, which takes them through a series of questions to see which kind of work might be best suited to them."

The new programs will allow people to take typing and other tests on the computer, making it more convenient for everyone, he added.

The local office aids in the job searches of about 10,000 people each year, offering information on jobs available in Iowa as well as out of state, Bullington said.

"We try to match those applications we have on file with the requirements of the jobs we learn are available, and then we also post those job notices," he said.

The office encourages everyone to search for work on their own in addition to registering with Job Service, he added.

it's a good deal. If you want it to drive, you may have to put some money into it."

The auction, which begins at 10 a.m., will offer 74 different cars ranging in value. However, despite the value of the car, all vehicles will have a minimum bid of $25 at $5 increments and only cash will be accepted.

Nominations Sought for Director of Opportunity at Iowa
Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs

The Office of Academic Affairs seeks candidates for the half-time position of Director of Opportunity at Iowa/Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs. The search committee wishes to solicit nominations from faculty, staff, and students, according to Dean Leodis Davis, Associate Vice President of Academic Affairs, and chairperson.

The successful candidate should be a tenure-track faculty member currently on the faculty of The University of Iowa. The candidate must have demonstrated experience in minority recruitment and admissions either at the departmental or university level.

Davis says the committee will begin screening candidates immediately and applications will be accepted until the position is filled. Applications and nominations should be sent to Leodis Davis, Chairperson Search Committee, Academic Affairs, 111 Jessup Hall.

Block parents honored for providing safe places

The school district's 600 volunteers are honored today.

By William Pepper
Daily Iowan

Students in Iowa City can walk to and from school today in safety, even though approximately 1,200 eyes will be watching them.

Today is the second annual Districtwide Block Parent Day in the Iowa City Community School District. Block parents are volunteers who keep black and gold signs in their windows to let schoolchildren know they have a safe place to stop if they get into any trouble going to and from school.

To honor these volunteers, each of the 600 block parents are asked to display three balloons tied to their doors or mailboxes to acknowledge that their homes are block parent homes. In addition, the volunteers are asked to stand near their doors while children walk past their homes going to and from school.

Myrna Arner, head of the Block Parents program, said the parents make themselves available to young people if the children have an emergency or need assistance. She said stray dogs or "stranger danger" are two instances in which children may be frightened and need help.

If a child does report a problem to a block parent, the volunteer calls the police, the child's parents or the principal of the child's school. The reported incident is verified, and it is decided whether action should be taken. In cases where the principal is called, he may confer with the district office to decide if the school should take any further action.

Arner said the program is about 10 years old and has been quite effective. "We had 10 safety alerts last year. Some children go home to their own parents, who may be block parents, and report problems, so probably seven of those were reported to other volunteer block parents."

She said the volunteers take their task seriously and are careful to watch for any suspicious activity in their neighborhoods.

Arner added one of her favorite stories was a case two years ago when a volunteer saw a suspicious-looking vehicle in the neighborhood and reported it to the police, only to discover it was an unmarked police car.

Even though a mistake was made, Arner said this showed genuine interest in keeping children safe.

The 1,800 balloons donated for the celebration today came from Ground Round Restaurant & Lounge, which is the official Safety Patrol sponsor. Safety Patrol is the parent group of Block Parents.

According to Don Ryan, manager of the Ground Round, "We try to get involved as much as we can in sponsorships, youth programs and things like that."

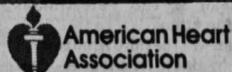

"Some children go home to their own parents, who may be block parents, and report problems, so probably seven of those were reported to other volunteer block parents."

Myrna Arner, parent

He said the Ground Round will also sponsor a Safety Patrol function in January.

Arner said those interested in becoming block parents should see their block representative of the Parent Teacher Organization at a school in their area. The block representatives take applicants' names and conduct an informal background search, usually entailing asking someone known to the volunteer to verify the volunteer's reliability.

BSU works for awareness of African-American issues

Wendy Alesch
Daily Iowan

The Black Student Union is probably most well-known for its publicized activities like organizing a boycott of classes on Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday or bringing Spike Lee to the university.

But BSU is an "umbrella" organization that serves all African-American students and works with other student organizations on campus.

The main goal of BSU is to increase awareness of black economic, political and social issues on this campus and worldwide. BSU does so by supporting and organizing events to promote education for African-American students as well as all other UI students.

Another goal of BSU is to provide an atmosphere where the small population of UI African-Americans — 782 students out of 28,045 — can feel a sense of community.

"BSU is designed to be a support mechanism," said Royce Kinniebrew, current president of BSU. "It is a place where we can feel comfortable and feel the atmosphere. BSU deals with the aspects of everyday life of the students."

The philosophy of the membership of BSU is that every African-American student is a member of the organization on arrival to the UI, but not an active member. BSU has around 100 active members.

"BSU opens doors for students they might not have seen," Kinniebrew said.

BSU has been an active organization on the UI campus for over 20 years. Its office is located in the Student Activities Center in the Union. It holds meetings every week and publishes a paper once a semester titled The New Challenge. BSU also sponsors social and educational activities and promotes awareness of any campus activity they feel is beneficial for students.

Gregory Kelly, a current member and past president of BSU, said after coming from urban Chicago to rural Iowa there were definite adjustments to make.

"BSU serves as a meeting place for black students," Kelly said. "We serve as an outlet for expression. We do things for the black student body that the community doesn't do."

Kelly refers to BSU's showing all of the Spike Lee movies because they weren't shown in Iowa City theaters.

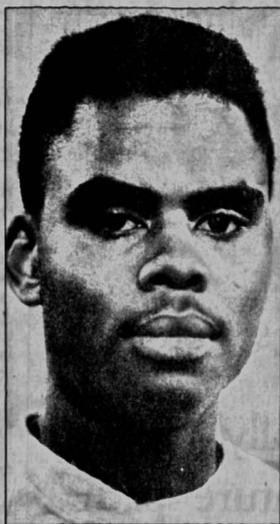

"BSU is a place where our voices can be heard," Kelly said. "Where the student body can raise issues related to diversity."

Diane Hightower, a coordinator of campus programs, said BSU helps to bridge the gap between African-American students, faculty and the Iowa City community.

"It is an essential, vital organization focused on students' embracing faculty and community in their program efforts," Hightower said.

That idea behind BSU's activities is no exception this year because its goals for the 1991-92 school year involve changes only the faculty and administration can implement.

Kinniebrew said BSU would like to see a chairperson appointed to African-American studies who can do the job. Former Chairman Darwin Turner died last year, and a search for a new director is continuing.

The other goal BSU would like to see accomplished would be for UI President Hunter Rawlings to make a full-day holiday out of Martin Luther King's memorial day.

Black athletes discuss stereotypes, misconceptions about sports, race

Heidi Pederson
Daily Iowan

The stereotyping some African-American UI students said they have experienced doesn't seem to happen only to the average black student. Some black UI athletes said they have had to deal with the same problem, possibly to more of a degree because they are athletes.

"I've been asked several times by white students what sport I play, and it's not because of the way I'm built. I think a lot of people think that if you're a black student here, you must be here for athletics," said Gary Falls, a senior track team member.

"But that's not necessarily bad," he added. "Something like over half the black people here are on scholarships. If I was white, I'd probably think the same thing."

D'Juan Strozier, also a senior on the track team, said black athletes at the UI must try to adjust to a predominantly white community in addition to fighting the stereotypes of athletes in general.

"Most black athletes here come from mostly black communities, and then we come here where we're surrounded by white people, and it's a change," said Strozier, who is from Atlanta, Ga. "It's a learning experience. We're put into a situation where we're supposed to know what to do, and we don't always."

Although both said they have experienced such stereotyping, neither Falls nor Strozier think it is a big problem at the UI.

UI football player Danan Hughes, a junior, agreed.

"I haven't really run into any problems at all because of my race," he said. "I don't think I face any more stereotypes than I do because I'm an athlete."

Falls said probably the biggest stereotype facing black athletes is the misconception that they are not as able academically as white students.

"Some people are upset because (black athletes) have scholarships, because they think, 'He's not as smart as I am,'" he said. "They don't understand that a lot of the good athletes here come from the inner city and don't come from good schools so they might not be as good academically."

Senior LaTonya Tate, a point guard on the women's basketball team, said a lot of students hold such a perception.

"As far as education is concerned, people think we're just athletes, here to play ball only," she said. "They'll see me in a class with sweats on and say, 'Oh, she's a black athlete,' and think you're just there to fill up space."

Football coach Hayden Fry said the idea that black athletes aren't as academically able as white students is definitely a misconception.

"All of our entrance requirements for athletes are set by the NCAA," he said. "In a way (black athletes) have a harder time getting into college because all of our athletes have triple standards to meet, and these standards don't differentiate between skin color, religious affiliation or anything like that."

toward peace across the board," said Baker when asked at a joint news conference with the king whether the United States would go ahead if the Palestinians refused to attend.

Jordan was the third Arab country visited by Baker on a trip designed to firm up arrangements for the peace conference the United States hopes to convene in October. He also met with three Palestinians in Jerusalem Monday immediately after conferring with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

The secretary of state plans to fly to Damascus, Syria, today for a second meeting with President Hafez Assad. He met Tuesday with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

At each stop Baker has circulated letters in which the United States lays out positions on a range of issues related to the peace process. For example, the letter to the Israelis said they would not be required to sit at the negotiating table with any delegation of which they disapproved.

That proviso effectively recognized an Israeli claim to veto power over any Palestinian delegation that contained members of the Palestine Liberation Organization or residents of East Jerusalem.

On the other hand, the letter to Assad reaffirmed U.S. support of Syria's demand for return of the Golan Heights, occupied by Israel since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

In response to a report that the Palestinians he met with in Jerusalem had refused under PLO pressure to meet with him again in Amman, Baker said, "I would very much like to meet with the Palestinians we've been meeting with in Jerusalem, here or anywhere else."

The Palestine National Council is scheduled to meet in Algiers on Monday, and there are conflicting reports as to whether the Palestinian legislative body will endorse sending representatives to the peace conference as part of a Jordanian delegation.

Baker and Hussein appeared determined to send a strong message to the PLO not to torpedo efforts to bring Palestinians to the table.

"I hope they all realize time is short," said Hussein. "The opportunity may not come again, ever."

Hussein said the alternative to a peace conference "is disaster."

Baker used similar language. "I believe this is the best opportunity that has presented itself in a long, long time," he said. "If the opportunity is missed, in my opinion, the Palestinians have the most to lose because they also have the most to gain."

Prospects for convening the peace conference, to be co-sponsored by the Soviet Union, remain clouded by a range of issues.

Not only is Palestinian participation a question. There also is the dispute between the United States and Israel over housing loan guarantees, as well as differing interpretations of the meaning of United Nations resolutions calling for the return of all occupied territories.

Arab governments and the United States view the resolutions as requiring Israel to give up the Golan Heights, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Israel regards the territory as having been annexed in war. The Israelis also have adamantly refused to negotiate any return of East Jerusalem, site of Jewish, Christian and Muslim holy places.

there was "no increased threat" that sparked their move.

The antimissile weapons were requested by King Fahd because the Saudis "feel threatened" by Iraq since Baghdad "continues to try to sidestep the U.N. Security Council resolutions on destroying their ballistic missiles," Williams said.

He said Iraq "has a long way to go" to meet U.N. demands for disclosing the full range of its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons programs, as well as its ballistic missiles.

In the gulf area, meanwhile, a team of 13 U.N. inspectors planned to go to Iraq today to carry on the search for biological weapons, and a group of nuclear experts was ready to go over the weekend, officials said. Members of the U.N. Special Committee declined to give any details of the trips.

Thomas said that affirmative action is a sensitive issue now, and "affirmative processes shouldn't be construed as negative."

In the College of Law, African-

"The Mac price is great for students through Weeg."

Susan Reece is a U of I student in the MAT Science Program

"As an undergrad, I was a chemistry major who spent countless all nighters in front of my own Macintosh® working on lab reports. I was grateful to have my Mac at my house instead of having to go to the computer lab. I write every paper, no matter how short, on the Mac!

I've never felt the need to use another computer because the Mac can do it all. Once you know how to work one Mac, you can work them all — the same goes with the Mac software. I also love using the mouse, you don't have to memorize function keys just point and click.

I chose Macintosh because I was familiar with it, the price is great for students through Weeg, and I knew it was the most versatile. There is also tremendous opportunity for expansion."

Nagle vows to keep Iowa road projects included in federal transportation bill

The Iowa representative promises to work for retaining projects on the Avenue of Saints, and Highways 63 and 20.

the Surface Transportation Reauthorization Act Wednesday because of opposition to a proposed 5-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax increase.

Rep. Jim Nussle, R-Iowa, praised the House Democratic leaders' decision to reconsider the tax.

"The House leadership has finally gotten the message that the American people cannot afford another increase in the gas tax," Nussle said. "It's clearly time for a new bill that can begin to improve our infrastructure, and I intend to push hard for Iowa projects like the Avenue of Saints that are clearly critical to our state and national transportation system."

The House bill included specific authorizations for the Avenue of Saints, and U.S. Highways 63 and 20.

President Bush has said repeatedly that he would veto any transportation bill containing such a tax increase.

The House measure originally was pegged at $153.5 billion, significantly more expensive than the $123 billion authorization voted earlier by the Senate, which did not call for a tax increase.

Nagle said it's likely the committee will start removing projects from the bill.

"My goal will be to see that our projects remain in the bill, and I intend to work to convince my colleagues to see that they do," he said.

Nagle said the proposed gas tax never ensured construction of the Iowa projects so Wednesday's action is not necessarily a serious setback.

Associated Press

DES MOINES—Rep. Dave Nagle, D-Iowa, says he will try to persuade congressional leaders to keep the Avenue of Saints and other Iowa projects in a federal transportation bill.

"I intend to keep working to ensure that our projects are in the final House bill — whatever its form — and to ensure that the bill includes specific authorization and funds for our projects," Nagle said.

strengthen our efforts," Vice President for University Relations Ann Rhodes said in a release outlining the cuts.

The report's recommendation to review the design section of the art and art history department "shocked" Director Wallace Tomasi.

"Pedagogically and philosophically, design is the core of the art program. It is impossible for me to conceive not having a design program," he said, adding Basic Design is a required course for all majors.

Last year students in the art department held protests when a hiring freeze prevented the replacement of a third design instructor.

"The dean had to put together funds for a third designer," Tomasi said. "Losing design will cut the undergraduate program in half — no one would come to an art school with no design program."

The proposal to "privatize" Finkbine Golf Course does not have Associate Athletic Director Larry Bruner concerned.

"I see no indication of selling anything — privatizing might mean hiring someone to come in and run the golf course," Bruner said.

"Either way it will have zero impact on the general university budget because both Finkbine and the Hawk Shop are part of the athletic budget," he said.

UI study refines laser use to treat eye disorders

Research continues to refine the use of the laser in the treatment of macular degeneration, the most common cause of severe vision loss in Americans over age 55, according to a UI College of Medicine report.

The researchers say that laser therapy can be used to successfully destroy abnormal blood vessels that have grown in the fovea, the part of the retina that allows people to see small details.

WESTERN HOSTAGES

Kidnappers demand exchange of prisoners

Mohammed Salam
Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A pro-Iranian kidnapping faction said Thursday it would not free any Western hostages until Israel releases more Lebanese prisoners.

"The Revolutionary Justice Organization is sorry to freeze the hope of an imminent release of a few hostages until the picture becomes clearer about the Israeli position and the United Nations movement," said a communiqué from the group.

The handwritten Arabic-language communiqué was accompanied by a picture of American hostage Joseph Cicippio, 61, of Norristown, Pa., who is held by the group along with British hostage Jack Mann.

The 32-line statement dashed hopes raised this week that Mann, 77, a former World War II pilot, was about to go free.

Also Thursday, Shiite Muslim leaders seeking a hostage-for-prisoner swap said two German captives may be excluded from the proposed deal, in an attempt to bargain for the release of Lebanese terrorists jailed in Germany.

The Shiites, who spoke on condition of anonymity, also said two of the 11 Western hostages — an Italian and a Briton — had died in captivity. Numerous previous reports have suggested British writer Alec Collett and Italian businessman Alberto Molinari died years ago.

The two influential Shiite leaders, who have close ties to militant Hezbollah factions, gave no details on how the men died. Hezbollah, or Party of God, is believed to be the umbrella group for the pro-Iranian factions holding the hostages.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar has been seeking a deal that involves trading the hostages and five missing Israeli servicemen in Lebanon, or information on their fate, for about 300 Arab prisoners still held by Israel.

Earlier this month, Israel released 51 prisoners and the bodies of nine Arab guerrillas after getting evidence one of the servicemen was dead. Israel has also received the body of another serviceman.

But the statement Thursday by the Revolutionary Justice Organization said that Israel had agreed in negotiations to release 80 Arab prisoners.

"We were surprised with the release of 51 detainees and nine martyrs," the statement said.

"We waited for some time for the number to be completed. But unfortunately agreements and pledges do not mean anything to (the Israelis)," the statement added.

"It appears that the issue is likely to be complicated anew unless 20 more detainees are released (by Israel) according to the agreement, and thus we are freed from our obligations," the statement said.

"We shall make no move until the United Nations assumes its responsibility as sponsor of the negotiations."

Shiite leaders have said previously that no more hostages would be released until Israel takes steps to free Sheik Abdul-Karim Obeid, 39, a Muslim cleric taken by Israel commandos in July 1989.

The communiqué said it had insisted on Obeid's release.

Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens indicated Wednesday that Israel would not rush to release Obeid, who is linked to Hezbollah.

The Americans held in Lebanon are journalist Terry Anderson and educators Thomas Sutherland, Alann Steen, Jesse Turner and Cicippio.

Russian lawmakers question Yeltsin's illness

Bryan Brumley
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin was described as "slightly ill" from an unspecified heart ailment Thursday, and he canceled his engagements for a second straight day.

The acting chairman of the Russian legislature, Ruslan Khasbulatov, told lawmakers the 60-year-old Yeltsin could not speak to the opening session of the legislature as planned because his doctors told him to rest for a day.

He said Yeltsin was not seriously ill and still planned to visit Azerbaijan this weekend.

There was no public talk that Yeltsin might be seriously ill and speculation grew in the legislature that he might be feigning illness to avoid a debate with lawmakers angry at this transfer of powers to the executive branch.

Yeltsin issued a series of sweeping decrees after the failed Aug. 18-21 coup, asserting his authority over many aspects of the central Soviet government and bypassing legislative review. Many lawmakers have questioned their legality.

"Many legislators regard the absence of Boris Nikolayevich (Yeltsin) at the session as an attempt to avoid open confrontation with the Parliament," the Tass news agency quoted lawmaker Vladimir Lisin as saying.

"He would have to answer some unpleasant questions about his decrees," said Lisin, chairman of the subcommittee on humanitarian issues.

If Yeltsin did turn out to be seriously ill, the incapacitation of the most popular politician in the Soviet Union — and one of its most powerful — would destabilize an already unsettled situation.

Yeltsin has supported the groups pushing for more liberalization and democracy, and his loss could be a boon to factions that have opposed reform.

Under Russian law, Vice President Alexander Rutskoi would replace Yeltsin if he became disabled, either until Yeltsin could resume office or until his five-year presidential term expires in June 1996.

Because Yeltsin is thought not to be very ill, there has been no public discussion about this possibility.

Besides missing his scheduled state-of-the-republic speech to the Russian Supreme Soviet legislature as it began its fall session, Yeltsin also canceled a meeting with U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady.

Soviet news media and spokesmen for Yeltsin said Wednesday that the Russian president had suffered "a minor heart attack." But Yeltsin's press secretary, Pavel Voschanov, said the burly politician complained only of chest pains and went home from work early to rest.

In Russian, the phrase "heart attack" has a less specific medical meaning than in English. It is commonly used to refer to a range of ailments in the chest, from minor pains to heart failure.

Khasbulatov gave no further details about the nature of Yeltsin's illness beyond saying doctors ordered him to stay in bed for one day.

He said Yeltsin would fly today with Kazakhstan President Nur-sultan Nazarbayev to Nagorno-Karabakh, an enclave of mostly Christian Armenians within the mostly Muslim republic of Azerbaijan. The two leaders are trying to mediate a peaceful settlement of the region's ethnic fighting.

He has no known health problems, although he disappeared briefly from public view after a car accident last September in which officials said he suffered a bruised hip and bumped his head.

Bomb threat, attempted hijacking of airplane result in arrest of 2

Habib Lajibi
Associated Press

TUNIS, Tunisia — An unarmed Tunisian who falsely claimed he had a bomb commandeered an Alitalia jetliner with 137 people aboard Thursday but was arrested with a suspected accomplice when the plane landed, the government said. There were no injuries.

About half an hour into the Rome-to-Tunis flight, the hijacker seized a flight attendant and took her to the cockpit, where he threatened to blow up the plane unless it flew to Algeria, said Tunisian Interior Minister Abdallah Kallal.

The airport in Algiers refused landing permission, and the pilot convinced the hijacker to allow him to continue on to Tunis, Alitalia said.

When the plane landed, it taxied to a remote part of the airport and was surrounded by security forces. The hijacker then agreed to allow all passengers to leave the aircraft but held a flight attendant as hostage, according to security officials.

Police claimed they wanted to check whether all the passengers had left the plane, and once aboard, swiftly overpowered the hijacker, officials said.

Kallal identified the Tunisian as Sadok Hassen Bouchenak, 26. A second man described by police as an accomplice was not identified.

The minister provided no information about Bouchenak's motives. He said Bouchenak's friend had spent the previous night with him at a Rome hotel.

The hijacker carried a black bag over his shoulder and claimed the bomb was inside, according to a statement from Alitalia. "Only on the ground, after the intervention of the Tunisian police, was it revealed that there was no bomb," it said.

A passenger said a Palestine Liberation Organization representative on board took part in negotiations to free passengers, the Italian news agency ANSA reported.

The PLO identified the man as its Rome delegate, Nemer Hammad, and said he was traveling to Tunis to prepare for a meeting of the PLO, which has its headquarters in the North African city.

Enzo Picchione, a spokesman for the air traffic controllers' office, said pilot Nunzio Castelli contacted Rome by radio only once after the plan was hijacked and said he was being threatened.

STATE BUDGET CRISIS

Go where the money is, not after needed services

State leaders tell us we need to make further cuts in state services. And some prominent Republicans, with their eyes on the precious road fund, are suggesting that another sales tax increase might not be such a bad idea.

We need to look at other alternatives. First, we should put a cap on the deduction of federal income taxes from an individual's state income tax obligation. It would be a progressive and fair way of launching the attack on the state's budget crisis.

Judging by comments out of Des Moines, state leaders agree that the budget mess is bad and may be getting worse. Spending cuts already have hit services here at the UI, and more cuts are likely.

The sales tax does generate revenue. Increasing the tax by one penny per dollar would raise an additional $273.3 million per year, according to estimates by the Legislative Fiscal Bureau.

But it is the wrong approach. The sales tax is regressive, falling more heavily on those who spend a higher percentage of their income. There is a better way.

The sales tax is regressive, falling more heavily on those who spend a higher percentage of their income. There is a better way.

Right now taxpayers can deduct their federal income tax payments when they are calculating their state income tax obligation. This obviously benefits the wealthy, who pay more in federal income taxes.

The Legislative Fiscal Bureau estimates that complete elimination of federal deductibility would have raised about $377.7 million in new state revenues in fiscal year 1991-1992.

But if Iowans were allowed to deduct up to $10,000 in federal income taxes, it would still raise $114.7 million in new state revenues. A $20,000 cap on federal deductibility would still increase state revenues by about $78 million, of which $77.9 million would be paid by those with adjusted gross incomes in excess of $100,000.

With the $20,000 cap, taxes on 98 percent of the returns filed by Iowans would not go up one dime.

A cap on federal deductibility set at $20,000 would affect less than 29,400 Iowa tax returns of the 1.57 million returns filed. In other words, a tax increase would show up on about one of every 50 tax returns filed. Specifically, it would show up on those returns filed by taxpayers with adjusted gross incomes in excess of $100,000.

It would affect those who are in the best position to make an additional contribution to this state's investment in education, human resources and services — in short, an investment in this state's future.

This proposal would not solve all the state's budget problems. But it would be a better start than hacking away at libraries and care providers for the mentally ill and developmentally disabled.

The Democratic House passed such a proposal during the 1991 legislative session, but it died in the more conservative Senate. Gov. Terry Branstad, of course, has vowed opposition to tax increases.

What the governor really is saying is that he would prefer to see cutbacks in public services and education rather than ask the very wealthiest people of this state to take up a slightly larger share of the burden of the cost of government.

Gov. Branstad might reject this way of putting it. But the fact is that state government services are taking cuts. For students, this means shorter library hours, fewer services, less money for graduate students, larger class sizes and overburdened professors.

These cuts mean that we will continue to tolerate scandalously low pay for those people who provide services for the developmentally disabled and mentally ill. These cuts mean that we will not carry through with important environmental programs, nor will we make progress in reducing class sizes at the elementary level of our public education system.

Branstad's position on state taxes also means an increasingly heavy load on local property taxes.

Government is about making choices. Perhaps cuts should be made in the road fund. Perhaps teachers will have to wait longer to get their pay increases.

But in a time when we are asking people to make sacrifices, we ought not forget to ask those who have the most to do their part as well.

MITCH MARTIN

Visions of Solid Gold Dancers in his head

Confirmation hearings make me squirm. Well, except for the Bork hearings, watching that man being cooked in his own pompous juices was good for the soul. But this latest barrage of hearings, with Judge Thomas trying out for an associate part in the Supreme Court and Robert Gates as the CIA director-to-be, has been just awful. C-Span and CNN have been doing for confirmation coverage what Geraldo Rivera did for the legend of Al Capone's safe.

It's funny because I find myself feeling sorry for both nominees even though I think I'll be sorry when they're confirmed. Robert Gates, especially. With his integral position in the CIA, he was either aware that the CIA was transferring arms to Iran or he was comatose for a good year and a half. (Consciousness was optional in the Reagan administration.) And Clarence Thomas seems like the kind of guy you'd want to play tennis with. Unfortunately, he's probably spent the last month practicing to be the kind of guy you'd play tennis with. It would be nice if both sides would have created a non-partisan atmosphere so that we could know a little bit more about the man that is going to be a Supreme Court justice for the next 40 or 50 years.

We are finding out nothing about these people as they are being put under the microscope. I especially dislike Joe Biden's microscope. When the man whose law school class voted him Most Likely to Plagiarize starts telling someone else that he's being disingenuous, it drives me batty. Yes, Clarence Thomas is fudging. I even disagree with many of the views that he's hiding. But both sides are fudging. The Judiciary Committee is pretending like they don't have a political agenda, and Thomas is acting like he wasn't a political appointment. Sure, Thomas has an opinion on abortion. Who this side of Vanna White doesn't? But he'd be crazy to breathe a word of it.

It's just that my gut instinct tells me that no one should have every stupid thing he's ever said or done in his whole life drugged up and poured over him on national television.

It's making me have those awful nomination nightmares again. Every time I go to sleep, I end up the target of a Senate Judiciary Committee in dreamland without so much as one of those neat little congressional water pitchers by my side.

The chairman: "Judge Martin, thank you for your opening comments. And let me just say, the story of a man rising from the pits of male-pattern baldness to the highest court in the land through single-strand hair placement has moved us all. So, I don't want you to take offense. What is your position regarding natural law?"

Me: "I sincerely believe senator, and I have the sort of sincerity ripping through my veins right now that has allowed Oliver North to get away with constitutional murder and then make five-figure speeches from one end of the lecture circuit to the other for basically usurping the laws of this land in a well-ironed uniform, that natural law is something made up by lawyers so they can seem smarter than other people because they wanted to make a lot of money but were too squeamish, physically, to make it through med school."

Senator A: "Mr. Martin, is it true that over a course of two years you had a crush on three-fourths of the Solid Gold Dancers?"

Me: "They did this version of 'Rock Me Like a Hurricane' that made the hair on the back of my neck stand on end."

Senator A: "That's disgusting."
Me: "I felt very bad about it. I even told William Casey that I felt bad about it and gave him a letter to send to Marilyn Macoo. Of course, William engaged in the most convenient death since the dawn of recorded time before he could mail it."

Senator X: "Judge Martin, isn't it true that in the 10th grade you referred to a girl who happened to mousethe her hair as 'Rathead' for upwards of six months?"

Me: "I'd have to look that up."

Senator X: "Well, we have an affidavit from her psychiatrist at Sunnyhill Mental Hospital for the Goofily Abused that says you did."

Me: "Senator, looking back at that particular episode, when I used the word 'Rathead' I meant it only as a part-time rodent scholar, really as an honorific name, and further more that was only rodent-calling in adjudication. Also, it was William Casey's idea."

Senator Why: "In 1983 the Chicago Bulls chose a guard with their No. 3 pick in the NBA draft. Your immediate response, according to your brother, was 'a guard? a freeing guard with the No. 3 pick? You take a big man with the No. 3 pick, not some North Carolina pip-squeak guard who can't shoot for sour apples.' Do you remember the name of that guard?"

Me: "Bill Bradley?"

Senator Why: "Michael Jordan."
Me: "..."

Senator UISA: "Judge Martin, in the fall of 1990 you were a columnist for The Daily Iowan. When commenting on local student protests of state budget cuts which adversely affected the quality of the UT's education, you seemed to pooch-pooch the effort in general, saying that the protesters were silly to hold a class walkout the same day most students skip class to get snoogered anyway. Don't you feel a little like a snob for saying that?"

Me: "Yes and no, senator. It was a dumb idea to have it on a Friday, and the walkout in general was from the Saddam Hussein School of Battle Tactics. Also, I did say that the current budget and the way it was being implemented was a crock."

"But I didn't clearly support the protests in principle and for that I am sorry because safeguarding the educational quality of this most-worthy institution is worth risking a little time. And a lot of people actually did show up for that rally, which means that some people may really care what happens to their university. And in that regard, they should be supported."

"Besides these few things, I haven't done anything wrong in my whole life. Heck, I still don't feel bad about the Solid Gold Dancers. They did this version of '99 Luftballons' once ..."

Mitch Martin's column appears Fridays on the Viewpoints Page.

RUSS BAILEY

GUEST OPINION: RICHARD MARCIANO

Serbian apprehension due to past atrocities

Amy Edmonds' letter to the editor ["Media consistently fail to recognize the rights of Serbs," Sept. 9] deserves further historical background.

It is understandable that Croatia's 600,000 ethnic Serbs, representing about 12 percent of Croatia's population, feel apprehensive about an independent Croatian state. Reports indicate that 75,000 Croatian Serbs have already streamed into Serbia and Hungary to escape the fighting. This is reminiscent of the state of anxiety and fear of Serbian refugees who swarmed into Serbia from Croatia in the weeks following the proclamation of the "Independent State of Croatia" on April 10, 1941, under the new leadership of its local Poglavnik (Führer), Ante Pavelic. The capitulation of Yugoslavia a week later was followed by Croatia's annexation of territories which did not correspond to its ethnic borders (Slavonia, Bosnia-Herzegovina and Srem). As a result, over 2 million Serbs came under its direct control.

When the balance sheet was drawn 4 years later, Yugoslavia's casualties amounted to 1,700,000 deaths, close to 11 percent of its population. The Fascist Ustasha (rebel) government of Pavelic succeeded in massacring approximately 750,000 Orthodox Serbs, 60,000 Jews (80 percent of all Yugoslav Jews) and 26,000 Gypsies. These frightful massacres were carried out in a racial and religious atmosphere worthy of the darkest times of the Crusades.

This was particularly visible in the systematic destruction of the Serbian clergy and Orthodox churches, carried out in the name of Christ women and children). At Adolf Eichmann's Jerusalem trial in 1961, witnesses and documents showed the extent of the Fascist Croatian government's cooperation.

Given these historical facts, Amy Edmonds' connection between the situation of today's Croatian Serbs and Jews under some Iraqi rule is tenuous. Perhaps a more striking

Getting the historical record straight is a necessary step to better understand the current situation in Yugoslavia. Various attempts were made after the war to dilute the essential details of Croatia's wartime past. In examining some of the more virulent literature aimed at downplaying this past, three main themes emerge:

■ Croatia has in the past been a bastion of Christendom against the Turks and is more "reliable" than its "Eastern" Serbian neighbor.

■ The war exactions of the Croatian fascists were over-exaggerated and mainly acts of retaliation against the atrocities committed by their Cetnik and Partisan opponents.

■ Most separatist Croats were more anti-communist than fascist.

These themes are now directly resurfacing in many international press reports.

At a time when old symbols are reappearing, it would serve Croatia well to speak out to its resident Serbs in an attempt to break the psychological barriers of the past by openly giving them assurances of protection in a democratic Croatia respectful of its minority constituents. Nothing indeed can be gained by failing to take into account these "past experiences," as Amy Edmonds rightfully points out in her media coverage remarks.

GATES HEARINGS

Fiers testifies 'only handful knew details of arms sale'

Ruth Sinai
Associated Press
WASHINGTON — Robert Gates, the CIA insider nominated to direct the agency, was portrayed Thursday as a man "sort of on the make" who knew the outlines — but distanced himself from the details — of Oliver North's secret program to supply the Nicaraguan rebels in the face of a congressional ban.

The third day of Gates' confirmation hearings before the Senate Intelligence Committee provided riveting insights into the shadows of CIA operations — and the mysteries that have persisted since the Iran-Contra scandal erupted in November 1986.

The lead witness was Alan Fiers, head of the CIA's Central American Task Force from 1984-86, who reopened a Pandora's box last summer by testifying that he had been one of a handful of CIA officials who knew about a bizarre program, directed by North in Ronald Reagan's White House, that diverted money from a covert sale of U.S. arms to Iran to support the Contras.

Fiers, who pleaded guilty to two misdemeanors for withholding information from Congress, said he informed two of his superiors — neither of them Gates — about the diversion, which came at a time when Congress had banned U.S. aid to the rebels.

At several of his nine meetings with Gates during 1986 before the scandal broke, Fiers said he discussed the aid being provided, with active White House encouragement, by a group of private American donors to the Contras. But he didn't tell Gates the Contras were getting other money from the diversion of weapons payments made by Iran, Fiers said.

"I have serious reason to doubt Bob Gates had extensive knowledge" of White House involvement with the Contras, Fiers said, noting that Gates had become deputy CIA director in April 1986 when the project was well under way.

"I think he got glimpses, snatches and insights into it, enough so he knew there was a problem, that there were shoals out there the agency should stay away from," Fiers added.

He described Gates as "very smart, very capable, sort of on the make," adding that people at the agency regarded him as "aloof."

John McMahon, Gates' predecessor as deputy CIA director, described him as "uniquely qualified" for the job of director. He said it was "quite probable" Gates was telling the truth when he said he didn't know about the diversion to the Contras by North, the former Marine lieutenant colonel who was Reagan's deputy national security adviser.

"We were in a 'you call, we haul' situation," McMahon said of the agency's role in aiding North's operations.

Gates, in two days of testimony earlier this week, told the 15 senators on the panel that he should have been more diligent in asking about the funding for the Contras and other details of the covert operation. He said he chose not to partly because he was leery of violating the congressional ban on CIA help for the Contras.

Gates said he can't recall many of the events asked about by the panel. But his contrition has made a favorable impression on the committee, with many members saying they would vote for his confirmation barring some explosive revelations from witnesses.

On Thursday, the committee released sworn statements from others that conflict with Gates' testimony about the extent of his knowledge in 1986 of the affair.

In one statement, former CIA lawyer David Doherty told Senate investigators that he handed Gates a draft copy of a politically embarrassing presidential document — relating to the Iranian arms sale — a day or two before Casey testified to Congress on Nov. 21, 1986.

Gates has testified that he knew nothing about the document at the time he was overseeing the preparation of Casey's testimony. The document, called a presidential finding, retroactively authorized the CIA's assistance in the November 1985 shipment of U.S. Hawk missiles from Israel to Iran.

Fiers, who has broken with former CIA colleagues to reveal what he knew about the affair, said that for "Five years I have waited for this opportunity to speak publicly."

"I have rehearsed this statement a thousand times," he said. The committee granted him immunity for his testimony.

Castro may testify on Noriega's behalf at trial

Richard Cole
Associated Press

MIAMI, Fla. — A deal in which Fidel Castro would testify by videotape for Manuel Noriega is close, a lawyer for a government witness in the former Panamanian leader's drug trial said Thursday.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys have previously raised the possibility of the Cuban president's testimony at Noriega's trial but did not provide details.

"It's definitely in the works," Sam Burstyn, attorney for former Noriega military aide Luis del Cid, told reporters.

Burstyn's client was on the stand Thursday tracing Noriega's rise to power. But the trial was abruptly adjourned until Monday after prosecutor Myles Malman's father suffered an apparent heart attack.

The prosecution says del Cid accompanied Noriega to a 1984 meeting in which Castro mediated a dispute between Noriega and Colombia's Medellin drug cartel.

Outside court, Burstyn confirmed his client was present at that meeting, and said prosecutors and defense attorneys were near a deal to travel to Cuba to obtain Castro's sworn statement on videotape.

U.S. attorney's office spokeswoman Diane Cossin said she could not comment on any potential witnesses.

The indictment claims Noriega and del Cid visited Castro in June or July 1984 after a drug lab in southern Panama's Darien province was accidentally raided by government troops. The cartel had paid $4 million or $5 million to protect the lab, and demanded compensation.

Castro negotiated a deal and Noriega paid back the protection money, as well as releasing everyone arrested in the raid, the government claims.

Castro has denied that role and said he would help Noriega's defense.

On the stand, del Cid, 47, detailed Noriega's rise through 1983, when he became Panama's supreme military commander and de facto ruler. Noriega coupled loyalty and intrigue to control virtually all Panamanian life — especially airports and customs, he said.

"Nothing came in through the airports of Panama that General Noriega did not know about," del Cid testified.

On Tuesday, del Cid — a lieutenant colonel who was one of the last commanders to surrender to U.S. troops after the December 1989 invasion of Panama — testified briefly that he delivered money from cocaine pilot Floyd Carlton to Noriega.

Under the February 1988 indictment against Noriega, del Cid had faced a maximum 70 years in prison.

After highly public negotiations with prosecutors, he pleaded guilty in December 1990 to one racketeering count. The U.S. attorney's office agreed to recommend no more than 10 years — and as little as three — when he comes up for sentencing after Noriega's trial.

At the time of his guilty plea, del Cid said that in November 1982 he personally gave Noriega $100,000 in cash from Carlton, who is expected to be the prosecution's star witness.

Carlton paid the money to protect the first Medellin cartel cocaine flight he made from Colombia to Panama, the government said.

In mid-1983, del Cid said, he received an envelope with $150,000 from Carlton and later picked up a cash-stuffed suitcase, both of which he delivered to Noriega.

Army sent to intimidate Croat forces

Tony Smith
Associated Press

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia — A huge column of Yugoslav army tanks, military vehicles and artillery thundered toward Croatia on Thursday in a show of strength apparently meant to intimidate the secessionist republic's forces.

The European Community, meanwhile, decided against dispatching an armed peacekeeping force to Yugoslavia. But the EC foreign ministers, meeting in the Netherlands, agreed to study the possibility of a later deployment.

In Croatia, scattered but violent outbursts of fighting marred a fragile cease-fire. The first violations of the truce — signed Tuesday by the leaders of the warring republics of Serbia and Croatia as well as the federal government — were reported only minutes after the cease-fire deadline on Wednesday.

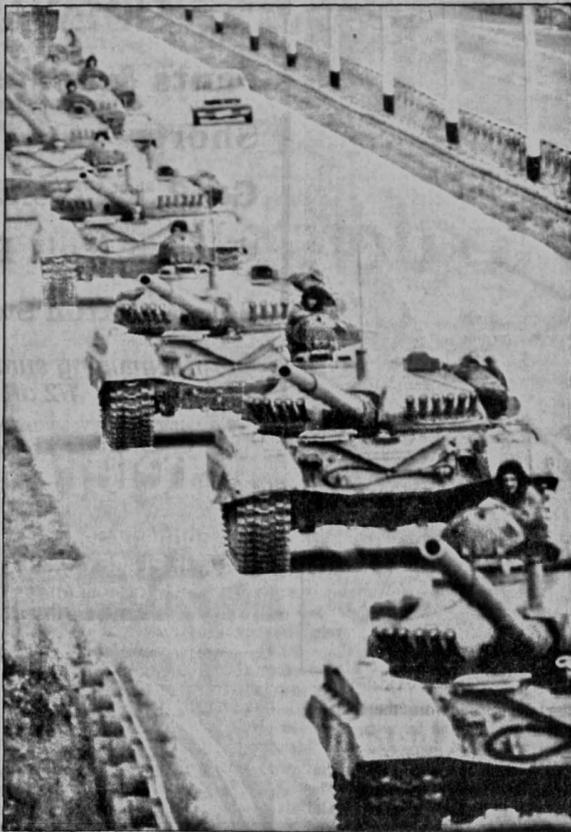

The continued fighting called into question just how much control the republics and military leaders have over their fighters.

Nearly 500 people have died and the republic's economy has been nearly wrecked in fighting that followed Croatia's June 25 declaration of independence.

The military convoy that rolled out of Belgrade Thursday was at least six miles long, made up of about 100 battle tanks — T-55s and M-84s — armored personnel carriers and trucks towing 155-mm howitzers.

Its destination was not known, but it was traveling on the main highway to Zagreb, the Croatian capital. When asked where they were going, one soldier sitting atop a Yugoslav-built M-84 tank replied, "We're not sure. Probably to beat the Croats."

Thousands of people turned out to cheer the convoy, tossing cigarettes and sandwiches to the soldiers. Some of the trucks in the convoy were apparently requisitioned from Serbian firms because they had license plates from central Serbian cities.

The mobilization appeared to be an attempt by the military to intimidate Croatian fighters, who have blockaded federal garrisons in several key towns in the republic since Saturday.

The Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported that Croatian forces continued to attack federal barracks in the coastal city of Sibenik. Heavy shelling by tanks and cannons were reported by Belgrade radio as the army fought to break the siege.

Belgrade radio reported shelling and shooting in and around Osijek, eastern Croatia's main city. Military sources confirmed that Croats occupied the army barracks there, but only after soldiers managed to move out most of their equipment.

Barracks in Vukovar and nearby Vinkovci, in eastern Croatia, were also under attack, Tanjug said, citing a military statement. And street fighting had broken out in Gospić, near the Adriatic.

The Croatian Defense Ministry reported that an army munitions warehouse in Ogulin, southeast of Rijeka, was set ablaze by federal jets to keep it out of Croatian hands, and up to 20 federal soldiers were killed in the resulting explosions.

There was no confirmation of that report. The air force denied any of its planes were in the area.

GUATEMALA EARTHQUAKE

Double temblor destroys homes, kills nineteen

Dozens were injured when homes collapsed, and the aftershocks are triggering landslides.

Alfonso Anzueto
Associated Press

GUATEMALA CITY — Two earthquakes sent houses made of adobe tumbling onto their occupants, killing at least 19 people and injuring dozens. U.S. helicopters were assisting in the rescue effort.

The double quakes in Guatemala Wednesday also caused landslides that blocked the Pan American Highway.

The first, measuring 5.8 on the Richter scale, shook much of the country before dawn Wednesday and lasted about 10 seconds. A second quake, measuring 4.0 on the Richter scale, struck in the early evening.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., said the initial quake was centered 25 miles southwest of Guatemala City. Local officials reported more than 12 strong aftershocks.

Reports of severe damage and deaths came from Pochuta, about 80 miles southwest of the capital in the department of Chimaltenango.

Associated Press

Residents of Pochuta, Guatemala, walk the streets of their damaged town following a quake measuring 5.8 on the Richter scale Wednesday.

At least 13 people died in Pochuta and more than 60 were injured, reported the Guatemalan National Emergency Commission.

Eddy Sanchez, a spokesman for the Guatemalan seismology institute, said many small villages around Pochuta were also badly damaged.

In a telephone interview, Emilia de los Santos, a resident of Pochuta, said about half the homes, made of adobe, were destroyed.

Military patrols with helicopters and planes searched the area.

About 30 seriously injured people were evacuated by helicopter from Pochuta to the neighboring town of Patulul, which has a better hospital, de los Santos said.

James Dickmayer, an official of the U.S. Embassy, said that two U.S. helicopters were assisting in the rescue.

The second quake was centered about 30 miles west of the capital in the department of Chimaltenango, Sanchez said.

Four other deaths were reported in the village of San Lucas Toliman, in the state of Solola, about 75 miles west of Guatemala City on the shores of Lake Atitlan, the National Emergency Commission reported.

In Las Canoas, near San Lucan Toliman, a house collapsed and killed Ana Tol, 40, and her 3-year-old son, Sergio.

Women's Soccer Club plays Saturday

The University of Iowa Women's Soccer club will meet the Des Moines Crusaders Saturday at 11 a.m. at lower Finkbine field. It is the club's fourth season and first under new coach Jen Barbour. "We have a lot of new players this season and everyone seems to be working well together," Barbour said.

NFL

Millard will have knee surgery

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Keith Millard, the Minnesota Vikings' All-Pro defensive tackle, decided to have knee surgery and will be lost for the rest of the season.

"The best thing for me right now is surgery so I can continue my career," said Millard, who tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee early last season.

Millard, speaking at a news conference on Thursday, said knee specialist Dr. Richard Steadman, who examined him in Vail, Colo., this week, agreed with the Vikings' team physician that surgery was needed. Steadman will perform the surgery sometime in the next week.

After complaining of swelling and soreness, Millard had his knee examined arthroscopically last week and the exam showed he had reinjured the ligament as well as tearing cartilage in the knee.

NFL hears Schlichter's reinstatement request

NEW YORK — The NFL heard Art Schlichter's request to be reinstated and commissioner Paul Tagliabue said he'll make a decision in the "near future."

Schlichter, the former NFL quarterback twice suspended by the league for gambling, met for several hours with Jay Moyer, the NFL's executive vice president and legal counsel, on Thursday. Also present was Schlichter's attorney Harold Freed.

The 31-year-old Schlichter is hoping to catch on with the Cleveland Browns. He told The Plain Dealer he thinks the Browns may "need a backup quarterback," and "I sure would be interested."

Freed was to present documentation from a Baltimore doctor that Schlichter's compulsive gambling addiction is due to a chemical imbalance in his brain for which he has been under treatment.

NFL modifies 'high five' rules

NEW YORK — NFL teams no longer will be penalized for high-fives in the end zone or tossing footballs into the seats, but it'll still cost a team 5 yards if players stop to dance after touchdowns.

Throwing a football into the stands still will result in a $1,000 fine, but the NFL rescinded the yardage portion of the penalty. The yardage penalty was criticized after Denver quarterback John Elway scored and flipped the ball to a fan in a wheelchair.

"After seeing the fan reaction to these particular penalties, it became apparent that a kinder, gentler approach was needed," NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said.

Through the first three weeks of the season, 12 penalties have been assessed after touchdowns — six for high-fives and three each for throwing balls into the stands and end zone dances.

BASEBALL

Dombrowski leaves Expos for Marlins

MIAMI — Dave Dombrowski, 35, joined the expansion Florida Marlins Thursday after three years as general manager of the Montreal Expos, where he was both praised and criticized for his aggressive approach to the job.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," Dombrowski said following a news conference at Joe Robbie Stadium, which will be the Marlins' home when they field their first team in 1993. "The opportunity to put together something from scratch just doesn't happen."

Rankings

Fans like 'em. But players and coaches try to avoid them, usually because they're nothing more than a distraction — unless it's the final poll of the year.

As a result, this week's field hockey coaches poll — the first of the season — should be expected to go virtually unnoticed by the Iowa Hawkeyes, right?

Not necessarily.

Sporting a 4-0 record, Iowa finds itself No. 5 in the country. But besides the pride that goes with being recognized as one of the best teams in the nation, the Iowa players have not ignored the polls for another reason.

Last year, the Hawkeyes finished third in the NCAA with a 20-4 mark. But the highest Iowa could climb on the rankings ladder was sixth. Furthermore, that was with its top two scorers, Kristy Gleason and Kris Fillat, as well as Andrea Wieland, Iowa's leading goaltender. This year, that trio is training with the United States National team.

Go figure.

"We don't really pay attention to (the rankings) but it's kind of funny how last year we had everybody and couldn't get past number (six)," said sophomore Tiffany Bybel. "This year, we're coming back with less players and expected to be nothing as everyone's been saying — and we're No. 5. It should give us some respect."

"I was so upset last year when we got ranked so low," said sophomore Amy Aaronson, "but I think we surprised a lot of people last week."

Among those that may have been taken aback were Northeastern and Boston University — both of which fell victim to overtime defeats at the hands of Iowa. And now the Hawkeyes will look to startle some more, as they open their home season today at 3:00 p.m. versus St. Louis and Sunday at 12:15 p.m. against No. 11 New Hampshire.

Both contests are at the Hawkeye Field Hockey Field, which will be renamed Grant Field in a special dedication at 11:30 a.m. prior to the New Hampshire game. The ceremony honors Iowa's first and only women's athletic director, Dr. Christine Grant.

Although Sunday's matchup against the Wildcats figures to be the tougher of the two games, at least on paper, the Hawkeyes vow not to take the Billikins too lightly today.

"We can't overlook St. Louis," Bybel said. "We know New Hampshire is a stronger team but you can't look ahead. We've never been beaten on this field and we'll have to keep it that way."

The Hawkeyes take a 12-0 home record into today's contest, since moving to the HFHF in 1989. See FIELD HOCKEY, Page 2B

Tech tops Cavs with final play

Ed Shearer
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Scott Sisson kicked a 33-yard field goal on the final play and Jimmy Lincoln ran for 229 yards and a touchdown as No. 17 Georgia Tech beat Virginia 24-21 Thursday night.

Sisson, who knocked the Cavaliers out of the No. 1 ranking last year when he kicked a 37-yard field goal with seven seconds left in a 41-38 victory, ended a 58-yard Tech drive to victory after Virginia had tied it with 1:56 to play.

Bobby Goodman's 19-yard pass to Aaron Mundy had given the Cavs the 21-21 tie, capping a 95-yard drive in nine plays.

Goodman completed four passes to four different receivers out of the shotgun to account for the final 70 yards in the drive.

Tech had taken a 21-14 lead with 7:38 left on a 23-yard run by Lincoln.

The Yellow Jackets tied it 14-14 almost three minutes into the final period on a 1-yard run by Rodney Wilkerson that capped an 80-yard drive helped along by the Cavaliers.

Tech (2-1 overall, 1-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) kept the drive alive when Virginia had 12 men on the field on a punt, the 15-yard penalty giving the Jackets a first down at the 40. Lincoln had 47 yards in the drive, including a 25-yard run to the Virginia 10.

It was Tech's 13th victory in a row at home. Virginia, which had won three in a row at Atlanta, fell to 1-2 and 0-2.

Lincoln's 229 yards came on 30 carries and eclipsed the school's previous freshman mark of 203 set by Jerry Mays against Western Carolina in 1985.

The Cavaliers took a 14-7 lead with nine seconds left in the third quarter on a 72-yard pass from Goodman to freshman Tyrone Davis, who made the catch, avoided a tackle just inside the Tech 40 and went the rest of the way down the left sideline.

Tech scored on its first offensive play when Greg Lester got behind Virginia's Greg McClellan and Tyrone Lewis to take the pass from Shawn Jones on the Virginia 32 and pull away to complete the 76-yard touchdown.

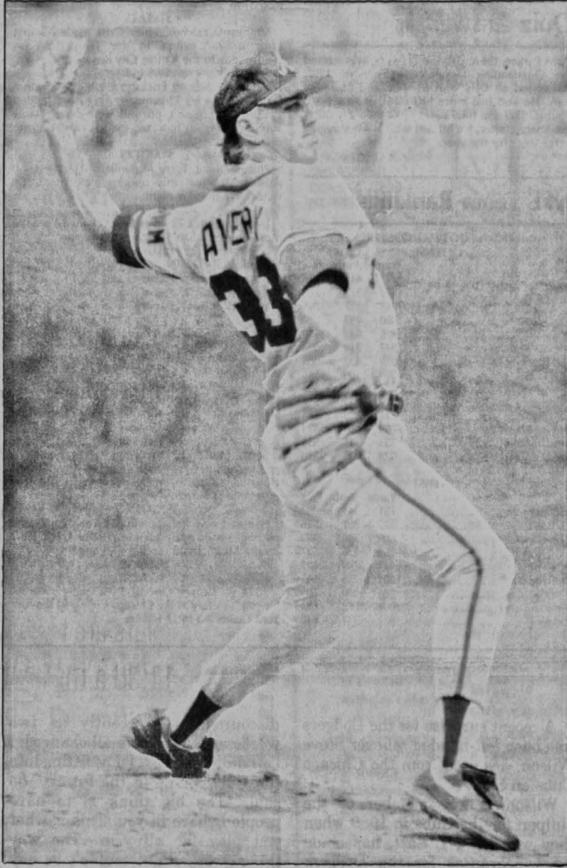

Virginia, which started outside its 30 on four of six first-half possessions, didn't get inside the Tech 40 until Goodman connected with Larry Holmes on a 50-yard scoring pass 48 seconds before halftime.

Holmes, who was moved from defensive back to a backup wide receiver this week, came from the right side across the middle to take the short pass over the middle from Goodman. Holmes wasn't touched as he hit the left sideline and raced to the end zone.

"He felt hurt, he really did," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said of Gross, who won as a starter for the first time since May 25. "He felt like he was giving it all he had. He doesn't have to run hard to first base."

Gross was booed for failing to run out a grounder to third leading off the fifth. He reacted by taking off his helmet and flinging it into the air in one motion, waving his arms, and yelling at fans on his way into the dugout.

Strawberry's bat sinks Astros; Pirates' magic number to 4

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Darryl Strawberry continued his September surge and Kevin Gross came out of the bullpen to pitch seven effective innings Thursday as the Los Angeles Dodgers made it four straight wins heading into their crucial series against Atlanta.

Afterward, Strawberry was happy to talk about his two-run homer in the first inning which put the Dodgers ahead for good in a 4-3 victory over the Houston Astros.

But the usually accommodating Gross left the clubhouse saying nary a word, presumably still upset over being booed by the Dodger Stadium crowd of 25,850.

"If you're looking to talk to me, I'm not talking," Gross told a horde of reporters.

Gross was booed for failing to run out a grounder to third leading off the fifth. He reacted by taking off his helmet and flinging it into the air in one motion, waving his arms, and yelling at fans on his way into the dugout.

"He felt hurt, he really did," Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said of Gross, who won as a starter for the first time since May 25. "He felt like he was giving it all he had. He doesn't have to run hard to first base."

Gross was pressed into only his 10th start of the season when Tim Belcher, nursing a groin injury, had his assignment pushed back a day. Belcher is slated to start Friday night against Atlanta.

Gross (10-10), who has appeared as a reliever 33 times this season, allowed three hits and two runs in seven innings while walking two and striking out six.

Roger McDowell retired the Astros in order in the ninth to earn his seventh save.

"Unbelievable," Lasorda said. "When you win 'em, that's the greatest feeling in the world, no matter what you go through during the game."

Strawberry hit a full-count pitch from loser Mark Portugal (10-9) over the right field fence after Lenny Harris hit a one-out single. Strawberry has 10 homers and 27 RBIs against the Astros this season. Six of his homers were hit at the Astrodome.

"I really can't explain it," Strawberry said of his success against the Astros this year. "Sometimes you just play well against a certain team."

Pirates 5, Cardinals 1

PITTSBURGH — Curtis Wilkerson went more than two years without hitting a home run. He made the wait worthwhile.

Wilkerson's pinch-hit grand slam off Lee Smith capped a five-run ninth inning Thursday night, and the Pittsburgh Pirates cut their magic number to four, rallying past the St. Louis Cardinals 5-1.

"He's a fastball pitcher, and I'm a fastball hitter," Wilkerson said after connecting on the first pitch with two outs. "With the bases loaded, I know he doesn't want to take a chance of getting behind in the count."

The Pirates beat St. Louis for the seventh time in the last nine games and increased their season-high lead in the NL East to 12½ games over the Cardinals. It's the largest lead Pittsburgh has held since Sept. 16, 1972.

Rookie Omar Olivares (9-6) took a two-hit shutout into the ninth, but Cecil Espy led off with a single and took third on Bobby Bonilla's single. Bob McClure relieved, and Barry Bonds grounded into a force play, enabling Espy to score the tying run.

Steve Buechele singled, and reliever Lee Smith intentionally walked pinch hitter Gary Redus, loading the bases. After Jose Lind struck out, Wilkerson batted for pitcher Stan Belinda and hit Smith's first pitch for his first career grand slam. Wilkerson, batting .185 at the time, hit his first home run since April 29, 1989.

Wilkerson went to the plate with a .156 average with runners in scoring position, even lower than the composite average of the pitchers.

But manager Jim Leyland chose him instead of home run threat Lloyd McClendon because he wanted a left-handed hitter against Smith.

"Wilky has a little shorter swing, and I thought he might have a better chance," Leyland said. "If anybody says they called what was going to happen, they're lying."

This was the second time this season the Pirates beat Smith with a home run. On Aug. 12, Bonds hit a two-run shot in the 11th inning for a 4-3 victory.

Wilkerson's drive easily cleared the right field wall, making him the first Pirate to pinch hit a grand slam since Richie Hebner did on Sept. 15, 1983. The pitcher in that game was also Smith, then with the Cubs.

"When you win, you have to have help from unexpected places. And that's what they're getting," Cardinals manager Joe Torre said.

attitude and dedication of this club has changed.

"At Los Angeles, we need to win two out of three. This is an important road trip because we're running out of time."

Winning two of three won't be easy for the Braves because the Dodgers have baseball's best home record.

"In a very California way, it's going to be an exciting time," Dodgers reliever Jim Gott said. "These people in LA are very used to winning. We've had great crowds all year long. I think you're going to see the volume turned up this weekend."

"Last weekend was great, it was like an Ohio State-Michigan football game. The crowds were as loud and as intimidating as any crowd I've ever played against. It was great."

The Dodgers pitching rotation for this weekend has been up in the air because of Tim Belcher's pulled right groin muscle and Ramon Martinez's sore right bicep.

Belcher pitched from a stretch in his start last Saturday in an 11-inning 2-1 loss, while Martinez was hammered Sunday in a 9-1 loss.

The pitching matchups announced Thursday for this weekend will see Belcher (9-8) vs. Steve Avery (16-8) on Friday, Orel Hershiser (6-2) vs. Charlie Leibrandt (15-11) on Saturday and Martinez (16-11) vs.

nals manager Joe Torre said.

Belinda (7-5) pitched a perfect ninth after starter John Smiley was lifted for a pinch hitter.

Todd Zeile homered in the fourth for the Cardinals' run. He connected for his team-leading 11th home run.

Giants 4, Reds 1
 SAN FRANCISCO — The San Francisco Giants scored three runs in the bottom of the eighth with the help of squeeze bunts by Dave Anderson and Jose Uribe and beat the Cincinnati Reds 4-1 on Thursday.

The Giants, winning their fifth straight, entered the eighth tied 1-1. Willie McGee led off with a double, and Robby Thompson was struck by a Randy Myers pitch. With one out, Kevin Bass walked on four pitches, loading the bases.

Anderson broke the tie with a bunt to Myers, whose wild throw home enabled Thompson to score for a 3-1 Giants lead. Uribe's successful squeeze cap the rally.

Right-hander Francisco Oliveras (6-5) pitched a scoreless eighth inning and left-hander Dave Righetti worked the ninth for his 24th save.

Myers (6-13) had his bid for a shutout ended by an unearned run in the seventh. Three of the four Giants' runs were unearned.

NL WEST: Battle in LA

 Tom Glavine (19-10) Sunday.
 "These games will be as close to a playoff game as there can be," Gott said. "I like our chances. I like the way we look. The big three in the middle of our lineup (Darryl Strawberry, Eddie Murray and Kal Daniels) are doing everything they were expected to do. Everything has fallen into place."
 The Dodgers enter the weekend series with 16 wins in their last 21 games and a 48-24 home record.

 Strawberry, Murray and Daniels have combined for 11 homers and 55 RBIs this month.
 "There won't be any tomahawks this weekend," Strawberry said with a smile. "I'll be ready to play, I don't look at this weekend as pressure, I've been there before. I just look at it as an opportunity to have fun and do your best."
 "It's an opportunity to win and have a lot of fun at the same time."

A recent surprise for the Dodgers has been left-handed reliever Steve Wilson, acquired from the Chicago Cubs on Sept. 6.
 Wilson, a key member of the bullpen for the Cubs in 1989 when they won the NL East, has made six appearances for the Dodgers without allowing a run. He saved wins over Cincinnati on Tuesday night and Houston on Wednesday night.
 Wilson admitted he was pretty discouraged as recently as two weeks ago, but that's all changed.

 "I didn't see how I'd be fitting into the Cubs' plans in the future," he said. "The big think is to have people believe in you. This is what you play for all year. The way things worked out couldn't be any better."
 This will be the final time the Dodgers and Braves meet this season. The Dodgers have won nine of the 15 games played so far.

FIELD HOCKEY: Start home schedule

 Moreover, they have outscored their opponents 42-6, including a tight 2-1 win over St. Louis last year — even though Iowa outshot the Billikins 19-4 and out-penalty cornered them 13-4.
 Overall, the Hawkeyes have an 8-5-1 record against St. Louis, dating back to 1977. Ironically, it was after last year's victory in Iowa City that the Hawkeyes propelled to that infamous national ranking of sixth.
 But versus New Hampshire, Iowa is 6-1-1. The Wildcats were also on the short end of Iowa's only national championship — 2-1 in 1986.

 And as if that isn't enough motivation for the Wildcats, UNH also knows that beating No. 5 Iowa at home will easily let them crack the top 10.
 "I would expect them to be very high," Aaronson said. "I think they'll be a very physical team and they'll psych themselves up a lot because it is Iowa and we are fifth and they're 11th."
 "But teams that play a lot on emotion . . . you just score a goal on them and you just keep slamming it down their throats."

 Last weekend in Boston, the Hawkeyes came from behind to beat Northeastern 2-1 and Boston 3-2. Seniors Lisa Sweeney and Kerry Horgan each collected three assists on three goals by sophomore Heather Bryant. Bryant was named the Midwest Collegiate Field Hockey Conference co-Player of the Week for her efforts, along with Northwestern's Colleen Senich.
 "It was an eerie feeling," Aaronson said of the two victories. "I think we got discouraged because we weren't putting the ball in, but everyone was really calm. We just looked at each other and said, 'No. This is not Iowa. Iowa does not lose.'

 "But actually, it's a good learning experience because we know we can get the job done when there's only a few minutes left in the game."
 But that's not to say the Hawkeyes would welcome a similar situation this weekend.
 "We will not lose on this field," Aaronson promised. "We won't go into overtime, either."

IOWA SPORTS

Volleyball hosts Challenge this weekend

David Taylor
 Daily Iowan
 The Iowa volleyball team opens its home season this weekend after starting the year with eight straight road contests. Kansas, Nebraska-Omaha, St. Louis, Indiana State and College of St. Francis will join Iowa in the Hawkeye Challenge beginning Saturday morning at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

 The Hawkeyes are out to improve on their 2-6 record, including four straight losses, and to do so will require help in the defensive areas, where experienced opponents have been having their way with the young Iowa team.
 Iowa currently ranks at the bottom of kills and blocks per game in the Big Ten, which can be attributed in part to the inexperience of many of the Iowa players. Still, hard work and enthusiasm have given the Hawkeyes enough to stay close in most of their matches.

 Offensively things appear slightly brighter because of Iowa's top ranking in service aces per game at 2.19. The Hawkeyes also scored a Big Ten season high in service aces with 17 against Wichita State.

 Hitting efficiency has been a problem spot also, with Iowa connecting on only .119 of its shots.
 "We know we are young, but we are doing some things well and I have high expectations of our hard work and effort," said Iowa coach Linda Schoenstedt. "We just take it play by play and see what happens."

Men's golf to host Northern Intercollegiate

Curtis Riggs
 Daily Iowan
 The University of Iowa will be the host of the 1991 Northern Intercollegiate Tournament to be held at Finkbine Golf Course next Monday and Tuesday.
 Eighteen of the top men's teams in the midwest and most of the teams from the Big Ten will compete in the 54-hole tourney. On Monday, 36 holes will be played followed by 18 on Tuesday.

 The Northern Intercollegiate is annually held at the school that will host the Big Ten Championships, which will be held in Iowa City May 15-17, 1992.
 Coach Lynn Blevins hopes that beginning the season at home will provide a boost to the team.
 "We've never had a tournament here before," he said. "I am looking forward to it because it should provide a nice transition for us and give the players a comfort zone."

 Wisconsin won last year's Northern Intercollegiate with defending Big Ten champion Indiana placing second. The Hawkeyes finished eighth. Iowa's top finisher last year was Brad Klapprott, who tied for sixth with a 213 total.
 Klapprott is the top returnee for the squad this year. Blevins returns a veteran team and is cautiously optimistic about this season.

 "We have the talent to do real well this year," Blevins said. "But transforming our talents into low scores is something I'm still looking for. We've got a team that needs to develop some mental

Barkley feeling good about Olympic team

Associated Press
PHILADELPHIA — Charles Barkley has a strong feeling about the basketball team the United States will have for next summer's Olympics.
 "The only team that can beat us is our second unit," Barkley said.
 The Philadelphia 76ers forward said he is one of 10 NBA players who will be named to the United States Olympic squad Saturday.
 "I'm playing for two reasons," Barkley said. "No. 1, it will be a chance to play for the greatest team ever assembled. And No. 2, this is the first time the pros have played for this country. There's great historical significance."
 "Besides, I want to be the answer to a trivia question a million years from now."
 His comments were in a story in Thursday's Philadelphia Daily News.
 Barkley had said earlier this year he wasn't very interested in playing for the first U.S. Olympic team to use professionals.

 The team, to be announced Saturday, reportedly also will include centers David Robinson and Patrick Ewing; forwards Larry Bird, Karl Malone and Chris Mullin; and guards Magic Johnson, John Stockton, Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen.
 Two college players were expected to fill out the roster.
 "People talk about whether we'll have the proper chemistry. That's garbage," Barkley said. "I think the only time people question chemistry is when you've got guys who can't play, and that should be no problem here."
 Barkley said he won't mind if he doesn't start.
 "Everybody can't start. You got David Robinson and Patrick Ewing at center. Somebody has to sit," he said. "As long as I play, I'll be happy."
 And he has no qualms about the United States using professionals.

"Other countries have been doing it for years," he said. "Now, it's our turn."
 The names of those on the team have been reported by several newspapers and broadcasters, but nothing will be official until Saturday.
 Chuck Daly, who will coach the team, insisted Thursday he does not know who was on the team.
 "I don't know the final list yet," he said in Milan, Italy, at the final in a series of clinics. "I can say ten players will come from the NBA and two from the colleges. There is a possibility that an 11th NBA player will be added."
 Daly all but confirmed that Jordan was on the team.
 "Jordan had initially refused to play in the Olympics but I know that his attitude has changed more recently," the coach said.
 Daly saw no problem with the U.S. being an overwhelming favorite.
 "Certainly it's a difficult job to deal with great players but this is a problem that every NBA coach has every day. Quite frankly, I like these problems," Daly said.

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Hassard pulls own version of 'exotics'

Steve J. Collins
 Daily Iowan
 Hayden Fry isn't the only Iowa coach with a flare for taking chances.
 The football coach is known for calling exotic plays at unusual times, but it seems unlikely Fry would be so bold as to hold his top players out of a game before the outcome had been decided. But that is just what Jerry Hassard, the Iowa women's cross country coach, will do today.
 When Iowa competes today at the Illinois State Invitational in Normal, Ill., it will be without its number four, five and six runners. Hassard will leave home Christine Salsberry, Erin Boland and Tina Stec to rest them for future meets while offering other runners experience.
 Hassard said leaving three top runners home was risky, but it became even dicier by virtue of the fact Rachel Hosmer will miss the meet due to illness. Hassard said Hosmer, being the team's number eight runner, was expected to nail down the fifth and final scoring position for the Hawkeyes.

 "I knew we were taking a chance to begin with," Hassard said. "But without our number eight runner, we're going to have to dig a little deeper. This is turning out to be quite a gamble."
 Illinois and Purdue are the two most likely teams to battle Iowa for the team title, Hassard said.
 "We're going to try and dominate that front end and make it difficult for Illinois to score low points," Hassard said.
 Leading the Hawkeye charge for the front will be Jennifer Brower, Tracy Dahl and Jennifer Johnson. They are Iowa's top three runners and were held out of the season opening Hawkeye Open.
 "The top three that we held out are really itching to compete," Hassard said.
 He said that after three tough weeks of training he cut his teams' mileage by about a third this week, and he hopes it will pay dividends. Hassard said he was able to introduce speed work early than normal and the team is more fit than past squads had been at this point in the season.

Schillig says young Hawks 'look strong'

Three freshmen to break into Hawkeye lineup in All-Iowa Invitational
 Michael Watkins
 Daily Iowan
 Even though it's early, Iowa women's tennis coach Micki Schillig likes what she sees in her young squad.
 "We're just starting challenge matches right now, but so far we look strong this year," said Schillig. "I really hate to say that so early, but yesterday we had three split sets with freshmen playing veterans, so, it's going to be good. Everybody's going to be pushing everybody."
 The Hawkeyes open fall action this weekend at the All-Iowa Invitational on the UNI courts in Cedar Falls. The tournament will feature teams from Iowa State, Drake and Northern Iowa.
 With recent injuries to senior Tracey Donnelly (17-6 last year) and the losses of junior Marcy Ring to injury and Tracey Payton to graduation, the Hawkeyes are in need of some new blood. And according to Schillig, the Hawkeyes have some very good prospects in the form of three talented freshmen: Cassie Cashon, of Louisville, Kent.; Lisa Dvorak, of Western Springs, Ill.; and Finnish player Minna Hatakka.
 "I'd only seen them hit from a distance until (Wednesday), but they look good," said Schillig. "They're still a little bit nervous and are still getting into the swing of school, but once they get adjusted, they're going to be very good."
 Cashon, a member of the 1990 junior Wightman Cup team, lettered four years at Atherton High, capturing the regional title as a freshman. Dvorak earned Prince all-America honors while at Lyons Township High and garnered a third-place finish in the 1990 Illinois State Championship.

 Finland's third-ranked singles player, Hatakka placed third in doubles and was among the top eight singles players during the 1991 summer Finnish Championships.
 "We have much more depth this year than we did last year, and with the exception of Tracey (Donnelly), our returning starters are virtually injury-free," said Schillig. "We have at least six players who can challenge at any time for the top singles position, and we should be equally deep in doubles."
 Other good news for the Hawkeyes is the return of last season's No. 1 player, senior Lori Hash, who posted a 10-19 singles record. She also recorded a 17-12 record with returning partner Catherine Wilson in the No. 1 doubles position.
 Also back are senior Becky Terry, junior captain Andrea Calvert (15-14) and sophomore Miyuki Moore (16-12).
 "Overall, we're pretty solid," said Schillig. "But this weekend's tournament will definitely be helpful in making the necessary decisions for the remainder of the fall season."

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Michigan's Desmond Howard has emerged as a leading Heisman Trophy candidate after the Wolverines beat Notre Dame last weekend.

So far, Howard top Heisman candidate

Rick Warner
Associated Press

Ty Detmer hasn't won a game since last November and David Klingler was mauled by Miami on national television. The leading rusher in the nation is a freshman who doesn't even start and the best receiver may be another "Magic" from Michigan.

After three weeks of the college football season, the Heisman Trophy race is as wide open as the 1992 Democratic presidential nomination.

"If I had to bet today, I'd give you any three players and I'd take the field," said ESPN commentator Beano Cook.

The preseason favorites, Detmer and Klingler, have already fallen back in the pack.

Although Detmer became the NCAA's career passing leader two weeks ago against UCLA, his BYU Cougars are 0-4 since he won the 1990 Heisman last December. Klingler threw nine touchdown passes in Houston's opening win over outmanned Louisiana Tech, but his Heisman hopes were dealt a major blow when Miami held him to 216 yards and sacked him five times in a 40-10 blowout last week.

"I don't think Detmer and Klingler are out of it, but it's going to be an uphill climb," said Lee Corso, one of Cook's colleagues at ESPN. "Big numbers won't be enough. They both need to win big games against top teams."

CBS' Mike Francesa doesn't think either quarterback will win the Heisman no matter what they do the rest of the season.

"Detmer has flopped since winning it last year and Klingler did nothing when it mattered most in front of a national audience," Francesa said. "I don't care if he throws 50 TD passes, I won't vote for him."

While Detmer and Klingler have stumbled, Michigan's Desmond Howard and Tennessee's Carl Pickens have emerged as serious Heisman contenders along with three quarterbacks from the Sunshine State — Florida State's Casey Weldon, Florida's Shane Matthews and Miami's Gino Torretta.

Howard, who is nicknamed

"Magic," moved into the national spotlight with a sensational performance in Michigan's 24-14 victory over Notre Dame last Saturday. The triple-threat star used a fabulous fake to score on a reverse and made a spectacular, diving touchdown catch on a fourth-down play in the fourth quarter, giving him six scores in his first two games.

"I think Howard is the leading candidate right now," said Ed Sherman of the Chicago Tribune. "That Notre Dame game was a great launching pad for a Heisman campaign, especially the catch. That play was like Doug Flutie's 'Hail Mary' pass. It will be talked about for years."

Pickens also is off to a fast start with 10 receptions for 202 yards and two touchdowns in his first two games. Weldon, Matthews and Torretta are among the national leaders in passing efficiency and all play for high-profile teams that could win the national championship.

"That could really help them," Corso said. "After all the emphasis on stats the last few years, I think voters are going to put more weight on winning this time."

Running backs have won more Heismans than any other position, but quarterbacks and receivers appear to have the edge this year.

Freshmen Marshall Faulk of San Diego State and Greg Hill of Texas A&M are currently the leading rushers in the country, and sophomores Ricky Powers of Michigan and Derek Brown of Nebraska have each had two consecutive 100-yard games.

But no freshmen or sophomore ever won the Heisman and it appears an unlikely achievement even for Faulk, a backup who broke the NCAA single-game rushing mark with 386 yards against Pacific last week.

"I don't see a running back winning it this year," Corso said. "I think it's going to be a quarterback."

Oh, by the way, there's still more than two months left before they announce the winner at the Downtown Athletic Club in New York.

Vikings return to scene of the crime

Saints hope to change tough luck

Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Minnesota at New Orleans is a "scene of the crime" game.

The crime occurred after the 1987 season that saw the Saints make the playoffs for the first time. The Vikings arrived at the Superdome and promptly dispatched the "Who Dats" 44-10 in a game that wasn't that close.

It gets worse. Since Jim Finks took over as general manager after the 1986 season, made Jim Mora his coach, and built New Orleans into a semi-contender, the Vikings have beaten the Saints four times by a cumulative score of 154-33.

The latest Finks-Mora achievement is the team's first 3-0 start and a two-game lead in the NFC West.

These Saints are good enough to be 3-point favorites, just about what the HomeDome advantage will give you.

Go with the HomeDome, the law of averages and the Saints' defense.

The scene is Tampa Stadium; the crime the Super Bowl last January that the Bills still think they should have won.

If the Jets hadn't scared the Bills last week with Whitney Houston's rendition of the national anthem recorded at the Super Bowl, this might be a trap. The Bucs are 0-3,

Sam Wyche:

"I've got 20 to 25 years left before I start eating soda crackers for lunch, and those 25 years aren't going to be wasted worrying about whether some editorial is written saying that we're stupid because the field goal went through the crossbar instead of outside the crossbar."

Gibbs is a good coach because, unlike Wyche, he knows Coach-Speak.

The other reason is that he has a good team.

Poster Children: playing with rupturing power

Kimberly Chun
Daily Iowan

Poster Children periodically roll through Iowa City, propelled by a drone unlike the voice of any 10-car caravan. Forged with the star-crossed alloys of raga-enraptured Zep, the fractured rhythmic spasm of Minutemen and the post-punk torque ack-shun of numberless corndogs who want to bear Joe Strummer's cowlick, this Champaign, Ill., combo stretches your expectations as they stretch their chord progressions — to the point of rupture. Their train of lyrical thought stutters at a steady beat, then reroutes, surrounded by sprays of powerchords, onto rails of screams.

In their own winning way with a beat, Poster Children could possibly have been, in another incarnation, the college rock answer to Trampms. At times, they seem to have an eastern-inflected "Disco Inferno" in them somewhere.

Tunes like "Frustration" (off their newest LP on Twin/Tone, Daisy Chain Reaction) ring to the toe-tapping beat of whirling dervishes. Then, they turn about, frustrate your boogie inclinations and teeter toward the same destination as the Pixies, melodic and hook-laden.

Poster Children will be playing at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., Saturday with Minneapolis' Draghounds. I talked to bassist Rose and singer/guitarist Rick by multiple phone extensions last week:

You supposedly shirk from defining your sound. But can you describe your music, against your better judgment?

Rose: Well, all our songs are between two and five minutes long because we have a short attention span. (laughter) Most of them have an F sharp in them. No, we're loud, rhythmic and melodic. Against our better judgment.

What do you usually like your audiences to come away with?

Rose: T-shirts! (laughter) No, Iowa City is one of our favorite places to play, really. I'll never forget the first time we played, and everyone danced.

Rick: We like to communicate the fun we have playing — the energy — to the audience.

Rose: In larger cities, people just stand there with their mouths hanging down, going, "Huh?" — big question marks over their heads. In Iowa City, people have big exclamation points over their heads.

What was it like working with your producer, Steve Albini (formerly of Big Black)?

Rose: He's a soft, cuddly teddy bear!

Rick: No, he's actually easygoing and not overly forceful on the way you should sound. I think that's what he's best at — translating the live energy of a band.

A weekend's worth of fun for all

Mandy Crane and Hank Olson
Daily Iowan

It's a great weekend, for Mandy turns 26, and Hank (eternally young and eternally smug) will be there to keep reminding her of it. It's also a great weekend for things like:

MOVIES AT THE BIJOU

Friday, Stanley Kubrick's newly restored "Spartacus" comes to the Bijou complete with the once-cut Spartacus-in-the-bathtub scene. It promises to be fun and naughty. "A Streetcar Named Desire" plays

Saturday night — Mandy's birthday. "Streetcar," directed by Elia Kazan, features showcase performances by Marlon Brando ("Stella Stella!") and Vivien Leigh, who won an Oscar for her performance as Blanche.

MUSIC

The Mill, 120 E. Burlington St., plays host to the "upbeat, bluesy band" of Putnam, Blake and Gilbranson this weekend while the Sanctuary, 405 S. Gilbert St., hosts pianist Radoslav Lorkovic. "Me and the Guys" play at the Iowa City Yacht Club, 13 S. Linn St., Friday and Saturday.

Not to be left out of the picture, check out the wicked-cool guitar styling of Tom Nothnagle, playing at Bill's Coffee Shop, room 321 of North Hall, from 9 to 11 tonight only.

LES HANCHER

This weekend, "Les Misérables" continues its oh-so-brief run. It's French; it's fun; it's très cher; it's three hours long!

And now for the pick of the weekend: See the Poster Children at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., Saturday night and shout a cheery "Happy Birthday" to Mandy.

'Murphy Brown' scores for CBS

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The episode in which hard-boiled TV newswoman Murphy Brown — portrayed by actress Candice Bergen — decides at age 42 to become a single mother helped CBS draw its biggest Monday night audience in nearly four years.

The hourlong season premiere of "Murphy Brown" won Monday's Nielsen ratings battle with a 23.8 rating and a 35 share, CBS officials announced Wednesday.

"Murphy Brown" had its previous best ratings in May with its final show of last season.
